Students present alternate Union renovation plans

By Karen Burns
Staff Writer

UI student government leaders say they don't believe student needs are being considered in Union renovation plans, but UI officials claim their concerns have been heeded since the planning process began.

The student leaders have presented proposals regarding student space to the Union renovation committee and to the architectural firm planning the renovation, but they said these have not been given adequate consideration in the final plans, which will be presented to the state Board of Regents next month.

UI Collegiate Associations Council

President Larry Lassiter said he understands Union renovation budget constraints, but said, "I feel frustrated. It's still a student union."

THE CAC PASSED a resolution Monday to withhold funding of the renovation from mandatory student fees "until such (renovation) becomes more directed toward student interests and activities."

Lassiter said he is upset because in the plans the Union Bookstore would get more space, which could be considered to be cutting into student activity space.

While UI Vice President for Student Services Phillip Jones said the bookstore expansion is in line with the UI's policy to make the Union as financially self-sufficient as possible, Lassiter countered, "Student (activities and government) space would not be dead space — it would generate revenue," because the offices would bring more students into the building.

STUDENT SENATE President Lawrence Kitsmiller agreed that the current proposal does not give adequate space to student activities organizations.

"It is a student union — for them (Union officials) to try to decide what student needs are is ridiculous," he said.

"I'm not happy. We were not consulted as we should be. Students are paying $8.5 million on this, but Jones will sit on the plans for two days" without contacting students about their contents, he said.

However, Kitsmiller said he believes the plans are headed in the right direction. "I think we'll be able to work with the administration and find a compromise."

Jones said the students' concerns have been "addressed throughout the project. Any questions that were raised have been responded to — no questions have been ignored."

MONDAY, STUDENT Sen. Mike Skinner, Union renovation student representative, submitted alternative proposals to the architects from Bussard/Dikis Associates, Ltd., the firm designing the renovation. His plans call for a specialized needs activities center to be located on the first floor, as well as increased space for the recreation area.

Skinner said he proposed an additional 800 square feet of space than is allocated in the current renovation proposal to include tables for board games in the recreation area. He also suggested expanding the Arts and Crafts Center into space currently used by the barbershop.

The Student Activities Center would be located in the present recreation area, which Skinner said would be a good location because it would be in the "midst of all of the action."

THE FIRST FLOOR would accommodate groups with specialized security and privacy needs in Skinner's proposed plans. These groups would include Student Legal Services, Veterans Association, Gay Peoples Union and Iowa City Draft Counseling.

Bussard/Dikis project designer Rod Kruse said he looked at Skinner's plans and said some of his proposed ideas are "fine, excellent — they can and or will be implemented."

But he said some parts of the proposals may be impossible to implement because of the UI's limited budget.

"One proposal which removes all walls in one area may not be affordable. See Union, page 8

Council looks to control parties, taps 'keg' laws of other cities

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

In an effort to tackle alcohol abuse in Iowa City, the Iowa City Council will consider following the lead of other university communities that have adopted "keg ordinances" to control large parties.

"Some council members are interested in taking a look at this," Mayor John McDonald said. "It's very tentative right now. It's too premature to know what form (an ordinance) might take."

McDonald said the council is reviewing keg ordinances, designed to limit the number of kegs at a party, adopted by city governments in Normal, Ill., Manhattan, Kan., and Cedar Falls, Iowa. These cities are the homes of Illinois State University, Kansas State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The Cedar Falls City Council adopted a keg ordinance in July after more than 100 local residents complained to the council in October 1983, about disturbances created by large parties in their neighborhood, Cedar Falls Police Chief Paul Hoeffy said.

"THE ORDINANCE did not intend to discourage parties because they are a very natural thing in college environments," Hoeffy said. He added the purpose of the ordinance is to "control disturbances created by large parties."

However, Mike Connell, president of Drinking Responsibly in College, said he "can see the council's intent, but I question the method."

"I see it as an infringement of rights," Connell said. He said a better policy would be to educate people about alcohol abuse instead of "forcing legislation down their throats."

"It's not the number of kegs that causes irresponsible drinking, but more the person who chooses to drink excessively," he said. Connell said DRINC prefers to "try to educate the person to drink less."

McDonald said Iowa City officials are concerned because people holding kegs may charge admission to the parties, but are not "taking the responsibilities that go along with" running a business. He said people holding private parties generally do not check the ages of people attending the party and do not accept liability for the actions of partygoers after leaving the scene.

HE SAID HE is uncertain whether the council will pass a keg ordinance, but "probably a majority of the council will want to talk about it." McDonald expects the council to discuss the issue in January.

Under the Cedar Falls ordinance, citizens must apply and pay $5 for a permit only if they will be tapping more than one keg at a time at a party, Hoeffy said.

The permit, which is to be posted at the party site, requires the applicant to supply trash barrels, rope off the site of the party, equip the party location with one bathroom for every 50 people expected and clear the site of trash after the party.

The applicants also attend a "briefing session" that is usually conducted by Hoeffy.

Hoeffy said 21 permits have been issued since the ordinance took effect in July and only two parties with permits have been fined for noise disturbances.

"IT'S INSTILLED a sense of responsibility in those applying for the permit," he said.

The College Hill Neighborhood Association in Cedar Falls, which includes representatives from both UNI and the city, met with bar owners, local law enforcement authorities and citizens before creating the ordinance.

"There wasn't much of an uproar," City Clerk Ken TeWalt said. "City officials worked closely with university and student groups at the university and any objections that were raised were taken care of before the ordinance was passed."

Ice Hawks may cancel porn films in response to anticipated protests

By Greg Miller
Staff Writer

Viewers planning to see the "classic porn" movies Deep Throat and The Devil in Miss Jones at the Union tonight may be surprised to find themselves watching Bambi and Slapshot instead.

The movies, scheduled to be shown in the Yale Room, will probably be cancelled because of expected protests, said Ice Hawks President Dan Seliger Wednesday.

The UI-sponsored ice hockey club planned to show these movies at the Union in an attempt to raise money for a community-centered ice rink. However, a protest of the UI showings of the films — organized by the Women's Action Group Against Pornography — has apparently altered the nature of the event.

"It's way too much trouble. If there's going to be a bunch of radical women out there yelling and screaming and only 40 to 50 people who want to see a pornographic movie anyway, they won't be able to enjoy it," said Seliger.

Union Director Jean Kendall said Wednesday that Bambi and Slapshot will be shown in place of the other films because of some strong public sentiment against the "extremely objectionable" movies.

Seliger said Union Services Supervisor Tom Koepfel told him Monday that the group could show the movies and the Ice Hawks distributed flyers advertising the event. But Tuesday Koepfel said the Union would be "inappropriate for the showing of these films," according to Seliger.

KOEPPEL TOLD HIM "since the actual names of the films were not on the event registration forms that were filled out last Friday, and because this could be a rather controversial event with protesters, he thought the Yale Room and security would be inappropriate for the showing of these movies," Seliger said.

Koepfel could not be reached for comment.

Judy Mentzer, spokeswoman for the Women's Action Group Against Pornography, said Wednesday she was "surprised" the movies would not be shown "because (UI Coordinator of Student Activities and Campus Programs) Kevin Taylor said that the movies were perfectly legal."

Bijou Theater cashier Beatrice O'Sullivan said Wednesday tickets for Deep Throat and The Devil in Miss Jones had sold out.

Quad residents protest planned Westlawn closing

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

South Quad residents say they will increase protest efforts against a decision by administrators to move the foreign language house to their dormitory, but added they've "been sent scrambling" by the UI officials they've tried to contact about the situation.

"We started out with 10 different people to call about this, but every time we call someone, they give us three more telephone numbers to call," said South Quad resident Jeff Warner, who is helping spearhead efforts to stop the move.

He added, "We've basically been sent scrambling from one corner of this campus to another. We started by going to our R.A. (resident assistant), and he sent us to the head resident and the hall coordinator. People just keep sending us to other people and I'm starting to feel like we're not getting anywhere."

Letters announcing the move of the UI foreign language house from Westlawn to South Quad were sent to students in both residence halls Dec. 4. The letters, sent by the UI Department of Residence Services, explained a plan to stop using Westlawn as a residence hall beginning next fall, when the foreign language house will be moved to South Quad.

"IT WAS REALLY a shock to everybody here when we found out we couldn't live in South Quad next year," said Beth Butler, South Quad resident.

"Everyone was standing down at the mailboxes waiting for the mail like we usually do, and as people gradually started reading their letters, everyone responded in the same way ... No one could believe it was really happening," she said.

Warner said South Quad students are "disturbed" about the change and want administrators to know they "aren't going to take this lying down."

"I want to know what they're going to do with people who don't want to live in big dorms," Warner said. "You can take big classes or small classes, so you have some sort of choice there, but South Quad is the last small dorm at Iowa."

Butler estimated the residents' chances of staying in South Quad are "between slim and none," but added, "We aren't going to go unheard."

An article printed in Tuesday's The Daily Iowan quoted UI housing assignment office manager Margaret Van Oel as saying, "I think some of the students in South Quad are sorry about the move, but more than that I think we're hearing a lot of media reaction to the decision."

BUTLER SAID: "A lot of people who live here called Margaret Van Oel after that article came out. The story said 'some students' were sorry about the move. We wanted her to realize a lot more than 'some students' are concerned, because practically everyone here is upset about it."

Van Oel said the UI Housing Assignment Office received "several" phone calls from South Quad residents following the DI article, but added, "only four or five calls got through to me."

Gina Siekman said she and Craig Parker, South Quad's other resident assistant, approached David Coleman, assistant director of Grand Avenue residence halls, concerning the South Quad move.

"He (Coleman) convinced us he was going to do his best to see that South Quad residents are taken care of and given some priority in housing assignments," Siekman said.

Coleman said the Department of Residence Services will be limited in what they can do, according to the number of South Quad students who want to stay together.

"If we have 80 people who want to come back, chances are we can't put them all on the same floor or adjoining floors," Coleman said. "We have to take into consideration that nearly all floors within the system will have some return, and those students have

S. African dissidents jailed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Three dissidents Wednesday ended their 91-day occupation of Britain's consulate in Durban and two of them immediately were arrested on charges of high treason. The offense carries the death penalty.

Police arrested 72-year-old Archie Gumede — the black president of the anti-government United Democratic Front — and Paul David, an Indian, as they left the British consulate.

Cuts set for defense budget

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger agreed Wednesday to a cut of several billion dollars from his department's budget request of about $330 billion, administration officials said.

The officials said Wednesday Weinberger agreed to some cuts, but less than $8 billion worth, and that negotiations would continue. The officials said one way of cutting Weinberger's requested figure is freezing an Oct. 1, 1985, pay raise for military and civilian personnel working for the Pentagon.

It's official: 22 cent stamps

WASHINGTON — The price of a first-class stamp will go up for the first time in three years Feb. 17 from 20 cents to 22 cents, the U.S. Postal Service announced Wednesday, saying the hike is less than inflation.

"None of us welcomes this increase, but we have no other practical options," said Board of Governors Chairman John McKean. Despite a $5.5 billion surplus during the past three years, he said the Postal Service has "reached the point where our costs ... have overtaken our revenues."

U.S. puts conditions on aid

WASHINGTON — A top U.S. aid official warned Wednesday the United States will not send aid to southern Ethiopia if the government pushes a plan to resettle 1.5 million people there and urged a truce in the east African nation's civil war.

The resettlement plan calls for moving people from the highlands in the north, where Eritrean rebels have been battling the Addis Ababa government, to the south. The aid official said it would only result in moving people from one starvation area to another.

Superfund needs $12 billion

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency estimated Wednesday it will need $12 billion to clean up 1,800 priority hazardous waste sites nationwide, confirming what environmentalists claimed in reports to Congress a year ago.

The five-year projection was made in several studies, which the EPA is required to submit to Congress, on the effectiveness of the Superfund, the nation's hazardous waste cleanup law.

Lottery chances looking good

DES MOINES — Providing further proof that he plans to sign a lottery bill if one reaches his desk, Gov. Terry Branstad has told a group of conservative Christians not to count on his veto again.

Branstad, who has vetoed a lottery two years in a row, wrote a letter to the Iowa Association of Evangelicals saying if they don't want to see the games in Iowa, they should work to defeat it themselves in the Legislature.

Iowa to sell Chinese wine

DES MOINES — A Chinese white wine, which the Iowa Wine Advisory Board called "a bad wine at a cheap price" will be stocked in state liquor stores next year, Beer and Liquor Control Director Rolland Gallagher said Wednesday.

Gov. Terry Branstad, who picked up the unnamed wine during his October trade mission to the Far East, had asked that the wine be available in Iowa's 214 state liquor stores for $3 a bottle as a way to improve Iowa's trade prospects with China.

Treasurer's office sells personalized plates

Automobile drivers are taking it personally this year.

They are purchasing personalized license plates with initials, slogans and names on them.

"They can put just about anything they want on them as long as it doesn't resemble (the lettering of) a regular license plate," Johnson County Treasurer Cletus Redlinger said. "And there can only be one of each in the state."

The personalized license plate "is a regular license plate just like the county-issued ones," Redlinger said. However, the personalized plate costs $25 and an additional $5 when the license is renewed.

Redlinger said between 300 and 400 personalized plates have been ordered in Johnson County this Christmas season.

"I doubt if you can get one anymore before Christmas," he said, because delivery takes six to eight weeks.

"What the state will do is if somebody wants to order one for Christmas, the office of Vehicle Registration in Des Moines will send them a gift certificate" because the plates will not be ready in time, Redlinger said.

Personalized plates can be ordered by filing an application at the county treasurer's office at the Johnson County Courthouse.

Safety seat law requires children to be restrained

Adults will be legally responsible for restraining their children when traveling in a motor vehicle after Iowa's children's safety seat law takes effect next month.

The law will become effective Jan. 1, 1985, and requires children under the age of 5 to be restrained by a safety seat or seat belt when riding in a motor vehicle. Children under 3 years old must be secured in a car safety seat.

There will be a $10 fine for violating the new law. However, convictions will not be entered on the violator's driving record.

Officials at the Iowa Department of Transportation said the law does not apply to children transported in school buses, on motorcycles, in trucks weighing more than five tons, in vehicles built before 1965 when seat belts became standard equipment or when children are being transported by an on-duty police officer.

Nonresidents of Iowa will not be required to adhere to the seat belt law.

Fellowships available through foundation

The Rockefeller Foundation will award 15 to 20 fellowships to enable scholars to undertake policy-oriented social science and humanistic research on minority group problems.

Fellowships are typically awarded for one year, in the range of $20,000 to $23,000 and can be used in conjunction with sabbatical or developmental leaves. The funds encourage research in high-priority areas including education, employment, housing and civil rights.

Applicants are required to have earned a doctorate degree or to have completed their academic or professional training. Members of the legal profession, journalists, and other non-university affiliated professionals may also benefit from this program.

For information or application procedures, contact Jim Luckett, Office of the Vice-President for Educational Development and Research, Division of Sponsored Programs, 100 Gilmore Hall; or call 353-3350.

Group asks residents to list nuclear-free sites

The UI Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament is asking Iowa City residents to declare their homes, apartments or residence hall rooms nuclear free zones.

The campaign is asking residents to send letters to President Ronald Reagan and members of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives to let them know residents want their homes to be "free of the design, development and deployment of nuclear weapons and all supporting systems," stated material distributed by the Nuclear Free Zone Action Project of the campaign.

The project also urges people to write to U.S. ambassadors from countries that have nuclear weapons — such as the Soviet Union, France and the Peoples Republic of China — and to countries believed to be clandestine nuclear weapons states, including the Republic of Israel and the Republic of South Africa.

Antarctica and South America are already nuclear free zones, by international treaty. Communities in Oregon, Maryland and New Jersey are declared nuclear free zones, also.

In Iowa City, the Wesley House and The Faith United Church of Christ have been declared nuclear free zones.

For more information on how to set up your own nuclear free zone, contact CND, Student Activities Center in the Union or call 353-6012.

LASA proposes alternate course requirements

The Liberal Arts Student Association has passed a resolution suggesting alternatives to the UI's physical education requirement.

Courses in alcohol awareness, diet and nutrition, and health education could also satisfy the requirements, because "a lot of physical education isn't just skill," LASA President Cecilia Ham said.

Alcohol awareness should be addressed in college, Ham said, "because if you educate people now, they can be responsible drinkers for the rest of their lives."

Problems with anorexia and bulimia also affect college women primarily, Ham said, and could be dealt with in health and nutrition courses.

"If these courses were offered, I think they could positively affect people's lives much more than a course in badminton," she said.

Cliche's nursing

By Charlene Lee

When asked to picture a nurse, a benevolent woman in a white dress usually pops into your mind.

Yet at the UI College of Nursing, of the 550 students in the undergraduate nursing program and on the graduate level, few students are males. And to face some stereotypes and assumptions about their center a female-dominated students say they have not found it to overcome reverse discrimination.

For many male nursing students, the initial reaction of friends and acquaintances to their chosen profession is usually one of surprise.

Kim Phillips, a sophomore pre-nursing program, said "caught off guard at first," Phillips noted, however, "it is changing," and people usually get used to men in nursing.

Although it may seem a little odd at the beginning, Dan Olsen, a UI student, said sitting in class with mostly women does bother him. "Once you get it's really not that noticed, just get used to the fact that mostly women in the class."

PETER BRAUN, another UI student and a nursing major in the small town he is in, said he was never informed that he was studying. However, as Braun has more confidence in himself, his initial reaction to his career never bothers me anymore.

Olsen pointed out that initial instructors are mildly surprised they find a male in the classes. But Joel Gray, a UI student and nursing assistant at St. Joseph Mercy Hospitals, said his instructors "fairly nice" and he is "great" with the women in the classes, although they were also surprised to find men in their classes.

Both Olsen and Gray were in other subjects prior to deciding to become nurses.

Cliche's don't bother nursing school men

By Charlene Lee
Staff Writer

When asked to picture a nursing student, a benevolent woman in a white dress usually pops into most people's minds.

Yet at the UI College of Nursing, 30 of the 550 students in the undergraduate nursing program are men, and on the graduate level five of the 140 students are males. And despite having to face some stereotypes and false assumptions about their decisions to enter a female-dominated field, these students say they have not found it difficult to overcome reverse discrimination.

For many male nursing students, the initial reaction of friends and acquaintances to their chosen profession is usually one of surprise.

Kim Phillips, a sophomore in the pre-nursing program, said people are "caught off guard at first" when he tells them he is a nursing student. Phillips noted, however, that "times are changing" and people will eventually get used to men pursuing a career in nursing.

Although it may seem awkward in the beginning, Dan Olsen, a UI Nursing II student, said sitting in classes made up mostly of women doesn't really bother him. "Once you get used to it, it's really not that noticeable... You just get used to the fact that there are mostly women in the class," he said.

PETER BRAUN, another UI Nursing II student and a nursing assistant at UI Hospitals, said some acquaintances in the small town he is from took awhile to adjust to the news when he informed them he was studying nursing. However, as Braun has become more confident of himself, people's initial reaction to his career choice "just never bothers me anymore."

Olsen pointed out that initially, some instructors are mildly surprised when they find a male in their nursing classes. But Joel Gray, a UI Nursing II student and nursing assistant at UI Hospitals, said his instructors are "fairly nice" and he gets along "great" with the women in his class, although they were also surprised to find men in their classes.

Both Olsen and Gray were majoring in other subjects prior to deciding they wanted to become nurses.

Olsen, who describes himself as a "people" person, found that he needed to pursue a field more specific than his previous anthropology major. Nursing appealed to him because it contained a variety of specific fields. Currently, Olsen hopes to specialize in attentive care.

GRAY WAS FORMERLY a music major and said that he enjoys working with people. One of the factors that may have affected his decision to go into nursing was the fact that two of his aunts and an uncle are nurses. Gray, who said he was "up" on his first aid skills when he decided to change majors, entered the nursing program and discovered that he liked it. "I never feel uncomfortable with my career choice of nursing," he said.

Geraldene Felton, dean of the UI College of Nursing, said male nursing students experience no difficulties and should not feel uncomfortable with their majors since nursing is "the choice they made." Felton added, "We (the UI College of Nursing) don't tolerate discrimination against male students."

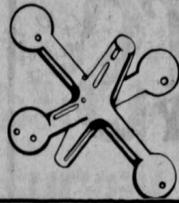

Olsen said his gender can be advantageous in his career, because many hospitals view having a male nurse on staff as a positive factor in staff relations.

Braun said he has also met several friends in class, because being in a minority has made more people notice him. Being male has also helped him communicate better with male patients while he is on the job as a nursing assistant.

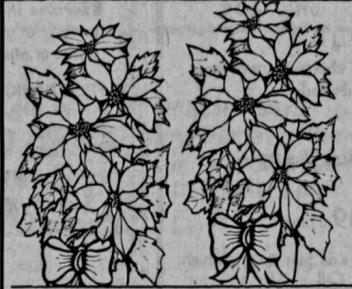

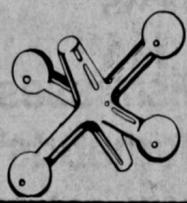

BRAUN SAID children in the pediatric unit are often surprised when they discover he is not the stereotypical female nursing assistant. However, Braun said, they are usually pretty satisfied with the care he has given them and like him.

Socially, Braun said people often "automatically infer that you are more feminine or gay" when they discover he is a nursing student. He said he used to resent these stereotypes and tell people he wasn't gay, but he has learned to just overlook such comments.

Gray, who is a co-sponsor of the Gay People's Union, said he "fit into" the stereotype, but this does not create any difficulties for him. Gray is also a council member of the Associated Nursing Students.

Iran dismisses U.S. demands on hijackers' status

United Press International
Iran Wednesday dismissed American demands that it explain the murders of two Americans aboard a hijacked jetliner at Tehran airport, declaring it answered to no one "but God."
Two other Americans beaten by the hijackers during the six-day ordeal at Tehran airport were pronounced in satisfactory condition at a U.S. army base as the bodies of their two compatriots were flown back to the United States.

Secretary of State George Shultz pressed U.S. charges that Iran encouraged the four Arabic-speaking men who hijacked the jet Dec. 4 and terrorized passengers with killings, beatings, and death threats.

But Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi said America was angered by the ordeal "because it had suffered a heavy blow and was humiliated by it," Iran's news agency said.

"It is the aggressive policies of the United States that caused the death of the Americans," he added, in remarks carried by the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Referring to the U.S. hostage crisis that played a role in Reagan's defeat of President Jimmy Carter in 1980, he said: "If Reagan thought about what happened to Carter, he would understand that Iran explains nothing to anyone but God."

Musavi ridiculed what IRNA said were Washington's demands that the hijackers be turned over to the United States, which he called one of the world's "superpower bullies." Iran has said it would put the four on trial.

In Washington, a State department spokesman said further statements would be withheld until the department spoke with other people on the plane and other governments.

Salvadoran official calls holiday truce proposal 'positive'

United Press International

A top Salvadoran government official said Wednesday that a guerrilla call for Christmas and New Year's truces was an "indisputable positive step" in the Central American conflict, but the army refused to say whether it would comply with the peace move.

It was the first official word on the guerrillas' Tuesday announcement that they will observe unilateral ceasefires for two 72-hour periods on the Christmas and New Year's holidays, the first formally declared truces in the 5-year-old Salvadoran civil war.

Salvadoran Minister of the President Julio Rey Prendes, chief political aide to President Jose Napoleon Duarte, said in statement broadcast on radio and television that the guerrilla truce decision was in response to Duarte's "initiative" to call a ceasefire for Christmas.

"I think this is an indisputably positive step," he said.

Lt. Col. Ricardo Cienfuegos, chief Defense Ministry spokesman, said he could not comment on whether the army would cancel any planned counter-insurgency sweeps during the holidays.

The armed forces last month had agreed to halt attacks during a government-proposed Christmas truce but reserved the right to step up its patrols to prevent rebels from expanding control of its territory.

Mauritania head deposed in coup

RABAT, Morocco (UPI) — President Mohammed Khouna Ould Haidalla of Mauritania was deposed while outside his west African desert country Wednesday by the man he fired as prime minister earlier this year, Radio Mauritania said.

There was no immediate indication of whether there had been casualties in the coup in the drought-stricken nation of 1.7 million.

Lt. Col. Mouawiya Ould Sidi Ahmed Taya, the former prime minister and current Armed Forces Chief of Staff, seized power while Haidalla was taking part in an annual Franco-African summit in Burundi, the radio said.

Except for Haidalla, all other members of the ruling Military Committee for National Salvation retained their posts, said the announcement monitored in Morocco.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said his reports were "that all Americans are safe" but it was too early to assess the coup in terms of its implications for the United States.

Union Carbide plant forbidden to reopen

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Officials Wednesday announced plans to dispose of 15 tons of the chemical that killed more than 2,250 people and injured another 100,000 in the Bhopal gas leak disaster. Panicky survivors packed Bhopal's bus terminal, seeking a way out of the city.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, campaigning in the city of Amethi, confirmed that the Union Carbide pesticide plant in Bhopal would not be allowed to reopen.

"Human life is precious, close such factories in the entire world," said placards carried by about 70 demonstrators outside the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi.

"We have come to seek justice," said a protest letter delivered to U.S. officials. It demanded compensation of $830,000 for relatives of the dead and $10,000 each for the injured.

Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister Arjun Singh told reporters the conversion of 15 tons of the gas into carbonyl, a less dangerous pesticide, would begin Sunday at 9:00 a.m. Local time in an operation expected to take four or five days.

"LMH - a great beginning for a new grad"

"The Physical Therapy department at Lawrence Memorial Hospital provides a variety of patients which was important to me as a new graduate. I can practice the skills I learned in school and develop in all areas. School is over but I feel my real education and professional growth is just beginning at LMH."

The PT department includes a variety of in-patient and out-patient programs including cardiac rehab I & II, orthopedic specialties, pediatrics, a formalized CVA program, and pain control.

"This department is very receptive to new ideas and keeping up with what's new. We're encouraged to attend professional education seminars which are financed by the hospital. LMH is a good place for me to explore different areas to decide what area I like best. Here there are different things for me to do, different patients and different patient needs. It's a good place to grow."

UI merit workers may get chance for new comparable worth survey

By Charlene Lee
Staff Writer

UI merit employees, complaining of too little time to finish questionnaires evaluating their positions for comparable worth regulations, might get another chance to respond next semester. The second survey, however, will not affect the regents cost estimates for the program.

Next week the UI will present the state Board of Regents with the results of the first surveys, which were distributed to employees last month to assess whether comparable worth legislation will cause any changes in employee pay plans.

UI Associate Vice President for Finance Mary Jo Small told the UI Staff Council Wednesday that the questionnaires on position descriptions distributed last month will only be used by the regents to evaluate a cost estimate of establishing comparable worth standards, not the pay grading scale.

SHE SAID A recommendation will be put forth by several state committees studying comparable worth standards to distribute new questionnaires to merit employees after the first of the year. Those merit employees who were not able to return a completed questionnaire last month and those who did return questionnaires will have the opportunity to revise their original evaluation if the proposal is approved by the regents.

These questionnaires will then be used to establish a pay grading system that complies with Iowa's comparable worth law.

Comparable worth legislation, adopted by Iowa lawmakers in 1983, states employers "shall not discriminate in compensation for work of comparable worth between jobs held predominantly by women and jobs held predominantly by men." It also states that skill, effort, responsibility and working conditions are the primary criteria used in measuring comparable worth.

"We ought to do it right while we're at it," says Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey of the recommendation to extend the deadline for the job assessments which will be used in implementing comparable worth legislation.

THIS RECOMMENDATION stems from complaints by merit employees, who received the questionnaires just before the Thanksgiving holiday, that they were not given enough time to adequately fill out descriptions about their positions.

Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey said the recommendation will probably be approved in order to ensure establishing the most accurate pay grading scale for merit employees. "We ought to do it right while we're at it," he said.

In addition to being given more time to fill out the new questionnaires, Richey said the new forms will be more specific and revised "based on employee and union comments with which we (the regents) agreed."

Richey said he hopes the new pay grading scale will be completed by or around April 1, when the board begins building the budget for next year.

Small also said the same recommendation is being seriously considered for professional and scientific employees. However, she said, an absolute need for the same recommendation for the professional and scientific employees "isn't as clear" as it is for the merit employees and would depend on the resources available for distributing such questionnaires.

ANOTHER ALTERNATIVE being considered is to establish a schedule of passing out new questionnaires to 20 or 30 percent of the professional and scientific employees each year for the next few years.

In other business, the staff council clarified that Christmas Eve is a holiday for UI employees, and they are still eligible to receive an additional holiday to be determined at their discretion.

A debate among council members also occurred before rejecting the educational grant application of a Veterans Administration Hospital employee who had submitted his application a week late. The staff council awards 280 $100 grants to members who wish to pursue job-related courses both on and off the UI campus. The debate centered around the definition of "continuous employment" and whether or not an employee on a leave of absence would still be eligible to apply for a grant.

The motion to look into the definitions of "leave of absence" by the council's education committee was approved.

Politicians make Iowa economy a priority

By Wendy Rosche
Staff Writer

Making the ends meet for Iowa's failing economy is high on the list of priorities for area legislators, who equate that goal with approving a state lottery.

"The overriding concern is really trying to think up ways to improve or expand the economic development in the state," State Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, said.

"Economic development is right up front," State Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said. The legislature is "going to pass the lottery."

State Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said revenue from the proposed lottery should help stimulate economic growth. "There is a definite plan for using the revenue of the lottery to go to non-recurring projects."

Doderer said she would like to see economic growth stimulated by encouraging more industries to locate in Iowa, and by placing a greater emphasis on attracting more tourism in the state.

According to State Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, "The state's on a long downhill slide unless we can do something about it." Varn said a lottery along with the completion of several legislative studies should help the economic situation in Iowa.

SMALL SAID he expects the state's economic problems to take up "the bulk of (his) time and energies."

Raising the drinking age is listed by area legislators as another important topic the legislature will be considering next year. "I expect there will be a move to raise the drinking age," Lloyd-Jones said.

A bill passed by Congress last summer says states that do not already have a 21-year-old drinking age will be asked to raise its drinking age or risk losing federal transportation funds.

"I'm just not excited about it, but in order to get our money I suppose we'll have to do it," Doderer said, adding, "You're just as drunk at 40 as you are at 20."

Varn said he would like to see a study done on the potential losses in state liquor revenue before a bill is passed raising the drinking age.

Lloyd-Jones said she was undecided on the issue. "I started out being against (raising) the drinking age, but I've become a little bit more open" on the issue, she said.

Lloyd-Jones said she would like to see legislation brought up concerning campaign finances, such as the amount state legislators spend or receive from donations or political action committees.

"ANOTHER ONE of my pets is to establish non-smoking areas in restaurants," Lloyd-Jones said. "I am offended when people blow smoke on my food."

She said during the last session of the legislature "we just ran out of time" before such a bill could be passed.

After the "buckle up baby" legislation goes into effect in January, Lloyd-Jones said she will push for an adult version of the bill requiring mandatory automobile seat belts usage. "I will vote for that," she said.

Doderer listed her favorite projects as comparable worth and legislation concerning child abuse. "We're going to look very strongly at child protection legislation," she said.

Varn said he would like to see a legislative oversight bureau funded during the next session. Although legislation for such a bureau has already been approved, Varn said it has never been funded. The bureau would oversee the state budgeting process and be required to recommend changes and authorize the state's final budget.

Because many studies on taxation and other issues were completed in 1984, Varn said he expects a lot of legislation to arise from research completed this year.

"It's like planting fruit trees," Varn said. "Everything's ripe right now and you've got to decide what you're going to pick."

Byrd crushes Democratic revolt to retain minority leader position

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia was re-elected Senate minority leader Wednesday, crushing a revolt among Democrats led by Florida's Sen. Lawton Chiles.

Byrd, 67, trounced Chiles, a southern moderate, 32-10 during a secret ballot behind closed doors. Five proxy votes, not counted, went 4-1 for Byrd.

"This is a vote of confidence on the part of my colleagues who think that proven leadership is what they need," Byrd said after the election. "You don't have to be under 30 to be for change. I'm not just a pretty face."

It was the first time that an incumbent Senate Democratic leader has faced a challenge from the ranks.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California was re-elected assistant leader and Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii was re-elected party secretary. Neither was opposed.

Byrd dismissed suggestions that Chiles' challenge would change him or his style of leadership.

"I don't think anything is going to be new about Robert C. Byrd," he said. "I will respond to the needs as I always have. I dedicate myself to the problems and the needs of the moment."

HE AGREED, however, that "we don't need to look back. We need to look forward. Our party in the Senate represents the look forward. And my colleagues have chosen me to lead them."

Byrd told reporters that Democrats would attempt to work with the Republicans where possible and, if not, "we will offer alternatives."

He said the Reagan administration budget, based on past history, would not prove acceptable; spending restraints should be "fair, equitable and compatible with economic growth," and that on defense "we should switch the emphasis from exotic weapons ... and emphasize the conventional side."

Byrd hedged when asked if he would again support production of the controversial MX missile, saying he hoped Congress would proceed with the Midgetman missile. Despite widespread demands among Democrats for change after President Reagan's landslide election, the Senate and House retained its "old guard" leaders.

The House last week re-elected Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas and the Senate Wednesday rejected the challenge to the entrenched leadership.

BYRD, CONSIDERED a master technician with few new ideas and little flair, was first elected Senate Democratic leader after Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana retired in 1977. He served six years as assistant leader, beginning in 1971.

Chiles, 54, launched his late-starting campaign only six days ago, offering himself as a "new face" candidate as Democrats move toward the crucial 1986 elections in which they hope to regain control of the Senate.

The Florida senator, in his third term, also said new, more articulate and telegenic leadership was needed to offset Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas who was elected majority leader.

Byrd said he has worked "painstakingly" to unify the Democratic party before and after it lost control of the Senate and added, "we're ready now to build on that and move ahead."

The West Virginia senator was placed in nomination by home-state colleague Jay Rockefeller, who was just elected to the Senate. Seconding speeches were made by Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, a liberal, and Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama, a conservative.

To protect his handful of supporters from possible recrimination, Chiles put himself in nomination. Only Sens. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico had publicly endorsed him.

Reagan, Goldwater talk about MX

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Wednesday held an unannounced meeting with Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a new critic of the president's push to get the MX missile built and deployed.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan and Goldwater met for about 15 minutes to discuss the MX, the multiple-warhead missile that Congress has balked at and that Reagan wants as a counter to Soviet weapons.

"The president expressed his views to the senator on the MX, and I'm sure the senator expressed his view to the president," Speakes said.

A Goldwater spokesman, who said the senator flew to Arizona afterward, "considers his meeting with the president private."

GOLDWATER, the crusty father of modern conservatism whose 1964 presidential campaign inspired Reagan to enter politics, generally supports administration military policy, but has nettled the White House before by criticizing CIA Director William Casey.

Goldwater will become chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee when the new Congress convenes in January.

Last week, Goldwater said, "I'm not one of these freeze-the-nuke nuts. But I think we have enough (strategic weapons). I think (the Soviets) have more than enough, and I don't see any big sense in going ahead and building."

He also said, "My heart has never been in" the MX and said he expects Congress to kill it.

The administration wants to build 100 of the missiles and put them in existing Minuteman III silos in Nebraska and Wyoming, starting in late 1986 and early 1987.

CONGRESS IN 1983 approved an initial production of 21 missiles, and this year Reagan asked for 40 but got merely a pledge from Congress to put the idea of buying another 21 to two votes each in both the House and Senate in the spring. Should the missile fail to clear any one of the four votes it will be dead for fiscal 1985. Missile opponents think they have the votes to kill it.

The meeting with Goldwater came just before another session of the White House budget advisers with Reagan where Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger pressed his case "in general terms" against large cuts in the Pentagon budget, Speakes said.

No decisions were made and there were no arguments, he said.

Previous weeks of domestic budget cutting have left the administration about $8 billion short of its target for $42 billion in spending reductions next fiscal year.

The news Iowa has depended upon for weeks of speculation finally arrived Monday. Des Moines Register and Tribune Chairman David Kruidenier announced that his attempt to keep the newspaper and its holdings in the Des Moines-based Cowles family had failed. The company is up for sale.

Kruidenier's surrender is at once sad and revealing. The Register and the Tribune prided themselves on their independence. As part of a free-standing company, the newspapers could accurately reflect the interests of their readers, develop an extraordinarily deep pool of local talent, and promote a stubborn and courageous editorial policy.

Unfortunately, as the rush toward communications conglomeration has accelerated, the independence of the Register and Tribune Company has become an increasingly fragile thing. The ink was on the newsprint two years ago, when the Register and Tribune went into the red and considered consolidation with the Cowles-held Minneapolis Star and Tribune. While that plan was rejected, it indicated the key was in the lock, waiting for the right persons to turn it.

And when offers and rumors of offers for the company this fall quadrupled the value of stock, it was apparent that the clamor outside the door could no longer be ignored.

One can hardly blame stockholders on the threshold of a fortune for ignoring the interests of a family that is almost as divided and twice as far-flung as the Ewings of "Dallas."

And one must also criticize the Register's own self-mythologizing of late. The Register is not the only newspaper to see its state as its audience; the "local ownership" it trumpets is titular at best; the State of Iowa will not fall apart for having the Register published by an outside corporation.

Still, there is a genuine sense here of a tradition about to be lost. The bids open after the new year, and with them, a new era for the Des Moines Register. Both the current board of directors and the new owners should remember that tradition and the quality it offered.

Let's do it to them ...

Secretary of State George Shultz said this week that the United States should respond to threats of terrorist attacks by either preemptive or retaliatory strikes. This, he argues, will prevent further attacks.

With these suggestions Shultz makes the classic mistake of the rational man with limited imagination: He fails to understand the irrational component to terrorism. Most terrorists are disturbed, hiding in a cause and using ideology to justify their violence.

People who commit suicide in order to kill others and who will put the innocent at risk are not sane and are not likely to desist because of retaliation. Such an escalation of violence is likely to be their goal. Moreover, we do not show our outrage over violence that engulfs even the innocent by ourselves turning to such violence.

There are more effective methods. Political and economic isolation of countries that train, support and encourage terrorism would be more effective. Refusing permission for planes to go to countries like Libya and Iran and to let planes from there land elsewhere would also hurt. So would a refusal to buy from and sell to those countries.

The solution is unity among non-terrorist countries to impose sanctions on those that endorse terrorism. But if we become a terrorist country, it encourages forces that seek to make the time bomb the preferred way to resolve disputes.

These tactics reduce, not strengthen, our power. In a world where hidden bombs and suicide raids are the method of war, we are no stronger than the weakest country — anyone can plant a bomb in a restaurant. Such wars are levelers; even the weakest can prevail.

Action, not reaction

President Reagan has outdone himself in hypocrisy with his newfound objections to racism in South Africa. Suddenly, because his policy of "constructive engagement" has been "misunderstood" at home, he spoke out Monday for justice in the land of apartheid.

Of course, Reagan's new social conscience has nothing to do with the increasing number of anti-apartheid protests across this country or the worldwide attention resulting from Desmond Tutu's Nobel Peace Prize.

The president continues to insist that his policy of silence has been an effective agent of change in South Africa. But he couldn't cite a single example of what his leverage with the South African government had accomplished. He also didn't discuss why the white minority there rejoiced at his re-election.

"We view racism with repugnance," the president insisted Monday. In this country, however, he has consistently opposed civil rights legislation, while racist items — a tax-exempt status for segregated schools, states' rights legislation — have been pet projects.

Many people interpreted Reagan's speech as a harder line against apartheid. Indeed, the president at least acknowledged that South Africa is not an ideal nation. But beyond that, he proposed no sanctions and offered no admission that constructive engagement is an impotent policy.

Most importantly, he never hinted that the principle upon which white minority rule is based is racist and wrong.

Reagan's statement included a call for the South African government to "reach out" to oppressed black citizens. Resonant of an AT&T TV ad, his statement is equally empty. If the president truly wants to make a difference, he will need more than platitudes. Charity begins at home and Reagan should first stop promoting racist policies here.

As for South Africa, the anger of American protesters, of Bishop Desmond Tutu and of the oppressed black majority demand action, not simply reaction.

Double standard, double jeopardy

"I'M TELLIN' YA now, lady," he said, with a semi-lunge over the corner bar table. "If I see my name or anything I'm sayin' to ya in the newspaper, they're gonna find ya in an alley."

I hadn't thought about Blackie D'Angelo for a long time. At least until I read Natalie Pearson's gutsy column last month, in which she recounted both the experience and her feelings about physical harassment from a malcontent male reader.

As she wrote: "...the critic has referred to my gender as part of my problem and part of his solution. He wants power to dictate the actions of others; he uses fear to gain that power." While D'Angelo spluttered his threats, I remember sitting there wondering if he would have growled in a similar fashion to a male journalist. Like Pearson's anonymous critic, D'Angelo threatened physical coercion to me as a woman to control the interview and my behavior as a journalist.

Marianne Salcetti Digressions

IT CERTAINLY IS not news to women journalists that sources often react to them because they are women. These reactions can range from the "Oh, you look harmless enough, I'll talk to you" genre to the unacceptable level of verbal brutality Pearson experienced.

This is a double standard many women journalists confront in their careers. The attributes of aggressiveness, skepticism and all-around moxie are valued as appropriate tools and behavior in order to produce quality journalism. But when a woman journalist exhibits these traits, she risks not a critique of her journalistic behavior but an indictment for being a woman and acting this way.

Efforts to intimidate women journalists by reminding them of their physical place serve no purpose. This type of response is not only the most gutless form of media consumerism, it attempts to trivialize through intimidation the journalistic work done by women.

Threats against a woman journalist because she is a woman are similar to the "loyalty oaths" that made the rounds during Rev. Jesse Jackson's campaign, when black journalists were asked: "Are you a reporter who happens to be black or a black who happens to be a reporter?"

THE ASSUMPTION behind these sorts of questions or threats made against journalists indicate that sexism and racism still thrive and, for some people, provide a convenient reference point to dismiss or attempt to control a journalist's work.

Pearson's response to her bullying critic was an appropriate one: She asserted that she would continue writing and "savor (her) freedom to do so." Her critic, however, remains a prisoner of his own prejudice, trapped in his inability to understand the distinction between a difference of opinion and the belief that a person's sex has something to do with that opinion.

Locally, women journalists hold a variety of managerial, reporting and editorial positions. Pearson's critic and others who believe that women journalists can be harassed because they are women should realize that they demean only themselves with their actions and that criticism of the press is better aimed at the message, not the messenger.

A modest proposal about lotteries

THE TIME HAS finally come for Iowans to have a state lottery of their own. After vetoing two previous lottery bills, Gov. Terry Branstad has indicated he will no longer stand like Custer at Thermopylae against the onslaught of Santa Anna's forces or against the hordes of Iowans who feel that a drive into Illinois is an unnecessary inconvenience toward the acquisition of millions. John D. Rockefeller didn't have to drive his Chevy over state lines to become a millionaire, did he?

Iowans would already have a lottery were it not for the misguided efforts of various bleeding hearts who suggest that a state lottery is in reality a regressive tax.

But this can be disproven by simple logic. A regressive tax places a greater burden on the poor than the wealthy; however, the wealthy have much more money to invest. While an individual earning only a minimum wage to support a family of four might be able to invest a few dollars on a millions-to-one shot, a family with $832,000 would have a 19 percent chance of becoming millionaires by investing their entire savings in lottery tickets.

Since it would be a much greater calamity for someone with all the money anyone would ever need to be wiped out than for someone who's virtually wiped out already, clearly the principal lottery burden will be on the desperately wealthy.

THE CLEAR-SIGHTED legislators who have done so much already to revive Iowa's economy — for instance, by sponsoring the state's many thriving horse and dog racing tracks — have also been opposed in their lottery plans by those who argue that the function of government should be to protect people from themselves.

This is true to some extent, but since government will be unable to protect anyone from anything without sufficient funds, and since raising sufficient funds with an honest tax gets politicians voted out of office, and since politicians are some of the people government is especially interested in protecting from themselves, it is reasonable to expect government to protect people from themselves only when politicians wouldn't be a lot better off if people were allowed to be incredible chumps.

Iowa Senate Majority Leader Lowell Junkins, D-Montrose, and House Speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein, understand this principle. Major lottery proponents both, they sensibly want the lottery concept to be "highly promoted" — in effect, to use an expensive advertising campaign to encourage the urge to gamble even among those Iowans who don't presently have much of one.

JUNKINS AND AVENSON are obviously on the right track, and their lottery proposals are worth supporting. But, perhaps from modesty, the two Democratic leaders have not pushed this concept in government far enough despite the still-troubled condition of the Iowa economy.

Once one accepts the logic that practices harmful principally to the practitioner should be legalized and maintained by government for the financial well-being of the government itself, one should also support the following fundraisers:

• Iowa State Rent-a-Bimbo: Junkins has termed an Iowa lottery "almost a defensive reaction on our part" since so much Iowa money is being spent on the Illinois lottery. Since Illinois is still backward in regard to state-run prostitution, this would allow Iowa to take the offensive and attract Illinois tourists to spend liberally here.

With proper advertising, legalized chippies could be a real moneymaker, attracting many men to try something new: "Hi, handsome. Want to forget about mutual satisfaction for one night and grab an old-fashioned quickie?"

• Iowa State Millers-for-Minors: Obviously it is unsafe for people to drink and drive. But since kids under 16 can't drive anyway, a little drinking should be safer for them than for everyone else. If Iowa allows legal drinking for those over eight but younger than 16, sales at state-run liquor stores could increase dramatically without any negative effects on the state's highways and their users. (While accidents on sidewalks might increase, few would prove fatal.)

Surely Iowa's imaginative legislators can find a variety of state-run ventures that are illegal in the private sector, yet harmful principally to the willing participant. Junkins, Avenson and their pro-lottery compatriots shouldn't stop at too little of a good thing.

Reagan slashes; public thrashes

THERE COMES A TIME in everyone's childhood when you realize how the world really works. This happens when you're about to be punished, and a parent says: "This hurts me more than it hurts you." Nothing is quite the same after that.

Now we have the latest variation on this theme, and it comes from the Reagan administration. After the President proposed a 5 percent pay reduction for all federal workers, the Cabinet agreed to go even further: It would take a 10 percent cut. Talk about hurt!

Not to be outdone in the sacrifice department, House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the idea was so wonderful it ought to be extended to Congress. And then President Reagan, Andy Hardy-ishly, suggested an even better idea. He, too, would take a pay cut. Golly! There goes New Year's Eve in Palm Springs!

This means that among those who will now join janitors, secretaries and clerks among the suffering will be Donald Regan, the former chairman of Merrill-Lynch, Cap Weinberger and George Schultz, both former Bechtel executives, and, of course, George Bush, who during the campaign forgot that his father was a millionaire and declared himself a self-made man.

THE LIST OF the new poor will include numerous millionaires in Congress, most of whom will have no compunction against imposing the new austerity ethic on their less wealthy colleagues. The latter will, of course, suffer silently. In Washington, hypocrisy is just another name for the sword: You live by it; you can die by it.

Even for politicians at budget time, the Dole-Michel-Reagan pay cut proposal is epic political nonsense. It's evidence of how showmanship and symbolism now pass for substance in Washington. The idea is to appear fair, as if fairness means treating rich and poor the same.

When you compare the wealth of a man like Donald Regan with that of a clerk who's supporting a family on a civil-servant paycheck, the point becomes pretty obvious. But take a look at the rest of what the president is proposing — the budget freeze. This, too, is unfairness disguised as fairness.

The Dole-Michel-Reagan pay cut proposal is evidence of how showmanship and symbolism now pass for substance in Washington.

Richard Cohen

The idea of an across-the-board budget freeze is to create something like a fiscal Battle-of-Britain atmosphere: We are all in this together and who knows where the bombs will land. But we know precisely where the bombs will land. They will land on the food stamp program, Head Start, aid to families with dependent children, child-nutrition programs, black-lung benefits and scores of other programs whose recipients are the poor or the handicapped.

THE PRESIDENT'S budget proposal, though, has no bombs targeted at most of the middle class nor any of the rich. To save them a tax increase (and to satisfy an ideological compulsion to trash the federal government), programs are either being cut, frozen or, in some cases, eliminated.

Among them are some that ought to be junked and others that should be reduced. But to suggest that it's fair to take the good and the bad, the essential and the frivolous, and cut them all is an abdication of responsibility. It's the president's job to decide what's worth keeping and what's not and to find ways to pay for what's important.

Of course, in one area the president has done just that. The defense budget, as bloated as it is, has so far escaped the knife — and analysis. In the end, Congress will have to cut it too. But the president's reluctance to recommend cuts in defense says a lot. For him there are two budgets: one for defense, which is sacred, and one for the rest of the federal government, which is all junk. Do with the junk what you will — and forget the details.

The sort of fairness the Reagan administration proposes with its budget freeze and pay reduction proposals is precisely what Anatole France had in mind when he said: "The law, in its majestic equality, forbids the rich as well as the poor to sleep under the bridges, to beg in the streets and to steal bread."

Oh, Anatole, you've never been to Washington. In the name of fairness, the bridge program was cut.

Union

dable," Kruse said. Another plan to relocate toilets may not be feasible because "maintenance items like plumbing are expensive to relocate."

KRUSE SAID HE was impressed with the UI administration's interest in students' needs, because "one of their four priorities in the renovation was to accommodate students' needs." The other three priorities were improving the Union's roof, ventilation and traffic flow, he said.

"Never were students pushed aside, but every area went through some degree of compromise, not just student activities," he said.

"Almost every space has had to take a reduction in what they wanted. We really want this project to be a good home for the students, but we have to live within the constraints of the budget and space limitations," he said.

Union Director Jean Kendall said she is pleased with the students' interest in the process.

"They had some good ideas," she said, but added some suggestions — such as reducing the number of Union staff lockers in the effort to expand the Arts and Crafts Center — may not work because they might not comply with the state code.

JONES ALSO SAID Skinner's proposals were "well presented. I think the work Mike and others did showed some thoughtfulness. The suggestions gave architects something to look at as tangibles."

Jones said officials involved in Union renovation plans have "generally concurred" on the current design plans dealing with blocks of space, with the possible exception of Skinner's suggestion and some faculty members' desire for exclusive space.

Jones said space is included in the plans to handle faculty needs, but the "space is not dedicated for exclusive faculty use." This question would have to be addressed by the appropriate officials, such as the UI vice presidents and President James O. Freedman, Jones said.

Jones said a representative of the architectural firm "would get in touch as soon as possible to let me know what options he perceives in the overall conceptual plan for (Skinner's) plans."

He said he anticipates presenting the master plan to the regents Jan. 17 in an effort to get authorization to proceed with schematics. Officials will then begin dealing with specifics, he said.

Quad

priority over even the South Quad students."

Siekman said South Quad residents were asked at a recent dorm meeting how many of them would want to stay together if space were allotted for them in another residence hall. She estimated 60 of South Quad's approximately 115 students expressed a desire to stay together as a group.

"We wanted to find out how many people would actually apply to live where residence services found them space if we could get something like that arranged. We didn't want everything to be all hot air with no follow-through," she said.

In addition to the transfer, UI officials plan to de-triple South Quad, but Warner and Butler expressed concern about this proposal.

"One of the reasons people like South Quad is the fact the rooms are so big and old. If you put two people in this room, you could just as well put a partition down the middle and make it into two singles — it's practically big enough for that," Warner said.

BUTLER DESCRIBED the size of South Quad rooms as "fantastic," adding, "I live in a triple room and we could easily have another person in here."

Droll said capacity of the UI residence hall system will be decreased by 140 spaces as a result of the 1985-86 changes. That capacity loss is due to the discontinued use of Westlawn and the Hillcrest H100 wing, and the de-tripling of rooms in South Quad.

He added the decision to decommission Westlawn was based partially on the fact that the Department of Residence Services currently rents that facility from the UI. All other residence halls are owned by the department.

But Warner said, "It's absolutely ridiculous to cut capacity when you still have people living in temporary housing in December."

Droll countered Warner's statement by calling temporary housing "good business."

"It's good business to have temporary housing both for the students and the university," he said. "For students it allows a temporary landing place so they don't have to make immediate decisions regarding finding more permanent housing. It's good for us because of the high attrition rate of students who live in the residence halls."

"THE DECISION to cut capacity really has very little to do with temporary housing," Droll said. "The University of Iowa will probably always have temporary housing because it's a financially smart thing to do."

Droll said the residence hall system capacity is based on UI projections of decreased enrollments.

"What we're doing is obviously reflecting the total enrollment," Coleman said. "You don't wait until the bottom has fallen out before you do something to remedy the problem."

Van Oel agreed with Coleman. "We feel if we don't shrink capacity in the residence halls now, we're going to end up with empty spaces a short way down the road, and that space is going to end up costing future students."

Coleman said student reaction to the South Quad switch has not been surprising.

"I'd be surprised if the students said, 'Hey, great, we're finally going to get out of that dump.' This is a positive indication for me that students appreciate their living environment," he said.

"Pornography like Deep Throat and

The Devil in Miss Jones makes hatred and violence (mutilation, assault, murder) toward women in this society not only permissible, but encouraged," states a flyer released by the group.

But Ice Hawks Assistant Treasurer

Billy Vigdor said: "We don't think pornography is a statement against women or against women's rights, but there are movies that do make those statements. We feel these movies do not make those statements."

Mentzer said she will be showing a

The boxing debate

For the past few years, there has been a call for a ban on boxing by many organizations, including the American Medical Association. However, there is another group that contests the sport is no more dangerous than football. DI staffers Linda Schuppener and Mark Leonard duke it out on the subject in separate Sportsviews. Page 3B

Iowa blows out Panthers, 89-40

Iowa forward Gerry Wright and Georgia State Panther center Jevon Estes go after a loose ball during first half action of Iowa's 89-40 trouncing of the Panthers. Wright finished the game with six points, and Estes scored one in the contest in which Hawkeye center Greg Stokes was a perfect 11-of-11 from the field, setting a new Iowa record. The Hawkeyes are now 7-1 on the season and will host Illinois Wesleyan Saturday afternoon at 1:05 p.m.

Pitt's Fralic top UPI lineman

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — If the University of Pittsburgh had lived up to preseason expectations, Bill Fralic would shrug off any individual honor.

But after Pitt suffered through a puzzling 3-7-1 season, the 6-foot-5, 285-pound senior offensive tackle was gratified to be named United Press International college Football Lineman of the Year Wednesday.

"It just makes me feel good after the season we've had," said Fralic, a two-time all-American. "I think it helps the university. I consider myself a Pitt person and I think this helps Pitt. Anything I can do to help the school look better is fine in my book."

THE UNIVERSITY feels the same way about Fralic. During the past season, the school retired his No. 79 jersey. The only other Panthers ever similarly honored are now established NFL stars: Dallas running back Tony Dorsett, Tampa Bay linebacker Hugh Green and Miami quarterback Dan Marino. Fralic received 21 votes among 76 sportswriters and sportscasters nationwide. Nebraska center Mark Traylor was second with 11 votes. Clemson noseguard William Perry was third with eight and defensive tackle Tony Degrate of Texas and Tony Casillas of Oklahoma tied with six each.

During his four years at Pitt, Fralic received attention normally reserved for a running back or quarterback.

He entered the university already a celebrity of sorts. College scouts had been watching him since he participated in spring drills with the varsity team of suburban Penn Hills High School as a 13-year-old, 6-3, 235-pound eighth-grader.

DURING HIS SENIOR year at Penn Hills, he was named a Parade all-American and succeeded Herschel Walker as the Dial Male High School Athlete of the Year. Three years later, Penn Hills retired Fralic's No. 79 jersey.

In the fall of 1981, he became the first freshman to start his first collegiate game at Pitt since 1973. By the end of his sophomore year, his praises were being sung by NFL officials, including Gil Brandt, personnel director of the Dallas Cowboys, and Art Rooney Jr., vice president of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"He's just so dominant," Rooney said. "Every time you watch a Pitt film, no matter who you're looking at, the player who always jumps out at Gil Brandt, personnel director of the Dallas Cowboys, and Art Rooney Jr., vice president of the Pittsburgh Steelers."

Last summer, Fralic was given a pretty good chance of becoming the first interior lineman to win the 1984 Heisman. But Pitt's dismal season ruined Fralic's chances.

Tours readily available for Freedom Bowl

Freedom Bowl

It looks like the only people who will be venturing out to California to see the Hawkeyes play in the Freedom Bowl will be those die-hard Iowa fans that have been following the team everywhere.

"People do not want to go away during the Christmas holiday, let alone travel on it," Universal Travel's Connie Olson said. "It was a bad idea to have a bowl game the day after Christmas, but I'll admit that they are fun to watch."

The UI Alumni Association is the only group offering a tour that has filled their charter plane. Other travel agencies in Iowa City have been referring customers to Universal Travel in Cedar Rapids in a joint effort, but that tour was also closed down because of a lack of customers.

"WE HAVE FULL plane with 107 people that are ready to go," William Iles, associate director of the UI Alumni Association. "I haven't checked yet, but a lot of the fans are the die-hard type that always go to see the Hawkeyes play."

Hawkeye World Travel, Meacham

Travel, American Travel and Universal Travel of Cedar Rapids were planning to charter a jet in a joint effort, but only about 75 people signed up to go.

"We bought into the tour that Universal Travel in Cedar Rapids was offering since there was not even close as much demand as there was with the Rose Bowl trip," Dottie Kozik, owner of Hawkeye World Travel, said.

"WE TOOK TWO plane-loads to the Rose Bowl and one to the Hawaii game and most of the people on the Hawaii trip said that they would not be going to the Freedom Bowl."

Those people that were registered to go on the joint package tour with the travel agencies were told to contact the Alumni Association or Red Carpet

Travel in Iowa City.

"Most of the people that were signed up to go were very disappointed," Olson said. "The Hawaii trip took a lot of people away from the bowl game because they couldn't afford both and where would you rather go? Of course, people would rather go to Hawaii instead."

Terry Tegen, owner of Red Carpet Travel, said that they are offering an "excellent tour" and that there are approximately 28-38 seats left for the trip. The trip will leave on Christmas afternoon and return to Cedar Rapids on Dec. 28.

"FOR THE HAWAII trip we took over 250 people and several of them are coming back to us to go to the Freedom Bowl. There is a very good cross-section of Eastern Iowa going with us," Tegen said. "The people are very excited about the trip."

The costs for the Red Carpet tour is $465 based on double occupancy. The group will be leaving on Christmas in the afternoon and will be staying at the Anaheim Marriott.

The next day, there will be a "Iowa Bash" party sponsored by the Iowa Alumni Association before the game, which is scheduled to start at 7 p.m., Iowa time.

On Dec. 27 and Dec. 28, members of the group will have free time to visit Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm and Universal Studios through the tour guides at the hotel before departing late in the afternoon on Dec. 28.

Wrestling

Michigan, Ohio State, Nebraska and Alabama were interested in then-running back Mark Johnson after he amassed 1,800 yards on the football field his senior year at Rock Island (Ill.) Allaman High School.

"I visited all around," Johnson, now Iowa's third-year assistant wrestling coach, said. "Iowa wanted me to come, but I wouldn't take my visit in football (there). It was one of their down years."

Johnson chose the Wolverines but not for football. For wrestling.

Johnson liked the "individual sport" better, even though he contends that he was probably a better football player.

"IT WAS JUST something about after the junior national tournament which I won my senior year of high school. That's when I started thinking more that I did like wrestling more," Johnson said.

He went on to become a two-time all-American selection for the Wolverines, finishing second in the NCAA Championships twice to Iowa all-American wrestler Chris Campbell.

He was a member of the Olympic Greco Roman wrestling team in 1980, when the United States boycotted, and from there he locked up with Coach Dan Gable and former Iowa assistant wrestling Coach J. Robinson.

He is level headed, has no jealousy and wants to learn from the best.

For example, Johnson said, "My feelings haven't changed at all concerning the Olympics in '80. Of course world peace is more important than athletics, but I don't think that boycott solved any problems... It's my biggest athletic disappointment, but that's life, athletics are a lot of up and downs."

ON THE ROBINSON controversy last year that resulted in Robinson leaving Iowa, Johnson says that was between Robinson and the university, "and that's the way it should stay."

One might think there is some jealousy because of Gable taking all the credit for Iowa's domination. And according to Johnson, Gable's upper weight assistant, Gable deserves the recognition.

"It is probably one of the best wrestling jobs in the country," Johnson said. "Everybody uses him as a motivational thing and so do I. When I see him working all day long, it makes it easier for me to do some of the same things. I think his name should be synonymous with Iowa wrestling."

Johnson knew he would end up coaching, but he didn't know he would coach the Hawkeyes along with his boyhood hero Gable.

"HE (GABLE) WAS my hero when I was growing up, just like most guys in wrestling," Johnson said. "Our sport has one guy that's heads and shoulders above everybody else and that's Dan Gable."

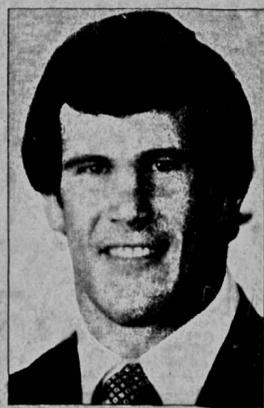

"I can remember being in high school and going up and asking him for his autograph in his book. I still have his book," Johnson said. "It's weird when I look back and I'm working for the guy that's my hero in wrestling."

And Johnson sees his opportunity to work with "the best" before he moves on. "Someday I'd like to be a head coach, but I want to learn and be around the best as long as I can. I don't want to take a head coaching job just to take one."

Johnson, Gable and Gable's other assistant, Keith Mourlam, along with the undefeated and top-ranked Hawkeyes head to Cedar Falls Friday to take on Northern Iowa. The Panthers were rated No. 11 in last week's mat poll.

Iowa will then travel to the Midlands Open in Evanston, Ill., Dec. 29-30, before returning to the Carver-Hawkeye Arena Jan. 5 to host North Carolina State.

Louisiana governor fights to keep Saints

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Gov. Edwin Edwards said Wednesday he has persuaded an organization with a major interest in the Superdome to put in a bid to buy the Saints, in an effort to keep the NFL team in New Orleans.

Edwards said a proposal has been made to Saints owner John Mecom, but the governor refused to say how much has been offered for the team.

Mecom, a Houston businessman, has put a price tag of $75 million on the franchise, but Edwards said he could not justify anyone paying that amount for the team.

"As of now, there is a proposal in his (Mecom's) possession which I think is a very reasonable one," Edwards said at an impromptu news conference.

The governor said the proposal involves the A.M. Pritzker family of Chicago, major stockholders in the Hyatt Hotel chain and the Hyatt Management Corp. that operates the Superdome.

Since there is a Hyatt Hotel across from the Superdome, Edwards said, the Pritzker family "can afford to pay more for this team than it may be actually worth because of the peripheral benefits they would get from the location of the Saints in the Dome."

The governor also said the purchase proposal involves the possibility of private citizen or government support.

Sutcliffe gives no clue on signing date

PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) — Cy Young award winner Rick Sutcliffe offered no help Wednesday for fans and major league baseball teams wanting to know where he will play the 1985 season.

Sutcliffe, the pitching ace who helped lead the Chicago Cubs to their first flag of any kind in 39 years, said he hasn't made a decision on which team he will pick. He reaffirmed that the decision will be made by the end of the week.

Sources had indicated Sutcliffe narrowed his decision to the San Diego Padres and the Chicago Cubs, eliminating the Atlanta Braves and Kansas City Royals. But Sutcliffe, speaking at a news conference before addressing a fund-raiser, gave no indication that is the case.

"I don't think it's advantageous to eliminate it to three teams or two teams," he said. "I'm just going to try to get it over with by the end of the week."

Sutcliffe, who could become the highest paid player in major league baseball, listed the items that are important to him.

"One of the most important things is I would like to play with with a contending ballclub and a club that I think will be competitive for the next five years," he said.

The players and the management are important considerations too, he said.

"It's the first time in 11 years that I've had a say so as to where I'm going to play," Sutcliffe said. "It's a big decision for me and that's the reason it's taken me so long."

Arizona lawmaker: Eagles' move is set

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — The Philadelphia Eagles are going to move their NFL franchise to Phoenix and an announcement could come as soon as Monday, an aide to Arizona Sen. Dennis DeConcini said Wednesday.

Bob Maynes, DeConcini's press secretary, said the senator learned of the impending move from sources he cannot disclose. DeConcini was reported in a Democratic caucus and unavailable for comment personally.

"All he is saying at this point is basically three things," Maynes said. "One, it's our information the Eagles will move to Phoenix. Two, an announcement could come as early as Monday. And, three, when asked how sure he is the response has been, 'Well, we'd be surprised if it did not go through.'"

"OUR INFORMATION comes from multiple sources," Maynes said, but added when asked if they were in Phoenix or Philadelphia, "I'd be uncomfortable describing the sources in any way."

"It's more appropriate for such information to come from the principals."

Meantime, Mike Gallagher, chairman of the Mayor's Professional Sports Advisory Committee in Phoenix, denied published reports that "the move is done."

When asked Wednesday if he could shed any light on the reported franchise move, Gallagher said, "Absolutely not, although I am told I was quoted as a source in the (Philadelphia) Inquirer which is absolutely ridiculous."

"I haven't had any negotiations with anybody," Gallagher said. "From time to time the city does talk to professional sports franchises. I've had a number of confidential conversations with a number of situations in different leagues. I don't have any input in the Philadelphia situation."

"WE ARE ACTIVELY involved in trying to create an environment that is good for professional sports — the NFL and professional baseball. This community wants a pro football team."

A spokesman for Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt said that Babbitt met "a couple of months ago" with Eagles owner Leonard Tose to discuss the possibility of moving the franchise to Phoenix.

"That's why they were meeting," said press secretary Jim West.

WEST SAID BABBITT has had continuing meetings with individual members of the state Board of Regents to convey his support for an NFL team. If the Eagles moved to Phoenix they would have to use Sun Devil Stadium at Arizona State University in nearby Tempe until a domed stadium could be built.

Babbitt helped guide a policy statement by the regents "that the stadium should be available for a professional team if a financial arrangement advantageous to the university could be worked out," West said.

Regent William P. Reilly said the regents are scheduled to meet Thursday but he said it is not to vote on any contract affecting the Eagles or anybody else.

On Tuesday, the Eagles confirmed that Tose is mulling over a transfer of the franchise to Phoenix.

Proposed abolition of boxing has pros and cons

AMA studies say ring wars must be banned

Linda Schuppener Sportsview

Boxing should be banned. The evidence is clear that boxing causes brain damage even to the best and the most successful. A group of conservative as the American Medical Association was forced by the evidence to vote recently to support banning it.

Such a recommendation can't be made lightly. For generations boxing served as a way out of poverty for groups and individuals. The Irish and now Blacks and Hispanics who found other avenues to money and fame closed to them, used success in boxing as a way of making it. It is also undeniable that some boxers, such as Mohammed Ali, show that the sport is capable of giving us men of great grace, skill and wit.

BUT THAT MAY also be what is ugliest about boxing. That it takes men of grace, courage, skill and wit — winner and loser alike — and batters their brains to mush for the temporary pleasure of an audience. Other sports are violent. Death, paralysis, maimed elbows and knees and ankles can be found in all sports. But in no sport, except boxing, is the goal to physically render the opponent unconscious or incapacitated. That means that tougher rules and stricter enforcement can eliminate all but the injuries of chance in other sports.

Not so in boxing. The aim is to so wound each other that in the end one cannot continue. To ask, however subtly, that a man who has nothing but brains, however uneducated, and skill and courage to destroy those on the chance that he might be the lucky one make it out of poverty to fame and money is cruel. And the cruelest joke is that in the getting he loses the ability to fully enjoy his rewards, because his body and his brain suffer irreversible damage.

WE DO NOT SEE happy, healthy, mentally alert boxers retired in comfort to enjoy what they fought so hard to achieve. Instead, we see that most boxers, never make much money and those that do usually don't keep it, and all of them end up with brain damage, to some extent. So in the end, boxing is at best a temporary way out of poverty for only a few.

The people who do benefit are the promoters who get money from the physical damage of the boxers and the audience who is thrilled to seem men beat each other bloody. In that boxing is not far removed from the coliseum, where gladiators risked their lives and their limbs for the pleasure of the crowd. It is hard to see where there is justice or grace in a sport where the audience gets its kick from the blood of others. It is like making war a spectator sport.

After all the grace and courage and all the efforts to reform boxing, it is in the end a blood sport. A sport that derives its popularity from the wounding of some men for the pleasure of other men. It appeals to a darker side of our nature and that side should not be pandered to. Boxing should be banned.

Fight game no more violent than football

Mark Leonard Sportsview

Every now and then someone asks me why I used to box. I usually tell them it was because I like the sport and I was good at it. That answer always seems reasonable to me.

The general public, I think, believes most boxing matches end up similar to the fight scenes in the Rocky movies. I wind up telling people that not all boxers look like Sylvester Stallone after 30 minutes in the ring with Mr. T.

It is the myth of boxing, not the reality, that causes people to criticize the sport and call for its demise. Boxing is a sport. The goal is not to render your opponent unconscious, it is to win the fight.

In my eyes, boxing is no more violent than a game of football. It never made a whole lot of sense to me why someone weighing 175 pounds would want to run full speed into someone 275 pounds wearing pads and a helmet.

WHILE I BELIEVE very strongly that boxing should not be banned, I do realize that there must be an increased emphasis on safety in the sport, especially in the education of referees. In addition, trained medical personnel should be at ringside for every fight and safety measures such as thumbless gloves and increased rest times between rounds could be implemented.

Also, promoters must work more closely with the organized boxing federations to ensure opponents are not vastly mismatched in skill. It is in these mismatches where boxing ceases to become a sporting event and injuries may possibly occur.

BOXING IS A sport with many faces. It can be a graceful, almost ballet-like performance or it can be a violent and bloody war. It is a sport more mental than physical. It is a sport that is often misunderstood.

Part of that reason can be attributed to the relatively small number of people who have participated in the sport. Most people, at one time or another in their life, play a game of football, basketball or baseball. Not many can say they've stepped into a boxing ring after training two months for that moment.

Like participants in other sports, boxers don't go into the ring fearing for their life. They know the nature of the sport. They accept it.

PEOPLE LIKE TO stereotype the sport and its participants. Not all boxers, however, are fighting their way out of poverty or boxing their way to a better life. Not all boxers suffer permanent physical damage.

I learned a lot from boxing. You can't run out of a ring and you can't run away from life. I learned to concentrate and I learned how to work hard and train hard.

Yet I also learned sportsmanship and I learned that in order to get something you want out of life you have to work hard for it.

I learned a lot from boxing. I hope the sport is around for a long time. I still enjoy watching the fights on TV. Boxing, I think, should not be banned.

Hendrick sent to Pittsburgh by St. Louis for pitcher Tudor

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals traded outfielder George Hendrick and a minor-league player to the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday for left-handed pitcher John Tudor and outfielder-catcher Brian Harper.

The minor-league player is catcher Steve Barnard, 23, who has played only one professional season.

Hendrick, 35, came to St. Louis in 1978 from San Diego. He batted .277 last season with nine homers and 69 runs batted in, but missed the last three weeks because of a thyroid operation.

Tudor, who will be 31 in February, was 12-11 with a 3.27 earned-run average for the Pirates last season. Before that, he was 39-32 with a 3.96 ERA in five seasons with the Boston Red Sox.

HARPER, 25, hit .259 with two homers and 11 RBI in 112 at-bats with the Pirates. He previously had a .231 major league average.

The Cardinals had extended Hendrick's contract for three years last year at $1.1 million a year. At the same time, they bought out his no-trade provision. He had four years remaining on his contract.

Tudor probably will become the Cardinals' No. 2 pitcher behind Joaquin Andujar and allow Rick Horton to pitch in the bullpen. Lefthanded-hitting Andy Van Slyke, who batted .244 last year, will take over for Hendrick in right field.

"IN TUDOR, we are getting a good, solid left-handed starter," Cardinal General Manager Joe McDonald said. "He was 12-11 last year with a last place ball club and his hits-to-innings pitched and strikeouts-to-bases on balls ratios were impressive."

"We are sorry to give up George Hendrick and wish him well, but young outfielders like Andy Van Slyke, and a little further into the future, Vince Coleman, are deserving of their chances and I'm sure they'll respond in a way St. Louis fans like."

McDonald said Harper would be used as a right-handed pinch-hitter, an extra outfielder and a third catcher.

Miami quarterback Kosar leads all-American academic squad

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — Sophomore Bernie Kosar of Miami and three members of Nebraska's Big Eight co-championship team headed the 24-man 1984 academic all-America football team released Wednesday by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

To be eligible for the academic team a player must be a regular performer on his team and carry a minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.2 on a 4.0 scale.

Nebraska, 9-2 and heading to the Sugar Bowl, placed center Mark Traynowicz and defensive linemen Scott Strasburger and Rob Stuckey on the team. Strasburger and Stuckey were the only two repeaters in the university division.

Rose Bowl-bound Ohio State, Penn State and Bucknell each placed two players on the squad.

With Christmas fast approaching, sports books are selling very well

By Steve Batterson
Sports Editor

Choosing holiday gifts is never an easy task, but recreational and sports books are becoming an even more popular form of gift giving.

Good reading is easy to find around Iowa City and area bookstore employees say books are becoming an even more popular Christmas gift.

This is Iowa, so it only figures that a book on wrestling would be among the most popular on the shelves again this year.

Currently, the hottest wrestling book is entitled, The New Breed, by former Hawkeye Lou Banach. "It's been going real well," Paul Ingram of the IMU Bookstore said.

JOE ZIEGLER of Iowa Book and Supply also said Banach's book has been selling well this winter but he added he believes it would have sold well anytime. He added that Dan Gable: The Wrestler by Russ Smith is also a real solid book for wrestling fans.

Traditionally, baseball books have been among the best-selling sports books. One of the best on the market this year is Basepaths: From the Minor Leagues to the Majors and Beyond by Marc Gunther. This $14.95 book uses would-be players, players and former players to study the stages of a baseball career. For example, the book studies former Chicago Cub Ferguson Jenkins as a player nearing the end of a career. Another chapter examines Ron Kittle of the Chicago White Sox as a rookie.

Ziegler said his store's biggest sports book of the season by far has been Cubs win! by Bob Logan, a sportswriter for the

Books

Chicago Tribune. "The one on the Cubs is far and away our best seller," Ziegler said.

THE OTHER HOT baseball book this winter is an oldie but a goodie. The Glory of Their Times by Lawrence S. Ritter was first released in 1966 but has been re-released this year. The book, which costs $15.95, features first-person recollections by early baseball stars and the addition of new interviews has made this publication even more of a classic.

Two of the most interesting football and basketball books this year also deal with history.

The Final Four by Richard Whittingham takes a look at the history of the NCAA basketball championships from their inception in 1939.

The Heisman: A Symbol of Excellence by John Brady features brilliant photography and text honoring the 50th anniversary of the Heisman trophy. The cost, $29.95, however, makes the book a little prohibitive for the college student's budget.

KAREEM ABDUL-JABBAR'S book, Giant Steps, has just come out in paperback and Ingram reports that book has been selling quite well. "It's one of the best sports autobiographies I've seen in a long time," he said.

If it's fun you're looking for, John Madden has the answer in Hey, Wait a Minute, I Wrote a Book! All area bookstores report brisk sales of the book.

In one of the year's top selling sports books, the former Oakland Raiders coach along with Dave Anderson writes about his coaching career. The stories are humorous and the reading is light but it isn't any less filling.

The Madden book has been selling so well that Tom Hammel, the manager of Waldenbooks in the Sycamore Mall, said his store is "having trouble keeping it on the shelf."

GOLF HAS LONG been more than just a game. There is more to golf than hitting the ball in the hole and one of the best overall golf books on the market now is Golf: Better Practice for Better Play. This $12.95 book by Linda K. Bunker and DeDe Owens doesn't deal only on swing techniques. It has valuable information on the mental and physical drills that are needed to improve a player's game. The chapters on mind control and conditioning are valuable to golfers as well.

Weightlifting and fitness books remain popular, at least in the Iowa City area. "They seem to be doing well in general," Hammel said. "They're still mainly for men but we are seeing an increasingly large number for women."

Timely books, serving as reminders to the Los Angeles Olympic games have also been popular. The 1984 Olympic Games, edited by Dick Schaap, is one of the better ones, featuring some excellent color photography.

Some things are not as popular this year as in the past, and martial arts books seem to top the list. "That wave seems to have crested," Ingram said. "They just aren't as popular as they were a couple of years ago."

Chief secondary now looks good

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The blockbuster draft-day trade of three-time Pro Bowl cornerback Gary Green to the Los Angeles Rams never looked any worse for the Kansas City Chiefs than on opening day of the 1984 National Football League season.

But it never looked any better than it does now.

The Chiefs traveled to Pittsburgh for the season-opener against the Steelers with a pair of inexperienced starting cornerbacks. Albert Lewis had been elevated from Kansas City's nickel back to the starting left cornerback spot to begin his second season and rookie Kevin Ross was plugged in at right cornerback.

ROSS WAS THE survivor of some lackluster training camp competition at the right corner. The regular at the position the year before, Lucious Smith, had been waived during the summer and All-Pro Canadian Football League defector, Kerry Parker, had not panned out. That left Ross as the starter.

And the question mark at both corners grew bigger and bigger as opening day progressed. The Steelers passed for a club-record 458 yards and three touchdowns. John Stallworth caught eight passes for 167 yards and the rookie Louis Lipps six passes for 183 yards, including an 80-yard touchdown over Ross. The Chiefs wound up winning the game, however, 37-27.

Mackovic never had any doubts about Lewis: he was a third-round draft pick from Grambling who exhibited flashes of brilliance as a rookie with four interceptions. But Ross was a mere seventh-round draft pick out of Temple and professional debuts like his would shaken even the most confident of cornerbacks.

THE STEELERS WENT out of their way to pick on Ross — and Mackovic watched closely to see what effect it would have on his rookie corner.

"I watched him during the game," Mackovic said, "and I watched how he walked off the field. He may have been beat (on a play) but he wasn't beaten. He never buried his head. He never cried the blues. He never asked for help. He said, 'I'm supposed to cover a John Stallworth or a Louis Lipps and I'm going to do it.' Had he ducked, had he moped around wondering if we were going to pull him, I may have done it differently.

"BUT HE'S A competitor. When the defense went back on the field, he never looked over his shoulder. He never looked back to the bench to see if we were going to take him out. He marched back on the field. That said to me, 'I'm your right cornerback' ... and he acted like our right cornerback."

Mackovic was right all along about Lewis. He has gone on to intercept four passes and he has only been beaten for two touchdown passes through 15 games this season. Mackovic was also right about Ross who, despite weekly tests from veteran quarterbacks, has six interceptions. Only three cornerbacks and seven players overall have picked off more NFL passes in 1984 than Ross.

Mackovic admits it was a fluke that the Chiefs were able to land Ross with a mere seventh-round draft pick.

"KEVIN WAS A good solid football player," Mackovic said. "Why wasn't he a second- or a third-rounder? Because he was a tough player to project. His size (5-foot-9) may have had something to do with it and although his speed was good enough, he wasn't the prototype 4.4 guy (in the 40-yard dash). He also wasn't one of those guys in college who went crashing through for interceptions and took them for touchdowns.

"He had a lot of good games in college. But at Temple, he didn't have the opportunity to be seen against all of the best teams, although he had done a real good job against Kenny Jackson (an eventual No. 1 draft pick in 1984 out of Penn State) the year before. He didn't go to the Senior Bowl or the East-West Shrine Bowl where you really get attacked."

Ross scored his first professional touchdown on a 71-yard interception return against the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders in the third game of the season and he picked off his sixth pass of the year last Sunday when the Chiefs intercepted six Seattle passes to upset the AFC West-leading Seahawks, 34-7.

Ross has also proven an excellent run support cornerback with 95 tackles, forcing four fumbles and recovering another. Which proves the mythical NFL scouting computer isn't always right.

Hawkeye swimmers do well in 1st half

By Mike Condon
Assistant Sports Editor

With the first half of the season coming to a close for both the Iowa men's and women's swimming teams, the time comparisons with other Big Ten schools show many Hawkeyes among the top three in their events.

The times, released by Iowa diving Coach Bob Rydzyk, who annually rounds up all times in the conference and distributes them, show great improvement over this time last season.

Among the Iowa men, sprint freestyler Tom Williams has a conference best time of 20.64 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle followed by teammate Martin Svensson. Other member's of Glenn Patton's team with top times include Ed Lower in the 100 and 200 freestyles, John Davey in the 500 and 100 freestyles and Mike Curley in the 200 individual medley.

THE NOTICEABLE THING in the men's times is the fact that the depth possessed by the Hawkeyes in the past years seems to be lacking.

That isn't the case for the women. Only Kim Stevens, in the 200 freestyle, and Kelly Johnson, in three-meter diving currently have the conference bests among the women.

But Coach Pete Kennedy's women have some events where they have three of the top eight times in the league.

RCA Presley collection presents 'new' material

By Allen Hogg
Arts/entertainment Editor

OVER THE YEARS, RCA has been notorious in its mistreatment of Elvis Presley. During his life, the company had him record more wretched material than any other performer would have been able to bear. Their poor marketing of his later work nearly ruined the credibility of his 1970s comeback; the great volume of material released during this period made it impossible for his individual works to achieve the commercial success they were due.

After his death, the company's handling of the Presley catalog was even worse. Repackagings with no apparent logic to them, such as Elvis Sings For Children (and Grownups, Too), were bad enough. When the original recordings were "updated," as on I Was the One, it amounted to nothing less than a total disregard for our nation's cultural heritage.

THANKFULLY, RCA has finally begun to right these wrongs with a collection of releases coinciding with the celebration of the King's 50th birthday on Jan. 8, 1985. Included in the label's campaign are Elvis Presley — A Golden Celebration, a six-record boxed set primarily composed of never-before-released material; digitally remastered mono versions of four early Presley LPs, Elvis Presley, Elvis, Elvis' Golden Records and 50,000,000 Elvis Fans Can't Be Wrong — Elvis' Golden Records Volume 2; Rocker, a new compilation of early rock 'n' roll tracks recorded for RCA; a single release on blue vinyl of "Blue Suede Shoes" backed with "The Promised Land"; and two singles "six packs" on gold vinyl, Elvis Greatest Hits: Golden Singles Volumes I and II.

THE MAN RESPONSIBLE for RCA's change in attitude toward its greatest musical asset is Gregg Geller, RCA Records' Vice President of Artists and Repertoire and director of the 50th anniversary project. When he was at CBS Records, Geller was responsible for reviving Charlie Rich's career and giving Elvis Costello major label distribution and assistance. He also helped in Epic's recent repackaging of Okeh label material. Geller provides hope for rock fans that major labels may finally treat rock 'n' roll music with the respect it truly deserves.

The centerpiece of the 50th anniversary celebration is undoubtedly the boxed set, Elvis Presley — Golden Celebration. With a $49.95 list price, it can't be recommended for purchase to anyone but Elvis completists and popular culture archivists. It is, however, an extremely interesting collection of material, and everyone who really cares about the history of rock 'n' roll (or, for that matter, the history of modern America) should listen to it at some time.

RESPECTFULLY ANNOTATED, the collection includes outtakes from the legendary Sun sessions; early live performances on TV shows, including "The Dorsey Brothers Stage Show," "The Milton Berle Show," "The Steve Allen Show" and "The Ed Sullivan Show;" previously unreleased live recordings of his triumphant return to his hometown of Tupelo, Miss., at the Mississippi-Alabama Fair & Dairy Show in Sept., 1956; home recordings done while in the army in Germany; some mystery tracks found posthumously in Presley's Graceland mansion in Memphis; and excerpts from recordings taped for but not used in his 1968 Christmas television special.

While a lot of songs are repeated, and many of the tracks feature necessarily substandard sound, some moments presented here are legendary in the Presley annals: Sun Records entrepreneur Sam Phillips declaring, "Hey, that's a pop song now!" after an early take of "Blue Moon of Kentucky;" the smug introduction Steve Allen gave Elvis when he made him don a tuxedo and sing to a hound dog on his show; Ed Sullivan stating, "I wanted to say to Elvis Presley and the country that this is a real decent, fine boy," when weeks earlier he vowed Elvis would never appear on his show.

WHAT THE RECORDINGS from the television mainly demonstrate — especially Allen's introduction and Milton Berle's skit as Elvis' twin brother "Melvin" — is how establishment forces in the entertainment industry attempted to nullify Presley's impact by portraying him as a stereotypical Southern hick, and how Presley constantly undercut their efforts by proving himself to be a caring, generous, professional performer and a truly good sport.

Unfortunately, RCA's 50th anniversary campaign does not alleviate one major problem of the Presley catalog: There is still not a single disc which gives a proper introductory overview of Elvis' career, from his early years at Sun to later classics such as "Suspicious Minds." Currently, the fewest albums a person must have to have this kind of overview is five — the 1976 release The Sun Sessions and the four-volume Golden Records series.

ROCKER ATTEMPTS to remedy this and show Presley at his best, but it ultimately is too limited in scope, featuring rock 'n' roll numbers only from 1956 and 1957, and including too many covers of songs done better by other artists, especially four Little Richard tunes.

Thus, the best single Presley disc remains Elvis' Golden Records. Although it contains too many maudlin ballads, with such classics as "Jailhouse Rock," "Hound Dog" and "Heartbreak Hotel" it still stands as the best example of Presley's legacy.

WHAT THAT legacy is is a uniquely American thing. Elvis Aaron Presley is not only the United States' greatest rock 'n' roll performer, he is also the individual man most responsible for changing our nation's culture over the past 30 years. If the music of Jerry Lee Lewis, Little Richard or Chuck Berry seems more challenging and enticing today, it is only because Elvis broke down so many cultural barriers and defined himself as the mainstream.

In his life, Presley did nothing less than embody the American Dream, creating for himself what he wanted to be and, through talent and hard work, achieving that end. That this very fact led to his loneliness and drug abuse and, ultimately, his death, should do nothing to tarnish the respect he is given. RCA should be thanked for beginning to right its tragic wrongs of the past.

Arts and Crafts Center ponders space allocation

By Kelly McNertney
Staff Writer

STUDENTS, FACULTY and the public interested in ceramics, visual arts, creative writing and other artistic activities may have their last chance this coming year to take some of the classes offered by the Arts and Crafts Center in the Union due to the space allocation changes being planned by the Union administration.

The Arts and Crafts Center, besides holding classes, offers working space and equipment use to individuals who hold user cards. These facilities include those for ceramics, weaving, stained glass and other media. Because space allocation changes are still uncertain, coordinator Blanka Bailey is not certain exactly which classes and facilities will be cut, but she pointed out that some programs, such as facilities for and classes in jewelry making and metalworking, have already been cut because of space problems.

ARTS CENTER Supervisor John

"... we gave them (UI officials) a petition ... signed by over 2,000 students," says Arts Center Supervisor John Bowsby, "it apparently didn't have any affect their feelings."

Bowsby, who recently attended a meeting with architects and Union officials, said that proposed space changes would cut the overall area of the Arts and Crafts Center by about 80 percent. The Center will also be closed for an 18-month construction period projected to start in February 1986. He said it is yet to be decided whether the center will be temporarily relocated during that time or exactly where the center will eventually be located within the remodeled Recreation Area.

What is affected by the space cuts within the center will probably depend on the nature of the available space and its compatibility with the programs. According to Bailey, many "clean" activities and classes, (those that do not require large permanent working space) can probably be moved to meeting rooms elsewhere in the ion or on campus. The programs most in danger of being cut are ones like the ceramics facilities, which require such large working areas per student that active use of the facilities appears comparatively low.

THE CLASSES, including a program for youth instruction, usually involve about 50 participants and approximately 20 UI faculty and staff as instructors and coordinators. In addition, Bailey said 20 to 30 people use the facilities per semester.

Since demand for the existing programs continues from year to year, these programs, if cut, may be in demand again in the future. If this happened the potential cost of buying new equipment would probably prevent these programs from ever getting started again, Bailey said. "We bought the equipment when it was a lot less expensive. Now I'd like to know what they're going to do with all of it. If it's just going to sit around collecting dust, that will be a waste, too," she said.

SINCE BOWLSBY doesn't see any inclination on the part of the architects and Union officials to make substantive changes in the plans such as would be necessary to allocate more space to the Arts and Crafts Center and its programs, he believes the officials are unresponsive to the wishes of the people involved in these programs. "Although we gave them a petition concerning the fate of the Recreation Area, signed by over 2,000 students, it apparently didn't have any affect their (the officials') feelings," he said.

Bailey echoed Bowsby's frustration with the inflexibility of the administration, saying the Arts and Crafts Center was offering a service which would not be available without the existence of the UI. "A non-profit program like ours depends on the support of the university. It's a shame that they're going to cut something like this," she said.

The Daily Iowan/Dan Nierling

Nina Liu works on making a set of ceramic plates in the Arts and Crafts Center in the basement of the Union Wednesday morning. The Arts and Crafts Center is being threatened by proposed renovation plans for the building. The facilities at the center are currently open to the public for a small charge on a per semester basis.

Jazzman tutors Gere to toot own horn

United Press International

CORNET PLAYER Warren Vache may go down in film annals as the first jazz musician who coached an actor so well that it cost him a job.

In June 1983, music director Norm Holland asked Vache to teach actor Richard Gere to play cornet for his part in the Francis Ford Coppola film, The Cotton Club, a free preview of which will be shown at the Campus 2 Theatre at 8 tonight.

The $47 million production — also starring Gregory Hines, Diane Lane and Lonette McKee — centers around the legendary and notorious Harlem nightclub in the 1920s and 1930s that was run by white gangsters and headlined all-black entertainment for white patrons, including well-known gangsters, politicians and actors.

IT WAS A lavish speakeasy known for elaborate floor shows and nightly radio broadcasts. Duke Ellington and Cab Calloway reigned as house bandleaders, and jazz singer Lena Horne got her start at the Cotton Club.

In the film, Gere plays Dixie Dwyer, an Irish kid with a cornet, who digs black music, hangs around with mobsters and, when he gets underfoot, the gangsters ship him off to Hollywood where he becomes a tough guy on the silver screen.

Vache accepted the coaching challenge, with the understanding he would do the actual off-camera horn work for the movie soundtrack, which was taped in the studio last July.

On a regular basis for 13 months, Vache and jazz cohort Jimmy Maxwell coached Gere on cornet techniques and refreshed his memory on reading music.

IT WASN'T AS IF Gere was a total stranger to music. He played trumpet in high school — but hadn't touched the instrument in about 15 years.

"He worked very hard," Vache said. "At times, I'd have to slow him down a little, to keep him from blowing his lips out."

"As it turned out, I taught Richard too well. He did me out of a job. He actually did the sound track," Vache said.

When it came time for taping by Bob Wilber's 15-piece band, Gere did the cornet work, playing solos that Vache wrote for him.

They included four of the 50 songs that pepper the soundtrack — "I Want a Big Butter and Egg Man," "Back Home Again in Indiana," "How Come You Like Me Like You Do?" and "Am I Blue?"

"I'm proud of him. He's the only actor in the history of the movies to do that," Vache said. "It's nice to be able to help somebody with ears like that. He was quick on picking it up. By the end of our working together, he was playing Louis Armstrong's (1923 classic) 'Weather Bird,' which is no easy blow."

HOLLAND SAYS GERE made the horn part of his character. "The temptation is always to dub the music. But Gere acted with his cornet in a way no session musician ever could," Holland said.

Vache, 33, of Rahway, N.J., is a thoroughly schooled musician. He records for Concord Jazz and frequently teams up with Woody Herman or another young jazz giant — tenor saxophonist Scott Hamilton. He also plays with George Wein's Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars.

Vache's biggest influences in a robust, daring and melodic style strongly rooted in the Swing Era have been Bobby Hackett, Bix Beiderbecke and Ruby Braff. Not to mention, as Vache will tell you, a legend who played the real Cotton Club. His name was Louis Armstrong.

The preview of Cotton Club, which opens nationally on Friday, is being co-sponsored by the Bijou and Campus Theatres. Free passes for the movie are available beginning at 9 a.m. at the Union Box Office and Stephen's Clothing in the Old Capitol Center.

Percussion Ensemble plays excellent 20th-century music

By Kate Van Orden
Staff Writer

THE UI PERCUSSION Ensemble's program last Sunday evening in Voxman Hall came off fairly well, certainly a good representation of some excellent 20th-century music. The opening piece on the program, "Duet for Marimba and Vibraphone" (1983) by little-known composer Daniel Levitan, eased one into the right listening mood. Performed by Michael Geary and Daniel Woods, the piece is something of an attempt at Steven Reich's style imbued with a tunefulness reflecting the new Romanticism.

The following works, "Percussion Sextet" (1980) by Michael Geary and "Trio" (1984) by Lon Washburn, were composed by members of the ensemble. Geary's work beautifully reflected his respect for John Cage in the scoring, where two instruments, such as timpani and marimba, were used together for a single sound. Without the tightness of Cage's style, however, the piece sometimes meandered and the instrumentation seemed too diverse.

Washburn's fun piece for three drum sets would have made Phil Spector proud. It featured a wall of sound, punctuated with a freewheeling solo by the composer.

Music

"Pieces of Wood" (1973) demands precision to be just right. Unfortunately, the inconsistencies and quirks in the rhythms, as well as a messy ending, spoiled the minimalist quality of the piece. But when the music was together, it worked very well, with the embracing effect of crickets on a quiet night.

They saved the best for last, the final two works on the program being John Cage's "Second Construction" (1940) and Terry Riley's 1964 "In C." With Michael Geary, Daniel Woods, Patrick Doyle and David Colson performing, the Cage was great — a piece tight in composition and thoughtful in instrumentation played with attentiveness.

The balance in the Riley piece wasn't as perfect, the marimbas drowning out the strings in places, but it was otherwise an effective performance of this important work, the meditative quality of the piece having a firm hold over the listener.

This was a program that took a lot of work to put on; the percussion department should be applauded for taking the initiative to present such significant 20th-century American compositions. Here's looking forward to such energetic work in the future.

Top rockers raise Ethiopian funds

LONDON (UPI) — The Christmas record made by Britain's top rock stars for famine victims in Ethiopia became the fastest-selling single in pop history Tuesday.

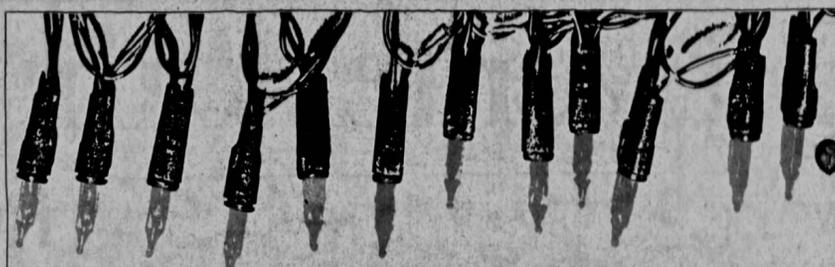

The record, "Do They Know It's Christmas?", has sold 600,000 copies in Britain in one week alone and 1.25 million worldwide, with projected sales of 9 million.

The record features what is probably the world's most expensive choir — 38 of Britain's most-famous pop musicians — known collectively as Bandaid. The band includes the group Duran Duran, Boy George and Jon Moss of Culture Club, Wham!, Phil Collins, Bono of U2, Bananarama, Sting of the Police, Spandau Ballet, Heaven 17, Paul Weller of Style Council and Ultravox. They were joined by a lone American, Robert Bell of Kool and the Gang.

Duran Duran flew in from West Germany, Spandau Ballet from Tokyo and Boy George from New York for the Nov. 25 recording session at the request of Boomtown Rat singer Bob Geldof.

The record costs the equivalent of $1.60 in Britain of which $1.20 goes to buy grain for Ethiopia. The British government took its tax cut but record companies and distributors have all given up their profits.

'Earthwords' seeks to publish writing, art of undergraduates

WITH ITS SLOGAN, "Earthwords wants your words (and art)," the UI's original undergraduate literary magazine hopes to encourage all interested undergraduate students, regardless of their various career aspirations, to submit their creative work.

"Earthwords is a viable tradition that seeks to present a diversity of excellent undergraduate literature and art," Ginger Spiegel, Earthwords adviser and Residence Services Educational Programmer, explained.

According to Spiegel, the probability of a work being published in Earthwords is good. Although the magazine, now in its fifth year of production, received over 250 submissions last year, "62 percent of those who submitted work had at least one piece published," Spiegel said. She added that 67 percent of last year's published submissions came from off-campus undergraduates.

Janet Ferguson, Earthwords editor, said the current submission campaign is especially trying to get submissions from foreign students. "This year, as in years past, Earthwords has made an extra effort to contact international students through cultural clubs and associations," she said.

"We're open to what people have to submit. If it's a new idea, we'll listen," editorial board chairwoman Julie Helling said.

The guidelines for submission are:

- Any UI undergraduate student may submit.
- Earthwords accepts black and white photographs, graphics, line drawings, poetry and prose (1200-1500 words).
- No more than five submissions from any student are accepted.
- Written submissions must be typed.
- On a separate sheet of paper, name, address and phone number must be included.
- All submissions should be dropped off at the Hall Coordinator's Office in Currier Hall or mailed to: Ginger Spiegel, Educational Programmer, Hall Coordinator's Office, Currier Hall.
- Works will be returned.
- The deadline for submissions is Dec. 15.

Talents of handicapped actors make for special theater group

By Kelly McNertney
Staff Writer

THE THEATER Acting Video Company is an Iowa City acting, singing, dancing (and even jousting) group with a twist. The performers are all Iowa Citizens who are handicapped and have volunteered to participate in UI theater professor Lewin Goff's class in Theater for Special Populations.

Watching the group perform, however, it seems the most important prerequisite for participating is enthusiasm. All 12 of the performers contribute to the production in ways other than acting. While the group is directed by theater students Bob Rotman and Taffi O'Brien Denicola, the writing, directing, casting and creating of ideas are often done by the group as a whole.

SOME INDIVIDUALS offer specific talents, such as Elaine Erickson, whose original music will be featured in some of the sketches in their upcoming production on Sunday at 3 p.m. in 108 Old Armory. Most of the sketches in the production will be improvisational, relying on the creativity of each actor to complete the scene.

The experience of the class has encouraged the group to create its own organization. That organization, The Theater Acting Video Company, will continue to exist even after Rotman and Denicola have completed the class.

Co-chairwoman Marjorie Hayden Strait expressed high hopes for the expansion of the group, both in size and scope. "We encourage members of the community to offer their comments, criticism and talent. This group is open to any one who is interested; we expect to keep growing," she said.

ROTMAN SAID THE group plans more experimental ventures into video, music, art and dance in the future, possibly involving UI class instruction and even work with local cable TV. "We'd like to get some of our stuff on the air, if it's possible; we're looking into it right now," he said.

Sunday's show is slightly less than an hour-long collection of dramatic sketches, ranging from a conversation in front of a TV set to an improvisation on a scene from The Glass Menagerie. Though the endeavor is rather informal, it does not hinder the concentration and enthusiasm within the company. As Strait pointed out, they are a group of friends, foremost, who support and encourage each other with challenges. "We are really a mutual aid society, in a way," she said.

A few of the sketches from Sunday's show will be previewed Friday night at the Cornerstone Coffee House at the Newman Center, between 8 and 11 p.m.
