House okays bill to end local regulation of cable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Monday approved legislation backed by the nation's cities and the cable television industry that would set a national policy for cable TV and end local regulation of cable rates in two years.

The legislation, approved by a voice vote and headed for a conference with the Senate, would allow cities to continue negotiating for cable franchises, but limit franchise fees to 5 percent of a cable system's revenue.

If signed into law, it will be the first national policy for the cable TV industry, which got its start in 1948 with a single re-transmission antenna in Mahanoy City, Pa., and now reaches 36 million households.

The Senate passed its own cable measure in June 1983.

THE HOUSE BILL, which caps three years of hearings and debate, reflects recent decisions by the Federal Communications Commission and the Supreme Court and includes a compromise reached last week by the National Cable Television Association and the National League of Cities.

The measure would make it easier for cable operators to renew their franchises and protects so-called public access channels set aside for use by local governments, educators and private citizens.

Although there are some major differences between the two bills, staff members from both houses said they anticipate no problems and expect the legislation to be sent to President Reagan before the end of the week.

"This is a way to bring outdated laws into the telecommunication age," said Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., head of the House telecommunications subcommittee and a chief architect of the measure.

Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, said the bill "tries to ensure we extend access to cable to as many people as possible."

CABLE OPERATORS now negotiate under different rules in every city where they want a franchise — a process that has led, in many areas, to unusual demands by municipal governments, unrealistic promises by cable companies and difficulty in getting the systems built.

Under the cable bill, operators would be required to make service available in all areas of a city. The measure also forbids the ownership of cable systems by the owners of local TV stations, daily newspapers in the same area or local phone companies without a waiver.

Cities would be allowed to continue regulating rates for "basic" cable service — the retransmission of over-the-air signals — for two years. After that time, local regulation would end unless there is no other source of TV programming in the area.

The bill also would allow people with backyard satellite dishes to continue picking up cable TV programming, leaving it up to the networks to collect for the services, although it would be illegal for dish owners to "decode" programs that are transmitted in a scrambled form.

Donovan indicted for criminal acts

NEW YORK (UPI) — Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan was indicted Monday on criminal fraud and larceny charges and immediately took a leave of absence from his Cabinet post. He called the indictment a "mindless inquisition" that is politically motivated.

"To assure that this matter does not become a part of the current election campaign, I have asked the president today to accept my request for a leave of absence without pay, effective immediately, and he has granted my request," Donovan said at a hastily called news conference in Washington. "I am outraged and disgusted by the actions and the obviously partisan timing ...," Donovan said. "My concerns are that my family has to endure this mindless inquisition and that this not reflect negatively on the president."

At a campaign stop in Biloxi, Miss., White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan had "no specific reaction" to the indictment "because the matter is in the courts." When asked if Reagan retained full confidence in his labor secretary, Speakes replied, "On the basis of what he knows, yes."

MANAGEMENT OF THE department will now be in the hands of Labor Undersecretary Ford B. Ford.

"I can assure you that this is not worth the paper it is written on," Donovan said of the indictment.

Just last week, Donovan waived immunity and testified for almost five hours before a Bronx grand jury, calling its investigation a "witch hunt."

Raymond Donovan

"I plan to devote all my time and attention to this matter," he said Monday night.

Donovan, apparently the only active Cabinet member ever to be indicted on criminal charges, also said that he "fully expects to resume my duties just as soon as this injustice has been dealt with."

A Bronx grand jury returned the criminal indictments against Donovan, the Schiavone Construction Co. in Secaucus, N.J., and seven current or former executives of the company.

CAC approves extension of Thanksgiving holiday

By Karen Burns
Staff Writer

A proposed change in the UI calendar to extend the Thanksgiving holiday for UI students and faculty members by two days received unanimous approval from the UI Collegiate Associations Council Monday night.

"This would make fall semester like spring semester, because it would give students a week-long break," CAC President Larry Lassiter said of the change being considered by the UI Council on Teaching.

"The two days before Thanksgiving break are wasted, anyway," he said.

Fall semester would begin on a Monday instead of a Wednesday if the proposal is adopted by UI administrators.

Lassiter said if the proposal is passed it will not be implemented for a couple of years.

The CAC also passed two resolutions opposing state Board of Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey's proposed 6 percent resident and 12 percent non-resident tuition increases.

ONE RESOLUTION opposes Richey's proposed tuition increase, stating it would be harder for students to afford an education at the state's three educational institutions.

The other resolution supports equal percentage increases in tuition for residents and non-residents, because non-residents have had "far greater" increases in tuition than residents, and "the UI owes much of its cultural diversity to international and out-of-state students."

"This resolution addresses our general philosophy," CAC member

Cecilia Ham said.

Lassiter said the two resolutions will be sent to the regents to show student support for an alternative tuition proposal.

In addition to sending the regents copies of the resolutions, Lassiter said students from the three state universities will meet with the regents for breakfast in Des Moines before the board decides on tuition increases at its Oct. 18 meeting.

LASSITER ENCOURAGED CAC members to attend the breakfast and a luncheon earlier in the month with regents Percy Harris and Peg Anderson "to find out what they think of our proposal beforehand."

Lassiter also asked CAC members for a show of support from the UI colleges they represent. "We need endorsements, statements and resolutions for keeping tuition down, to show the regents we are together on this."

Another resolution addressing political endorsement or support of political candidates by the CAC was not passed.

The resolution was drawn up in response to charges by the UI College Republicans that the UI Student Senate's sponsorship of a rally featuring Rep. Tom Harkin, D-5th District, and 3rd District Democratic candidate Joe Johnston Thursday constituted an endorsement.

CAC member Dave Whitlock, who wrote the resolution, said, "Most councilors probably support the idea behind the resolution, but CAC's position is mandated by the constitution."

Lassiter, who co-sponsored the resolution, said, "The CAC was already non-partisan," so a resolution was not necessary.

Candidates disagree on abortion

By Wendy Rosche
Staff Writer

Personal beliefs do not dictate the political stances of Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District, and his Democratic challenger, Joe Johnston, on the issue of abortion.

Johnston, who is Catholic, said that although he is "personally opposed to abortion" he takes a pro-choice stance on the issue.

Johnston said he has no moral problems with supporting a pro-choice stand. He added he does not believe the best way to "decrease the number of abortion is to outlaw them with a constitutional amendment."

Johnston said he faces many of the same conflicts Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro faces in supporting a pro-choice stand.

FERRARO WAS recently criticized by New York Archbishop John J. O'Connor for supporting a pro-choice viewpoint even though she says she is morally opposed to abortion.

Evans said a representative's voting record is more important than what he or she might say during an election campaign. "What one's personal beliefs are I don't think has an awful lot to do with politics and campaigning," Evans said.

Evans said while he is "strongly opposed to abortion as a routine form of birth control," there may be other instances in which an abortion should be performed.

"I THINK THAT abortion as a medical procedure from time to time is in order," Evans said, adding that an abortion should be allowed in cases where "catastrophic harm" would occur if a woman were to carry a child full term.

Evans said he would not want to have abortions denied to women in cases of incest and rape, "if those things are promptly reported" to authorities.

Johnston said he supports the situation as it stands now with no legislation prohibiting abortion, and he would not "try to legislate a change that would try to make those kinds of moral judgments."

"WE EITHER SAY that the right exists with the woman to make the decision, and if it doesn't then the circuit is a woman were to carry a child

Rebels rise against Khomeini

PARIS — Iranian rebels killed more than 200 troops, sabotaged aircraft and staged protests during a weeklong campaign to topple the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the opposition People's Mojahideen said Monday.

Massoud Rajavi, exiled leader of the leftist group, said the protest was "proof there is nationwide resistance in our country. Look at the figures. In a week we distributed 1.6 million leaflets in circumstances of terror where one anti-government slogan can cause an execution."

Militia leader justifies attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The leader of a Beirut militia, in an interview published Monday, defended the suicide bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex as the "legitimate action and right" of any Arab or Lebanese nationalist.

Mourabitoun militia chief Ibrahim Qleilat said the bombing was a response to the American veto of a complaint to the United Nations about Israel's occupation of southern Lebanon, the rightist Al Anwar newspaper reported.

Police charged with brutality

MANILA, Philippines — The parliament Monday opened an unprecedented investigation into opposition charges that security forces used unwarranted force last week in a "savage" attack on demonstrators that left one person dead and 67 wounded.

The Manila police chief, Maj. Gen. Prospero Olivas, 53, said there was "a limited use of weapons" Thursday by riot police and soldiers who charged into a crowd of several thousand marchers protesting police brutality.

Cosmonauts coming home

MOSCOW — Three Soviet cosmonauts will return to Earth today after setting a new space endurance record of 238 days, 27 days longer than the previous record, the official Tass news agency said Monday.

Leonid Kizim, Vladimir Solovoyov and Oleg Atkov blasted off Feb. 8 and on Sept. 7 broke the 211-day endurance record set by Soviet cosmonauts in 1982. During their mission, the cosmonauts were visited by two other space teams. The first visiting mission included India's first man in space, Rakesh Sharma.

B-1 crash due to pilot error

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Human error was blamed Monday for the crash of a prototype B-1 bomber in August, and a subsequent mechanical failure of the ejection capsule caused the death of the program's chief test pilot, the Air Force said Monday.

The plane crashed Aug. 29 because crew members failed to maintain the proper center of gravity by shifting fuel between tanks during the low-speed, low-altitude flight over the Mojave Desert, Air Force investigators determined.

Court upholds Gacy sentence

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — The Illinois Supreme Court has refused to reconsider its ruling upholding the death sentence for convicted sex-slayer John Wayne Gacy — but Gacy's lawyer says he will appeal the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The high court in June had upheld Gacy's conviction and death sentence for the slayings of 33 young men and boys. Justices at that time also set a Nov. 14 execution for the former contractor and part-time clown, though that execution date will likely be postponed indefinitely.

Renander may foot bill for publishing 'Review'

Although the question of who is in charge of The Hawkeye Review remains in litigation, acting editor-in-chief Jeffrey Renander said Monday the next issue of the conservative campus publication is expected to roll off the presses next week.

In July the publication's co-founder, Jerry Taylor, attempted to fire Renander for "gross financial misconduct," but Renander has filed a lawsuit to nullify this action. Another hearing on his lawsuit is scheduled for Oct. 31.

While the matter is still pending in Johnson County District Court, Renander said he is planning to dip into his own savings account in order to pay publishing costs for the next edition of The Hawkeye Review.

Firm seeks commuter bus stop

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

A Cedar Rapids private bus company that was denied use of the downtown transit interchange by the Iowa City Council is investigating the UI Hospitals, Hancher Auditorium and Lantern Park shopping center in Coralville as possible sites to load and unload passengers for commuter routes.

"We're trying to work something out," Jeffrey Fleckenstein of Charter Coaches Inc., said last week. "We're trying to find alternative sites other than the downtown interchange, such as the UI Hospitals."

Fleckenstein had written the council in July requesting the use of the downtown transit interchange for several planned commuter routes from Iowa City to Cedar Rapids.

HE TOLD the council in July the commuter service is targeted "primarily for the number of students at the UI living in Cedar Rapids and for those Iowa City students attending Kirkwood Community College" in Cedar Rapids.

The council denied Charter Coaches' request, however, because there is limited space at the downtown bus stops, which are reserved for public transit services.

"It's not that Iowa City is anti-system," Fleckenstein said. "They just didn't want us to run out of the downtown center."

"Cedar Rapids is very anxious for the service," Charter Coaches owner Tom Fleckenstein said Monday. "Iowa City is not against the service, but there's no room in the downtown mall area."

Tom Fleckenstein said Charter Coaches would like to charge about $50 a month for a pass to use the commuter service. He called the $50 price "ridiculously low" if a passenger commutes between Cedar Rapids and Iowa City every day.

"ALL WE'RE trying to do is be a link" between the Cedar Rapids and Iowa City transit services, Tom Fleckenstein said. "It may cost me a bundle, but it doesn't cost (Iowa City) anything and it doesn't cost the state anything."

He said if the service were to start now, "Iowa City people can get to Hancher and get on a bus to Cedar Rapids, but the reciprocal is not true" if Charter Coaches cannot use the downtown Iowa City interchange.

"Cedar Rapids people want to go to Iowa City, but once they're in Iowa City they don't know how to get downtown," Tom Fleckenstein said.

"If we allow one private enterprise to come in, then we open it up to others," Iowa City Transportation Planner John Lundell said regarding opening the downtown transit interchange to Charter Coaches.

LUNDELL SAID Charter Coaches

would have to receive permission from the city "only if they want to use a city-designated parking area."

Jeffrey Fleckenstein said Charter Coaches will conduct a survey of bus riders in the Cedar Rapids and Iowa City areas to determine the demand for a commuter service.

He said Charter Coaches could increase its ridership by using a transit interchange near the UI Hospitals.

"There are quite a few people who commute to and from the hospitals," Jeffrey Fleckenstein said, "and it's still important to get Kirkwood students from Iowa City."

Tom Fleckenstein said there needs to be public support for the commuter service before Charter Coaches runs the route between Cedar Rapids and Iowa City.

"If we generate enough activity to take Cedar Rapids people to Iowa City that's only half the story — the bus has to come back" to Cedar Rapids, he said.

'Heavy traffic' of aid applications inundates UI financial aid office

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

A higher concentration of applications for financial aid at the UI this year is causing "heavy traffic" in the UI Office of Student Financial Aids and delays in processing requests, UI financial aid officials said.

"We've probably had the same number of students apply for financial aid this year as last," said Mark Warner, associate director of UI student financial aid. "What's causing more traffic in our offices this year is the fact that so many students waited until they returned to campus this fall to even begin the application process."

Warner estimated about 70 percent of the UI student population receives financial aid in the form of Guaranteed Student Loans, Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loans, supplemental grants, college work-study or UI scholarships.

HE SAID ABOUT 6,000 UI students went through financial aid offices during the first two weeks of classes. "They were picking up checks, getting applications and asking lots of questions. We saw it all."

As many as 175 students were applying for GSLs as late as last week, he added. "People who began the application process last spring have their checks in hand. People applying now are going to have a wait ahead of them."

He added many students have been forced to reapply for GSLs this year because of errors in their financial report forms or their parents' tax forms.

About 12,000 UI students are expected to receive the loans this year. These low-interest loans are arranged with a student's bank, credit union or savings and loan association and are only approved by the UI.

In addition, most students who waited until this fall to return their Student Aid Reports to the UI financial aid office are still waiting for their Pell Grants and scholarships to be processed.

"We've got to cross-match Student Aid Reports with 1040 (tax form) information in order to validate them and finalize the grants," Warner said. "That takes quite a number of people from our office who must be involved just in the verification process."

WARNER SAID HIS office anticipates about 4,500 UI students will receive Pell Grants for the 1984-85 academic year. Pell Grants are issued by the U.S. Department of Education in amounts varying from $200 to $1,900 and do not have to be paid back.

The College Work-Study program at the UI has employed 1,400 students during each of the last two years and Warner expects this number to remain stable this year.

"We've received the same dollar value for administration of the program so I'd imagine we'll see about 1,400 work-study students again this year," he said.

UI work-study employees, who earn at least the minimum wage of $3.50 per hour, cannot average more than 20 hours per week.

Employment program helps youths

By Colleen Kelly
Staff Writer

Although part-time jobs may be scarce in Iowa City, local teenagers have been aided in finding employment through the Mayor's Youth Employment Program for more than 15 years.

The program has placed young people who are economically needy in jobs with the city of Iowa City, Johnson County or the private sector during the school year. The program also finds jobs for youths who are "physically, mentally, emotionally or behaviorally handicapped," Director Peg McElroy said.

More than 140 people were helped by the Mayor's Youth Employment Program in fiscal year 1984, and McElroy estimated that less than 20 percent of them dropped out of the program.

THE PROGRAM garners only praise from local politicians, guidance counselors and employers. Many stress that perhaps the most important benefit of the program is that the teenagers feel someone will take a chance on hiring them.

"There's tremendous support for this program in our community," McElroy said. "It's considered a very successful way to work with young people. The students learn many job skills, as well as developing responsibility and greater independence."

Keith Kafer, executive vice president of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Mayor's Youth Employment Board, said, "It makes the young people more productive because it proves somebody cares about them, so they want to do a good job."

"It's a very important program," said Mark Eglseder, a guidance counselor at City High. "I think it really gives the (teenager) a measure of success, and really raises his self-concept."

UI AUDIO-VISUAL specialist Doug Allaire, who also serves on the Mayor's Youth Employment Board, said, "A lot of kids can do really well for themselves if they're given just a slight chance, and Mayor's Youth gives them a good chance."

Jim Gilmore of Zephyr Copies was "very careful" when he hired a student from the Mayor's Youth program because of past problems with a similar program, but said he was very pleased with Ron Beck. "If he decides to go to college here, he can have this job if he wants it," Gilmore said.

Beck said, "The big advantage of the program for me is that they put me in the private sector." Beck called McElroy "outstanding" and said she found him the job at Zephyr a year ago.

"If young people didn't have the opportunity (to work for Mayor's Youth), many might not overcome barriers to employment," McElroy said.

MAYOR JOHN McDONALD said the Iowa City Council gives the program a vote of confidence every year "because no one ever suggests about cutting its funding."

McElroy said most youths are referred to her through schools or other youth-oriented agencies. "I interview the young person to find out career goals, then I consult with his or her teacher. Together, the three of us determine a work site that we think would be appropriate," she said.

Eglseder said, "If someone comes to our attention, we just try to get him or her hooked up with Peg. We refer a lot of different kinds of kids, especially those who need the money from foster homes or single-parent families."

Many of the teenagers work for the city of Iowa City, the UI, VA Hospital and various nonprofit organizations, and some receive academic credit for the time they put in on the job.

Mayor's Youth Employment Program also finds employment for some adults in conjunction with the Iowa City Independent Living program, and employs students full-time over the summer.

The foremost concern of students is the development of consciousness because the entire process of learning depends upon the alertness and liveliness of the mind.

The acquisition of knowledge involves both the knower and that which is known.

Traditionally, education has been only a process of presenting, receiving and assimilating information, with no systematic means of expanding the student's capacity to know.

The expansion of consciousness is the basis not only of learning, but of all achievement and fulfillment in life.

The Transcendental Meditation technique of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi is a simple natural procedure to develop full potential of the individual through the expansion of consciousness. It is not a religion, philosophy or way of life.

Over 700 scientific studies done at more than 200 universities and research institutes have verified both the physiological changes during the practice and benefits mediators report in daily activity.

Studies show that TM practitioners enjoy improved memory, faster reaction time, higher grade point, greater creativity, clearer perception, reduced anxiety, better health and more harmonious social relationships.

Scientists consider this to be related to the TM technique's effectiveness in systematically reducing stress in the body and increasing coherence in brain functioning.

The TM technique is easily learned by anyone and is practiced 15-20 minutes twice a day.

Everyone is invited to a free introductory discussion on the TM technique, sponsored by S.I.M.S.

No tickets to paradise

It's time to apply for student basketball tickets again at the UI. Unfortunately, many of those who deserve a chance to attend games will be denied the opportunity because of the ticket policies set by the Iowa Board in Control of Athletics.

It should be obvious to anyone with any instinct for fair play that a system allowing a sizable group of students to attend 17 games while a still larger group may gain admission to none isn't exactly sporting. But under present policy, 3,300 students with priority three (three years of applying for tickets) or better may receive full season tickets while, according to the board's own estimates, up to 4,000 priority one applicants may receive no tickets at all.

Furthermore, many students who might have the inclination to see a game or two are faced with an unnecessary proposition: either applying for tickets to at least seven games or seeing none at all. While no obstacle to many students, a seven-game ticket can present difficulties to those facing substantial time or financial limitations.

A final major inequality is created by the attitude of the board toward attendance by non-students. The penalty this year for those who allow non-students to use their student ID's or season tickets will be a permanent loss of all future ticket privileges.

This is a fair and reasonable penalty for those students who purchase tickets for scalping to the public. But by again providing no attendance options for the spouses of UI students, the policymakers invite cheating on tickets by couples in which only one partner is a student.

Last year there were 4,454 married students at the UI, many living in on-campus housing. Of all the many bureaucracies at the UI, only those governing athletic tickets consistently fail to recognize that the partners of so many students should merit some consideration.

Poll-ish solidarity

Actor Charlton Heston referred to the midwest as the "philosophical spine" of the United States during his Iowa City appearance on behalf of President Reagan Sunday night.

And the Des Moines Register's latest Iowa Poll shows that Heston may well be right — although that spine is not curved in quite the direction he would like.

The Iowa Poll published in Monday's Register shows that Iowans are rejecting the attempts of President Reagan and others to make religious and moral matters a part of this year's campaign.

The percentage of Iowans approving of tuition tax credits for parochial schools has dropped from 46 percent six years ago to 39 percent today, while the percentage approving of special time for prayer in school has dropped from 79 percent to 59 percent in the 22 years since the Supreme Court outlawed prayer in school. (Correspondingly, the number of Iowans in favor of no prayer has risen from 13 to 31 percent.)

Even the emotional issue of abortion, with all the attention it has received as part of the Reagan agenda, seems to be turning few voters' heads. Percentages of approval and disapproval of abortion have remained almost unchanged over the past 10 years — although those who feel strongly about the issue could swing an election either way.

What all this indicates is that Iowans still possess their down-to-earth common sense. Economic issues and questions of war and peace retain their primacy over political expediency in the name of God and puritanical appeals to morality — and that's as it should be.

Charlton Heston only stayed a few hours in Iowa. It might do him some good to spend some more time in the midwest before he starts bending our philosophical spine to suit his needs. After all, he's not in Hollywood anymore.

The buck stops there

Although the object of scorn while president, Harry Truman has over the years been rehabilitated. The public looks back with fondness on his feisty candor, exemplified by his "The buck stops here" attitude toward presidential power and responsibility.

Ronald Reagan has put a new spin on Truman's famous words: He claims that the buck stops there. "There" is usually the Congress or Jimmy Carter — unless something good has happened.

Worried about the budget deficit? Blame Congress, Reagan says, unable or unwilling to remember it was his budgets and his tax cuts that Congress passed. Happy about the reduction in inflation? Reagan is more than ready to step right up and take a bow, despite the fact that most of the credit should go to the Federal Reserve for tightening the money supply.

Reagan's most recent buck passing occurred last week when he blamed President Carter for the bombing of the embassy in Beirut. He claimed: "We're feeling the effects today of the near destruction of our intelligence capability in recent years before we came here." And a White House aide said "you would not be wrong" in assuming that Reagan was referring to actions by Carter's CIA director, Stansfield Turner.

In fact, the budget for the CIA was cut when Gerald Ford was president and George Bush was head of the agency. Carter increased the CIA budget, and Turner, while he did fire or retire a number of domestically based agents, did not fire any stationed overseas. The plans for even those reductions in staff were made during the Ford tenure and merely carried out under Carter.

Reagan does deserve credit for making many Americans feel optimistic. His cheerfulness seems contagious. But it is unbecoming in a man of Reagan's position, experience and age to so assiduously duck responsibility and court acclaim. An adult takes the blame for his own mistakes and those of his subordinates and willingly gives credit to those who have earned it.

How can budget be balanced?

$3,535.

THAT'S HOW MUCH the federal government spent on you, and every American, in the 1984 fiscal year ended Sunday, Sept. 30.

For that, you were given about $975 worth of defense protection, you received $277 in education and public assistance, and you donated $56 in aid to foreign countries.

Also spent on your behalf was $619 for interest on the public debt, which is what each year's federal budget deficit becomes when added to those still outstanding.

As of Sunday, your share of the nation's $1.58 trillion public debt was $6.583. Clearly, the size of the numbers and the complexity of the concepts make the deficit a mundane, if not confusing, subject. That's why Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale is having such a difficult time campaigning on the issue.

In Iowa, Republican Sen. Roger Jepsen and Democratic challenger Thomas Harkin have attacked each other's positions on budget balancing measures. Both Iowans say they favor restructuring the tax system over raising personal income taxes. Both speak of a federal spending "freeze."

JEPSEN AND HARKIN disagree, however, on the establishment of a constitutional amendment requiring the president to submit, and Congress to pass, a balanced federal budget.

Not surprisingly in this election year, the issue is one of partisan politics

Allen Seidner

more than responsible policy debate.

President Reagan and the Republicans call for an amendment to block the Democrats' "wasteful" spending habits. A constitutional amendment, Reagan claims, would prevent Congress from interfering with his budget-cutting measures.

The Democrats cite historical deficit spending and the president's unfulfilled 1980 campaign promise to balance federal receipts and expenditures by this year as evidence of an amendment's futility.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., has gone so far as to promise that a Reagan-written balanced budget would be voted on within 48 hours. But the offer is moot, because Reagan couldn't write a balanced budget, and Congress couldn't agree on one. That's why we don't have one right now.

THERE IS, HOWEVER, wide support for a balanced budget amendment. So far, 32 state legislatures of the required 34 have asked Congress to call a constitutional convention to draft such an amendment. And despite a recent setback in California (where voters have been denied the chance to bypass their legislature and vote for a convention via referendum), resolutions are pending in Michigan, Montana, New York, Ohio and Washington.

Before we begin electing delegates to the Second Constitutional Convention, it is important to recognize the misconceptions and inadequacies of a balanced budget amendment, the greatest of which is that it would hold down taxes.

A majority of Americans don't want significant cuts in social or military spending. Higher taxes, therefore, would be needed to pay for the federal expenditures that lawmakers could not fit through loopholes in the amendment.

AMENDMENT OR NO AMENDMENT, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office's projected $600 billion in red ink federal spending over the next three years cannot be eliminated any time soon. And Uncle Sam's responsibility to balance the economy as a whole over the long term makes it undesirable to balance the budget every single year.

It would take years — perhaps a decade — to ratify and properly implement a balanced budget amendment. And as Harkin argued in the most recent senatorial debate: "The need to get deficits down is now." So while a balanced budget amendment might offer a workable long-term method of significantly reducing federal deficit spending, it procrastinates the need to address the crisis today. And procrastination is why your share of the public debt has gone up $6 since Sunday.

Security blankets Lebanon problem

By S. Joseph Kabomo

LINDA SCHUPPENER's editorial of Sept. 26 concerning the terrorist bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut fails to consider some basic tenets of the situation.

The effectiveness or ineffectiveness of security given to U.S. soldiers on foreign soil is not the problem of greatest importance. No rational government wants to expose its soldiers to danger, even if they do have to fight. What the American government has done — what many governments do — is to succumb to a bias that blinds it to reality.

U.S. foreign policy is made on the grounds that it protects and spreads trading partnerships and democracy to the rest of the world. This policy comes as an effort to counteract "command" economies ("non-free" trading) and communism. As a result, we get two ideologies: Western thought and Soviet bloc thought. It's the difference in those ideologies that cause the problem here.

What the Reagan administration fails to see is that it is not force or effective physical security that makes anything secure. It is understanding the other side and being able to accommodate a difference of opinion that builds security.

SIR SRETSE KHAMA, the first president of the republic of Botswana and one of the most respected pioneers of African colonial independence, maintained during his lifetime that "weakness is strength." His point was that you don't need guns or economic power to make peace.

The first of the suggestions Schuppener makes in her editorial — that the U.S. Embassy use tighter security (fences, gates, armed guards) — runs counter to Khama's ideal. Instead of creating security, such actions merely make those who work at the embassy more insecure. Everyone, even a soldier, has a right to work fearlessly. This increased security would also hinder the necessary transactions between diplomatic personnel at the embassy and the government and populations they are there to help. And the extra investments necessary to pay for building materials, maintenance and guards further point out the infeasibility of this solution.

On Schuppener's second point, that the Reagan administration stop threatening to retaliate against terrorist actions, I must agree. But it's not enough just to say that threats to retaliate must end. Peaceful negotiations to understand the grievances held by the people in the area must begin.

THE EXPERIENCES of the Iranian hostages and Lt. Robert Goodman, as well as numerous others throughout history, should teach the U.S. government something about the value of negotiations when application of force has seemed to be the first option. What the government needs to learn further is that terrorists do not embrace communism because it is good or bad; they embrace it because their voices have not been heard by pro-democracy rulers.

Force, counterintelligence and security don't help anything in a place like Lebanon. They just make matters worse. The only way to keep people content is to find out what their complaints are about. Suppressing a grievance makes it deepen, but dealing with its root cause helps effect an answer.

In the Middle East, the United States' problem is not the fighting that goes on — it is the cause of that fighting. The solution is not found in arms sales or in moving embassies but in understanding the problems and grievances of the people who live there. That understanding is the lock and key to the gate of security in the area.

Kabomo is a student from Botswana.

Look for union label

To the editor:

For a reputedly liberal newspaper, The Daily Iowan sure surprised us liberals recently. Allen Seidner's article (op-ed, Sept. 19) extolling the corporate belief that unions ought to accept wage concessions in order to keep U.S. businesses from going bankrupt looks like it came out of the Chamber of Commerce newsletter.

As a veteran of this year's Hart-Mondale wars, I have made it my business to learn how to fend off the moderate liberalism that seems to be infesting liberalism. Seidner's article shows a willingness to grant General Motors its arguments no Democrat should have — and indeed I do not.

The assertion Seidner makes in a quote from former Under Secretary of Labor Malcolm Lovell that "Unions have to make concessions unless they want to force companies out of business" seems incredulous when one considers that the real spendable earnings production workers have received in the past few years is lower than in the 1950s and 1960s.

Unions are not the cause of our economic woes. They are a scapegoat. It is hard to believe that any other inference can be made from a real spendable earnings chart that shows an actual decline in real earnings beginning at — guess where — the beginning of Gerald Ford's recession.

Seidner seems to be in love with the labor system in Japan. The real reason behind Japanese workers' productivity is not unionbusting and fear of plant relocation in Tahiti. In Japan, workers feel as if they're part of the team, not people who do their jobs because Big Boss in the Boardroom told them to. Japanese corporations guarantee worker representation in management. The United States does not.

The United States is the only industrialized nation in the world not to guarantee sick leave. It is the only industrialized nation in the world not to require advance notification of plant closings to unions. It is the only industrialized nation not to guarantee workers an income if the employer becomes insolvent.

American corporate leaders are lying. American workers don't have it made in the shade. American bosses do.

The UAW had every right to demand wage hikes and not be told they cost too much. The UAW had every right to demand job security and get it. Why isn't Seidner contemptuous of big business's attempts to unemploy American workers instead? They're better people to blame, if we must blame someone.

Creeping fungus

To the editor:

I was surprised to hear about the protest mounted by the Women's Action Coalition on Pornography against the film Peeping Tom. Their misguided efforts at censorship might have been more effective at the end of this month in the local Halloween fun house.

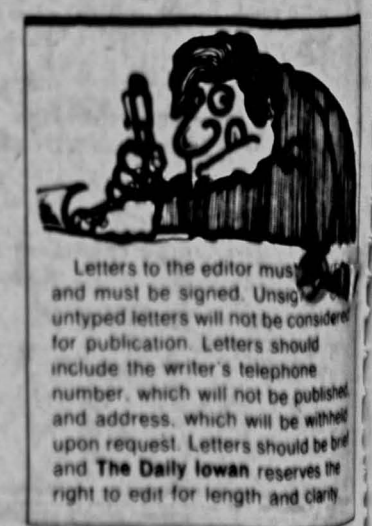

What this narrow-minded coalition refuses to consider is the fact that the fight to gain freedom from censorship is one of the most important reasons we broke away from jolly old England.

And as far as censorship today is concerned, any vote for any form of this creeping menace is in no way different for a vote for the vote for communism. Would you like to see our great country make this move toward communism by condoning the use of censorship?

For once censorship is introduced, it is like a creeping fungus. First Peeping Tom will go, then reruns of "Charlie's Angels," and, yes, I can imagine Prince himself being censored for hitting his girlfriend in Purple Rain.

But wait — Prince is black, and censoring his movie would violate the rights of blacks, moviegoers, music lovers, teen-age girls This is getting too confusing.

Film protesters shun free show

By Rob Kincaid
Staff Writer

The original group of protesters that picketed the Bijou showing of the film Peeping Tom last week did not participate in a free showing of the film and discussion about it sponsored by the UI last night.

Last night a group of protesters calling themselves The Women's Action Coalition on Pornography denounced the showing of the film, which depicts a psychopathic male photographer who commits a series of murders of women. The protesters chanted and padlocked the doors to the Illinois room, where Bijou films are shown.

Ana Lopez, Bijou theater director, said the purpose of the discussion — attended by about 300 people — was to give interested people "an opportunity to see the film without paying for it and to settle some of the issues" raised by the protest and the UI showing of the film.

LOPEZ SAID, "A lot of the people who were protesting hadn't seen the movie at all."

UI Associate Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones introduced the film, stating, "There are a number of ways one might look at the issues which are posed" by the film. "We thought we would try to stir some conversation and hopefully a broader understanding among us all about the issue that surrounded us last week."

He added, "The university is a community under which human rights policy is designed to be open and hospitable to all. When those values come into conflict issues are raised, which provoked this forum."

Jones said the Women's Resource and Action Center was asked to send a representative to the discussion following the film, but no official representative of the center participated. The discussion was moderated by UI Law Professor Robert Clinton, UI Affirmative Action Director June Davis and Rick Altman, an instructor in the UI film department.

on the film. Later, however, audience members voiced differing opinions about the movie.

One member of the audience received applause after questioning the protesters' actions, saying, "I'd like to know what the whole big deal was about."

Altman responded, "I believe the main concern was that in the media at large or the film industry, the image of women was not being controlled in a way acceptable to women."

A male audience member who participated in last Tuesday's demonstration said, "I think it's a disgusting film. It shows women as powerless, men powerful."

One man voiced concern about the purpose of the demonstration during the first showing of Peeping Tom. "I find it repressive," he said.

Lopez defended the showing of Peeping Tom by stating two of the Bijou's purposes. "In general, the Bijou sees itself with two purposes — to educate and to entertain." She added most UI departments make use of the Bijou as an educational resource.

LOPEZ SAID the decision to show Peeping Tom was the result of a suggestion that the film be used as a supplement to a UI class.

"The (Bijou Film Board) thought it was a film worth bringing back," she said.

Lopez also questioned whether the purpose of last week's demonstration was informational or obstructive.

A female audience member asked to hear from one of the women who participated in the picket. No one responded.

But one woman who said she was from the Ad Hoc Committee of Women Against Violence said the film was protested "because there are thousands of pornography films which show women want to be hurt."

She later added, "I don't know why they picketed this movie."

UI Associate Vice President for Finance Mary Jo Small said, "A student ought to be able to discern" whether to see a movie, adding, "We at the university should be in a position to help them discern."

THE AUDIENCE did not initially respond to its opportunity to comment

circumstances of the conception ought not be the criteria," Johnston said. "It is not wise policy to try to legislate a moral issue without a consensus," he said. "There should be no legislation that would make the determining factor of whether or not a person should have an abortion their personal financial position."

He added that he does not believe it is right to "deny poor people abortions."

EVANS SAID HE would support legislation limiting abortions to cases of rape, incest and medical need, although he does not think any future legislation is likely to contain those provisions.

Evans said he was not sure how he would vote on a constitutional ban on abortion. "I think it would depend a great deal on what an amendment said," he said.

During the 1983 session of Congress, Evans voted against federal funding of abortions. Evans said he voted this way only after visiting the UI Hospitals to determine whether women would still be able to receive abortions if necessary in cases of rape, incest or medical need.

"I was assured that in cases of serious harm to a woman that those services would be available to a woman with or without federal funding," Evans said.

Donovan

they stemmed from Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola's investigation into Schiavone's relationship with JoPel, a Bronx-based excavation company owned by state Sen. Joseph Galiber, D-Bronx, and reputed mobster William Masselli.

Merola could not be reached for comment on the indictments.

Theodore Geiser, a lawyer for Schiavone, said he had not seen the indictment but that he had been informed the company and its executives were charged with one count of grand larceny, 125 counts of maintaining false business records and 11 counts of filing false business records.

Geiser said Donovan and the seven other people would be arraigned this morning in the Bronx.

JoPel was a minority business enterprise that did work for Schiavone on the Transit Authority's 63rd Street subway extension. A federal law requires that 10 percent of the subcontracting work on the project go to minority enterprises. Galiber is black and owned 51 percent of JoPel.

MEROLA'S INVESTIGATORS and the grand jury were probing charges that $8 million allegedly paid to JoPel by Schiavone in 1979 and 1980 was based on false statements and bogus billings aimed at inflating the value of the work performed by JoPel.

At the time, Donovan was a Schiavone executive.

Donovan was executive vice president of the Schiavone Construction Co. before being chosen by Reagan as labor secretary. Questions about his dealings with that firm plagued him throughout his tenure, especially allegations of close business and social connections with underworld figures.

He joined Schiavone Construction in 1959 when the firm had assets of less than $20,000. When he left in 1980 to join the Reagan Cabinet, its contracts totaled more than $600 million.

The controversy over Donovan began when allegations surfaced of a possible link to a kickback scheme involving Schiavone and Newark, N.J., businessman Irving Kantor, who had told a court that he dealt in laundering payoffs from contractors to politicians.

A second allegation involved a "ghost employee" named Joseph Murray, a driver for a Teamsters official, who was on the Schiavone payroll from November 1977 to June 1978, although he never reported to work.

Author-critic John Ashbery to read selection of works

By Kathy S. Kyte
Special to The Daily Iowan

AUTHOR AND critic John Ashbery will give a reading of his work tonight at 8 in Van Allen I. Ashbery's most recent book, A Wave, released in 1984 by Viking, is his 19th book of verse. He has also published nonfiction, one novel, a book of plays and has been the art critic for Newsweek magazine for the past four years.

Ashbery has received numerous honors and awards throughout his successful and diverse career, including the Yale Series of Younger Poets Prize for his book Some Trees, two Guggenheim fellowships, a Rockefeller Foundation grant in playwriting and, in 1983, membership in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. His book, Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror, published in 1975, won a Pulitzer Prize, a National Book Award and the National Book Critics Circle Award.

ASHBERY'S WORK has won popular acceptance as well as critical acclaim. In an interview with The Paris Review, the poet said he wants to reach a wide audience. That intention is reflected in the conversational quality of much of his poetry. Using the "language of ordinary speech," Ashbery says he sets out to provide his readers with a "pleasant surprise."

Tonight's reading is free and open to the public.

Then, Yvette Mimieux plays an overly enthusiastic soap opera fan who plots to write herself into the off-screen love life of the show's leading man, Simon MacCorkindale, in "Obsessive Love" (CBS at 8 p.m.) a sinister love story with some mean twists.

• On cable: Fans of the "Twilight Zone" are in for a treat; three episodes that have been tangled in legal problems for many years will be re-debuted on "Twilight Zone Silver Anniversary" (WGN-10 at 7 p.m.). Robert Duvall, Patrick O'Neal and John McGiver star in the trio. THE CUBS FINALLY MADE IT!

(And as has been promised, hell froze over today and the Pope admitted that he really isn't Catholic.) We're not too surprised because we predicted it in Our April 3rd ad (as we have every Opening Day). Since all the bars seem to be taking credit as the "Official Cubs Bar," here's our claim to fame, humbly submitted.

First, we've been members of the Die-Hard Cubs Fan Club from the beginning when they were in last place. Secondly, we've run more Cubs ads in the past 4 years than all the other bars combined. Finally, in the bar wars we're a lot like Wrigley Field (we've got vines!). We don't have big screens or bus trips or ticket giveaways. We're nothing to boast about except that we've hung in there through all those hard-luck years. We're happy no matter how they do and we'll continue to run ads next year even if they open by losing 13 straight because that's what being a cubs fan is all about.

Ex-Dodger manager Alston dies

OXFORD, Ohio (UPI) — Walter Alston, longtime manager of the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers, died Monday of complications following a heart attack last year, hospital officials said. He was 72. Alston died at 3:05 p.m., Iowa time, at McCullough Hyde Memorial. He had a heart attack April 1, 1983, at his home in nearby Darrtown, Ohio, after returning from spring training in Vero Beach, Fla.

Gridders get their Monday treat

When a football player does a good job, he gets rewarded; and the Hawkeyes' victory over Illinois Saturday was reason enough for Hayden Fry to give his team a treat.

The Iowa football team had a short workout Monday afternoon and the players wore sweat pants instead of their full set of pads for the first time this season. Fry said allowing the players to wear sweat pants was "psychologically like giving them an ice cream cone." The Iowa coach even cut back the amount of running the team had to do.

"They earned it (special treatment)," Fry said. "If they do well, they get rewarded; and if they do bad, they get punished. That's the way life is."

The Iowa coach labeled the Hawkeyes' win over Illinois as the team's most important win so far. "We had our backs against the wall after losing to Ohio State," he said.

Besides beating Illinois, Fry was happy after Monday night's workout because no one was seriously injured in the game, and there were no additional players being held out of practice.

The wave that circled the stadium during the game also caught the attention of the Iowa coach, who said he enjoyed seeing it. "I was really tickled because when one section didn't stand up the rest of the crowd booed."

Reuter tops teammate for consolation title

An interesting match took place Monday afternoon on the Kinnick Stadium Courts as Iowa's Jenny Reuter and Michele Conlon met for the consolation title of the Northwestern Invitational women's tennis tournament.

Reuter rallied from a 5-2 deficit in the first set to win the match 7-6, 6-1. The match was played today because Reuter had to play in the doubles of the main draw and would have been forced to play three matches in succession on Sunday in Evanston, Ill. Since both players were from the same school, Iowa Coach Charley Darley decided to hold the match on Monday to decide the title.

Harmon leaps in NCAA statistics

Iowa running back Ronnie Harmon is second in the nation in all-purpose running in this week's NCAA statistics released Monday.

The Hawkeye has carried for an average of 198.5 per game. Nebraska's Jeff Smith leads the nation in that area.

Lurie puts Giants for sale sign out

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco Giants owner Robert A. Lurie put his franchise on the selling block Monday because he could no longer absorb the team's mounting financial losses.

Lurie, his voice breaking with emotion, said that when he bought the team in 1976 from Horace Stoneham he thought he could turn the business side of the Giants around. However, losing teams and poor weather conditions at Candlestick Park have kept many fans away.

The Giants drew 1,001,552 fans during the 1984 season, down nearly 250,000 from 1983. Lurie said he would search for "a buyer who will keep the Giants in San Francisco."

Clippers re-sign veteran center Walton

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Clippers, working to bring a representative team to their new home in Los Angeles, re-signed free agent center and former UCLA star Bill Walton Monday.

Walton played out his option last season and threatened to jump to the Italian League. Terms of the pact were not announced by the Clippers.

The signing came two days after the Clippers traded former Rookie of the Year Terry Cummings to the Milwaukee Bucks in a package that also brought them Marques Johnson, Junior Bridgeman and Harvey Catchings.

On the line

If you haven't entered The Daily Iowan's On the Line Contest, what are you waiting for?

Every year several lucky persons are inducted into the On the Line Hall of Fame and become part of an elite group of winners.

Isn't it time you played the On the Line contest?

You will be receiving in your newspaper, for the next three days, ballots that could mean kegs of brew for you. But first, you've got to follow some simple rules.

Remember to circle the winner of each game, and that means every game. Don't get wishy-washy and think you can sneak by by forgetting to circle the tiebreaker.

The sports staff can't think of anything they hate worse than reading an entire ballot before finding a game a person didn't circle. These faulty ballots have to be thrown out and can make things really ugly around the sports desk.

If you by chance think a game will end in a tie, circle both teams and remember to add the score for the tie breaker game between Oklahoma State and Nebraska.

And, so that the On the Line contest can be legit like all the other contests you here about, DI employees are ineligible and anyone under 19 is banned from playing the contest.

This week the spoils of the On the Line contest are being provided by a new bar in Iowa City. Tycoon I.C. has graciously offered to give a keg of brew to the next lucky person to win the DI's most celebrated contest.

What are you waiting for?

'Flawless' defense paces soccer squad

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

The Hawkeye Soccer Club shut out Cedar Rapids Pacific 4-0 last Sunday in Cedar Rapids and improved their league record to 2-0 against a fast and talented team, according to Raul Curto, president of the club.

"Our defense played a flawless game and our offense, aided by an inspired midfielder, exploded in the second half," Curto said. "Joao Cardoso chased a ball in their penalty area and kicked a nice cross and a Pacific defender, pressured by Kyle Schultz, tapped the ball in for our first goal. This was an example of the kind of pressure we put on them throughout the match."

FRANCISCO MORENO scored two goals and Chuck Hughes added the last goal. The Hawkeyes play the Cedar Rapids Comets next Sunday in Jones Park.

The Iowa City women's Rugby Club came back from Madison, Wis., and Chicago with a 1-1 record, losing to Madison 13-0 on Saturday and defeating Chicago Lakeshore 13-6 on Sunday.

"We actually played a good game against Madison but they are one of the powerhouse teams in the Midwest," Jean O'Leary, club president, said. "Our forwards played very well but we were always on the defense. We could not get the ball enough to score."

"But we are getting better and are finding out that we need patience. The win on Sunday in Chicago got the team really fired up since it was our first win. We needed that win to get the team going again," O'Leary said.

TANYA FRY SCORED a try, similar to a touchdown, and a penalty kick to lead the scoring. Other points were scored by Susan Brooks on a try and O'Leary on a conversion to give Iowa a 13-0 lead before Chicago scored a try and conversion late in the game.

The UI Kayaking Club will be meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Room 127 of Trowbridge Hall and will be showing movies of previous trips to Wisconsin. The club will also be finalizing plans for their Oct. 5-7 trip to the Wolfe River in northern Wisconsin.

Hawks look to bounce back against improving Bulldogs

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

Coming off two consecutive losses the Iowa volleyball team, now 13-5 on the season, will be tested tonight against Drake in the Carver-Hawkeye Arena at 7:30 p.m.

"It will be a test," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said. "We need to go out there and believe we can win from the first serve."

Trying to regain composure for her players, Stewart's team was engaged in a hard, pressure practice Monday. "We're trying to get confidence back in the players," she said. "We had a good practice (Monday). It was a mentally tough practice ... It was good for them to know they can survive it."

IN LAST YEAR'S match-up between the Bulldogs and the Hawkeyes, Drake took Iowa five games.

Going into the match under first-year Coach Rod Wilde, the Bulldogs are 5-2 on the season. Wilde was a member of the 1984 Olympic men's volleyball team which won the gold medal, but was unable to participate after suffering a broken leg.

Wilde, who said the Bulldogs' goal is to win the Gateway Conference title, believes his team has progressed as far as he had expected. "We're doing quite well," he said. "Obviously we're always looking for more. So far we're 5-2, but they're coming along quite well."

Because the Bulldogs advanced to the United States Volleyball Association's national tournament in Seattle, Wash., without the guidance of a coach last spring, Stewart expects the match to be competitive.

"IT WILL BE A good match," Stewart said. "Drake has been a much-improved team ... I'm sure they're going to be up for us tomorrow night. I'm sure it's going to be a tough match. We have to play with confidence and be aggressive to win."

Although Wilde didn't specify which offense the Bulldogs will run, it will either be a 5-1 offense (one setter for all rotations) or a 6-2 offense (two setters). "Basically we run a 6-2," Wilde said. "Occasionally we run a 5-1, depending on the circumstances."

Stewart believes it won't make a difference which offense Drake uses. "I don't think it matters," the Hawkeye coach said. "I think a 6-2 is easier to defend (because it's easier to dump the ball on a 5-1 team). We should be able to read their offensive attack a little better."

Although Wilde hasn't seen the Hawkeyes play, he hopes his team will be able to adjust to Iowa's offense. "I haven't scouted Iowa yet," Wilde said. "What offense we use will depend on who is on the court (for Iowa). Iowa's 5-1 can be very effective. Hopefully our girls will be able to adapt to it."

both clubs are coming into this thing ready."

"I look for it to go five games," said Padres general manager Jack McKeon, nicknamed "Trader Jack" for his quickness to make a deal. "They've got a good ballclub and we've got a tough job ahead of us."

Asked who would win the fifth game, Trader Jack replied, "Us of course."

Naturally, the Cubs disagree, and they base much of their optimism on Sutcliffe, the 28-year-old right-hander who symbolizes the astonishing rise of their ballclub this season.

Spending the first two months of the season in Cleveland, Sutcliffe compiled a record about as distinguished as the one the Cubs built up over the last 38 years.

But the moment he arrived, he picked up several notches in the standings, some edge to his pitches, and the Cubs were on their way.

Sutcliffe will be pitching with eight days' rest.

the best ballclub in baseball," says Tigers' manager Sparky Anderson, who will be leading a team into playoff competition for the sixth time. "They've surpassed everybody from the All-Star break on. Right now they're playing the best ball."

"I hope our ballclub is ready to play them," says Tigers' catcher Lance Parrish. "Head-to-head, position-by-position, we are stronger than they are. They have better team speed and we have a lot more power. If we play as good as we're capable and they play as good as they can, we can still beat them."

In a short-series, pitching is usually the most important factor, and the Tigers would seem to have a decided edge in that category.

Screamin' O's surprise Ringers in IM grid action

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

An underdog Screamin' O's team that only "wanted to have a good time" upset previously unbeaten Ringers in intramural women's independent league flag football at the Recreation Building Fields Monday night. But it took a series of clutch plays to do it.

"We were really surprised," said Screamin' O's quarterback Sarah Lovell of the 8-2 upset. "They've never even been scored on ... we just wanted to have a good time and it turned out for the best."

The win lifted Screamin' O's to 3-0 on the year while Ringers, a team that had rolled over its previous two foes by a combined score of 86-0, fell to 2-1.

Intramurals

RINGERS' NORMALLY potent offense, led by quarterback Romy Bolton and flanker Nancy Sangster was held in check Monday, thanks to a strong rush by Screamin' O's.

Bolton was sacked five times in the game and was forced to throw quickly on numerous occasions by the defensive pressure. Ironically it was a Ringers' sack that provided their only score.

Late in the second half Screamin' O's had a first down on their own eight-yard line when Lovell was sacked on the line for a safety as Ringers took a 2-0 lead.

The next Screamin' O's possession turned the game around however as Lovell led her club on a 47-yard scoring drive, including a game-saving 22-yard, fourth-down bomb to Mary Jo Hartman.

The score came on a 10-yard pass to Jenny Alexander which was tipped by Bolton who fell, allowing Alexander to make the catch and score the touchdown.

HARTMAN CAUGHT the two-point conversion pass on a diving catch in the end zone corner for the 8-2 lead.

With under two minutes to go Ringers took over on their own 20 but Bolton was intercepted by Lovell who returned the ball to the 12.

Lovell was later intercepted on a third down play and Ringers again took the ball at their own eight with time running out.

Both teams could make the playoffs as each must play one more game, but Sangster felt Ringers will need a win to qualify. "We'd have to win our next one," Sangster said. She felt that her team would bounce back from the loss saying that it was "a bad game."

"They were a good team," added Sangster. "we didn't play well and we didn't have all of our players but (the loss) was our own fault."

If the two teams should meet in the playoffs it should be another good game, as Hartman said, "we were lucky to get by them (Ringers)."

New faces, places dot playoff picture

Cubs' hopes are resting on Sutcliffe

CHICAGO (UPI) — After an undignified 39-year pause, postseason baseball resumes at Wrigley Field this afternoon with Rick Sutcliffe of the Chicago Cubs opposing the San Diego Padres' Eric Show in the first game of the National League playoffs.

Fair skies and warm temperatures are expected to bathe the capacity crowd of more than 37,000 as it celebrates the Cubs' first sip of champagne since the 1945 World Series.

Like the Cubs, the Padres have never participated in the best-of-five playoff format that began in 1969. In fact, each club is the last in its division to finally reach the championship series.

"WHEN I CAME TO San Diego I wanted to help this team build a winning tradition," said first baseman Steve Garvey. "Lo and behold in the second year we are doing that. I am very pleased."

Because of their long championship drought, the Cubs created a national sensation by capturing the Eastern Division. The Padres, on the other hand, attracted less attention than a surfing meet.

Nevertheless, the winner of the best-of-five series is assured of a huge spotlight at the World Series. Getting there figures to be a struggle since the clubs split their 12 regular-season games.

"Now I have been involved in a bunch of three-game sweeps," Chicago manager Jim Frey said. "Usually in these short series, a sweep is possible but I don't see it this time. There are a lot of factors; we played each other close during the regular season but

Tiger record doesn't faze pesky Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Nearly all the telltale signs point against the Kansas City Royals defeating the Detroit Tigers in the best-of-five American League playoffs, which get underway Tuesday night at Royals Stadium.

Aw, shucks, everyone knows the Tigers have more power, better pitching and greater depth. Heck, they won more games (104) than any team in baseball this season, more in fact than any team in Tiger history. Now that's pretty heady stuff considering some of those glorious teams the Tigers have had in the past.

But the Tigers better hold off spending their World Series shares for a while.

THEY CALL MISSOURI the "Show Me" state and the message is clear. Why only a few miles down the road from Royals Stadium is the town of Independence, Mo., which is the birthplace of a former haberdasher named Harry Truman. Yep, they all know what the underdog is capable of in these parts.

"Detroit is just like any other team," says Bud Black (17-12), who will pitch the opener for Kansas City against Detroit's ace Jack Morris (18-11). "In a short series, anything can happen. If we get timely hitting we have as good a chance as Detroit."

The Royals firmly believe they can win this series. Forget the fact the club finished with only a mediocre 84-77 record. Over the last three months, there wasn't a better team in the major leagues, and the Tigers know it.

"I THINK SINCE July they've been

Unhappy umpires threaten to strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major league umpires, seeking tenure selection for post season games and better compensation for the playoff series, may be off the job when shouts of "play ball" sound at Tuesday's National and American League playoff games in Chicago and Kansas City.

For the second time in five years, minor league and amateur umpires are in a position to replace their big league brothers because of labor strife on the diamond.

For Peter Ueberroth, remembered for his excellent handling of the 1984 Summer Games as head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, the umpire action arrives at an inopportune time. Monday was his first day on the job as successor to Bowie Kuhn at the baseball commissioner's desk and it was like hitting him with a cold shower on a 10 degree day.

"NEGOTIATIONS ARE going on in an effort to solve the umpire problem," Ueberroth said of Monday's situation that could blossom into a full arbiters strike at game times Tuesday. "The presidents of the American and National Leagues have the responsibilities to see there are umpires on the field tomorrow. There will be umpires on the field whether they are our umpires or not. We'll have to wait and see what to expect."

Dean Vogelaar, speaking for the Kansas City Royals, said, "If there's a strike, it's beyond our control. We have made contingency plans with amateur umpires."

IN SAN DIEGO, Paul Runge, a member of the National League umpire staff for the last 12 years, said in his opinion the strike was official.

"They (league officials) told us they could negotiate (last) Friday, but not Saturday or Sunday. We have been bargaining in good faith all season, in fact, since January, so we told them Saturday we weren't working any more. A majority of the umpires are already back home."

"We want to work," Runge said. "We didn't want to go out. Eighteen umpires would have worked the two playoffs and the World Series, and it's an honor, very important to us. But every union man in this country knows there is a limit to how far a union can back off. A strike is never a good situation, but we were forced into it."

"A low blow to the fans? Well, they (league negotiators) gave us a low blow. All season they didn't give any credence to our position."

"THEY EVEN HAD minor league umpires standing by at every park during the past two weeks in case we went out."

Runge said the main issues, which the umpires have been seeking to settle since the 1981 season, are tenure, selection for postseason events and compensation.

Ueberroth would not state for the record that an umpire strike was in effect. A spokesman from his office said, "Technically, the umpires are not on strike until they fail to show up for Tuesday's playoff games in Chicago and Kansas City."

During Kuhn's 14-year tenure as commissioner, he was confronted with major league baseball player strikes in 1972 and 1981 and an umpire's walkout in 1979.

There were reports Richie Phillips, the chief attorney for major league umpires, had advised umpires to go home while negotiations continue.

"Umpires can be terminated with no right of appeal except to the league president, who makes the decision to terminate them," Phillips said.

The umpires are currently working under a contract through 1986.

Crew team impressive at Iowa Regatta

By John Gilaridi

The old expression of "early to bed, early to rise" should be the motto of the Iowa Rowing Association.

Members of the club are out bright and early on the Iowa River practicing every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning at 6 a.m. and workout in the Field House on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons on weight training machines.

"You really need a lot of dedication to be in this sport," Chris Bendsen, a UI student and executive director of the Iowa Rowing Association, said. "We only have about 16 or 17 club members that do race in the regattas. We could have more racing, but we do not have the equipment or the experience. It takes a lot of time to master this sport."

THAT DEDICATION paid off last weekend in the Iowa Regatta that was held Saturday morning on the Iowa River. The Iowa Rowing Club had a strong showing and a second place finish to a much stronger Nebraska

"Rowing is a really growing sport in this area of the country," says Chris Bendsen of the Iowa Rowing Association.

The Iowa Rowing Association was founded six years ago by Guy Weiser, an ex-UCLA oarsman who did not want to give up the sport. Weiser bought the original four-man boat that the club still uses. The club has purchased another four-man boat and plans to purchase an eight-man boat in the future.

Iowa finished second in the men's open four-man crew race by three seconds, what members call a "heartbreaker." Iowa finished second in the men's single behind Waterloo.

TOM BOSSHART WAS the coxswain of the men's open four-man team while John Nesbitt, Ed McCormick, John Gilliland and Chris Bendsen were the other members. McCormick competed in the men's open single race.

"Nebraska has a very large program and they just had more people entered in the races," Bendsen said. "They have a really good team and great coaching. But we were out here to have fun and to allow the younger members to gain some racing experience. This regatta was an overall success since the fall is more of a training period for new members."

When one thinks of Nebraska, they think of cornfields, more cornfields and even more cornfields. But the Cornhuskers have one of the top rowing programs in the Midwest and have even brought in a coach for the club from Canada.

CHIPMAN PURDOM, head coach at Nebraska, grew up 10 miles away from London, Ontario, the place where the $5,000-$10,000 racing shells are made. He started rowing competitively about 10 years ago.

An alumnus of the Nebraska rowing program was having club boats repaired in London when he met Purdom at the local club that Purdom was a member of. The two became good friends and Purdom was offered the position of crew coach at the school, as well as a position in the library.

Just like Iowa's team, the Nebraska squad is out on their salt-water lake in Lincoln practicing by 5:30 or 6 a.m. Another part of the program that the two schools share is how they raise money for equipment, travel expenses, etc.

"WE HAVE A row-a-thon to raise money and we keep in contact with alumni of the program," Bendsen said. "We will also have a raffle in the spring. This is because we are not a varsity sport on campus. We raise all our money ourselves and that's why we need a lot of dedication."

Purdom said that there is a lot of respect on the Nebraska campus for the crew members, but they must also raise all their money just like Iowa's team. "We do not get the support that programs at the east and west coast schools get. However, this is a fast growing sport in the Midwest and a lot of the best races are held in this area."

The Henley Regatta in England used to decide who the best collegiate crew was. But now most rowing fans look to the Intercollegiate Rowing Championships that are held at an east coast school in the spring to see who the top crews are. The Midwest Championships in Madison, Wis. in the spring determine which Midwest crews go to the finals. Iowa hopes to send a full team to Madison and do well, according to Bendsen.

Bendsen said that the club plans to look for a permanent place to store the boats, hire a part-time coach and acquire more equipment so that more people can practice and race.

"Rowing is a really growing sport in this area of the country," Bendsen said. "We have doubled our membership since last year. We want to continue this trend but the difficult part is that we need more equipment."

Turner dissatisfied; Torre gets the boot

ATLANTA (UPI) — Joe Torre, winningest Braves manager in a quarter of a century, was fired Monday after Atlanta was runnerup in the National League West for the second year in a row.

Torre, who inherited a team that had finished no higher than third in the 13 seasons before he took over in 1982, said his biggest mistake was probably winning the division title his first year.

"The worst thing that happened to me was winning the first year I was here," he said after being ousted by owner Ted Turner with two years still remaining on his contract. "You get people's mouths watering for what's next and we just didn't reach that next plateau."

"TED FELT WE HAD reached a point and stagnated there," Torre said. "But I felt our '83 ball club (which tied Houston for second, 12 games behind San Diego) was the best of the three years we were here. If they stay healthy, the Braves should be favored to win next year."

"Losing (hard-hitting third baseman) Bob Horner hurt us in so many ways. It led to a lot of lost offense and productivity with the ball club."

Torre, who managed the New York Mets for five years before returning to the Braves, the team he played for the first eight of his 18 major league seasons, met with Turner for about a half hour Monday morning and as he emerged told waiting reporters he was without a job.

"I was relieved of my duties," Torre said. "Ted and I had a friendly chat for about a half-hour and that's the way it is ... I don't know what I'm going to do."

"IT OBVIOUSLY WASN'T an overnight decision on Ted's part," he said. "He had trouble today discussing it with me. He was very uncomfortable."

"I would have liked to have known sooner," Torre said. "But even though Ted was leaning that way, he hadn't made up his mind until this weekend. I don't think you can ever do it a pretty way, as far as firing somebody."

"The first feeling I had that I wouldn't be back for next year was about three weeks ago when I went in and asked him if I was staying and he said he didn't know."

After meeting with Torre, Turner met with other Braves' executives to begin the process of choosing a new manager. Speculation centered on Eddie Haas, who managed the Braves' Richmond farm team this past season until Turner ordered that he join the major league coaching staff late in the season.

TORRE, WHO POSTED a 257-229 record in Atlanta, said Sunday he had a feeling, "nothing more," that Turner would fire him at the meeting.

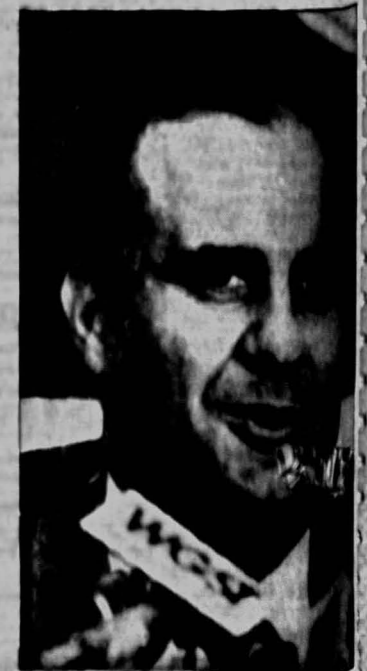

"We talked about a possible job in this organization and I wasn't prepared to give him an answer on that," Torre said.

There have been reports that the Montreal Expos and San Francisco Giants are both interested in having Torre as manager.

"There have been more offers mentioned than have been offered," Torre said. "I'm going to the World Series to let people know I am interested in managing, but I don't know if I want to manage next year. I guess I'll find out in the next week or so if there are clubs interested in me."

Torre said Turner told him he was "dissatisfied with our record more than anything else and I think that's the reason he made the change."

Torre had been criticized for the way the Braves appeared unsettled at several positions, especially left field and first base.

Joe Torre
