Federal contractors seek Iowa small businesses

By Greg Philby
Staff Writer

Uncle Sam wants to do more business with Iowa City. An official with the Small Business Administration said the federal government is trying to establish more work contracts with small businesses in order to increase competition and reduce the price tag on government purchases.

Iowa City businesses received nearly $1.28 million for work done with federal agencies during fiscal year 1983. The Department of Defense spent $354,000 and other agencies spent a total of $912,000 in Iowa City during that time. Coralville small businesses received $10,000 in federal government contracts.

Iowa small businesses, which employ fewer than 500 people, received almost $95 million statewide for work performed with the Department of Defense, General Services Administration, Housing and Urban Development, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, National Foundation on Arts and Humanities and other federal agencies.

JOE STUDER, a public information officer with the Small Business Administration office in Cedar Rapids, said the federal government must contract at least 10 to 15 percent of its work load with small businesses.

However, officials are not satisfied with the level of participation of the small businesses in Iowa City and throughout the state in securing government contracts.

Jeff Romine, assistant vice president of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce, said the $1.28 million spent in Iowa City may not be significant if the money includes only a portion of a multi-million dollar project.

"One million dollars is not much when you buy an airplane," Romine said. "But one million dollars worth of business forms is a lot. That's a monstrous amount of paper."

Jim Secrist, special assistant to Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, said the Rohrer Machinery shop in West Liberty receives "four times" as much money as the entire city of Iowa City through government contracts.

AND THE STATE is far behind most other states in receiving federal work contracts. "I'm sure Iowa is at the bottom and probably in the bottom five," Secrist said.

Maj. James Atkinson of the management area of the Defense Department of Contract Administration Services, said, "The dollar figures would show that Iowa is at the bottom of the nation in dollars spent in the state."

Mondale, Reagan trade debate barbs

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — President Reagan and Walter Mondale, in their first head-to-head confrontation of the 1984 presidential campaign, clashed Sunday night over the nation's huge deficit, Social Security and the qualities of leadership.

Mondale, the far-back Democratic challenger for the presidency, challenged Reagan on a number of questions and blamed the president for three terrorist attacks on U.S. positions in Lebanon.

In the first of two 90-minute presidential debates, held in Louisville's Kentucky Center for the Arts, Reagan and Mondale differed sharply on the question of deficits and the help provided by government for the elderly and the poor.

Mondale charged that Reagan sought to cut Social Security benefits by 25 percent — a charge the president vigorously denied.

REAGAN SAID THAT when he took office in 1981 it was apparent the Social Security program would go into bankruptcy two years later and said he created a bipartisan commission that fashioned a plan that would keep the systems "sound as far as you can see." The president also ridiculed Mondale's suggestions his administration has picked on the poor and the elderly. "We have no intention of throwing people into the snow," Reagan said and called it "pure demagoguery" and promised an estimated 93 million viewers on all three networks that "the safety net is there."

But Mondale said Reagan and his administration have applied a "meat cleaver" to programs needed by the elderly and poor.

"I've proposed hundreds of billions in cuts," Mondale said. "But I'm not going to cut it out of Social Security, Medicare, students loans — there are other ways than picking on our senior citizens."

REAGAN, while refusing to say whether he will propose a tax cut if elected, said he has no "secret plan" to cut deficits except a continuation of his economic recovery program.

He said that as government spending is reduced and revenues are increased "the lines will meet" at a balanced budget.

Mondale disputed Reagan's forecasts, charging that "every administration estimate has been off by billions and billions of dollars" and warned that top economists predict that a good economic recovery would still mean deficits of $263 billion and without it, the country could go into a period of slowed growth and possibly a recession.

REAGAN AND MONDALE will face off against each other in a second debate on Oct. 21 in Kansas City, Mo. on foreign policy and defense matters.

Reagan opened the Louisville debate by promising to reduce federal deficits in a second term by cutting spending and by sustaining economic growth.

"The plan that we have had and we are following is a plan based on growth in economy, recovery without inflation and reducing the share that the government is taking from the gross national product," Reagan said.

The deficit has been cut $21 billion under the Reagan administration, he said, because government revenues are rising, inflation has been cut by two-thirds, and interest rates are down 9 or 10 percentage points.

But a feisty Mondale came out fighting, responding that Reagan's budget estimates have "been off by billions and billions of dollars."

"We were told we would have a balanced budget by 1983, it was a $200 billion deficit instead," Mondale said.

MONDALE CALLED the presidential race a "test of leadership" and said that while he agreed government spending cuts are needed, "I'm not going to cut it out of Medicare and student loans ... and things that people need."

"I don't think Mr. Mondale has a plan for balancing the budget," Reagan replied. "I think he has a plan for raising taxes."

"A president should never say never, but I'm going to violate that rule ... I will never stand for a reduction of Social Security benefits to the people that are now getting them," Reagan said, gaining applause.

Mondale said Reagan made that commitment in 1980 and, "People know what happened."

RESPONDING TO Reagan's denial that he tried to cut Social Security, Mondale got a laugh from the audience when he said, "It reminds me of something Will Rogers said about Herbert Hoover. He said, 'It isn't what he doesn't know that bothers me, but what he says he knows.'"

Asked to assess his own leadership qualities and that of the president, Mondale said he recognizes and faces problems, while Reagan turns from them and "hopes they will disappear."

Mondale also criticized the president's handling of the latest terrorist bombing in Lebanon, saying the first bombing could not be avoided and perhaps the second bombing could not either, but the third bombing should have been averted with adequate security measures.

Council to review $5.6 million Civic Center proposal

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

The Iowa City Council tonight will review a plan to spend $5.6 million to expand the Iowa City Civic Center on Washington Street, including the renovation of the Iowa City Police and Fire departments and the construction of a parking ramp north of the city offices.

"The past few months have been spent developing a masterplan concept for expanding the Civic Center facilities," City Manager Neal Berlin said in a memo Friday to the Iowa City Council.

Problems with the Civic Center, Berlin said, include its inaccessibility to the handicapped and crowded facilities in city administrative offices and the police and fire departments.

AFTER CONSULTING with

Neumann Monson Architects of Iowa City, an 11-member committee of city officials recommended the $5.6 million Civic Center expansion.

Included in the project is a $2.1 million plan for "construction of a new addition and remodeling of current space" for the police and fire departments.

Enlarging the police department would mean constructing a two-level building on top of a basement along the north wall of the fire department. The fire department would then expand its operations into the space currently utilized by the police department.

The city committee, nicknamed the "space cadets" during the three years since 1981 that it has investigated expanding the Civic Center, suggested building a $3.5 million, two-and-a-half-story parking ramp in the present parking lot.

"Due to the shortage of long-term parking in the central business district, any expansion of the Civic Center should not reduce the number of parking spaces now available in the Civic Center parking lot," Berlin said.

The parking ramp would provide room for 260 cars on the upper two levels and 15,750 square feet of office space on the lower level of the ramp, Berlin said Sunday.

The $5.6 million overhaul of the Civic Center would almost double the city's working space, from the existing 27,000 square feet to 52,000 square feet.

THE MULTI-MILLION dollar cost covers construction fees, design costs, bond issue fees, office furnishings and operating equipment such as a new communications center for the police department.

Berlin's memo said funds to finance the project would come from parking

Beirut embassy to reopen

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The British Embassy in Beirut was expected to reopen today with security improvements made after the Sept. 20 suicide bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex, British officials reported Sunday.

The temporary closing of the embassy offices coincided with reports that another suicide bomb attack might be launched against a Western embassy in the Moslem half of the capital.

South African riots continue

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South African troops moved into the black ghetto of Soweto Sunday and police fired rubber bullets to disperse crowds in two separate incidents of racial violence.

Already 80 people have died in widespread unrest during the past six weeks. In another town Saturday, riot police used whips to disperse a crowd who set fire to rubble in the street and threw stones at police, a spokesman said.

Thousands protest Marcos

MANILA, Philippines — As many as 20,000 marched Sunday, heeding a call from Cardinal Jaime Sin for non-violent protests against the rule of President Ferdinand Marcos.

Marcos accused Sin of fanning "the flames of rebellion" and threatened to arrest the march leaders earlier this week, but abruptly reversed himself Saturday and authorized the demonstration.

NEW YORK — The new torch to be put atop the Statue of Liberty's refurbished arm will be constructed by French craftsmen, just as the original was, it was announced Sunday.

The original torch, which was severely corroded, was removed from the statue in ceremonies on the Fourth of July. The new torch is to be completed in 14 months.

Contribution linked to mob

WASHINGTON — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro received a $1,000 campaign contribution five years ago from reputed mobster William Masselli, who was indicted last week with Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, a published report said Sunday.

Barbara Dixon, a Ferraro spokeswoman, said the candidate had no personal dealings with Masselli and "does not know him."

Senators linked to hecklers

BOONE, Iowa — Dave Nagle, state Democratic Party Chairman says he's asking Iowa's two Republican Senators to resign from a training institute which teaches GOP youth activists to disrupt Democratic rallies and campaign appearances.

Nagle said news accounts linked the institute to hecklers who have shouted down Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale at campaign appearances. Roger Jepsen and Charles Grassley are directors of the institute.

Shuttle experiment rescued

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Commander Robert Crippen salvaged Challenger's radar explorations Sunday by maneuvering the shuttle to point a jammed antenna toward a distant satellite so hours of unmatched radar pictures of scientific targets around the globe could be transmitted back to Earth.

It meant scientists will be able to receive many extra hours of imaging data produced by radar waves bouncing off deserts, rain forests, oceans, mountains and ice packs despite the radar problem.

Pamela Gail Halter, 27, Riverside, Iowa, made an initial appearance Friday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of possession with intent to manufacture a controlled substance.

According to court records, Halter was arrested at her rural residence on Oct. 2 after a Johnson County Sheriff's deputy, executing a search warrant, found a "quantity of marijuana" growing on Halter's property.

Court documents state the marijuana was found several hundred feet north of Halter's residence. Also, paraphernalia that the Johnson County Sheriff's Department suspects might be used to process marijuana was found in adjacent buildings.

Halter was released to the supervision of the 6th Judicial District's Department of Corrections. Her arraignment on the possession charge is scheduled for Oct. 23 at 2 p.m.

Also in Johnson County District Court Friday, an Iowa City woman made an initial appearance on a charge of third-degree theft.

Pamela Breckner, 35, 3005 Radcliffe

Ave., is charged with taking a clay Italian pot, valued at $139, from the JC Penney department store in the Old Capitol Center.

Court documents state a store clerk observed Breckner leaving the store without paying for the pot. Store employees alerted parking lot attendants, who then copied down the license plate number of Breckner's car.

Breckner was arrested at her home by Iowa City police, court documents state.

Breckner's arraignment on the theft charge is set for Oct. 23 at 2 p.m. She was released on her own recognizance.

The mudslinging continues

Charges and counter-charges filled the air last week as the senatorial campaign between Rep. Tom Harkin, D-5th district, and Sen. Roger Jepsen heats up with election day now less than a month away.

Harkin criticized Jepsen for repeatedly voting against measures that "would have done much more to improve our military preparedness than pouring vast amounts of money into wasteful, overpriced, and sometimes dangerous new weapons programs like the B-1 bomber and the MX missile."

Harkin cited three specific defense funding votes Jepsen has made in the past year as examples, including a measure that would have transferred $888 million from the B-1 bomber program to conventional force modernization.

Meanwhile Jepsen said Harkin should explain why he accepted $9,500 from an anti-gun political action committee after removing himself as co-sponsor of a pro-gun bill.

"Tom Harkin owes an explanation in Iowa," said Jepsen. "He owes an explanation to all Iowans who are quickly learning that this is the way Tom Harkin operates in Washington."

UI seeking nominations for teaching awards

UI President James O. Freedman is requesting officials from Iowa elementary and secondary schools and community colleges submit nominations for the UI's Distinguished Teachers award.

Freedman said the awards, which were established last year when six teachers were honored, are designed to confirm the UI's commitment to excellence in education.

"Nominees should be active teachers with at least five years classroom service who, through their teaching, have exerted a profound influence on the lives of students," Freedman said.

Further information and nomination forms may be obtained from Associate Dean of Faculties Fredrick Woodard, Jessup Hall, University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa 52242.

Another city official quits

Bruce Knight will be leaving the Iowa City Department of Planning and Program Development Wednesday to become the city planning coordinator in Liberty, Mo.

Knight, who received a masters degree in public affairs from the UI, has worked in the Iowa City planning department for five and a half years. He is the third city official that has resigned in the past week, following city attorney Robert Jansan and parks and recreation director Dennis Showalter.

Lecturer will address development of Tanzania

A public lecture will be delivered by Dr.

Justin Maeda, special assistant for rural development and political affairs to the president of Tanzania, Julius Nyerere, will be held Wednesday, Oct. 10, at 3:30 p.m. in the International Center, Jefferson Building, second floor.

Maeda will speak on "Progress in Development in Tanzania." The lecture will be followed by a discussion period.

Maeda is the former director of the Development Studies Institute of the University of Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

The lecture-discussion is sponsored by the UI's African Studies Committee, Program for International Development and Society for International Development.

Movie, rally to promote violence awareness week

As part of "Domestic Violence Awareness Week," Oct. 8-14, the Women's Resource and Action Center is inviting the public tonight to attend a showing of the movie The Burning Bed.

The movie tells the story of Francine Hughes, a Michigan woman who, after enduring 12 years of physical violence, takes the law into her own hands. She consequently was tried for murder in what became a widely-publicized case for battered women.

The two-hour movie will be shown at 8 p.m. at the WRAC, 130 N. Madison St.

In addition to the movie showing, a rally will be held at Blackhawk Mini-Park, on the corner of Washington and Dubuque streets, Thursday at 12:15 p.m.

The rally will celebrate battered women that have gone on to live violence-free lives and to mourn those who have been beaten and died. The rally will also address the extent of the abuse of women.

"Domestic Violence Awareness Week" is hoped to draw attention to the problem of family violence — the abuse of women and children — and to advances being made in the area.

Wielding powerful language as only a celebrated novelist can do, John Irving spoke out in a news conference Sunday against the "homilies and smokescreens" of the "slick yet empty" Reagan administration and urged disenchanted Democrats — especially young people — to vote in November.

The conference, held in the Union Yale Room, centered around Irving's current "reading and meeting" tour to several college campuses around the country, and his desire to see young people at those campuses involved in the electoral process. He is also reading passages from his forthcoming novel, The Cider House Rules.

"I'm trying to promote thinking," Irving said of the tour's intent. "I'm encouraging Democrats like myself not to give in to Republican extremism by backing out of the election in November."

IRVING SAID he had "never seen a clearer choice than in this election — a choice between substance and image." He called upon Democrats to refrain from "cynicism" and "sulking" over Walter Mondale's moderate stand on the issues.

"We can't be sulking over the fact that there's no George McGovern or John Anderson available this year," Irving said. "The left wing cannot afford to remain elitist as they have done throughout this election. They need to support their candidate, and it seems to me their candidate is certainly not Ronald Reagan."

His appeal was specifically leveled at young voters, Irving said repeatedly this generation has "taken choice for granted," and noted that, if re-elected, Reagan will have the chance to appoint up to four Supreme Court justices and thus "influence legislation and political thought for generations."

"What I'm trying to say is that once Ronald Reagan's makeup man has no one to work on, (Reagan's) influence in the Supreme Court will go on for generations," Irving stated.

Irving said he doesn't consider himself a "political novelist." He calls The Cider House Rules, a novel about an orphanage in Maine in which illegal abortion becomes an issue, an "historical novel" rather than one that seeks to legislate change.

"I'm a writer, and as a writer I spend as much time over social issues as some politicians," he said. "I'm concerned about social violence, and who the victims of that violence are. That's why I'm choosing to travel and to speak out now."

IRVING TOOK care not to endorse candidates "as a celebrity." Though he favors such candidates as Mondale, Rep. Tom Harkin, D-5th District, and Gov. Jim Hunt in North Carolina, the author of The World According to Garp and The Hotel New Hampshire lambasted such noted celebrities as actor Charlton Heston and Dallas football coach Tom Landry for their "image-mongering."

"These people have no conception of who the victims of the Reagan administration are when they endorse a candidate. They're just adding polish to the image," contested Irving.

As a self-professed "moderate," Irving took issue with Reagan's supporters among the U.S. clergy, calling the religion/state issue "of overwhelming importance."

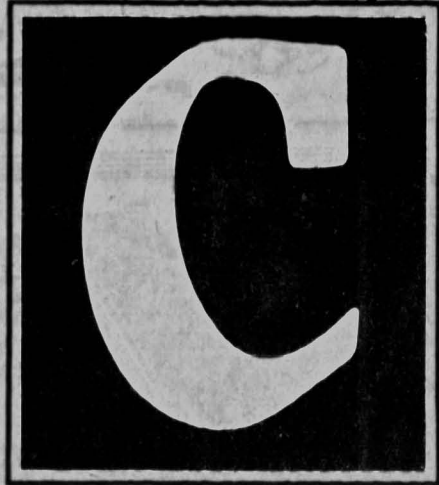

"Reagan has no right to legislate religion or to knock peoples' beliefs," Irving said. "One of the real issues of this campaign is whether Americans think Jerry Falwell has a right to help determine who the next Supreme Court Justice will be."

IRVING SAID he believes American voters need to look behind the Reagan image and "really ask themselves what this man has done and — more importantly — what he might do, in Central America and with the Russians, if allowed to serve four more years."

If the people who consider this get out to vote, Irving said, that would make all the difference in the results come November.

"You must remember it was Democrats not voting who elected Reagan in 1980, not the Republicans," he said. "We must get out and vote. Save your cynicism for your friends."

McGovern pushes 'conservation'

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Acknowledging college campuses have become more conservative during the last decade, former Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern visited the UI Friday and encouraged his party's candidates to capitalize on this trend.

"It is true that there is a more conservative mood on campuses today," said McGovern, who lost the 1972 presidential election to Richard Nixon.

But he stressed that Democratic candidates, traditionally seen as more liberal than their Republican counterparts, need not be dismayed by students' shifting ideological views.

Democrats should campaign heavily on issues concerning "fundamental humanities" that President Ronald Reagan and many Republicans are ignoring. "If we expect to appeal to this conservative mood," said McGovern during a press conference following his speech.

McGOVERN SAID he is confident conservative students will vote for candidates from either party who support "conservation of life" and "conservation of the environment."

McGovern spoke before more than 300 enthusiastic people crammed into the Union Hawkeye Room.

Friday's visit to the UI was the second time McGovern has spoken here this year. In January, he campaigned on campus as a presidential candidate before the Iowa caucuses.

McGovern made a respectable showing in the Iowa caucuses — finishing a strong second to eventual Democratic nominee Walter Mondale in Johnson County — but his campaign soon lost steam and the former senator is now stumping for Mondale.

Former Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern emphasizes a point while speaking to a crowd of about 300 people in the Union Hawkeye Room Friday afternoon. McGovern also endorsed 3rd-District Congressional candidate Joe Johnston.

WHILE ADMITTING he and Mondale have differing views on some issues, such as defense spending, McGovern said Mondale "is superbly qualified to be president."

In contrast, McGovern called Reagan "the most dangerously misinformed man to ever hold that office."

Unleashing a wide-ranging attack similar to several speeches Mondale made across the nation last week, McGovern criticized Reagan's economic programs and defense-spending policies.

"I can't imagine what would have happened to me if, as a liberal Democrat running in 1972, I'd even hinted at the possibility of a $200 billion deficit," said McGovern, adding, "I wouldn't have even carried Massachusetts."

McGovern also charged Reagan with embarking on the "biggest arms spending binge this country has ever seen."

However, the bulk of McGovern's criticisms of Reagan centered on the "ignorance" issue the Democrats have been stressing recently.

"THIS PRESIDENT does not have the knowledge to direct this country in the nuclear age," said McGovern. "I don't question his motives ... (but) he doesn't understand the realities of nuclear war."

"The president didn't even know, until recently, that missiles that come from submarines and are dropped out of B-52's are loaded with nuclear warheads," said McGovern. "He didn't know, until a short time ago, that after you fire a missile from a submarine that you cannot recall it."

He also claimed Reagan only recently realized the majority of the Soviet Union's nuclear arsenal is based on land and not submarines.

McGovern called Reagan's lack of knowledge about nuclear weapons "frightful ... dangerous ignorance."

"This is the ultimate right-to-life issue we ought to be focusing on," said McGovern as the audience cheered loudly. "What we are deciding here is the future of every one of us and future generations that have yet to be born and that will not be born."

"WE CAN'T afford four more years of this kind of leadership in the White House" said McGovern.

McGovern also endorsed the candidacy of Iowa City lawyer Joe Johnston, who is running against incumbent Republican Cooper Evans for Iowa's Third Congressional District seat.

"I don't see how any student or faculty member with enough common sense to get admitted to the University of Iowa can fail to vote for Joe Johnston," said McGovern.

Johnston, who spoke briefly to the audience before introducing McGovern, panned Evans' Congressional voting record.

He charged Evans has repeatedly failed to vote for loan and education programs for students and social security and Medicare legislation designed to aid infants, women and elderly citizens.

Johnston said Evans' failure to vote for these social programs, coupled with his support of funding for nerve gas, the B-1 bomber and the Trident and Pershing missiles, illustrates his "misguided priorities."

Senate elections set for Tuesday; platforms stress quality education

By Karen Burns
Staff Writer

Quality education at the UI is a priority issue for the four parties running for three at-large and five off-campus Student Senate openings Tuesday.

Two independents, UI freshman Shannon Connell and senior Deb Kirk, are running on a platform that stresses education and student involvement. They are also in favor of the proposed Union renovation plans.

The independents want to move toward quality education through quality faculty, said Kirk, who is running for an off-campus seat. She said they would also explore the benefits of unionization for UI teaching assistants.

Their platform also includes financial aid and controlling tuition hikes, Kirk said.

Connell, who is running for an at-large seat, said the independents plan to reach out to students and find out what their concerns are through increased communication between students and senators.

THEY FAVOR the current proposed Union renovation plan, Kirk said, because the present proposal is the "best to make everyone happy." She added in reference to the proposed reduction of space in the recreation area that "some sacrifices are necessary."

In contrast, the New Frontier party opposes the proposed space reduction in the Union recreation area, which would eliminate the bowling lanes and reduce the number of billiard tables.

Also, the party favors implementing minimum academic qualifications for student senators "to support responsible student representation," their brochure states.

New Frontier supports quality education through equal access to education, faculty-student ratios that would provide smaller classes, support of equal opportunity for financial aid and overall academic excellence in UI education.

Also, the party says it would demand an increase in the cost efficiency of student-funded organizations and commissions.

UI FRESHMEN Andy Hoyt and Mike

Gainer and sophomore Kelli Jacque are running at-large on the New Frontier ticket. UI juniors Sara Moeller, Ramu Reddy, Mike Mindrup and Scott McCreight are the party's off-campus candidates.

Hoyt said the party is trying to take a more moderate approach to student government "by working with the student senate and administration, instead of against them."

Phoenix '84 is running eight candidates on a platform entitled, "Access to Education," which hopes to ensure all students have an opportunity to get the education they need, Mike Reck said. Reck, a UI sophomore, is running with Phoenix for an off-campus seat.

The Phoenix platform states the party will try to stabilize tuition so it does not exceed students' ability to pay.

The party is against proposed Union renovation plans that would move the student activities area into the basement because it would be hidden, states its platform. The recreation area and the Bijou must also be maintained, it says.

PHOENIX ALSO wants to increase senate visibility by directly informing the students of its activities, by writing guest opinions in The Daily Iowan, announcing senate meetings in the DI postscripts section and placing senate business on a public bulletin board.

The party also supports "fair and adequate funding of student organizations" and affirmative action throughout the UI.

In addition, Phoenix is working to get the UI out of holdings with corporations that do business in apartheid South Africa.

"The university is not just academic," Phoenix candidate Byron Wikstrom said. "Student input on South Africa will broaden our scope."

MIKE PRICE, a member of the Phoenix party, has already been elected to represent students in family housing, because he was the only candidate. He said he would represent his constituents, who want cable television hook-up. In addition, he said he will address the issue of busing, as well as national and international issues, because "the student senate is the proper forum to discuss those issues as well."

The Really Enthusiastic Students United Mightily Effectively (RESUME) party is running on a platform calling for a nuclear-free Pentacrest.

"It's the most important issue for everyone," UI junior Sean Kennedy said. "Believing in anything is no good without involvement in the arms race, because one strike could blow up the world."

"We'll have our own private Switzerland here (the UI)," he said. The party would like to send letters to Washington, D.C., and Moscow stating the UI does not pose any threat in the nuclear arms race and wants to put signs in the area declaring the Pentacrest a nuclear-free zone.

RESUME ALSO supports T.A.s in their efforts to be recognized as faculty members and receive benefits through unionization.

The party supports a 4 percent tuition hike for both resident and non-resident students and competitive pay for faculty in order to keep and attract the best professors.

RESUME would also like to employ a lobbyist to represent UI students' interests to the Iowa Legislature and would like financial aid to be available for everyone who needs it.

UI senior Molly Eness and juniors Dan Ingram and Kennedy are running for off-campus openings and sophomore Devie Goldberg is running for an at-large seat.

In the past, special elections for student senate seats have not had very high turnouts — only about 300 to 600 people, according to Kelly Hayworth, chairman of the UI Elections Board.

"We're hoping for a larger turnout than in the past because there are more seats available," he said. "I hope 1,000 people show up."

Students can vote between 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Union Landmark Lobby or in front of the Old Capitol on the Pentacrest. In case of rain, election tables will be moved to Schaeffer Hall.

Local fitness, health food merchants say public has shaped up lifestyle

By Jeff Eichenbaum
Staff Writer

UI students who consume nutritional foods need not worry about being called "food faddists" as members of the New Pioneer Natural Foods Co-op were when they first advocated eating natural and whole-grained foods about 13 years ago.

As Sheila Phillips, co-manager of the Co-op, explained, recent studies confirm that people can decrease the risk of heart attacks and cancer by ingesting more complex carbohydrates — whole grains, vegetables, and fruits — and increasing exercise. Another important factor is reducing the intake of fats, salt and sugar, she said.

These are "things we've promoted for 13 years," Phillips said. "We were called food faddists, but research has borne out what we've been saying."

And although no statistics are available, it appears UI students are including healthy doses of exercise and nutritional food in their lifestyles.

RON MILLER, owner of the Nautilus Health Spa at the Iowa City Holiday Inn, agreed with the assessment that students have become more health conscious, saying, "There's no question that fitness in the '80's is here to stay — it's not a trend or fad. Students are discovering what it takes to improve their quality of life," he said. "And in a lot of cases, that's exercise."

He said people come to Nautilus — or jog, play sports, aerobically — because of the mental stimulation a superior physique produces. "It's a great feeling to be in shape, both physically and mentally," he said.

Miller said both the Nautilus workout and the aerobics classes he offers appeal to students because of the ease and efficiency of the exercise, along with Nautilus' convenient location.

"There doesn't have to be a lot of time involved," he said, explaining the "high-intensity" Nautilus workout requires only three half-hour sessions a week.

AND PEOPLE SAY they suffer through the strenuous physical conditioning because they are attempting to lose weight, add muscle, improve stamina, strength and vitality, Miller said.

He added: "People in the local business community find exercise is a great relaxer and helps to counter stress."

Billie Lindsey, director of the UI's health education program Health Iowa, said exercise and good nutrition can make peoples' lives more "healthy, meaningful and loving."

She said she discovered the pulse of UI student's health concerns by conducting a survey last year in which 350 students were asked to rank health concerns by degree of importance. The survey showed fitness assessments and nutritional and weight information to be subjects the students were most interested in.

LINDSEY SAID the survey illustrates that "people still are at the point of not knowing a lot about nutrition — but they're interested and willing to learn." She said

Health Iowa has since tailored several lectures and sessions to address these student concerns, including sessions at the Union Wednesday.

Lindsey said each side of the exercise/nutrition equation is important to overall health. She added men were traditionally considered to be more interested in athletics and women more interested in diet, but "the current mass revolution of fitness and wellness is occurring regardless of sex."

Phillips said the Co-op clientele has grown to more than 800 members during the last year and includes students, permanent Iowa City residents and people coming from areas without a natural-foods outlet.

HOWEVER, SHE also stressed men and women are equally interested in nutritional foods. "I've never noticed a shift one way or another, because everyone eats."

She said a scientific process called enriching, in which "24 nutrients are removed and 12 are put back," has ruined many mass-produced bread and grain products. "People were eating white enriched bread and calling us silly."

The Co-op's selection of fresh vegetables, nuts, cheeses and locally-milled whole-grain products have great appeal to gourmets and vegetarians, she added.

"We're not out actively stumping for people to become vegetarians," Phillips said, but because it is an excellent way to reduce fats and chemicals in the diet, the Co-op has "tons of recipes and natural-foods cookbooks."

UI to hold International festival

In an effort to promote "friendship and cultural interaction among the international community" at the UI, the 1984 International Festival will feature international cuisine, performances and exhibitions by UI international organizations Saturday night.

To emphasize the importance of this event, Iowa City Mayor John McDonald will declare Saturday "International Day" in Iowa City.

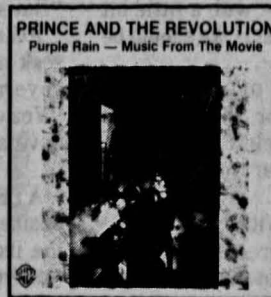

THE FESTIVAL, in its second decade at the UI, will take place at the Union Main Lounge at 7 p.m. In addition to performances and exhibitions by UI groups, incoming performers from other Iowa colleges will be featured. Admission to the event will cost $5.

The event is sponsored by the Union of International Students, an organization made up of 10 member groups including the African, Arab, Egyptian, Indian, Malaysian, Pakistani, Palestinian and Turkish student associations. The UIS "seeks to promote an intercultural awareness amongst people of all countries"

Council requested to endorse plans for airport warehouse complex

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

The Iowa City Council will be asked Tuesday night to approve a local developer's request to build an office-warehouse complex in the clear zone of a runway at the Iowa City Municipal Airport.

Kenneth Ranshaw asked the council in August to approve his plans to build a series of six small office spaces with adjoining warehouse space, a 4,455-square-foot warehouse building and 30 garage units for storage at 463 Highway 1 West.

Ranshaw's plan meets city zoning requirements, but the council delayed action on the matter until the airport complied with Federal Aviation Administration federal safety standards.

In 1983, the council approved Ranshaw's plan to construct a pair of two-story, 37-unit apartment complexes in the clear zone of the airport's main runway.

AFTER THAT council decision, the FAA said the city's airport did not meet federal safety regulations, and the FAA withheld $295,000 in federal funds from Iowa City that were targeted to upgrade runways at the airport.

However, two weeks ago, the FAA approved Iowa City's proposal to bring the airport back into compliance by developing a different runway as the airport's main runway. The city will spend $793,000 to construct a new main runway to make the airport eligible for future runway renovation grants.

The city's Planning and Zoning Commission recommended approval of the office-warehouse development pending FAA approval of the city's $793,000 compliance plan.

However, the FAA has recommended to the council that it not approve Ranshaw's request to develop the office-warehouse facility. "FAA policy states that clear zones should be clear," stated Jack Sasser, manager of the FAA's regional airports division, in a letter to the council.

ALSO, TUESDAY night the council will be asked to approve a resolution reinstating a lieutenant's position in the Iowa City Fire Department.

At a meeting Sept. 13, the council abolished the lieutenant's position by a 6-1 vote. Councilor Clemens Erdahl cast the dissenting vote.

The local firefighter's union was pressuring the city to fill the vacant command post, which was opened in July after a former lieutenant was promoted to captain. The union threatened to sue the city because it did not adhere to a state law requiring a promotion to be made within 30 days of the vacancy.

The council's decision to eliminate the lieutenant's position thwarted the lawsuit and gave the city time to complete a study of the promotion practices within the fire department. The study was initiated after firefighters complained of "promotional bias" in the fire department.

As a result of the study, five city committees have been appointed to investigate internal problems within the fire department.

If the council re-establishes the lieutenant's position, a promotion will be made within 30 days from a list of eligible candidates.

Business

Gary Madson, administrative assistant to Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District, blames the "sagging agricultural economy of Iowa" for the small amount of business contracted by the government in the state.

"That's Iowa's big problem," Secrist said. "We have been relying on agriculture too long" as Iowa's main business, and the state has few centers of expertise to allow small businesses to move into larger markets.

"And Iowa is a very family oriented state," Madson said. "We hope to continue to do business with neighbors and friends and we really have that tradition. It may be tough to go beyond that."

Atkinson said, "One of the things I think is key is that the small business is not that knowledgeable of the ins and outs of the paperwork. If you tend to look at it briefly, it is kind of scary. But it is not as complex as it appears on the surface."

ANOTHER REASON for the lack of federal government business in Iowa, Atkinson said "is that small businesses may not realize that their same products can be used in military products, too. If they build a fuel pump for a farm tractor, maybe the same fuel pump could be used in a military bulldozer."

Secrist added, "In Iowa's case, with all of these small machine shops, with a little bit of research and perseverance, we should be able to be competitive."

Secrist said he hopes to establish an educational system for Iowa small businesses via the Iowa TeleNet service to help them receive and carry out government work contracts.

He also is working with Gov. Terry Branstad to develop procurement outreach centers to help small businesses make the initial step to receive a government contract.

SECRIST SAID the Department of Defense and the state of Iowa are both considering allotting $150,000 for the project. "If we have that kind of money, we can do an awful lot in a state like Iowa," Secrist said.

The federal government has been attempting to find more small businesses to do work for them for several reasons, Secrist said. He said out of 14.3 million companies in the nation, 99.9 percent are considered small businesses, and 48 percent of the work force is employed through small businesses.

"It's been shown that most government buying goes to large business," Studer said. "But small business is more competitive."

Federal government officials "clearly seek more and more businesses bidding on government contracts," Madson said. "You don't end up with a $50 hammer if you have a lot of people bidding on it."

ATKINSON ADDED, "The more businesses you have involved, the broader the industrial base is to support mobilization" during times of crisis.

"And once you get a big government contractor, it gives you more credibility and a better reputation," Secrist said, and the contractor will likely keep coming back to do business.

"It opens up a new market place," Atkinson said. "What the public needs to realize is that the United States government is the largest purchaser of goods and services in the world today... The business base in Iowa is a lot bigger than is known nationally."

"With some encouragement, we could become more involved. Of course, this is a decision each business must make on its own," he said.

Civic

general obligation bonds and general revenue sharing.

In order to issue approximately $2.3 million to $2.6 million in general obligation bonds, a special election would probably have to be held since the bond issue would require approval by 60 percent of the voting population.

The committee's plan is not the first time the city has attempted to solve its space needs.

In 1975, an architectural consulting firm examined the space needs of area law enforcement offices and released to the city a $3 million plan for a 40,000-square-foot combined county and city "law enforcement center."

LATER IN THE 1970s, Johnson County voters turned down a proposal to build a joint county and city office and law enforcement center.

"One thing we have to do is really make the voters aware of what the problem is," Mayor John McDonald said Sunday. "The police and fire departments have critical problems as to space needs and the key would be to educate (voters) and make them aware of what the problem is."

McDonald noted there is no time schedule for completing the remodeling, which will give the council plenty of time to discuss the plan.

"Like everything, it's a lot of money," he said about the $6.5 million price tag. "But we have an opportunity to really go through it in detail and hopefully bring the price down a little."

Debate

ASKED WHETHER he considers himself a born-again Christian, Reagan said he doesn't know whether he fits that term.

"Well, I was raised to have a faith and belief," Reagan said. "I do resort to prayer. I don't believe I could carry on unless I had a belief in a higher authority."

Reagan explained he does not attend church as president because the security precautions would interfere with the services and churchgoers.

"I miss going to church. But I think the Lord understands," Reagan said to loud applause.

Mondale said he is bothered by "this growing tendency" to mix religion and politics.

"What I object to is someone seeking to use his faith to question the faith of another," Mondale said.

EARLIER IN THE DAY both camps blamed each other for the flap over which journalists would question President Reagan and Walter Mondale Sunday night during their first television debate.

Sandi Risser, spokeswoman for the League of Women Voters, which sponsored the debate said "nearly 100" names were submitted — 36 initially, the rest later.

Dorothy Ridings, president of the League, said the rejections were evenly divided.

It was about half and half (rejections by each camp)," said Ridings. "There was no pattern to the rejections."

RISSER SAID the same process of submitting names to the camps was used both in 1976 and 1980 debates. "In '76 none were rejected, in '80 there were some strikes, but a panel was easily formed. It had worked well before and justifiably a campaign might know something about a person that would be a legitimate reason not to use a person."

Mondale said he was "baffled" by Ridings' assertion that the campaigns had "abused" the selection process. "I personally approved about 50 names so I don't quite understand what the point is," he said.

Sources in his campaign said they rejected about 20 journalists.

Aboard Air Force One en route to Louisville, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters the White House had sought "fair-minded, straightforward, professional journalists of which there are many in this nation," to serve on the panel.

HE FLATLY refused to describe the criteria the Reagan-Bush campaign used in blackballing reporters.

"We approved a number of women, blacks, Hispanics... which were rejected either by the League or the other side," Speakes said.

Both campaigns were given an initial list of 12 reporters, and, according to a source who asked that his name not be used, Mondale picked four from that list.

Two soldiers' stories

There has been a lot of talk this election year about the "gender gap." Macho politicians, as it turns out, are in vogue this year: real men who like guns more than butter and their ERA's in the bank, not in the Constitution.

President Reagan, of course, has been the epitome of this vogue. But now macho politics has wormed its way into the Iowa Senate race. Instead of debating issues like American involvement in Central America, the farm debt crisis or funding for education, Iowa's two senatorial candidates spent last week arguing over each other's war stories.

First, the campaign of Republican incumbent Roger Jepsen accused Democratic challenger Tom Harkin of falsely claiming to have been a combat veteran in Vietnam. Jepsen's evidence came from a book written nearly five years ago by David Broder.

But Harkin has never claimed to have any combat experience in Vietnam. He did, however, fly damaged planes out of Vietnam when he was stationed in Japan during his five-year stint in the Navy.

In responding to Jepsen's charge, Harkin noted that in an approved 1968 biography in the Iowa Official Register, Jepsen claimed to have been a paratrooper during World War II. Jepsen in fact did not serve in that war, although he was an Army paratrooper during 1946 and 1947.

But in later editions of the Register, that biographical statement was changed. Since then, Jepsen has never claimed to be a World War II veteran.

This election is the best chance Iowans have for a pure clash of ideologies. The campaign could and should be a stimulating debate on the numerous issues that separate Roger Jepsen and Tom Harkin. That we instead get petty bickering over the autobiographical details of each candidate's life is both silly and sad.

Both men were in the military; both have served the country in other ways since that time. By focusing the debate on something as irrelevant as who was the better soldier, the candidates have chosen to ignore real issues and waste the time and attention of their constituents.

"Real men" should know better.

Giving last rights

A group of senators, mostly Republican, decided that civil rights legislation to protect women, minorities, older citizens and the handicapped was not worth the time it was going to take to overcome Sen. Orrin Hatch's delaying tactics. They wanted to get done, go home and campaign.

The result is that crucial legislation overturning a Supreme Court decision and Reagan administration policy that in essence allow discrimination without penalty will stand.

The ruling in question states that only the sections that discriminate of a given institution, not the entire institution, can be subject to loss of federal funds for discrimination.

That means, for example, that if the engineering department in a college discriminates, only that department and not the whole college can lose funding. And the Reagan administration has announced that it plans to apply the rule to cases involving race, age and handicap.

The impact on efforts to end discrimination will be serious. The rule as it stands means that pressure on institutions to stop their own internal discrimination must end.

It means that with virtually no penalties, an institution can now exist, so to speak, half slave and half free. Black twins, one of whom wanted to be a doctor and the other a lawyer, could find that one is protected and the other not, depending upon the policies of the professional schools they chose to attend.

The Reagan administration, which says that it supports civil rights, failed in this test of its leadership. It made no effort to get the legislation passed. This failure reveals that behind the rhetoric, the administration is willing to do little or nothing to promote civil rights.

Peace with honor?

Peace in Central America is at hand. Oct. 15 is the deadline for giving the last touches to a peace plan prepared by the Contadora group of Latin American countries, which includes Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

The plan drafted by the Contadora group calls for reducing arms, troops and foreign advisers and prohibiting the establishment of foreign military bases in the area. Nicaragua has agreed to sign the document. The ten members of the European Economic Community (EEC), Spain and Portugal support the proposal as well.

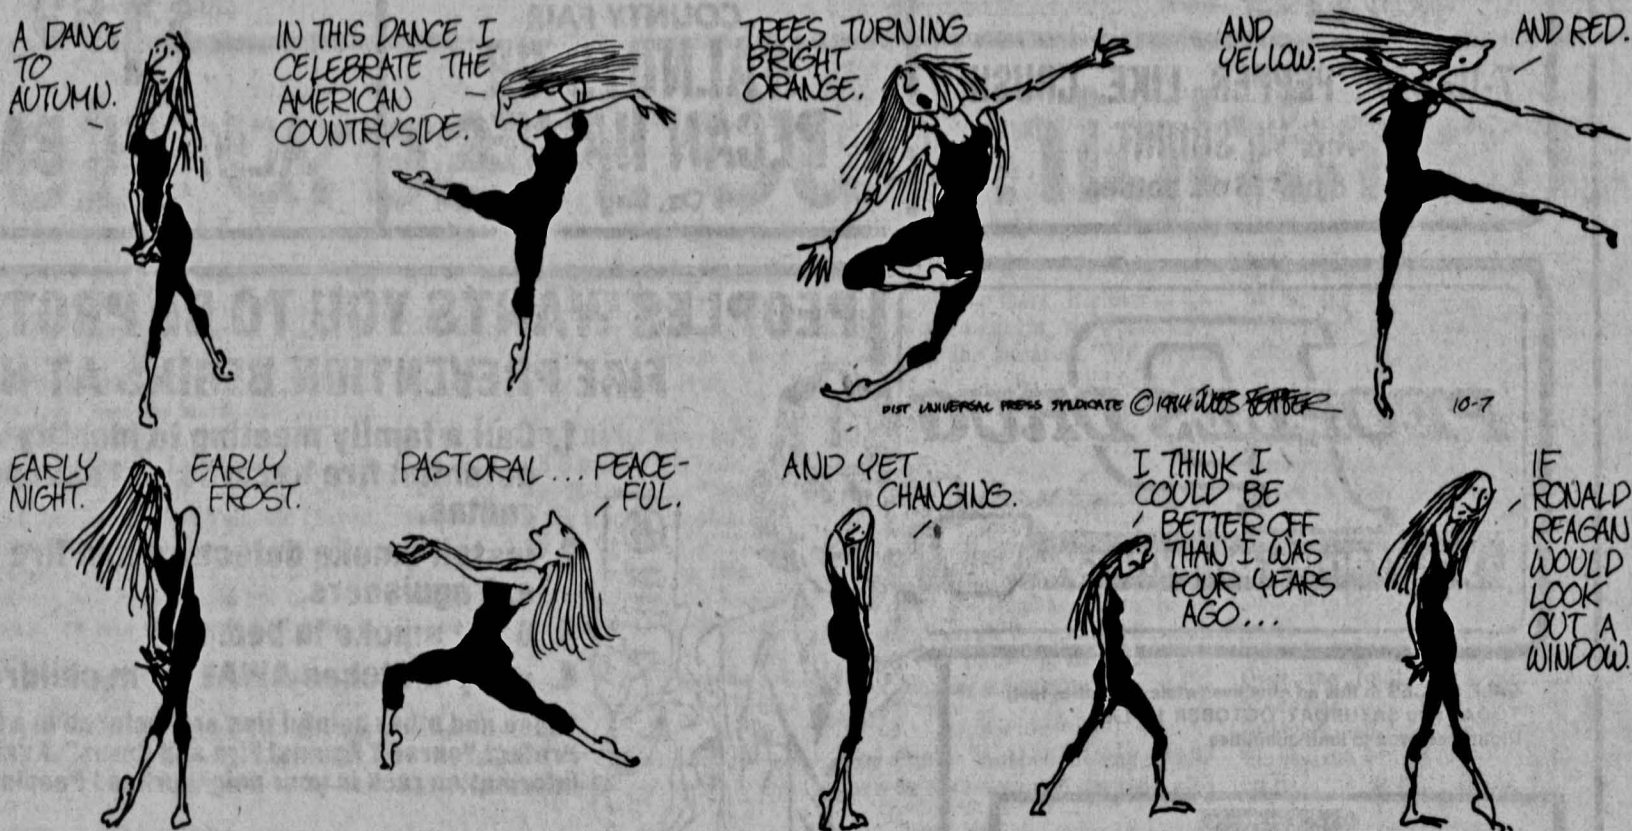

But one obstacle still remains. The United States opposes the plan. U.S. senior officials believe that the Reagan administration simply does not like the Nicaraguan Sandinistas. This attitude results in hostility toward the Contadora peace plan and toward any measure short of a complete overthrow of the Sandinista government.

A democratic solution is also at hand. Nicaragua is having elections on Nov. 4. But the United States is also opposed to this solution. U.S. opposition to the election stems from objections to procedures and lack of confidence in the strength of the Sandinistas' political rivals.

Last week, Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega Saavedra denounced a U.S. plan to launch a military offensive against Nicaragua starting Oct. 15. Mercenary troops controlled by the CIA and the Pentagon were said to be concentrating on Nicaragua's borders with Honduras and Costa Rica.

Peace and democracy are at hand in Central America. But the United States seems determined to maintain its political and economic hegemony over the area. If that remains the case, peace, democracy and justice in Nicaragua will almost certainly be crushed.

Hey — NBC! Rip this one off!

I WALKED INTO MY local convenience store last week to purchase America's Largest Selling Newspaper. The cover featured Farrah Fawcett and Ryan O'Neal — not an especially exciting untold story, but I figured the space alien and diet news would make up for it.

Much to my surprise, however, Farrah also graced the cover of the People magazine located (rightfully) below the Enquirer. This, as it turned out, had nothing to do with Ryan but with her performance in an NBC TV-movie called "The Burning Bed."

It was explained further later that night on NBC, when the announcer told us that it was "Farrah as you've never seen her before... in a story ripped from today's headlines." And then Bryant Gumbel showed up in an ad for "Today" to tell us that Farrah would be on his show the next morning to discuss her role in the "controversial film, 'The Burning Bed.'"

Now, I was perplexed. Here I was, with a story ripped from today's headlines, a controversial film and more ad money being spent on Farrah Fawcett than on either of the presidential candidates, and I still didn't know anything more than that one of Charlie's angels had re-ascended from publicity limbo.

AS IT TURNS OUT, "The Burning Bed" does appear to be about something of interest: the "real-life" case of Francine Hughes, who, after a dozen years of being brutalized by her husband and ignored by the authorities, killed him by burning down their house.

There are the usual points to be made: that it's important to see the terrible results of wife-battering, and that NBC has sensationalized the whole incident out of proportion to what it was in reality. Both points have a certain amount of validity.

What seems far more important, however, is that through its advertising and public relations campaigns, NBC has turned the terrible story of Francine Hughes into the triumphant story of Farrah Fawcett. Okay — so maybe this actual woman did suffer through twelve years that no one should have to endure; so maybe she felt herself forced to do something that no one should ever consider doing.

But what's that compared to the comeback of America's Ideal Beauty? Especially when she's playing a Real Dramatic Role in a Real Topical Story? Besides, Francine Hughes doesn't photograph well and wouldn't know how to handle herself with Bryant Gumbel.

THAT'S WHAT HAPPENS, though, when you start ripping stories from today's headlines and ignore the smaller print beneath. While films have gone off in pursuit of space aliens and romantic myths about America's heartland, TV and, to a lesser extent, popular magazines have been left with the task of plumbing the sordid realities that constitute life today.

As a result, we are currently faced with a deluge of controversial TV-movies torn from headlines that seem to come primarily from Rupert Murdoch's papers. This week, for example, CBS' "Scorned and Swindled" deals with the controversial real-life story of a woman who is bilked out of her life savings by her husband — a man who has married 82 women for the same purpose.

And in the recent past, we've had the controversial and sensitive "Secrets of a Married Man," which wasn't quite the real-life story of a man who starts going to see prostitutes because his wife is too busy with her work — but which could be — and the controversial "He's Not Your Son," which wasn't quite the real-life story of how hospital bureaucracy is responsible for giving a couple the wrong baby — but which could be.

Now, forget the fact that as far as controversy goes, each of these runs somewhat short of Hayden Fry's decision concerning next week's starting running backs. Forget the fact that each of them presents women as either helpless victims or culpable in the crimes because of their careers. Forget even the fact that 20 years ago, the plot of "He's Not Your Son" was the basis of a particularly funny episode of "The Dick Van Dyke Show."

CONSIDER INSTEAD THIS: Both the reason for and the method of TV-films like "The Burning Bed" and "He's Not Your Son" are the same as those of Time and Life and People magazines, of Rupert's press and USA Today, of "60 Minutes" and "20/20" — of things we've known and loved for decades and things we evidently can't live without.

It's only human nature to want as much information as we can get in a package that's as attractive and miniature as possible. It's only human nature to pay more attention to that information when it's connected to another representative of that species. It's only American nature to pay further attention when that representative is as beautiful as possible.

In other words, it's as much our fault as it is that of the media so many love to blame for every societal ill that we give Farrah Fawcett and the secrets of married men the time of day — or night — we do.

But when, with the help of those media, we start to consider the story of Farrah Fawcett more significant than the story of Francine Hughes, it's time to call the whole thing off.

Maybe it's time for a real-life, controversial film called "The Torched Television." Any volunteers for Bryant Gumbel?

Stopping the homeliest of crimes

By Pat Meyer

THIS WEEK HAS BEEN designated National Domestic Violence Awareness Week. The major focus of the week is community education to continue to call attention to the problem of wife- and woman-battering.

We have learned a lot in the ten years since the issue of battered wives went public. We see more clearly the dynamics of battering, the obstacles women face in breaking out of the violence cycle, and how pervasive the problem is. But we are still a long way from stopping the violence that women experience in intimate relationships.

One step in stopping violence is to confront myths. One of the most dangerous myths is that women like being beaten. We know from our daily experience at the Domestic Violence Project shelter that women stay in violent relationships for lots of reasons: because they think the man means it when he says he will stop; because they're financially dependent; because they think they will get hurt worse if they leave; because they have nowhere safe to go. They do not stay because they like it.

ANOTHER MESSAGE we're finding not to be true is that battering starts after a couple gets married or begins living together. Studies done on college campuses indicate that one out of every two dating couples report at least one incident of physical violence.

Our experience at the shelter and with the Rape Victim Advocacy Program bears this out. We have contact with a number of women students who report that they are battered

One of the most important steps in stopping violence is to identify potential warning signs. This means women learning to spot trouble signs in relationships and getting help early. This means men starting to examine their behavior and taking responsibility for it.

Guest opinion

and/or sexually assaulted by someone they are dating.

One of the most important steps in stopping violence is to identify potential warning signs. This means women learning to spot trouble signs in relationships and getting help early. This means men starting to examine their behavior and taking responsibility for it.

If someone hits you while you're dating, it will not stop if you get married or start living together. It will get worse unless you get help.

Other factors we ask women to consider that seem to indicate potential for violence are:

• Relationship history. If this man has been abusive to others in the past, he will be abusive with you. He may tell you that you are different from other women, but our experience shows us that violence is addictive behavior. Unless he gets help, he will batter again. When a potential partner talks about past relationships, find out what happened. If he is vague, ask others who have known him what happened.

• Frustration level. If this is a man who gets easily upset over small things and shows his anger by hitting or throwing things, you need to examine this. Batters have low tolerance for frustration and inadequate methods of coping with it.

• Alcohol/drug use. While alcohol or drugs don't cause violence, there is a high correlation between alcohol/drug abuse and violence. Especially in dating relationships, it is important to notice whether or not your interactions revolve around drinking situations, whether this person consistently uses a lot of drugs, etc.

• Coercion. Another factor to consider is how well this person negotiates with you about activities. Ask yourself if he listens to what you want or finds methods always to get his way. Can he hear you say no? Do you find yourself afraid for any reason not to go along with what he wants? Is there room for compromise and for you to say how you feel?

• Jealousy. One of the biggest problems that women report to us is their partners' jealousy and suspicion of them and their contacts with others.

Students report that their partners worry about people in their classes, at their jobs or in social settings being a threat to the relationship.

If your partner has trouble trusting you or asks you to account for where you go and who you talk to, you need to watch out. All the reassurance in the world will not fix his inability to trust.

• Attitudes toward women. Finally, pay attention to your partner's messages about women. Batters often see women as needing to be kept in line. If your partner seems angry about assertive women, talks about "appropriate" behavior for women, or makes derogatory remarks about women, you need to examine how this is affecting you. Often women find themselves attempting to live up to expectations at the expense of their own rights and needs.

IF YOU ARE A WOMAN reading this and have concerns, help is available. We encourage you to talk with someone. The Domestic Violence Project has a 24-hour phone line. The number is 351-1043. If you are a man reading this and recognize some of the behaviors listed as yours, help is available. The Iowa City Crisis Center, 351-0140, maintains a list of available services.

We can not hope to put an end to violence until all of us begin to examine our relationships and to demand respect and support from those with whom we are involved. We ask you to join with us in working toward violence-free lives for women. For more information about services or the week's events, please call 351-1043.

Padres complete dream, Cub nightmare

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The San Diego Padres now know what heaven is all about.

Talk about your impossible dreams. The Padres beat the seemingly unbeatable man, Rick Sutcliffe, Sunday and defeated the Chicago Cubs 6-3 behind a four-run seventh-inning rally to win their first pennant in their 16-year history.

San Diego also became the first National League team to win a best-of-five playoff after losing the first two games. The Padres play the Detroit Tigers in the World Series, beginning Tuesday night at San Diego. Jack Morris will pitch for the Tigers and Mark Thurmond for the Padres.

The clinching victory was aided by a Cubs' collapse that mirrored the frustrations the franchise has endured for 39 years.

"WE GOT SOME breaks," admitted San Diego manager Dick Williams, "and we took advantage of them. Then everything fell into place. I always had hope we would get to Sutcliffe but he had stymied us everytime we went out there."

Held for five innings to only two hits by Sutcliffe, who had won 15 straight games, including a 13-0 triumph in the series opener, the Padres began their comeback by scoring twice in the sixth on sacrifice flies by Graig Nettles and Terry Kennedy to pull within 3-2.

Then, in the seventh, the clear blue California sky fell on the Cubs. Sutcliffe walked Carmelo Martinez to start the inning and Garry Templeton sacrificed. Pinch-hitter Tim Flannery, batting for winning reliever Craig Leferts, grounded to first baseman Durham. The ball went between Durham's legs and Martinez scored the tying run.

"WE WERE LOOKING for one break and we got it," said Steve Garvey, the series' Most Valuable Player. "Bull (Durham) had an excellent season and he's a fine first baseman but the ball never came up. It stayed down and was the break that kept us going."

Alan Wiggins then dumped a single into short left and with the record-setting crowd of 58,359 on its feet screaming, Tony Gwynn ripped a bouncer over the glove of second baseman

Ryne Sandberg for a two-run double.

Garvey, the hero of Saturday night's 7-5 victory with five RBI, singled in Gwynn to all but end Chicago's hope for its first pennant since 1945.

"IT WASN'T THAT I was really hit that hard until Garvey's hit," said Sutcliffe, who was 16-1 with the Cubs this season and is the leading candidate for the National League's Cy Young Award. "They happened to find the holes, that's baseball. I'm not looking for excuses, I made some mistakes and we lost the game."

Cubs manager Jim Frey said he had no intention of pulling his ace right-hander early in the inning.

"I can't deny the fact that this man is one of the major reasons we got to this position," Frey said. "He was still throwing well up there. If either of the balls had been caught, we would have been out of the situation. The second ball (Gwynn's double) could've been a double play. It was hit hard and took a bad hop."

WITH RICH GOSSAGE pitching the ninth and the crowd cheering every pitch, the Padres' ace reliever began by getting Durham on a fly to Gwynn in right. Keith Moreland kept Cubs' hopes alive with a single to right but Gossage got Ron Cey on a pop to second and Jody Davis on a force out to end the game.

The Padres mobbed Gossage while hundreds of fans ran on the field with no police to stop them. Fireworks erupted beyond the centerfield fence as the fans stood in unison and applauded wildly.

Chicago began as if it would blow out the Padres as Durham smashed a two-run homer in the first inning and Davis belted a solo shot to lead off the second. Both homers came off Eric Show, who was tagged for five homers in his two playoff starts. But they proved to be the last runs for the Cubs.

Suddenly, their bats went silent. Over the final seven innings, they managed just two hits off four relievers and from the fourth through the seventh innings did not get a runner on base.

Payton passes Brown's record

United Press International

Walter Payton got everything he wanted from Sunday's game — he broke Jim Brown's career rushing record and his Chicago Bears won.

Payton rushed for 154 yards and one touchdown in 32 carries to give the Bears a 20-7 victory over the New Orleans Saints in Chicago.

Jim McMahon threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Dennis McKinnon and Bob Thomas kicked two field goals to improve Chicago's mark to 4-2. The Saints fell to 3-3.

Payton entered the game 67 yards shy of Brown's record and broke it on the second play of the second half. The 2,795th rushing attempt of his career was good for six yards, allowing him to get past Brown's mark of 12,312 yards that had stood since 1965.

PAYTON WENT OVER to New Orleans coach Bum Phillips to shake hands and then was mobbed by his teammates who had come on the field to congratulate him.

Payton scored on a one-yard run with three seconds left in the first half to put Chicago ahead 13-7. His 100-yard plus performance — his fifth straight this year — was his 59th in his career, breaking Brown's mark of 58.

Payton's total yardage improved to 12,400 in 2,809 carries and it was his consistency on the ground that enabled Chicago to control the ball.

"I want to make a statement, and it will be my last. My motivation was for those who tried and failed," Payton said. "It was dedicated to the (David) Overstreet, the (Joe) Delaney and (Brian) Piccolos."

THE EVENT WAS witnessed by a sellout crowd at Soldier Field that had come to pay tribute to Payton.

"I was so nervous, so very nervous that I was shaking," Payton said. "I'm just glad this whole thing with the cameras and mikes is over with. I'm also glad that we won the game."

Payton received a call from President Ronald Reagan after the game from Air Force One, where Reagan was en route to a debate with Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale.

Payton said Reagan likened breaking the record to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's breaking Wilt Chamberlain's scoring mark, and to Hank Aaron eclipsing Babe Ruth's home run mark. At the end of the conversation, a relieved Payton said, "Give my best to Nancy."

HIS TEAMMATES also paid tribute to Payton.

"Just said when he came back the huddle, 'Let's go on and win the game,'" said quarterback Jim McMahon.

Offensive lineman Jimbo Covert said Payton did not want to have the spotlight on his new record.

"Of course he wanted it, but he was more interested in winning

Hawks maul Wildcats with new defense

By Steve Batterson
Sports Editor

EVANSTON, Ill. — It seemed like yesteryear to Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry as a strong defensive effort let Iowa manhandle Northwestern 31-3 Saturday at Dyche Stadium.

The Hawkeyes held the Wildcats to 49 yards in total offense, an Iowa school record. The previous mark of 67 yards was set in 1955 by the Hawkeyes against Kansas State.

Iowa limited three Northwestern quarterbacks to just seven completions in 26 attempts for only 30 yards while unveiling a new defensive scheme. The Hawkeyes sent four players after the Northwestern quarterback while allowing the other seven defenders to stay back in the zone.

"OUR DEFENSE PLAYED a lot like it did the latter part of last season," Fry said. "It was truly one of the better defensive efforts on our part... We shut 'em down. If they didn't get over 30 yards in offense we must be doing something right."

"We were sitting on their receivers," Fry said. "We knew they'd see the Illinois film and try to do the same thing... It was to our advantage to change things completely."

And the move worked. It also kept the Hawkeye defense from overlooking the Wildcats after a 21-16 win over Illinois the previous Saturday.

"We sort of wanted to overlook them," Hawkeye defensive back Keith Hunter said, "but the coaching staff wouldn't let us. We had a hard week of practices. Their quarterback is good and we were on him all day."

NORTHWESTERN STARTER Sandy Schwab was taken out of the game in the third quarter with what Wildcat Coach Dennis Green described as a bruised shoulder. The Wildcats' top reserve, Mike Greenfield, was taken out in the fourth quarter and Green said the freshman had been hit so hard he couldn't remember his locker combination following the game.

Just as the Iowa defense went after the Wildcats, Northwestern was successful in getting into the Hawkeye backfield — dropping Iowa for losses adding up to 85 yards and sacking quarterback Chuck Long six times — three times by linebacker Alex Moyer.

"So far, this has been my roughest day as a player," Long said. "We were kind of lax out there and we weren't as emotional as we should have been... It was just one of those days that happen. I'm glad it happened against Northwestern rather than against Ohio State or Michigan."

FRY SAID SATURDAY that he was not happy with Iowa's offensive performance in that area. "We certainly didn't play good football," Fry said.

Green thought otherwise. "I think we just got outplayed by a better football team," he said. "I think defensively we played very well, but they just had some big plays on special teams that really hurt us."

"Offensively, we're just not playing well enough to win a Big Ten game," Green said.

Despite the inconsistencies in the Iowa offense, the Hawkeyes were able to accumulate 398 yards in total offense.

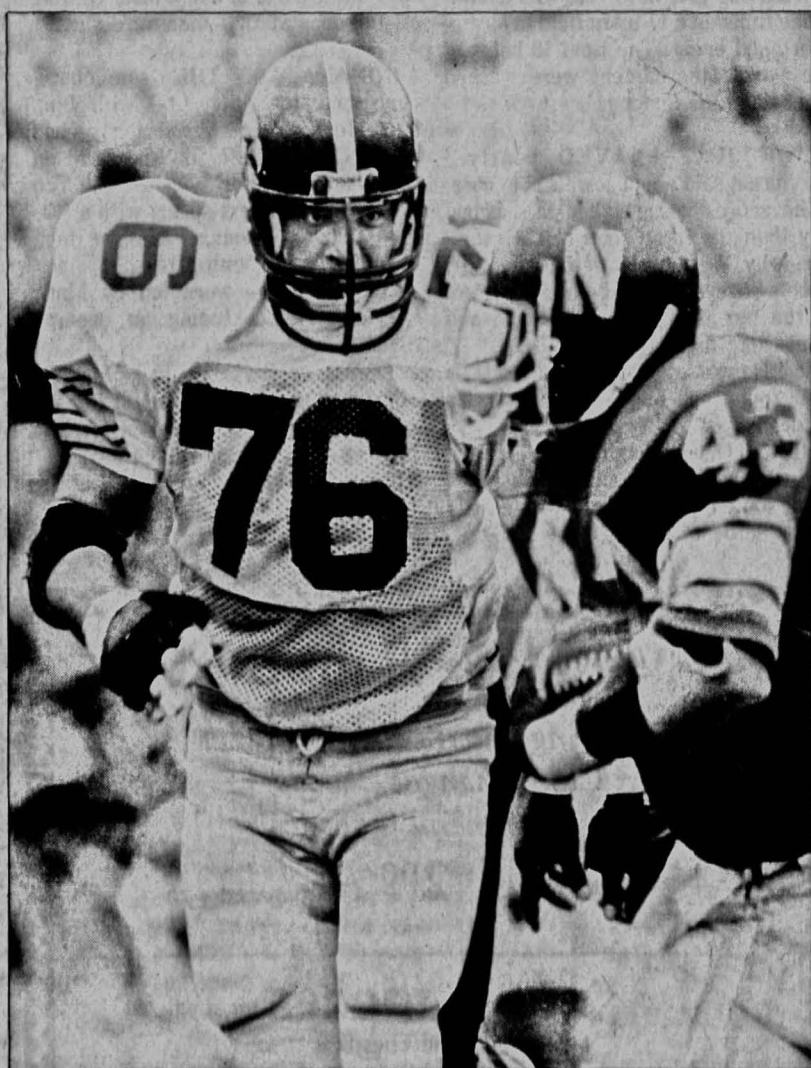

NORTHWESTERN HELPED Iowa set up its first touchdown when freshman punt returner Brett Whitley fumbled a Gary Kostrubala punt. Hawkeye Craig Clark recovered on the six-yard line and two plays later, tailback Ronnie Harmon dove over the right tackle for Iowa's first score of the afternoon.

"It's important to get up early like that," Fry said. "It really takes the crowd out of the game."

On Iowa's next possession, Harmon, who rushed for 121 yards in 24 carries

Emotion keys tough Northwestern play

By J.B. Glass

EVANSTON, Ill. — It was a "Purple wall of Wildcats" that stopped Chicago dead for 57 minutes in 1924.

Then Chicago's Bob Curley split the line and declared the wild, enthusiastic and emotional purple team to appropriately be nicknamed the Wildcats.

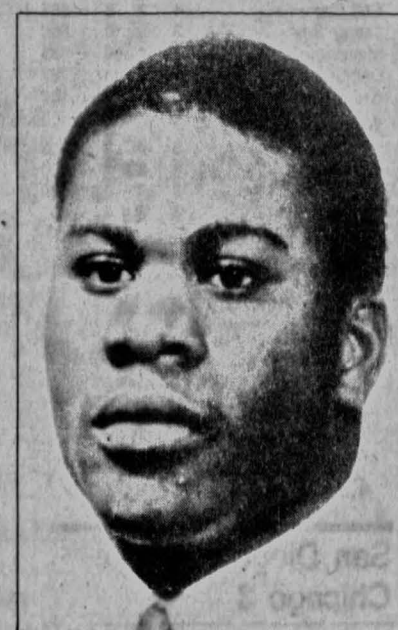

That wild emotion surfaced again last Saturday at Dyche Stadium despite another losing Wildcat effort, a large contingent of Iowa fans and a charged Iowa defense.

The best evidence of Northwestern's emotion was on the defense, despite what the statistics said.

"I THINK WE PUT the pressure on them and made them struggle," Wildcat all-Big Ten defensive tackle Keith Cruise said. "You have to play with emotion — hey, it's the only way to play."

Northwestern compiled 10 tackles for losses of 54 yards. Although not as good as Iowa's No. 1 defensive unit, the Wildcats' unit was past the offensive line and in the face of Iowa quarterback Chuck Long all day long. "They deserve a lot of credit," Long said about the Wildcat 11.

Co-captain outside linebacker Alex Moyer, one of seven starting seniors on defense, led the defense which "the second-best back in the league," Ronnie Harmon for losses six times. For

Alex Moyer

Moyer, five of his nine stops were for losses and he had three quarterback sacks.

"FRANKLY I JUST don't think the tackle was really too good and the backs didn't want to block," Moyer said about Iowa's "wounded" tackle Mike Haight. "Myself and Keith Cruise designed the stunts in the pass rush, so that enabled me to get in there and make a couple of big plays."

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said Sunday that Haight has only been working out one day each week since the opening week of the season because of a back

Doak will run in Boston race today

Nan Doak, a former Iowa women's cross country runner, competes in the Bonnie Bell 10K race today in Boston.

Doak, who will be running track for Iowa during the indoor and outdoor seasons, will compete against the likes of Betty Springs who defeated Doak last season to win the NCAA cross country championships.

Doak has a best of 34 minutes, one second in the 10,000 meters on the track and she will be shooting to break 34 minutes.

"It's hard to judge the difference between the roads and track," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said, "but my guess is that she should run in the 33s."

Umpires return to the diamond

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Striking major league umpires worked the final game of the National League playoffs Sunday and said they'll return to work for the World Series providing baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth serves as an arbitrator in their money dispute.

The commissioner's office released a statement saying some of the basic understandings of the arbitration were worked out Sunday and a final session was to be held Monday.

A condition of the arbitration was that the umpires work the World Series.

The umpires are seeking a lump sum of $500,000 to be placed in a pool for all umpires, including those not selected to work post-season games. Baseball has countered with an offer that is more than $200,000 less.

Umpires John Kibler, Paul Runge, John McSherry and Doug Harvey worked Sunday's final National League playoff game between the Chicago Cubs and San Diego Padres.

Peete weathers the storm for title

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — The storm clouds parted and sunshine reigned Sunday for Calvin Peete.

Peete ended a season-long dry spell and captured the $350,000 Texas Open by three strokes over Bruce Lietzke.

"I played very well today," said Peete, who picked up $63,000 for his eighth career PGA victory. "I played with a lot of patience and kept the ball in play. That kept me in there."

Peete fired four birdies for a 33-33-66, finishing with a 14-under-par total of 266.

Peete hit his third birdie — a 15-foot putt — on the 14th hole. He said he knew then he had the tournament in hand with just four holes to play.

"I felt at that time all I needed to do was par until the end," he said. The victory places Peete at No. 24 on the 1984 money list with $232,124.

On the line

With the big upsets by Michigan and Michigan State, nobody was able to come up with a perfect ballot in The Daily Iowan's On the Line contest. In fact, four people tied with one mistake.

The winner, by virtue of his tiebreaker pick was none other than John O'Brien. His only miss was the Michigan State upset over Michigan. For his efforts, he will receive a keg from the good folks at Tycoon I.C., that swinging new bar located on E. Washington St.

In the race among the DI staff, Staff Writer Jill Hokinson was the big winner this week, coming in with an 8-2 record while Sports Editor Steve Batterson and Assistant Sports Editor Mike Condon both finished at 7-3.

For the season, Condon is maintaining his two-game lead. His 36-13 record is ahead of Batterson and Hokinson, both currently at 34-15 on the season.

Look for this week's games in Tuesday's DI when the good folks at Mumm's will be the provider of the prized keg for the winner. Remember to get your ballots in early and who knows, you may be as lucky as John O'Brien was this week.

'Dominating' Hawks snap losses at five

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

By totally dominating its opponents, the Iowa field hockey team snapped a five-game losing streak with victories against Michigan State and Purdue over the weekend.

Iowa defeated the Spartans Friday, 5-0, and then handed the Boilermakers a loss Saturday, 3-0. The two wins increased the Hawkeyes' record to 6-4-2 overall and 2-1 in the Big Ten.

"Iowa's back on the winning streak and I'm really happy to see it," Hawkeye Coach Judith Davidson said. "We needed a couple of wins like this to get us going."

Using a new alignment of 3-3-3-1 instead of a 4-3-2-1-1 system, the Hawkeyes were able to dominate on offense in both games.

AGAINST THE SPARTANS, Iowa took 28 shots on goal and attempted 20 penalty corners. Michigan State had only one shot on goal and two penalty corners.

In the game with Purdue, the Hawkeyes had 37 shots on goal compared to nine by the Boilermakers. The Hawkeyes had 10 penalty corners and Purdue had three.

"The system seemed to work for us, at least offensively," Davidson said. "We had a lot more support for the ball."

The Hawkeyes jumped out to an early lead against the Spartans by scoring in the first minute and seven seconds of the game. Patti Wanner, a left back, scored Iowa's first goal with a hard, low shot to the right corner of the cage.

The Iowa coach said with that first goal coming so early in the game, it sparked the team to play well and with confidence.

MARCIA PANKRATZ scored next for Iowa at the 22 minute, 15 second mark on a cross pass by Deb Brickey. Then Liz Tchou connected on a penalty corner at 31:00 to make the score, 3-0 at the half. Tchou was assisted by Mary Koboldt and Brickey.

Tchou added two more goals to the Hawkeyes' total in the second half. The freshman from South New Jersey was successful on a penalty corner with assists by Koboldt and Brickey at 16:24. She then scored another goal later in the period with an assist by Kim Herrmann.

Davidson said her Iowa team could have scored four or five more goals in the game but the Spartan goalie, Karen Sabar, "made some incredible saves."

Marcia Pankratz

Field hockey

IOWA THEN FACED its toughest of the two opponents Saturday when they took on Purdue. Davidson said the Boilermakers were a stronger team and played a very defensive game against the Hawkeyes.

"All 11 of their players were in the striking circle, and it was very difficult to get the ball through," the Iowa coach said. "In some ways, it kept us from scoring."

Although the Boilermakers were successful in limiting Iowa's scoring, it was very hard for them to generate their own offensive play with all 11 players at the defensive end, Davidson said.

Davidson added Purdue's goalie Penny Fennel also did a good job of cutting down the Hawkeyes' scoring potential. Fennel had 28 saves in the game.

Pankratz teamed up with Brickey to score Iowa's first goal at 18:00 in the first half. Pankratz put the ball in the cage on a cross pass by Brickey.

In the second half, Koboldt took a pass from Lee Ann Detwiler to score at 5:42. Then Tchou added a third goal for the Hawkeyes on a penalty corner.

The Iowa coach said the two games were also the first time since the beginning of the season that the Hawkeyes played two intense halves of field hockey. "Up until this weekend, we would play one good half and then in the second half lose our poise."

Poor weekend outing displeases Thomason

By Steve Batterson
Sports Editor

It just wasn't the kind of weekend Iowa women's golf Coach Diane Thomason wanted.

The Hawkeyes were coming off of an impressive performance at the UNI Invitational and the Iowa coach was looking for big things at last weekend's Lady Northern Intercollegiate at Bloomington, Ind.

What she got, however, was a 12th-place finish in a 17-team field in a rain-shortened event. The final 18 holes of the 54-hole tournament were washed out by rain on Sunday.

"WE JUST PLAYED poorly," Thomason said about Iowa's 661 score. "The scores were higher the second day than the first, but I'm not really sure why. We had a lot of big mistakes; double bogeys and not being able to get to the pin as well as we should and things like that."

The Hawkeyes shot a 328 in Friday's first round and ballooned to a 333 on Saturday.

"I would have thought we would have played better," Thomason said. "I think some of the players were a little tired. Some of them just weren't as prepared as they could have been."

The Hawkeyes had trouble on the greens at the Indiana University Championship Golf Course. "The team seemed to like the course in general," Thomason said, "but we did have problems with the greens. They played slow and we had to adapt after coming off the ones at UNI that were slick."

INDIANA WON THE team championship with a 612 total with Ohio State firing a 614, good for second place. Illinois State finished third on the course that will host the Big Ten Championships next spring with a 634.

Wisconsin's Monica Tamayo took medalist honors with a 149.

The Hawkeyes were led by Mary Baercke's 162, including an opening round 77.

Thomason was pleased that the Hawkeyes were able to defeat Big Ten foe Minnesota. "We let some teams beat us that shouldn't have beat us," Thomason said. "Some of the Big Ten teams like Purdue slipped by us and that shouldn't have happened."

Hawkeyes continue improved play with 8-1 rout over Western Illinois

By Mike Condon
Assistant Sports Editor

Although he won't let on too much, one gets the feeling Iowa women's tennis Coach Charley Darley is happy with the way things have been going for his squad so far this fall.

The Hawkeyes upped their dual record to 14 Saturday with a convincing 8-1 win over Western Illinois in the Recreation Building.

Darley continues to impress on his players certain strategies, not placing emphasis on wins and losses. However, the Iowa players are picking up their coach's theories while putting victories in the book.

"We did have some impressive performances," Darley said. "What made it more impressive was the fact that we had some people that weren't 100 percent physically and they still played well."

SOPHOMORE KIM MARTIN played despite a virus that has her feeling weak and Pennie Wohlford experienced knee tenderness playing on the hard surface in the Rec Building.

But looking at the scores, it appeared both were in tip-top condition. Martin made quick work of Keri Lenz, 6-1, 6-0 at No. 6 while Wohlford topped Mary Pat Donovan 6-4, 6-3.

Tennis

"I was pleased with the effort and the intensity level was high," Darley said. "The players, for the most part, kept themselves on top and didn't play sloppy."

Iowa swept the singles with only Jenny Reuter being pushed. Iowa's No. 2 player was pushed to a third-set tiebreaker by Dana Weber before escaping with a 7-4 win in the tiebreaker.

AT THAT POINT, Darley decided to pull Wohlford and her partner Michele Conlon out of the doubles, replacing the duo with Lisa Rozenboom and Dale Kevorkian at No. 1.

"Dale and Lisa made a strong effort against a strong team," Darley said of the duo's 6-3, 6-0 loss to Weber and Leslie Shoemaker. "It was a tough situation for them and they played aggressively."

Martin continued her stellar play in doubles, converting a couple of spectacular winners to keep herself and partner Reuter alive in a second-set tiebreaker, which they eventually won 7-3.

Darley did admit after the match that he learned something the prior weekend at the Northwestern Invitational. "I really found something out at Northwestern," he said. "I realized that the players have to feel security with a certain type of game or the whole thing can fall apart. We had a couple of players lose confidence and that's not good. The changes I made may have been too much of a change for some of them."

WESTERWIND COACH Michelle Gelfman, whose team dropped to 10-7 on the season, was impressed with the Hawkeyes. "Conlon is a darn tough player," she said. "They have lost a couple of good players from the top of their line-up but they are loaded with depth at the bottom. Their doubles looked a little shaky though."

"However, we expected to give them a better match," she added. "Our No. 2 player hung real tough against Reuter and should have beat her. But Reuter got it together at the end when she had to."

There will be little rest for the Hawkeyes this week. Darley's squad will leave for the Nebraska Invitational Wednesday and begin play on Thursday in Lincoln, Neb. Iowa finished a strong second at the meet last year.

Hawks slowed by nagging injuries; take fifth-place at Purdue Invitational

By Brad Zimanek
Staff Writer

All basketball teams usually start with a so-called starting five. Friday at the Purdue Invitational, the Iowa women's cross country team had an "only five."

Iowa had only five runners run which is just enough to qualify them for a team score because of assorted nagging injuries to the Iowa runners. Iowa finished in fifth place out of seven teams with a score of 106.

Illinois placed first with 35 points while Michigan was runner-up with 42 points. Northwestern finished third with 76 points and Purdue finished fourth with 95 points.

"We had some people out," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said. "Jenny (Spangler) and Laura (Haggerty) were out with muscle strains."

"WE HAD A couple of injury problems in Jenny and Laura but they should be back,"

Cross country

Anne Dobrowolski said.

The runners who did compete for Iowa were Dobrowolski, Maribeth See, Sherri Suppelsa, Kristin Winjum and Janet Wodek.

Dobrowolski led the Hawkeyes by finishing in third place with a time of 17 minutes, 45 seconds.

"It went pretty good," Dobrowolski said. "I felt really good and I liked the course and I beat a girl from Illinois (Ruth Sternemann) who beat me last week."

"I thought Anne, Maribeth and Kristin looked pretty tough Friday," Hassard said. "Janet and Sherri seemed to be very tight while everybody seemed to be a little tight. I feel we need to compete better and we're capable of running better."

SEE FINISHED 21ST with a time of 19:02. Wodek was 23rd in 19:06. Suppelsa was 26th in 19:19 and Winjum was 33rd in 20:05 to round out the scoring for Iowa.

"We didn't do too bad," Suppelsa said. "We only had five runners and a lot of our top runners weren't there and we mainly wanted to see the course and we were a little bit tight."

"We dropped a meet and we'll train through to the Big Tens," Hassard said. "We're going to be working on speed work and going over the type of course we'll be seeing at the district meets."

Iowa will now be away from competition, preparing for the Big Ten Championships on Oct. 27 at Purdue. The meet will be held on the same course as Friday's meet.

"Right now we have no meet scheduled," Dobrowolski said, "and we might not have a meet right up until Big Tens."

"He (Hassard) might put us in a small area meet," Suppelsa said, "but we might just train through to the Big Tens."

Poor showing concerns Wheeler

By Jeff Stratton
Staff Writer

The Iowa men's cross country team found out Saturday at the Purdue Invitational just how tough the Big Ten Conference will be this season.

The Hawkeyes finished fourth in the 10-team meet, but finished behind Michigan State, the team thought to be the second weakest in the Big Ten this year.

"Michigan State is the ninth-place team in the conference this season," Iowa men's cross country Coach Ted Wheeler said. "We have problems because they beat us handily."

Host Purdue won the meet with 25 points, followed by Minnesota in second with 53 points. Michigan State took third with 67 points, and Iowa, with 103 points finished fourth. Indiana State was fifth with 110 points and Butler was sixth with 162 points. Valparaiso took seventh with 235 points, followed by Millikin (260), DePaul (269) and Wabash College (272).

INDIVIDUALLY, Minnesota's Dave Morrison won the race in a time of 24 minutes, 37 seconds. Morrison's teammate,

Cross country

John Kromer, finished second in 24:58 and Purdue's Jim Nagle took third with a time of 25:06. Michigan State's Mark Kavalich finished fourth in 25:09 and Chris Novak of Purdue took fifth place with a time of 25:09.

Iowa's top place winner was John Dobbs, who finished 13th in the meet with a time of 25:37. Danny Waters took 15th in 25:45 and Andy Wiese finished 20th in 26:02. Al Green finished 26th with a time of 26:16 and Bill Tieson rounded out the Hawkeyes' top five, taking 31st in a time of 26:39.

PURDUE MEN'S cross country Coach Mike Poehlein said that his team's balance was the key to the Boilermakers' win. "I'm pleased with the victory," Poehlein said. "We had good balance, and that is what this team is built on. Our four and five runners didn't run well, but our six and seven men did. We didn't have any gaps. That is the best ingredient on our team this year."

Wheeler said the Purdue Invitational was a big meet, but not a tough one because of some of the smaller schools that ran. However, Wheeler said Iowa needed to run a meet like this one.

"I think basically that we needed a race like this one to see where we are," Wheeler said.

WHEELER SAID he came out of the race with mixed feelings on his team's performance. "The times were reasonable, but we didn't have the right psychological approach," he said. "We ran the race as individuals as opposed to a collective effort. This reflects a lack of team effort. Our second group of runners didn't comply with our plans. We have to run in groups or we won't challenge anyone."

The disturbing thing about Iowa's performance, Wheeler said, was its finish in comparison to Michigan State. "When the next weakest team walks all over you can't be pleased a bit," he said.

Next up for the Hawkeyes is a meet with Minnesota this weekend. Wheeler said he looks at this meet as one last opportunity to gain some respect. "This weekend gives us one more chance to establish some credibility at 8,000 meters," Wheeler said.

Purdue defeats Ohio State, 28-23; Spartans 'frustrate' Michigan, 19-7

United Press International

What is so rare as a day in October when both Michigan and Ohio State lose in the Big Ten?

What may be even rarer or harder to believe is that Purdue, picked by most for a second division finish in the conference, actually is leading the league with a 3-0 record in the race for the Rose Bowl.

The Boilermakers upset previously unbeaten Ohio State 28-23 at home Saturday to go to 3-0 in the tight conference race. Michigan missed a chance to share the lead when it was upset 19-7 at home by Michigan State.

Iowa, floundering two weeks ago, found itself back in the hunt with a 31-3 pasting of Northwestern. Illinois, ineligible for the Rose Bowl this season but still with a chance at defending its conference crown, whipped Wisconsin 22-6 to take sole possession of second place with a 3-1 mark.

IN NIGHT ACTION, Indiana remained winless after Minnesota, picking up its first league win in two years, edged the Hoosiers 33-24.

Purdue's startling win over the Buckeyes means no club in the league will go undefeated this year. Few figured any team could — but few thought the Boilermakers would be the only team with an unbeaten conference record.

Ohio State led 17-7 early in the third quarter before the Purdue rally.

Quarterback Jim Everett completed eight of 10 passes in the second half for 161 yards and two touchdowns to send the Boilermakers to the win.

"We could have folded our tents, but they stayed in there and fought," Purdue Coach Leon Burnett said. "It's amazing that we could stay on the field with them. Their offense is so big and experienced."

ceded Purdue, which meets Iowa next week, beat his club on the "big play."

"Purdue capitalized on a lot of big plays," Bruce said. "They stopped us on two big drives with key interceptions. Purdue is a good team and there was super play on both sides."

Michigan State used a strong defense to frustrate Michigan and post its first win over the Wolverines since 1978.

"When you have something odd happen like this, it's something to keep your mouth shut about," Perles said. "The victory is enough. It says it all."

The Spartans had dedicated the game to Michigan State basketball Coach Jud Heathcote, who is recovering from a recent heart attack.

THE SPARTANS WERE led by a one-yard touchdown by Carl Butler, an 87-yard punt return for a touchdown by Bobby Morris and a pair of field goals from Ralf Mojsiejenko.

The loss was especially costly for the Wolverines. They lost their quarterback, junior Jim Harbaugh, for the season with a broken arm he sustained while trying to recover a third-quarter fumble.

"We'll have to regroup," Coach Bo Schembechler said. "It's a challenge because we've never been in this situation before."

Chris White booted five field goals and Illinois' defense did the rest in the Illini win over Wisconsin. White tied a conference mark with the the kicks, three of which came from 40 yards out or farther.

Coach Mike White, Chris' dad, said the number of field goals means Illinois should have been able to score more than one touchdown.

"WE WERE SETTTLING for three points. It's nice to say that they added up, but we still have a very long way to go," White said. "When we get inside the 10-yard line, we hope to come away with more points."

Jack Trudeau threw for 301 yards and one touchdown.

White booted field goals of 48, 46, 40, 27 and 19 yards.

Minnesota ended its 19-game losing streak in the conference behind Tony Hunter's three touchdowns and Dwayne McMullen's 79-yard touchdown reception.

"Most of these football players didn't account for the other losses," Minnesota Coach Lou Holtz said. "They're just glad to get this off their backs."

Hurricanes whip Irish in downpour behind Highsmith's four touchdowns

United Press International

Don't blame the Miami Hurricanes if they pray for rain the next time they play.

Powered by fullback Alonzo Highsmith's four touchdowns — two by land and two by air — No. 16 ranked Miami topped No. 15 Notre Dame 31-13 in a game played Saturday night in a downpour at South Bend, Ind.

The win lifted the Hurricanes to 5-2 on the year and marked their first victory in seven visits to Notre Dame Stadium.

"I never dreamed of four touchdowns," said Highsmith, a sophomore fullback who played defensive end all through high school. "We were looking forward to playing here because we'd never won here. Winning makes it that much better."

MIAMI'S BERNIE KOSAR outgunned Steve Buerlein of Notre Dame despite heavy rainfall the last three quarters, completing 20 of 29 passes for 205 yards without an interception and throwing touchdown passes of one and four yards to Highsmith.

Buerlein bruised his passing hand early in the game, which may have led to his two fumbled center snaps and two first-half interceptions. He finished with 16 completions on 29 attempts for 141 yards.

Miami trailed 10-7 at the half, but a muffed exchange between Highsmith and Kosar on the first play of the second half gave Notre Dame's John Carney a chance to extend the bulge to six with a 39-yard field goal. A personal foul call killed the Irish hopes for a touchdown on the exchange.

"SEVEN WOULD HAVE made a big difference then as far as strategy is concerned," Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust said.

Bernie Kosar

Kosar came back on the Hurricanes' next possession, hitting on all three of his passes to account for 43 yards on a 79-yard drive.

Highsmith scored from a yard away, and from two yards out on Miami's next possession after a disputed pass interference call nullified a Notre Dame interception in the end zone.

"I couldn't see the call from where I was," Faust said. "I didn't see it but it was a crucial call."

Mark Seelig, substituting for the suspended Greg Cox, hit a 27-yard field goal, the first of his career, to put the game out of reach with 6:59 left. He had missed a 52-yarder in the first half.

KOSAR'S 40-YARD PASS to Ed Brown set up the final touchdown of the game, a one-yard toss to Highsmith with 1:13 remaining.

Irish tailback Allen Pinkett had another frustrating week, with just 57 yards on 13 attempts. Pinkett, who set an Irish record for 100-yard games last year, has yet to run for more than 70 in 1984.

Miami plays at Cincinnati next week while the Fighting Irish will host Air Force.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 1 Texas defeated Rice 38-13, No. 2 Ohio State was upset by Purdue, 28-23, No. 4 Washington topped Oregon State 19-7, No. 6 Brigham Young blasted Colorado State 52-9, No. 7 Florida tied Memphis State 17-17, No. 8 Oklahoma State was defeated by No. 9 Nebraska 17-3, No. 11 Michigan lost to Michigan State 19-7, No. 12 Georgia Tech lost to North Carolina State 27-22, No. 14 Penn State edged Maryland 25-24, No. 17 Vanderbilt lost to Tulane 27-23, No. 18 Auburn beat Mississippi 17-13, No. 19 Georgia topped Alabama 24-14, No. 20 Iowa beat Northwestern 30-3 and the other team tied for No. 20, South Carolina, defeated Kansas State 49-17.

No. 3 Oklahoma, No. 5 Boston College, No. 10 Southern Methodist and No. 13 Louisiana State were idle.

At Lincoln, Neb., Shane Swanson returned a punt 49 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter to snap a 3-3 tie and lift Nebraska. Swanson fielded Cary Cooper's punt near midfield, broke to the middle of the field and raced down the sideline after eluding one last Oklahoma State player. Nebraska sealed the win with 1:49 to go when alternate quarterback Travis Turner hit split end Jason Gamble with a 64-yard touchdown pass to make it 17-3.

Pianists show ease with music, selves

By Kate Van Orden
Staff Writer

THERE WAS not a moment's disappointment in Thursday night's performance by the Los Angeles Piano Quartet in Hancher Auditorium. The concert was the first in the Hancher Chamber Music Series, which looks to be consistently good, bringing to Iowa City this fall performances by such artists as Emanuel Ax and Yo-Yo Ma on November 4 and the Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig on November 5.

The Los Angeles Piano Quartet opened its program with the very popular Piano Quartet in G Minor, K. 478 by Mozart and the smooth quality of its sound was striking. The group also had a way of establishing an intimacy with the audience that drew one into the music — perhaps the smiles they had as they came on stage, their comfortable relationship with each other and the music or the attitude that the music was primary which prevailed throughout the concert. This sounds simplistic, but too many musicians don't see their function as that of an instrument to make the music sound. People came to hear the music, not to see someone play.

JAMES BONN, piano; Clayton Haslop, violin; Ronald Copes, viola and Peter Rejto, cello play with a remarkable synergy. The way they descended through the ensemble at the close of the Andante movement in the Mozart, complementing each other yet blending the sounds, was indicative of their sense of ensemble and balance.

The second piece on the program was by Aaron Copland, Quartet for Piano and Strings (1950). Although one must wonder if sometimes Copland's interest in Americana makes his music too accessible, by 1950 Copland was getting more involved in the music of Arnold Schoenberg and the piece was more along those lines. By the time the quartet came to the sweet beginning of the third movement, non troppo lento, it felt earned and welcome rather than sappy. The quartet made good sense of this piece and obviously enjoyed it as well, with Copes smiling at Rejto before the quote of "Three Blind Mice?"

FOLLOWING the intermission they performed the Piano Quartet in G Minor, opus 25 by Johannes Brahms. Brahms' chamber music is often not performed well — it's long and becomes tedious if there is too little attention paid to the subtleties of the music, but the Los Angeles Piano Quartet played with constant concentration. Again, they were beautiful.

The encore chosen was the third movement of the Schumann Piano Quartet in E major, and although it wasn't the typical flashy encore, after getting to know the group throughout the evening, it made perfect sense as a choice — slow, gorgeous, with room for inflection. The theme introduced by the cello and piano was lovely.

Although the L.A. Piano Quartet has not yet been recorded, there is no reason to think it won't be in the future, so as not to worry if you missed its performance. The ensemble is very good, and as there is a healthy repertoire for piano quartet, it will hopefully be around for quite a while.

Symphony opens season

By Kate Van Orden
Staff Writer

BAROQUE ISN'T bad! I wanted to shake some of the musicians on stage and tell them to enjoy it, to enjoy George Frideric Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," the piece with which the UI Symphony Orchestra opened its first concert of the season at Hancher Wednesday night.

It seemed this piece was a good choice for the orchestra; with nine oboes and six bassoons it should have been fun. It was originally intended for a large ensemble, having been commissioned for an outdoor performance in celebration of the end of the War of the Austrian Succession.

But, although the Overture was stately, it was not quite clean enough to march in the strings. The effect was much more lively in the faster movements; the strings took off a bit with cleaner bowing, digging into the runs of the Bourée and "La Paix." Why not the same clarity in the Overture?

THE HARPSICHORDIST was playing with a genuine feel for Baroque inflection, enjoying the music. It's unfortunate that the instrument couldn't be heard more in "La Rejouissance," but it came through nicely when half the string section dropped out during the second minuet. This forced one to wonder if perhaps the string section was all in too large. The program notes stated that King George II gave permission that the music be commissioned on the condition that "no fiddles" take part, and although the version used is a later one, it seemed that the strings constantly had to play down.

The minuets provided the opportunity for the grandiose double reed section to have some fun, but they played too carefully, with no passion. Perhaps this was out of necessity, for any sense of ensemble evaporated during the faster wind passage in Minuet I.

Music

The woodwinds would have done well to have taken a cue from the strings and cut back their sound a little.

The Cello Concerto No. 1 in A Minor, op. 33 of Camille Saint-Saëns (1855-1921) came off quite well with faculty member Charles Wendt as the soloist. This one-movement work maintains a form of a concerto and is very accessible to the audience.

THERE WAS NO question about Wendt being an accomplished performer when he played the cadenza written by David Popper (1843-1913) just before the final coda. However, the concerto does not make a provision for a cadenza, and although the one performed by Wendt was taken nicely from the themes of the piece and gave him a chance to make a splash, it was not necessarily an improvement on the piece. Still, the performance was skilled and musical.

When the orchestra returned after intermission with Symphony No. 1 in E Minor, op. 39 by Jean Sibelius (1857-1957), it was back on its own turf — big string sound, lots of tempo changes and dynamic, solo winds. It was great. The opening is surely an audition piece for clarinet, and it was played with an impressive calm. In fact, the winds sounded very nice throughout, playing with good tone and finesse, with the exception of a moment of fear in the Scherzo movement.

Director James Dixon masterfully exploited every climax, the brass roared and the timpani thundered — it was hard to forget that Sibelius was from Finland. This was the best orchestral playing of the concert; this style of music is definitely the orchestra's forte.

Still, it was nice to see Handel on the program. Hopefully, the Baroque will return with a little more passion next time.

At the Bijou

L'Age d'Or/La Petite Marchanda d'Alumettes. The Bijou begins tonight with a double feature of silent French films, the former being a Luis Bunuel tale of iconoclasm and anti-conformity. The latter is a Jean Renoir work based on Hans Christian Andersen's "The Little Match Girl." At 7 p.m.

• Ashes and Embers. Haile Gerima directed this work about a Viet Nam veteran's readjustment to society set in the black community of Washington D.C. At 8:45 p.m.

Television

On the networks: Farrah Fawcett makes a break from her glamour girl image, portraying instead a battered Michigan housewife who is pushed too far in "The Burning Bed" (NBC at 8 p.m.), an account of a true story. Paul Le Mat costars as her abusive husband. "Kate & Allie" (CBS at 8 p.m.) returns for a new season with Kate yearning to be a mother once again, but not particularly eager to be a wife. And "The Country Music Association Awards" (CBS at 8:30 p.m.) features Kenny Rogers as host, with the usual assortment of C &

W celebrities vying for the prizes. • On cable: Diva (Cinemax-13 at 11:45 p.m.) is a stylish Hitchcockian adventure about a Parisian mailman, an opera diva, several prostitutes, an assortment of thugs and hoodlums, a corrupt government official and man of mystery with all the answers. For utter contrast, there is Souther (USA-23 at 11 p.m.), the story of the hard times of a family of black sharecroppers during the depression, highlighted by noted performances from Paul Winfield and Cicely Tyson.
