UI Hospitals may lose funding to rural facilities

By Mary Boone and Jerry Duncan
Staff Writers

A recent push by rural hospitals to receive more state funds may put UI Hospitals on the losing side in the appropriations battle, according to Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma.

"It's basic economics," Brown said. "If we do appropriate more money to rural hospitals than we have in the past, the University Hospitals are likely to receive less than they have previously received."

"I've been involved with appropriations before. Very simply, when somebody gains, somebody else is losing," he said.

Brown, who serves as co-chairman of the Senate Educational Appropriations Subcommittee, said UI Hospitals officials have attended several legislative committee meetings in hopes of maintaining state funding levels. But rural hospitals are also lobbying more intensely because their patient occupancy levels are declining.

BROWN SAID UI Hospitals is "basically opposing a move by the legislature to support indigent health care programs at hospitals other than University Hospitals."

But Frank Stork, UI director of state relations, said although he is "aware of the concern of some rural hospitals about receiving funds," he is "not aware of any financial battle brewing between University Hospitals and smaller hospitals."

Stork did note small hospitals have expressed concerns about securing services for needy or indigent persons.

"I think people are concerned about moving more indigent health care programs, but I would hope that won't take funds away from UI Hospitals," he said.

In addition, UI Hospitals may suffer financial and personnel setbacks if another legislative proposal receives approval in Des Moines. Stork said the feasibility of establishing Area Health Education Centers — programs in which health education is taught at local hospitals — has also been a topic of discussion among Iowa legislators.

A BILL SIMILAR in scope to the AHEC program was recently introduced to the House Human Resources Committee and calls for a program that would "decentralize health care out to rural areas."

Semi-tough

Barry Weinstein surveys the damage to his car as he holds his bleeding wrist, moments after a collision on Interstate 10 in Metairie, La. The accident caused interstate traffic to be tied up for several hours while authorities attempted to straighten out the situation. Weinstein and his brother, Craig, escaped serious injury when their car skidded on the road and was hit by two semi-trucks. The truck drivers were also not seriously hurt.

Ginzburg: 'Mass terror' prevails

By Charlene Lee
Staff Writer

Recalling the progression of human rights violations in the Soviet Union since the 1917 Bolshevik revolution, Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg told a crowd of more than 200 at the UI Tuesday night about the "mass terror" he has witnessed in that nation.

When the revolution occurred, many of the flags and placards displayed by participants proclaimed the emergence of human rights in the Soviet Union, said Ginzburg, whose address in Russian was translated by Ludmilla Thorne of the Center for Appeals for Freedom. However, nearly 40 years of "terror" under the leadership of Communist revolutionary leader Joseph Stalin followed, he said.

According to Ginzburg, only after Stalin's death in 1953 — when Nikita Khrushchev became head of state — did the Soviet people begin to realize some of the terror Stalin had instilled in the nation. Ginzburg then compared the "mass terror" during Stalin's reign to that which later occurred in China and Eastern Europe. "This terror had used the same methods and pursued the same goals," he said.

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT under Stalin destroyed three layers of society, he added. The first government campaign was against the churches, the second against the intellectuals "who presented the reason, the rationale, the mind of the people" and the third strike was directed at the peasants.

Stalin's successors did not improve the condition of life in the Soviet Union, "and I don't believe they were very different from Stalin himself. But it was important to note that the mass terror had achieved the goal it was pursuing," he said.

When Ginzburg was a young actor and director for a youth theater in Siberia, he became interested in journalism, which he studied at Moscow University. He then wrote articles for a youth paper in the Soviet Union that he described as "just as serious as your Daily Iowan."

However, Ginzburg said he became disillusioned when he "just didn't like the idea of opening a newspaper in the morning and reading my article and not recognizing anything that I had written the night before." The only type of articles to escape drastic editing were those dealing with the ballet, because the editors never attended a performance, he said.

City refuses to finance two agencies

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

The Iowa City Council — taking a final look at the city's proposed budget for fiscal 1986 before setting a public hearing on the matter — refused to finance two local human service agencies that had requested a total of $13,000.

The council Tuesday night also informally agreed to set aside about $33,000 in the budget to hire an assistant finance director to handle the investment of city funds.

Councilor Ernest Zuber said he would "go along with the recommendations" to fund 10 local human service programs, but would not consent to provide $3,000 to the Johnson County chapter of the American Red Cross and $10,000 to the Mid-Eastern Council on Chemical Abuse.

Elderly Services Agency, Rape Victim Advocacy Program and Domestic Violence Program were among several human service agencies that requested a total of $181,558 in funding from the council for fiscal 1986, which runs from July 1985 through June 1986.

THE COUNCIL informally agreed to provide $170,423 to the local agencies, a 4.4 percent increase over last year's funding of the programs.

"We have an uncertain future — we don't know what (federal) cutbacks we will have to deal with in the future," Mayor John McDonald said. "We don't want to take on any new agencies."

Ernest Zuber

MECCA requested $103,000 and Red Cross $4,000 from Johnson County for the next fiscal year. Neither program received funding from the city last year.

Councilor George Strait said he could not approve funding Red Cross because "nationally, Red Cross has a tremendous amount of money that goes to administrative overhead."

"We're better off not funding them," Zuber said. "As money continues to get tighter, I'd rather put money into things we need in the future," such as

Committee approves tuition exchange plan

By Mark Leonard
City Editor
and Sue Stoga
Staff Writer

The Iowa Senate Committee on Education unanimously approved a bill Tuesday enabling Iowa college-level students to attend public universities in bordering states without paying out-of-state tuition.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Milo Colton, D-Sioux City, said the reciprocity legislation would allow the "Board of Regents to enter into agreements to permit students from Iowa to attend institutions for in-state tuition."

In addition, students from states participating in the program would be able to attend either the UI, University of Northern Iowa or Iowa State University at in-state costs.

COLTON SAID THE bill was drafted to "insure quality education for all students in Iowa, especially those who do not live near state universities."

"Students who live in the western or southwestern part of the state are isolated from the public institutions," Colton said. "Students from Sioux City would be able to attend school in Nebraska, which is only 40 miles away, at the same rate as going (to school) here."

Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, chairman of the Education Committee, said the bill will be controversial because the proposal will exclude private universities.

Both Colton and Brown said a major force behind the bill was the cuts in student financial aid in the past five years.

"We are making education more affordable and accessible," Colton said. "We want students to be able to continue their education despite the proposed Reagan cuts."

REGENT BASS VAN GILST said, "By and large I think reciprocity tuition would be a detriment to the state. With the influx of students it would probably bring from out-of-state it could be financially not good for the state."

He added, "My concern would be whether (the bill) would mean less money to operate the state's schools." Regent Ann Jorgensen said her "initial reaction" to the idea of reciprocity tuition "is a negative one. As a regent, I have to be conscious about what that would mean to our budget ... and my first reaction would be that it would probably have a negative impact."

Jorgensen and Van Gilst said the success of such a bill would hinge on whether bordering state legislatures adopt similar proposals.

The reciprocity tuition bill is expected to be debated on the Senate floor within the next week.

Although Colton expects debate on the bill to be controversial, he noted it received bi-partisan support from the 10-member Senate Education Committee.

Streets signal signs of the times

By Greg Philby
Staff Writer

William Howard Taft may be remembered by many people as the 27th president of the United States, but in Iowa City he has been immortalized in a very different way.

Taft visited a country club north of Iowa City in 1912, and is still remembered because of a trip to that club.

"I guess they were in a hurry and they went pretty fast," said Iowa City Historian Irving Weber. "And they not only named the road after Taft, but they named it Taft Speedway."

Today, streets in Iowa City are usually named by subdividers developing new areas of town. The city takes a less active role in the process. But the city's Planning and Program Development Department approves the names submitted by the developers.

"I was totally unaware that we even had anything" regulating the naming of streets, said Mayor John MacDonald.

"WE HAVE reserved some rights to the names selected," said Don Schmeiser, planning director. "Anyone can call a street anything they want it to be, such as Spruce Avenue or Spruce Drive, so long as drive or avenue is consistent with the policy."

The policy states roads running north and south must be called streets, and roads running east and west must be called avenues. Meandering roads are called drives and anything less than 1000 feet can be called such things as courts, places, lanes or circles.

Also, a name already in use cannot be given to a new street.

Names that are in questionable taste could also be regulated by the city "in the name of public interest," Schmeiser said.

Many older streets have a story behind their names, while "more recently, names have been established after the names of relatives, sons and daughters, or after the subdivider's company," Schmeiser said.

Boyrum Street, Schmeiser said, is a combination of Boyd and Rummelhart, the firm that subdivided the street.

WHILE MACDONALD said many newcomers to Iowa City notice "there is no rhyme or reason" for the names of the streets, parts of Iowa City were developed under certain themes.

The extreme southern portion of Iowa City is the "Hollywood" section, where streets are named after Hollywood and superstars. Some of these streets include Hollywood Boulevard, Broadway Street, California Avenue, Burns Avenue, Gleason Drive and Gleason Avenue, Crosby Lane, Grantwood Street, Western Road, Bancroft Drive, Davis Street, Russell Drive, Tracy Lane and Taylor Drive.

Further north is the tree section, with such streets as De Forest Street, Ash Street, Pine Street, Spruce Court, Spruce Street, Laurel Street, Walnut Street, Cottonwood Avenue and Plum Street.

The collegiate section of town is on the eastern edge, where one finds Cornell Avenue, Stanford Avenue, Radcliffe Avenue, Sweet Briar Avenue, Creighton Street, Tulane Avenue and Tulane Court, Oberlin Street, Penn Circle, Bowling Green Place, Washington Street, Morningside Drive, Columbia Drive, Georgetown Circle, Princeton Road, Princeton Court, and Dartmouth Street.

Soviet jet disaster reported

MOSCOW — An Aeroflot Tu-134 jetliner believed carrying up to 80 passengers — including Soviet officials and foreigners — crashed Friday near the Minsk airport, killing an unspecified number of people, it was reported Tuesday.

Western sources said they had heard reports that 19 generals and high Soviet officials had been killed recently in a plane crash, but it was not immediately known if they were aboard the Tu-134.

Vietnamese take rebel fort

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand — Vietnamese troops backed by artillery and rocket fire overran a key Cambodian rebel base Tuesday despite heavy casualties and closed in on the rebel headquarters. Thai intelligence sources said Vietnam moved 10,000 troops — supported by tanks and armored vehicles — into position for a full-scale assault on Khmer Rouge headquarters at Phnom Malai, 10 miles south of the border town of Aranyaprathet.

The capture of Phnom Malai would give Hanoi a clean sweep of major rebel bases near the border and would deal a crushing blow to the resistance, which is recognized by the United Nations and non-communist countries as the legitimate government of Cambodia.

Panel urges ultralight rules

WASHINGTON — A federal safety panel recommended Tuesday that the government require pilots flying ultralight aircraft to have training and certification. Ultralight aircraft carry one person, weigh less than 254 pounds when empty, have a fuel capacity of five gallons or less and can reach a top speed of 55 knots.

The National Transportation Safety Board, in making the recommendations to the Federal Aviation Administration, said the proposals stem from a staff investigation between March 1983 and September 1984. The ultralights are now regulated by the government only as to fuel capacity, weight, top speed and range.

Rebels sell revolution bonds

WASHINGTON — Rebels seeking to overthrow Nicaragua's socialist government are offering "sophisticated investors" a rare opportunity to get in on the ground floor of a revolution by buying bonds.

Officials of the rightist Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN) plan to finance their revolution by selling bonds, which they compare to Israel bonds sold to American Jews and other supporters of Israel. The fund-raising plan is one of many devised by the FDN after Congress in June stopped the rebels' U.S. aid, estimated at more than $75 million since late 1981.

Navy recovers toilet overrun

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon, flushed by criticism for buying aircraft toilet covers at $640 each, announced Tuesday that the maker of the fiberglass parts will refund $29,165, dropping the cost to $100 a head.

The price paid for the part on the Navy's submarine-hunting P-3 Orion planes bobbed to the surface Monday when Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, told Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger the cost of the unit "gives new meaning to the word 'throne.'"

Herpes drug available soon

DES MOINES — A new drug that medical researchers say has demonstrated encouraging results treating genital herpes is expected to be available in Iowa in the next few weeks, state health officials said Tuesday.

The state Department of Health telephone poll indicated that druggists expect to begin stocking soon the drug acyclovir, to be sold under the trade name Zovirax, which was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration Jan. 29.

University of Houston lures away UI official

HOUSTON, Texas The University of Houston-University Park announced Tuesday the appointment of James W. Johnson as vice chancellor for computing. Johnson is director of the Office of Information Technology at the University of Iowa.

UH-University Park Chancellor Richard L. Van Horn said Johnson's appointment is part of his institution's commitment to the development of one of the most innovative academic computing environments in the country. He said this is the highest administration position held by any academic computing officer in the country.

In Iowa City, Johnson's appointment was called a great loss by D.C. Priestersbach, vice president for educational development and research.

In a prepared statement, Priestersbach said:

Since taking over leadership of the Weeg Computing Center in 1978, Jim Johnson has performed outstanding service to the university as a result of his knowledge of a rapidly changing field of technology and his capacity to share that knowledge effectively with the university community.

Jim has carried on the outstanding standard established by the late Jerry Weeg that has made Iowa one of the leading public universities in taking advantage of the teaching and scholarly opportunities provided by information technology.

Priestersbach said that a search for a successor to Johnson has already begun.

Johnson is a 1964 graduate of Knox College and earned an M.B.A. degree in economics from the University of Illinois in 1966. Before joining the UI, he taught economics and business administration and served as director of computer-based education at Iowa Wesleyan College.

WSUI news producer wins documentary award

UI radio station WSUI-AM, and station news producer UI senior Jeff Stein, recently captured first place in Best Documentary division from the six-state Northwest Broadcast News Association.

This is the first time the university-owned National Public Radio affiliate received this award. It is also the only Iowa radio station to receive a first place award from this year's NBNA annual convention.

Stein received the award for his hour-long report, "Iowa Campaign '84 Preview," which aired the day before the election.

During the program, candidates for the 1st, 2nd and 3rd district U.S. House and U.S. Senate gave their opinions on policies that concern their constituents — like agriculture, Stein said.

Stein, from Toledo, Iowa, has worked with the station for four years. He is majoring in journalism, sociology and political science.

Three UI students receive radio internships

KRNA Radio, 2105 A.C.T. Circle, has given spring internships to three UI students from the UI School of Journalism and Department of Communication Studies.

Mary Wittmer, a junior majoring in broadcasting and film, will be working with the managerial, sales and technical aspects of the station. Wittmer, who plans to pursue a career in radio sales or programming, is working under KRNA general manager Eliot Keller.

Joe Hammen will be doing a sales service internship under the supervision of Sales Service Director Owen Knapp. Hammen will be writing sales copy and assisting sales representatives. A senior majoring in marketing, Hammen hopes to pursue a career in sales with either an advertising agency or in the broadcasting industry.

Dan Katz will receive an overall view of radio news from KRNA news director Glenn Gardner. Katz, a junior journalism major, will be assisting Gardner in the organization of news services and will also do assignment reporting. After graduation, Katz plans to continue his work in broadcast journalism with an emphasis on radio news.

Student Senate has first female 'greek'

The UI Student Senate has its first woman senator representing the seat allocated to the UI's Greek system, UI junior Molly Gillogly.

Gillogly said she was appointed to the seat after her predecessor failed to attend senate meetings.

As a senator on the "greek seat," Gillogly said she attends senate meetings to report on Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils, and also to inform these two greek organizations about what the senate is doing.

Gillogly said she would also like to see the Panhellenic organization become involved in more women's issues, "especially the Women's Transit Authority."

She also said she plans to run for a senate executive position in the March 16 election.

Faculty advocates human rights clause

By Andrew Lersten
Staff Writer

The UI Faculty Council voted today to recommend that UI President James O. Freedman add part — but not all — of a proposed "affectional or associational preference" clause to the UI general policy on human rights.

Freedman had asked the council, along with several other UI constituencies, to provide him with input on a UI Human Rights Committee recommendation to extend explicit protection to the UI lesbian and gay community.

The council strongly supported the first portion of the proposed addition, which reads, "Among those classifications that deprive the person of consideration as an individual are those based on affectional or associational preference."

However, the second part of the addition caused a great deal of confusion among council members and sparked a discussion resulting in a motion to recommend that Freedman not accept it as worded. "I would not interpret that motion in any one way," said council President Donal Cariston, but said clarification of the wording of the clause was one of the main reasons the council decided not to accept it.

THE PORTION of the policy addition struck down by the council reads: "The university recognizes the right of non-university entities to make decisions, including employment decisions, on any lawful basis; however, the university remains committed to the principle that its facilities will be open to all equally."

The sentence refers to career placement and on-campus recruiting by entities that may or may not have human rights policies differing from the UI's.

Peg Burke, council member, voiced concern that the sentence might invite discriminatory entities to find loopholes in the UI policy.

The council motioned not to take up the discussion of the human rights policy at its next meeting.

UI organizes massive fund drive

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

The UI Foundation — the UI's private fund-raising arm — has begun collecting donations and recruiting volunteers for what officials hope will be the largest gifts campaign in its history.

UI President James O. Freedman announced recently, "The clock is running on the first five years" of the fund-raising drive intended to finance the "Proposal for the Future of the University of Iowa" he unveiled in September 1983.

According to Foundation President Darrell Wyrick, the drive's overall goal "is to raise $100 million in new endowments by the year 2000." He said foundation officials plan to raise $50 to $60 million of this amount during the first phase of the drive, which is expected to take "four of five years."

Wyrick also said officials are putting together volunteer leadership for the campaign.

"WE ARE MAKING calls on key prospects who will be the top leaders" of the drive's extensive volunteer organization, he said, adding these volunteers will be divided into more than 30 regional committees, as well as a national committee.

"We'll probably use 50 to 100 volunteers for the next couple of years," predicted Wyrick. He said, however, the number of volunteers involved in the drive will eventually increase to "3,000 or 4,000."

Freedman introduced his ambitious proposal, which he said is "designed to nourish and strengthen the intellectual quality of the university" in the future, during an address to the UI faculty 16 months ago. This address contained the first mention of Freedman's now oft-repeated commitment to establishing a number of endowed professorships at the UI.

"The first part (of the proposal) seeks an endowment to support a substantial number of professorships. Some of these professorships would be used to attract distinguished scholars to Iowa. Others would be used to recognize distinguished members of our own faculty," he said.

LAST MONTH Freedman took advantage of the Iowa Legislature's new-found interest in economic development to ask lawmakers to help fund 14 of these endowed professorships in UI departments that could have "economic impact."

He has urged lawmakers to spend $7 million, which the UI will match with funds from the foundation's gifts campaign, to establish 14 $1 million endowed professorships.

Wyrick said the salaries of the faculty members holding these endowed chairs would be supplemented by the annual interest or income gained from the $1 million endowment.

The reaction of lawmakers to Freedman's requests has been favorable and observers predict the legislature may fund several of these professorships during the next five years.

In addition to funding endowed professorships, Freedman's proposal targets the contributions being raised by the foundation to establish fellowships for outstanding doctoral students and the creation of a Center for Advanced Study.

DURING THE MONTHS of discussions that followed the introduction of Freedman's proposal, UI administrators and faculty members have been overwhelmingly supportive in their assessment of his plan and several of the UI's colleges have approved resolutions endorsing it.

"I think it would have a tremendous impact on the future of the university," said UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington.

because "the quality of the university is so directly related to the quality of its individuals."

"These endowments would better our position for attracting the very best faculty in the world," he added.

Freedman also said he believes his proposal could ease the impact of past reversions of state appropriations, as well as those that could occur in the future.

"THIS STATE IS 14th in the country in per capita appropriations for higher education," pointed out Freedman. "Iowans should take considerable pride in that fact. It is a very commendable allocation of resources to education."

"Nevertheless, that level of funding is not going to be good enough to keep our present standing among peer institutions," he added.

Although the goal of the foundation's drive is 10 times greater than the largest campaign it has ever undertaken, Wyrick said he is both "hopeful and confident" about his organization's ability to raise $100 million by the end of the century.

"Obviously it is not going to be easy," he warned. "It's going to take a lot of work on the behalf of a lot of people."

Schlafly letters prompt parental dicta in schools

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Parents around the country, prompted by letters from conservative activist Phyllis Schlafly, are demanding that teachers seek their written permission before teaching such sensitive topics as death, nuclear war and pre-marital sex.

Parents' groups in about 20 states have drafted form letters to teachers and local school boards, listing 34 topics that could "undermine their child's beliefs and moral values."

"Parents are finding a tremendous rallying point behind these letters," said Malcolm Lawrence, coordinator of the Maryland Coalition of Concerned Parents, which sent its letters last month.

"Pupils have the right to have and to hold their values and moral standards without direct or indirect manipulation by the schools," the Maryland form letter says. It demands direct parent notification before listed subjects are brought up in the classroom.

"FOR EXAMPLE," Lawrence said, "if I don't want my child to study rock music, I could have him removed from the class."

The 34 sensitive topics include: alcohol and drug abuse, abortion, suicide, nuclear war, anti-nationalistic politics, homosexuality, pre- or extra-marital sex, witchcraft, illegal behavior and organic evolution.

The Cobb County, Ga., school system has responded to parental pressure by ruling several subjects to be "sensitive — to be approached judiciously," said schools' spokeswoman Phyllis Tribble.

Bill revises speeding penalties

By Sue Stoga
Staff Writer

The Iowa Senate Tuesday passed legislation in amended form to lessen the penalties for speeding tickets received within the state.

Sponsored by Sen. Bill Hutchins, D-Audobon, the bill originally enabled motorists to drive up to 10 miles over the posted speed limit and pay a fine instead of receiving a permanent violation on their driving record.

The amendment to Hutchins' bill, sponsored by Sen. Richard Drake, R-Muscatine, and approved by the Senate, decreases the severity of speeding convictions for violations between 1-10 mph over the posted limit. A conviction under the Drake amendment would be recorded as one half of a regular conviction.

"What this means is that you can speed (and receive a ticket) six times in this state (before having your license revoked) instead of three times," said Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma. "We're not changing the legality of anything, only the penalty."

Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, added, "The gist of the bill debated is (someone) speeding less than 10 miles over the speed limit can just pay a fine instead of having a conviction stay on their record."

THE VOTE on the bill in its original form ended in a tie and was broken by Lt. Gov. Robert Anderson who voted against the bill. It was passed in amended form on a 30-20 vote.

Brown said in voting on the bill the Senate took into consideration individuals whose professions dictate spending "a large portion of time driving through the state."

"It's easy to get three tickets if you're going a few miles over the limit, especially in the cities," Brown said. "There are people who spend a majority of their time on the road and it would be devastating to them to have their licenses revoked."

Capt. Donald Strand of the Iowa City Police Department said he does not feel passage of the bill would have a large effect on Iowa City residents.

"It won't really affect us... people who speed chronically will continue to do so, but the law won't be as harsh on them," Strand said. "I would rather see it continue as it is now, but I can't say it will be that different."

Strand said passage of the bill into a law may cut down on court costs and time in the long run.

"IT MAY WELL save us time in

court," he said, noting certain violations will not have to be processed. He added that chronic speeders may be tempted to speed more than 10 miles over the limit, which would then result in stricter penalties.

In wake of the Senate's passage of the lottery bill last week, the Iowa House of Representatives is expected to debate their form of the bill next week.

According to Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, the bill will be passing out of the State Government Committee today and will be brought to the House floor next week.

"What I understand is the Senate bill is re-written," Varn said. "The Senate has a very different agenda," he said, explaining that the two houses have different priorities from the bill.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said the lottery bill will begin with approving a lottery commission proposed by Gov. Terry Branstad and work from there.

VARN SAID debate on the lottery bill is expected to be "long and intense" and predicted the House and the Senate would not be able to reach an agreement on the issue.

If the lottery bill passed by the House differs from the Senate version, the bills will be discussed by a conference committee that consists of members from both houses until a compromise is reached.

Democratic members of the House of Representatives Wednesday met in caucus to discuss economic development plans for profits from the state lottery.

The starting date for Iowa public schools (K-12) will be no earlier than Sept. 1 due to the passage of a bill in the Iowa Senate.

According to Brown, who is chairman of the Senate Educational Committee, the bill is expected to raise tourism in the state during the last two weeks of August in addition to making more summer employment available to students.

Symposium explores suicide's many faces

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

A panel of UI faculty members and the founder of a support group for survivors of suicide victims discussed an American problem that has "skyrocketed in recent years" during a symposium at the Union Tuesday.

"The Subject Is Suicide" combined speeches with excerpts from the Pulitzer Prize-winning play 'night, Mother — a drama performed at Hancher Auditorium Tuesday night about one woman's decision to commit suicide — to examine the ethical, moral, medical and social issues of the act.

"No one is to blame, but everyone is responsible" for suicide, Janice Wood Wetzel, director of the UI School of Social Work, told about 300 people attending the symposium.

"Each of us feels alone in our shortcomings... The problem is we don't share these feelings with one another," Wetzel said. "We have to participate fully in life... life is not a spectator sport; you have to get into the fray."

Wetzel said 600,000 suicide attempts are made each year and 60,000 of these are "likely to be successful."

NANCY ANDREASEN, professor of psychiatry at the UI College of Medicine, presented the medical aspects of depression and how it can lead to suicide.

At the "absolute minimum," 45 percent of the population have suffered severe depression at one point in their lives, and 25 percent will meet the criteria for clinical depression, Andreason said.

Although depression is the most common and treatable psychiatric problem, it is also "very lethal," the UI professor noted.

Suicidal thoughts and previous suicide attempts rank high in assessing suicide risk, Andreason said, adding feelings of hopelessness, being trapped or out of control are "really serious danger signals."

"If they articulate this intensely — worry. These people see only one alternative," she said.

Other common psychiatric problems associated with suicide are alcoholism, schizophrenia and dementia — a disease commonly known as senility, Andreason said.

ANDREASEN CAUTIONED against calling suicidal people's bluffs by telling them their attempts are not serious, because some may "have the gumption to prove you wrong."

Andreason concluded by listing common myths about suicide, including the myths that people who talk about ending their lives don't do it, people who make repeated attempts aren't serious, and suicidal threats are just a way of getting attention and will stop if they are ignored.

In ancient times, suicide was the "way you spelled relief, but much more long-lasting than Rolaids," quipped George Paterson, associate professor in the UI School of Religion and chaplain at UI Hospitals. Paterson was referring to the relative acceptance once given suicide as a means of terminating emotional or physical pain.

Paterson outlined the historic treatment individuals who attempted suicide have received. In the not-so-ancient past, the corpses of suicide victims were often mutilated, and the victim's possessions and inheritances were confiscated, Paterson said.

TODAY, SOCIETY'S attitude toward suicide is "less punitive, but regarding suicide as indicative of mental illness" disassociates the victims from normal people, he said.

Paterson said those contemplating suicide can be dissuaded through compassion and understanding.

Eleanora "Betsy" Ross, director and founder of Ray of Hope — an agency that assists survivors of suicide victims — spoke about "survivorship after suicide." Ross is nationally recognized from her appearances on the "Donahue" and "Today" television shows.

Ross, whose husband committed suicide in 1975, founded Ray of Hope as a means of helping those who must face "turmoil and conflict" after a loved one commits suicide.

"When the anguish ends for the suicide victim, the anguish for the survivor just begins," Ross said, but added the two can overlap.

Ross described emotions that rage between a suicidal person and his or her loved ones — "anger, guilt trips, comparing, denial, judging, challenging, condemnation."

AFTER THE SUICIDE, these emotions can "carry right over into survivorship, then begin to multiply... like bread rising... It goes on and on until it involves all the survivor's energy, time and commitment."

She focused on the survivor's interaction with society, from that person's emotional stages to how others react to the loss.

"You have to understand how this bereavement process is different" from that associated with other causes of death, Ross said. "It is unique in degree and intensity."

The risk of suicide rises 300 percent when a family member commits suicide, and the survivor suffers an increased risk of death by other causes, Ross said.

She outlined six areas the survivor must deal with, including memories, shock and denial, anger, guilt, searching and identification. Ross said some survivors may remain in a state of shock for as long as three to six months and denial can "last a lifetime."

The survivors must continually question themselves, searching for reasons and attempting to understand their degree of involvement.

ROSS ALSO focused on "society's messages" to survivors. Classic remarks from friends and acquaintances are often, "Well, they're at peace now," or "They're in hell y'know," she said.

She recounted that an acquaintance of one mother whose son had committed suicide "wanted to know if when men hang themselves, do they have some sort of sexual response?"

"After she fought off the urge to hit the woman into next week, the mother replied: 'Well, I don't know, but that's a good question. Why don't we hang your son and we'll both watch and see what happens,'" Ross said.

Ross said the best way for survivors to cope with their loss is to learn about suicide and be able to recount the event.

Soviet machine guns kill 45 in Afghanistan marketplace

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan killed 45 civilians and wounded 17 others in a machine-gun attack to avenge the slaying by rebels of an Afghan official, Western diplomats said Tuesday.

Diplomatic sources said Moslem guerrillas shot to death an important regime official on Jan. 17 in the marketplace of Kandahar in southern Afghanistan, 300 miles southwest of Kabul.

In revenge, Soviet troops in the city "opened fire indiscriminately, killing 45 civilians and wounding 17 others," one diplomat said during a briefing for Western reporters.

Before the fatal attack on the unidentified official, guerrillas fired mortars at the Kandahar airport, said the diplomat, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

"Kandahar airport was attacked and two aircraft destroyed," a diplomat said. "The Soviets retaliated, attacking suspected hide outs of guerrillas in Kandahar city and its suburbs, killing many civilians."

Rebels seeking to oust Soviet troops, who invaded Afghanistan to back the government of President

Babrak Karmal in December 1979, killed "many Soviet troops" in several successful attacks on military positions during the past month, diplomats said.

THE REPORTS could not be independently confirmed because Afghanistan does not permit Western journalists into the country.

There have been reports from "multiple sources of the Soviet atrocities" near the towns of Charikar and Shakardara north of Kabul in the Panjshir Valley, where Russian troops have failed in seven campaigns to oust guerrillas.

The diplomats said Soviet forces may be preparing a new attack in the mountainous valley, a strategic region where rebels have had repeated success in attacking Russian supply convoys from the Russian border.

On Jan. 25, a large contingent of Soviet troops was seen at Charikar in northern Afghanistan, apparently on its way to the Panjshir, one source said.

During the following five days, several Soviet convoys of hundreds of tanks and trucks were seen moving north from Kabul toward the 100-mile-long valley, the sources said.

Demonstration rocks Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Riot police fired tear gas to disperse crowds and arrested some 200 people Tuesday in the biggest anti-government demonstration in five years — a week before the nation's parliamentary election.

Witnesses said about 200 people were herded onto police buses during the hour-long demonstration near a public park in downtown Seoul. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

The demonstration was the largest in Seoul since May 1980, when violent student protests swept the Korean capital.

"It is undoubtedly the largest since the chaotic days that followed the assassination of President Park Chung-hee (in 1979)," one witness said.

Witnesses said some 3,000 people gathered near the park Tuesday for the anti-government rally.

The rally was called by a coalition of 322 civic, religious, literary and labor leaders who oppose the coming parliamentary election.

IN A STATEMENT released last week, Ham Sukhun, 78, the Quaker leader of the coalition, denounced the elections as a government ploy to justify its "unjust and immoral leadership."

Dissident sources said Ham and other key members of his group were placed under house arrest before Tuesday's rally began and were unable to attend.

More than 1,000 riot police were mobilized to disperse demonstrators.

The protesters, chanting such slogans as "Down with the military regime," marched along streets around the park and clashed with police. Police retaliated by firing tear gas.

In southern Seoul, police said two college students attacked a government party candidate making a campaign speech. The candidate suffered a cut over his right eye. The reason for the attack was not immediately known.

Nearly 650 candidates are running in the Feb. 12 election. At stake in the balloting are all 276 seats in the South Korean Parliament.

South Korean leader to end exile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South Korean opposition leader Kim Dae Jung, on the eve of his departure for home, said Tuesday he fears assassination by the government and has strong indications he will be put under house arrest.

But Kim, in a news conference marking the end of two years of exile in the United States, commended Seoul's pledge not to arrest him when he returns Thursday. He offered to enter into a "constructive dialogue to bring about the peaceful restoration of democracy."

Kim said he requested a meeting with President Ronald Reagan but was told "he didn't have the time to meet with me." Kim said he is "not so upset" and understands Reagan's position "in the present situation."

State Department officials reportedly tried to persuade Kim to delay his return until May, after Korean President Chun Doo Hwan's April visit to Washington.

KIM SAID he has found no grounds to believe reports, which he blamed on the South Korean government, that Communist North Korean agents might kill him. Instead, he said, he fears an assassination similar to that of the Philippines' opposition leader, Benigno Aquino, who was gunned down in 1983 as he returned home from self-imposed exile in the United States.

Kim, 59, the leading South Korean opposition figure for 15 years, came to the United States in 1982 and still faces 17 years of a 20-year prison term for a 1980 sedition conviction.

Kim will be accompanied by a delegation of prominent Americans as a security shield. Included will be Reps. Edward Feighan, D-Ohio, and Thomas Foglietta, D-Pa., Robert White, former ambassador to El Salvador, and UI Professor of Law Burns Weston.

Stockman says farmers at fault

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Budget director David Stockman, defending the agriculture cutbacks in President Ronald Reagan's proposed budget, said Tuesday taxpayers should not subsidize "bad debts willingly incurred by consenting adults" who happen to be farmers.

Reagan's farm proposal would cut federal spending for farm subsidies by almost 50 percent over the next five fiscal years. Those subsidies cover mostly wheat, feed grains, cotton, rice and dairy products.

Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., questioned Stockman about the reductions, saying it would not be fair to "balance the budget by singling out for disproportionate cuts any one single area ... especially agriculture where people are already hard-pressed."

Stockman, who up to that point had been giving mostly restrained answers to senators' questions about Reagan's $973.7 billion fiscal 1986 budget, grew animated.

"FOR THE LIFE of me, I can't figure out why the taxpayers of this country have the responsibility to refinance the bad debts willingly incurred by consenting adults who went out and bought farm land when the price was going up because they could get rich, or who went and bought machinery and production assets because they made a business judgment that they could make some money," Stockman said, barely pausing for breath.

Stockman also said farmers are no different from small businesses or any other kind of business that happens to be in trouble, but he acknowledged the administration is under pressure to help the farmers.

As Reagan met with his Cabinet Tuesday to discuss a package to strengthen relief for debt-burdened farmers, a group of rural banks said the administration response still is insufficient.

The farm debt crisis has been at the top of the agenda of several recent Cabinet-level meetings, including a full Cabinet meeting last week.

Agriculture Department officials said the administration soon will announce details of new federal guarantees of existing bank and cooperative loans to financially troubled farmers if banks agree to lower the interest rates on them.

BUT THOMAS OLSON, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Independent Bankers Association of America, said banks should have to write down neither principal nor interest to qualify for federal guarantees, which he said should total $3 billion.

The farm debt crisis — characterized by low commodity prices, high interest rates and falling values of land that is collateral for debt — has been particularly acute in Iowa.

Pressure for action, meanwhile, continued on Capitol Hill, where Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said Iowa lost 8.7 percent of its farmers in the Depression and could lose 10 percent this year alone.

Until Agriculture Secretary John Block leaves office, the administration will not provide real help for agricultural or rural communities, Harkin said.

"John Block, without his $83,000 salary, ... can go back to Illinois and go belly up with the rest of the farmers," he said. Harkin also suggested Block could get large fees on the lecture circuit speaking on the value of a free market.

Meese nomination gets committee nod

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate committees approved the nomination of three Cabinet members Tuesday — Edwin Meese as attorney general, Donald Hodel for interior and John Herrington for energy.

President Ronald Reagan's fourth choice for a Cabinet post at the start of his second term — Education Secretary-nominee William Bennett — won committee approval last week and expects Senate confirmation soon.

Meese, a top White House aide and Reagan confidant who was nominated a year ago as attorney general, was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee after three days of renewed hearings.

Asked his reaction to the vote, Reagan said at the White House, "It's a happy one. I'm pleased."

Meese came under fire earlier following disclosures that some people who helped him out financially with his two mortgages later got federal jobs and that the Army ignored its regulations when he was given a promotion with a bigger pension.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said Meese's personal and financial dealings had been "carefully examined" by an independent prosecutor and the Office of Government Ethics, which found the nominee violated no criminal laws or ethical standards.

The committee's 10 Republicans voted solidly for Meese and were joined by two conservative Democrats — Dennis DeConcini of Arizona and Howell Heflin of Alabama — to give Meese a 12-6 majority.

Iowa Senator Charles Grassley was among the Republicans voting for confirmation.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, who voted against Edwin Meese for attorney general Tuesday, accused Meese of "placing a dollar sign on justice" and supporting courts "for white men only."

Kennedy said Meese was deficient on issues affecting "tax credit for segregated schools, the fair enforcement of civil rights and voting rights, the prevention of discrimination against women, minorities, the elderly (and) the handicapped, all of which are among the most fundamental rights in our free society."

THE COMMITTEE APPROVED the nomination of Meese, 53, after he was cleared of criminal wrongdoing by a special prosecutor who investigated the favorable financial deals given to Meese by persons who later received top government jobs.

The Senate, which has not rejected a Cabinet nomination since 1959, plans to act on the Meese nomination after it returns from the Presidents' Day recess that begins Feb. 18. Meese is expected to win confirmation.

If confirmed, Meese will succeed Attorney General William French Smith, who has wanted to return to private life for the past year but agreed to remain until the confirmation.

In contrast to Meese's turbulent confirmation process, Hodel and Herrington went through their hearings unscathed.

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, which handled both nominations, cast identical 20-0 votes, without prior discussion, in favor of Hodel and Herrington.

REAGAN NOMINATED Hodel, 49, currently the energy secretary, to the more visible post at the Interior Department, and picked Herrington, 45, a former assistant Navy secretary and now the personnel chief at the White House, to be secretary of energy.

Bills come due

The U.S. trade deficit for 1984 has, along with the budget deficit, been flying high for the past four years, and last year it reached an all-time high of $123.3 billion. Most Americans don't understand what that is a problem, but it is and if unreversed will have a very serious impact on the health of the economy.

For one thing, it is a factor in sending the United States into the same situation as Mexico and Brazil; it is making the United States a debtor nation, and sooner or later the rest of the world will want its money. The crash the dollar could make as it falls would be a thud heard 'round the world.

More immediately, most analysts believe that it cost the economy 2 percentage points in growth last year. That was not a serious problem last year because growth was quite high, but the last two quarters of last year saw economic growth slow and this year it will likely be lower (even the government expects the trade deficit to rise higher this year), so that the loss in growth to the economy could be disastrous.

And, finally, some analysts believe that trade deficits of the magnitude of last year and the even higher ones expected for this year cost the economy some 2.5 million lost jobs. With unemployment exceptionally high (7.2 percent) for a period of so-called recovery, the loss is serious.

The high budget deficit, the high trade deficit and the relatively high unemployment rate indicate that the red cheeks of the U.S. economy may be due as much to fever as to good health. Right now we are living high on borrowed money, but bills always come due.

The real crime

This past Sunday a convention opened in Jerusalem to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the liberation of the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz. Survivors gathered from around the world. Clearly some hoped for the miraculous: even scanty information about a loved one who had vanished years ago into the apparatus of the holocaust. Others came merely to remember — and to make the world remember.

It is difficult for many to deal even with the daily particular instances of humankind's unlimited capacity for inhuman behavior. Why, after 40 years' passage, need we be reminded about the abuses of Nazism?

Largely because the abuses perpetrated by the Nazis were not isolated incidents of senseless violence, but a systematic practice of abuse planned by government, enforced by the military, aided by the judiciary, implemented often by doctors and scientists and consented to by a civilian population more interested in its own prosperity than the fate of its neighbors. The National Socialism experienced by Germany in the 1930s and 40s stands as a reminder that any humane government requires a substantial number of its citizens to act as its conscience, rather than as self-interested beneficiaries.

Thus, in a very real sense, we are all served when individuals stand up peacefully against the dictates of government for humanitarian reasons. When churches establish sanctuaries for those illegal aliens who enter the United States to escape political repression, or when protesters trespass on embassy grounds to protest U.S. economic and military collaboration with the apartheid government of South Africa, we should be reminded of the message of the Nuremberg Trials: Sometimes following orders is the real crime.

Love for sale

"Energetic, attractive, happily single woman (40s), looking for male friend to share leisure time, Box 374, Iowa City, 52244."

There, a stab at companionship launched from an otherwise lonely world. The question arises why more people don't shuck out a few bucks for a personal ad.

"The safe, easy, fun way to meet people ... and maybe get personal with one very special person," The Village Voice states in making a pitch for its highly successful personals.

The Daily Iowan, regrettably, is rather lean on its really personal ads. DI Classified Advertising Manager Maxine Lester says that companion-seeking ads pick up at the beginning of semesters and, of course, come spring.

The local ads bring positive feedback, with women getting a somewhat better reaction to their blind ads than men.

So Iowa City dwellers should thaw out their hearts and imaginations, because St. Valentine's Day is approaching fast. And the competition out there is stiff.

Maybe "Looking for a female companion in her mid to late 20s. My interests are photography, physical fitness and outdoor activities ..." will attract a few Marlin Perkins fans in Johnson County, but compare its seductivity to this from The Voice:

"Manhattan executive 40s discovering bisexuality seeks similar male for friendship, discretion important, also interested in photography. Lets see what develops; photo helpful ..."

While personals may carry the reputation of a sleazy enterprise (the DI rejects blatantly sexist ads), the hesitant will be happy to hear even President Reagan gets a kick out of the personals. Evidence to this is Reagan's kudos to Iowa City-based cartoonist Berke Breathed for his Bloom County strip featuring a disgruntled housewife placing a personal ad.

And who knows what personal advertisers may discover about themselves and their existing relationships — remember Rupert Holmes and his pina colodas.

As the world sinks toward an impersonal system of numbers and cold computer technology, why not nurture an art form stressing the warm, personal side?

The hardest road is still ahead

ACTIVIST DICK Gregory's speech here Jan. 24 and The Daily Iowan's coverage of it elicited a number of strongly-worded letters to the editor. In about equal numbers, readers accused Gregory of overt racism and the DI of racial bias in its account of his speech.

I didn't attend Gregory's presentation, and so have no direct experience with which to compare the DI story. But clearly the issues he raised, racial oppression and the complacency that allows it to persist, touch each of us in one way or another. Regardless of Gregory's manner, he has confronted the UI community with some stinging observations that demand contemplation.

For despite the years of official efforts to remove racial discrimination from the institution and all its machinations, there is still a great deal of resentment and frustration among blacks and other minorities, and fear among whites. If it sometimes takes a Dick Gregory to bring it out in the open, the evidence of deep-seated racial bias nevertheless is with us constantly, unstated and suppressed.

One letter writer spoke of "young (black) men prostituting themselves in athletics for the entertainment of 'white society,' ..." alluding to a fact we all recognize: that blacks turn up on intercollegiate athletic teams in much higher proportions than in the student population as a whole.

IT IS INTERESTING that more than 8 percent of black UI students are athletes. Almost 40 percent of the members of the football team and men's and women's basketball teams combined are black — a third of the 96-player football team is black, nine of 15 men's basketball players are black, eight of 15 women's basketball players are black. Compare these figures with the slightly more than 2 percent of UI students overall who are black.

To say that this means black athletes are "prostituting themselves" unnecessarily impugns the integrity of the athletes themselves. But it does suggest athletics is an avenue that is more open to blacks than other avenues. The high visibility of black athletes serves to underscore the point.

To be sure, there are factors that cast a moderating light on that conclusion. First, DI Sports Editor Steve Batterson suggests the high proportion of blacks on the men's and women's basketball teams is partially a function of the coaches of those teams, George Raveling and C. Vivian Stringer, being black. Black athletes are more comfortable with black coaches. A look at old basketball programs shows that each team had fewer black players before the tenures of Raveling and Stringer.

This does not account for the football team, where head Coach Hayden Fry and 10 of his 11 assistants are white.

SECOND, IF MORE than 8 percent seems high as a proportion of black students involved in athletics, the 6.5 percent of black students who attend the UI College of Law certainly are taking advantage of a field of study that offers solid professional opportunities. (Blacks represent about 4.7 percent of all UI law students.) And 4.9 percent of UI black students are studying medicine, making them 2.3 percent of all med students.

So athletics does not stand out as the only field in which blacks excel. But law and medicine are obvious choices for a group of people seeking to break out of traditional limitations. As of last fall there were only 15 black engineering students at the UI, three black business students, two black pharmacy students, two black dental students and one black nursing student.

(There were 407 blacks counted as liberal arts students, but we all know the only avenue open to liberal arts students is graduate school — and in fact 112 blacks were counted in the Graduate College.)

THE SENSE OF urgency that imbued previous civil rights reforms long ago subsided into self-satisfaction on the part of the majority community, the feeling that if more needed to be done, someone was taking care of it. Those of us who are white need the occasional Dick Gregory to remind us of what we do not see in the course of our everyday lives — the constant slights, unconscious and overt, that chip away at the rights and self respect of anyone whose skin is dark.

Blacks have led the way for other racial minorities along the road to equal rights and equal opportunity. That the journey is only half over, even at a university such as this where sincere efforts have been made toward that end, should cause us all to redouble our commitment to the cause.

Unfortunately it may not. The hardest part, the self-examination and the disillusionment that changes in attitude require, is still ahead — for everyone.

Get on with it?

To the editor:
 Last October I said conditions in South Africa were just awful, prompting a reply from Chris Whitehead at the Capetown, South Africa, YMCA. Whitehead says conditions are not that bad. The view is always better when standing on someone else's head.

I was being charitable by only saying awful. The rulers of South Africa are unreconstructed Nazis, several of whom spent World War II in British prisons for actively supporting the Third Reich. The Republic of South Africa will not be a democracy until every citizen has an equal vote. South Africa is by no means a free country. Divestment is enough of a threat to the South African regime to motivate it to spend millions of dollars every year to oppose it. The mention of divestment is considered treason by the white government. Former state Sen. Steve Bisenius, R-Cascade, is the executive director of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in South Africa, and has a full time job fighting divestment. It must be affecting them.

South Africa brands anyone who opposes apartheid as a communist. I am not a communist, but only a white supremacist could support what the Afrikaaners are doing to the black majority. The Ku Klux Klan and American Nazi Party are wildly enthusiastic about South Africa. To support slavery for mineral rights is to put a price on one's ethics. If South Africa were solid gold, it would excuse nothing.

Whitehead asks us to look at American history. Good idea. The same economic arguments were used to justify slavery here, and it took a civil war to change policy. Cosmetic changes are not enough, and if it takes a civil war in South Africa, let's get on with it. I intend to send money to the South West African Peoples Organization. As an American, I am embarrassed that freedom fighters might have to turn to another source for supplies to fight fascism. Our fathers fought World War II, and this is just a mop-up operation.

Whitehead has no grounds to speak of national pride. He is not even a South African. Why didn't he stay in Zimbabwe to work for improved conditions instead of fleeing at the outbreak of majority rule? Maybe he will give us a report from Argentina next year. I hope he doesn't come to the United States, as we already have our quota of right-wing exiles.

Distorting history

To the editor:
 Regarding J. Iosbaker's letter (DI, Jan. 30): Iosbaker, like the Arab and anti-U.S. and anti-Israel propagandists he supports, attempts to win support for his cause through distortions of fact and history.

He refers to the alleged "Israeli-sponsored slaughter" at Sabra and Shatilla refugee camps, but no credible source has ever found that to be the case, and in fact, what credible sources have investigated and reported on the incident have placed the blame and the actions on the Christian Phalange. The massacre at the camp was cold-blooded and sadistic, and that has never been the style or method of the Israelis, although it is characteristic of the internecine blood feuds that exist between the numerous Arab factions in the Mideast.

As to the $400 that Israel on Campus paid for an ad in the DI promoting peace in the Middle East, the money was donated by 400 separate individuals, for the most part unaligned except for a common support of the cause Iosbaker apparently rejects. As to his assertions that Israel is against peace, and that it is Israel that refuses to negotiate, and that "history and modern politics show it," what "history" and whose "modern world politics" has he been reading?

In 1948 the United Nations sanctioned the birth of Israel after the Jews of Palestine accepted the compromise partition plan that the Arab states rejected. When Israel declared its statehood, six Arab armies invaded the newly born state with the declared intention of "driving the Jews into the sea."

In 1956 Israel went to war against the Arab states in response to accelerated aggression in the form of government-sponsored terrorist attacks, military threats and acts of war such as the cutting off of Israeli waterways and the blockading of Israeli ports. In June 1967 Israel staged a pre-emptive strike on the built-up forces of four Arab countries that were poised on her borders and had as early as May pledged an immediate total war for the "extermination of the Zionist existence."

Following the 1967 war, Israel signaled to the Arab states its willingness to relinquish virtually all the occupied territories in exchange for a genuine peace, but the Arab leaders, at their meeting in Khartoum, responded with their three no's formula: no peace with Israel, no negotiations with Israel, no recognition of Israel. Who is it then that stands in the way of peace? Who is it that refuses to negotiate or recognize?

As to the U.N. vote to which Iosbaker refers, recognizing "Zionism as racism," the Arab-sponsored, Soviet bloc-backed resolution won by a vote of 72-to-35. The Arab nations had 20 votes alone; the countries voting against the resolution included, of course, the Western bloc of democratic and free countries such as the United States, Britain, France, the Netherlands and West Germany.

So when Joe Iosbaker says, "The entire rest of the world recognizes the PLO and sees Israel as it is," I guess we know who he means by "the entire rest of the world." Iosbaker should be condemned to live in that "entire rest of the world," as it seems more to his liking.

Hospitals

Senior medical students and residents in Iowa colleges of medicine, pharmacy, dentistry, nursing, and hospital administration would be rotated from central campuses to regional health education centers, said Rep. Jo Ann Zimmerman, D-Waukee.

The program is modeled after a North Carolina program that has succeeded in stabilizing and reversing the trend of doctors leaving the state after they were educated.

"I see decentralization as a way of assuring the continuance of health care professionals in rural areas," said Zimmerman, who submitted the bill.

The program would provide greater diversity to the training of medical students by "showing them the real world" and exposing them to rural medical practices, she said.

ALSO, THE PROGRAM would help upgrade the skills of area health care professionals by employing them as "adjunct instructors," she added.

Zimmerman said more new doctors might develop friendships and ties to the communities where they are educated so "we won't educate students to go off into other states."

"We have to be very cognizant of how to spend tax dollars," Zimmerman said. Currently, the state subsidizes medical students through appropriations that maintain university medical facilities only partially covered by their tuition payments, she explained.

"I think the U of I has a lot to gain by setting up this kind of program," Zimmerman said.

But Stork said this program could be potentially damaging to UI Hospitals. "There's been talk about whether or not this program (AHEC) is appropriate for Iowa. If it is accepted, I guess it potentially could take some business away from University Hospitals. That's a bridge we'll cross when and if we come to it," he said.

"IOWA HAS NEVER applied for the federally-run area health program because of the state Family Practice Act and other such programs," he added. The Family Practice Act was adopted about 10 years ago as a compromise to the AHEC.

Ann Rhodes, UI Hospitals assistant to the director, said the popularity of the AHEC program is declining nationwide because the federal government has indicated its funding is in jeopardy.

Rhodes said 18 states are currently being funded through the AHEC program. "There's a number of additional programs — 10 or so — that had been funded prior to this fiscal year. The trend seems to be heading downhill," she said.

For fiscal 1985, $18 million has been appropriated for the residency training program. In 1984 $17.9 million was appropriated for AHEC.

Rhodes said the time lapse between the states' AHEC funding application deadline and the beginning of the legislative calendar "is another problem to be considered."

"Dec. 14 was the AHECs deadline for filing for the following fiscal year," Rhodes said. "The Iowa Legislature, however, doesn't convene until January and, even if they pass an AHECs bill now, we'll have to wait until fiscal year '86 to apply."

Ginzburg

DURING THE 1950s, Ginzburg tried to issue Sintaxis, a magazine featuring works by dissenting poets. For his efforts, Ginzburg was sentenced to two years in a prison camp in 1960. In 1967, he was sentenced to another five years of imprisonment for writing a book recounting the trial of dissenting writers Andrei Sinyavski and Yuli Daniel.

In 1977, Ginzburg received an eight-year sentence for monitoring the Soviet Union's compliance with human rights provisions. His imprisonment created much international attention and in 1979 Ginzburg and four other dissidents were released to the United States in exchange for two convicted Soviet spies.

Today, Ginzburg is a field representative in Europe for the AFL-CIO Human Rights Division. His wife and two children live in Paris and he said he hopes to relocate them in Washington, D.C.

In a DI interview Tuesday afternoon, Ginzburg said, "I would like to help people understand better what is happening inside the Soviet Union and what could happen in the Soviet Union ... I want to show they (Soviet citizens) don't have rights to begin with. They (the government) can't violate something that isn't there to begin with."

THE MOST important right a human can possess, according to Ginzburg, is the right to choose one's own fate all other basic human rights flow from this.

But Mikhail Bargman, who describes himself as a Russian-born American, set up a table outside Macbride Hall auditorium where Ginzburg spoke, to present another side of the argument.

Bargman said Soviet citizens do possess rights, which are recorded in the Soviet constitution. The most important of these is the right to work, he said.

He said many people in the Soviet Union are satisfied with the system and Ginzburg is "exaggerating (human rights violations) on a very large scale."

Council

programs for the elderly, he said. The council, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors and the United Way are the three local agencies that fund human services programs.

THE ASSISTANT finance director would be responsible for examining investment possibilities for city funds and managing the city's insurance portfolio.

The assistant finance director position was originally listed in the $29.5 million proposed budget as a project to be funded if additional money was made available during the year.

Several councilors, however, said the position deserved to be listed as a top priority.

"I'd like to see an assistant finance director (hired)," Zuber said. "It would be extremely cost effective because you would cover (the expenditure) by savings in the insurance area or with a better return on investments."

City Treasurer Nancy Heaton currently handles the city's investments, but Finance Director Rosemary Vitosh said Heaton has to split her time between the investments and answering customer complaints about utility bills and traffic tickets.

"NANCY DOES an excellent job with the investments, but her workload doesn't always permit her to spend as much time on investments as we would like," Vitosh stated in a memo to the council last week.

Employing someone to monitor money markets full-time, McDonald said, would "be a good investment on our part."

"We'd realize much more in our return (on investments) than what the position costs us," he said.

If the city could increase its investment return by one-quarter of 1 percent, the city could earn an additional investment revenue of $43,800, Vitosh's memo to the council stated.

The council will finalize the city's budget after holding a public hearing in the near future. The budget and the city's Capital Improvements Program for the next five years must be certified by March 15.

Signs

IOWA CITY is not very traditional in naming streets, although it does have First through Third streets and First through Seventh avenues. It also has no Main Street.

"Main street used to be just east of Manville Heights," Weber said. "And it was only one block long. People got so disgusted that it was only a block long that they changed the name" to Teeters Court to honor Wilber J. Teeters, former dean of the UI College of Pharmacy and mayor of Iowa City from 1943 to 1946, who lived on that block.

Mormon Trek Boulevard on the west side of town "at least in part follows the actual trail the Mormons took through this city," Schmeiser said.

Those who vacation in Iowa City can visit Arizona Avenue, California Avenue, Hawaii Drive, Miami Drive, Nevada Avenue, Samoa Drive, Virginia Drive, or Washington Street.

Scent of roses will keep Long at Iowa

By Steve Batterson
Sports Editor

It was the smell of roses that lured quarterback Chuck Long to stay in at Iowa for one more season.

"It all boiled down to three things," Long told an estimated 50 reporters that attended an afternoon press conference at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"First, I want to continue my education and after this year and I have one more semester left.

"Second, I'll be playing with a team at Iowa that might be one of the most exciting teams at Iowa in a long time and third, it gives us another chance to play in the Rose Bowl," Long said.

"That's one of the most important reasons. 'We have a lot of correcting to do. The Big Ten does, too, in Pasadena. I just don't wish I didn't go pro as soon as I throw my first interception.'"

LONG, WHO WAS granted an extra year of eligibility by a 1984 NCAA ruling that allowed him to count his freshman season as a redshirt year

"If the money's there this year, it will be there next year, too," says Iowa quarterback Chuck Long. "I like playing college football. Playing in the Rose Bowl is more important than money."

because he played in only two games, said he was relieved the wait was over.

"It's finally over," Long said. "I'm excited it's over and I'm relieved also. I've come to a decision and I'd like to thank all of you for being so patient. It's been a hard decision over the last three months.

"I'd like to thank all of the fans for their letters and their help," Long added in his opening statement. "I've felt strong about the decision for the last few months but I've known about it for a longer time than most of you'll know.

"I'VE SPENT A long time thinking about it and I've come to the decision to stay at the University of Iowa and continue my education and play football for one more year."

Long, a business major, said his parents had the most influence on his decision. "We weighed both sides a lot when I was home Christmas break," the two-year all-Big Ten selection said. "We'd sit down at the dinner table and discuss the pros and cons of it. From the beginning, I think my father and mother wanted me to stay at Iowa. To them, there are more important things than football."

It was almost a month ago when Long made his final decision, he said. "I just wanted to make sure my decision was the right decision," Long said about why he waited to announce his choice.

THE LURE OF A possible Heisman Trophy didn't play much of a factor. Long, who finished seventh in the voting last year, reiterated he was honored to be among the candidates but said that because only one player can win the coveted award, he really isn't that worried about it.

Long said he felt the strongest about turning professional prior to the start of the past football season. "I wanted to finish on a strong note, and our Freedom Bowl game was a good way to close the season. But we were only 6-4-1 during the regular season. I want to come back and finish on a strong note."

Houghton ready for 'uncertain' season

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

The only sure thing about the Iowa men's tennis team this season is that there are many uncertainties as to how the team will do.

The Hawkeyes finished fourth in the Big Ten last year but are in the rebuilding stages this season due to the loss of their No. 1 and 2 players, Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said.

The loss of Mike Inman and Sunil Reddy means the rest of the players have moved up two positions this season. "Moving up two positions is a big jump. (The players) will have to elevate their game to pick up the slack," Houghton said.

"BUT DON'T COUNT us out. Everybody feels pretty good about the fall (season)," the fourth-year coach said.

The Hawkeyes took second at the fall Big Ten tournament and finished second out of 11 teams at the Kentucky Invitational.

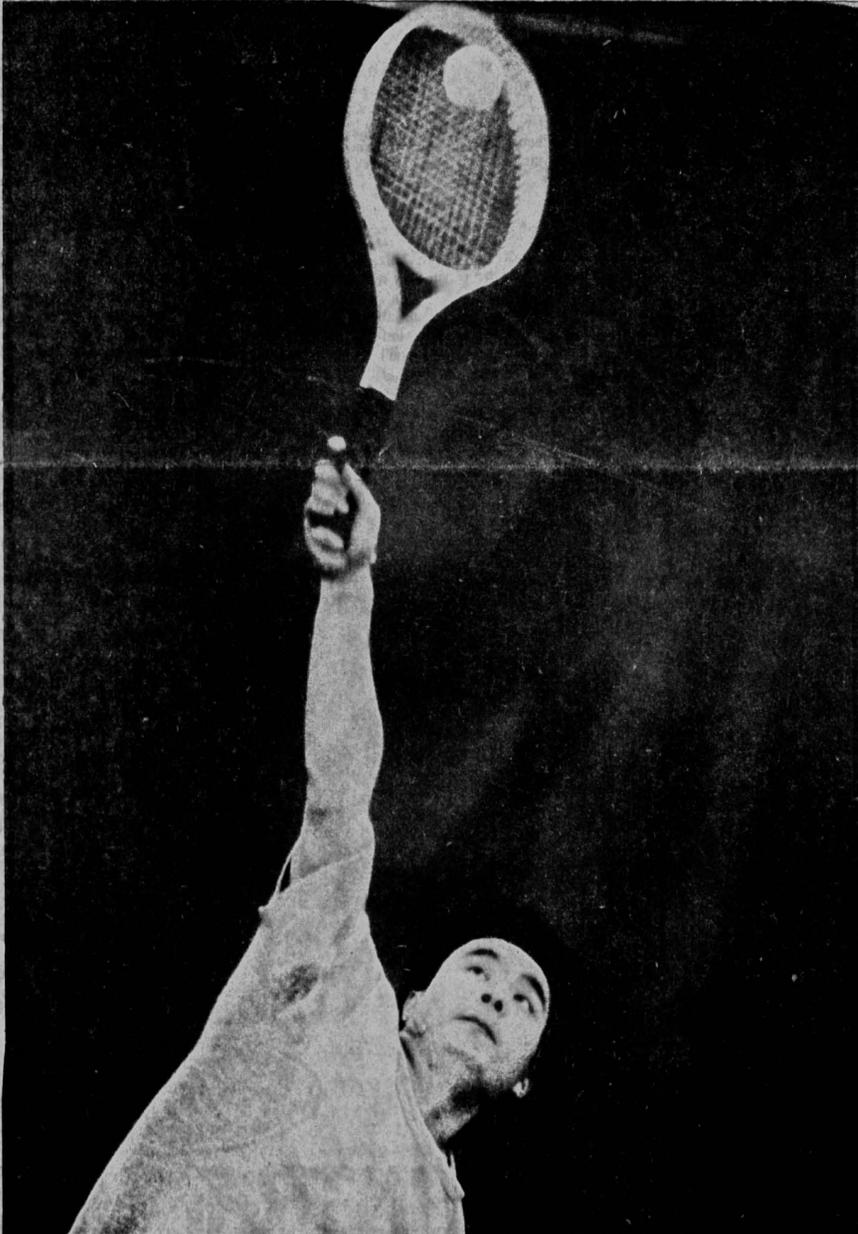

Houghton said the Iowa team will have to work harder this season to be successful because of the loss of Inman and Reddy. Also, the other Big Ten teams won't take the Hawkeyes lightly this season because of last season.

"Last year we sort of snuck up on some teams (and won). That won't happen this year," he said. "We've got a lot of respect (from other schools) in the Big Ten."

In the last three years, the Hawkeyes have moved up from ninth to sixth to fourth in the conference. But Houghton isn't confident that his young team can continue to move up this season. "There's too much uncertainty as to whether we can keep moving up the scale," he said.

CO-CAPTAIN JIM NELSON said the team will have to work harder to be as good as last year's team. "We have the ability to move up. If we discipline ourselves, we'll be as good as last year's team or better," he said. "I think we'll be Big Ten contenders."

One thing the Iowa coach is sure about is how his returning players will do playing up two positions. Nelson, who played at No. 3 last season, is manning the top spot for the Hawkeyes this season. The junior from River Forest, Ill., is recovering from knee surgery but Houghton said Nelson is capable of handling the No. 1 position.

"Based on what he did in the fall he should be the No. 1 player," Houghton said. Nelson defeated the No. 1 players from Michigan and Indiana in fall meets.

RUDY FOO WILL play at No. 2 for Iowa and Rob Moellering will handle the No. 3 spot. "Foo can clearly play at No. 2. Moellering had a great fall, and I think he has gotten better and can compete at No. 3," Houghton said.

The No. 4 and 5 positions will be filled by Dale Garlick and Scott Shafer respectively.

Shafer, a freshman from Orlando, Fla., should be capable of competing at the No. 5 position, Houghton said. "But, it's his first year and you never know what it will be like." See Tennis, page 4B

Banks emerges as key weapon in the backcourt

By Steve Batterson
Sports Editor

There's a secret on the Iowa basketball team.

It's a secret that might be hard to keep as the second half of the Big Ten season begins as the Hawkeyes host Minnesota in a 7:05 p.m. game at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"Nobody thinks we have guards that can shoot the ball from outside," Iowa forward Michael Payne said. "It's a hidden secret that's not so hidden anymore."

Especially after the Hawkeyes swept a pair of road games at Indiana and Ohio State last week. Despite starter Todd Berkenpas sitting on the bench because of back spasms, the Iowa guards contributed 30 points in the Hawkeyes' 72-59 pasting of the Hoosiers.

ALL OF THIS FROM a group that was shooting under 40 percent from the floor after the second week of the season.

Banks has scored in double figures five of the last six games since becoming a starter when Jeff Moe went down with a heel injury. Last week, Banks was eight of 15 from the floor, eight of nine from the free throw line, had 10 rebounds and led the team in assists both games.

"I just try to come out and do the things that coach wants me to do," Banks said. "I think team confidence is the biggest thing. I think everyone on this team is confident we can win and we're encouraging each other to shoot we had to do."

ONE OF THOSE things is running and Banks said that may truly be the best-kept secret about the 1984-85 Iowa team. "We love to move the ball up and down the court," Banks said. "I really hope that nobody finds out that one of our strengths is the running game. Nobody says they like our guards, but I'm glad that. We're a young group but we play well together and that's why we're getting it done."

Redmen still No. 1; Hawks ranked 13th

NEW YORK (UPI) — St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca's lucky sweater safely carried his team through its first week as the No. 1 college basketball team in the nation.

But the curse of the Evil Eye could still await the diminutive Italian and his band of Redmen.

St. John's won both starts last week following its knockout of Georgetown and Tuesday was named the No. 1 team for the second straight week by the UPI Board of Coaches.

The Iowa Hawkeyes are making their first appearance of the season in the UPI ratings this week. Iowa, 18-4 on the year, is rated 13th this week after wins over Indiana and Ohio State last week. The Hawkeyes were previously ranked in the Associated Press poll and are 12th in that poll this week.

FOR THE LAST three weeks, Carnesecca has worn a brown Italian sweater to his games and since then the Redmen have gone 7-0, including Monday night's 87-76 victory over Seton Hall. He has vowed to wear the sweater until St. John's loses.

St. John's disposed of Providence and Connecticut last week and now owns a 13-game winning streak. But the true test for the sweater and St. John's lies in the weeks to come.

UPI's top 20..... Page 2B

Carnesecca's troops faces Big East rival Villanova Saturday and the schedule gets even tougher further down the road. The Redmen have a five-game stretch in the last two weeks of February where they play Pittsburgh, DePaul, Boston College, Syracuse and Georgetown.

THE REDMEN RECEIVED 38 of 42 first-place votes this week for 613 points. They easily outdistanced No. 2 Georgetown (562 points and 3 first-place votes). Memphis State, which had the other first-place vote, remained No. 3 with 525 points.

The Redmen overtook Georgetown in the ratings last week after defeating the Hoyas 65-63 Jan. 26 on the road. Georgetown held the No. 1 ranking since the season opened.

Following their loss to St. John's, the Hoyas fell to Syracuse last Monday night but rebounded Sunday with a 56-39 triumph over Arkansas on national television.

Rounding out the Top 10, it's: No. 4 Southern Methodist, No. 5 Duke, No. 6 Illinois, No. 7 Georgia Tech, No. 8 Syracuse, No. 9 Oklahoma and No. 10 Michigan.

Recruit Bass hedging on decision

By John Gillardi
Staff Writer

The continuing saga over whether Richard Bass, a 5-foot-11, 200-pound fullback and his teammate, Shawn Ridley, a 6-2, 210-pound linebacker from Omaha Central High School took another turn Tuesday night.

Bass told The Daily Iowan that he will announce where he will attend school on Thursday. But his coach, Bill Reed, said that Missouri is "looking better" than Iowa because of recent articles in newspapers.

"I'll let you all know Thursday night what I'm going to do," Bass said. "I've always wanted to go to Iowa, but I didn't want all of the other schools to find that out yet that I was going to commit there."

BUT REED SAID that Missouri Coach Woody Widenhofer is going to meet with Bass on Thursday afternoon and that should "screw things up even more." Reed said that Bass did verbally commit to Iowa, but after different newspapers wrote stories concerning where Bass and Ridley will sign, Bass changed his mind.

"Richard was very puzzled when the Des Moines Register came out with an article on the top Iowa recruits and he wasn't listed, but Shawn was, along with a slew of other running backs. He feels right now like he is going to Iowa on Shawn's coattails instead of on his own merit," Reed said.

"That made him change his mind about Iowa and put him back in the dark. Missouri is looking better than Iowa right now and Iowa State has been ruled out by both of them. Coach (Jim) Criner never really did make a strong effort to get either one of them.

The papers in Iowa that say Criner is going to get them are wrong."

REED SAID THAT Ridley has ruled out all of the schools that were recruiting him, except for UCLA and Iowa. Ridley ruled out Nebraska after Cornhusker scouts stopped calling him.

Bass told the DI Jan. 28 that he will sign a letter of intent with Iowa on Feb. 13, the first day of the signing period. "I want to go to Iowa because of the coaching staff there," Bass said. "Coach (Hayden) Fry really understood my position."

Report: Rogers will become new Lions coach

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — Arizona State football Coach Darryl Rogers has been offered and will accept the head coaching job with the Detroit Lions, according to a report Tuesday.

The Phoenix Gazette quotes a source close to the Sun Devil program as saying Rogers has spoken to Lions officials. A Detroit report has said Rogers is one of two top candidates for the job and was scheduled to fly to Detroit Tuesday.

However, the source said: "My feeling is that that is a charade. He's already been to Detroit to talk to them, has been offered the job and will accept."

Rogers has been under heavy criticism since an inexperienced Sun Devil team stumbled to a 5-6 season. Rogers, who came to ASU from Michigan State in 1980, had put together previous records of 7-4, 9-2, 10-2 and 6-4-1.

Mike Martz, ASU quarterbacks and receivers coach, referred to the fact that Rogers has turned down other coaching offers to remain at ASU and said he doesn't see any reason to change.

"He loves it here," Martz said. "I know that. He sees our chances to win big next year. We are starting to achieve a certain amount of continuity here that wins games."

Flutie finally signs five-year pact

NEW YORK (UPI) — Football's newest millionaire took the money Tuesday, then immediately set out to win a job.

Doug Flutie, the most glamorous 5-foot-9 1/2 package to be claimed by professional football, signed a five-year contract with an estimated worth of as much as $7.5 million, then flew to Orlando, Fla., to join the training camp of the New Jersey Generals.

"I can't make any promises, I'll just give it my best," said Flutie, the Heisman Trophy winner. "I don't intend to be a starter opening day, but I'll work very hard to get to that point. Eventually I can be the No. 1. No one is successful unless they think positively, and I'm thinking positively. I'm going to camp with a good attitude, and whatever happens happens."

Osborne in 'excellent shape' after surgery

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Nebraska football Coach Tom Osborne underwent four hours of heart surgery Tuesday to bypass a partially blocked coronary artery and came out in "excellent shape."

"He is stable and doing very well," said Dr. Walt Weaver, Osborne's personal physician. "He is in excellent shape and has a very strong heart muscle."

Osborne, 47, is a dedicated jogger. He is known among his peers and fans as a soft-spoken man with an ascetic lifestyle.

Doctors said Osborne's strong heart made the operation easier. They said he will be encouraged to resume running and should be back to his routine in four to six weeks — in time for spring football.

Dr. Deepak Gangahar, who operated on Osborne, said two areas of the left anterior descending coronary artery — one of three artery systems that supplies blood to the heart — were 90 to 95 percent blocked.

The procedure performed on Osborne is used in only about 10 percent of bypass operations, doctors said. Normally, a leg vein is used to channel blood around an obstructed coronary artery. But in this instance mammary arteries were preferable.

"We use this whenever possible in younger patients," Weaver said.

Osborne said Monday that over the last six or eight weeks he experienced a fullness or tightness in his chest when running.

Luzinski retires to coach high school team

CHICAGO (UPI) — Greg Luzinski, one of major league baseball's most feared sluggers for more than a decade, has retired from the game to become a freshman baseball coach at a New Jersey high school, his agent said Tuesday.

"After playing for 14 years, he has decided he'd like to spend more time with his family and pursue other interests," agent Jack Sands of the Boston-based Sports Advisory Group Inc. said in a telephone interview.

Luzinski, 34, who became a free agent last November after four seasons with the Chicago White Sox as a designated hitter, had been selected by the Pittsburgh Pirates in the free-agent draft and invited to the Baltimore Orioles spring training camp.

But Luzinski opted for retirement because of family considerations and the fact that he will receive $200,000 a year for the rest of his life through investments.

Ryun's book shows changes in lifestyle for former star

Gold! Searching for it. Dreaming about it. An all encompassing goal that may or may not ever be realized.

It's the story of Jim Ryun and his search for an Olympic Gold medal after becoming a sub-four minute miler at the age of 17 and a world record holder two years later near the end of his freshman year at Kansas.

Jim Ryun and Mike Phillip's In Quest for Gold — The Jim Ryun Story, is a book printed by Harper & Row which retails for $12.95 and was released just a few months ago.

It is a fascinating account of the formally withdrawn Ryun as he re-lives his running career and shows how that same running career almost ruined his life. Ryun then begins his search for Christianity after his running career is over as he tries to find meaning in his life for the first time.

RYUN ALSO SHOWS us running as most runners haven't seen it before. He shows us the trial and tragedy of being a three-time Olympian that never quite captured the dreams that America and the press had in store for him.

He was one of the first athletes to deal with tremendous media pressure at a young age. He was before the likes of Mary Decker (a 14-year old at the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich), Olga Korbut and Mary Lou Retton.

Ryun started out his running career much like any other runner. He wasn't very good at football, baseball or basketball and in an attempt to find a sport that he could excel in, he chose running.

IN RYUN'S FIRST cross country practice he couldn't believe how long and tiring the workout was but he was glad it was finally over. The only problem was that he didn't get finished with the workout, he just got finished with the warm-up.

Ryun's unimpressive start didn't last for long. In his second competition in the track season the next spring he defeated the defending state champion with a mile time of 4:26.4 at the tender age of 15.

Ryun's goal, along with his high school coach, Bob Timmons, was to become the first high school runner ever to break the four-minute mile. A year later,

Brad Zimanek

Ryun finished eighth in a competition in Los Angeles but his time for the mile race was 3:59.

THE YEAR WAS 1964 and Ryun didn't have much time to enjoy his success because a bigger goal awaited him in just a few months, a chance to compete in the Olympic Games.

Ryun had to place in the top three at the 1,500 meters in the Olympic Trials as he did just that by finishing third in a race in which the top four runners were separated by seven-tenths of a second.

He made it to the semifinals in Tokyo but finished dead last in his heat which put him out of the competition. Ryun went on to set a few world records as he prepared himself for another Olympic Games.

Ryun, in his book, re-lives his classic dual with Kip Keino in the 1968 Summer Olympics in Mexico City. Ryun finished second to take the silver medal and that seemed to mark the beginning of the downhill side of his career because he didn't win the gold medal that everyone had expected from him.

AFTER THREE YEARS of problems, Ryun made it to his third consecutive Olympics in 1972 but was tripped in his first heat of the 1,500 and was unable to get reinstated.

Ryun had no where to go. He ran a few years on the ITA professional track circuit before he finally realized that there should be more to his life.

Ryun found it in Christianity. He claims religion gave him the opportunity to be at peace with himself and his family.

Ryun's and Phillip's book is an excellent opportunity to go behind the scenes of a world class runner but it will also give you a chance to see how Ryun searched and found that there was something more to life than just running.

Brad Zimanek is a DI staff writer. His running column appears every other Wednesday.

mitment from Jim Poynton, a 6-3, 262 pound offensive guard from Glenwood, Ill., Sunday after he visited Iowa over the weekend.

"I came out to Iowa just last weekend and I fell in love with the campus and I really got along with the coaching staff," Poynton, the 1984 Mr. Illinois powerlifting champion, said.

The rumors can be quelled that Iowa is going to steal Darrel Woods, as 6-4, 220-pound defensive end from Elizabeth, N.J., after his coach confirmed Tuesday night that he will sign with Pittsburgh.

"I don't know what those papers out in Iowa are writing about Darrel, but he verbally committed to Pitt a long time ago," Coach Bob Toresco said.

"Blood is thicker than water and Darrel is going to follow his brother to Pitt. Now his parents will be able to see him and his brother, Stan, play together," Toresco said.

CNN boasts top sports anchors

With the domination of cable television becoming more apparent, the sports anchor personalities are becoming household names.

Names like Jim Huber, Nick Charles, Greg Gumbel and Chris Berman are now almost as well known as their counterparts on network television.

Huber and Charles are the No. 1 team for the Cable News Network (Cable-19) while Gumbel and Berman fill the same role at ESPN (Cable-32). These two networks without a doubt put on the best news programs devoted entirely to sports.

There is competition between the two networks, no question. Both networks have worked hard to gain a strong reputation. But in the final analysis, the folks at CNN put on the better show.

THE MAIN REASON for CNN's success is the team of Huber and Charles. Huber has a conversational tone about him that make the viewer believe he is getting the news from a friend, not a stuffy, by the book sportscaster.

Charles, on the other hand, offers a stark contrast. He is more of the hard-hitting journalist, never afraid to ask the tough question. He often takes stands on issues, but what makes him different is that he has facts to back up his statements.

CNN has a regular segment called "The Closer Look," in which an issue or a personality is probed in depth. It gives the viewer a fresh perspective on the issues at hand.

ESPN tends to air more fluff pieces, just stories that are used to fill time. Although they are usually well done, those kind of stories tend to become old after a while.

BUT THE BIG difference between the two networks is their late-night reports. Both do early evening reports at 6 p.m. on ESPN and 6:30 p.m. on CNN and both have 10:30 p.m. shows.

The difference — CNN's Huber has, as he puts it, "the last word in sports for this fine night" at 1:30 a.m. while ESPN just plays a tape of its 10:30 p.m. show with updated scores flashed while the announcers talk generically about that particular game.

Both networks serve a good purpose, but the people at CNN seem to give that extra little effort to inform the viewers. But then again, I suppose station owner Ted Turner would have it no other way.

Video games

The big battle will be tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena as Minnesota comes to town to challenge Big Ten co-leader Iowa. The game will be televised by the Big Ten network over Iowa Television Network (KWVL-7) beginning at 7 p.m.

The Hawkeyes are off on Saturday but plenty of good basketball action can be found on the tube this weekend. The 35th NBA All-Star Game from the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis is slated for 12:45 p.m. on CBS (KGAN-2).

Saturday is loaded with action as well from the collegiate ranks. Syracuse, led by all-everything guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington will travel to South Bend, Ind., to meet the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame at noon on NBC (KWVL-7).

ESPN (Cable-32) may have the best game of the day, Top 20 and ACC rivals Duke and Maryland meet at 2 p.m. in a showdown for the lead in the conference.

Viewers have a choice at 3 p.m. In the Big Ten, Illinois travels to Michigan to take on the Wolverines on KWVL-7 while KCRG-9 will have the Big Eight shootout between Missouri and Iowa State from Hilton Coliseum in Ames.

Sunday's top collegiate battle will have Dean Smith's North Carolina Tar Heels traveling south Baton Rouge, La., to take on Dale Brown's Louisiana State Tigers at noon on NBC (KWVL-7).

Wolverines facing rugged road swing

United Press International

Iowa Coach George Raveling, whose team shares the Big Ten lead with Michigan, admits his team has been "more lucky than good" for the first half of the conference race.

But Raveling's club is 7-2 and in good shape for a league title heading into the second half of the season which begins tonight for the Hawkeyes with a home date against slumping Minnesota.

Co-leader Michigan hosts Purdue to head the list of games on Thursday. Other contests pit third-place Illinois at Michigan State, Ohio State at Northwestern and Purdue at Michigan.

Michigan has five of seven on the road after playing two games at home this weekend.

"I'M NOT TRYING to be humble or modest but I think we've been more lucky than good so far this year," said Raveling, whose team is 18-4 overall. "We've been fortunate to play teams when they have had injuries or something else going wrong."

Michigan, winner of seven in a row overall and six straight in the league, hosts Purdue Thursday with a key date against Illinois on Saturday. The Boilermakers are coming off an impressive 54-34 win over the Illini last week.

"Purdue is playing exceptionally right now," Michigan Coach Bill Frieder said. "They may be playing the most aggressive basketball in the league right now."

Big Ten roundup

Michigan has been playing as well as anyone in the league as of late and has gotten great play from guards Antoine Joubert and Gary Grant.

PURDUE, AFTER a slow start, has gotten back in the league race with a tough defense that held Illinois to a record low Mackey Arena total of 34 points one week ago.

Illinois came back and beat Houston 77-76 on Sunday, prompting Illinois Coach Lou Henson to say his team's shooting ills may be over. But he is concerned about playing a Michigan State club that is 5-4 and still in good shape in the league race.

"This is going to be a tough road trip because we are playing teams that are hot right now," Henson said. "Michigan State played us well the first time (Illinois won 75-63 in Champaign) and they have been getting great play from all of their positions."

Ohio State, despite losing at home at Iowa, still has a chance to stay in the race with games against Northwestern and Wisconsin.

"I'm not concerned about who we are playing I am concerned about our starting to play basketball," said Buckeye Coach Eldon Miller, whose team whipped the Wildcats 79-59 last month.

Bucks' owner to sell franchise

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The Milwaukee Bucks are for sale, preferably to someone who will keep the club in the city, owner Jim Fitzgerald said Tuesday.

His voice cracking with emotion, Fitzgerald told a news conference he and his partners will have to think about moving the basketball club to another city if no local offers surface or are not acceptable.

"... While we will discuss sale of the club to any interested party, all our discussions will take place with the caveat that Milwaukee-based offers will have the highest priority," Fitzgerald said.

He said the franchise, considered one of the best run in professional sports, is solid and has money in the bank. The NBA has been notified.

Fitzgerald said there is no timetable, and he expects the league to give Milwaukee as much time as is needed for the ownership change.

THE BUCKS BECAME a reality in 1968 and won the NBA title in 1971 led by Lew Alcindor, now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. The club has won 10 divisional titles.

This was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the Bucks, but they have led the NBA's Central Division throughout the season and are 34-15.

Fitzgerald said collapse of SportsVue, a cable television sports network, was a factor, but that the major reason for selling is "the feeling of myself and partners that the well-being of the Milwaukee Bucks might best be served by local ownership."

SportsVue ended broadcasting last weekend.

Fitzgerald said he and others had lost between $3 million and $4 million on SportsVue, which also was owned by the Milwaukee Brewers. He heads a cable television business in Janesville.

FITZGERALD ALSO admitted after triple by-pass heart surgery more than a year ago, "I'm slowing down a bit."

One possible bidder surfaced almost immediately. Lloyd Pettit, owner of the Milwaukee Admirals, an IHL club, said he and his wife will consider buying the franchise. Mrs. Pettit is a member of the Uihlein family, former owners of the defunct Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co.

And now...a heart-warming story

AS CAREFREE, winter-break frames of mind begin to blur into the coffee-stained, alcohol-fuzzed, textbook-littered mid-semester norm, I thought it was appropriate to start off this morning with a heart-warming tale of community brotherhood that occurred while most of us, stuffed with Mom's cookies and Dad's homilies, were sprawled in front of the family color TV.

This isn't merely another of those Good Samaritan yarns one hears about during the holiday season, with some J. Morehead Megabux XVII dressing up as Santa Claus and, with nostrils carefully pinched, distributing silver dollars among the indigents. Nor is it a nicely-timed media hype over this season's Third World unfortunates, as cynics have proclaimed the Ethiopian tragedy was last year.

No, this little tale involves two of Iowa City's FM radio stations, to wit: KRUI, the hell-raisin' college indie bent upon bringing pop culture before the overwhelmingly indifferent masses, and KRNA, one of the area's Top 40 biggies and a closely formatted expression of rock 'n' roll's exceedingly broad — and exceedingly shallow, I feel compelled to add — mainstream.

HARDLY THE KIND of bedfellows you expect to hear nesting in the same

burrow, eh? Well, believe me, the story that follows will warm up the wind-chill-blasted cockles of your heart. If it doesn't ... bah, humbug, buddy.

I'll let two of the story's main actors, KRNA's "Rockin' Rob" Dustin and KRUI's program director Robert Gussin, set its scene:

Gussin: It was Christmas Eve, and I was working an air shift because so many of our regular staff had taken off for break. It was kinda unprofessional, but we were really intent on staying on the air during break, and we didn't have anybody to work the afternoon shift on Christmas day, so I went on the air and asked if anyone listening had an FCC license and wanted to spend the day spinning records. And then we got this call from Rob Dustin.

Dustin: I was driving home on Christmas Eve, and I was listening to KRUI, as I try to do when I can. I heard Gussin ask anyone with a Class III FCC license for help DJing the Christmas day shifts, so I figured what the hell. When I got home, I called 'em up, and I wound up working the afternoon shift on Christmas day.

THE UPSHOT: Dustin (under a nom de airwaves) spent his Christmas afternoon spinning platters far outside the normal realm of KRNA's usual Top 40 programming. And, he says, loving every minute of it.

"There weren't as many (request) calls that day as they said they usually have, but that let me go as outside as the FCC will let me," Dustin recalls.

KRNA general manager Eliot Keller says l'affaire Dustin "was the first time in Iowa City, so far as I know, that a regular DJ for one station went and volunteered his time to help out another one."

Says Dustin: "I wouldn't have done it if they hadn't asked for the help — it's not a case of trying to shoulder my way in — but as far as I'm concerned, they can ask again anytime."

Says Joe Reagan, KRUI's general manager: "There really isn't a competitive feeling between us and the big commercial stations in the area. They look at us as a resource, and in some ways we look at them as something to strive toward."

SAYS GUSSIN: "Needless to say, if we had been KKRQ, I don't think Rob would've been able to help us out. But for him this Christmas thing was a break from the hype, from the megawatt full-voiced thing. It was good for both of us."

It was good for the DJ, as Dustin pointed out, because "it was really different from what I'm used to. I'd heard that college stations were supposed to be technologically primitive, but I was impressed with the kind of facilities and space they had there."

And it was good for KRUI because the shift got covered and the station remained on the air throughout the vacation period — though that slab of days saw another impromptu radio debut, that of the biopharmaceuticist husband of regular KRUI jock Jennifer Metcalf.

"I WASN'T ABLE to cover a shift in the week between Christmas and New Year's, so I asked my husband, who'd always talked about wanting to give it a spin, so to speak. So I showed him the board and gave him a crash course, and he went to it — with only a bare minimum of screw-ups."

And so it goes at KRUI, the UI's answer to WKRP in Cincinnati, and, in the words of the Hawkeye Review's intrepid editor-in-absentia, Jeffrey Renander, the station that "sounds the way FM was always supposed to sound."

Now stay tuned for a message from our sponsor ...

British spoof opens at Old Armory tonight

Cloud 9, British playwright Caryl Churchill's adult comedy, opens a three-week run in Old Armory Theatre tonight. The University Theatre's production, staged by graduate directing student Judith Lyons, will be presented at 8 tonight through Saturday, Feb. 13 through Feb. 16 and Feb. 21 through Feb. 23, and at 3 p.m. Feb. 24.

The first act of the play, set in colonial Africa in the late 1800s, inroduces an exemplary British Victorian family, except that the mother is played by a man, the young son is played by a woman, the daughter is played by a rag doll and their African servant is portrayed by a white man. In the second act, set in contemporary

London, the characters have aged only 25 years and the actors have exchanged parts.

In both acts, the characters struggle comically with the uncomfortable sexual and social roles they have been assigned. The zaniness of the play is evident in the casting requirements — confusing genders and races — but the play also provides a wealth of sophisticated humor.

production of Cloud 9 are $5.50 for the general public and $3.50 for UI students, senior citizens and persons 18 and under. # More Bijou sneak previews nixed due to theater company's pressure

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

THE BIJOU has lost at least two more sneak previews as an indirect result of interference from Central States Theater Corp.

"We simply pulled out ahead of the battle," said Greg Haverfield of American Passage, a Seattle firm that specializes in setting up sneak previews on college campuses. "It was a result of Central States' local policies."

American Passage had scheduled February sneak previews of Vision Quest and Lady Hawk on the UI campus through the cooperation of the Bijou Film Board. Haverfield said that he received word from Warner Bros., the distributor of both films, to cancel the previews "due to difficulties with the local exhibitor."

He added Central States did not directly contact Warner Bros. about either screening. Instead, he said, Warner Bros. decided to cancel and thereby "avoid any direct confrontation."

The Bijou lost a free screening of The Cotton Club on the UI campus in December. The preview was switched to the Campus 2, according to a representative of the firm which booked that screening, after Central States threatened it "wouldn't open the movie in Iowa City."

A SPOKESMAN for a distributor, who asked that neither his name nor the name of his major film company be used, said that Central States is trying to "teach them a lesson" at the Bijou. According to this source, the Bijou's recent bookings of first-run art films has upset Central States, which inaugurated an Art Film Series last August.

The Bijou also recently lost a free screening of The Killing Fields, said Bijou programmer Winton O. Etz III. The preview was booked for the UI by Campus Dimensions, a firm like American Passage that specializes in college screenings. A representative for Campus Dimensions said Warner Bros. had canceled 10 of the 60 scheduled previews of that film on campuses across the country, including the one at the UI, but he did not say why.

Haverfield, representing American Passage, said of the recent round of cancellations, "As a college-media company we're anxious to be able to provide these previews to the best of our abilities." He added, however, that he would not schedule screenings for the UI campus in the near future.

IN DECEMBER, Bijou director Ana Lopez said she'd scheduled "four or five" sneak previews for January and February. She also said due to the Cotton Club controversy, those screenings were "terribly tentative."

She added, "We don't get anything out of doing these sneaks. They're just more work for us. But it is a nice service we like to provide to the students."

The Iowa City manager for Central States, Emmett Frazer, said in December the policy of his firm is that free previews detract from potential box office revenue. Central States, a Des Moines-based exhibitor, operates all eight commercial movie theaters in Iowa City.

Workshop faculty reads tonight

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

THREE MEMBERS of the UI Writers' Workshop fiction faculty — Olga Carlisle, Ron Hansen and Workshop director Jack Leggett — will give a reading tonight at 8:30 in Room 100 of Phillips Hall.

Olga Carlisle is teaching a course on the Literary Uses of Exile, featuring works by Vladimir Nabokov and Milan Kundera. She said she shares with those writers a "background of literature and exile."

Her father was a Russian poet who emigrated to Paris. The first review of his first book, she said, was written by Nabokov, who remained a friend of the family.

Carlisle herself spent her childhood in Paris, but emigrated to the United States as an adult. She has written extensively in this country on Russian literature and her views of the United States. Her works include six books, as well as articles in The Atlantic, The Saturday Evening Post and The Antioch Review. In a 1976 issue of Vogue, she described a drive across the continent with her husband (author Henry Carlisle, also on the Writers' Workshop faculty this semester) and concluded that "one did not have to forsake the Old World in order to love the New."

SHE RECENTLY interviewed Kundera in Paris for a forthcoming article in the New York Times Magazine. She says that "he would not discuss exile directly," preferring to emphasize that France is his new home.

Ron Hansen will read tonight his 1978 short story, "Can I Just Sit Here For a While?" originally published in The Atlantic. The story, like much of Hansen's other fiction, deals humorously with the myth of manhood. In this excerpt, a traveling salesman recalls the thrill of another morning at another motel:

It was goofy when he thought about it, but walking out through those fingerprinted glass doors, throwing his briefcase onto the red bucket seat, scraping the frost off the windshield, and seeing all those other guys out there in the parking lot with him, grimacing, chipping away at their wipers, blowing on their fingers, sliding their heater controls to Defrost, he felt like a team player again, like he was part of a fighter squadron.

What was this Death of a Salesman crap? he'd say.

HANSEN'S SECOND novel, The Assassination of Jesse James by the Coward Robert Ford, was nominated for the prize in fiction by the Bay Area Book Reviewers' Association and by the PEN/Faulkner Foundation. Hansen, a 1974 graduate of the Writers' Workshop, is now at work on a "contemporary novel," a collection of short stories, and a screenplay from his first novel, Desperadoes.

Jack Leggett, director of the UI Writers' Workshop since 1969, will read from his forthcoming novel Making Believe, due for publication early next year. Leggett took a leave of absence last semester to complete the novel, which concerns a clergyman during the civil rights demonstrations of the 1960s.

Leggett is also the author of Gulliver House, Ross and Tom and Who Took the Gold. He also has served as a senior editor at Harper & Row and as an editor and publicity director at Houghton Mifflin Co.

Tonight's reading is free and open to the public.

Clarinetist to bring talents to Hancher

Music

Grammy Award-winning clarinetist Richard Stoltzman will perform works by Bach, Stravinsky, Weber and Poulenc at 8 tonight in Hancher Auditorium.

Stoltzman's program, with the accompaniment of pianist Irma Vallecillo, will feature J.S. Bach's Sonata No. 2 in D major for Viola da Gamba and Keyboard, "Diverimento" and "Three Pieces for Clarinet Solo" by Stravinsky, Carl Maria Von Weber's Grand Duo Concertante and the 1962 Sonata for Clarinet and Piano by Poulenc.

In recent years, Stoltzman has emerged as the pre-eminent clarinetist on the music scene. He has won the Avery Fisher Prize, America's most prestigious classical music award. His album of Brahms Clarinet Sonatas with Richard Goode captured the 1983 Grammy Award for "Best Chamber Music Performance." He again received a Grammy nomination in 1984, for concertos by Mozart, Weber and Rossini, recorded with the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra.

In 1982, he became the first clarinetist ever to be presented in a solo recital at Carnegie Hall, where he offered a jazz medley "Tribute to Benny," with Benny Goodman himself cheering in the audience.

STOLTZMAN HAS also toured throughout the United States, Europe, Japan and South America as a founding member of the chamber music ensemble, Tashi. In 1967, Stoltzman began what was to become a 10-year association with the Marlboro Music Festival in Vermont, performing on numerous "Music from Marlboro" tours and recording the Beethoven Clarinet Trio with Rudolf Serkin.

Stoltzman is deeply involved in integrating jazz in performances of classical music, feeling that improvisation adds a remarkable creative and interpretive dimension to his music-making.

A favorite among European music-lovers, Stoltzman returns to Europe several times each year to present concerts in major halls. He was recently seen by millions on the German television program, "Der Grosse Preis." Upcoming appearances include a debut with the Zurich Chamber Orchestra, a European tour with the Vienna Chamber Orchestra and Philippe Entremont, and the world premiere of a concerto by Donald Erb, commissioned for Stoltzman by the Academy of London as part of that city's American Festival in May.

Tickets for tonight's concert are $7, $9.50 and $12 for the general public and $5, $7.50 and $9.60 for UI students. Tickets are available from the Hancher Box Office.
