Reagan supports hog producers

WINTERSET, Iowa (UPI) - President Reagan tried to improve his standing among Iowa farmers during the weekend with a vow to investigate the impact of Canadian-subsidized hog imports coming into the United States. Reagan pledged help to conduct a full investigation to see whether American hog producers are being victimized by the subsidies Canada gives its producers, who have been selling to the United States in record volumes.

"I have directed (Commerce) Secretary (Malcolm) Baldrige to make absolutely certain our pork poroducers are getting the fair shake they deserve," Reagan said. "And if unfair subsidies are being used to undercut you, we'll take action."

A MAJOR THRUST of Reagan's visit agriculture. to Iowa Saturday was to boost the campaigns of Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, and Fifth District GOP congressional candidate Jim Ross Lightfoot.

Both men needed a last minute shot in the arm, as polls showed Jepsen trailing Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, in his bid for re-election, and Lightfoot with a small lead over Democrat Jerry Speaking to a crowd of an estimated 7,000 people who jammed into the Madison County town's square, Reagan urged supporters to send both men with him to Washington.

Reagan heaped praise on both Jepsen and Lightfoot, and said both men would work hard to restore profitability to

'Jim's one of the finest candidates I've ever known," Reagan said of Lightfoot. "No one could love his country more and be better informed about the concerns of the district."

REAGAN WAS even more full of praise for Jepsen, and said Jepsen 'has served in the Senate with honor and skill." He criticized Harkin as anti-defense and favoring higher taxes.

"Tom Harkin is one of the most liberal leaders in the House," Reagan said. "I'm sure he's sincere in that. But I do know he has voted repeatedly against strong defenses and against our program of low taxes and high

He also lashed out at Harkin for accusing Jepsen of casting votes in the Senate that triggered wasteful Pentagon spending.

"Roger Jepsen's opponent seems to be disturbed somewhat about - he calls expensive monkey wrenches and so-forth that the defense department is buying, that they could pick up for a few pennies here and there in a store," Reagan said. "Who do they think has found out about those high priced tools and is doing something about it?"

"WE'RE THE ones that have dug it up - and we're the ones that have gotten hundreds of indictments, and hundreds of millions of dollars in rebates See Reagan, page 8

Boycott fails to halt voters in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) Nicaraguans turned out in large numbers to vote Sunday despite an opposition boycott of the first national elections since the ruling Sandinistas overthrew dictator Anastasio Somoza

An impressive government campaign to get out the vote appeared to be working in Managua and in provincial capitals where housewives, workers and uniformed soldiers waited for hours in sweltering heat to cast votes for candidates representing seven political parties.

A PRESIDENT, vice-president and a 90-member Constituent Assembly that will write a new constitution will be elected. Preliminary election results ected before Monday and winners will be announced Wednesday.

The presidential and vice presidential terms are for six years.

'This is a great experience for us," said Ortega as he cast his vote in Managua six minutes after the polls opened. "It is the first time in Nicaraguan history that we are really voting. It is a historic moment for our

As voters lined up at neighborhood poll stations throughout the nation, the government reported U.S.-backed 'counterrevolutionary' rebels Saturday ambushed and killed four Sandinista soldiers in Quilali, Nueva Segovia province, 162 miles north of Managua.

The two strongest rebel groups fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government had called an election-day truce, and the government charges could not be independently confirmed. No incidents were reported Sunday.

Gandhi appoints new Cabinet, violence subsides

Minister Rajiv Gandhi named a new Cabinet Sunday and fired the lieutenant governor of Delhi for failing to suppress four days of murder, arson and looting against Sikhs by Hindu mobs avenging the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

> An official announcement said her ashes would be scattered over the Himalayas in northern India Nov. 11 after being taken across India in special trains to give mourners a chance to bid farewell to the woman who led the world's most populous democracy for 15 of the past 18 years.

THE GOVERNMENT said it will appoint a commission of inquiry headed by a Supreme court judge to investigate the assassination. A special investigating team of senior officials will assist the commission, the spokesman said.

Gandhi, 66, a Hindu, was assassinated Wednesday by two of her trusted Sikh bodyguards in apparent retaliation for an army assault June 6 on the Sikh's holiest shrine, the Golden Temple of Amritsar, that left at least

The assassination triggered an explosion of violence by enraged Hindus, who looted shops, set fire to buildings and hunted and killed Sikhs in their homes, in the streets and on trains. More than 500 of the deaths occurred in the capital.

Nine more bodies were found Sunday in a local shuttle train at the Maripat Station near Ghaziabad on the eastern outskirts of New Delhi, the Press Trust of India reported. Scores of bodies of Sikhs were found on Delhi-bound trains Friday at the height of the rioting.

Reports of rioting and death from areas outside New Delhi continued to reach the capital, but the violence appeared to be declining across the country and officials say they hoped the worst of the sectarian violence was Gandhi also named nine new ministers to his cabinet Sunday, bringing his government up to full strength to deal with the task of reconstruction and reconciliation.

All but one of the ministers had served in his mother's cabinet. Like his mother, Gandhi retained the foreign affairs portfolio for himself.

Journalists, public grow weary of politics, campaigns

By Mary Boone

With Da e day remaining until the elections, the public is growing tired of politics, politicians are growing tired politics, and the consensus of journalists who have covered the campaigns is that they're tired of politics

JIM DICKENSON, Washington Post political writer and former Daily Iowan reporter, said the "onesidedness" of the 1984 presidential campaign between President Reagan and Walter Mondale reminded him of "the hopeless quest of George

He continued, "What makes a (political) race interesting is closeness of the candidates (in the polls) and an unpredictable finish. "It's (the 1984 elections) challenging many voters as far as whether or not they should follow party lines," Woolsen said.

Woolsen also said the "mudslinging" of the 1984 elections - especially the senate race between Roger Jepsen and Tom Harkin - has made them unpleasant to cover at times.

His career in politics began when he was elected chairman of the Grundy Center Republican Central Committee from 1966 to 1968.

Military, House, law experiences bolster Johnston

Joe Johnston, a Democrat, was born in Waterloo in 1938 and spent his early childhood and summers in the Bremer County area. He went to elementary and junior high school in Waterloo, where his father worked as an operating engineer. The Johnstons moved to Iowa City, and Joe graduated from high school in 1957

Following high school, Johnston served in the U.S. Army and then spent five years in business. He entered the UI in 1963 and earned degrees in business administration and law.

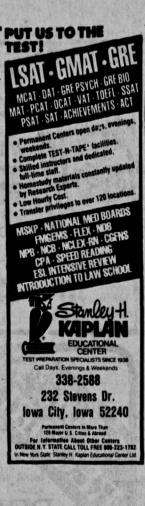

In 1968 and again in 1970, Johnston was elected to the Iowa State House of Representatives from Johnson County. During his two terms in the Iowa House, Johnston served on the appropriations, schools and judiciary committees. In 1970, Johnston was elected chairman of the Iowa Democratic Legislative Campaign Committee.

Johnston is a senior partner in an Iowa City law firm. In 1978, he founded Data Law, Co., a publiclyheld company located in Denver, Colo. During his association with Data Law, Johnston gave over 200 lectures to professionals in nearly every state, dis-cussing the advantages and limitations of the new technology of the 1980s.

Johnston has four children and four grandchildren. His wife, Amanda, is also an attorney and currently works as assistant public defender in Linn County.

Responding to charges that the National Organization of Women will not support ublican candidates, local NOW memer Mary Wyckoff said the organization enlorses individuals who support women's

During a recent visit to Iowa City, Maureen Reagan, daughter of President lonald Reagan, accused NOW of becoming a partisan political organization not suporting Republican candidates."

Specifically, Reagan mentioned NOW's dorsement of Democratic presidential andidate Walter Mondale and viceesidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro. According to Wyckoff, NOW has "never ndorsed a presidential candidate, has not een historically associated with the Democrats and does not consider (itself) a Democratic organization.'

SHE SAID the decision to endorse Mondale and Ferraro came after "a great deal of debate" within the ranks of the organiza-

"The electoral process is not what NOW is about," said Wyckoff. "The endorsement was a hotly-debated item. Wyckoff said NOW decided to support Mondale and Ferraro because they "viewed clear differences between the candidates," and NOW felt the Reagan administration "posed a threat" to the support of women's issues, especially the Equal Rights Amendment.

Wyckoff charged the Republicans with ignoring the wishes of the public by voting in blocks to keep the ERA from passing. Reagan, however, contends ERA did not pass because it was not the "right time" and the country was not ready for its Wyckoff also said NOW endorsed Mondale and Ferraro because of their pro-civil rights, pro-human rights and pro-choice abortion stances.

SALLY NOVETZKE, a member of the state Republican Central Committee, denied that the Reagan administration has failed to enact legislation favoring women.

"NOW refuses to admit that the Reagan administration has done a lot for women in this country," Novetzke said. "I'll show you 20 pieces of legislation passed to help

Novetzke cited legislation increasing daycare deductions and strengthening child support payments. She also said the reduction of unemployment has helped three million women find jobs.

Another charge leveled against NOW by Reagan was the failure to support Republican female congressional candidates. Reagan claims NOW refused to support former Reps. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., and Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., in their bids for Congress.

ALTHOUGH WYCKOFF said she could not speak for all Republican candidates, she said NOW chose not to endorse the Fenwick and Heckler because "they did not support issues which benefited NOW."

"NOW doesn't endorse people because they're a woman, man, Republican or Democrat, but if they fill the criteria on behalf of organization," Wyckoff said.

Currently, Wyckoff said money is being donated to the campaigns of four female Republican congressional candidates, including Washington's Sue Gold, Jan Meyer of Kansas, Missouri's Carrie Frankie and Claudine Schneider of Rhode Island.

Wyckoff said she found it "ironic" that Maureen Reagan's unsuccessful bid for the Republican senate nomination in California was partially funded through donations

Wyckoff said Reagan was "obviously trying to discredit an organization that brought more women into politics than ever

However, Councilor William Ambrisco said Sunday the council is moving away from enacting a restricting ordinance and prefers to first discuss the matter with local bar owners, the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Association.

"I don't believe there's a consensus among this council that they want to do anything legislatively," Ambrisco said. He said the council sent a letter to the three local groups to encourage them "to sit down and try to ameliorate these Jansen said the Iowa Code section is interpreted by the Iowa Supreme Court as "a valid delegation of broad power from the state to municipalities to regulate liquor traffic and prohibit specified conduct on licensed premises.'

In October, Councilors Ambrisco, Kate Dickson and Clemens Erdahl were discussing the possibility of controlling liquor specials in an attempt to reduce alcohol consumption in downtown Iowa City.

While state laws appear to support the efforts of the three councilors, Jansen stated there is still doubts as to "whether such regulation would be an undue restraint of scheduled to begin Jan. 1.

This fund, left over from the donations used to defray Pham's medical and funeral expenses and to set up a trust fund for Pham's widow, has been named the "Transplant Patient Support Fund (Thuy

'Tony' Pham Memorial)."
PHAM, A UI SENIOR in electrical engineering diagnosed with liver cancer last year, received donations totaling nearly $80,000 to pay for a liver transplant in Memphis, Tenn., after he was informed the state could not pay for the operation because it would have been performed outside Iowa. About $30,000 was raised before Pham died June 1 while he waited for the license fee.

Paul Scholz, associate dean of the UI College of Engineering - which raised about $12,000 for Pham - said a great need exists for this transplant fund. The decision to set up the support fund, he said, was made by "a combination of everyone who had raised funds for Tony.'

The fund will cover non-medical expenses because, "It was our understanding that Governor Branstad said that transplants will be covered by Medicaid. It's my understanding, also, that Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Iowa will be covering the medical costs associated with transplant surgery," Scholz said.

Suicide victim's organ donated

Clerical workers vote to unionize

By Charlene Lee Staff Writer

The pancreas of Janice Stallman, a 27-year-old Cedar Rapids suicide victim, was successfully transplanted in her cousin, Cindy Billingsley, Friday at UI Hospitals.

Billingsley, a 29-year-old Newton resident, was reported in good condition Sunday afternoon. She is a diabetic whose life would have been shortened

"I feel great," Billingsley said. "There's no greater gift that a person can give than to donate their organ ... I am sad that my cousin had to die in order for me to live."

Stallman was removed from her home Tuesday morning to Mercy Hospital in Cedar Rapids following an apparent drug overdose. When doctors told her parents, Eldred and Marie Stallman of Cedar Rapids, that their daughter was brain dead, they suggested that her organs be donated for transplants.

"They (Mercy Hospital doctors) suggested to my husband and I that we consider donating her organs," said Marie Stallman. She said other family members were contacted and all agreed that Stallman's organs would

After last month's election failed to yield a clear majority winner, the state's clerical employees - including about 1,800 from the UI - voted last week to be represented by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Once more with feeling

Iowa City area residents have three legislative races and two constitutional amendments to consider in their voting tomorrow.

Minnette Doderer and Jean Lloyd-Jones are running unopposed for the state House of Representatives in the 45th and 46th Districts respectively. Doderer and Lloyd-Jones have been conscientious and productive public servants during their terms, and they would deserve re-election in any case.

It is a shame, however, that voters have been denied a choice in the election. We hope the Republican Party sees fit to offer Iowa City residents that choice in future elections.

The Republicans have provided voters in the 54th District of the House of Representatives a choice: Audrey Jordahl is running against incumbent Democrat Rich Varn. Jordahl, however, is little more than token opposition — many Democrats didn't know Varn was opposed until two weeks ago.

Varn, who is known to many at the UI through his years in student government, has also served his district well. He deserves another term in the Statehouse.

The first constitutional amendment listed on the ballot is the more important of the two. It would allow the state legislature to veto decisions by administrative agencies through joint resolution instead of through law.

Backers of the proposed amendment claim that it would give voters more say over administrative decisions; opponents, who include Gov. Terry Branstad, Attorney General Tom Miller and the League of Women Voters, claim that the amendment would violate the constitutional system of checks and balances and favor lobbyists for special interests more than the public.

We find the latter argument more persuasive. Governors are elected to govern; their agencies are established to enact their decisions. We urge a no vote.

We see no reason why the second amendment, which would allow fall school enrollment to be the basis of distribution of interest funds to local school districts, should not be approved. We urge a yes vote.

The real gender gap

Walter Mondale's selection of Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate, she said Thursday in Iowa City, "did more for equal opportunity than Ronald Reagan has done in four long years." The crowd of more than 3,000 responded with chants of "E-R-A, E-R-

We're talking about women's rights here. And on that subject the Reagan record is abysmal. The president's policies put a halt to the momentum of correcting sexually discriminatory practices in society. The disparity between wages received by men and women is not closing. The Census Bureau reports a woman with five or more years of college education can expect to earn only 63.5 percent of a man with equal education.

And Reagan's cuts in social programs have fueled a "feminization of poverty." Since Reagan took office, more than 2.5 million women have joined a record 35 million Americans below the poverty line.

More than one-third of all female-headed families now live below the poverty level - as do a tragic 56 percent of families headed by black women.

For 30 years, the Republican Party platform included promises to work for women's rights. But Reagan has since 1980 twice stood atop a platform that fails even to mention women's rights.

"This president and this administration, on the issue of justice and respect for women, is hopeless," Mondale said last week.

Women's rights under a second Reagan term may not really be hopeless. But judging from his first four years, it sure does look

Zealots and conversion

If there is a force that has done as much damage to humanity as extremist political ideologies, it is religious zealotry. The assassination of Indira Gandhi is only the most recent illustration.

At times there are other forces at work. In Ireland the Catholics have long been a politically and economically oppressed group. The Sikhs in India have their own economic and political complaints.

But the fire that lights the fuses is a religious passion that can turn political conflict into what is seen as a battle between the forces of light and dark. Political conflict reaches that kind of mindless frenzy only when linked to religion or when the political ideology has become itself a kind of faith.

There are signs that a similar infection is beginning its nasty work in the United States. Television evangelists declare that God has sanctified their political as well as their religious message, as though God had sided with the United States in the dispute over the Panama Canal Treaty. A group of anti-abortionists has turned to bombing, kidnapping and threatening the lives of Supreme Court Justices.

For these new fundamentalists, being a liberal is synonymous with being a devil worshipper. The line between political dissent and religious dissent is for them so blurred that to dissent polo alty is to be guilty of blasphemy and to dissent religiously is to be guilty of treason.

There is, moreover, a difference between this political intrusion of rightist religious fundamentalists and liberal religious activists earlier eras. Liberals sought not to limit the political or religious rights of other groups but to increase them: to free blacks and women from oppression and to free Jews from anti-Semitism, not to define anyone in their own terms.

What you see and what you get

By Dennis M. Corrigan

NE OF THE BAFFLING mysteries of our time, particularly for many liberals, is why Ronald Reagan is so widely regarded as a good president why his mistakes and errors, his fumbling for words and his bumbling in foreign affairs, don't seem to stick why, in short, the Teflon president glides on and retains his popularity.

People have attributed Reagan's popularity to a powerful media advertising campaign rich with images that influence and even seduce the people. Those who think like that believe that truth will unseat Reagan, that the Democrats' message about his failure to command must be gotten across, that information disseminated in the mass media is the Democrats' answer and hope

So the Democratic presidential candidate goes on television debates and pounds away at Reagan's lack of command and lack of knowledge. And nothing happens. People watch the they remain basically unmoved.

MAYBE IT'S THE CASE, then, that Reagan's continued popularity doesn't have all that much to do with information or explicit messages. Maybe his power is his ability to be an expression of the culture, to be Mr. America.

He is greeted by the young with chants of "U-S-A, U-S-A." He personifies values of family, flag and motherhood. He has captured the roles of Defender of the Faith, Promoter of Free Enterprise, Big Spender 'on Defense, and Star of State, Stage, and

Most important of all, he is speaking the popular language of the culture. In a time when Americans tune in their television sets to watch bumblers like Magnum, Simon and Simon, and the boys on "Riptide" magically pull things out of the fire and somehow win, Ronald Reagan stumbles into legislative victories and transforms oversights into honorable commit-

These days Americans seem to want that kind of haphazard success in their politicians as much as in their televi-

Along the same lines, Americans are pulling the voting levers on their TV sets each week for the sleaze of "Dallas," "Dynasty" and "Falcon Crest." Even the angel they watch on 'Highway to Heaven' resorts to dirty tricks to get his way - for his good cause, of course. But perhaps that's why the Democrats' charges about the sleaziness of the Reagan administration don't stick: Americans are currently fascinated by decadence.

FRONTS. FEIGNING and hypocritical piety are bigger now than they've ever been in television history. Americans love to hear J.R. Ewing say, after he's pulled one of his dirty deals: "Gee, Bobby, I'm real sorry at." Maybe they al hear their president say, after the bombing of the embassy in Lebanon: "Anyone that's ever had their kitchen done over knows that it never gets done as soon as you wish it would.

And maybe it wasn't George Bush but J.R. Ewing who said, the day after the vice presidential debate with Geraldine Ferraro: "We kicked a little ass last night."

And when Mrs. Bush said that Ms. Ferraro could be described in a word that rhymes with "rich" or "witch," maybe in the mind of America that wasn't Mrs. Bush speaking but just another fascinating understudy for Alexis on "Dynasty," Angela on "Falcon Crest," Abby on "Knots Landing," Katherine on "Dallas," Racine on "Paper Dolls" or any of those other awful women on television who seem to be so decadent, so abun-

The shift in American interests and values in these regards is most evident when you think about the changes in television police shows in the last 30 years. In the 1950s Americans liked to watch "Dragnet" and "Highway were doers of good and restorers of

THE POPULAR COPS in the 1970s were Kojak, Baretta, and Starsky and Hutch. They were shown as frustrated by the system; like the people of the times, they had to do their own thing and use their own means to do good, in spite of the system Today's popular cops,-however, are typified by those on "Hill Street Blues": cops not only frustrated by the system but also surrounded by sleaze and capable of human foible and moral miscalculation. When, for example, somebody threatens their Joyce Davenport, today's TV cops are not above boxing him in and blowing him away. As the Hill Street cop put it after killing Joyce's harasser: "We've got to protect our own '

This mixture of sleaziness, moral corruption, bumbling, and haphazard success is what's so new and so plentiful today. It's in new police shows like "Miami Vice" and "Hawaiian Heat." private detective shows like 'Remington Steele' and "Matt Houston." And maybe it's what the American people want in the White House, too.

I'm not saying that bad is in, but it does seem to be the language that works in today's culture. When, for instance, Geraldine Ferraro and Roxanne Conlin vehemently defended their innocence in their tax dealings, the press dogged them mercilessly. But when George Bush said in effect: "I paid too much in taxes, and I'm gonna fight to keep as much as I can and to get more back," he got off scot-free.

WHEN, SIMILARLY, Roger Jepsen got himself exposed as a visitor to a naughty massage parlor, he said, cavalierly: "Everybody makes mistakes" and stopped his slide in the polls. Meanwhile, nice Iowa fellow Tom Harkin started to drop. But once Harkin started speaking the new popular language of American nasty, his ratings in the polls skyrocketed.

There's something in this new popular language, though, that's more derlying grammar, and that's what

You can hear it in the music of Billy Joel and Bruce Springsteen, which combines 1950s progressions with 1980s electronics. You can see it in the 1980s punk porcupine hairdo, which is really only a 1950s crewcut that's been overfertilized. You can see it in the return of 1950s stars like Jane Wyman, John Forsythe and Lloyd Bridges to 1980s

You can watch it at Reagan rallies where the children of 1950s young adults, now young adults themselves, are the stongest supporters of the 1980s president. You can see it, too, in the candidate with the 1950s pompadour, patriotism, and cold war rhetoric and the 1980s star wars policies. That's the 1950s-1980s grammar of popular language and popular culture today. And Ronald Reagan speaks it and lives it: He's caught up in the magic time warp that makes him new and young.

WALTER MONDALE, on the other 1930s and the aid-to-the-oppressed issues of the 1960s. His 1930s-1960s grammar is as out of style as wide lanels and love heads

When you think about it all in this regard, maybe people are picking a president much as if they're tuning in a TV program or buying a blouse. And if so, maybe the election has already been held. Maybe the voting took place in last week's Nielsen TV ratings and in the listing of the Hot 100 records in Billboard magazine and in the barber shops, beauty parlors and clothing stores where 1950s-1980s grammar is spoken most clearly.

And maybe those are the real media and the real advertisements in this campaign. They're all saying that the decadent, the sleazy, the bumbling and the fumbling are really fascinating. that old stuff from the 1950s is really new. Perhaps, then, that's the real Teflon: the popular culture. It's the grease that speaks, the grammar of the

Misleading coverage

To the editor:

The headline and first paragraph in the Oct. 30th story about the need for economic development in Iowa could not have been more misleading. Data Law is neither "bankrupt" nor "my company." I own 10 percent of the stock of the company; it is managed by a professional manager, not by me; it just completed the most successful quarter in its history

My involvement with Data Law is a fit subject for a story because that experience has helped me understand the needs of small businesses. To twist that experience into a negative comment about my candidacy is a distortion

The Daily Iowan ran a correction on Nov. 1st, but it was in tiny type, buried on page 2. This is not the first time we've had our campaign treated unfairly by the DI.

In a story about covert aid to the Nicaraguan rebels being aided by the CIA in an attempt to overthrow the government, Rep. Cooper Evans was allowed to speak as if he favored banning that aid. But he in fact voted six times in a row to continue sending covert aid to the rebels.

One of those votes was an attempt to kill the bill banning covert aid by recommitting the bill. Only on final passage of the bill did Evans hop the fence to the winning side and vote to ban the covert aid. These flip-flops have been documented in Evans' voting record on nerve gas, the MX missile and many other issues, but the record has not been made clear.

There is no mystery about the distortions that have occurred in this campaign. Evans is partly to blame, because he votes both ways on many issues or votes one way in Washington and then comes to Iowa City and acts if he were a moderate. But with effort an active and impartial press can find and report these misrepresentations.

At the DI, there is another problem, however. The city editor has previously worked in Cooper Evans' office. This obvious conflict of interest should have resulted in his assignment to duties unrelated to our race.

The UI community has been cheated out of impartial reporting of the differences between myself and Cooper Evans on the one hand and a full reporting of the differences between Evans' rhetoric and voting record on the other.

A spoiled victor?

To the editor:

Projections on this year's Clerk of Court race indicate that Ed Steinbrech will win because four years ago voters voted against Clerk Susan Flaherty and not for present Clerk Mary Conklin.

A look at Steinbrech's current campaign disclosure report shows that Flaherty and her husband are among the top four contributors to Steinbrech's campaign fund. Does this indicate to anyone other than myself that Steinbrech intends to return the office to the ways already voted out by the public?

County Treasurer Donald Krall's resignation statement says it plainly. Past practice shows that newly elected politicians tend to fire present employees with years of experience and loyalty to their jobs and replace them with new employees who owe allegiance strictly to them.

Look closely at the real reasons for Steinbrech's candidacy and the record of Clerk Conklin in cleaning up the office and operating efficiently.

Past newspaper headlines on controversies in the office rarely, if ever, pointed out that Clerk Conklin initiated the investigations, audits and changes after checking with the County Attorney on past practices she felt needed changing.

Wild and crazy guys

President Reagan, in the second TV debate on Oct. 21, said in the support of the former Shah of Iran that "whatever he might have done," he 'was building low cost housing ..

Leaving aside the question whether this statement has any truth to it, it is also said that Adolf Hitler built very nice autobahns and that Mussolini made the trains run on time.

I suppose according to Reagan's "logic," all three of those guys were really not that bad. I am grateful to the president for pointing this out, because up to that point I always had negative feelings toward people who were responsible for the slaughter of thousands of innocent humans.

Sikhs tell tales of Delhi misery

you know where my children are? Please tell me where my children are," the old man pleaded as he moved among the sea of hungry, homeless, frightened people

He did not get far because there were too many people to move past. Huddled people, squatting people, people swathed in bloodied bandages and lying on dirty blankets on the ground. People who were crying, people moaning - 15,000 people in all, according to a refugee leader.

Like everyone else spending Sunday in the Gandhi Memorial Senior Secondary School, the old man was a Sikh, a religious minority that has become the target of mob violence by Hindus seeking to avenge the slaying of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, whose assassins were Sikhs.

THE OLD MAN'S name was Singh, which means "lion" and is a part of the name of every male Sikh, reflecting their traditionally fierce pride — although there was none of that in the old man's face as he moved among the people, begging for news of his children

But nobody knew where they were. Maybe they were among the people crammed into the corridors, packed into the courtyards and stuffed into the dark rooms of the school near Trilokpuri, a community in East Delhi not far from where Gandhi was cremated and the scene of a massacre in which local residents said as many as 500 Sikhs were killed Saturday.

Or maybe they were the bodies, dismembered and charred, on which two pigs were feeding a few miles down the

"We have people here who should be in the hospital," Singh said, pointing to a row of bloodied bodies sprawled along one wall of a muddy courtyard. "But the hospitals won't take them. They say they're afraid the mobs will attack them if they take Sikh casualties.'

Conversations with about 20 refugees revealed that, while all still fear for their lives, the predominant emotion now that they have lost everything is anger - anger mostly directed at the government which they maintain did not try to stop the massacres.

THEY NOTED with bitterness that while the army was first deployed around government offices and diplomatic missions in an area of New Delhi that was relatively untouched by the mobs, it waited until after the violence had subsided to move into Trilokpuri and the other outlying areas where murder, looting and arson were

There were nearly 100 protestors of Winterset. who attended the Reagan rally, but their shouts of "three more days,"

Just before the president arrived at the courthouse, his motorcade passed an anti-Reagan rally on the north edge I'm angry at what's happened to us,'

The rally, which drew nearly 100 people was called to denounce Reagan farm policy.

Organizer Denise O'Brien, a Cass County farmer, bemoaned the plight of farmers and accused Reagan policies of forcing farm families on welfare.

"I'm angry every day that I wake up.

O'Brien said. "We've become eligible for food stamps and free cheese, and we're dairy farmers."

The protestors staked 105 wooden crosses along the president's motorcade route to symbolize the 10,500 farmers and small businesses in Iowa that have gone bankrupt since Reagan took office.

"I really don't know how to feel." Hawkeye safety Mike Stoops pretty much summed up the mood in the Iowa locker room after 13th-rated Iowa and Wisconsin struggled to a 10-10 tie in Big Ten action Saturday at Kinnick

He had also just watched Iowa's No. tailback and quarterback, Ronnie Harmon and Chuck Long, be taken out of the game on consecutive plays in the fourth quarter with injuries.

Harmon, the nation's second-leading all-purpose runner last week, broke his leg in two places and will miss the remainder of the season, while Long bruised his knee and is questionable for this week's game against Michigan

"I WAS ENCOURAGED to find out that it was a clean break on both bones, so the impact came from straight on," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said about Harmon's injury. That should help the healing process and after six months of rehabilitation, Fry is optimistic that Harmon will be able to play next

"I visited with Chuck (Sunday) morning and nothing is conclusive," Fry said. "Chuck is of the opinion that he'll be able to play in the game Saturday and I don't think it'll require any surgery. Dr. John Albright is optimistic that with some rest and by using the mobilizer and crutches he may be able to play this week.'

Fry said the Hawkeyes were feeling better about the game during Sunday morning's team meeting.

'It's really a funny feeling," Stoops, senior safety, said. "Both teams played tough defense and we really had to fight for our lives for a tie after we spotted them 10 points."

STOOPS SAID IOWA may have been a bit over-excited when the game began. "We were really pumped up," he said. "After they got off to the early lead we settled down and played defense the way we know how."

In fact, the Hawkeyes held the Badgers to 54 yards in total offense the final three quarters, with 24 yards coming on the last two plays of the

"For three quarters, we played as fine of a defense as you'll see in college football," Fry said.

But in the first quarter, the Badgers picked apart an Iowa defense that hadn't yielded a touchdown on the ground for 20 quarters.

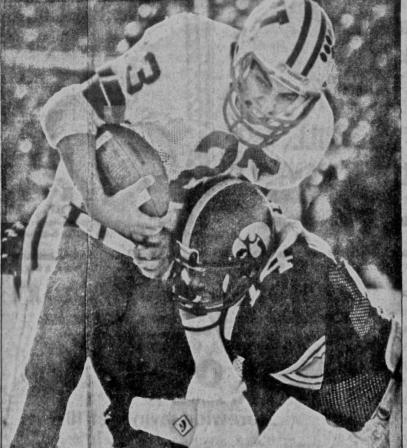

Wisconsin struck first with a 25-yard field goal by Todd Gregoire with eight minutes, 59 seconds remaining in the first frame. One of Long's four interceptions set up the next Badger score, a one-yard run by Marck Harrison with 6:41 left in the quarter.

THE HAWKEYES HAD trouble containing the 5-foot-8 back who led all rushers with 78 yards. "That little rascal's so small he hides behind the big linemen and we couldn't even see him," Fry said. "Defensively, we tried to stop the things that had been hurting

Badger players, coaches upset about hard fought deadlock

By Jill Hokinson Staff Writer

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said the Badgers won the first half and Iowa won the second half of the 10-10 tie

Saturday at Kinnick Stadium. But Wisconsin Coach Dave McClain wasn't satisfied with just winning half of the game and neither was his team.

McClain's team has never beaten the Hawkeyes in seven tries. The Badgers have also not won a game in Iowa City since 1974.

But Saturday the Wisconsin coach felt his team, which upset Ohio State a week earlier, had as good a chance as any team of beating Iowa.

"Nobody's happy with a tie," he said. "But we have to take it.

"THE 10-10 TIE helps them as much as it beats us," he added.

McClain said Iowa is a very good football team, but he thought his team is good too. "Our defense played hard and I'm proud of our whole team."

The Wisconsin coach also said he thought his defense did a good job of containing Iowa's offense in the game. Saturday's 10-10 tie didn't hurt the Hawkeyes' bowl

chancespage 2B

The Badger defense held Iowa's offense to just 45 yards in the first half. Tailback Marck Harrison said the Badgers went into the game with two objectives, to win the football game and to knock Iowa out of contention for the Rose Bowl.

"A 10-10 tie doesn't cut it," he said. "A tie is a loss and we can't view it any other way.

Wisconsin took a 10-0 lead into the locker room at halftime but Harrison said the Badgers didn't believe they had control of the game.

"GOING OUT IN the second half, we said this is a 0-0 game and we didn't feel we had the game won," he said. "Anything could still happen in the Harrison thought his team turned in an excellent performance in some aspects of the game. "But we weren't real consistent on offense and the ball on punt returns.

"Anytime you eliminate those two specialty teams (kicking and punt returns), it's bad for the team," he said. "You got to have those two specialty teams take effect."

Iowa linebacker Kevin Spitzig said the Badgers have gotten their act together after losing to Minnesota earlier in the season. "We knew they were a good team before we even played them.'

McCLAIN BLAMED PART of Wisconsin's problems in the game on poor officiating. The Wisconsin coach said there is a problem in the Big Ten conference with poor officiating.

"The officials see the end results and they got to see the whole thing," he

McClain thought the officials were wrong to penalize Wisconsin for roughing an Iowa receiver in the fourth quarter.

'On that play out of bounds, there was no roughing, he (Wisconsin player) was in the air," McClain said, "and there was no way he was going to stop in mid-air.'

"We're playing so well right now," she said. "Everyone is peaking now ... Communication is fantastic. All of our hitters have really matured. They're hitting really smart."
Honoring the five seniors, Cathy Ar-

"WE HAD FIVE seniors on the court," she added. "They did a great job tonight. It's going to be kind of a rebuilding year next year.'

The only problems the Hawkeyes had against the Gophers came with Iowa's middle block and a few service errors. "We had a hard time blocking in the middle," Stewart said. "They threw up high sets in the middle and we were up early (on the block.) We had a few service errors, but they weren't crucial."

In other Big Ten action, Illinois defeated Michigan and Michigan State to raise its record to 6-5, one game behind the Hawkeyes. The Hawkeyes will play Illinois next weekend on the road and the match could determine who will earn the Western Division's second playoff spot.

McEnroe reaches fine limit in win

STOCKHOLM (UPI) - John McEnroe was fined $2,100, played some terrible tennis, and struck a spectator with a ball hit in anger Sunday, but still reached the finals of the $315,000 Stockholm Open Grand Prix Tennis

He was made to battle all the way for a 1-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 semifinal win over Sweden's Anders Jarryd, but the fine he picked up took him over the $7,500 limit and threatens both his place on the United States team for the Davis Cup final against Sweden in December, and also his spot in the Masters Tournament in New York in January.

If a player is fined more than $7,500 in a year he is liable to a suspension ranging from 24 to 42 days. McEnroe said he would appeal Sunday's fine. Sweden's Mats Wilander defeated American Jimmy Connors, 6-7, 6-3, 6-, in the other semifinal. McEnroe and Wilander will decide the final

Fry's team appeals to bowls

By Brad Zimanek

Iowa, after a 10-10 tie with Wisconsin Saturday. is still only two wins away from a Rose Bowl berth but if the Hawkeyes get derailed before reaching Pasadena, other bowls will gladly accept Hayden Fry's team.

Right now if the Hawkeyes happen to lose one of their next three games before the end of the season and finish 8-3-1 there is a good possibility Iowa will find itself in Dallas, Texas, or Tempe, Ariz., on January 1, 1985

The Cotton Bowl, which has not had a Big Ten team play there in its history, may be looking for Iowa because of its defense and explosive offense. "I think he's going to the Rose Bowl," Jim Brock, executive vice president of the Cotton Bowl, said. "He (Fry) has the best team he's ever had at Iowa and it's very entertaining.

"IF IOWA BECOMES available we'll have to assess the situation and we've never had a Big Ten team in the Cotton Bowl. Hayden has done one heck of a job at Iowa and you guys are lucky to have him.

If Iowa isn't Texas bound, Arizona could be the next place to look for the Iowa black and gold. "Certainly it appears that Iowa is an odds on favorite for a trip to Pasadena," John Junker, assistant executive director of the Fiesta Bowl,

"If the Fiesta Bowl has an opportunity to get them, we'll snap them up. They have a great fan following and when they're playing well like they have for the past three or four years, they will always be on our list. Right now it's about two

The Iowa women's swimming team picked up right where it left off last spring, sweeping the opening two dual meets of the season last weekend over Western Illinois and Wisconsin in the Field House Pool.

The Hawkeyes have now won 15 straight duals dating back to the 1982-

Friday's 61-46 win over Western Illinois went pretty much as expected. Iowa Coach Peter Kennedy moved his swimmers around and got good results. Freshman Bernie Brandenburg was the only double winner for the Hawkeyes, taking the 200-yard individual medley and the 200 butterfly.

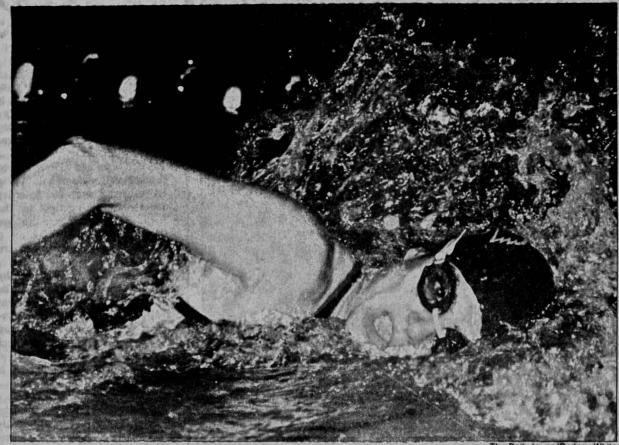

Saturday's meet against a tough Wisconsin squad was a struggle right until the final few events. The Badgers jumped out quick, touching out Iowa in the 200 medley to take a 7-0 lead in the

BUT THE HAWKEYES used the depth that had Badger Coach Carl Johansson worried. Kris Peterson took the 1,000 freestyle followed by freshman Sophie Lindeskog to send Iowa on its way to a 77-63 victory.

The turning point in the meet though, in the eyes of Kennedy, came in the butterfly races. "The key events for us were the butterflies," he said. "Brandenburg won both races and that really helped us. She had a real good

Two other Hawkeyes that had impressive season openers were junior Vickie Nauman and senior Donna Strilich. Nauman, after winning the 500 freestyle Friday, came back to win both the 100 and 200 backstrokes against the Badgers.

STRILICH TOOK THE 50 and 100 freestyles just ahead of teammate Jennifer Petty, giving the Hawkeyes key points. "These two meets were big confidence builders for us," the Cedar Rapids native said. "This kind of sets the tone for the next few meets.

Swimming

"Personally, I'm real happy with the way I swam," Strilich said. "I'm way ahead of where I was at this point last year. My 100 is a second faster and my 50 is about eight-tenths faster."

The third member of the lethal Iowa sprint corp, sophomore Kim Stevens also swam well, taking the 200 freestyle and finishing second in the 500, just being touched out by teammate Kris Schmitz.

"Our sprint crew was just great," Kennedy said. "They are all swimming

But the Badgers wouldn't quit. Behind super sophomore Amy Justesen and a strong diving team, Wisconsin closed the gap. It looked as if the meet would go down to the last event, the 400 freestyle relay, but Iowa diver Kelly Johnson took care of that in a hurry.

THE JUNIOR FROM Minneapolis rallied to edge Wisconsin's Janet Vandernack to win the three-meter contest, giving the dual win to the Johansson had nothing but praise for the Iowa effort. "Iowa is a team that keeps coming at you," he said. "They will continue to get better and better as the season moves along. They were missing some key people today and still took the meet

Among the missing was sophomore butterflier Allison Lloyd. Kennedy elected to hold her out to rest an ailing shoulder. "I think she'll be back with us next week," Kennedy said. "I felt there was no need to risk it this early in the season.'

Freshman Lori Cason also returned to action Saturday after missing Friday's meet with bronchitis. Petty's appearance in the meets marked the first time the San Jose, Calif., junior has ever competed in a season-opening meet. The past two seasons saw her on the sidelines with shoulder trouble.

were some good routines thrown." Dunn said his team had trouble on its first three events, floor exercise, mel horse and still rings before finishing strong on the vault, parallel bars and horizontal bar. 'We just had a slow start," Dunn said. "On floor exercise, the mat was a little harder than the one we're used to and the judging was strict.'

The Hawkeyes had trouble on pommel horse, although that is typical of early season meets when gymnasts aren't used to working with different equipment. Dunn cited the efforts on Paul Bengtson, freshman Joe Thome and Lucarello in the event. Iowa finished in second place as a team on we had some breaks." The Hawkeves won the team title on the horizontal bar with five scores above 9.2. Besides Lucarello's 9.6, a 9.5 Breitenstine and a 9.4 by Dan Bachman paced Iowa.

"The first half of the meet was discouraging," Dunn said Iowa's performance, "but we came pretty close to where we expected to be. We finished third in a field where at least five of the teams should be in the top 10 this season and we beat two of them."

DUNN ADDED THAT Iowa State and Northern Illinois appear to be "down" a bit at the present time.

Bachman was also Iowa's top finisher in the all-around, posting a 101.15 and earning third place while Lucarello took fourth with a 95.25

Buckeyes keep on Hawks' heels Gators keep going

A tie may be like kissing your sister but when you are trying to get to the Rose Bowl a tie was probably about as good as a win for the Big Ten frontrunning Iowa Hawkeyes.

The Hawkeyes were held to a 10-10 tie by Wisconsin Saturday, leaving Iowa with a 5-1-1 record in league play. But Iowa remained in the driver's seat for the trip to Pasadena and still controls its own destiny.

Wins by Iowa over Michigan State and Minnesota in the next two weeks will clinch the league title for the Ohio State and Purdue kept on Iowa's heels with wins. The Buckeyes, 5-2 in league play, blasted winless Indiana 51-7 while surprising Purdue, also 5-2, edged Michigan 31-29.

IN OTHER GAMES, Illinois whipped Minnesota 48-3 and Michigan State handled Northwestern 27-10.

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce said enthusiasm marked the difference between his Buckeyes that were upset one week ago and the one that crushed Indiana on Saturday.

"Basically, it was a great effort by our football team," Bruce said. "They were ready to play and were enthusiastic about playing football to-The Buckeye defense, riddled a week ago by Wisconsin, allowed Indiana only 186 net yards, 183 of that through the Indiana Coach Bill Mallory said William White's first of two pass interceptions, which he returned for a touchdown was the key to sending Indiana down to its ninth loss of the year.

"THE QUICK interception shook our poise and then we let it disturb us and it just mushroomed the rest of the day," Mallory said. "We let the game get away from us early and got buried. They controlled both sides of scrimmage the whole game.'

Purdue used the crisp passing of quarterback Jim Everett to jump to a 24-0 halftime lead and held on to edge Michigan to keep both its title hopes and bowl hopes alive.

Michigan quarterback Chris Zurbrugg, who completed only two passes in the first half, threw three touchdown passes in the final four minutes, eight seconds, but the final touchdown came with only three seconds left and Purdue recovered the onside kick that ended the game.

Michigan quarterback Chris Zurbrugg hurdles Purdue the first quarter of the Boilermakers' 31-29 win over the defenders Jason Houston (57) and Tony Visco (49) during Wolverines Saturday at West Lafayette, Ind.

for a SEC crown

Though the University of Florida football team continues to prove it can win in the Southeastern Conference, it may still have to earn its first league crown on appeal

The 15th-ranked Gators scored 21 points in the second half to whip 11th-ranked Auburn 24-3 Saturday and remain in the fight for the Southeastern Conference title, yet their chances of making a postseason bowl appearance are

School officials must decide by Wednesday if they will appeal the three-year probation recommen-ded by the NCAA for rules violations. The appeal would delay NCAA action until January and leave the Gators eligible for the league championship and a postseason bowl berth.

HOWEVER, SHOULD Florida officials decide to appeal the ruling, there is a chance the conference will take punitive action on its own to block the Gators from making a bowl appearance.

"They can take away our rings and say we didn't win, but we'll know what happened," Florida offensive lineman Lomas Brown said. "Auburn knows we beat them and if we beat Georgia, they'll know we beat them. They can't take away our victories.'

The Gators face No. 8 Georgia, 4-0 in the SEC and a 13-3 winner over Memphis State, at Gator Bowl Stadium next week.

Against Auburn, Florida (6-1-1) broke a 3-3 halftime tie with Neal Anderson scoring on runs of 36 and 15 yards and Lorenzo Hampton on a run of 43 yards.

THE GATORS' DEFENSE had little trouble stopping the Tigers, who entered the game averaging 30 points and more than 400 yards a game. Auburn managed only the field goal and 245 yards against

At Lubbock, Texas, Jeff Ward kicked a 35-yard field goal with three seconds left to lift Texas, which had trailed 10-0 in the con-

At Provo, Utah, Robbie Bosco passed for 237 yards and four touchdowns to help BYU clinch the Western Athletic Conference crown. BYU, which goes to the Holiday Bowl as the WAC champion, was the first school in the country to seal a bowl bid.

Vaughn concert enchants audience, maintains her legendary reputation

F ONE COULD describe it in a word that word would be "depth." When singer extraordinaire Sarah Vaughn performed at Hancher Auditorium Saturday night, it was as though her voice was not so much coming from her as from the hall itself. It wasn't just heard, it seemed to resonate inside one's head.

Not only did Vaughn enchant the audience with her awe-inspiring vocal talents over the course of her 75-minute set, she also worked the audience with her mixture of humor and anecdote, as well as getting the audience involved at a couple of points. Top this with her ever-captivating stage presence (her dress was an eyefuland-a-half) and the picture of the consumate showwoman - which she was beyond question — is complete.

Backed by a tight little three-piece combo, Vaughn had near-perfect accompaniment in the sensibilities of the three musicians. Pianist George Gaffney provided a very subtly stated harmonic base to the music, sensing the right complimentary colorings and textures and giving Vaughn's singing a lush background that helped to bring out the highlights of her vocal runs. This was especially evident with "My Funny Valentine," a Vaughn favorite and a classic in its own right. Gaffney laid down the chords of this ballad in a way that was almost invisible yet very much present, delicately weaving their way through and around Vaughn's wideranging vocal flights.

BASSIST LARRY SIMPKINS and drummer Harold Jones played in much the same manner, displaying their chops at certain moments but providing the right counterpoints for most of the evening. Simpkins' use of a short-scale bass added some snap to the bottom end of the arrangements and his frequent use of slides and octave and double octave jumps seemed almost to mimic equivalent techniques used by Vaughn. His spotlight solo, over which Vaughn ad-libbed a scat vocal, had a lazy, strolling quality as every note and turn of phrase was strung together with effortless grace. Jones' percussive fills were both sensitively played and well-rounded in their selection. He also cut the ultimate portrait of "cool," his wrists the only moving part of him throughout the concert.

Vaughn's set consisted of solid tried-andtrue favorites guaranteed to move the audience the right way. "Extraordinary People," "My Funny Valentine" and "Misty" brought out the full range of Vaughn's voice, swooping from a bone-points in between, with precision and emotive impact. Able to sustain a note or glide for half a minute or more, Vaughn lent a creamy sweetness to these ballads that was enticing and evocative.

UP-TEMPO numbers such as "On A Clear Day," "Can't Give You Anything But Love" and "From This Moment On" displayed her talents for metering and working with the arrangement. The same rocketing and diving qualities present in the ballads were done here at breakneck pace, with Vaughn never missing a beat or cue. So complete are her abilities to reshape a song that one could easily be convinced that they were written especially for her in the first place.

For her encore, Vaughn asked the audience what they wanted to here, with the predictable cacophony of requests pouring forth. After one audience member cap ped off the list by yelling "do them all." Vaughn proceded to do her rendition of "Send In The Clowns," Its dreamlike quality was the perfect ending to the concert, for Vaughn is able to transport her audience to another level. If one agrees with the much held belief that singing is the most natural form of human expression Vaughn's concert was ample evidence that such expression can at times become almost supernatural in its breadth and

Gewandhaus to play classical symphonies

The Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig, East Germany, under the direction of Kurt Masur, will perform Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony at 8 tonight in Hancher Auditorium.

In a 7 p.m. Green Room lecture preceding the performance, organist Delores Bruch of the UI School of Music faculty will discuss art education and audience participation in Eastern European countries. Bruch recently spent four months in Leipzig, the home of the Gewandhaus

Representing almost 250 years of musical tradition, the Gewandhaus Orchestra is one of Europe's oldest and most prestigious orchestras. 'Lap' saddled by boring direction

O DOUBT about it - horse racing is an exciting sport. First of all, there's the power and the speed. Great animals surging around the track; muscles flexing; dust rising from the hooves. Then, there's the suspense. Will the favorite win? Can your horse come from behind?

It would seem difficult to make a film about horse racing dull, but with Phar Lap, a movie which tells the true story of an Australian gelding who became a national hero during the Depression, director Simon Wincer manages to do it.

In the first place, he manages to totally lose the sense of the power and the speed. There is a lot of actual race footage in Phar Lap, but never is this feeling captured. Wincer always insists on cutting away from the action to get reaction shots of Phar Lap's owner, Dave Davis (Ron Liebman), his trainer, Harry Telford (Martin Vaughan), and his strapper, Tommy Woodcock (Tom Burlinson). And just when the horses are speeding in for a close finish, he'll do something stupid like cut to a slow-motion shot which just shoves the viewer back off the edge of her or his seat.

THEN THERE IS no suspense. Of course, anyone who knows the history of Phar Lap will know what the outcome of the races will be. But the film is so obvious even those who don't aren't going to have much trouble figuring them out. When he wins, all that is heard beforehand is his trainer and strapper talking about how good he's running. When he loses, all the talk is about how he can't win because they've handicapped him with too much weight.

David Williamson's screenplay tried to make the movie more complex by getting into the lives of those around the horse, but once the human characters are established, their personalities are so static that their actions, too, are and the horse are rather icy and strapper, is sweet, shy and caring. Telford, the trainer, is determined and hard-hearted. Davis, the owner, is cynical and all business. The relationships they have with each other totally predictable. Woodcock, the cliched; the relationships they have with their spouses are just boring.

THE FILM HAS OTHER minor problems. Phar Lap loses it sense of time by compacting the training of the horse, which presumably took several months, into a single scene of Telford riding the horse across some sand dunes in slow-motion while banal movie music blares from the speakers. His rather unbelievable (even if true) transformation from a last place finisher into a winner is similarly compacted into one scene in which Woodcock decides to practice having Phar Lap come from behind rather than start strong out of the gate.

And, although it is set in the Depression, there is no sense of the desperation of the times. Telford always talks about the financial straits he's in, but the film never shows him truly suffer-farm he started went broke, but this is after Phar Lap dies. No one else even mentions monetary problems.

THEN THERE IS THE TERRIBLY sentimental music by Bruce Rowland. This orchestral score was probably intended to bring a sense of grandeur to the film. What it actually does do, when it pops up at the most inappropriate times, is bring any sense of excitement to a grinding halt.

Phar Lap is said to be the most expensive Australian film ever made. If so, this only goes to prove that money does not buy quality. While the actual story of the horse Phar Lap is too good to ruin completely, the film Phar Lap comes pretty close. "He wasn't just a horse, he was the best," says Telford near the end of the film. Well, Phar ing. An epilogue announces a training Lap's not just a movie, it is also a bore.

HE RETURN OF Martin Guerre is the story of the return of the prodigal son given a savage twist. The premise of this 1981 French film is terrific, all the more so because it really is "a true story" in its essential details, as the opening narration carefully informs us. This historic basis lends enormous credibility to a plot that might otherwise seem better suited to farce or black comedy than to the serious presentation director Daniel Vigne offers.

The film opens with a brief movement through the provincial countryside to the village of Artigat, then dissolves into a mid-16th century marriage ceremony. Brief segments create a feeling for the whole: rings are exchanged under the cure's supervision; the fathers of the bride and groom reach final agreement over the details of the marriage settlement; the marriage bed is blessed, the embarrassed couple already in it; the teen-aged Martin Guerre and Bertrande de Rols are man and wife.

THE FILM moves quickly through the early years of their marriage. creating a feeling for village life and for the difficulties and embarrassments that Martin in particular faces, until one day he simply disappears, abandoning village, wife and recently-

Eight years later, he returns with the same suddenness, recognizing and greeting figures in the crowd that swells as he moves into town. His parents and his father-in-law have passed away, his mother-in-law remarried Martin's uncle, but the survivors rejoice heartily at the return of their own. Martin reclaims his wife, tells stories of years spent in the army, and resettles happily into village life.

This return seems ideal - until passing vagabonds claim that the man accepted by all as their returned prodigal is not Martin at all, but a man known to them as Pansette. This story is first dismissed - as Martin's uncle exclaims, "If anyone knows Martin, it's us." But when Martin presses his uncle for the earnings generated on Martin's land during his absence, the uncle reverses himself and declares this Martin to be an impostor.

At this point, what has been a very fine film becomes only an aboveaverage one. Vigne and screenplay coauthor Jean-Claude Carriere shift their principal interest from the effects of Martin's actions on Bertrande, the village and himself to a focus on the mystery of Martin's identity; complex issues are overshadowed by the single question "Is this Martin or not?"

THIS WOULD be a more satisfying mystery if Vigne did not choose to deliberately disorient the audience's viewing perspective to keep the answer mysterious. We are given no clear angle of vision, no character on the screen to represent our perspective, but must follow the climactic trial scene with a knowledge more limited than that of any character in the village, let alone the principals with whom we have been concerned, Martin, Bertrande and the uncle. Despite this distancing, most audience members should know the answer well before it is given.

The Return of Martin Guerre is a rewarding film not for its mystery, but for its intimate concern with small, band to wife; the smiling exertion of a woman dancing; the expression of a man who has never traveled hearing about distant lands. Sixteenth-century Artigat is at once particularized and made timeless through Vigne's eye for detail. The movie was filmed on location in the village of Balaque, which provided traditional architecture and peasant extras; these combine to add immeasurably to the authentic feeling for the old soil and the old traditions that comes across remarkably on film.

The acting is consistently good, and Gerard Depardieu is very convincing as Martin. But Nathalie Baye's quietly intense performance as Bertrande stands out; she is possessed of a quality that demands to be caressed by a camera. Also memorable is the lively original music by Michel Portal that deservedly won the French equivalent of an Oscar.

This is the first film by Vigne to receive a major release in the United States. The film's considerable merits indicate that more of his work may be expected here in the future.
