DI presented with SPJ award

By Mary Benecke
Ching The Daily Iowan's "enthusiasm to copy edit and detail," Society of Professional Journalists recognized the newspaper and present it with an award which recognizes The "Daily Iowa's" place in the nation's best college newspapers.

The award was presented at the Iowa City Bar News where the 1984 SPJ national board presented the award to editor-in-chief Derek Moe, adviser Nancy Seale and publisher Bill Casey at the annual SPJ meeting.

"We're extremely pleased for the staff for producing a newspaper that's named one of the best in the country," the paper's adviser Nancy Seale said.

CAREY SAYS SPJ is one of the most "outstanding" in the country.

"I think the award is the result of a lot of hard work by a lot of people," said Seale. "I think the difference between us and other schools is that we have the school newspaper and I think that's a difference now." Corker, assistant sports editor, said: "It took a lot of effort and the fact that all the problems we've had every time," he said.

"We've received the SPJ award twice in the past 2 years. This is the first one we've received," she said.

"You've received a newspaper for the community of Iowa City which is entitled to receive," he said.

Filipinos demand Marcos' resignation

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Thousands of anti-Marcos demonstrators, led by a university dean and university student, Saturday turned to the streets in a general strike to press demands that Ferdinand Marcos resign.

The strike, which started Saturday at 7 a.m., closed factories and paralyzing traffic throughout the capital and its suburbs, brought the Philippines to a virtual standstill.

The strike was called by a coalition of labor, student and church groups that had been demanding Marcos' resignation since his election last year.

The demonstrators, who carried black armbands and held signs reading "Marcos must go," converged on Moray Field, the heart of Manila, and marched to the U.S. Embassy.

The demonstration was the largest since the strike began two weeks ago.

Marcos, who was inaugurated on Sept. 22, has been under increasing pressure to resign.

The demonstrators chanted "Marcos must go" and "Down with Marcos!"

"This is the biggest demonstration so far," one of the organizers said.

Marcos, who is also the president of the Philippines, has refused to resign and has called the demonstrations a "smear campaign."

Divested we stand?

The failure of the Reagan administration’s “constructive engagement” policy toward South Africa has been noted by many critics. But coming from South Africa Bishop Desmond Tutu, the recent recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize, these criticisms have gained unprecedented credibility and visibility. Tutu’s statements regarding U.S. policy should help focus attention on the need for a policy of maintaining its exposure in corporations that do business in South Africa. And adopting the stance of the Council Monday night passed a resolution calling on the U.S. to divest of its funds in those South African activities.

In protest of restrictions in the US, the US administration has maintained it can have no more impact on corporate policies by entering into a boycott movement than it could by divestment, which would n't on the world of its influence. The President’s effort on the economic sanctions targeting that would require the US consumer to change his tastes to avoid US companies that do business in South Africa.

If the administration argues that divestment is more delusive of its policies, financial administrators and US President James O. Prevedior should support the Council resolution. Not only should Ellis write the letters for which the resolution calls, but, in the manner of the shareholders’ meetings to oppose corporate practices that are in conflict with the country’s policies. The US administration should make strong public commitments to confront US companies.

The US administration’s arguments fail to recognize that the US consumer is capable of influencing corporate policies by changing his tastes. The US administration should support the Council resolution that would require the US consumer to change his tastes to avoid US companies that do business in South Africa.

The council wings it

With their backs against the wall, the Iowa City councilmen voted Tuesday night to allow the development of an airfield storage area near a Municipal Airport.

In a 4-1 vote, with Councilmen Cleon Ehrlich casting the sole vote in favor of the development, the council should voice the desire to work with Federal officials to allow storage at the airport.

The FAA last year stripped the city of a $600,000 grant that was awarded to develop the airport. The council may allow storage at the airport after the council developed the two apartment buildings.

This time the FAA intended a different municipal form that it would allow the city to develop the airport.

It’s not an easy decision. If the council makes one decision, there will be several businesses in the Iowa City area, the council did the right thing, coming down on the side of deferral Kenneth Raymer’s proposed development.

The city could now proceed to identify and purchase other areas. It is not likely the FAA will let Iowa City proceed.

More than likely Raymer will file a lawsuit against the city, and the FAA will be forced to defend its actions.

But the consequence of a potential lawsuit will likely result in the council’s decision, and the FAA’s decision should be followed.

The council will make another in a situation tonight. Council members voted in the best interest of the Iowa City community by preventing future use of the airfield.

Quoth the maven, ‘Nevermore!’

I HAD ALWAYS GIVEN up hope of ever getting to hear a live performance of Tchaikovsky’s 1812 Overture, and perhaps even a couple of other of his pieces, but the town’s annual New Year’s Eve celebration should make it possible to hear it in all its splendor. I have always been a great fan of Tchaikovsky’s music, and I am looking forward to hearing it in the context of the New Year’s Eve celebration.

I have always been impressed by the way Tchaikovsky’s music manages to capture the essence of the Russian spirit and the Russian people. His music is filled with passionate energy, and it is a reflection of the Russian character. It is a music that speaks to the soul, and it is a music that touches the heart.

Voters need a freedom of choice

By John Bergerson

This ELECTION YEAR promises to be one of the most interesting ever, as Americans are going to the polls to elect a new president.

The presidential election is not only a battle for the White House, but also a battle for the minds of the American people. A vote for one candidate is a vote for a new direction for our country, and a vote for the other candidate is a vote for a continuation of the same direction.

The choice of the new president will have a significant impact on the future of the United States. It will determine who will represent the country on the world stage, and it will determine the direction of our foreign policy.

Hawkeyes have big score to settle with Wildcats

Field hockey

The Iowa field hockey team has a lot on its plate against Northwestern this weekend. The Hawkeyes hope to come out on top after falling to the Wildcats last year's Big Ten title.

Meyer's actions get him dismissed

Field hockey

But the Wildcats have an improved defense this year. Northwestern's defense has been more consistent and has helped mask the team's offensive woes. Northwestern's defense, led by senior Captain Austin, is playing well after a hot start to the season.

"Both teams have improved a lot," Austin said. "We'll see a close game and the game will be won by the best team."}

IOWA-CINCINNATI: Bob Skorosch also expects a close game for the Big Ten title. "The team that wins this game and makes it to the final will be the best," he said.

The Hawkeyes will need to perform well in the rest of their games and make it to the final, but they have a chance if they can find their rhythm and play well against Northwestern.

IOWA WILL CARRY one downswing into the final. Northwestern will need to carry over the momentum from their recent win over Iowa. The Wildcats need to focus on their defense and make sure they don't give up any penalty corners during the game and need to take advantage of any opportunities that come their way.

Fry cautious as Hoosiers seek 1st win

In the Big Ten, the Hawkeyes are in second place with just two games left. The Wildcats need to focus on their defense and make sure they don't give up any penalty corners during the game and need to take advantage of any opportunities that come their way.

Larry Sanders is a driven man. He will do whatever it takes to win. He's not afraid to take risks and he's willing to put in the work. This year, he's been playing his heart out for the Hawkeyes.

"I'm not afraid to take risks and I'm willing to put in the work," Sanders said. "I want to be the best player I can be."

And he's doing just that. Sanders has been a key player for the Hawkeyes this year. He's been a leader both on and off the court.

"He's a great player and a great leader," coach Gary Barta said. "He's been a key part of our team this year."

But Sanders isn't the only one who's been working hard.

"Our whole team has been working hard," Barta said. "We've been practicing hard and we've been working on our game."

And it's paying off. The Hawkeyes are currently second in the Big Ten and are just one game behind the first place team.

"We're in a great position," Barta said. "We're in contention for the championship and we're ready to take it."

Women's tennis in the Big Ten is dominated by two teams: Illinois and Northwestern. The two teams have split the conference the past two years. On Saturday, Michigan women's tennis opened with a 6-1 loss at Purdue.

Kari Egerberg, a junior midfielder, had two goals for the Red, but it was not enough to help the team secure a win. The Red lost 3-2 to the Blue. The loss dropped the Red to 1-2 in conference play.

In women's tennis, the Red faced its toughest challenge yet. The team is currently led by Kari Egerberg, who is averaging over 30 minutes per game. With a strong performance against Illinois, the Red is looking to strengthen its position in the conference.

On the line

It's a hot and humid week for this week's On the Line guest picker, United Press International Men's Sports Editor Fred Schouest. You see, Schouest is an avid fan of The Daily Illini and he should have had his hands full when he received the call from the Daily's editor, Steve Bowers, to join the team on its upcoming trip to New York City.

Fred Schouest's decision to accept the request was not as easy as it may seem. He had to make a quick decision to join the team on its upcoming trip to New York City. The team is scheduled to play against an unknown team, and Schouest was not sure if he could handle the pressure of being on the line.

Lunchtime Connoisseurs are nourished by museum talk

By John Greene

Since this fall semester began, the Museum of Art has been offering regular lunchtime lectures in a program called "Lunchtime Connoisseurs." The lectures are given every Wednesday at noon in the museum's lecture hall.

On Nov. 9, Dr. John Adams, a professor of art history at the University of Chicago, will discuss the art of the Renaissance. His lecture will focus on the work of Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo.

Four years ago, the museum began offering lunchtime lectures to encourage people to visit the museum during the day.

Art

The museum's permanent collection is rich in works of art from all over the world. Some highlights include:

- "The Mona Lisa," probably the most famous painting in the world.
- "The Night Watch," a large painting by Rembrandt.
- "The Annunciation," a painting byFra Angelico.

Utah's largest art museum, the Utah Museum of Fine Arts, opened in 1979. It features a wide range of permanent and temporary exhibits.
