Jepsen finances religious broadcast

By Wendy Rosche
Special to The Daily lowan

Contributors to the re-election campaign of Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, may not know it, but campaign funds are being used by Jepsen and his wife Dee to pay for inspirational messages delivered over religious radio stations across the state.

Larry Gray, press secretary for Jepsen's Democratic opponent Tom Harkin, said Monday his biggest concern was whether the contributors to the Jepsen '84 campaign fund knew they would be paying for religious programming.

"I don't think it should be an issue, but because Republicans are courting the religious vote, it does become an issue," Gray said.

Cyndi Harmeyer, Jepsen's press secretary, said campaign funds are diverted into many areas and contributors do not know specifically where their money is going.

SHE SAID the messages pertained to women and Christianity and are part of regular religious programming. "It's just sharing a value," Harmeyer said.

Barry Platt, press secretary for Iowa Democratic Chairman Dave Nagle, said the Republicans in this campaign are "taking advantage of religious feelings" by making mention of religious and moral causes.

Rolf Craft, state Republican chairman, said the Democrats are trying to make "an issue out of a non-issue. Some people may find this offensive and some won't just like any other kind of advertising."

HARMEYER SAID whether the broadcasts would have any effect on the outcome of the race would be left up to the voters.

Tim Calceira, station manager for KTOP-FM, a Christian radio station in Cedar Rapids, said the 15-minute messages delivered during weekends are non-political in content.

Calceira said the station "might carry it although we weren't faced with that option. The Jepsens offered to pay for it."

Cutler recalls fund 'juggernaut'

By Mark Leonard
City Editor

Lynn Cutler, vice chairwoman of the National Democratic Committee, said Iowa City attorney Joe Johnston will have an "uphill" financial battle in his attempt to unseat Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District.

"Joe's biggest problem will be coming up against the money juggernaut that the congressman has," Cutler said in a telephone interview from her office in Washington, D.C. "I know what that's like."

Cutler, who was defeated in the past two congressional elections by Evans, has firsthand experience raising money in the 3rd District.

In 1980, Cutler raised $231,592 and Evans raised $576,129, a large portion of which was bankrolled by his own personal fortune. She lost to Evans by a narrow margin that year. Evans garnered 107,869 votes (51 percent) to Cutler's 101,735 votes (48 percent).

TWO YEARS later, Evans raised $578,658 while Cutler raised $514,264. Although Cutler closed the fundraising gap, she actually fared worse in the 1982 election. In that race, Cutler received 83,581 votes (45 percent) compared to the 104,072 votes (55 percent) cast for Evans.

"(Johnston) is going to be swimming uphill with a man who's got a lot of money," Cutler said. "I think if the race starts to get tight the congressman has shown in the past that he is willing to fund his campaign out of his own pocket.

"(Evans' campaign) will pour a lot of money into the state and district in October," she said.

Kristi Livingston, Evans' campaign manager, said Evans will meet his 1984 fund-raising goal of $225,000. Livingston said Evans won't be spending as much this year as he did in his two previous campaigns.

"I think the nature of our race this year is much different than the last two," she said. "Early on in the 1982 race, for instance, both political parties targeted the 3rd District race as a winnable one and a lot of national attention was drawn to it.

"Those races were much longer and we had to spend money on media earlier in the summer."

JOHNSTON SAID his campaign will meet its goal of raising $250,000 for the election. "We have already raised more money than people thought we could," he said. "We're going to meet our goal."

However, he added, "Money is not the issue here. I think it's ironic that when Republicans talk about how strong their candidates are they never talk in terms of their stands on issues... they talk about how much money they have."

"This election is not for sale," he said. See Cutler, page 8

City red tape stalls site renovations

The Paul-Helen Building now belongs to Art Small and Philip Mears, but the two Iowa City attorneys will have to delay plans to renovate the building until city officials solve a host of other problems.

"We purchased the building Sept. 1," Small said Wednesday, but city paperwork has postponed his chance to purchase a 20-by-32-foot parcel of land near the building on Washington Street that is crucial to renovation plans.

"The city is proceeding as directed by the (Iowa City) Council to put the parcel on the market," City Planner Andrea Hauer said.

At Small's request, the council agreed in July to sell a 20-by-32-foot section of land in Blackhawk Mini-Park, located near the intersection of Washington and Dubuque streets. The land juts into the west wall of the Paul-Helen Building — one of the points where Small wants to add an entrance to the building.

Although the council approved the sale of the land, Small and Mears don't automatically own it.

"WE'LL GET AN appraisal (of the land) now," Hauer said, "then there will be competitive bids" taken from any individual who wants to buy the land. She said it will be at least a month before bids can be received on the parcel.

If Small and Mears are successful in acquiring the land, they plan to renovate the third floor of the Paul-Helen Building, where a ballroom is now located.

Small said his current plans to "rehabilitate" the building would split the high-roofed third floor into two levels that could be sold for office space. These upper levels would be accessible by an elevator installed near one of the proposed entrances on the west side of the Paul-Helen Building.

Currently, the only entrance to the building is on its north side.

Small already has one interested party if he decides to rent out some or all of the renovated third floor.

"The Paul-Helen Building and the Elks Building are two possibilities" for a joint Human Services Facility, said Human Services Coordinator Cheryl Mintle.

MINTLE IS LEADING the search for a site to consolidate about a dozen area human services agencies, including United Action for Youth, the United Way and Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

"We need to have a meeting with the (agency) directors and finance people to get some sense of commitment from the agencies wanting to pursue" the joint facility, she said.

Then if city officials opt to use Community Development Block Grant funds, Mintle said the request to use CDBG funds for the project must be made to the city's Committee on Community Needs by Oct. 2.

Advocate warns women of sexual assault risks

By Rob Kincaid
Special to The Daily lowan

The public — both males and females — should address the danger local women face by being unaware of the high number of sexual assaults in the area, Karla Miller, a local rape victim advocate said Wednesday.

Citing an increase in the number of locally reported rapes since last year, Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, warned women about rape at the Women's Resource and Action Center.

Miller attempted to alleviate common misconceptions about rape by explaining the profile of a typical rape assailant and the causes of rape. She also offered suggestions to help women lower their chances of becoming a rape victim.

Sixty-eight cases of rape were reported to the rape crisis line from July 1, 1983 to June 30, 1984. This number represents an increase of 14, up from 54 reports the previous year, according to Miller. The victims included 85 women, three men, and a 6-year-old boy.

However, she cautioned, "It's important to realize that sexual abuse is the most underreported crime there is."

MILLER BELIEVES it's hard to get an accurate indication of how many rapes actually occur in a year. Citing Uniform Crime Report statistics, Miller said, "It's safe to say that one in ten cases are reported."

According to Miller, more than half the rapes reported to the rape crisis line took place indoors. At least half of the incidents involved a rapist who was an acquaintance of the victim and seven of the rapes involved more than one assailant. Most of the 68 reported rapes took place in the Iowa City area.

Miller said one of the problems leading to the large number of rapes is many women's misconception of the size of Iowa City. Women "come to Iowa City thinking of it not as a big city."

As a result, Miller believes some women fail to take the necessary preventive measures and take unnecessary risks.

Terming rape "not a sexually-motivated crime," Miller characterized assailants in three distinctly different categories. Anger rapists — the most common category, according to Miller — are individuals who "cannot cope with life's stresses."

MILLER SAID most of the rapists falling under this category have access to other forms of sexual relationships and are motivated to commit the crime to release anger. They do not necessarily rape women because they find pleasure in the sexual act itself.

Power and control, said Miller, are also motivators of rapists. Seeing himself as powerless, this assailant "may watch a victim for a long time and fantasize" about committing a rape. In this situation, the rapist often carries a weapon, Miller said.

Bus plummets 900 feet

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Thirty-one people were killed and another 42 injured when an overcrowded bus with passengers clinging to the sides plunged down a 900-foot ravine, authorities said Wednesday.

The bus, designed to carry no more than 40 people, was jammed with some 70 passengers when it ran off a dirt road Tuesday afternoon in an isolated region of San Miguel province, about 62 miles northeast of San Salvador, bus dispatchers said.

Chernenko disproves rumors

MOSCOW — President Konstantin Chernenko, who had been rumored seriously ill, Wednesday made his first public appearance in 54 days.

A ceremony honoring three cosmonauts, shown on a nightly TV news program, began with a tanned and smiling Chernenko walking unaided into an ornate Kremlin hall. Holding a five-page speech firmly in his left hand, Chernenko read his remarks without the wheezing and halting delivery that had marked earlier public speeches.

Guerrillas strike in Spain

MADRID — Suspected leftists killed a Madrid real estate developer and a Seville businessman and wounded another man Wednesday in the worst day of terrorist activity in Spain in two years, police said.

GRAPO, an acronym for Oct. 1 Antifascist Resistance Groups, surfaced in 1975 shortly before the death of dictator Francisco Franco. It has claimed responsibility for dozens of bombings and assassinations, mostly against police and military targets.

CIA knew of mercenaries

WASHINGTON — The CIA knew a U.S. paramilitary group was sending men to join Nicaraguan rebels but did nothing to stop the volunteers, congressional sources said Wednesday.

Two of the volunteers were killed in Nicaragua.

"The agency heard these guys were coming and their guys dove into fox holes," an intelligence source said. CIA officials said agents in Honduras "got out of the way" of the six Americans because they "didn't want anybody to think (they) were involved" in the paramilitary operation, the source said.

Postal unions agree to talks

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service and two unions representing 500,000 postal workers agreed Wednesday to return to the bargaining table to try to hammer out a new contract.

"We're going back to talk. I'm prepared to negotiate on all issues," said Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union. Talks between the two sides broke off in July when the unions' three-year contract expired.

Death penalty to be proposed

BOONE, Iowa — State senator Jack Nystrom, R-Boone, has said he intends to reintroduce within three weeks a "soft" bill that would give Iowa juries the option of capital punishment in some cases.

The Nystrom bill would give jurors the choice to hand down the death sentence in about eight types of cases. The penalty may apply, for instance, in murder-for-hire schemes or in cases in which the defendant commits a serious crime while serving a life term, he said.

Kulow arraigned in wife's murder

By Patricia Reuter
Staff Writer

An Iowa City man pleaded not guilty to a charge of first-degree murder in Johnson County District Court Wednesday.

Ronald Lee Kulow, 1024 E. Washington St., is accused of murdering his 27-year-old wife Deborah Kulow by slashing her throat in the couple's apartment Aug. 18.

Kulow, 32, accompanied by his court-appointed attorney Douglas Russell, entered his plea before Judge August Honsell of the 6th Judicial District shortly after 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Kulow also demanded a speedy trial, and Honsell, Russell and Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White, who is prosecuting the case, settled on a Nov. 5 trial date.

Kulow, who is being held at the Johnson County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond, appeared at the arraignment with his right hand still bandaged from the wound he said he received on the day his wife was slain.

ACCORDING to the police report filed with the court, Kulow walked into the Iowa City Police Department shortly after noon

Courts

Aug. 18 bleeding from the hand.

He reportedly told police he grabbed his wife by the hair, beat her head against a table and the floor, then grabbed a knife and cut her throat. The report also states Kulow told police he warned his wife the night before her death and on prior occasions that he would kill her. Police found Deborah dead in Kulow's Washington Street apartment.

Deborah Kulow's foster father Rev. Ralph Hindman said Kulow was subject to "spells of violence." Hindman said Deborah was treated for a fractured skull last September after a fight with Kulow, but refused to leave her husband or file charges after the incident.

Russell also filed a request Wednesday asking the court to allow attorney Kristin L. Hibbs to assist in Kulow's defense. Honsell ruled the request was "not timely" and suggested Russell re-submit the application at a later date.

Alumni Association plans football party schedule

The UI Alumni Association and the I-Club are inviting Iowa football fans to party with them, regardless of where the Hawks may be playing.

Hawkeye football fans are invited to football parties at all out-of-town games this season, including the Dec. 1 game in Hawaii.

All parties are planned three and a half hours prior to kickoff. However, the party for the Northwestern game will follow the gridiron contest, and the party for the Minnesota game will be held Friday evening before the game.

Here is the party schedule so that all Hawkeye fans can mark the dates on their calendars:

Sept. 22 — Ohio State. Celebration will begin at 11 a.m. at the Holiday Inn's Inn on the Lane, 328 W. Lane Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

Oct. 6 — Northwestern. Following the game, the party will be held at the Holiday Inn-Evanston, 1501 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill.

Oct. 13 — Purdue. The pre-game party will start at 9:30 a.m. at the Sheraton Inn, U.S. Highway 52 at Cumberland, West Lafayette, Ind.

Oct. 27 — Indiana. The party will begin at 9:30 a.m. at Jeremiah Sweeney's, 4501 E. Third St., Bloomington, Ind.

Nov. 17 — Minnesota. Held Friday before the game, the party will begin at 8 p.m. at the Amfac Hotel, 30 S. Seventh St., Minneapolis.

Dec. 1 — Hawaii. The luau will begin at 3:30 p.m., University of Hawaii Football Stadium, Honolulu.

UI Greeks teeter-totter for March of Dimes

Members of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity and Alpha Delta Phi sorority will teeter-totter to raise money to fight birth defects in the 10th Annual Marathon Teeter-Totter-A-Thon.

Lambda Chi Alpha and Alpha Delta Phi members will teeter-totter outside the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity for 168 hours non-stop beginning Sept. 22. All pledge money will go to the March of Dimes.

The marathon has raised as much as $6,000 per year in the past, but this year the fraternity and sorority hope to raise $10,000.

Information on how to pledge is available at the Hawkeye Chapter March of Dimes and the Lambda Chi Alpha house.

Staff off to good start; enrollment announced

The UI faculty has entered this academic year in good shape. Vice President of Academic Affairs Richard Remington told the UI Faculty Council Tuesday.

Remington also announced that the UI registrar's office is predicting a total student enrollment of 30,250 this fall. The enrollment figure is below last fall's prediction of 30,400.

Freshman enrollment is 507 students less than last year, he said. But "surprisingly," the number of graduate students has increased.

Final enrollment figures won't be available until Sept. 21, Remington said.

Workers at building site back on the job

Carpenters, bricklayers and laborers were back on the job Tuesday at the construction site of the $24 million UI law school building.

Work on the site at Riverside Drive and Grand Avenue had stopped last Wednesday when the union workers would not cross a picket line set up by Roofers Local 182 of Cedar Rapids.

Union officials said the picket was sparked by a dispute between workers and the Townsend Roofing and Sheetmetal company in Coralville when Townsend refused to pay laborers a going rate of $12.40 an hour.

Some union workers, such as ironworkers, electricians and plumbers, had not yet returned to their jobs.

Republicans to tailgate before 'big game'

Iowa Senators Charles Grassley and Roger Jepsen will be among the politicians attending a tailgate in Iowa City before the Iowa-Iowa State football game Saturday. The event is being sponsored by the UI chapter of the College Republicans.

"We have received word that besides Senators Grassley and Jepsen, Governor (Terry) Branstad, Congressman Cooper Evans and Jim Leach and Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Bob Lounsberry will be with us Saturday morning," said Sara Moeller, UI College Republican president.

Local Republican candidates, including Johnson County Clerk of Court Mary Conklin and state representative candidate Audrey Jordahl are also expected to attend.

"The College Republican tailgate has become an annual event before the Iowa-Iowa State game. Last year's tailgate was hosted by the Iowa State College Republican chapter.

Private colleges growing; UI feels only 'some' effect

By Mary Fester
Special to The Daily Iowan

Enrollment has increased in Linn County's three private schools, but it has had only a slight effect on the number of incoming freshmen at the UI, according to UI officials.

Increasing enrollment at area private colleges "probably has affected our enrollment some," said UI Registrar Jerald Dallam, although he does not see a trend toward more students choosing smaller schools.

While none of the three private colleges have compiled their final enrollment figures for this year, Mount Mercy College in Cedar Rapids has seen an 18 percent enrollment increase from 1981-83, and 90 percent of these students are from Iowa, said Don McCormick, director of admissions at Mount Mercy. Entrance requirements at the school require students to have an ACT score of 17 and rank in the top 40 percent of their high school classes.

Coe College in Cedar Rapids enrolled 265 new freshmen this year, a 15 percent increase from last year's 229 incoming students. Coe students have an average ACT score of 23, said Gerald D. Lipscomb, associate director of admissions at Coe.

CORNELL COLLEGE gained 435 new freshmen this year, up from the 414 students that entered last year.

The UI accepts Iowa residents who are in the upper half of their classes or have an ACT score of 24.

Continuing education offers flexible, convenient alternative

By Mary Boone
Special to The Daily Iowan

A desire for more flexibility and an alternative to the on-campus enrollment crunch have caused the increased popularity of UI continuing education courses this year, officials say.

Von Pittman, director of the UI programs, said enrollment has increased in the UI Center for Credit Programs' Saturday and evening program and guided correspondence study but has decreased in the off-campus program.

"Our off-campus class enrollment is dropping because of competition with other colleges," Pittman said. "It used to be that people had to take this sort of course through one of the (state Board of Regents) universities, but now a number of smaller, private colleges offer similar programs. In order to compensate, we're tending to specialize more in advanced programs and the more specific you get, the smaller your potential audience becomes."

HOWEVER, THE Saturday and evening program, which began in 1970 with approximately 100 enrollments, now offers over 170 courses in about 40 UI departments and has a record 2,675 student enrollments.

"Our specific program has grown a lot and is growing steadily," said Patrick Irelan, program assistant for UI Saturday and evening programs. "A lot of students who can't get into daytime classes are coming to us. There are also more part-time students working on degrees now and that's affecting us."

Irelan said Saturday and evening courses are offered to both undergraduates and graduates, but "a lot of our courses tend to be introductory level — we're trying to help students fulfill their core requirements."

Irelan also emphasized that because the program was established by the UI to "serve the needs of part-time students," approximately 75 percent of spaces in courses are reserved for students taking fewer than 12 semester hours. Tuition for Saturday and evening courses is parallel to standard UI tuition.

"What we're trying to do is offer courses at times convenient to people who work or take care of a family during the day," Irelan said.

Despite these increases, UI Director of Admissions John Moore also said he does not see a trend in first-year college students choosing private colleges over state universities.

"There are just a large number of people out there that think this university is too large and would feel more comfortable at a smaller school," he said.

"There are reasons for going to one sector or another," said McCormick. "People go to a university because of the size, a specialized academic program, or cost."

THEY MAY ATTEND a private school for the "more personal attention or smaller classrooms," he said, adding another benefit is that students start dealing with faculty as opposed to teaching assistants during freshman year.

While it is easier to qualify for financial aid at private schools, the tuition is higher. Therefore, students attending private schools receive more financial aid because their needs are greater.

"The ideal thing is that when someone applies for financial aid in the private sector, the aid (that they receive) will be the difference between going to a university," said McCormick.

Currently about 60 to 65 percent of the UI student body receives some form of financial aid. In comparison, three-fourths of the student body at Cornell, about 70 percent of the students at Coe and about 85 percent of Mount Mercy's students receive financial help.

Educators skeptical of competency tests

This is the first of two stories gauging local reaction to recommendations of a state task force on education released last week.

By Denny Pope
Special to The Daily Iowan

UI education professors are expressing "mixed feelings" toward recommendations made last week by a state education task force to implement a pilot program of competency testing for teachers.

"I don't have a clear cut position," Charles Case, dean of the UI College of Education, said of the recommendations to improve education in Iowa. "There are a large group of people in Iowa who are jumping on the bandwagon, but Iowa does not have the educational deficiencies that exist in many other states."

The task force, headed by University of Northern Iowa President Constantine Curris, urges competency testing to single out unqualified teaching candidates and to assure Iowans "that children are receiving the highest quality education."

The task force also believes that if the public is assured that teachers are qualified, they will be willing to pay teachers more, making teaching salaries competitive with comparable professions.

THE COMPETITIVE salaries will attract more young people to teaching careers, the task force says, and will prevent a teacher shortage that is predicted by 1990.

"Society does require some kind of testing for professionals before they are licensed," Case said. "What I get concerned about with the recommendations is that they not only want to test for professional knowledge, they want to test for reading, writing and mathematical ability."

Case said he finds it "insulting" to a university, such as the UI, that teaching candidates have to take basic skill tests in light of the standards that students must meet to attend here.

"I find it an infringement upon the university's business," Case added. "And they should test only on professional knowledge, the same as when students finish medicine or law."

Richard Shepardson, UI professor of elementary and childhood education, is opposed to the competency testing because of the high costs of administering the tests.

"It is a very, very expensive way to try to remedy a problem," he said. "It is a quick solution that is being proposed by people who don't understand the nature of the problem."

SHEPARDSON ADDED he believes competency testing for teachers would not be effective and "there is no evidence in any of the states that use the tests that they, in fact, have better education."

Rather than using competency testing to scan candidates, Clifford Howe, UI professor of special education, said, universities should try to "clean up their own shops."

"I think we should try to get more competent people into teaching," he said. "We just don't get the same people as the law school."

To attract these people, Howe said "teaching must start to be competitive with other professions," but quickly added, "It's difficult because taxpayers pay teachers' salaries."

In an attempt to help upgrade teachers' salaries, the task force also recommended a new four-level teacher certification program.

The four-step "career ladder" would start with a one-year provisional certificate for beginning teachers, followed by a five-year educational career certificate. Instructors who wished to advance to the next level, a professional teacher certificate, would have to have a master's degree and six years of experience.

THE HIGHEST CATEGORY, master teacher, would be only for those with a specialist degree and would allow for a $2,000 salary increase.

"I think the career ladder concept is good, but I don't think it could work in practice," Shepardson said.

He said he believes the intent of the career ladder, "to hold onto the outstanding educators in the classroom" is good, adding statistics show that the most qualified teachers are leaving the classroom for other positions.

However, Shepardson said the ladder assumes that people can progress through all four stages and "you can't have all level one teachers in a district — it financially would not be feasible the way they have it designed, especially since Iowa has such large school districts."

The task force also recommends that universities and colleges dispel the "widespread perception that teacher education is an 'easy' curriculum."

According to Case, this perception may stem from the fact that there are almost 1,400 colleges and universities in the country preparing teachers.

"WHEN YOU HAVE that many institutions involved, some of which only have one education faculty member, you've got a quality control problem."

Although Case said some educational colleges are "very, very poor," the UI is not one of them.

"The students that come into the College of Education at the UI do not come from high school directly into our college," Case explained. "Students must first be admitted to the Liberal Arts College and then to the College of Education, which has an even higher set of criteria."

Shepardson added this poor perception of teacher education also stems from the idea that education is noted as being "the easy way out in the sense that a lot of people who majored in education in the past did not really plan to teach — they were doing it as an 'insurance policy' in case other things didn't work out."

Thursday's story will consider the reaction of Iowa City education officials.

Magnetic stripes on ID's simplify student accounts

By Mary Boone
Special to The Daily Iowan

UI student identification cards have officially entered the age of high technology.

Last spring the UI began issuing student ID cards that had magnetic encoding on the back. This magnetic stripe had gone basically unused until the Union Bookstore recently began a system using the stripes that will ultimately do away with student account charge slips.

George Herbert, Union Bookstore manager, said the Union Bookstore purchased seven cash registers this fall that will allow for advancement of the present bookkeeping system through the use of the magnetic stripe.

"The memory has two basic parts," Herbert said. "First of all, it reads the magnetic stripe on the ID and checks to see if the card is listed in the negative file — that would mean the ID had been lost or stolen, that the student had exceeded his charging limit or that his U-bill hadn't been paid."

"The second part of the memory will match the final quantity of the sale with the student's ID number. The information will then be electronically transferred to the data processing center."

THE SEVEN BOOKSTORE cash registers cost about $6,000 each and, according to Herbert, the store plans to purchase six additional registers during the next five years.

According to Herbert, the system will "more than pay for itself in time saved alone." Herbert said charges are currently processed by hand.

Stan Podhajsky, associate director of the UI administrative data processing service, said, in the future the system "could be used to check books out of the library, for dorm meal contracts or to quickly check on the status of a student's account."

Herbert said the current system is only able to read the student's ID number and check it against a master list at data processing. Within the next week Herbert plans to initiate the program allowing cashiers to check for lost or stolen IDs.

S. African rioters bomb power station

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Saboteurs destroyed a power station and tried to bomb a courthouse Wednesday as police battled rampaging youths on the third day of rioting over rent hikes in black townships.

The bomb went off early in the day at a rural power station near Rustenburg, 50 miles northwest of Johannesburg, destroying transformers and leaving five towns and dozens of farms in the Transvaal province without electricity.

Officials expected full power to be restored by today.

In Johannesburg, a Soviet-made magnetic "limpet" mine was discovered in a broom closet at the local branch of supreme court but was safely destroyed by explosives experts.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attacks. The African National Congress, South Africa's largest black nationalist organization, has admitted involvement in some 250 past sabotage and bomb attacks.

In several black townships south of Johannesburg, rioting continued for a third consecutive day. Police said at least 29 people have been killed since Monday — 10 of them by police — and hospital sources estimated the number of people injured at more than 200.

POLICE WEDNESDAY fired rubber bullets at youths stoning vehicles and buildings around Sharpeville, 40 miles south of Johannesburg, and in nearby Sebokeng.

A gas station at Sebokeng was set ablaze and a police anti-riot vehicle was hit by gunfire along the highway between the two townships, a police spokesman said.

Sporadic rioting also was reported at the Boipotong and Evaton townships. At the same time, however, negotiations aimed at putting an end to the violence — the worst in South Africa this year — began between authorities and members of the community.

In Sharpeville, a crowd of about 3,000 blacks blocking the township's main road faced heavily armed riot policemen. About 100 yards of no-man's land separated them.

Two black Catholic priests shuttled between the two sides, carrying the community's demands for the abolition of local councils and the cancellation of the 10 percent rent hikes that went into effect Saturday.

The Rev. Peter Lekache, one of the negotiators, said township authorities "have agreed to take another look at the rents and accepted that rent rises were the basis for this week's rioting."

After about three hours of shuttle negotiations the crowd dispersed quietly.

In Cape Town, the white, Indian and mixed-race parliaments unanimously elected former prime minister Pieter W. Botha as state president.

Five die near Santiago in rebel demonstration

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A curfew remained in effect and public transportation was crippled in the tense Chilean capital Wednesday during the second of two scheduled days of anti-government protest that left at least five dead.

In the shantytown of La Victoria south of Santiago — the site of some of the fiercest violence Tuesday — police were on patrol and an army helicopter hovered overhead as residents prepared a funeral procession for the Rev. Andre Jarlan, a 44-year-old French priest, one of the five killed in Tuesday's protests.

Residents said police were firing submachine guns to quell rioting youths when Jarlan was hit by a burst of bullets that pierced the walls of his rectory house.

The two-day national protest — including a transportation strike and school boycott — was called by an opposition coalition of moderate parties known as the Democratic Alliance to press Gen. Augusto Pinochet, Chile's military president, to return the nation to democracy.

Pinochet marks his 11th anniversary in power next Tuesday.

IN ANTICIPATION of further violence Wednesday night, the government enforced a midnight-to-dawn curfew and banned newscasts on two opposition radio stations to stop the escalation of protests.

Police said 340 people were arrested in Santiago during Tuesday's demonstrations, and 50 people were injured — 10 of them seriously.

Reports indicated the effort to paralyze the capital was about half successful.

The president of the bus owners' association said public transport in the capital was running at half its normal pace, and teachers said school attendance was down by 50 percent.

It was not clear whether the school absenteeism in Santiago signaled parent support or fear over violence in the streets.

Tech Center to aid local growth

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Local officials are confident that the UI's soon-to-be-opened Technology Innovation Center and a newly formed local non-profit corporation could enhance future economic development in Iowa City.

Duane Spriestersbach, UI vice president for educational development and research, said Tuesday the UI Technology Innovation Center is expected to open its doors "within the next couple weeks or so."

The center, located on the UI's Oakdale campus, is expected to lease space to fledgling companies. In return, the center will provide these companies with office facilities, a link-up to the Weeg Computing Center and an opportunity to discuss marketing strategies with UI faculty members knowledgeable in their product areas.

Although Spriestersbach said the center has not made any "solicitations for applications yet," he added, "We've received several informal inquiries from interested businesses."

THE TECHNOLOGY innovation center was established by UI officials in May, after they received more than $180,000 in grants from the Iowa High Technology Commission.

"The technology innovation center is there to provide ideas for nurturing companies," explained Ray Muston, a part-time assistant to Spriestersbach who will help coordinate activities at the new center.

In addition to his position at the technology innovation center, Muston was appointed as president of the newly-formed First Capitol Development, Inc., in July.

"First Capitol Development, Inc., is a non-profit corporation interested in economic development through integration of the three primary groups in the community," Muston said.

He said the UI Research Foundation, Iowa City government and local businesses are the three groups represented in the corporation.

"The corporation is still in an embryonic stage," Muston explained. "But it is the first step at bringing together the resources of these three groups."

DESPITE THE FACT that Muston — who resigned as a UI associate vice president for academic affairs last spring — is involved with both First Capitol and the technology innovation center, both he and Spriestersbach denied a conflict of interest exists.

"There is not any conflict of interest there," said Spriestersbach. "I see the arrangement as totally complementary."

"I don't see it as a conflict of interest, obviously," said Muston. "What my partial appointment (at the technology innovation center) means is that I will be spending 120 percent of my time on economic development."

Last year, as a UI associate vice president, Muston received a salary of $53,000. As president of First Capitol, Muston is expected to receive $55,000, with the UI paying one-fourth of his salary.

Muston, whose academic research emphasis has centered on cooperation between universities and other groups in promoting economic development, stressed that he does not view the technology innovation center as the only method Iowa City should rely on to improve its economic base.

"Economic development involves support of existing businesses and jobs in the area," he said. "A recent study showed that 85 percent of economic development is derived from expansion of existing businesses and industries."

Muston said First Capitol will work to maintain a healthy climate in the area for business expansion while also encouraging new businesses and industries to locate in Iowa City.

Local officials have discussed establishing a research park on land northwest of Iowa City in the past and Muston said the idea is still "very alive."

However, Muston warned "economic development is a very lengthy process."

First Capitol is "not something you'll see a return on in only two or three years," Muston said, adding, "We have not been overwhelmed by anyone coming in."

Stallone to continue 'First Blood' saga

By Colleen Kelly
Staff Writer

David Morrell, UI professor of English, keeps tabs on the upcoming film projects of actor Sylvester Stallone more than your average Rocky fan.

Morrell wrote the novel on which Stallone based his successful movie First Blood, and now Stallone is planning a sequel for Morrell's character John Rambo.

Although Morrell has not been consulted as a screenwriter, he has been kept up-to-date on the progress of the new movie.

"The reason that I have nothing to do with the sequel is that Stallone has more or less adopted the character, and he identifies with it the way he does with his Rocky character," Morrell said. "Stallone has decided that he wanted to have a crack at writing the next episode in Rambo's story."

Morrell called Stallone's script "non-stop running around," and added, "I've been predicting it will do twice the business of the original."

HE ALSO SAID the action sequences are "extremely satisfying. I wouldn't call the script profound in any way. Basically, it's a chance for Sly to be in an action picture. People will once again be jumping up and down, cheering and screaming."

First Blood follows the story of Rambo, an ex-Green Beret and Congressional Medal of Honor winner, who is arrested for vagrancy after coming back to the states. After Rambo escapes from jail, he heads into the mountains of the Pacific Northwest and prepares to put his Vietnam commando training to work on the civilian authorities.

At the film's conclusion, Rambo finally surrenders to local police.

David Morrell

Morrell anticipated a sequel when First Blood became "a tremendous financial success," but did not plan to write the script. "I wasn't surprised or indignant or anything like that," he said.

"Just as a lark," Morrell said, "I might write the novelization for the sequel, which would be really strange — especially since I killed Rambo off in my novel."

According to Carolco, Inc., the picture will begin shooting in Mexico in mid-September. The film's budget has been estimated to be approximately $25 million.

Carolco's Sandy Matthis said, "I imagine Mr. Stallone is writing this script because he prefers to write all his movies."

The film is tentatively titled Rambo, but may appear in theatres as First Blood Part II. It is scheduled to be released Memorial Day weekend, 1985.

Maureen Reagan slams Ferraro on partisanship

DES MOINES (UPI) — Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro has no business touting her candidacy as a rallying point for feminists, President Reagan's daughter said Wednesday.

Maureen Reagan, at a Des Moines news conference, said that if Ferraro is truly trying to promote women's equality she would not have worked against the election of two Republican congresswomen in 1982.

Reagan said Ferraro campaigned actively in 1982 for the defeat of Reps. Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts and Millicent Fenwick of New Jersey.

Reagan said she cannot believe

Ferraro's concern for women has deepened. "You didn't tell me then, so don't tell me now that feminism comes ahead of partisanship," Reagan said.

Reagan, a long supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment said that despite her father's opposition to ERA, it will eventually become a part of the constitution. But she admitted it would not happen during a second Reagan administration.

The president's daughter said she supports her father's efforts to eliminate discriminating laws, but she said until there is an Equal Rights Amendment, "the laws can be changed again."

Never second best

A lot of commotion was raised recently by a report on the increasing number of unwed mothers in America's large cities. One-third of all babies born in New York last year were born out of wedlock, and the numbers were even higher in Baltimore (58.1 percent) and Newark (59.8 percent).

Much of the reaction to these statistics has been a refrain of moral outrage. Unwed mothers are being blamed for social problems ranging from increases in welfare rolls, crime rates and child abuse to the deterioration of the traditional family.

This response, which often comes from the same people who loudly oppose reproductive rights, sex education and accessible birth control, is neither productive nor moral. Using unwed mothers as a handy scapegoat does nothing to help children born with only one supporting parent.

More babies are being born outside of marriage not only in the United States but throughout the Western world. In Iceland, for example, 40 percent of all first-born children are born out of wedlock, and the figure is slightly higher in Sweden.

There are no cries of "moral decline" in these countries, however, because they accept all children as legitimate. They have legal systems that keep men, married or not, responsible for any children they father, and social programs that assure that no baby will suffer in poverty.

Single parenthood is becoming a fact of American life. Last year alone, over 12 million U.S. families were maintained by a single adult, usually the mother. The notion that a family must contain one father, one mother, 2.6 children and a friendly little dog in order to be happy is an obsolete assumption.

The American family is not breaking down. It is evolving, and our picture of the family must evolve with it. Legal, economic and social reforms that follow the Scandinavian example will help that picture evolve as well as help those new families live comfortably. The hypocritical wave of "moral" indignation that labels some children as "illegitimate" and their mothers as "sinners" must, in any case, end now.

Citizen Kahane

Claiming to speak for "the average Jew," newly elected Knesset member Rabbi Meir Kahane is in the United States to raise money for his campaign to expel the two million Arabs living in Israel.

Running for the tiny Kach party on that extremist issue, Kahane earned a seat by attracting just 1.2 percent of the approximately two million people who voted in Israel's July 23 elections.

Since then, Kahane led armed supporters through an Arab sector of Jerusalem where they vandalized shops and shouted "Death to Arabs." The Brooklyn native who founded the Jewish Defense League has been arrested two dozen times since emigrating to Israel in 1971.

While 20,000 votes isn't a lot, it's enough under the rules of Israel's political system. To encourage ideological diversity, minority parties are guaranteed representation if they get 1 percent of the vote.

But minority representation in Israel's political system has become more functionally disabling than ideologically healthy. Six weeks after Israelis voted about one-third of the seats to 13 small parties, they are without a working government.

As the maturing nation introspectively ponders its past actions, present challenges and future goals, it needs strong leadership. The election of a violent extremist like Kahane is not only unfortunate in its own right; it also symbolizes the democracy's need to reform its political system.

Great right north

The news that the recent cold front from the North brought was more than lovely autumnal weather. There was also a political echo as difficult to explain as the true cause of acid rain — another Canadian import that may have its root on this side of the 50th parallel.

That echo is the result of the Canadian general elections this week, in which Conservative candidate Brian Mulroney was elected prime minister in the biggest landslide since the turn of the century.

Mulroney, a Quebecois miller and manufacturer, ran his media-oriented campaign in a fashion similar to the Great Communicator's. His dapper appearance and lively wit made Liberal Prime Minister John Turner's campaign seem dull and uncertain by comparison.

Mulroney's politics have several positive points for Canadians and Americans alike. His government will be the first truly national one in decades: his support comes from across the huge nation, even from Turner's home province of British Columbia. Mulroney's Tories have fashioned a clear mandate in a manner quite similar to President Reagan's odd geographical coalition in 1980.

And Mulroney and Reagan get on famously. In a June trip to Washington, Mulroney and the president joked and gossiped like two longtime inhabitants of the same park bench. This might forecast good news for Canadian-American relations, which had chilled rather alarmingly at several points in Pierre Trudeau's nationalist government of the 1970s and early 1980s.

But that echo you hear is the sound of Reaganpolitik bouncing off the Canadian Rockies right back to us. Many of Mulroney's campaign promises sound very familiar: tax breaks for the wealthy, capitalization of natural energy resources, military spending increases and a nouveau laissez-faire.

It's fine to have strong allies and friends that agree with what you're doing. But if the Canadian elections indicate the general mood of the North American political mainstream — and many think they do — than the chill of November, reinforced by the answering echo from the North, could result in a freeze in international relations that has no end in sight.

Weapons talks get lost in space

PRESIDENT REAGAN has been arguing that for arms control to be effective, the United States must be able to negotiate from a posture of strength and therefore gain meaningful concessions. The negotiations on space weapons scheduled to begin in Vienna this month could have been the perfect opportunity to test this hypothesis. Those negotiations now appear scuttled, however, thanks to Reagan administration hesitation and indecision.

Washington has been cool to space weapons talks, claiming the Soviet Union has successfully tested an anti-satellite weapons system (ASAT). U.S. military strategists didn't want to be locked into a position of inferiority. This, however, doesn't take into account the technological advantage most experts believe the United States maintains in the area of space weapons.

THE SOVIET SYSTEM is primitive, relying on radar-guided warheads fired from ground-launched intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM). The target satellite has to be orbiting directly over the ICBM silo before it can be launched, which occurs only once a day. The radar guidance can be easily jammed or confused with a "fuzz buster" type mechanism.

The United States is developing an ASAT launched from an F-15 fighter plane that is able to fly to an altitude of 45,000 feet and stay directly under the satellite anywhere in its orbit. Its heat-seeking missile allows greater protection from detection and jamming.

This system was successfully tested in California this January but has been barred from being tested in space by congressional mandate. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., requires the President to certify to Congress that ASAT weapons are essential to preserve national security and that the United States is endeavoring in good faith to negotiate a mutual and verifiable ban on such weapons.

THE TSONGAS bill was written in response to a unilateral suspension of anti-satellite missile testing by the Soviets in August 1983. This moratorium will remain in effect as long as the United States doesn't test its new system. Moscow has repeatedly called for negotiations to ban these weapons, and in June, President Reagan surprised them by accepting.

Rather than accepting the talks outright, though, Washington tried to link talks on space weapons with the stalled START talks on intermediate and strategic missiles. Mixed signals were coming from the administration almost daily for a month until negotiations finally fell apart.

A space weapons treaty is vital because of the dangers involved in escalating the arms race into space. The protection of satellites is particularly important because of the increasing reliance both the United States and the Soviet Union place on them for military communication in the event of a crisis. In 1986, for example, the United States will be launching a series of 18 satellites called NAVSTAR that will be able to direct attacking planes and missiles to their targets and coordinate the movement of ground troops.

WITH THE ADVENT of a perfected ASAT in the superpowers' arsenals, a quick response will be needed to avoid losing essential military communications. This quick response increases the chance of an accidental nuclear war being started from a computer malfunction. (Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., found that during one 18-month period, our computers recorded 161 false alerts of a Soviet attack, one of which lasted seven minutes.)

John Pike, the associate director on space policy for the American Federation of Scientists, contends that now is the perfect time for a moratorium on ASATs, while they're still in their infancy.

Verification of space testing and construction of ground-launched systems can be monitored by surveillance satellites. Concurrently, the superpowers could conduct talks on verification details needed to demilitarize space permanently. (An outer space treaty was signed by the United States and the Soviet Union in 1967, but both countries left loopholes open for ASAT systems in the future.)

President Reagan missed a golden opportunity to show his support for arms control by passing on the space weapons talks in Vienna. He instead renewed the image of a militarist bent on superiority rather than mutual reduction at a time when the Soviets seemed serious about such reduction. It may be a long time before such an opportunity knocks again.

The Thoughts of Chairman Richard

WHEN I BECOME dictator, it will be illegal for any business to send you an envelope that looks like it contains a check. I am looking at one now from Sports Illustrated. I have just thrown it out. I would command everyone to do the same.

When I become dictator, it will also be illegal to send junk mail that has "Treasurer" as a return address. I got several of these recently and threw them all out without looking inside.

Being dictator is going to be a lot of fun. I would make it illegal to open an umbrella without first looking around to see if you are about to decapitate someone. It would also be illegal to step into a subway or a bus and then just stop, not caring that there are people behind you. Life-plus-20 for that.

And life-plus-30 for anyone who just abandons a cart in a supermarket, blocking the aisle. While I am at it, I would declare it illegal to use a credit card in a drugstore so that while I am attempting to buy a newspaper, the clerk has to fill out some form, call some credit service — and not be able to get it on the phone.

Richard Cohen

AS DICTATOR, I would ban the use of the expression "you know," even though it would severely limit interviews with professional athletes. You know what I mean. Also on the proscribed list would be "future plans" (there's another kind, bubble?), "past history," (ditto), "new innovation," "past record," "opportunistic" to mean someone who takes advantage of opportunities and, finally, Howard Cosell. He is, as they say, forewarned. Also gone would be call-in radio and notices that if only I drive to some remote mountain I can pick up either a million dollars in cash or a toaster. When I am dictator, it will be illegal for airline reservation clerks to answer the phone by saying, "Hello, this is Debbie." I never know how to respond: "Hi, this is Dickie"? I don't care who they are and they don't care who I am and we both know it. Let's just book the flight and get on with it.

It would likewise be illegal for a waiter or waitress, especially in a resort town, to introduce themselves by name. It would be a capital offense for them to write their names on the tablecloth. Also banned would be the practice of the waiter reciting the menu. Not only can't I ever remember what they say, but I am too shy to make them repeat it.

WHEN I AM dictator, it would be illegal for the telephone operator to say, "Thank you for calling AT&T." I always want to say, "What was my choice?" and when once I did, the operator shot back that I did have a choice. But I was in an airport and I didn't. Off with their heads.

When I get to be a dictator, no one will be allowed to say, "Have a nice day" and all the contestants on "Family Feud" will be institutionalized for terminal rapidness. When I'm in charge, no politicians will be allowed to say, "I could take the easy way out," and then take the easy way out. They would all be incarcerated in the Gerald Ford Presidential Library — and fight over the book there.

As dictator, I would forbid another book on the Kennedys and banish Mary Cunningham to a convent for people who seek publicity by saying how much they hate publicity. She would be locked in a room with Sly Stallone.

WHEN I'M IN charge, the government would not be permitted to announce that something else causes cancer (we will have to make do with what we already have) and stores that are remodeling will not be permitted to say they are doing so "For Your Convenience."

As dictator, you will never again see a road sign that says, "Your Highway Taxes At Work," making it seem it's your own fault that you're stalled in traffic. Road crews will never be permitted to work in the daytime and construction and deliveries will have to be done at night.

All holidays will be returned to the original dates (Feb. 22 for Washington's birthday), exit polling will be banned so that election night will be fun again, kids in punk clothing will be restricted to Plains, Ga., and Boy George will have to decide one way or the other.

Redbusters

To the editor:
In reading Richard Panek's review (entertainment, Aug. 31) of the movie Red Dawn, I was surprised that the author of the article called the movie a senseless fantasy.

If Panek thinks that this movie is a fantasy, why didn't he compare it to movies like E.T., Ghostbusters or Halloween? I think it happened because:

First, in (Red Dawn) the Russians talked English with an accent, while E.T. and the ghosts talked perfect English. Maybe that is why Panek thinks Red Dawn is a fantasy.

Second, Red Dawn is not funny like Ghostbusters. Red Dawn makes an audience think and worry. Perhaps that is why Panek thinks that this movie is a fantasy. Evidently he does not like to worry.

Third, the Russians did what Panek did not want them to do even in the movie. The Russians invaded the United States. How about Afghanistan, Mr. Panek? Is it also just a fantasy?

What can we do to change Panek's opinion? Maybe we should write the new script called Anti Red Dawn. Russians had not killed six million of their own citizens in labor camps between 1937-1953. In the new script of Anti Red Dawn, Russians had not invaded Afghanistan and had not shot down a Korean airliner. And of course, in the new script, for Panek's personal convenience, the Russians will speak perfect English. Heck, why not! All Soviet high school students have mandatory three years of English or German. Guess why?

Panek called Red Dawn "a daydreaming of the distracted student" — maybe he meant himself. It was not the perfect movie, I agree, but how perfect is a real war and a real death? Sorry, Panek, but it hurts.

Conservative nerve

To the editor:
Iowa's senior senator, Roger Jepsen, is a "fiscal conservative," except when his favorite special interest group, the Defense Department, needs more new weapons. One of Jepsen's favorite weapons is nerve gas, a very inhumane weapon.

Binary nerve gas contains two relatively harmless agents which mix to form nerve gas after a shell is fused or a bomb is armed.

The gas is many times more lethal than deadly mustard gas.

It kills by disrupting the nervous system, causing convulsions, uncontrollable vomiting and finally the stopping of the breathing process. Death comes within several minutes or hours, depending on the dose. A sublethal dose may cause victims long-lasting psychiatric and nervous disorders.

Nerve gas is a weapon that kills civilians more than soldiers. Chemical weapons kill indiscriminately, without warning, and in a most cruel fashion. Well-equipped troops are virtually invulnerable to this kind of warfare; therefore, nerve gas is primarily an anti-civilian weapon.

Also, the United States already has a large stockpile of chemical weapons, though production hasn't been going on for the last 15 years. The existing arsenal of chemical weapons is safe to store and to handle.

For the purposes of balancing the budget, Jepsen feels that the poor should pay for food stamps, that funds for the Legal Services Corporation should be cut, and other social programs should be cut or eliminated, but somehow the Pentagon is exempt from budget cuts.

To make matters worse, Jepsen, the self-proclaimed fiscal conservative, seems oblivious to the fact that Iowa taxpayers pay $2,823,800,000 in taxes for the Pentagon, while receiving $642,500,000 of that money back to Iowa for military construction — a net loss of $2,181,300,000 going to other states. Nerve gas production may be "only" $105,000,000, but Iowa receives none of those funds back.

Not only is nerve gas a socially irresponsible, anti-civilian weapon, it is also a fraudulent waste of money, for which taxpayers of Iowa receive no material benefit. Whom does Jepsen represent anyway, Iowa or Reagan/Bush and the Pentagon?

Walter A. Sizelove

Discovery lands

Space shuttle Discovery lands Wednesday at Edwards Air Force Base in California after a successful and ambitious maiden voyage in which three satellites were launched into orbit, demonstrating the craft's commercial value. A fifteen-inch chunk of ice had to be removed from a waste vent by the robot arm Tuesday to ensure a safe landing.

said. Cutler said she has consulted with the Johnston campaign and recently participated in a direct mailing fund-raising letter for him. She has also met with Johnston to discuss campaign strategy. "I've talked to Joe ... I think he's got a good campaign organization and I think he's got a good strategy," she said. When asked if she would return to

Iowa before the November election, Cutler said, "I hope so ... I don't have any immediate plans to come." Johnston said he has talked to Cutler about his campaign and the possibility of Cutler returning to campaign in the 3rd District. "I discussed it with her and she indicated she would be delighted to come back and visit her friends in Iowa," he said. "Her campaign is a separate campaign from what we're running."

volve the sadistic rapist, whose meticulous planning of a sexual assault stems from his anger and need for power. "If the victim lives, she has serious injuries and psychological problems," said Miller. "What can we do?" Miller questioned. "It's necessary to learn to protect, that's part of it."

alone. "It's going to take all of us to correct it," she said. Through increased awareness and education, Miller hopes to help eliminate the increasing numbers of rape in Iowa City. IDEALLY, MILLER hopes to have men involved in "consciousness-raising groups" similar to those offered by the Women's Resource and Action Center. "We need to see men calling other men on their behavior." Miller said she has spoken to men's organizations about rape. The Iowa football team and UI classes have been audiences on the topic of rape, she said. "We've had men interested, but we would like to see more." In Iowa City, resources available to victims of rape include the 24-hour rape crisis line, a domestic violence shelter which houses victims and their children, and whistlestop — a program alerting women to the use of the whistle as a preventive measure. "We recommend women to do whatever they have to do to get out of the situation" when a rape occurs, Miller said. "If they can't get out of the assault, then the next priority is to get out alive."

Parking once again a problem for Iowa fans

By Dan Millea
Special to The Daily Iowan

With the combination of earlier starting times due to television contracts, and the closing of the Iowa Avenue bridge, Hawkeye football fans will find traffic and parking congestion even more confusing this fall.

Once again, Kinnick Stadium is sold out for the season. Each home Saturday will see 66,000 spectators converge on the stadium area, causing traffic and parking difficulties. To avoid the confusion, fans are urged to leave for the game early to allow plenty of time for parking.

All parking facilities will be opened by the UI at 7 a.m. and traffic control will be provided for two hours following each game. One thousand university spaces are provided for a $2 charge on unsurfaced areas near the stadium, weather permitting. Motorists are asked to have the parking fee ready to avoid further delays.

ADDITIONAL PARKING ON the west side of the Iowa River includes a 1,000-car lot at university owned Finkbine Golf Course on Melrose Avenue, five blocks west of the stadium. Also on the river's west side is an 850-car lot at Hancher Auditorium on North Riverside Drive. Motorists using the Hancher lot may take the free stadium shuttle beginning two hours prior to kickoff.

On the east side of the river, free parking is available in the large lots near the Union and the Main Library. Free Campus shuttles will be provided from the east side of the river and will be available with a stop on Washington Street in the Pentacrest area.

Parking in university lots to the immediate west of the stadium and near Carver-Hawkeye Arena is restricted to permit holders.

OFF-CAMPUS PARKING is available in Iowa City's two 900-car municipal parking ramps, south and southeast of the Pentacrest on Burlington Street, at a cost of 35 cents for the first hour and 30 cents for each additional hour. Motorists utilizing this space may use the Campus shuttle service.

Assistant director of university parking Bill Binney feels that despite the loss of the bridge to construction, parking and traffic control will still be adequate this fall. Binney did add that "the first game (Saturday with Iowa State) of the year does present some additional problems."

However, Binney believes his staff, as well as university security, will be able to handle the situation.

While parking is not expected to be a problem, traffic entering the Iowa City area may be. Motorists needing to cross the river will be left with Burlington Street as the only downtown bridge and are urged to use Park Road north of downtown and Benton Street south of downtown if possible when crossing the river, to avoid heavy congestion on Burlington Street.

AN ADDITIONAL warning is that the access road at the north end of the stadium will be closed when pedestrian traffic. See Parking, page 6B

Me and my shadow

Jerry Nichols and his shadow provide a study in basketball form Wednesday afternoon on the basketball courts located near Daum Residence Hall as Nichols spends a leisurely afternoon shooting baskets. Nichols, a freshman medical technology major from Round Lake, Ill., finished classes at 12:30 p.m. and decided to enjoy the mild weather by keeping his shot in shape in his spare time. Nichols was a forward on his high school team.

Boyle to hit books, not baskets

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

Iowa basketball Coach George Raveling announced Wednesday that junior Bryan Boyle plans to sit out the upcoming basketball season to concentrate on his studies.

In a prepared statement, Raveling said the 6-foot-7, 190-pound forward made his decision after speaking to both his father and the Hawkeye coach.

Boyle, however, declined to elaborate on his decision when reached Wednesday night.

"All I can tell you is that I'm redshirting this year and I'll be attending classes," the St. Louis native said. "Other than that I don't think I have to answer any more questions, so if you want details you can call Coach Raveling — he knows more about it."

Bryan Boyle

RAVELING WAS unavailable for further comment, but in his statement he said Boyle will be keeping his athletic scholarship during the current school year.

Last year Boyle played in 26 games for the Hawkeyes, averaging seven minutes per game. He hit 39.2 percent of his shots from the field and threw in 78.6 percent of his free throws. In all games, Boyle averaged two points and 1.1 rebounds per game.

In his freshman year, following in his brother Kevin's footsteps, Boyle shot 57.1 percent from the field — the highest percentage on the team. He played in 10 games and averaged 2 points per game.

From the free throw line, Boyle connected all four of his shots, while pulling down six rebounds. He also scored a career high 12 points in a game against Hawaii during his rookie season.

BOYLE, WHO WAS a prep star at St. Louis University High School, received United Press International and Associated Press first-team all-state honors during his senior year. His resume also displays all-metro, all-city, all-district, as well as all-tournament honors in the Meramec Dubourg Christmas Tournament.

Averaging 20 points, nine rebounds and three assists, Boyle had a prep career high of 30 points and was named as University High School's Most Valuable Player.

Boyle is the second Hawkeye to leave the team in the last week. Robert "Spider" Ursery announced on Aug. 29 that he would transfer to Jefferson College, a junior college in the St. Louis area.

Spartans, Gophers look to surprise Big Ten foes

Perles views Michigan State as a contender

By Steve Batterson
Sports Editor

CHICAGO — George Perles may be running the Michigan State football program like an army camp but General George's drills may begin to pay off during the Spartans' 1984 campaign.

Michigan State may have been the most-improved defensive team in the Big Ten the second half of last season, holding Ohio State to 21 points and Iowa to 12 during the second half of the year.

It is with a strong defense that

Perles intends to build his Spartan program around and several league coaches are mentioning Michigan State as a possible darkhorse contender for the 1984 Big Ten title.

And Perles said he even sees his team as a contender. "In my mind, I see us as a contender," he said. "When we go out, we're going out there to win. I'm never going to concede a game before it's begun."

"WE'VE GOT STABILITY and that is an important word in our vocabulary," Perles said. "We like to think that we've established the fundamentals during our freshman season and now, at the start of our sophomore year, we'll be building our foundation. 'We're on the right track,' the former Pittsburgh Steelers assistant said. "I can tell people we're building a program and we're building it within the rules."

The Spartans started off strong last season with wins over Colorado and Notre Dame before injuries took their toll, including one to Spartan quarterback Dave Yarema. The sophomore missed the remainder of the season after

Holtz takes on major project at Minnesota

By J.B. Glass
Staff Writer

CHICAGO — The University of Minnesota might not have the best football team in the Big Ten, but it does have a new mentor.

And with it: new mentor comes hope. For the past two years, Minnesota has been the doormat of the conference. Not only have the Golden Gophers finished last but they have lost 17 consecutive conference games in the process.

Lou Holtz is the new man in the Gopher hole. He maintains he is not a magician or miracle worker, but he will give it a go.

"It will require the help of everyone who has ever shoveled snow," the former Arkansas Coach said.

But why would a man who has a .622 winning percentage in 14 years as a head coach come to Minnesota. "I CAN'T TELL you why," Holtz confesses. "I had no plans. But they took me in a room when the wind chill was -59 and they turned the heat up and I thought it was 95. It was a challenge. I like a challenge — didn't want one quite this big though."

His goal is to turn the program around. "My goal my first year at Minnesota is to be able to experience my second one," Holtz said. "Our athletes know our goal is to go to the Rose Bowl, this year."

"Now I want you to understand this, we're not naive. We know it will be difficult, but we got a better chance to go than 98 percent of the teams in the country."

Holtz wants to find 22 athletes that will sacrifice to be the best team Minnesota can be. "I don't want to undersell this football team and we aren't going to write this year off."

BEFORE THE ATHLETES step on See Gophers, page 6B

Hana Mandlikova

NAVRA TILOVA, WHO WAS taken to 7-5 in the third set by Shriver two weeks ago, is 25-4 lifetime against Turnbull, her last defeat coming in 1980, while Evert Lloyd is 4-0 against Bassett.

"I put a lot of pressure on myself because I so much wanted to reach the semifinals," said Shriver, who twice has defeated Navratilova at the Open. "Once again I came up a match short. 'Wendy's going to play Martina, and unfortunately for women's tennis I don't think it's going to be that good a match.'"

Bassett, who had lost in straight sets to Mandlikova in their two previous meetings this year, was in full control Wednesday against her erratic opponent. The 14th seeded Canadian took the opening set with a break in the 10th game at 15, and she swept through the first three games of the second set.

MANDLIKOVA, WHO WAS guilty of 21 unforced errors to only seven for Bassett, fought back with a break in the fifth game, but Bassett got that right back in the sixth and she ran out the match.

"I knew if I played well I had a chance," Bassett said, "but then I wasn't too confident about it. I just went in there and played."

Mandlikova said the time off from tennis seemed to help Bassett.

Sportsbriefs

It's overtime for the Hawkeye gridders

Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry kept the squad at practice until 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, one hour longer than usual, and he also said that there is a chance that the team could be in full gear on Friday.

"We just had to keep going over and over the fundamentals that we need help on before the game," Fry said. "There still are no new changes in the depths, but there are a few questions left. We might be in pads on Friday, depending on how things go on Thursday."

Iowa State will be coming into Kinnick Stadium this Saturday with what Fry calls a "mystery team."

"They have three new defense coaches from spring practice and have about 15 new junior college transfers that we have never seen before," Fry said.

"With all of the changes, we do not know what to expect, so we have to prepare for everything possible," Fry said. "That really isn't good for the first game of the season."

Iowa is also favored over the Cyclones by 21 points and Fry wasn't even aware of it. "It doesn't matter how many points we are favored by, as long as we win," Fry said.

KHAK-FM's Brooks to be honored

Bob Brooks, the sports director at KHAK-FM radio in Cedar Rapids will be honored for 40 years of sportscasting tonight at halftime of the Cedar Rapids Kennedy and Cedar Rapids Regis football game at Kingston Stadium in Cedar Rapids.

Brooks has covered the Hawkeyes and area high schools over three radio stations during 40 years, including WSUI-AM in Iowa City and KCRG-AM in Cedar Rapids.

Carr signs pact with Hawks

ATLANTA (UPI) — Antoine Carr, a first-round NBA draft choice a year ago who played instead in Italy, signed Wednesday with the Atlanta Hawks.

The Hawks acquired the rights to Carr in June when they traded Dan Roundfield to the Detroit Pistons in a deal that also gave Atlanta another forward, Cliff Livingston, and the Pistons' second round draft picks in 1986 and 1987.

Football registration ends today

By John Gilardi

Special to The Daily Iowan

Entries are due today at 4 p.m. for the upcoming intramural football season in Room E216 of the Field House, according to Warren-Slebos, associate director of recreational services. The entry fee per team is $25.

"There will be about 250 teams playing all together," Slebos said. "We have independent, greek and residence hall divisions for both the men's and women's teams."

"There are competitive and recreational leagues in each division also," Slebos said. "We also have a coed league."

Intramurals

Games are played on Monday through Thursday nights between 5:30 and 10:30 p.m. on the Recreation Building fields. Each team plays a five-game schedule before the playoffs and plays once a week. Recreational teams also play once a week, but there are no playoffs for that league.

"IT WILL BE the same as usual this year," Slebos said. "We have received only about 10 entries so far, but today we'll have a line outside the door to get the forms in before the deadline."

For both the men's and women's championships, two teams from the independent league, one dorm and one greek team play to win the overall title. In the women's division, the dorm teams are included in the independent league.

"The girls play just as hard as the guys in some of these leagues," Slebos said. "Maybe some of the women's teams could play against some of the men's recreational teams and give them a good game. Everything is very competitive."

THE MEN'S OVERALL champion from last year, The Dogs, finished fourth in the national championship in New Orleans. They are expected to play again this year, but have not registered yet. Fraternity champions from last year, Delta Upsilon, are also returning.

"We should be strong again this year," Bob Hingtgen, a senior player said. "There's a good nucleus returning from last year and we've got good young recruits."

With over 100 games a week, it would seem that there would be a lot of injuries, but according to Slebos, there are not that many.

"There's always a trainer out on the field during the games," Slebos said. "Basically everything is non-contact, but collisions are possible with all of the running."

Illinois' Swoope denies use of cocaine at trial

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — University of Illinois football player Craig Swoope, countering the testimony of the prosecution's top witness, denied Wednesday that he used cocaine knowingly, kept the drug, or held onto drug sale profits.

Swoope, taking the stand to open his defense on federal drug trafficking charges, said he delivered a bag to Herbert Lorenzo Siler, but did not know it contained cocaine until Siler began selling it to an undercover drug agent.

Siler pleaded guilty to a reduced number of federal drug charges last week, one day before he was to be tried along with Swoope and Ted Bailey for an alleged cocaine conspiracy.

SWOOP, 20, Fort Pierce, Fla., and Bailey, 23, Champaign, Ill., are on trial on cocaine trafficking charges. Swoope is charged with conspiracy and possession of cocaine with intent to sell. Bailey is charged with conspiracy.

Swoope, an all-Big Ten defensive back last season, testified that Siler came to his dormitory room on March 13 and left a brown bag. He said Siler called later to ask that he keep the bag until the next day.

The next day, Swoope said, Siler called and asked him to bring the bag to Bailey's apartment, where it was opened for a drug sale to an undercover agent. He said it was the first time he learned the bag contained cocaine.

He said he watched television while the drug sale was made and said he stayed in the apartment because he felt uncomfortable and wanted to talk to Siler.

"I WANTED TO KNOW why he told him (the agent) my name and I didn't want to be involved in any drug deals," Swoope testified. He also said he saw Siler in August and Siler said he was sorry he got him in all the trouble.

Swoope denied testimony earlier in the day from Siler that he used cocaine, knowingly kept cocaine at his dormitory room, held the profits of drug sales in his room or was given any cocaine from Siler for personal use.

Siler told the nine-woman, three-man jury that he asked Swoope in March to hold the drugs and money to keep them safe.

On the line

Okay, so the grand prize in this week's On the Line contest isn't as big as the Illinois Lottery's Lotto game, but who cares.

Here at The Daily Iowan we just love to give away an eight-gallon keg of beer to the winner of this week's contest and of course, you must be 19 years of age and be able to prove it in order to participate.

All you have to do is have your ballots in by noon today, that's right, noon, in Room 111 of the Communications Center.

You must also follow the rules or your ballot will be thrown to the wolves, so please pay attention.

First, circle the winners of all 10 games listed on the ballot, including the tiebreaker. Then, predict the final score of the tiebreaker and fill in your name and phone number. If you think the game will end in a tie, circle both teams.

Each contestant is limited to five ballots.

This week's prize is donated by The Fieldhouse, 111 E. College, home of the best lunches and the best times in the Big Ten.

So, get those ballots in early and tomorrow the DI's group of prognosticators will release their prediction of the season to their audience.

Iowa State's Williams is no joke; Bad Humor Man overpowers foes

By Jeff Stratton
Staff Writer

You've heard of the Good Humor Man. Meet Lester Williams, the bad humor man. Williams, a 6-1, 224-pound junior, plays weakside linebacker for the Iowa State Cyclones and is a player that Cyclone Coach Jime Criner says has all-Big Eight talent.

"Lester is an all-Big Eight type player," Criner said. "He runs the field from sideline to sideline and arrives at the ball in bad humor."

Williams heads up a group of Cyclone linebackers that Criner said "is as good a group as I have ever had the pleasure to work with."

These linebackers include Tim Iversen and Willie Everett at outside linebacker and junior college transfer Vernon Singleton at middle linebacker. This group must replace Dwayne Gilyard, Doug Fischer and second-team all-Big Eight linebacker Chris Washington.

THE CYCLONE COACHES have said that this year's linebacker corps have more group speed and depth than the 1983 squad, and Williams is the top player of the bunch.

"Williams is a very aggressive player and is the leader of the group," Criner said.

A Cedar Rapids native, Williams is a two-year letterman and has started the last two years for the Cyclones. He was nominated twice last season as Iowa State's Big Eight defensive player-of-the-week and was selected the ABC player-of-the-game in last year's Iowa game.

Williams led the outside linebackers in the Big Eight with 91 tackles last year and led the Cyclones with 11 tackles for a loss in yardage.

"We will be vastly improved on both offense and defense," says ISU linebacker Lester Williams. "We are more unified and also more experienced."

AFTER PLAYING outside linebacker in 1983 and defensive end in 1982, Williams has been moved to the weakside linebacker slot this season.

Williams said he is looking forward to the position change this year and is also optimistic about the Cyclones' chances this fall. "We will be vastly improved on both offense and defense," Williams said. "We are more unified and also more experienced."

This season's linebackers will also be improved, Williams said. "This is the most talent at linebacker since I've been here. We are big, strong and fast."

He laughed when asked about Criner's description of him as a player, and said, "He was talking about an attitude that it takes to play defense. It is part of being a wild-eyed, team-tackling defense that runs to the ball."

WILLIAMS HAS BEEN granted an extra year of eligibility after this season. This is due to a NCAA retroactive rule regarding participation that allows for another year of eligibility if a player has participated in less than 20 percent of his school's games during one of his seasons.

As a graduate of Cedar Rapids Jefferson High School, Williams said he receives plenty of flack from Hawkeye fans in his hometown.

"Obviously I hear a lot about the Hawks," Williams said. "The loss was hard to keep out of our conversations back home, but I don't let my friends talk too much about it."

Williams said the Cyclones are looking to prove themselves this year. "We took our lumps last year, but the guys who took those lumps are looking to prove themselves this season."

Montreal picks ex-Yankee executive to become the new general manager

MONTREAL (UPI) — Murray Cook, who resigned as general manager of the New York Yankees Aug. 20, was named vice-president and general manager of the Montreal Expos Wednesday, succeeding John McHale who stays on as president.

Cook, 43, a native of Sackville, New Brunswick, has been in professional baseball as a player and an executive for 23 years. He joined the Yankees as director of player personnel.

McHale plans to remain the Expos' chief executive officer, a position he has held since the team's inception in 1969. McHale, who turns 63 in two weeks, became general manager following the 1978 season.

During his tenure, the Expos were molded into one of the powerhouse teams of the National League. They were often preseason favorites to win the NL championship but never did so. They came closest two years ago when the Los Angeles Dodgers beat them in the fifth game of the National League playoffs on a home run by Rick Monday.

COOK STARTED 1984 as Yankee general manager, was demoted after about one-third of the season was gone and quit two weeks ago. He was replaced by Clyde King.

"I was ready to get into a position of more decision making and more responsibility," said Cook, who declined to elaborate on any differences he had with Yankee owner George Steinbrenner.

"The situation in New York did not work out, for whatever reason, but Mr. Steinbrenner and I parted amicably," Cook said.

"I have been out of the league (National League) for a couple of years and it will be good to come in at this time for me to assess things before the season is over."

Cook said he has a strong candidate in mind to replace Bill Virdon, who was fired two weeks ago from the Expos and replaced on an interim basis by Jim Fanning. Cook indicated the new Expo manager is currently the property of another major league club.

"I ALREADY HAVE somebody in mind for the manager's job but I can't name him now," he said.

"That's tampering," McHale interjected.

One of the first hurdles Cook may have to clear is the relation of his authority to that of Montreal owner Charles Bronfman who has played an increasing role in the club's major player transactions.

Bronfman pushed the controversial signing of Pete Rose through on Jan. 20 of this year, despite the objections of McHale and manager Bill Virdon. Rose had since been dealt to Cincinnati.

When asked whether he would have final decision making power on trades and players moves, Cook said: "Yes, at this point, but obviously the way major league baseball is set up these days, decisions have to go through a number of channels."

McHALE STATED COOK'S responsibilities bluntly: "Your mandate is to W-I-N."

"I think it was the right time for Murray to come in, to see this club, to see Indianapolis (Expos' farm club) and, most importantly, to prepare for selecting a new manager."

"It isn't so much what he did (in New York) but what he can do," McHale said. Cook said he did not regard his short stay with the Yankees as wasted time.

"If there was one thing I was most pleased with in New York, it was not any one deal but bringing a sense of stability, particularly in the scouting areas which are the foundations of your ball club," he said.

Some well-known names had been mentioned as possible candidates for the Expos general manager position, including Tal Smith, ex-general manager of the Houston Astros and former Baltimore Orioles' manager Earl Weaver.

"I MADE MY decision a year ago," McHale said. "At the time I wanted to bring Gene Mauch here, but that didn't work out."

In McHale's first season as general manager, the Expos were 95-65, losing the division pennant the last weekend of the season. They suffered the same fate in 1980 and won the East Division title in the strike-shortened 1981 season in which McHale was named Executive of the Year.

"No matter how many times you do it right, if you do it wrong you are only allowed so many times," McHale said.

The Expos' victory total dwindled and in 1983 they were just 82-80. This season the team has been struggling and trailed the division-leading Chicago Cubs by 16½ games entering Wednesday's contests.

New-look Jets, Pittsburgh face big early-season game

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — The New York Jets and the Pittsburgh Steelers, two revamped clubs with solid defenses but major questions on offense, will do battle tonight in a nationally televised game that marks the Jets' move to Giants Stadium.

The Jets, moving into their new home in New Jersey after 20 years at Shea Stadium in New York, defeated Indianapolis 23-14 in their opening game last Sunday. Pittsburgh, hurt by a stumbling offense, lost 37-27 to the Kansas City Chiefs in the Steelers' opener.

New York used some strong running by Freeman McNeil, who carried 29 times for 112 yards, and a swarming defense led by end Mark Gastineau, who had four sacks, to defeat the Colts.

THE JETS' BIG question is their passing game. Veteran quarterback Richard Todd was dealt to New Orleans in the off-season and Ken O'Brien, who had never played in a regular season game, was named his replacement. O'Brien, however, and Gastineau are involved in an assault trial and O'Brien has had little time for practice.

That opened the way for seven-year veteran Pat Ryan and he had a fair showing in his first NFL start, hitting 14 of 29 passes for 163 yards and two touchdowns. Ryan will be at quarterback Thursday night against the Steelers.

The offensive line had a change at left tackle, where second-year man Reggie McElroy has replaced Chris Ward, a former No. 1 draft pick who was waived last week, and at tight end, where Mickey Shuler has taken over for Jerome Barkum, another veteran who was let go.

ALSO, WIDE RECEIVER Lam Jones suffered a broken collarbone in pre-season and his spot is being shared by Derrick Gaffney and Kurt Sohn.

Pittsburgh has lost three more veteran starters from the squad that won a record four Super Bowls. Quarterback Terry Bradshaw and cornerback Mel Blount retired and running back Franco Harris was waived two weeks ago after a contract squabble.

David Woodley, acquired from Miami, started the opener at quarterback but was put out of the game with a concussion after hitting 11 of 17 passes for 225 yards. Mark Malone finished up and may start Thursday night against the Jets, although Coach Chuck Noll refused to indicate a starter. Malone was 11 of 24 for 233 yards and a touchdown. Each threw an interception.

"We figure Woodley probably will play but we'll get ready for both of them" Jets Coach Joe Walton said. "They run pretty much the same kind of offense but I think Woodley is a little bit better runner than Malone.

"I THINK THEY'RE a better team than they showed against Kansas City in their opener. Their offense was sluggish and the Chiefs scored 20 of their points on turnovers. They still have that tough pressure defense. (Middle linebacker) Jack Lambert is out (dislocated toe) but they still have an awful lot of depth there.

"It's going to be a very physical game. They like to hit — we like to hit. I feel the biggest thing for us Thursday night is that this is the first playoff team we're playing, and it's a team that beat the hell out of us last year in front of our fans. We'll see if we'll continue to improve. The New York Jets have never beaten the Pittsburgh Steelers in a regular season game and some of the defeats have been rather embarrassing."

Pittsburgh is 7-0 over the Jets in regular season play, including a 34-7 rout last year.

NOLL WAITED UNTIL after the final exhibition game to name Woodley as his starter.

"I think we felt David's productivity was a little better," Noll said. "He took a hard hit on Sunday and we'll have to see how he works out. I heard on the radio that Malone was starting and that was news to me. We still haven't made that decision."

Malone, a former No. 1 draft choice who has been plagued by injuries, says he's ready.

"We made a lot of mistakes offensively and that's what killed us last week," he said. "Obviously, this is a good situation for me. I think the coaches felt both David and I had good preseasons. I plan on working as hard as I can. I have to get ready and use this as an opportunity to prove myself."

"I think we're going to have to run the ball more successfully than we did against the Chiefs. We have to be concerned with correcting the things we did wrong against Kansas City and not kill ourselves with stupid mistakes."

Odds makers rate the game as even.

Rutigliano offers no excuses for Browns' opening day loss

BEREA, Ohio (UPI) — Cleveland Browns' Coach Sam Rutigliano said his team's destruction by the Seattle Seahawks was like "a bowl of bad soup you get in a diner."

Meaning the more you stir it, the more it smells? "That's right, and it takes you some time to digest it," Rutigliano said Wednesday of the 33-0 nightmarish defeat in the Kingdome. "Quite frankly, we played lousy."

"There are no excuses. Coaches can go to their graves offering excuses, but that's a waste of time."

Turnovers, including four fumbles that led to three losses of possession, a blocked punt and two interceptions of Paul McDonald, and what Rutigliano termed "bonehead plays" fueled the rout.

AFTER VIEWING THE films at Baldwin-Wallace College, the coach came to two specific conclusions — the special teams were hardly that, and the defensive secondary is of primary concern.

"We're going to make some changes on the special teams," Rutigliano said. "Boyce Green will join Bruce Davis in returning kickoffs, and Earnest Byner will be alongside Charles White in the wedge that will hopefully protect the ballcarrier."

"Also, Green and Brian Brennan will handle the punt returns. Brian may even return a few kicks, but we're looking for somebody to help out."

The Browns also needed another player to take the place of wide receiver Dwight Walker, who is recovering from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

THE TEAM FILLED Walker's spot and the need for another kick returner Wednesday by signing free agent wide receiver Preston Brown, who was waived by the New York Jets in the final cutdown.

Brown, a 5-foot-11 four-year pro out of Vanderbilt, returned 29 kickoffs last season for 645 yards (a 22.2 average). He played his first two seasons for New England, which drafted him in the sixth round of the 1980 draft.

Brown missed the entire 1981 season with a back injury, but Browns' assistant to the president Ernie Accorsi said the newcomer is "in fine shape."

"He may not have a great reputation, but we thing Preston Brown can help us," Accorsi said. "He has experience, and is a solid player."

As far as the secondary, Rutigliano said Frank Minnifield will play more as the nickel back and also will see more action overall.

CORNERBACK LAWRENCE JOHNSON did not play well against the Seahawks, and it seems likely Minnifield will take some of his playing time Sunday when the Browns travel to Los Angeles to meet the 0-1 Rams.

"Lawrence is not as fast as he used to be, but he knows what to do," said Rutigliano, whose team defeated the Rams 21-10 in a preseason game on Aug. 13. "We're just looking for a fresh face or two."

"The Rams are a different team than Seattle. Eric Dickerson is a fine running back and Vince Ferragamo a fine quarterback. Our defensive players know what to do. They'd better, that is."

Rutigliano was asked why the Browns did not go directly to Los Angeles and avoid another coast-to-coast trip.

"Well, Art (Browns' owner Modell) considered leaving me in Seattle and bringing the rest of the team back to Cleveland," said Rutigliano. "Seriously, this is our home and it's the best environment for workouts and meetings. Also, we know we have the proper treatment for injuries here."

Rutigliano said that tackle Paul Farren's hip pointer probably will not cause him to miss significant action against Los Angeles.

"Paul went to the Cleveland Clinic for some tests this (Wednesday) morning," said the coach with a wink. "I can't tell you what for because there are ladies present."

Questionable for the Rams game are center Tom DeLeone (knee), tight end Harry Holt (ribs), safety Clinton Burrell (hamstring) and Farren.

Seattle signs Harris to bolster backfield

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle Seahawks signed former Pittsburgh Steelers running back Franco Harris, who is approaching the NFL career rushing record, to a one-year contract late Wednesday as a replacement for injured Curt Warner.

Warner, who led the Seahawks into the playoffs last year for the first time, suffered a season-ending knee injury Monday in Seattle's 33-0 victory over Cleveland.

Harris, 34, was in a contract dispute with the Steelers this summer. The club released Harris Aug. 20 when there was no sign of breaking the impasse.

Harris, who is just 363 yards short of Jim Brown's NFL rushing record of 12,312 yards, is expected to be in uniform for Seattle's game Sunday against the San Diego Chargers.

"OUR GOAL HERE is the Super Bowl," Harris said. "It will be a hard job to replace Curt. I have a lot of respect for him. I'm happy to be here."

The signing of Harris was just part of a flurry of intense activity around the Seahawks' headquarters Wednesday. Three other veteran NFL running backs — Rickey Young, Perry Harrington and George Peoples — were given workouts earlier in the day.

The Seahawks were anxious, even to the point of desperation, to find another running back.

Along with losing Warner for the rest of 1984, backup Zachary Dixon also suffered a knee injury, although less serious, in the game Monday. That left Seattle with only veteran Eric Lane — primarily a special teams player — and three fullbacks to carry the ball this Sunday.

WARNER UNDERWENT surgery Tuesday to repair the damage suffered to a ligament and cartilage in his right knee in Seattle's season opener against Cleveland. While expected to make a complete recovery, Warner will not play again this season.

Parking

becomes heavy following the game and will remain closed until the stadium crowd clears.

Out of town motorists entering Iowa City on westbound I-80 should use exits 244 or 246 while eastbound I-80 traffic should use exits 240 or 242.

Fans southbound on I-380 or Highway 218 should take 218 to Hawkins Drive and follow Hawkins to the stadium area.

Drivers northbound on Highway 1 should take Sunset Drive to Melrose Avenue and turn left to reach the Finkbine parking or right to the stadium.

Mormon Trek Road along Finkbine's west side will be restricted to one way southbound traffic from three hours prior to game time until normal traffic flow is resumed.

All stadium bound traffic is asked to follow the special "Football Stadium Exit" signs erected by the Iowa Department of Transportation.

Traffic officers will be stationed along all major routes and UI security officers will maintain an information center at the southwest corner of the stadium.

ter suffering a shoulder separation early in a game against Illinois, the third game of the season.

BUT DON'T ASK Perles about injuries. "Injuries are a part of the game," he said. "We had injuries, but so what. So do the other teams. They'll even out. It's not healthy for a staff to complain about injuries — it's just a crutch."

But just in case, Perles has stocked up on quarterbacks in what he terms an "excellent" recruiting class. Heading that list is Tom Holba of East Lansing, Mich. Yarema's back-up from last season, Clark Brown, will also return.

But it is the defense that should boost the Spartans in 1984. Michigan State's defensive leaders should be senior inside linebacker Jim Morrissey and free safety Phil Parker.

Morrissey had a combined total of 130 tackles, solo and assists, to lead the Spartans last season while Parker grabbed seven enemy aeriels last year, including one for a touchdown.

CORNERBACKS LONNIE YOUNG, who picked off two passes last season, and Terry Lewis will give the Spartans added strength in the defensive backfield.

Behind Morrissey, there is quality in the Spartan linebacking corps. At the outside spots, Thomas Tyree, Anthony Bell and Derek Bunch will strengthen the Spartans. Shane Bullough and John Jones will back-up Morrissey to give Michigan State even greater depth.

The Spartan kicking game ranks among the best in the nation with the return of Ralf Mojsiejenko. He averaged 43.9 yards per punt in 1983 and connected on 11 of 17 field goal attempts, including a 59-yarder that tied Purdue as time ran out.

In addition to Yarema, senior center Mark Napolitan, originally a walk-on, will be the leader of a young Spartan line. Other expected starters include sophomore tackle Doug Rogers, junior Guard Al Akana, junior guard John Wo-

From a strength standing, Perles said the Spartans are only beginning to make progress. "By no means are we where we want to be," Perles said. "You don't recruit strength, you develop it. I'm not interested in shortcuts or bulking someone up overnight. It will take time."

the gridiron they must develop a proper attitude, according to Holtz. "The biggest problem we have is getting the athletes to understand what it takes to win."

After the attitude is developed, next comes the development of Minnesota's weakest area, a defense.

Despite nine stoppers returning, Holtz said that the unit must come together, "because when you talk about winning, you have to talk about defense."

Last year Minnesota gave up 518 points, an average of 47 points per game, "which is more than our basketball team gave up," Holtz said. "We gave up 4,900 yards, that's an awful lot to give up."

THE LINEBACKERS appear solid, according to Holtz. Glen Cieslewicz and Peter Najarian will hold down the middle. Last season Najarian led the team in tackles with 118, as Cieslewicz will return after a knee injury in 1983. After those two, Holtz is up in the air about the rest of his defenders.

The defensive front returns three players, Bruce Holmes, Craig Paulson and Anthony Burke. Paulson led the team in sacks last year with 13.

The big question is in the secondary.

"Without a defensive secondary," Holtz said, "we don't have a chance."

Presently there are only two positives in the secondary. Andre Harris is one of them. "Andre Harris may start at corner or he may start at safety, or he may play both at the same time," Holtz said.

THE OTHER IS Kerry Glenn, a three-year letterman, cornerback.

Offensively, Holtz has some problems as well.

The strength is up front for Minnesota, as the offensive line sports three key returnees and senior tackle Mark Vonderhaar, who missed last season with an injury.

1983 starter Brett Sadek returns at quarterback. "Brett Sadek has all the physical capabilities we need in order to be successful at the quarterback position," Holtz said. "What we do need though is leadership. We need confidence at the quarterback position and that still remains to be seen."

At the fullback position "you can mark in" Valdez Baylor. Last season Baylor carried the ball just 55 times and gained 229 yards. But Holtz will expect big things from the 5-foot-11 junior.

Another problem of Minnesota's is it receivers or lack of them. "At wide receiver we have severe problems," Holtz said. "We have some people who have some talent but nobody's really come to the forefront." Holtz will have to wait until the season opener at against Rice to see who the receivers will be.

Yet another problem comes in the kicking game.

"WE PUNTED 86 times, an NCAA record," Holtz said of last year. "When we go for it fourth and eight on our own nine yard line, you'll know why."

Charles Horton appear to have the placekicking duties, as the punter "remains to be seen."

What Holtz will look to stay away from is failure this season.

"You take the word failure," Holtz said. "No. 1, you get away from fundamentals. No. 2, people become aggressive with one another. No. 3, you become insecure. No. 4, you lose leadership. Then you become undisciplined. Then resentment sets in. Then you lose enthusiasm. Spell out the word failure and one causes another."

Players use a variety of excuses to defend key upsets at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (UPI) — Excuses, excuses. Hana Mandlikova gets upset at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships Wednesday, and she blames it on the fact her opponent's father is wealthy.

Pam Shriver gets upset and she claims she put too much pressure on herself and that her loss is a blow to women's tennis.

Sylvia Hanika loses and complains she had a poor schedule.

All in all, the women were as fascinating with their perspective, as they were with their play, during the quarterfinals at the National Tennis Center.

Mandlikova fell victim to 16-year-old Carling Bassett of Canada, playing her first tournament since Wimbledon following a bout with mononucleosis.

ASKED IF SHE NOTICED any improvement in Bassett's game since her layoff, Mandlikova responded, "I don't know how long she did not play, but she put some weight on and I think that helped her because her stroke is a little bit faster."

Then came the good part.

"Also, she doesn't really care if she wins or if she loses. She has nothing to worry about. Her father (John Bassett, a sports promoter and movie producer) has millions and she doesn't have to worry. If she loses, so what."

Mandlikova, for the record, has earned well over $1.5 million in tennis and still is only 22.

Shriver was distraught following her 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 loss to 13th seed Wendy Turnbull, primarily because it deprived her of another chance at her good friend, Martina Navratilova. Shriver already has beaten Navratilova twice in the Open, and two weeks ago she carried her to 7-5 in the final set of a tournament in Mahwah, N.J.

"I PUT A LOT OF pressure on myself because I wanted to get to the semifinals and play Martina, and once again I come up a match short," Shriver said.

"Wendy is going to play Martina and I think unfortunately for women's tennis it will not be that good of a match. I was just thinking of that type of stuff and you put bad pressure on yourself."

Wendy Turnbull reaches for a shot during her 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 upset win over third-seeded Pam Shriver in quarterfinal action Wednesday afternoon at the U.S. Open. Turnbull will now face top-seeded Martina Navratilova in the semifinals.

Turnbull hasn't beaten Navratilova since 1980, and is on the short end of a 25-4 count in their personal rivalry, but she wasn't too thrilled at Shriver's assessment.

"HOW MANY TIMES has Pam beaten Martina recently?", she asked. "If Pam thought she was going to go in and beat Martina, then she had to beat me first. You have to earn the right to face Martina."

United Press International

"I think I'm playing better than I have all year. You never know in a tennis game. She might have had a better chance, but she doesn't now."

Hanika, the unseeded West German, didn't really figure to beat Chris Evert Lloyd, but after losing 6-2, 6-3 she said she was tired from her late match of Tuesday night.

"I played a long match last night and I was a little bit unlucky with the scheduling," she said. "And I had to play early this morning, so it was not so easy."

Wisconsin defense must carry big load

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Wisconsin Coach Dave McClain listened to rotarians sing, "I had a dream," then told the businessmen that defense is the key to winning this season, which starts Saturday against Northern Illinois.

The Badger football team plays Northern Illinois at 1 p.m. Saturday, "Band Day," at Camp Randall Stadium. Northern Illinois beat West Texas State 40-33 last weekend. After that, the Badgers play at Missouri, then Michigan.

"The key is to play better defense," McClain said Wednesday. "We were very good last year offensively, and if our defense can improve — which is where you win Big Ten championships — then I think we've got a shot for it."

THE BADGERS finished 7-4 overall and 5-4 in the Big Ten last year. Nearly all the offensive players, including receiver Al Toon, are back. The defense includes tackle Darryl Sims.

Sims, an all-America candidate, was an all-Big Ten pick in 1982, but didn't have the grades to play last year. Toon, who is also a track star, was a leading Big Ten receiver last year.

"I think it's the best football team I've had since I've been at Wisconsin, but how we'll do I don't know," said McClain, who came to Wisconsin from Ball State seven years ago.

"After this Saturday — and we should win — we go to Missouri, and we all know we were lucky last year," he said. The Badgers beat Missouri 21-20 in Camp Randall. Missouri scored last, went for a two-point conversion, but didn't get it.

"THE NEXT WEEK, we go to Michigan," McClain said. "Iowa plays at Ohio State, and we play at Michigan. Those, in my opinion, are the best four teams in the conference, so things will sort out pretty fast after that."

"Our road schedule is horrendous," he said. "I don't like it, but there's not much you can do about it."

The Badgers also play Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Michigan state on the road.

Wisconsin beat Northern Illinois 39-7 last year. The Mid-America Huskies finished 10-2 under Bill Mallory, who is now coach at Indiana. Former Indiana coach Lee Corso is now coaching the Huskies.

RANDY WRIGHT, the Badger quarterback last fall, is now second to Lynn Dickey of the Green Bay Packers. Replacing him is sophomore Mike Howard, who according to McClain lacks only in experience. McClain's chief concern on offense apparently is the backfield.

"We're really thin there, and that's a real concern," McClain said. He said Mark Harrison was injured during practice Tuesday night and probably would not play Saturday.

Injury buffaloes Coyle; will miss Colorado debut

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Starting center Eric Coyle will miss Saturday's opener against Michigan State, in which Colorado will unveil its new one-back offensive attack.

Colorado Coach Bill McCartney said Coyle, who strained his left knee two weeks ago, would miss the game because doctors "just didn't think he was ready."

"We don't know when we'll get him back," McCartney said.

The coach said the Buffaloes offensive line would be bolstered by the return of starting guards Junior Ili and Steve Beard. Both players missed practice last week with concussions.

On the subject of Colorado's new one-back offense, resembling the formation introduced by the Denver Broncos this season, McCartney was mum. He said he did not "want to jeopardize our chances of winning" Saturday at Folsom Stadium.

BUT QUARTERBACK Steve Vogel was less reticent.

"I'm enjoying it," Vogel said Tuesday. "We'll be taking more chances, but that's all right. Lee (Rouson, tailback) will have more openings and Loy (Alexander, split end) and Ron (Brown, wingback) should have more room to work with."

Vogel said the new offense was an improvement over the pro-set, two-back strategy of former offensive coordinator Ron Taylor, who resigned in December.

"Ron's offense was all right, but I think we can do much more with this," Vogel said.

Gov. Richard Lamm has proclaimed Saturday "Eddie Crowder Day" to honor the Buffs' former athletic director, who resigned Aug. 1 after 20 years in the position.

Glamour, mundane contrasted in films

By Merwyn Grote
Staff Writer

THURSDAY AND Friday nights, the Bijou is showing an interesting double bill of films about black Americans. The films — Minnie the Moocher and More and More, a documentary by Manny Pittson about black jazz performers of the '30s and '40s, and Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads, a student production about life in the black community of Brooklyn — provide an insightful contrast in how films about blacks have changed over the years both in content and style.

The first, a sort of black That's Entertainment!, recounts through assorted filmed musical numbers the heyday of jazz that arose out of the ghettos of Harlem. From such places as Tillie's Chicken Shack, the Lafayette Theatre, the Savoy Ballroom, Club Hot Cha, Small's Paradise, the Yeah Man and the infamous Cotton Club sprang such now-legendary names as Louis Armstrong, Fats Waller, Count Basie, Lena Horne and Cab Calloway, who acts as host and narrator of the film.

As a documentary, the film leaves much to be desired. Through Calloway's rambling narration, the film only suggests the atmosphere of Harlem and other such jazz havens where the gaudy, bawdy and outrageous mavens of jazz held sway amidst the squalidness and seaminess of poverty. As Calloway says, it is a ghetto now and it was a ghetto then. The musical clips that make up the bulk of the film are apparently taken from the black exploitation movies of the era and present a clearly sanitized view of the mood and the music. Infrequent still photos of the destitute areas of Harlem stand as a striking contrast to the low-budget, but nonetheless Hollywood, vision of black America of the time.

Films

Minnie the Moocher and More and More

Directed by Manny Pittson. Narrated by Cab Calloway.
Showing at the Bijou.

The days of studio-supported specialty films of the '30s and '40s is gone, as are the hard action blaxploitation adventures of the early '70s.

IT SEEMS the Pittson documentary is at odds with itself. The world that Calloway describes often does not jibe with the vision the film footage reveals. The film industry of the time made films aimed expressly for the black audience, but, as with films for white middle America, the industry idealized the reality. So the musical material, probably the only available source for recapturing the star performances, never quite connects with the world the film talks about.

This, however, does not reflect badly on the music in the film. Hollywood glibness or not, the performers and their music shine and make the film well worth viewing. One of the evils of the segregation of whites from blacks in the film industry is not that it denied black performers access to a white audience, but, conversely, that it denied the white audience the enjoyment of these jazz greats. Fats Waller's "Ain't Misbehavin'," Dorothy Danridge singing "Easy Street," the dancing of Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, and Calloway's own "Minnie the Moocher" are just some of the treats in the film.

Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads

Written, edited and directed by Spike Lee. Produced by Zimmie Shelton and Spike Lee.

Zachariah Homer..... Monty Ross
Ruth Homer..... Donna Bailey
Teapot..... Stuart Smith
Nicholas Lovejoy..... Tommie Hicks
Showing at the Bijou.

PROVIDING A nice contrast to the more glamorous side of black show biz is Spike Lee's Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads. It is a student film made by Lee as a thesis for the NYU film school but has garnered many awards, including an Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences Merit Award. Made for a mere $13,000, it is clearly a student film, grainy and a little ragged. But this does not detract from the film's attributes and even enhances its credibility as a document of the time and place.

The story takes place in the black Bedford-Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn where Joe runs a barbershop that is sort of an official meeting place and a front for a thriving numbers racket. When Joe gets greedy he is eliminated by his gangster employer, and the shop is taken over by Joe's hair-cutting partner, Zachariah Homer.

Zachariah is thick-headed and a bit dim, but he is happy being just a barber, even in a shop that is verging on bankruptcy. He is married to Ruth, a social worker who loves him but is vaguely discontent with her life and the poverty and misery that she encounters in her job. One of her cases is Thadus "Teapot" Powell, a chronic truant whom she persuades her husband to hire at the shop.

IT IS A mundane existence but not uncomfortable. Zach's complacency is dispelled, however, with the reappearance of Joe's hoodlum boss, a dapper businessman-type named Nicholas Lovejoy, whose natty exterior belies his no-nonsense cruelty. Lovejoy pressures Zachariah into re-establishing the numbers game in the store which, in turn, forces Zach to re-evaluate his priorities and make choices in his life.

The story Lee tells is a bit melodramatic but certainly believable. However, the strength of Lee's film is not in the story but in who the story is about and the world in which they live. He gets nice performances out of his cast of unknowns. Monty Ross as Zachariah is proud but uncertain in his defiance, and Donna Bailey as Ruth is strong, yet finding it increasingly difficult to cope. Stuart Smith's "Teapot" is likable despite his streetwise posturings, and Tommie Hicks' Lovejoy is chilling as a businessman whose up-and-coming, middle-class-black pretense hides a pragmatic lack of morals. It is pleasing that the characters avoid being the despairing and/or embittered black ghetto stereotypes of the past. Likewise, Bedford-Stuyvesant is seen as a depressed area, not a depressing one. The area is in decline, but Lee's inhabitants are still full of life and humor.

Lee's film might be the way of the future for black-oriented cinema: small, personal and inexpensive. The days of studio-supported specialty films of the '30s and '40s are gone, as are the hard action blaxploitation adventures of the early '70s. Lee, with his eye for the natural and an apparent desire for realism in black story-telling, may establish a new integrity for the genre.

Entertainment today

At the Bijou

Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop/Minnie the Moocher. The former film is an award-winning 1982 student film about life in a corner barbershop in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of New York City. The latter is a nostalgic tour of the Harlem jazz clubs of the 1930s and 1940s. It was directed in 1983 by Manny Pittson and is narrated by Cab Calloway. At 7 p.m.

• Trouble in Paradise. Ernst Lubitsch's 1932 classic concerns some high society jewel thieves and stars Miriam Hopkins, Herbert Marshall and Kay Francis. It also features Enrico Caruso as the voice of a gondolier tenor on a garbage scow. At 7 p.m.

Television

On the networks: The CBS late movie offers up Gene Wilder in The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother (WBHF-4 at 11 p.m.), a light-hearted spoof of Victorian adventure yarns. Wilder directs as well as stars as Sherlock's spoiled baby brother, with support from Madeline Kahn, Dom Deluise, and Marty Feldman.

• On cable: A film you'll either love or hate is Ken McBride's Americanization of Jean Luc-Godard's Breathless (HBO-4 at 12:20 a.m.). Starring Richard Gere and Valerie Kaprinsky, Breathless mixes Godard's original story with expressionistic color, nudity, the music of Jerry Lee Lewis, and Silver Surfer comic books. If you like obnoxious lead characters and lots of overt philosophizing, this film is for you. If not, it will probably be uninviting and more than a little irritating.

Theater

Riverside Theater presents Brecht on Brecht, directed by Michael Sokoloff, at 8 p.m. in Old Brick.

Nightlife

Bobby's Blue Band, in support of their latest album, Generic Blue Band, begins a three-night stint at the Crow's Nest tonight.

Baroque music festival begins

All singers and instrumentalists are invited to participate in a sight-reading of J.S. Bach's "Magnificat" at 12:30 p.m. Sept. 12 in Harper Hall in the UI Music Building. The hour-long session will be conducted by Don V. Moses, director of choral activities for the UI School of Music, and is open to both musicians and listeners.

The event will launch a two-year festival of Baroque music at the UI, commemorating the birth anniversaries of Bach, Handel, Scarlatti and Schutz. Bach, Handel and Scarlatti were born in 1685 and Schutz was born in 1585.

THE FESTIVAL will include recitals, concerts and seminars highlighting Baroque music and culture, including several lectures and performances by guest artists of international repute.

A performance will occur each Wednesday noon-hour in Harper Hall through the fall of 1985, with other major events beginning in January 1985.

Guest artists already scheduled for the spring and fall of 1985 include the Academy of Ancient Music, conducted by Christopher Hogwood; organist Luigi Tagliavini; the Ensemble Chamberelle, a trio specializing in the early 17th-century solo song; Mary Springfels, viola da gamba; William Heiles, harpsichord; and musicologist Newman W. Powell of Valparaiso University. Dates will be announced.

Cedar Rapids to celebrate Czech heritage with festival

A Czech of a Good Time!
That's what's in store for visitors to the 11th Annual Czech Village Festival, to be held Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Sept. 7, 8 and 9, in Czech Village, near downtown Cedar Rapids.

Cosponsored by the Czech Village Association with the Czech Heritage and Czech Fine Arts Foundations, this annual three-day Czech celebration will feature a Polka Fest and Beer Garden, a Village Flea Market, two performances of the Capital City Czech Choraliers from Lincoln, Neb., continuous music and dancing, demonstrations of Czech folk and fine arts, the crowning of a Czech Princess and Prince, a Czech Heritage Parade and lots of contests and old-fashioned fun.

The Czech Village Festival is a community-wide event, and a variety of organizations join the Czech celebration with the volunteer efforts. For example, helping the Village's Sykora Bakery prepare kolaches serve thousands of festival-goers will be bakers from Hus Memorial Presbyterian Church, St. Ladmila Catholic Church, and Sokol, a fraternal Czech organization.

CONTESTS ARE an important part of festival fun, and Saturday's events will include a kolache-eating contest and a Czech bake-off, a tribute to Czech baked delicacies. A carp fishing contest, with a prize of $100 going to the fisherman landing the largest carp, will be held in the vicinity of the 16th Avenue Bridge in Czech Village on Sunday.

New attractions to the 1984 festival include a button accordion contest on Saturday, a street dance free of charge for the public, hosted by the United State Bank Friday night, and the closing of 16th Avenue through the Village on Friday and Saturday, in order to create a pedestrian mall-type atmosphere for festival-goers.

The Czech Museum, with its beautiful collection of national costumes, glassware, dolls and antiques, will be open all three days. Continuous entertainment will be provided by Shorter's Gala Midway; a Village flea market featuring antiques, arts and collectibles will be staged; and Czech Heritage Parade, highlighting the Czechoslovak ethnic history, will delight visitors on Sunday morning.

Featured bands will include The Czech Artists, Jerry Schuff's Band, the Jolly Bohemians, the Czech Plus Polka Band, and the Accordion Aces, Accordianaires and Czech Showcase from the Boddicker School of Music in Czech Village. The traditional Czech Heritage Band will entertain festival-goers also.

For more information, call (319) 366-7348 during business hours.

Old Creamery presents farce

The Old Creamery Theatre Company in Garrison, Iowa, will present the world premiere of Playing Doctor, written by two founding members of Iowa's only non-profit professional theater.

Artistic director Thomas Peter Johnson and Mick Denniston, who directed the popular Mass Appeal, collaborated on this farce, which will run until Sept. 23.

The play revolves around a young doctor preparing to address an important seminar that would pave the way to a highly successful career. He doesn't count on his out-of-work brother showing up on the same day, bringing chaos and confusion in his wake. Add to that an overbearing boss, his "dragon lady" daughter, a female doctor mistaken for a hotel maid and a Spanish-speaking bus boy trying to further his own career, and you wind up with a comical story of plots and counter-plots, drugged drinks and blackmail.

For reservations and more information about this production, call toll-free 1-800-332-5200 or (319) 477-3165.

Films investigate Indian art

Two films revealing the photographic art of Edward S. Curtis will open a series of films that have been scheduled in conjunction with exhibits of Native American art at the UI Museum of Art.

The Shadow Catcher: Edward S. Curtis and the North American Indian will be shown at 2 p.m. Sept. 5, and Curtis' film, In the Land of the War Canoes, will be shown at 12:30 p.m. Sept. 12 in the museum.

The Shadow Catcher documents the life and work of Curtis, who spent the years 1896-1930 photographing Hopi, Navaho, Apache, Pueblo and Plains Indians. The film includes quotations from Curtis' journals and raises questions about the nature of his work: Was it documentary or interpretive?

Curtis made In the Land of the War Canoes in 1914 at Kwakiutl villages on Vancouver Island. Lost for many years, it has been found and reconditioned, and authentic sound has been added. It presents a fictional story of love, war and death in Kwakiutl legend and ritual.

As part of the museum's overview of Native American art, an exhibition of Curtis photographs is on display in the Curatorial Gallery of the museum through Oct. 28.

The film series will continue each Wednesday at 12:30 p.m. through Oct. 10. Brown-baggers are welcome to eat their lunches in the museum's lounge prior to the films.

Five Seasons books Hagar

Sammy Hagar, along with the heavy metal group Krokus, will be at the Five Seasons Center in Cedar Rapids for his only Iowa appearance Wednesday, Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m.

Hagar, best-known for his songs "I'll Fall in Love Again" and "Three Lock Box," has emerged in the last few years as an up-and-coming AOR-radio star. He is now touring in support of V.O.A., his current album, which features the single, "Two Sides of Love." He is also a member of the "supergroup" RSAS, along with Journey guitarist Neil Schon.

Krokus, known for their uncanny resemblance to the AC/DC sound, has just released The Blitz, featuring the cuts "Ballroom Blitz" and "Rock the Nation." The Hagar/Krokus date represents a change-of-pace for the Five Seasons Center, whose next two definitely scheduled events are Liberate on Sept. 20 and "The Muppet Show on Tour" from Sept. 26 through Sept. 30.

Tickets are on sale now at the Five Seasons Center, $11 in advance and $12 the day of the show. Tickets are also available at all Eastern Iowa Record Bars and Omni Records and Tapes.
