Uruguay picks centrist party

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — The centrist Colorado Party presidential candidate Julio Maria Sanguinetti claimed victory early Monday in elections that ended 11 and a half years of tough military rule as riot police broke up rock fights and gun battles among rival factions who clashed in the streets.

As returns from the voting started coming in, street fights broke out between about 200 Colorado Party supporters and 3,000 backers of the leftist Broad Front coalition, witnesses said.

Mideast talks deadlocked

NAQOURA, Lebanon — Israeli-Lebanese talks on withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon deadlocked Monday over how to redeploy U.N. peacekeeping forces in southern Lebanon after the expected withdrawal of 10,000 Israeli occupation troops.

Meanwhile, some 6,000 government troops moved into militia-controlled areas of Beirut in an effort to prove the army can provide the security guarantees Israel demands.

World Court hears charges

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — The World Court, dismissing U.S. arguments that it had no jurisdiction, voted Monday to hear Nicaragua's complaint that the mining of its harbors and support for anti-Sandinista rebels by the United States violates international law.

The International Court of Justice said it had jurisdiction to decide a Nicaraguan complaint that the U.S. backing of the rebels violates international law. Lawyers for the United States had argued that a question of armed hostilities between nations should be resolved in the United Nations Security Council.

Hijackers set new deadline

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Five Somali gunmen Monday renewed their threat to blow up a hijacked airliner with 108 people aboard unless Somalia agreed to release 21 political prisoners.

The five, armed with machine guns, pistols and grenades, gave the Somali government until 8 a.m. today (11 p.m. Monday Iowa time) to meet their demands, Ethiopian Foreign Ministry spokesman Tefere Gizaw said. The deadline was the fifth set since three Somali army officers hijacked the Somali Airlines Boeing 707 to Ethiopia Saturday en route to Cairo.

Bomb linked to U.S. visit

BOGOTA, Colombia — A car bomb exploded Monday in front of the U.S. Embassy in Bogota, killing a Colombian woman and wounding three others, witnesses and radio reports said.

No one immediately took responsibility for the bombing, which came about a week after more than 10 U.S. diplomats left Colombia following threats believed to be linked to the government's decision to extradite drug smugglers to the United States.

Artificial heart patient stable

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — William J. Schroeder passed the danger of additional severe bleeding, was alert and gained strength on his second day of life with an artificial heart beating in his chest, a doctor reported Monday.

Rejection of the artificial heart is not a problem because its plastic and metal components are inert and are accepted by the body. While a heart transplant is preferable to a mechanical heart, there are thousands of people in the United States each year unable to receive transplants, the developer said.

He's got the right idea

MADISON, Wis. — Beethoven probably never knew it, but he was left-faced, and left-faced people may be predisposed to making great music, suggesting further that musical talent is inherited, according to Karl U. Smith, a psychology professor at the University of Wisconsin.

City renting outfits for aspiring Santa Clauses

Just in the St. Nick of time for the holidays, the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department is renting Santa Claus outfits for social non-profit functions.

The rental fee for the suit is $2 for residents and $4 for nonresidents. The suit comes complete with full St. Nicholas garb, beard, wig and foy bag, but not reindeer. A $1 refundable deposit will be charged for the use of the suit.

People requesting suits are asked to return them as soon as possible after the event.

Anyone wishing to reserve a suit may do so by calling the Recreation Division Office at 356-5100 during the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. from Monday through Friday.

Radars announced

As part of their unending search for motorists exceeding the speed limit, the Iowa City police will be monitoring traffic with radar in the following areas this week. However, the police warn that these locations do not preclude radar monitoring at other sites.

On Monday, Nov. 26, police will scan the Highway 6 by-pass, Rohret Road and North Governor Street. Tuesday, Nov. 27, police will be watching South Dodge Street, Sunset Street and North Dodge Street.

On Wednesday, Nov. 28, police will

Eland recognized as 'Best' for work with kids in pain

Joan Eland, assistant professor at the UI College of Nursing, was among four UI faculty members named as outstanding leaders in an Esquire Magazine article titled "The Best of the New Generation" in the December issue.

Eland spent 11 years developing assessment tools for children and pain. After 10 years of research, Eland perfected the Eland Color Tool, which allows a child to indicate degrees of pain using a drawing of a child and crayons.

"I think it's a very nice honor," said Eland.

Currently, Eland is using small Walkman-type cassette players to aid children in alleviating pain. According to Eland, the children choose what they want to hear on the player and the response, so far, has been "very positive." Of the 70 children who have used the players to help relieve pain, Eland said that only one did not feel he had benefited from the cassette player.

Brownlee meets with UI faculty

By Edlyne Ihejirika
Staff Writer

An open line of communication between state Board of Regents staff and UI faculty members received some positive reinforcement last week as Regents President S.J. Brownlee and UI Faculty Senate President Donal Carlston met informally to discuss issues concerning faculty members.

The Tuesday meeting was arranged by Carlston as a result of Faculty Council discussions regarding ways to improve communication between UI faculty and the regents. At the time the meeting was arranged, Carlston and UI President James O. Freedman expressed the hope it would establish a pattern for such meetings on an annual basis in the future.

Freedman said the regents have always been interested in hearing from faculty members at the three state schools, and it has usually been done through regents meetings. "But I think that from time to time, meetings between regents presidents and faculty presidents would be a good thing to have," he said.

CARLSTON attended the meeting with two other members of the faculty council. He said the four talked about "a whole lot of things," including faculty salary problems, the budgetary process and how the regents are involved in these processes.

UI Pediatrics Professor Ekhard Ziegler said he believes the meeting went well. "I certainly felt that it was productive and that it helped a lot," he said.

Carlston said "it was more like a conversation — everyone bringing up questions and interests and concerns as they fit into what we were talking about. We were kind of educating ourselves about the whole budgetary process and university-state relationships — that kind of thing."

He said they discussed faculty members' and regents' perceptions of each other.

"The idea was that we were going to kind of meet the man (Brownlee), get to know him a little bit and mention whatever kinds of interests or concerns we had that came to mind," he said.

ACCORDING TO Brownlee, the meeting was a "healthy" thing for all who attended. "It was nice to get acquainted," he said. "We talked a lot about the board's role of governance, how it views its responsibilities, and other things, like how it can best obtain funding for the university."

Carlston said not many faculty problems came up at the meeting, but specific questions and comments were inevitably brought up by the faculty members.

For instance, "We didn't have any intention of discussing the continuing problem with low faculty salary," he said. "But it seems whenever you have a group of faculty together, that ends up being a topic of conversation and so we ended up spending more time on it than we wanted to."

Carlston said Brownlee's general attitude is that his door is open, "that any time the faculty has problems or topics of interest they would like to discuss with him, they can feel free to come talk to him."

"The board president's door is always open to visits from any member of the university community, including students, faculty and staff," Brownlee said. "I was glad to have had the opportunity to explain how the board works and functions."

CARLSTON said the group talked about making the meeting an annual event, but he no longer believes it will be necessary to set up a meeting on a regular basis.

"This sort of thing is useful only if the faculty leadership feels that there are things they'd like to chat about informally," he said. "I think I would recommend to Dick (Faculty Council Vice President Richard Sjolund), who is going to be president next year, to get to know the president of the regents and other members of the regents staff... but I don't think there's any need to have any sort of annual meeting."

SJOLUND, who also attended the meeting, agreed it was productive and helpful in opening lines of communication but said he hasn't given much thought to how he will establish the meetings next year. "I do think it's a good opportunity and that it should definitely be done on a regular basis, but I'm not sure how often."

Freedman also said he is unsure just how often these meetings should be held. "I think that's up to the board president and the faculty senate president to decide whether they want to meet annually each fall. Each president will want to handle it in his own way," he said.

Asked if he felt faculty members may be intimidated by the present system of addressing the entire board during monthly regents meetings with their concerns and problems, Freedman said, "No, I don't... Faculty are very, very articulate and persuasive when they talk to the Board of Regents, and very helpful to the university."

Seven UI faculty members awarded grants

Seven UI faculty members in professional schools and colleges have been awarded grants from the U.S. Department of Education to develop undergraduate courses on international topics.

The UI Center for International and Comparative Studies grants, totaling $2,500 each, were announced by CICS Chairman Paul Greenough, who said they will help increase and enhance courses available to UI undergraduates in international studies. The grants are the first effort by CICS to expand activities into the UI professional colleges.

Grant recipients include:

- UI Associate Nursing Professor Kathleen Buckwalter and Nursing Assistant Instructor Martha Carpenter for an "International Nursing Seminar" to be held at the College of Nursing during the 1986 fall semester.

- David Curry, chairman of the UI Marketing Department, for "International Marketing: Strategy, Welfare and Structure" during the 1986 fall semester.

- John Hochheimer, UI journalism instructor, for "Broadcast Journalism: Third World" next fall.

- Ann Roberts, UI assistant professor of art and art history, for "History of Manuscript Books" this spring.

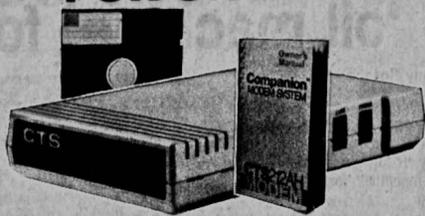

- Donald Smith, UI journalism professor, for "Cultural and Historical Foundations of Communication: U.S.S.R. and China Components" this spring.

- Joy Spurling, UI instructor in art and art history, for "American Artists and European Art" next fall.

- Burns Weston, UI law professor, for "Human Rights in the World Community: Problems of Law and Policy," tentatively scheduled for the 1986 spring semester.

The grants can be used to purchase materials, obtain research assistants, travel to a source of materials or for other expenses related to course development, Greenough said.

Jepsen's defeat prompts Grassley to 'oil machine' for '85 campaign

By Wendy Roscoe
Staff Writer

In the wake of Sen. Roger Jepsen's defeat in the 1984 general election, Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, has already begun "oiling the machine" for his 1986 re-election campaign.

Grassley's assistant press secretary, Allen Finch, said a fund-raising letter mailed recently to "loyal party supporters" is merely a target letter designed to attract campaign funds.

In the letter, Grassley states, "The liberal forces that replaced Roger (Jepsen) will not be satisfied with my being senior senator. You may be sure that they are already plotting to replace me as senator."

"To make matters worse, Iowa has not re-elected an incumbent senator since 1966."

Grassley says in the letter that his own "political battle" began the day after the 1984 election.

Iowa Democratic Chairman Dave Nagle said his party has no intention of doing any campaign work for the 1986 senate race "until at least February (1985)."

NAGLE SAID the Democratic Party will begin campaigning "the first time that we have signs that the public is ready to hear from us again."

During a speech made Nov. 1 on behalf of Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District, Grassley said his potential Democratic opponents may include Nagle, Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller or Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-6th District.

Finch said although Jepsen and Grassley had similar voting records in the Senate, he doesn't think this will hurt Grassley's re-election bid in 1986. "The fact that they voted together (in the Senate) in no way demeans Grassley's character," he said. "I think Iowans rejected Jepsen on a more personal basis."

Finch said the work now being done on Grassley's re-election campaign is merely "preliminary."

"The liberal forces that replaced Roger (Jepsen) will not be satisfied with my being senior senator," says Sen. Chuck Grassley in a recent fundraising letter. "You may be sure that they are already plotting to replace me as senator."

In the meantime, Finch said he does not foresee problems for Grassley in working with the newly elected Democrat Tom Harkin.

"Historically, members of the Iowa delegation will come down to issues of fundamental concern to Iowans," Finch said. Because of this, he said, partisan lines will probably not stand between the two senators on "important issues."

"It's not going to be a cat and mouse game," Finch said.

Local educators compete for spot on space shuttle

By Karyn Riley

Several Iowa City teachers will be competing against thousands of other teachers from across the nation for a spot on a 1986 space shuttle mission as part of the NASA Teacher In Space Project.

The project, conducted by NASA in cooperation with the Council of Chief State School Officers, began after President Ronald Reagan announced that the first non-astronaut in space would be a school teacher.

"I know the chances of being selected are 10,000 to one, but I have always been fascinated with space," said Mary Ann Letizio, a teacher at Hoover Elementary School. "I would love to go."

Letizio said she has taught astronomy and felt her experience as a speaker would help her in her quest for the seat on the shuttle.

The teacher who is selected to make a trip on the shuttle will be obligated to NASA for a year following the trip to communicate the experience to the public through lectures, consultation and other activities.

DALE HIBBS, A GOVERNMENT teacher at City High, said he felt qualified for the mission and its year-long responsibilities because of his experience as a communicator in the Iowa Legislature, as a teacher of English and his work on a radio show.

"I've led an interesting life and I feel that this would be one more additional adventure," he said. Any teacher applying for the mission must be a U.S. citizen and meet certain medical requirements. The teacher must also have had five years experience as a full-time classroom instructor.

Ginny Clark, a teacher at Horace Mann School, said she worked at mission control for NASA at the Johnson Space Center three years ago when the UI space research probe was taken into space by the shuttle. Clark's husband worked on the UI project.

"Personally I think it would be incredibly gratifying and professionally I think it's important to share this experience with others," she said. "I have a strong commitment to education for now and for the future."

JOSEPH WOLVEK, state coordinator for the Teachers in Space Program, said he expects 500 to 1,000 applicants from Iowa. The program accepts two nominees from each state who then go on to a National Review Panel, which will select 10 finalists.

The NASA Space Flight Participant Evaluation Committee will narrow the field to five individuals. The administrator of the NASA program will then make the final decision.

The applications will be judged on creativity and originality, the teacher's communication skills, professional background and community involvement.

Applications for the program will be taken from Dec. 1 through Feb. 1 at the Council of Chief State School Officers in Washington, D.C.

"There's a challenge in doing something like this and I'm always eager for a new challenge," said Mark Wilson, a teacher at Grant Wood Elementary School.

"Even if I don't make it, it will still be fun to try for it," Wilson said. "At least it would be something fun to tell to the grandchildren someday."

$25,000 donation aids Iowa Hall facelift

Martin Marietta Basic Products, a Des Moines-based firm, has contributed $25,000 to the Iowa Hall, a soon-to-be-opened addition in the UI Museum of Natural History in Macbride Hall.

The Martin Marietta contribution — which will assist in development of the Devonian, Mississippian and Pennsylvanian exhibits depicting Iowa's geological history — was presented to UI President James O. Freedman and George Schrimper, curator of the UI Museum of Natural History, during a recent ceremony.

Iowa Hall is scheduled to open in May 1985. It will portray the state's geological, cultural and environmental history through 56 exhibits, scenes and landscapes.

U.S. formally restores diplomatic ties with Iraq

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and Iraq, frequent antagonists during a 17-year break in relations...

White House meeting attended by Reagan and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tarek Aziz. A senior administration official described the move as having limited impact...

against Iran" in its 4-year-old war with Iraq. "We are prepared today to discuss improved relations with Iran — when Iran ceases its support for international terrorism...

both Iran and Iraq are still barred from access to U.S. military hardware.

United States in retaliation for U.S. support of Israel in the 1967 Six-Day War.

"an evolution in the Iraqi attitude in recent years."

The official pointed in particular to comments by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein about the need for a relationship between Jordan and the Palestinians — a proposal offered by Reagan in his September 1982 peace initiative...

"I think if you add up some of those comments, you can see why we're interested in dialogue," the official said.

Shultz to start arms reduction talk at January agenda-setting meetings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz intends to start arms reduction talks with the Soviets in January, not just discuss an agenda for nuclear weapons negotiations...

Once negotiations begin, Burt said, "We want the Soviet Union for the first time to sit down and agree to actual (weapons) reductions. Another priority is verifiability, that is, our ability to monitor agreements."

Burt said the Soviets have been told that deployment of the missiles can be stopped and those in place can be removed only under an arms agreement and not as a condition for negotiations.

"We're not again going to pay a price," he said. "We're not going to stop deploying those missiles simply to get back to the negotiating table."

Burt said the United States also would consider a moratorium on the testing of anti-satellite weapons depending on the course of genuine negotiations.

Robert McFarlane, President Ronald Reagan's national security adviser, said Sunday that a freeze on the development of space weapons would be subject to negotiation, not an automatic component of new talks...

NOT NEGOTIABLE, in the U.S. view, he said, would be any Soviet conditions before getting down to work.

The Soviets broke off the talks last winter after the United States began deploying cruise and Pershing-2 medium range nuclear missiles in several Western European countries to counter Soviet missiles already aimed against U.S. NATO allies.

Moscow had demanded that the new U.S. missiles be pulled out before arms talks could be resumed. The Reagan administration stood firm and deployment of the new weapons is continuing.

Justices reject appeal on equal pay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, refusing to act in a Washington state case, Monday skirted the national controversy over the issue of "comparable worth" — giving men and women the same pay for jobs of similar skill and responsibility.

years, 15 states have enacted laws implementing the idea, and five others have passed resolutions declaring comparable worth the goal of state wage scales.

So far, the only ruling on the topic by the Supreme Court was in 1981, when it held in an Oregon case that women could sue their employers for wage discrimination even if the jobs performed by women were not identical to those of male employees.

comparable work, the nurses said. Under the federal appeals court ruling, women suffering wage discrimination would not be allowed to show the wage scale hurt them disproportionately. They would be forced to "produce the most blatant evidence of intentional discrimination," which is much harder to find, lawyers for the nurses argued.

THE COURT ALSO ruled Monday that congressional representatives are not totally immune from job discrimination suits in firing of employees despite constitutional protection against scrutiny of their legislative actions.

Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., appealed a federal appeals court ruling that found the Constitution's "speech and debate clause" does not shield Jones from being sued for firing the female manager of the House of Representatives restaurant system.

The justices, without explanation, declined to review the ruling, clearing the way for Anne Walker to pursue her suit. The federal appeals court rejected Jones' arguments that his firing of Walker, a 12-year veteran, was immune from judicial scrutiny under the speech and debate clause.

The clause bars congressmen and senators from being questioned for their legislative actions.

The justices, without comment, rejected an appeal from University of Washington nursing faculty, which appealed a federal court ruling that their pay scale was not discriminatory.

CONTROVERSY over that case continues to rage. Earlier this month, Clarence Pendleton, chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, denounced comparable worth as "probably the loneliest idea since 'Looney Tunes' came on the screen."

Although the Supreme Court and Congress have not acted definitively on the pay equity concept, several states, including Minnesota, have embraced comparable pay for men and women performing similar, but not identical, jobs. Over the past four

THE CASE BEFORE the high court Monday involved a challenge by members of the faculty of the University of Washington School of Nursing to the school's wage scale. They brought suit in 1974 under the Equal Pay Act and the 1964 Civil Rights Act, saying men in positions comparable to women were paid more.

A federal district court ruled against them, and, on review, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals held that the nurses had not shown discriminatory treatment by that fact that the university paid the prevailing market wage.

In their Supreme Court appeal, the nurses argued that the lower court gave employers everywhere a "fail-safe defense" against wage discrimination charges by allowing them to say they pay the market rate for employees.

The market rate policy still results in paying women lower wages than men for Five Senators vie for leader post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five conservative Republicans, operating from their Capitol Hill headquarters, launched final vote appeals Monday in the hectic race for the post of Senate majority leader.

The candidates, seeking to succeed Tennessee's retiring Sen. Howard Baker in the powerful political position, are Richard Lugar of Indiana, Ted Stevens of Alaska, James McClure of Idaho, Pete Domenici of New Mexico and Robert Dole of Kansas.

"I don't think anyone can tell how it looks," said Stevens, the current assistant Senate GOP leader. "It keeps shifting so much that no one can tell."

Impossible to call, the election hinges on many factors such as personal friendships, past and potential favors, the impact on chairmanships and even geographical ties. In addition, because the balloting is secret, there have been instances when firm commitments failed to materialize.

THE ELECTION will be held Wednesday under a system where the low man is eliminated on each ballot until one gets a majority, 27, of the 53 Republican senators and senators-elect.

All five candidates concede that none has the votes to win on the first ballot, and all were attempting to nail down enough strength to survive the first vote.

The Senate's tiny Republican liberal-moderate bloc planned to meet today to consider uniting behind one candidate, perhaps after the first ballot, after first talking with at least one of the candidates, Lugar.

The "gang of six" consists of Sens. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, Charles Mathias of Maryland, Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, John Chafee of Rhode Island, Robert Stafford of Vermont and Mark Andrews of North Dakota.

They met with each of the five candidates before the congressional session ended, and a spokesman for Chafee said it has been impossible to arrange a meeting since then because, "These guys have been spread all around God's green earth."

GOING INTO THE first round, the candidates concede there is still a large bloc of uncommitted senators, somewhere between 12 and 20, who may go into the Old Supreme Court chamber for the meeting Wednesday without tipping their intention.

McClure, who has a solid first-round base as the preferred candidate of the right wing, and Dole, the highly-visible former GOP vice presidential candidate and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, appear the strongest on the first ballot.

That would leave Domenici, Stevens and Lugar at greatest risk on the first vote.

Domenici and Lugar have expressed confidence on the first ballot but Stevens, the assistant leader since 1977, seemed somewhat discouraged about his chances.

Stevens said "I don't talk numbers," but noted that other candidates — Dole, McClure and Domenici — could expect backing from committees they head while he does not chair a major committee.

A spokesman for McClure, who said it would require 11 votes to survive the first round and a minimum of 14 on the second, said his man has that much support.

Mayors call for budget deficit resolution

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Mayors from across the nation, asking to be "liberated to solve the human needs of America's cities," Monday called for long-term fiscal reforms to reduce the federal budget deficit.

The establishment of a bipartisan commission, similar to the one that recommended changes in the Social Security system, would be the first step toward solving the deficit problem, said delegates to the annual convention of the National League of Cities.

The league's resolutions committee approved policy statements calling for "major federal tax reform" and the establishment of a deficit task force to ensure "the future fiscal health of American cities."

The resolutions will be presented to the full league membership at the general session Wednesday, the final day of the 61st annual Congress of Cities.

"The deficit right now is a major domestic problem to resolve if we're going to be liberated to solve the human needs of American cities," said outgoing NLC President George Latimer, the mayor of St. Paul, Minn.

He said tax increases and spending cuts will be necessary to reduce the deficit, which is projected at $246 billion by fiscal 1989.

THE LEAGUE'S proposed policy statement on federal tax reform says cuts in domestic spending, as well as in the defense budget, will be necessary to bring the deficit under control.

Any domestic budget cuts, the statement says, should be made in "programs which do not provide income-related benefits" and tax increases "should be designed to maintain the existing progressivity of the tax system and not shift tax burdens to lower income groups."

The statement also calls for changes in the federal tax code to make the tax system "fairer, more efficient and more economically neutral."

Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut proposed the resolution urging President Reagan to appoint a national commission to deal with the deficit.

This year's gathering of some 3,000 mayors and councilmen has focused on the fiscal problems of cities resulting from the Reagan administration's New Federalism.

During Monday's opening session, Latimer said the funding cuts have given cities the main responsibility of caring for the nation's poor.

"We're going to have to continue our role... being an advocate for the homeless, the displaced, the dislocated in our society," Latimer said. "The increase of people under the poverty line continues unabated."

Medicaid may fund transplant program

By Charlene Lee
Staff Writer

Gov. Terry Branstad will receive a report in about two weeks that contains the recommendation that state Medicaid funds be used to pay for organ transplants soon to be performed at UI Hospitals.

The 25-member Governor's Advisory Committee on Organ Transplants met in Des Moines Nov. 16 to vote on recommendations to present to the governor. One of the main focuses of the recommendations was the source of funding of organ transplants for patients who can't pay for them.

The advisory board recommended that state Medicaid funds be expanded to include liver, heart, heart-lung and pancreas transplants. Kidney transplants were not considered by the committee because such transplants are already being funded by Medicare through a program implemented by Social Security in 1973.

"It is recommended that public funding of transplantations may be expanded to include the following organs: liver, heart, heart-lung and pancreas," states the recommendation.

ACCORDING TO Dr. Gary Levitz, assistant director of UI Hospitals and member of the advisory board, some controversy arose at the meeting over the amount of Medicaid funds to be allocated per transplant.

"There were some people at the meeting who felt coverage should be limited and not open-ended. But that was the minority view," said Levitz.

In the end, however, no limitation was set in the task force's recommendation. According to the report, the decision was "based on the feeling of the task force that the state has the ethical obligation to provide access to life-saving procedures."

The report, which will be printed next week, contains 18 recommendations and will be presented to Mike Reagan, commissioner of the state Department of Human Services. Reagan will then pass the report on to the governor in mid-December, according to Coleen Tompkins, staff coordinator for the advisory board.

TOMPKINS SAID it will be the task of the governor to decide which of the recommendations to implement. Other recommendations include placing someone in charge of monitoring the entire program and a suggestion that Branstad support public campaigning to increase awareness of the need for donated organs.

Currently, UI Hospitals is the only facility in the state that handles organ transplants. The facility began evaluating possible recipients for its new heart and liver transplant program Nov. 1.

According to Barb Schanbacher, coordinator of the transplant program at UI Hospitals, "nothing has really happened yet" as far as conducting heart and liver transplants is concerned.

Change of climate

Iowa's image is one of small towns, friendly neighborhoods and family-oriented values. Many Iowans are proud of this peaceful image and have chosen to raise their children here because of it.

Yet a cloud of fear seems to be overshadowing that image. With the increased awareness of kidnapping, sexual abuse and criminal quality day care, Iowa's status as a safe place to raise children is quickly disappearing.

In an Iowa Poll released Sunday in the Des Moines Register, two out of three adults surveyed feel that children are less safe now than they were five years ago. Eighty-six percent of the parents asked say that recent kidnappings and child sexual abuse cases have made them more cautious or strict with their own children.

The legacy of people who abuse children has been fear. Parents have to teach their children to suspect affection in order to protect them from abuse.

The problem is national, and it's even more serious in more populous areas. But that it is a problem at all in Iowa is a tragedy. Iowans have tried to maintain traditional values of family and community, and the new climate of fear could seriously handicap their commitment to those values.

It could, however, also strengthen them. All concerned Iowans, with or without children, must come together to protect the state's most helpless residents. Even small steps, from watching out for kids on a bus to leaving the light on for the carrier delivering papers, are productive.

And Gov. Terry Branstad is to be applauded for holding the nation's first conference on child protection. His "Children in Jeopardy" meeting on Wednesday should be only a first step in a dialogue dealing with all types of child abuse.

The problem is a sad one, yet if Iowans join together in response to it, the future for children needn't be one of fear.

Wheels of justice?

The theory of American democracy is based upon principles too often ignored in the practice of American government. A case in point is the decision by Mount Pleasant, Ia., authorities to ban Dale Barrett from the town streets.

Barrett has had the misfortune of being a wheelchair-bound paraplegic for eight years. It's not easy going from full to severely limited mobility, especially in a society structured primarily on the divine average. Although physical improvements have been made recently, attitudes toward the handicapped can still be medieval.

The Mount Pleasant policy toward Barrett falls into the medieval category. This summer, following citizen complaints, Mount Pleasant police notified Barrett he would no longer be able to operate his electric wheelchair on town streets.

Mount Pleasant Mayor Edward King suggests this decision was based on concern for Barrett's well-being: "We don't want him to get hurt worse than he is. Having him go all over the community ... is trouble."

What Mayor King and others seem to be overlooking in conducting local government is a phrase in the Declaration of Independence concerning inalienable rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

While certain officials of Mount Pleasant might prefer otherwise, this country was founded on the principle that the rights of the individual must be maintained even at the expense of a convenience to the majority — or to the government itself.

Dale Barrett's civil rights are being abridged; the paternalistic excuse offered by King does not alter the case. To reason otherwise would be to reason that local government may restrict the movements of any persons whose travels might endanger their own safety or cause "trouble": the blind, the elderly, racial or religious minorities, political dissidents.

If Dale Barrett can be placed under modified house arrest because his physical disadvantage makes him inconvenient to Mount Pleasant, then none of us is safe.

The home team loses

On Sunday the citizens of Uruguay went to the polls for the first time since 1973, when a repressive military government seized power. Within the last year El Salvador and Nicaragua also held elections.

What these countries have in common is that in each case major opposition groups were either de facto or de jure barred from participating in their elections. In Uruguay, major leftist candidate Wilson Ferreira Aldunate is in jail and his name was removed from the ballot. In Nicaragua, the Sandinistas effectively barred meaningful opposition from the center and the right. And in El Salvador, death squads effectively prevented the left from participating.

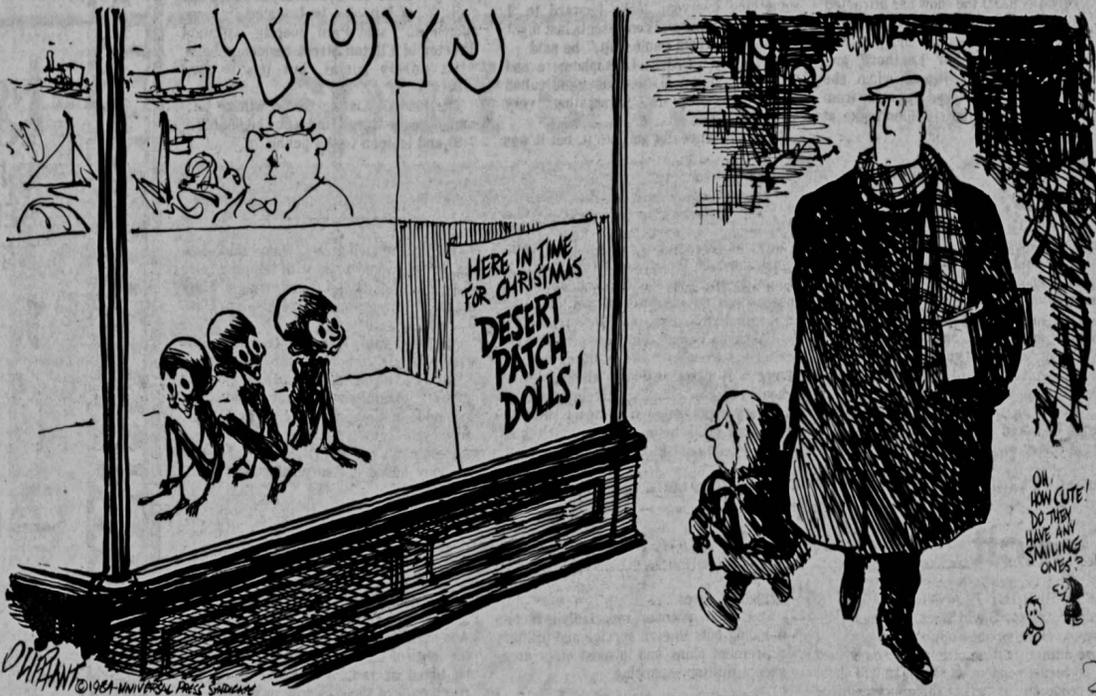

What these countries do not share is a common U.S. response. The United States has for four years virtually ignored Uruguay, despite the fact that it had the largest number of political prisoners, in relation to population, in the world. While the United States is still ignoring Uruguay and its flawed election, it has condemned the flawed election in Nicaragua and praised the flawed elections in El Salvador.

The result of this and similar foreign policy decisions is the growing perception that the United States acts in the world not on the basis of principle but on the basis of short-term power alignments.

The problem with that is that when our allies are chosen not because of shared principles but because they promise to play on our side rather than the other (the Soviets), we lose a moral authority derived from a commitment to human rights and political freedom.

When we abandon our principles, the only reason to root for the American Eagles instead of the Russian Bears is that the Eagles are the home team. That is a fine way to choose your football team — football is, after all, only a game — but it is a poor way to run a world.

Transit service respects rights...

By Dana Shugar, Tess Catalano and Andrea French

WE WOULD LIKE to let the public know our position on the Human Rights Ordinance in regards to the Women's Transit Authority. This memo was sent to the Iowa City Council on Nov. 15 to address their concerns of compliance:

• Section 18-31 (a). Discrimination in hiring.

The WTA has no plans or funds at this time to hire workers for our service. All of our labor will be volunteer. Should funding become available for paid positions with WTA, those positions would be administrative in nature, and at such a time the WTA would adhere to and uphold the principles and laws of the Human Rights Ordinance and Iowa City Code in hiring.

There are precedents in our own city for this structure in the area of women's safety. The Rape Victim Advocacy Program is run by volunteer women, yet their paid positions have been filled in full compliance with affirmative action and equal opportunity practices.

• Section 18-33 (a). Denying any person the full enjoyment of ... services.

The Women's Transit Authority would offer the service of rape prevention in the form of safe transportation after dark. As such, we will offer this service to any caller who needs it.

Statistics indicate that 96 percent of the crisis calls received by the RVAP are women. We can only assume that the overwhelming majority of our ridership will be women. However, we have already begun the process of ensuring equal enjoyment of services by establishing a list of male volunteer drivers for male callers.

We must also assure we do not endanger our riders or our drivers. In the past, attempts at offering an "escort" service for women by local fraternities have failed because of their inability to do this. In our opinion, the only way to ensure the safety of our riders is to use women as our volunteer drivers.

Thus, by establishing the complementary volunteer list of male drivers for male callers, we ensure the safety of women riders and drivers as well as provide safe transportation for men who need it.

• Chapter 601J of the Iowa Code. Coordination of service with existing transit services.

We see the WTA as completing the transportation picture in Iowa City. To avoid duplication of services we will train our volunteers to assist a caller in using the system that best suits his/her needs. Bus maps of Iowa City, Coralville and Cambus routes will be used to inform the caller. In addition, the WTA could offer a ride to someone after they had gotten off a local bus and still had a significant walk ahead.

And with the proposed "Ride Scholarship" program, we hope to be able to provide bus and taxi fares for those who can't afford them when a bus or taxi better suits their needs.

It is important to note that while the transit systems of Iowa City are indeed exemplary, they do not run past 10:30 p.m. (Iowa City) and midnight (Cambus). Our proposed service hours are from dark (5-7 p.m.) to 2 a.m., when the UI Main Library and bars close.

Further, our service will operate seven days a week, while the Iowa City system does not run Sunday. We expect that our peak operating period will be after Iowa City and Cambus have stopped their service.

As a final note, the Women's Transit Authority recognizes and respects the importance of the Iowa City Human Rights Ordinance. It is not our intention to disregard it in our attempt to provide a safe rape prevention transportation service. We appreciate the interest the council has taken in our project, and we hope that with continued cooperation, it will be a success.

Catalano, Shugar and French are volunteer organizers of the Women's Transit Authority.

...but safety should not be ignored

By Karla Miller

I AM WRITING in response to the Daily Iowan editorial by Caroline Dieterle regarding the Women's Transit Authority and the role of men's staffing (Nov. 16).

I agree with Dieterle that the Iowa City Council should adhere to its Human Rights Ordinance. As women, we are particularly aware of discrimination and certainly do not want to be guilty of it. There are factors here, however, that have nothing to do with discrimination but with safety.

We have long opposed the idea of a male escort service for two reasons: First, there is no adequate way to screen applicants to make sure we don't get a man who will abuse. It is important to realize that rape, the focus of Dieterle's editorial, is an extreme example of sexual abuse. Inappropriate comments and actions that are less severe but employ the same dynamics (for example, those of a local man who wanted to start a safety escort service because he felt it would be a good way to meet "girls") can be damaging in and of themselves.

When we talk about a safe rape prevention service, we mean a service free from sexual harassment of any sort. We could have 200 sensitive men behaving appropriately, and it would only take one man harassing or assaulting one woman to have the entire project shut down.

SECOND, THE IDEA of men working on an escort service perpetuates the notions that women need to depend on men for their safety and that men are responsible for that safety. Many women, therefore, will not explore options for making themselves safer because they figure a boyfriend, father, brother or some other male will take care of them.

This has repeatedly been proved false. It is also an unfair and unrealistic burden to place on men. Many times we have seen men blame themselves because they were unable to protect a woman they cared about from being assaulted.

The fact is that we all need to work on preventing sexual abuse. There are many areas in which men sensitive to the issue can make a big difference: setting up consciousness-raising groups about sexual abuse and the internalization of sex-role stereotypes; confronting peers on offensive behavior; setting up support groups for men who, through their caring for victims of sexual abuse, become victims themselves.

THIS VITAL AND BASIC work, unfortunately, is not as exciting as protecting others, but it is essential. Too many times, men have said that they want to do something and then gone away, never to be seen again.

As a community, we need women and men fighting against the entire spectrum of sexual abuse in varied and different ways. The Women's Transit Authority seeks to provide safe transportation with the least amount of risk. But because some men have abused their work on programs like this, it has made us unsure and made others feel unsafe.

The WTA plans on using strict affirmative action guidelines if they can hire paid staff. Its administrators are also planning to have male drivers for men who meet the basic criteria of the service. Several men have already indicated they would help the WTA in this way.

Men who are truly sensitive will know what I am talking about. They are the ones who support every effort for women to live and work in a safe environment. They are the ones who are not threatened by programs that strengthen the position of women and strengthen women themselves.

All too often, we have seen the words "discrimination" and "reverse discrimination" used against women who are working for the safety and equality of others.

Miller is coordinator of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

'Nancy Dearest'? Thumbs down!

FROM TIME TO TIME, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo refers to the nation as a family. To him, that's a warm, loving, close and good thing. To me, though, every time Cuomo mentions family, I think of my friend's uncle who ran off with his brother's wife.

The last thing we need is a country that's like a family, and now we have the Ronald Reagans to prove my point.

In an interview, Nancy Reagan admitted she and her stepson, Michael, just don't get along, that there's an "estrangement" that has existed for three years. Michael reacted with hurt and shock. One only wishes he had reacted with silence.

But he didn't. Instead, he called a press conference. He said he wasn't even invited to the Santa Barbara ranch for Thanksgiving. "What timing for the first lady of this country," he said of Mrs. Reagan's pre-turkey remark. Referring to the fall Mrs. Reagan took just before the election, Michael said: "Maybe the bump on the head was more serious than we thought." He also said he was thinking about writing a book about the Reagans. I can't wait.

There are those who chortle at the Reagans going at each other in print. The first family, after all, has been holier than all of us not only in promoting family values but in demanding that the family be protected and succored, that it must be protected by legislation.

SO WHAT? The family is the one area in which hypocrisy is unavoidable. No matter your intentions, your family somehow gets away from you. Every family is a collection of people connected not by blood but by mutual antagonisms, and no outsider can ever tell who's right.

Maybe it's just me, but I'm sick of families making us a part of their fights. That holds for Christina Crawford, whose mommie Joan may have been the world's worst, but I didn't want to know; and it holds for Gary Crosby, who told us things about Bing I was happy not knowing. What makes it worse is that if Joan and Bing had still been around, they could have made a case against their kids. These things are unknowable. They should be unmentionable.

It would have been best if Nancy Reagan had simply told her interviewer that she was not going to talk about her family. But she simply acknowledged that she and her stepson did not get along. To that shot from her peashooter, Michael responded with a Big Bertha of a press conference, interviews and a threatened book.

Maybe there's no stopping Michael. I'm sure he thinks he's justified. What kid has not wanted to call a press conference to tell the world about his parents? But the whole thing is unseemly and tells us nothing we either need to know or don't know already.

Michael ... Nancy ... your country gives you a choice: Either put up or shut up, but either way, close the window. The neighbors are listening.

have been asked to serenade Mr. X to the tune of the Iowa Fight Song and all contestants have been peppered with questions such as, "If you were stuck in the elevator alone with Mr. or Ms. X, how would you entertain them?" or, "What do you think the real purpose of a drive-in movie is?"

ROBINSON SAID the show has attracted a number of diverse individuals during the last three years. "We had one girl who called herself 'Heather Leather,' and another girl who screamed when she realized the date she picked was a guy from her rhetoric class who she didn't like at all."

Another unlucky male contestant took matters into his own hands after not being selected by Ms. X and made dates with all three of the female contestants vying for a date with Mr. X, Robinson said.

"It's really become a pretty complicated program. We meet with the contestants, have a rough rehearsal, but I think it's something everyone looks forward to. I meet with all the girl contestants last night and most of them can't wait," he said.

PETER DeCLARK, UI sophomore and former UI Dating Game contestant, called the BASH program "interesting, very interesting."

"The crowd really got into it, but it was really difficult being a contestant," DeClark said. "We just sat there while they asked us bizarre questions that we had never heard or imagined before, and we were supposed to be funny right then and there."

"The program is a lot of fun and it's been very successful for us not only in attracting contestants but also in bringing in large audiences," said Pam Boersig, assistant director of Clinton Street residence halls. "It's purely social, but it's a good program."

The 1984 UI Dating Game will be held tonight in the Burge Hall lobby beginning at 7:30 and is open to the public.

minutes of an interview are very important," she said. "First they look at your appearance and then they look at your interview etiquette." The variables of interview etiquette include body language, cigarette smoking, eye contact and attire.

"It's not only what you say, but how you say it," Anthony said. "It's always difficult, especially for first-year job seekers, to ask about salaries." That question should be asked tactfully and near the end of the interview, Anthony said.

JERRY VANNI, branch manager of American Federal Savings and Loans, outlined some of the things he looks for in potential employees. "The first initial appearance is not the most critical thing, but it's something I look for," he said.

Although Vanni said the employment criteria varies with the position, he said there are certain things all employees should possess. "The human relations skills are very important. We can teach someone technical skills before we can teach them human relations skills," he said.

"I MOSTLY LOOK for how well that person can sell himself to me," Vanni said. How the person would fit in with the other employees and the interviewee's body language and grammar are also very important, he said.

Anthony said a post-interview self-evaluation is important for job-seekers. "You need to sit down, reflect on your answers, examine what you did and didn't say, and start preparing for the next interview," she said.

"You can't be too critical on yourself," Anthony added. "Every interview is different."

Deficit

THE BUDGET PLANNERS, headed by budget director David Stockman, met Monday to refine various options.

An administration official also described as on target reports that Reagan will shoot for reducing the deficit to 2 percent of the gross national product — or $100 billion — by 1988. Some analysts believe the deficit will grow to $210 billion yearly during the next few years unless measures are taken to control it.

The tax panel met earlier Monday to discuss various options for cutting government programs across the board.

THE OFFICIAL said there will be no effort to reduce Social Security or its cost-of-living increases.

Stockman, however, reportedly is recommending cuts in civil service and military retirement plans and in most other areas except military spending.

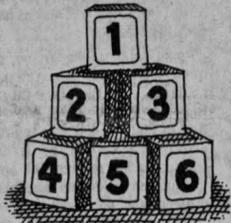

A central thrust of the report, one source said, is that "like taxpayers should be taxed alike."

While he did not elaborate, that fits with an idea known to be under study — that corporations with similar pre-tax profits should pay similar taxes. Their effective tax rates now vary widely — and many believe, illogically — as a result of hundreds of tax incentives created piecemeal over the years.

THE SAME PRINCIPLE also fits another idea under study — that individuals who receive much of their real income in the form of tax-free fringe benefits should be taxed at rates similar to those who receive all of their income in wages.

Other broad tax options that have been part of the Treasury study, but apparently were not recommended, include a "flat" tax with one low tax rate for everyone — shifting much of the tax burden to the less wealthy; a national sales tax; a value-added tax in which taxes are levied at successive levels of production; and a "consumption" tax under which people are taxed on their income minus the amount they put away as savings.

12,000 Freedom tickets available

By Jeff Stratton
Staff Writer

Now that it is official that the Hawkeyes will be going to the Freedom Bowl in Anaheim, Calif., the Iowa athletic department is preparing to handle ticket requests from fans that want to follow the Hawkeyes West.

Larry Bruner, UI associate athletic director, said that tickets for Iowa's appearance in the inaugural Freedom Bowl will be priced at $10, $15 and $18, but he said, "They (the Freedom Bowl) haven't given us information yet as to how many tickets we will get and the location of the seats."

The Freedom Bowl office said that the competing schools will receive one-third of the tickets available, which breaks down into approximately 12,000 seats per school.

BRUNER SAID THE ticket office will be sending out ticket applications for the game this week to people that are on their ticket file. "The reason for that," Bruner said, "is that it is a new bowl game and we are interested in getting as many people out there as possible."

Iowa plays at Hawaii on Saturday, but Bruner said that fans making the trip to Hawaii will not reduce the number of fans that make the trip to the Freedom Bowl. "There doesn't seem to be that many people going to the Hawaii game," Bruner said. He added that this was because people held off making plans for the trip to Hawaii because of the possibility of a bowl trip.

BRUNER SAID THE Freedom Bowl will have many of the same attractions as the Rose Bowl for fans that make the trip to see the game. "We look at this trip as being similar to the Rose Bowl, except there is not the prestige," he said. "It (the Freedom Bowl) will have all the attractions for fans except the Tournament of Roses Parade. This is as good a trip for the players and fans as you could get except for the Rose Bowl."

Some local travel agencies will be offering package tours that will enable Iowa fans to follow their team out to California, and also enjoy Southern California's attractions.

Elaine Shalla, assistant manager of Meacham Travel Service in Iowa City, said that her company is offering a package trip that will leave Cedar Rapids on the afternoon of Dec. 25 and will return on Dec. 29.

THE PRICE FOR the trip will be $645 per person double occupancy and children will be given reduced rates. The price of the package includes the game ticket.

Shalla said the tour is being offered in conjunction with University of Iowa's Freedom Bowl. See Freedom, page 2B

Second-half spurt carries Hawks

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

The difference between the Iowa basketball team's seven-point lead at halftime and its final 22-point win against Gonzaga of Spokane, Wash., at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena Monday night came with a six-point spurt within the opening minutes of the second half.

"The one thing I thought that really put us over the hump was when we came out in the second half and really hit our shots right off the bat," Iowa Coach George Raveling said. "I thought that really put a big gap between us."

The Hawkeyes led by as much as 28 points much to the delight of the 14,895 fans at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Raveling said the point margin surprised him. "With one minute to go, I leaned over to Coach (Brian) Hammel and said I would have never believed we would have beaten them like this."

GONZAGA COACH Jay Hillock said his team is not as bad as Iowa made them look. "He's (Raveling) got a nice ball team," the fourth-year coach said. "We're not as bad as we played tonight. He has a top 20 team... They made us look like Division III or (Division) 29 or a women's team."

Hillock went on to say his troubles start with stabilizing the point guard position. "The point guard situation is hurting us a lot," he said. "Sometimes you recruit a junior transfer and they're not as good as you think they are."

Junior Gerry Wright, Hillock said, is what makes a considerable difference in Raveling's squad. "Wright has given them a whole new dimension," Hillock said. "He's a very good player. He's a creator."

THE 6-FOOT-8 forward, however, came in contact with foul trouble early in the first half, putting him on the bench for the final 14 minutes of the opening half. "It was more of a precautionary thing," Raveling said. "I felt, why put him in and expose him to getting his third."

Paving the way for the Hawkeyes was senior co-captain Greg Stokes with 18 points. "I thought Stokes played an outstanding game," Raveling said.

Even so, Raveling said he would give top honors in the game to Michael Payne, despite his low point production. Payne scored only two points.

Raveling pointed out that Payne played well in areas that the fans don't notice. He believes it's all the little things Payne did, which are not kept statistically that gave him such an outstanding game.

"If I were picking the player of the game," Raveling said, "Michael would be the player of the game. What concerns me is the conversation that surrounds him (criticism about two-point games)... It causes Mike to take more shots. The object is to win and play well. If Michael is going to get two points per game, so be it."

IN THE BULLDOG thrashing, the Hawkeyes stayed with a zone defense the entire game but adjusted accordingly to Gonzaga's offense. "I thought we selected the right defenses to combat what they did," he said. "Tonight, actually, we played less variety of defenses."

One difference that Raveling has already noticed between this year's ballclub and last year's is its improvement in shooting. "I think our shot selection is much better this year," he said. "We score with the flow of things. We give the opponents something to think about."

The Hawkeyes will take their 2-0 record on the court again Wednesday night against Morehead State.

The Eagles qualified for the NCAA tournament last season after winning the Ohio Valley Conference and sporting a 25-6 record. Coach Wayne Martin lost the top seven players off that team however and will bring an inexperienced squad to Wednesday's game.

Knight's Hoosiers once again a contender

This is the second story in a nine-part series.

By Jeff Stratton
Staff Writer

CHICAGO — Tradition says that the Indiana basketball team will be in contention for the Big Ten championship this season and that the Hoosiers will also make an appearance in postseason play.

Indiana has won or shared 15 Big Ten titles, including seven of the last 13 under Coach Bob Knight, and the school has claimed four NCAA championships — 1940, 1953, 1976, 1981 — the third highest total by any Division I school.

Last year, Indiana finished third in the Big Ten and ended the season with a 22-9 record that included an upset of No. 1 North Carolina in the Eastern Regional.

THE HOOSIERS, 0-1 on the year after a season-opening loss at home to Louisville, return 10 lettermen from last year's squad. Indiana also has Knight, the man who has coached them for the past 13 seasons. During his reign at Indiana, Knight has guided the Hoosiers to nine NCAA tournament appearances, compiling a 21-7 record in NCAA tournament play and winning two national titles. Knight also guided the U.S. Olympic team to a gold medal in Los Angeles last summer.

Big Ten preview

Indiana and Illinois were picked by the league's coaches at the Big Ten's preseason meetings as the favorites to take the conference title.

"Illinois and Indiana have what it takes to win, and they are serious contenders for the national championship," Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher said. "Indiana returns almost there whole team plus they have Winston Morgan coming off an injury."

ILLINOIS COACH Lou Henson said he would rank the Hoosiers among the top four teams in the country. "Indiana will have a tremendous ball club," Henson said. "They have everyone coming back as they were basically a freshman ball club. They have excellent talent and are real well coached. I would rank them in the top three or four teams in the country."

Heading the Hoosier returnees is sophomore Steve Alford. Alford led Indiana in scoring last season with an average of 15.5 points per game. He was second in the league in both field goal percentage (60.6 percent) and free throw percentage (90.5 percent). Alford was a first team all-Big Ten selection, and was the only Big Ten player on the U.S. Olympic team.

ALFORD WAS NOT the only Indiana player that participated in the Olympics as senior center Uwe Blab was a member of the Federal Republic of Germany team that gave the United States its closest game, 78-67, of the Olympics.

Blab averaged 11.8 points and 6.1 rebounds a game last season, and he shot 52.8 percent from the field last year. He was honorable mention all-Big Ten by both United Press International and Associated Press last season and was also a member of the East Regional all-tournament team.

Sophomore Marty Simmons and juniors Stew Robinson and Mike Gioni return for the Hoosiers this year. This group, along with Blab and Alford, started the bulk of the games for Indiana.

SIMMONS AVERAGED 9.4 points last season and was also ranked second on the team in rebounds. Robinson led the club with 104 assists while averaging 7.9 points. Gioni averaged 8.7 points a game last year.

Morgan, a junior, suffered a stress fracture in his right foot and played in only six games for Indiana last season. Knight considers Morgan to be his team's best defensive player.

Indiana will also reap the benefits of a recruiting class that includes the "Mr. Basketball" honorees from both Indiana and Illinois.

Delray Brooks, Indiana's "Mr. Basketball", was named prep player of the year by USA Today after averaging 33.5 points a game for Michigan City Rogers. Todd Sloan, Illinois "Mr. Basketball", averaged 20 points and 13 rebounds a game while leading McLeansboro High School to the Class A state championship.

Lafleur's 'lack of enthusiasm' forces Montreal star to retire

MONTREAL (UPI) — Guy Lafleur, one of the most gifted and exciting players in National Hockey League history, announced Monday he has retired from the game he so dearly loved.

Lafleur decided to end his 14-year relationship with the Montreal Canadiens, claiming a lack of motivation. In the end it was Father Time that caught up with what was once one of the swiftest skaters the league has ever seen.

"I made my own decision in this," said the right wingman who finished his career with 518 regular season goals, ninth on the all-time list. "I was not pushed into it."

"It was not something I decided this morning or yesterday. But it was something I thought about for a long time. We had a good playoff last year and I was thinking about coming back and having a good year. But as you know I didn't score 20 goals in 20 games."

LAFLEUR, 33, WAS far more than just a great hockey player. To the French Canadian fans the "Flower" was a hero who carried on in the tradition of Howie Morenz, Maurice "Rocket" Richard and Jean Beliveau.

His mane of flying hair as he made ice-long rushes, and his booming shot became part of his legend.

Lafleur said he had thought about retiring after last year's playoffs, an embarrassment for him when he was benched for the opening two games and failed to score a goal in the remaining 12. But he decided instead to come back for one more campaign. It didn't work out.

AFTER SCORING JUST two goals in 19 games this season, Lafleur did not accompany the Canadiens to Boston on Sunday night for a game against the Bruins and made his decision public Monday.

Still, Lafleur, who has two years remaining on his contract, maintains he did not feel he had lost his scoring touch.

"(Retirement) wasn't because of my slump," he said. "I just wasn't motivated anymore. My wife is expecting a baby and it became tough for me to go on the road, to pack my bags and to leave."

Team effort allowed Hawkeyes to finish second in the nation

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

When time ran out in the NCAA Championship game against Old Dominion, the Iowa field hockey team came together in one black mass.

The Hawkeyes had finished second in the nation to the Lady Monarchs and it was a team effort that got the Iowa team to the finals in the first place.

There were no individual standouts on the 1984 Hawkeye team. The Hawkeyes didn't have an Ellen Egan, who scored 42 goals in one season last year. Forward Marcia Pankratz said the Hawkeyes won games this season with an all-around effort from all the players.

"I knew I had a good team," Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said after finishing second. "They've been successful in the past. But sometimes they forget what it takes to be good."

Field hockey

THE MAJORITY OF players on the Iowa team had come close to playing in the Final Four the past two or three years but each year the Hawkeyes advanced to the regional tournament and each year they came home with a loss.

"Every year, we have come so close. It's so sweet to finally get there," Pankratz said after advancing to the Final Four.

And less than one hour after finishing second in the nation, the Iowa field hockey team was making plans to play in the Final Four next year. Defender Deb Robertson said with confidence that Iowa's second-place finish is the start of a new tradition.

Station named to Kodak first team

Iowa linebacker Larry Station was named to his second All-American team in as many weeks when he was named to the Kodak All-American first team today.

The 5-foot-11, 233-pound native of Omaha was one of only five juniors named to the team which was headed by Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie.

Auburn's Gregg Carr was the only other linebacker named to the first unit. Ohio State running back Keith Byars and Illinois wide receiver David Williams were the other Big Ten performers named to the elite squad.

Davidson named to Big Ten's second team

Iowa senior co-captain Dee Ann Davidson was named to the second team of the all-Big Ten squad announced Monday. The Cedar Rapids native was 10th in the Big Ten in hitting efficiency with a .260 average.

The first team includes Kelly Becker of Michigan State, Lisa Bettio of Ohio State, Kate Crandell and Marianne Smith of Purdue along with Jackie Nunez and Madelyn Meneghetti of Northwestern.

Joining Davidson on the second unit are Indiana's Karen Dunham, Annette Bauer and Kim Corwin of Purdue along with Sue Kerry and Mary Stack of Northwestern.

Smith was named the conference's player of the year while Dunham was named the league's freshman of the year. Northwestern's Jerry Angle was the coach of the year.

Veteran Iowa announcer Cummins dies

CEDAR RAPIDS (UPI) — Veteran Cedar Rapids sports broadcaster and reporter Tait Cummins died of an apparent heart attack in a local hospital Monday. He was 78.

Cummins began his journalism career as a sports editor for the Cedar Rapids Gazette newspaper until he joined the WMT radio staff in 1947. He retired in 1971 but continued on special assignments for the station until his death.

Station manager Larry Edwards said Cummins grew up on a farm near Ute, and earned a degree from the UI. Edwards said Cummins was an avid Hawkeye fan in his role as play-by-play announcer, but still kept the world in perspective.

"He knew life went on after a loss," Edwards said. Edwards said Cummins was so serious about his work that every story turned out to be a big one. He also said the broadcaster had the type of personality that cheered up everyone around him. "I always felt better after I talked with him."

Survivors include his wife Dorothy and three sons, one of whom played for former Iowa Football Coach Forest Evashevski.

Cummins also served on the Iowa Civil Rights Commission for a number of years.

Youth wrestling program offered

The UI Division of Recreational Services is offering a wrestling program for youth in grades 1-6. Under the direction of former Hawkeye Jim Zalesky, basic wrestling fundamentals will be emphasized for beginning and experienced wrestlers.

There is a $25 registration fee that may be turned in Room E216 of the Field House. Classes will meet on Wednesdays from 6-7 p.m. and Saturdays from 9:30-10:30 a.m. in the Field House.

The program begins Wednesday and will continue until February. For more information, call 353-3494.

Drake ready for basketball opener

DES MOINES (UPI) — The Drake Bulldogs open the 1984-85 season against Wayne State tonight with a pair of promising freshmen, the return of their star guard Stephon Butler and a much improved forward in Daryl Lloyd.

The combination, along with all-Missouri Valley Conference forward Melvin Mathis, has Drake Coach Gary Garner optimistic his team can bounce back from last year's 9-20 record — the Bulldogs' worst since the 1977-78 season.

One reason the Bulldogs suffered so much last year was Butler went down with an injury less than 30 seconds into the season opener.

The team's top ball handler underwent knee surgery and missed the entire year. He was redshirted and returned this fall for his senior year.

Butler is likely to be flanked in the backcourt by freshman Glenn Martin, a 6-footer from Carbondale, Ill. Martin and freshman David Zingg, 6-3 of Middleton, Wis., were Garner's biggest recruiting catches.

Stringer likes smaller basketball

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

Although Iowa women's basketball Coach Vivian Stringer won't consider redshirting any of her team members, she has no control over the new size of the women's basketball.

The standard basketball had been reduced this year to one inch less in diameter.

This size has forced adjustments, but all-in-all Stringer believes the change will be beneficial. "The smaller ball has made a difference with regards to the guards in quickness," Stringer said. "There is a definite difference in rebounding — the way the ball is coming off the rim."

"AND CONSEQUENTLY you may see some rebounding changes with regards to whether or not it will be the inside people (getting the rebounds)," the second-year coach said. "We may depend a little bit more on the perimeter people because the ball is coming off the rim a little bit faster and a little bit further than it normally would."

"The jury is still out, but when it's all said and done, I think we'll be pleased with the new ball size."

Sophomore Lisa Long, however, does not approve of the change. "I don't think they should have changed the size because we were adjusting well to the regular size basketball," the 5-foot-11 forward said. "I guess we'll just have to wait for the results to see if it a good change or not."

Long said the new ball was hard to adjust to, emphasizing her partiality to the regular-sized ball. "It took a while to get used to," she said, "because of the size and the weight. It feels like you have so much control over it — especially since my hands are big and I could already palm the regular size ball. This one feels like a grapefruit, but I have gotten used to it."

AFTER USING THE summer to become acquainted with the new ball, sophomore Lisa Becker said she isn't aware of the difference anymore. "It was real different at first," the Cedar Rapids native said. "But we had all summer to work with it, so it's going a lot better now. It's not like it's anything different to us now."

Despite the alteration in basketball size, Stringer will not alter the playing status of any of her players by redshirting.

"I'll be honest with you," Stringer said. "The reason I have not entertained redshirting is because I really haven't given a good five seconds thought to it."

"AND NOT THAT it's a bad idea," she continued. "I guess it's just my feeling that if they come here to play basketball and I've recruited them, then I want them to play for four years."

Stringer also expressed her desire for the players to graduate on time, but quickly added she does not condemn those who do not.

assistants began working on strategy to take another team to the national championship next year.

THE IOWA COACH told her team after the loss that Old Dominion finished third the first time they played in the national championships and went on to win three-straight titles.

The Hawkeyes began the season with lofty expectations, but it took a five-game losing streak for the Iowa team to fulfill its goals.

The Hawkeyes began the season ranked sixth in the NCAA preseason poll despite holding the No. 3 position for five weeks the previous year and winning the indoor field hockey title last spring.

Davidson and her team had their minds set on winning the outdoor field hockey title along with the indoor title in the same year.

IOWA STARTED THE season winning four of its first five games and tying Maryland, 0-0. Then a loss to Stanford led the Hawkeyes into troubled times which included losses to Temple, North Carolina, a tie against Rutgers and a loss to Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes came back after the loss to the Wildcats to beat Big Ten foes Michigan State, Purdue and Ohio State. But the Iowa squad was not playing as well as it could, Davidson said at the time, and the team had lowered its expectations to winning the Big Ten title and qualifying for the national tournament.

THE TURNAROUND FOR the Hawkeyes came after the win against Ohio State. Davidson turned practice over to the team and the players coached themselves. "The major change came around when they did practice," Davidson said. "The losses made us come back to reality and remember what got us into the top 10 in the first place."

From that point on the Hawkeyes won their last seven games and tied Northwestern, which was ranked No. 2, 2-2 in double overtime. The seventh-year coach said her team was playing poised field hockey, communicating better on the field and making better passes. The Hawkeyes also totally dominated their opponents.

After beating Temple in the first semifinal game, seniors Lee Ann Detwiler and Dawn Chamberlin summed up what the future for Iowa will be. "They (hockey teams) haven't seen the best of us yet."

sal Travel in Cedar Rapids, Travel Services Inc. in Coralville and Landis Reservations Inc. in Cedar Rapids. Shalla said the reason the package is being offered by four travel agencies is because the demand for the trip is expected to be lower than for the Rose Bowl.

"We expect demand to be softer than for the Rose Bowl," Shalla said. "We also had to charter a plane for the trip and this way one agency doesn't have to take the risk. Also, this way we can appeal to the Cedar Rapids market and the surrounding area."

MARGARET FLYNN, manager of American Travel and Tour Inc. in Cedar Rapids, said her business is working on putting a tour together, but that whether or not a tour will be offered depends on fan interest. "If there is no interest we won't run it," Flynn said.

Hawkeye World Travel and the AAA Travel Agency, both in Iowa City, will not be offering tour packages to the Freedom Bowl.

The UI Alumni Association is also planning a tour to the Freedom Bowl. William Iles, associate director of the Alumni Association, said the tour will be leaving Christmas Day at 4 p.m. from Cedar Rapids and Des Moines, and will return Dec. 29.

Iles said hotel accommodations will be at the Anaheim Marriott, and the price for the full package is $720 per person double occupancy. Iles said if two more people stay in the same hotel room the price will be $594 for each extra person. Land package tours are also available for fans that have their own transportation to California. The price of this package is $323 per person double occupancy, and each additional person in the room will pay $197.

"This is going to be an excellent trip," Iles said. "It will be a good way for fans to get close to the Rose Bowl and to get to Southern California for a reasonable price."

Michigan rallies past Titans; Loras no match for 'Cats

United Press International

Roy Tarpley asserted himself and scored all 21 of his points in the second half Monday night to lead Michigan to an 80-66 victory over Detroit in the season opener for both teams at Ann Arbor, Mich.

The two other Big Ten teams in action Monday night also won. Northwestern pounced on Loras College, 69-50, while Iowa dismantled Gonzaga, 62-40.

Detroit led 31-29 at halftime and moved in front 35-31 on two baskets by junior transfer Greg Wendt, who had 19 points. But Tarpley, who picked up two quick fouls and played tentatively after a stretch on the bench, pounded home a stiff, added a second shot and canned a 12-footer to start an 18-6 Michigan stretch over a five minute, 25 second span.

THE WOLVERINES followed with a 14-6 spurt in the next 5:21 to take a 64-49 lead with 5:44 to play. Tarpley, a 6-foot-10 junior, had 14 points in the two bursts to help the Wolverines put the game away.

Leslie Rockymore came off the bench for 16 points, forward Butch Wade added 15 and Antoine Joubert 11 for Michigan. Brian Humes scored 13 and Louis Rainge 10 for Detroit, which played without injured center Willis Carter.

Big Ten roundup

At Evanston, Ill., Northwestern, led by senior Andre Goode with 12 points, used a tough man-to-man defense to register a 69-50 season opener against Loras College of Dubuque.

The Wildcat defense held Loras scoreless through the first five minutes of the game and kept the Duhawks to 33 percent field goal shooting.

Northwestern took a 36-17 lead at halftime and was never seriously threatened in the second half in winning its sixth season opener under seven-year head Coach Rich Falk.

Wildcats John Peterson, Elliot Fullen and Shawn Watts each scored 11 for the Northwestern win.

Sporting a 57-33 lead with eight minutes remaining in the game, the Wildcats emptied the bench and reserves finished the rout.

Rob Rudakas and Keith Sindberg led the Duhawks with 12 points each, while Greg Rovanske added 10. The Wildcats shot 50 percent from the floor to overcome a 40-32 rebounding disadvantage.

IM cage tourney begins tonight

By Dan Milleva
Staff Writer

The intramural pre-holiday basketball tournament begins tonight at the Field House with a full slate of 36 first-round games to be played on six courts. Entrants in the tournament should stop by the Recreational Services office at E216 in the Field House today to find their spot on the schedule. Although the tournament will continue over the next few weeks, only first round games are posted at the Recreational Services office at this time. Games will be played on Sunday through Thursday nights and only on nights when the Iowa Hawkeye basketball squad does not play.

Intramurals

The tournament will culminate on Dec. 13 with the men's, women's and coed championships. ALL GAMES IN each of those three divisions will consist of two 10-minute halves. The clock will be stopped during the halves as it is in intercollegiate games, and Doug Milder, graduate assistant of recreational services, estimated that each game would last approximately 45 to 50 minutes. Tonight's action begins at 5:35 p.m. and runs until 10:10 p.m. on the recently opened courts on the Field House's main floor. The tournament format is different for the coed division than for the other two sections. Coed teams will be using a double elimination schedule, which means no club is out of the tournament after its first loss. A coed team that loses in the opening round will be placed in a loser's bracket, but still has a chance at the tournament title, if it does not lose again. TEAMS IN THE men's and women's division will be out of the title chase after one loss, but not out of the tournament. A team that loses a first round game in one of these divisions cannot continue on in the championship tournament, but can be placed in a consolation bracket. This second bracket will consist only of teams that lose in the first round. Teams that lose in later rounds are out of competition. Additionally, men's and women's teams will have to request to be placed in the consolation bracket. No team will be placed there automatically. Teams planning to enter the intramural basketball leagues, which begin action after the semester break will have to have their entries into the Recreational Services office before the end of this semester. Entry forms will be available at that office beginning Dec. 4 and teams must be signed up by Dec. 13.

Orr: Iowa State needs to 'fire up'

AMES (UPI) — Iowa State's lackluster performance in an exhibition basketball game last week should be an incentive to play well in Tuesday's nonconference opener against Mankato State, ISU Coach Johnny Orr said Monday. "We came in there not fired up enough. Mentally, we weren't ready," Orr said, despite his team's 78-68 victory Saturday over Brandon University. "The good thing about it, we should come into Tuesday's game ready to play and go after it," Orr said. "That's the way we've got to do it every time. There are so many upsets across the nation and the reason is the mental thing — teams just aren't ready to play."

The Cyclones posted a 16-13 record and earned their first-ever NIT berth a year ago. Orr thinks this team will be even better, but he said it may take a while, mainly because he's starting two freshmen — Jeff Grayer and Gary Thompkins. "DEFENSIVELY WE'VE got a ways to go," Orr said. "We lost probably the best defensive player in the league and one of the best in the country in Ronnie Harris. And Terrence Allen wasn't just a non-entity. He was a pretty good defensive player himself." Orr said the Cyclones did a "very poor job defensively" against Brandon. "I wasn't particularly pleased with our performance," he said. "On the other hand, if you look at the stats, Barry Stevens had 26 points and eight rebounds, Grayer had 15 points and nine rebounds, Sammy Hill had 10 points and 11 rebounds, Jeff Hornacek had 14 points, five rebounds and six assists and Thompkins had 13 assists." Mankato State, a member of the North Central Conference, returns three starters from the team that finished with a 16-11 record last year. The best is David Gilreath, a 6-foot-1 point guard who averaged 14.7 points. IOWA STATE assistant Steve Antrim said Gilreath scored 29 points in a game he scouted last week. "He's a quick point guard who scores and really penetrates. He also can pull up for the jump shot," Antrim said.

Jon Taylor, a 6-5 forward, is the Mavericks' other key player, he said. "He's their strong inside player," Antrim said. "The game I saw, Gilreath and Taylor combined for 50 of Mankato State's 90 points. Taylor's around the lane a lot and get's all the shots Gilreath doesn't." Antrim said the best thing the Mavericks have going for them is first-year Coach Dan McCarrell, who has compiled a 295-152 career mark. "I coached against him when I was a Lake Forest College," Antrim said. "He's a great coach and has pretty good control of his team. They are nicely disciplined. We'll try to get them to play a little faster than they want."

AL comeback award to Kingman

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dave Kingman, who gave the Oakland A's 35 homers and 118 RBI after they picked him up for the bargain basement price of $40,000, today was named the UPI Comeback Player of the Year in the American League. Kingman, who is a free agent, received 14 of a possible 26 votes to easily outdistance Cleveland right-hander Bert Blyleven, who had five. California right-hander Mike Witt and Kansas City outfielder Willie Wilson drew two votes apiece. The balloting was conducted of UPI baseball correspondents from each major league city. Released by the Mets even though they would have to eat his $635,000 salary, Kingman caught on with the A's and delivered the power that had made him one of the best sluggers in the big leagues. "I FEEL VERY honored by the award and am looking forward to an excellent year next season with whoever I'm playing for," Kingman said through his agent Jack Childers. Kingman, a 35-year-old native of Pendleton, Ore., has played for eight major-league teams, twice leading the league in home runs. He entered this season with 336 lifetime homers, including the 48 he hit for the Chicago Cubs in 1979. Like most sluggers, though, he strikes out often, and his glove is not as strong as his bat. When the Mets acquired Keith Hernandez during the 1983 season, it cut down on Kingman's playing time. He hit only 13 homers with 29 RBI, and the Mets let him go. Picked up by the A's, Kingman began launching his patented high drives. "If you look at his at bat performance in 1983, you'll see his performance was not that poor," Oakland vice president Sandy Alderson said. "We decided to give him the opportunity to hit on a daily basis. "We certainly would like to have him back next season." Having been selected by only one team in the re-entry draft, Kingman is eligible to negotiate with any major-league team. Childers said that two "American League contenders are pursuing Kingman rather vigorously." Childers refused to give out those names. He said those two clubs are making stronger bids than Oakland right now.

'Soldier's Story' is rare drama

By Merwyn Grote
Staff Writer

ONE DARK night during the closing days of World War II on a back road near Fort Neal, La., a drunken soldier is beaten and then shot. The victim is Sgt. Vernon C. Waters, a spit-and-polish veteran of twenty-odd years of military service. Two things make the case unusual. One, Sgt. Waters is black. And two, there is no shortage of suspects.

The immediate assumption is that the Ku Klux Klan is responsible, and that is the easy solution that officers at the Army base would like to accept. But evidence suggests that the Klan can be ruled out and there is plenty of reason to believe that Waters was the victim of racism or resentment on the base itself.

Into this milieu steps Capt. Richard Davenport (Howard E. Rollins Jr.), a proud and aggressive officer from Washington assigned to investigate the killing. Capt. Davenport is also black, a fact that astonishes both the black and the white soldiers at the base and irritates the other officers.

DOUBTING THAT a black man could effectively investigate the case and that his efforts might only serve to inflame the situation and cause racial unrest, Davenport's superiors give him only three days to solve the mystery.

That sets up the incidents that unfold in A Soldier's Story, a new film directed by Norman Jewison. Nominally, the film is a murder mystery, but in effect the whodunit aspect of the narrative is merely a convenient gimmick for exploring the various facets of racism that existed during that period and in the military in general.

Sgt. Waters was in charge of an all-black platoon, a group of young men anxious to fight in the war, but whose main duty was to play exhibition baseball for the Army. Not wishing to mix black with white, the Army used the men mostly for menial labor and to provide entertainment. Compounding the contemptuous attitude of the Army, the men of the unit had to also contend with the not-so-subtle bigotry of Waters himself.

THROUGH DAVENPORT'S investigation, the story and the various conflicts unfold through a series of flashbacks. What emerges is a complex character study of Waters, a man who is fiercely proud of being black and professes that he wants nothing more than to advance his race. Yet underneath he festers a bitter self-hatred and animosity towards other blacks who he feels give Negroes a bad name. He harbors a secret notion that Hitler is right, that people who don't meet certain standards aren't deserving of the same rights. He applies this belief to his men who he bullies, badgers and humiliates in an effort to weed out those he feels are unworthy of his race. He makes enemies of most of them, a hatred that is intensified when his tactics lead to one soldier's suicide.

As played by Adolph Caesar, Waters is one of the most fascinating characters to appear in a film in years. His mixture of inner loathing and outward resentment of the whites around him seethes under a carefully maintained by-the-book stance.

HIS STAUNCHLY military rhetoric makes him appear to many of his men as though he were merely a tool of the white military bureaucracy. They see his malignant attitude, not as a means of making them tough, but as a means of breaking them down. They may be right.

Caesar's performance is cruel and repugnant, yet strangely pathetic. Because Caesar's character is developed through the eyes of many different characters, the actor gets to explore him from many angles and shade the role with many moods. It is fine piece of work.

A Soldier's Story is sparked by many fine performances. Denzel Washington of TV's "St. Elsewhere" is memorable as Pfc. Peterson, the one soldier willing to stand up to Waters and fight his abuses. And nice work is also contributed by Larry Riley as C.J. Memphis, a farmboy who Waters particularly dislikes and Art Evans as Pvt. Wilkie, Waters' confidant. Dennis Lipscomb is effective as Waters' white commanding officer, a man who is mistrusting of Davenport at first, but stands by him as the investigation intensifies.

AS DAVENPORT, Rollins is a bit stiff. He immediately conjures up memories of Sidney Poitier, who stepped into a similar plotline in Jewison's 1967 film, In the Heat of the Night. But his character is not well defined and would have benefited from additional scenes that reveal him on a personal level. As is, Rollins, best known for his strong performance in Ragtime, seems unable to do very little with the character.

A surprising dividend from the film is a good rhythm-and-blues musical score by Herbie Hancock, nicely performed by Riley and Patti LaBelle.

A Soldier's Story is a good film, but it is, however, flawed. Charles Fuller's murder mystery plot creates the excuse for the various character studies, but is vaguely uninvolved. It is just a gimmick and, unfortunately, that is the way that it comes across. It hamstringing the film by drawing the viewers' attention away from the character dramas into the mechanics of the plot itself.

Still, A Soldier's Story is a rare film. It is unusual that a mainstream commercial film delves so deeply into the area of racism and into the inner effects of racism on its characters. And, of course, it is more unusual that a major studio film features a predominantly black cast. A Soldier's Story is a drama well worth the viewer's attention.

with repression, evasions and misplaced mourning — the sounds of people talking about everything but their pain.

The dialogue (Gina Berriault adapted the script from her own short story) specializes in the suggestive. The Stone Boy is an elliptical movie; its meaning often lies within its gaps — the words not spoken, the gesture not given.

This technique is rife with risks, and The Stone Boy doesn't overcome them. When the narrative structure is merely elliptical, the movie is coherent and challenging. But the narrative structure is also ambiguous. It's even nonsensical and, in several crucial instances, absent.

CHARACTERS appear with no introduction. During a seduction, for example, the identities of the participants — the boys' uncle and the dead brother's girlfriend — are a secret until the scene is almost over. The result isn't intrigue, only confusion.

Early in the movie, when Arnold first adopts his silence, there's a major disparity. What's shown is a boy in a state of shock. What's told, however, through the mutterings of friends and family, is the adults' misinterpretation that Arnold is a callous fellow. Are the adults blindly ignoring the evidence before their eyes? Or is Arnold's reaction actually supposed to be extreme enough to merit such widespread concern?

EITHER WAY, something is missing — and even the obvious post-dubbing of the adults' musings can't save this early, important scene. It's a muddle, and so is much of this movie. By the end, when the climax comes from nowhere, the lack of information seems consistent with the rest of the movie. (The plot synopsis in the press kit contains some of the information that's missing from the screen; were these scenes shot but edited out, or were they, wrongly, deemed unnecessary?)

Throughout the movie, and especially toward the end, the script scrambles to compensate. These taciturn, reticent folks are suddenly quite lucid about their problems. They articulate their shortcomings, and the dialogue loses its authenticity.

Suddenly the soundtrack has a new, unlikely and illogical noise — the sound of people talking about silence.

'Stone Boy' narrative is petrified

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

MUCH OF the soundtrack of The Stone Boy is silence, the kind that comes when words just won't work.

The silence is Arnold's. He is the stone boy of the title, a kid who kills his brother in a hunting accident. Unable to express his horror at his act, he withdraws instead behind walls of silence.

The adults misunderstand him, especially his father (played by Robert Duvall, his first role after his Oscar-winning performance in Tender Mercies). Mistaking his silence for a lack of compassion, they resent Arnold for his behavior — even as they themselves fail to find the appropriate words for their grief. In tones as flat as the Montana landscape that surrounds them, they burden Arnold with their own shortcomings, their own inability to express loss, their own guilt.

"You'd think tears was gold," says one friend of the family, "and he was a miser."

THEY'RE ALL misers. These folks misuse emotions as much as Arnold distrusts words. When it isn't silent, the soundtrack of The Stone Boy is rich
