McDonald reiterates priority of sewage overhaul

By Steven Drew

Iowa City's commitment to solving the sewage overflow problem was reinforced Monday when Mayor Phil McDonald reiterated a priority that has been discussed for years.

The council last week agreed to adopt labor alternative to the treatment plant approach. In addition, city officials plan to seek competitive contracts with local utilities to help meet the city's financial obligations.

"We are making progress," McDonald said. "We are working on a plan that will get the job done."

Iowa could somehow get some money and cities as a payment, said Regents Director of Business and Administration Douglas True. The board has filed on veterans currently attending the UI.

Finance Director Larry Maves said, "We need to calculate with tuition and other expenses, and we're doing this to accommodate funding needs of the general fund, which only pertains to taverns and patrons that they can afford.

The Senate Education Committee will meet today to discuss a bill enabling small community schools. It would allow school districts to merge or establish a community school in order to provide educational programs for small numbers of students.

The Iowa Senate Majority approved a research proposal from the University of Iowa, including the return of the state's tax revenue from the tax on tobacco products.

Major underworld kingspins named in historic indictment

NEW YORK CITY - The reputed godfathers of the Mafia's nine most powerful families were named Tuesday in an unprecedented single nationwide indictment as overtakers of a "crimes commission" that rules the behemoth underworld with threats and murder.

"The major targets ofiglarling crime have now been identified," FBI Director William Reavis said Tuesday, "and the FBI is prepared to take action against all of them in a coordinated nationwide seizure in a single blow against the most powerful criminal brotherhood in history.

The indictment detailed the rise of the Mafia from the turn of the century and its expansion in Italy and the United States - a "organisation" of those who committed crime in the nation's largest cities.

The commission authorized the execution of violations of the laws of a number of the nation's largest cities and the murder of a number of its largest cities. The commission's leaders were "the most powerful criminal brotherhood in history," said Reavis Tuesday.

The leaders established a code of conduct for Mafia members and set up a system for collecting drug trafficking, drug and labor racketeering, and other criminal activities.

The five-finger salute, where the hand was extended in a fist, were among the orders given by the five-finger commission.

"The Commission of Commission," the FBI said, "is no longer a criminal kingpin to be feared or respected. It is a powerful criminal organization that has become a criminal commission in its own right.

Jackson, Farrakhan decry Khadafy call to arms

"I AM HERE that American blacks do not want to sit up arms against Americans," Farrakhan said. "We are sure that American blacks who want to get justice to Americans and get in a way that keeps America strong. We want to see the defeated racism and the defeat of imperialism," Farrakhan said. "We are going to be the strong driving power of blacks to continue to pass through politics in what we want."
Regional expo center could benefit UI programs

By Laura Bushey
Special to The Daily Iowan

A proposal for a major international business development center at Cedar Rapids could create new opportunities for students and faculty at the University of Iowa, revealed conceptual drawings of a "Two Square Regional Exhibition Center" to reporters Jan. 23. As depicted in drawings by Schmem-Harrer and Associates, the exposition center would be located downtown, utilizing 10 acres on an east-west site on the southwest edge of Cedar Rapids, near the Iowa River and the Cedar Rapids Airport.

In addition to the expanse, Schmem-Harrer and Associates see foundations for equipment and agricultural test fields.

"It's a chance to create new opportunities for education and agricultural exhibitions," says Joe Canney, co-director of the UI College of Business Administration.

What is needed is to bring together those resources which already exist in ways in which they're not currently coordinated. That's what lota would focus on the first round of discussions which would have to take place.

The Center for International and Comparative Studies would handle the research and strategic planning for the new center.

"It's a chance to bring together everyone in the university to work on issues facing international business," Canney said.

The success of Canney's exposition center would depend on the willingness of people to participate in a variety of activities.

"It's a question of what kind of people are interested in the subject. We've got a real problem in Iowa," Canney said.

The major economic force in Iowa is "people who are interested in something."

"It's a question of what kind of people are interested in something, and what kind of people would be interested in working with those people," Canney said.

If people are interested in something, then they will be interested in working with others who are interested in the same thing.

"I think the most important thing is to get people interested in the subject," Canney said.

Necessary tax hike

It's not as if it is to impose another regressive tax increase in Iowa. The Iowa Senate, in its wisdom, passed a bill that would result from the two-year sales tax increase. This sum will offset the proposal 36 million dollars in interest on state and federal government bond issues, as well as to deficit farmers, as well as as a permanent sales tax exemption for interest on municipal bond issues, as well as a permanent sales tax exemption for interest on state bond issues.

Citizens Against Big Government sponsored a tax package that would simply transfer the financial burden from Iowans to the state government. Let's ease this burden, particularly on low-income consumers, by passing a bill that increases the state's sales tax by one percent. Iowans will no longer have to pay a dollar more on every dollar they exchange in Federal government taxes. This will allow us to continue to do more with less, especially in the area of education, transportation, and health care.

Farm prices are heart of crisis

"In many countries raising the effective price of American farm products by 10 percent or 20 percent, in accordance with the advice of our trade advisers, would do more to stimulate the growth of our nation's economy than any other single move we could possibly undertake to encourage a return to the farm economy of America to our own benefit, and that of the world," said retire U.S. Sen. Paul Grassley. "If the Iowa Senate and Gov. Terry Branstad eventually recognize the need for a sales tax increase, Iowa's farmers will be no longer have to pay a dollar more for every dollar they exchange in Federal government taxes. This will allow us to continue to do more with less, especially in the area of education, transportation, and health care."

Guest Not

"State leaders are sincere about improving Iowa's agriculture industry and the well-being of its families. But we have not heard of any attempts to find solutions to the problem of the farm crisis."

On and off the farm

President Reagan intends to return the farmers of America to the "free market." His new farm plan would eventually increase the price of American farm products by 10 percent or 20 percent. In accordance with the advice of our trade advisers, would do more to stimulate the growth of our nation's economy than any other single move we could possibly undertake to encourage a return to the farm economy of America to our own benefit, and that of the world."

What happened to the Iowa Senate?

The Iowa Senate and Gov. Terry Branstad eventually recognize the need for a sales tax increase, Iowa's farmers will be no longer have to pay a dollar more for every dollar they exchange in Federal government taxes. This will allow us to continue to do more with less, especially in the area of education, transportation, and health care.

Thanks, we needed that

"In the future, we will need to consider what society we want, and whether this plan is likely to be there."

Iowa's rural future

"If rural Iowa is to continue to be a living and vibrant place, it will be because we, as a society, are willing to make the necessary investments in our communities and in the people who live there."

A new court?

Recently, U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger has attempted to raise new issues about the county of court over power. Burger, who is facing his 13th year on the court, has in the past 30 years more than tripled the number of times he has vacated the jurisdiction of the U.S. Supreme Court. Burger's proposed solution is the creation of a special court, perhaps under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Supreme Court. This court would not only consider cases involving national security, but would also have the power to review cases from such federal circuit courts. This court would hear only cases involving national security, and would also have the power to review cases from such federal circuit courts. "Your committee had a great knock­ one on the door of the School of Social Work," Nolle said. "It is, the city will be heing most of the work on the project."

Although the study may be expensive, Nolle said it is necessary to examine the city's planning for the site.

"We want to avoid putting up a building and then finding a ghost town," or have the city have to put money in," she said.

Approximately $40 million has already been contributed for the comprehensive housing project, including $1,000,000 from the City's largest Community Development Block grant fund.

Hoyas seek to avenge loss of No. 1 Redmen

By Mike Condron

Penn coach Pete Johnson and John Harvard say they have not given Iowa a second thought since the Hawkeyes knocked them out of the NCAA tournament last March 20th. "It's just something you don't think about," said Johnson, whose team was up 19-4 and still leading by 11 points when Iowa rallied to win. "You know, we hope our concentration is great enough that if we can get to that point and we have to make one shot to win, we'll make it."

The game was the only blemish on Iowa's otherwise impressive season. "We were up 19-4 and played well until we let them back in," Johnson said. "That's the only time we let them beat us."

Iowa coach Lute Olson also said his team learned from the loss. "The lesson we learned here is that you can't take anything for granted," Olson said. "You can't take anything for granted."

Courtroom problems become real for select few at spring training

United Press International

Although spring training is a time for baseballers to be judged, the courtroom is becoming the place they are judged. It was symptomatic of the problems in other sports, too, that the most celebrated news of the week was not a baseball story but the trial of a former Cy Young Award winner who had been involved in a jail break.

In the most recent happening, police arrested Philadelphia outfielder Larry Alston and former Phillies pitcher Hayes. Alston pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of attempted murder, and Hayes was charged with obstructing justice by being a fellow inmate of Alston, who had been involved in a jailbreak.

In yet another court matter, this one in Iowa, 28-year-old George Christenson is commenting on what happened with disorderly conduct, a charge he is facing.

Christenson, who was released on bail, said he had been turned over to the Des Moines Police Department for further investigation. No date has been set for his trial.

A Cleveland spokesman said the matters were being handled with the greatest of care and that neither player would be needed for any further decisions. He added that neither player was on the 28-man roster in the early days of camp.

Meanwhile, 21-year-old John Heiner, who was on the 28-man roster last year, was charged with disorderly conduct. Both men were Trying to connect with 28-man roster as they are said respond to Iowa City with his Arizona team.

"It's humbling," coach said, "but I think it would be nice to enjoy what I'm doing down the road, but not at this time.

"I have been trying to get adjusted for another on-base coach, Ralph Miller, new head coach at Arizona State.

"Before I left Iowa, he said, "and he said he would like to stay at Arizona as long as he could."

"I enjoyed it at Iowa, but didn't expect to leave. And he was right. I've been feeling fairly at home, but that only takes one year to adjust to the whole thing."

Christenson said he should be favorable to Iowa City with its distance away and give it a chance to do with the Iowa fans, something he was going to arrange for another on-base coach, Ralph Miller, new head coach at Arizona State.

"It would be nice to do that myself some day, but it's too late to do that at this particular time.

The Whoopee-De-Do excitement was at its peak when Bach (March 21st, 1750) organized a grand birthday bash for himself. He was 30 years old and feeling jubilant about his artistic endeavors, but not yet knowing all the honors and status that would come his way. But on this special day, the Royal Fireworks and Her Majesty Queen Maria Theresa poured on the accolades. Bach had been ordered to prepare a grand opus for a special performance to celebrate the occasion. He used gold-plated ink pens for the score, wrote with a feather quill dipped in a solution of vinegar and lampblack, and inlaid his music sheets with precious gems. The entire compendium was later stolen, and the story of the lost music has been a mystery ever since.

Just as he was about to conclude the grand finale of his composition, Bach's well-known habit of spontaneous musical improvisation took over. He started to play with such improvisational genius that the audience could hardly believe their ears. They were awestruck by the sheer brilliance of his musical creation and knew that they were witnessing something truly exceptional.

Bach himself was also taken aback by the response. As he played, he could feel the energy of the audience rising and his fingers flew over the keyboard with a speed and precision that he had never before experienced. He knew he had created something special and that his music had captured the hearts of the listeners.

The performance lasted for what seemed like an eternity, and when it finally ended, the audience was in raptures. They were in awe of Bach's talent and the sheer beauty of his music. The celebration continued long after the last note had sounded, and the mood was one of excitement and joy.

Bach was presented with a grand cake, which he cut with a sword, and a bouquet of flowers, which he kissed. He then gave a speech to the assembled crowd, thanking them for their support and promising to continue to create music that would inspire and move them.

The afternoon ended with a grand ball, where Bach danced with all the ladies and was the life of the party. The day is remembered as a turning point in his career, and he continued to compose and perform with even greater passion and creativity.
Dancers head to Michigan festival

UI Dance Program students will perform two works of original choreography at the National Regional American College Dance Festival (ARCC), being held today through Saturday at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, Mich.

The two works — "The Long snippets" by Dance Program faculty member Susan Decker, and "Mist of Darkness," by teaching assistant Karen Bujnowski — will be performed at 9 tonight, Thursday, at the Mankato Civic Auditorium. Decker is a former member of the Joffrey Ballet. Bujnowski is a former member of the Bal de Thalassa in France.

UI rep auditions beginning soon

Public auditions for the UI's Spring Repertory play, presented by the University Theatre, will be held 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. March 2 in Old Armory Theatre.

Spring Repertory will produce four comedies by British playwright Tom Stoppard — "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," "Junkers," "Dry Lines" and "The Real Inspector Hound." Auditions for the part of Rosencrantz will begin May 7, with the part of Guildenstern cast through July 27 at Malt Theatre.

Each candidate is asked to present two-minute monologues, including one of the style of Shakespeare. Shakespearian or similar.

To reserve an audition time, call the University Theatre office at 358-6500, or stop in at the Old Armory Theatre today, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Entertainment today

At the Bijou

"Mame" will be shown today through April 6 at the Bijou Theatre, 221 N. Gilbert St. The musical comedy has been honored as the best musical comedy of the year by New York critics. Director and choreographer Gene Saks is noted for his broad, comic talent. Other performers include Jessica Tandy, Hope Lange and Kaye Ballard. "Mame," with original music by Jerry Bock and lyrics by Michael Stewart, is based on the novel by Jerome Weidman.

Television

"The Fall and Rise of Captain Kidd" will be shown on ABC at 8 tonight. The story of the 17th century privateer sweeps through the Caribbean, Spanish Main and London. "The Fall and Rise of Captain Kidd" is based on the book by Charles Jouett Sherk. The cast includes Scott Wilson, Patrick O'Neal, Olivia DeHavilland and Richard Byrd.

Music

The Regent Quartet, an all-black young group pleasing all fans of jazz, will perform Monday, March 5 at 9:30 p.m. in the American Legion Hall, 901 E. Market St.

Art

As part of the "Cultural Creators and Architects" series, the museum will host an art show featuring new works of enjoying artists of today, starting today, and running through May 19. The show will feature works by 10 artists, including such diverse styles as traditional and modern, folk and pop. A guided tour will be offered at 7:30 p.m. today. All work will be available for purchase.

Nightside

A special St. Patrick's Day Sat-urday, fellow members of the Irish Society of the University will hold "The Luck of the Irish." The annual event will be held at the Ballroom, 250 N.
