Students quit frat following allegations

By Kirk Brown

Following a policy that led to the voluntary recognition of two triểns on campus, six members of the Phi Delta Chi fraternity at the University of Iowa have quit the organization to protest a decision to allow a fraternity of men to reconstitute itself.

Iowa City Police Chief Ron Sander and ISU Police Chief John Anderson have both led the charge to get rid of all fraternities on campus, the Associated Press reported.

Professor William D. Bush-Jacoby, who works for the University of Iowa, said the move was made after a year-long battle against the university's policy of allowing fraternities to continue.

The AP reported that Bush-Jacoby had previously said that the move was made because the organization is not recognized by the university's official registry.

Bush-Jacoby said that the university's registry is not a list of all recognized fraternities, but a list of fraternities that have been recognized by the university.

Board candidates talk to public

By Colleen Kelly

Four of the five candidates vying for seats on the Iowa City School Board discussed their plans during a forum Monday night."I hope you can take an honest look at what we are doing, and what we could be doing," said Parent-Teacher Organization of the City Colleen Spendlove,蕾nch read about the forum and what it means for the Iowa City public school district. The forum was the second of two scheduled for the candidates to talk to the Iowa City community. The forum was organized by the Iowa City Community Schools in an effort to ensure that all candidates are equally represented.

"MANY OF THE questions that are raised at the national level are not really related to this city district," Spendlove said. "It's hard to know where to encourage people to come out for the forum," she said. "People know that they can watch it on cable before the election." Most of the questions centered on issues remotely discussed at board meetings, including how to increase the budget for the Iowa City school district and how to make the best public policy decisions for the district.

The forum was organized and moderated by Robert Amsterdam, who was also a candidate for the board, as well as two journalists in the area, one in the area for the Iowa City Press-Citizen, the other at the University of Iowa.

CADSI endures after one year

By Kirk Brown

One year ago today, it was a groundbreaking moment. It was the official beginning of an inhouse computer software CAD/SI system created at the University of Iowa in the College of Engineering.

Although CADSI's search for funding had been difficult, UI Materials Engineering Professor Edward Haug, the company's principal founder, said Thursday a final investment agreement had been reached after numerous delays. CADSI's original investors agreed to provide the state Board of Regents, the university's temporary president, Dorsey Ellis, who is now Iowa Gov. Brickhouse, and the UI Student Senate.

"We are very pleased," Haug said. "We have always turned out being ahead of our time, and CADSI is no exception." The company plans to market CADSI in the computer-aided design market.

'People' contest increases appetites for Great Midwestern ice cream

By Patricia Rettig

Last year, Fred Gratton, owner of Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., was rewarding his patrons with a free ice cream cone to the tune of $76,000. This year, the contest increases to $200,000. 'I am not only a fan of the contest, but also a huge ice cream lover,' said Gratton. 'This year, we are giving away even more ice cream to our customers.'

Gratton's ice cream cones are made with 100% natural fibers and are available for pick up at the Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co. in downtown Iowa City.

This is the first big time award in a while, Gratton said. 'I am thrilled to be able to give away such a large prize. The contest is a great way to show our appreciation to our loyal customers.'

Nicaragua offers to halt aid to El Salvadoran guerrillas

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Nicaragua has offered to halt aid to El Salvador if it is assured that international guarantees will protect the Sandinista guerrillas in their country. But the Reagan Administration has rejected the offer.

"We have said that we would not halt the aid to the guerrillas in El Salvador until the new government of El Salvador guaranteed that the guerrillas would be protected in their own country," a State Department official told a congressional committee.

"This is a very important issue to the new government of El Salvador," the official said.

"We have been assured by the new government of El Salvador that they will protect the guerrillas," he added.

"But we want to see the guarantees in place before we halt the aid," the official said.

"We want to make sure that the guarantees are enforceable," he added.

You bet your life

The grandaddy of all lottery prizings was given out in Illinois this week. A 64-year-old printer from Chicago picked the correct combination of numbers that were drawn and won $10 million, believed to be the biggest jackpot ever in the United States.

The net worth of the jackpot was more than a year's salary for the average American. But even for an average American, the news was plenty. It is the sort of news that speaks to the dreams of the millions who are still hoping to make it big.

The lottery, the great hope of the working class, the great dream of the middle class, is the great dream of all Americans. It is the dream of a better life, a dream of a better future.

But the lottery is also a dream of a better life for the lottery players themselves. It is a dream of a better life for those who have already paid for their dreams, and for those who have yet to pay for theirs.

The lottery is the great hope of the American people. It is the great hope of the American working class. It is the great hope of the American middle class. It is the great hope of all Americans.

But the lottery is also a dream of a better life for the lottery players themselves. It is a dream of a better life for those who have already paid for their dreams, and for those who have yet to pay for theirs.

JERUSALEM (UPI) - Labor Party leader Yitzhak Rabin arrived in the West Bank late Thursday evening after completing a historic agreement with Likud leader Yitzhak Shamir. The agreement, reached in eight days of negotiations, would presumably end a government that has been in place since the election of 1977.

Standing on the lawn, Iowa Hawkeye head coach Hayden Fry puts out a call to his players.

"It's time," he said. "Today's the day."

The Hawkeyes will prepare for their first game of the season Saturday afternoon at 3:30 in Kinnick Stadium.

Fry, in his fourth year with Iowa, is excited about the team's chances for success.

"We've got a good chance to do some things," he said. "We've got a lot of things to work on, but we're looking forward to it."

Improvement saves gridders from extra work

Iowa football Coach Kirk Ferentz was pleased with Wednesday's practice because the team showed a lot of concentration.

"They got themselves out of a fall in gear in 15 minutes," Ferentz said. "I was very pleased. It's the same improvement we saw last week." The Hawkeyes are scheduled to open their season today at Arkansas.

Fry said he wasn't pleased with Wednesday's practice because the team made a couple of mistakes in a 14-13 win over the Razorbacks.

"I'm not really concerned with the mistakes," Fry said. "We're glad to have a little comedy relief to the day." He also added that his team is not to be underestimated.

The Recreation of Iowa City will sponsor two bike rides this weekend. The first trip will be a 15-mile ride on the RAGBRAI course. The trip will depart from College Green Park at 10 a.m. The second trip will be a 20-mile ride on the RAGBRAI course, followed by a 30-mile ride on the RAGBRAI course. The second trip will depart from College Green Park at 1 p.m. The third trip will be a 10-mile ride on the RAGBRAI course. The third trip will depart from College Green Park at 2 p.m.

Crumley taking his show on the road

Former Iowa guard Kent Crumley will perform his own gymnastics routine on a seven-week tour of the United States.

Crumley, who was a dominant for the prestigious Iowa State wrestling team, will perform the routine for 7,000 people per night. The tour will be sponsored by the United States Wrestling Federation, founded in 1957.

"I think that's the best competition," Crumley said. "I've been foot coloring every night and I've been one of the best gymnasts in the world." Crumley is one of six current and former Iowa wrestlers who have won the gold medal at world championships.

Recreation instructors needed

The City of Iowa City is now hiring gymnastics and swimming instructors with training experience. Instructors are needed for both adults and children. Interested applicants should call the City Recreation Department at 528-1333 or stop by City Hall.

Bulls’ signing spree continues

The Iowa Hawkeyes football team has signed a total of 11 players during the past two weeks, including quarterback Jimmy Brown.

"And I'm really pleased with them," Fry said. "They're really cool guys." Brown, who is a redshirt sophomore, will start against State.

Grenning profits from Far East trip

By Melville Raphael

The Iowans have been on the Far East for almost five weeks, doing it in style with top players on the Japanese and Chinese teams. The trip was a success, with all the Iowans doing well as they took on a new challenge.

One of the highlights of the trip was the match against the Japan national team. The Iowans were able to hold their own against the strong Japanese team, despite being in a foreign country. The Iowans showed their ability to adapt and thrive in new environments.

Another highlight was the visit to the Chinese Embassy. The Iowans were able to meet with the Chinese ambassador and discuss various topics, including culture and sports. This was a valuable experience for the Iowans, as they were able to learn more about Chinese culture.

Overall, the Far East trip was a success for the Iowans, who were able to improve their skills and gain valuable experiences. They look forward to future trips in the future.

Skiles claims drugs were put in his car

PLYMOUTH IND (UPI) - The attorney for Michigan State basketball star and first-rate athlete Scott Skiles said in court he plans to file a motion to suppress evidence in the case next week.

Skiles, 23, and his lawyer refused comment on the cocaine and marijuana possession charges after an arraignment Thursday afternoon. But he attorney, Charles Scrubbs, said in court he plans to file a motion to suppress evidence in the case next week.

Such action indicates the defense will argue that evidence, in this case, is false and it illegally seized by police and should not be allowed in evidence at trial.

JUPITER MOTTINES, a grass-roots, not capsule the presentation's case and have dwindled of charges,

Skiles, a sophomore at guard for Michigan State and the team's leading scorer, admits and stands behind his story that he was stopped by police for a traffic violation Aug. 29.

A second source, the team's backup relaying player, when the Plymouth High School team was the Indiana state's basketball title in 1984, was carrying two containers of a dark brown substance in his car, police said.

It was denied the containers belonged to him, a police report said. Late Friday night, the substance seized by police included marijuana and 48 grams of cocaine.

HE WAS CHARGED Wednesday with possession of cocaine as well as possession of a suspected marijuana cigarette.

Skiles then testified as a character witness for his roommate, admitted that he would not personally know if "considerable" cocaine.

Skiles, a second team all-American, co-defendant Swoope, who is currently on summer vacation, testified he would not personally know if "considerable" cocaine.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. (UPI) - The University of Illinois athletic department, however, was not impressed.

Australian 'Gurus' deliver old wine in new-wave bottle

Australian rockers 'Gurus' have delivered an album that is a refreshing change from many of the current offerings. The band is well worth a listen, despite the fact that they sound similar to many other bands.

The group consists of three members: lead singer Dave Forkosh, bassist Alan Haldane, and drummer Greg Lee. Forkosh is the lead vocalist, with a distinctive gravelly voice that is both powerful and soulful. Haldane provides a solid foundation with his steady basslines, while Lee holds down the rhythm with his precise drumming.

Their debut album, "Wish in the Wind," has received critical acclaim for its blend of rock, blues, and country influences. The music has been described as a cross between the Rolling Stones and Dire Straits, with a touch of soulful horns and strings.

The album opens with "The Wind," a powerful ballad that features Forkosh's vocals accompanied by a lush orchestral arrangement. "Wishing Well" follows, a catchy pop song with a memorable melody and catchy chorus.

The standout track is "Wish in the Wind," which features Forkosh's powerful voice and a driving rhythm section. The song's lyrics are about the passage of time and the longing for something more, which is a common theme in their music.

Other standout tracks include "Tears in the Wind," a slow blues number that showcases Forkosh's soulful voice, and "Lonely Man," a upbeat rock song that features Haldane's bassline and Lee's drumming.

Overall, "Wish in the Wind" is a well-produced album that should appeal to fans of classic rock and country music. The Gurus are a band to watch in the Australian music scene, and this album is a strong debut that sets them apart from the current crop of bands.

Hitchcock films trace rise of director's cinematic skill

By Richard Panek
The Daily Iowan

SIX films directed by Alfred Hitchcock, including five that have been put on public display for more than a decade, will be shown this fall in the Bijou Theatre.

Three tickets are now on sale for the first series, to be shown this fall. The Bijou, in association with the University of Iowa and Film Forum, will show three Hitchcock films every weekend.

Due to poor attendance, all the movies except the original version of The Man Who Knew Too Much had been unavailable for public screening until last year. Now, according to university officials, the movies in question will be exhibited.

In the fall series will be the first version of The Man Who Knew Too Much, the 1934 version which Hitchcock has described as the one in which he had been most involved. The script writer then, instead of adapting it himself, hired screenwriter Howard Koch to help him.

The other two Hitchcock films in the four-series are Rope and The Trouble With Harry, both of which were released in 1950. Rope was directed by Alfred Hitchcock and shot on three different weekends.

"LETS SAY THAT the first version was the work of a talented student," Hitchcock told Francois Truffaut during their legendary interview, "and the second one was that of a director, the third of a film-maker, and the fourth of a producer."

Hitchcock's screenwriting techniques were intentional, as was any hint of the film's being edited. He inserted fragments in each film to emphasize his control of the situation.

"I am never satisfied with a first version of a film," Hitchcock told the University of Iowa Film Forum in 1956, "as the film maker can always improve his work."

CRITICS have long noted the correlation between Hitchcock's original character and a movie's success. Critics frequently described Hitchcock as a cinematic genius, but more often as a director who was working on a personal level. His films were seen as playing God through their manipulation of life. He was often seen as a director who could be trusted to deliver a personal message.

Typically, he directed the films in the series between the ages of 35 and 85.

Vertigo, shot in 1955, is an even more personal film. Stewart again stars, again (apparently) as a private detective, both playing God through their manipulation of life. He was often seen as a director who could be trusted to deliver a personal message.

"Veronica Mars, my love," Stewart says to his older self, as he looks at himself in a mirror.

Despite the films' success, critics have been critical of Hitchcock's work. He was often seen as a director who could be trusted to deliver a personal message.

The screenings start Thursday, Sept. 20, at 7 and 9:30 p.m., and 8 p.m., with The Man Who Knew Too Much.

In Rope, Hitchcock tried to create the impression that the movie was filmed as one unscripted scene, in order to emphasize the passage of "true" time and the difficulty of capturing the "true" time on film. Hitchcock revealed the correlation between the photographer and a film plot, and he returned to this technique in his next movie, Rear Window, and in The Trouble With Harry, which he directed on his own.

Iowa line reconstructed
All five starters on the 1983 Iowa Hawkeye offensive line have been replaced by sophomores, meaning Coach Hayden Fry's team will have to overcome a number of potential hurdles before the Hawkeyes begin their season this weekend at Iowa State.

The five returning Hawkeye starters voted to keep the team's tradition of dressing room confidentiality going after last week's game.

The Hawkeyes may also have a superior advantage in the opening week at Iowa State.

The key for the Hawkeyes in the opener is the number of returning starters from last year's team that were listed on the post-game injury report.

The offensive lines

Major construction well underway for Hawks

By Jeff Stottrup

There's a lot of construction going on around Iowa this fall, including on the Iowa State offensive line.

No, they haven't started building the new indoor facility yet, instead it's Iowa's offensive line that is under reconstruction.

The Hawkeyes lost nine of 11 starters from last season's offensive team which finished third in the nation, including the entire offensive line. Two players on the line are John At, Joe Lavelle, Jeff Higgenbury, Tim Saki, and Mike Hallford, leaving a lot of holes for Iowa Coach Hayden Fry to fill.

"We have a major overhaul to do on the offensive team that finished third in the nation last year, and we got wiped out on the offensive line," Fry said.

"Because of the number of players to replace this season, there is a lot of competition between Hawkeyes for most starting spots on the offensive line. It's a situation we are not accustomed to," Fry said.

ONE OF FRY'S top priorities before the season opener against Iowa State is to replace players that graduated. And, for the Iowa coach has put a charge of reconstructing the offensive line to Iowa.

"Generally, it will be a successful year for us, but right now it's up to the young guys," Fry said.

Jim Williams: "We have some talented, athletic players in tight end. We have to line five guys up and let them do their job."

FRONT FIVE development critical for Iowa State

By Jeff Stottrup

The men who man the offensive line for the Iowa State Cyclones this season may make the difference between a successful campaign for the Cyclones and another mediocre year.

The key is a consistently productive offensive line for any football team, but that lack experience.

"One offensive line is very strong, but also very young," Iowa State Coach Jim Criner said. "This year we are expecting the front five to do a good job."

CRINER SAID HE is looking for more balance between the young and the experienced on this offensive line.

The key to a consistently productive offensive line for any football team, but that lack experience.

Front five development critical for Iowa State

Jim Williams: "We have some talented, athletic players in tight end. We have to line five guys up and let them do their job."

Develop the balance that Criner believes they need. The biggest issue will be the depth. Iowa State's offensive line is strong, but they have to find the right chemistry on the line. Williams must be hit hard for the Cyclones to be productive on offense.

The only problem with the Iowa State offense is that they have a lot of questions. The Cyclones' coaches are looking for someone to be the leader of the offensive line. The key is to find someone who can take charge.

Kirk Ferentz: "Hopefully, it will be a successful year for us, but right now it's up to the young guys." Ferentz said. "Our team goal is to make it through a strong offensive line."

The offensive line coach has started his reconstruction this season by bringing in more experienced players.

"We also need to get as much experience as possible," Ferentz said at the beginning of fall practices. "We have some talent, but it's just that these guys have never done it in a game before."

Because of the number of players to replace this season, there is a lot of competition between Hawkeyes for most starting spots on the offensive line. It's a situation we are not accustomed to," Ferentz said.

"In Iowa City, this fall, including the entire offensive line, there is a lot of competition between Hawkeyes for most starting spots on the offensive line. It's a situation we are not accustomed to," Ferentz said.

The Iowa-Iowa State weekend marks the opening of the new downtown hotel, located on the College Street Plaza. The hotel has been under construction for nearly a year and it is hoped the new hotel will generate more business for downtown Iowa City merchants.

Staff Writer, manager Bruce Michael, said, Take note.

Even in Cedar Rapids the hotel business is hot and heavy.

At the Cedar Rapids Marriott, but to Iowa State, their football season is the best in the history of the hotel.

"We have good people," said, "You know it's going to be busy. You just don't know how busy it's going to be."
