Students present alternate renovation plans

By Dave Un潤

In an effort to tackle alcohol abuse in Iowa City, the city council has considered a keg ordinance that would restrict the number of kegs on private properties to prevent parties. The ordinance aims to reduce the incidence of large parties, which the city hopes will help decrease the number of alcohol-related incidents.

The ordinance was introduced at a meeting on July 30, 2014, and has been met with mixed reactions from residents and university officials. While some have spoken out in favor of the measure, others have expressed concern that it could disproportionately affect student life.

One resident who has been particularly vocal about the issue is South Quad resident Jeff Lassiter, who believes the plans call for a specialized needs organization to provide accommodations.

"There are 80 people who want to see a movie," he said. "We can't accommodate all of them on the same floor or adjoining rooms." Lassiter countered, saying that the council's proposal would be a "great inconvenience to the general public." He also expressed concern that the plans would not be sensitive to safety issues.

"I don't think those plans will be safe," he said. "I'm not happy. We were not consulted on it as we should be." Lassiter said that his concerns have been heeded since the plans have been responded to — no questions have been raised since the ordinance took effect.

The applicants also attend a hearing before the council on Oct. 2, where they can present their case for the ordinance.

Cliche's don't bother nursing school men

By Charlotte Lee

When asked to picture a nursing student, most people's minds usually pop into most people's minds: a petite, prim young lady in white uniform, usually sporting a head full of curls. Yet at the UI College of Nursing, 11 of 110 students in the hospital nursing program are men. Although the current percentage is more than twice the pre-1970 level, the number of male student nurses in the UI hospital has been increasing steadily for the past two years.

Men, who describe themselves as "normal" people, find it hard to believe that society is more comfortable with men entering the nursing profession. "Some people are ready to say, 'You want to be a nurse, huh? You're a man? I've never heard of that,'" said Bruce Braun, a pre-nursing student at the University of Iowa Hospital. "But I guess they're having to get used to men pursuing a career like this," he said.

"I really like it," said John Phillips, a sophomore majoring in nursing, who describes himself as a "normal" person, talent that he feels should be given a fair shot. "I think it's really not that noticeable, you know... You just get used to the fact that there are just as many women in the class," he said.

BRAUN, another UI junior, said he found it unusual at first that there were men in his classes. "I think it's really not that noticeable. You just get used to the fact that there are just as many women in the class," he said.

"We're no different, the same as the women," he said. "You have to be just as good as a nurse. But I've found that once you get past the stereotype and you get to know them, you really like them as individuals," he said.

Although he may seem out of the ordinary, Braun, a junior, has been surprised at the news when he initially discovered that he liked it. Iowa's comparable worth legislation will be established non-smoking areas in restaurants, and to receive an additional holiday to be received for absence. "We ought to do it right while we're at it," says Regent Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey of the University of Iowa, one of the state committees studying the issue. Richey said the recommendation will go before the Board of Regents with the results of the two surveys, which were done last month and those employees last month to assess comparable worth legislation and cause any changes in employee pay plans.

Iowa Senate President Frederick M. Jurgensen, who represents Iowa City, reviewed the questionnaire and pointed out its relevance to the statewide issue of comparable worth legislation. "It's a fact that employees and working conditions are the primary criteria used in measuring comparable worth."

This recommendation stems from questionnaires completed by employees who received the questionnaire just before the Thanksgiving holiday, that they were not given enough time to adequately fill out the questionnaire. Regulatory Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey said the questionnaire will probably be approved in order to ensure that the most accurate pay grading scales for merit employees. "We ought to fill out the questionnaire," Richey said. "We ought to fill out the questionnaire and help them make a better job of it." The questionnaire will then be used to establish a pay grading system that can be compared with comparable worth standards. Comparable worth legislation, adopted by Iowa lawmakers in 1983, states that skill, effort, responsibility and economic situation in Iowa. "It's a fact that employees and working conditions are the primary criteria used in measuring comparable worth."

The news Iowa has depended upon for weeks of speculation finally arrived Monday. Des Moines Register and Tribune Columnists George Joudrey and Andrea Zinsmeister have been forced by their editors to write their final columns for the Register and Tribune.

Pendragon, a reclining rock ot the Register, is among the newspaper's most beloved symbols. At one time, the Register was known as "Pendragon's newspaper," a title that reflected the newspaper's bias towards the Iowa State University's athletic teams and its connection with the university.

"The college football season has come and gone, and the Register has long been following the Iowa State University's athletic teams," Joudrey said. "We've covered football games, played in them, and sometimes even volunteered to do the work."

"This is a hard decision, but we feel that it's time to move on and take our newsgathering skills to a new level," Joudrey continued. "We're grateful to the Register and the Tribune for giving us the opportunity to write for them, and we're excited about what lies ahead."

"We've been here since 1954," Joudrey said. "It's been an honor to be a part of the Register and the Tribune's legacy. We've had the chance to witness some amazing events and to share them with our readers."

"We wish the Register and Tribune well," Joudrey said. "We'll be watching from a distance, and we hope that our readers will continue to support the papers that have given us the chance to write for them."

Double standard, double jeopardy

A modest proposal about lotteries

T Merkel has finally come to the意识 of fairness, of the lottery of their own. After years of speculation and argument, the Register has now decided to recommend a lottery to the state of Iowa.

"This is a difficult decision, but we believe that a lottery is the best way to ensure that everyone has a chance to benefit from the lottery," Joudrey said. "We've been here since 1954, and we've seen the lottery system evolve over time."

"We've seen the changes in the lottery system, and we believe that a lottery is the best way to ensure that everyone has a chance to benefit from the lottery," Joudrey continued. "We've seen the changes in the lottery system, and we believe that a lottery is the best way to ensure that everyone has a chance to benefit from the lottery."

Iowa blows out Panthers, 89-40

By Jim Macko

Iowa Coach George Raveling may think twice next time before pitting his team against Pittsburgh.

The Hawkeys walked all over the Panthers last night at Carrier Dome Arena in a game Raveling asked his team to treat as if it were a game to former George State Coach Chuck Bolden.

It was a 10-point shellacking of George State in 1981. langs, though George State was at a loss for words. Chuck Bolden was happy to see his alma mater give his team a run for its money.

But coach Charlie Manuel's no objective in the biggest game of his career. I'm not sure if I'm ready or not, but the players are ready, and we want to win.

Michael Payne grabbed the opening tipoff and supplied a Checking on the numbers, however, there were 12 unanswered points by the Hawkeyes in the first three minutes of play.

With Richard Reeves, Michael Payne and Steve Casillas of Oklahoma tied with 13 points apiece. Payne was named second in the NCAA tournament.

If there is any chance of Iowa winning, it will be with the help of the Hawkeyes blinding defense. The Hawkeyes are two points better in the field goal percentage, but the Panthers are all for the Hawkeyes.

In the first half, the Panthers outscored the Hawkeyes 29-26, but Iowa came back to lead 49-48 in the second half.

Louisiana governor fights to keep Saints

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Gov. Mike Edwards said Wednesday he has persuaded an organization with a major interest in the Saints to put in a bid to buy the Saints, in an effort to keep the NFL team in New Orleans.

"As of now, there is a proposal in a private person's possession which I think is a reasonable one," Edwards said at a news conference. "I have no earthly expectation that he means to go through with it, but the governor refused to say how much has been offered for the team.

"Mr. Mecom, a Houston businessman, has put a price tag of $25 million on the team. Edwards said he could not justify anyone paying that amount for the team.

Proposed abolition of boxing has pros and cons

AMERICAN STUDIES say ring wars must be banned

Boxing should be banned. The evidence is clear that boxing robs young men of their health, but the evidence is not necessarily always correct. A group of researchers at the American Medical Association was forced by the evidence to support banning it. Such a recommendation can't be too closely followed. For generations boxing has been a sport enjoyed by many groups and individuals. The Irish and blacks and Hispanics who found their escape in money and fame used it as a way of making a living. It is also used in some areas, such as small towns and small cities, as a means of providing a way of great people and life.

But that may also be what is upright about boxing. That it takes men of average, smart and wit - with no other mental or physical qualities to which he can be measured by the measures of his strength and ability to work hard for a living, and is at the same time a sport, can be a source of pride and honor in its original form. But to insist that boxing is not a sport, or that it is not a sport that is being affronted, is to insist that no one can be a sport, or that no one can be a sport that is being affronted. That makes no sense, and it is one of the reasons why the effort to reform boxing is not being carried out from the top. But it is the case that boxing is not a sport that is being affronted. It is not a sport that is being affronted, and it is that which is truly affronted.

The people who do benefit are the promoters who get money from the physical destruction of the boxers and the audiences who are satisfied with the beating of the boxers. It is like making war on a sport to dwell on the glories of the ring and the mistreatment of the boxers. That is the case that the promoters who get money from the physical destruction of the boxers and the audiences who are satisfied with the beating of the boxers. It is like making war on a sport to dwell on the glories of the ring and the mistreatment of the boxers.

Hendrick sent to Pittsburgh by St. Louis for pitcher Tudor

HARPER, 244 last year, will take over for Hendrick, who will be 31 in February, was 12-11 last year with a last place ball club. The Cardinals had extended Hendrick's contract for four years remaining on his contract.

St. Louis fans might recall the point made by the Cardinals in 1978 from San Francisco, 8-96, 285. or, 3:11. "I'll trench engineer."

Hendrick is a sport more mental than physical. He has to be at ringside for every fight. He has to be a short, quick hitter who can't run out of a ring and stay there. One man, I learned to remember and I learned to work hard and hang on. Yet I also learned that there were more things to be learned. You have to work hard for it. I learned a lot from fishing. I have learned that the way to do it is to get something that is not easy to do.

Miami carcember Kosar leads all-American academic squad

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) - Sophomore Bernie Kosar of Miami and a four-year starting quarterback, was named the most outstanding player in the nation by the American Football Coaches Association. Kosar, 6-2, 207, is a top ten player in the country and a first team Academic All-American.

Miami, Ohio State and Notre Dame each placed two players on the squad.

With Christmas fast approaching, sports books are selling very well

By Steve Batzinger

Chilling holiday gifts is an easy way to win over friends, basketball players, and sports fans. Or, sometimes, and even more popular way is giving a gift.

Good reading is easy to find around Iowa City and area bookstores, but what to give the Sports and former Iowa Hawkeye basketball player is another story.

This year, it seems that a book on wrestling would be among the most popular gifts.

Currently, the hottest wrestling book is "The New Breed," by former "Hawkeye" Lou Banach. City and area bookstore employees say the former Chicago Cub Ferguson is also a real solid book for wrestling fans.

In sloshy style campus.

"It's hard to believe it," said.

The Helsman: A Daily College Basketball Book, is an even more popular book than "Ruckus." It's fun you're looking for, John.

RCA Presley collection presents ‘new’ material

By Allen Hagg

OCTOBER 25, 1984

In an era when the music business is a very fast changing industry, RCA has come out with a treasure of a recording. What is most exciting about this collection, however, is the fact that it presents ‘new’ material — material never heard before.

Several years ago, RCA began collecting all of its Presley recordings, including a few from home recordings in the early days.

Shelley Berman’s well-known stand-up act often included a gag about trying to sound like Elvis Presley. The aim of this collection is to provide fans with a glimpse of the man before he began his meteoric rise to fame.

The collection is divided into four parts: ‘I’m So Lonesome,’ ‘The Concert,’ ‘A Life’ and ‘A Career.’ It features tracks from the late 1950s and early 1960s, including some previously unreleased material.

One of the highlights of the collection is a track from the ‘60s called ‘I’m So Lonesome.’ It features Presley singing a soulful version of a Country and Western favorite, ‘I’m So Lonesome.’

The concert shows the beginning of Presley’s career, as he performs for a small audience in a tiny room. The sound quality is excellent, and the performances are raw and authentic.

The collection also includes a track from the ‘60s called ‘A Life.’ Here, Presley is shown singing a heart-wrenching ballad, ‘A Life.’

In the ‘A Career’ part of the collection, Presley is shown performing as a television personality, singing ‘A Life’ on a television show.

The collection is a must-have for any Presley fan, and it is a testament to the man’s incredible talent.

The collection is available now in all good record stores.
Perussion Ensemble plays excellent 20th-century music

By Ken Van Orden

The UI Percussion Ensemble's program for Sunday night's concert included music by contemporary composers, offering a stimulating and enjoyable evening for those who appreciate the diverse and innovative aspects of 20th-century music.

The next selection was "Congo" (1983) by John Chumley, performed by Robert Craft, Robert D'Alfonso, and Richard Brummett. This work was a testament to the ensemble's ability to interpret and bring to life the intricate rhythms and harmonies found in contemporary music.

The program continued with "Quintet for Percussion" (1980) by Steve Reich, performed by Robert Craft, Robert D'Alfonso, and Richard Brummett. The piece demonstrated the ensemble's mastery of the percussive sounds and rhythms that are characteristic of Reich's work.

The final selection of the concert was "Concerto for Percussion and Orchestra" (1976) by Steve Reich, performed by Robert Craft, Robert D'Alfonso, and Richard Brummett. The piece was a showcase of the ensemble's ability to interact with an orchestra, creating a powerful and compelling musical experience.

The concert concluded with a stirring rendition of "Ode to Joy" (1982) by Steve Reich, performed by Robert Craft, Robert D'Alfonso, and Richard Brummett. The piece was a fitting conclusion to the concert, leaving the audience with a sense of awe and admiration for the ensemble's skill and dedication to the art form.

Talents of handicapped actors make for special theater group

By Kathy Weitz

THE THEATER Acting Studio Company is an Iowa City acting, writing, directing and sketch-sketching group started by UI senior Julie Lockhart, a handicapped student from Chicago who are handicapped and volunteer to participate in UI theater professor Leslie Gida's class in Theater for Special Populations.

Watching the group perform, however, it seems to me the most important part of the group's production. At 11 of the performances, the group of handicapped students are presented with "out" roles that they might not otherwise be able to portray. While the group is directed by famous student Bob Spiegel, Educational Hall Coordinator, UI Undergraduate Student Union, the group will be returned.

As the deadline for submissions is Dec. 15. Students interested in submitting their names to the absurdities and the whims of "Earthwords" are accepted. Any UI undergraduate student may submit.

Submissions should be typed, single spaced, one inch from top and bottom, double spaced, and in line
