Warm thoughts

In an attempt to attract people preparing for spring and spring break, the employees at the Hair Express offer an optimistic message to passers-by on Clinton Street during Monday afternoon's barrage of wind and snow flurries.

The message is an announcement of a week-long spring fever celebration at the hair and tanning salon. The business is decorated in spring style complete with a lawn chair and cooler.

Ex-fiancee defies order, has abortion

DES MOINES (UPI) — A Booneville woman defied a court order during the weekend by undergoing an abortion that her estranged fiance had sought to prevent, the fiance's attorney confirmed Monday.

The father, Charles Buel, won a temporary restraining order from a Dallas County district court last week to stop his former girlfriend from having an abortion.

But the woman, identified only as Sally Doe, had the abortion at a Planned Parenthood clinic in Des Moines Saturday afternoon — several hours after she had been served with the court order.

"The lawyer for the woman called us and said the abortion was already done and then we told Charles his baby was in God's hands now," said Dick Woods, president of the Fathers' Rights Association, which had been aiding Buel. "He was very broken up, but he hopes his case will encourage other fathers."

WOODS SAID Sally Doe, who was 13 weeks pregnant, received the order at her mother's house in Des Moines Saturday morning. Woods claimed that her mother apparently pressured Sally Doe into undergoing the procedure.

Dan Topp, executive director of Planned Parenthood of Central Iowa, said the staff did not know about the court order when the abortion was performed.

"She just came in and we treated her," Topp said. "If we had known (about the restraining order) we would have sought legal counsel. We ask and encourage clients to have their partners involved, but if they don't that's their decision."

Woods said no legal action will be pressed against Sally Doe, 24, at the request of Buel, who still expressed a desire to marry the woman and does not want to embarrass her.

But Woods said Planned Parenthood may be liable for some civil damages. He said Planned Parenthood may have known about the restraining order when it performed the procedure.

Priest's arrest won't deter tour

Travel agency volunteers to cover for lost funds

By Greg Philby
 Staff Writer

The loss of more than $5,000 from a Holy Land tour fund will not detain 37 parishioners from packing their bags because a Holy Land travel agency has agreed to make up the difference.

The future of the April 13-29 trip was in question after the Rev. Daniel Patrick Mackey, organizer of the trip, was arrested in Chicago Saturday after he allegedly took $5,007.44 from a fund of $52,000 collected from the Catholic parishioners.

But the Rev. Jack Denning, of the St. Wenceslaus Church, 630 E. Davenport St., said the arrest of Mackey, an associate pastor at the church, will not stop the Holy Land tour. Mackey, who has visited the area before, had been in charge of leading the group.

"The tour is still on," Denning said Monday outside the St. Wenceslaus rectory, 618 E. Davenport St., but he declined to add further details.

The tour is still on because Hallelujah Tours of Jerusalem travel agency told Denning and Sister Linda Bates of St. Mary's Catholic Church, 220 E. Jefferson St., it would make up the lost funds for them.

"When I contacted the travel agent," Bates said, "the Hallelujah Tours of Jerusalem agreed to go ahead and cover the tickets we had already available to us (since the arrangements had been made). They didn't have to do that."

MACKEY WAS CHARGED with taking $5,007.44 from the fund, but J. Patrick White, Johnson County attorney, said Mackey had posted bond in Chicago following his arrest "with, I believe, $1,000 cash which was the bulk of the money that was on him."

The Johnson County sheriff's report did not specify how much money was recovered.

The tour package costs $1,495 per person.

Mackey taken to center after court appearance

The Rev. Daniel Patrick Mackey made an initial appearance Monday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of first-degree theft. He is accused of stealing more than $5,000 that was raised for a Holy Land tour.

Chicago police arrested Mackey, 36, Saturday in a Chicago hotel room and charged him with felony theft and possession of controlled substances after they allegedly found Valium, cocaine and marijuana during the arrest. The discovered drugs had a combined value of more than $3,000.

Mackey, an associate pastor of St. Wenceslaus parish, 630 E. Davenport St., waived a scheduled extradition hearing and voluntarily returned with authorities to Iowa City.

After posting 10 percent of the $10,000 bond, Mackey was released from the Johnson County Jail and taken to the Sedlacek Treatment Center for Chemical Dependency at Mercy Hospital in Cedar Rapids. He is to be placed there until the "maximum benefit is received," court records state.

Mackey has waived a preliminary hearing, and his arraignment date will not be set until Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White files trial information with the court.

First-degree theft carries a maximum jail sentence of 10 years and/or a $5,000 fine.

Illinois authorities will return Mackey to that state on possession charges when the Iowa case is pending or finished. Mackey will not face charges of possession in Iowa unless the drugs were acquired in the state, White said

Blackmun escapes assassin's gunshot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun, who has received many death threats for writing the opinion legalizing abortion, said Monday he was shot at through the window of his home Thursday night.

In a statement issued by his office, Blackmun said one shot had been fired through the front window of his Arlington, Va., home on Feb. 28. No one was injured, and the FBI is investigating the incident.

Last October, Blackmun was threatened by a group calling itself the "Army of God" and vowing militant opposition to legalized abortions. The group has claimed responsibility for attacks on abortion clinics around the country.

The shooting incident followed a threat last week in a typewritten letter that had a New York postmark. The writer threatened to "blow the justice's brains out" and said he would attend the 76-year-old justice's funeral "and laugh," sources said.

Learning is the premise behind UI support groups

By Mary Boone
 Staff Writer

Women learning from women. That's the premise behind many UI-sponsored educational programs and support groups designed specifically for women. Women's Resource and Action Center and the UI Counseling Service offer a variety of services specifically designed to meet the needs of women on campus, which officials say are growing all the time.

"We respond to requests and suggestions from women in the community," said Carmen Griggs, coordinator of support groups for WRAC. "We're expanding our list of support groups all the time. Whenever we get six to eight women interested in forming a specific group and a facilitator to direct the group, we start another one."

Griggs estimated 80 women are currently participating in WRAC-sponsored support groups and added new groups are constantly forming.

This is the second article in a four-part series examining women's involvement and involvement at the UI. This series is presented in recognition of International Women's Week.

THE WOMEN'S CENTER support group list consists of more than 20 groups including: bisexual women; divorced and separating women; fat women; formerly battered women; newly gay women; undergraduate women; dating, relationships and friendships with men; women who write; women with breast or cervical cancer and single mothers. "I think it's important to differentiate between support groups and therapy," Griggs said. "We, as women, can learn from one another and one another's experiences. That's the principle behind support groups. We've been there and we can identify. Everyone's got something they can learn from someone else."

Offering a women-only career program this semester was a first-time undertaking for UI Counseling Service, but according to senior staff psychologist Kathleen Staley, it has been a "huge success."

Staley said she recommended formation of the group when she discovered nearly half the clients she was seeing on an individual basis were women concerned with career decisions.

"WE'VE DONE CAREER groups and different sorts of career counseling before but this is the first time we've focused our attention to the special problems women encounter when making career decisions," she said.

Staley noted most women attending the six-week session have been particularly concerned with their ability and desire to fill "multiple roles... Women are asking questions like, 'Can I really go this far in my career and maintain a good personal life?' and 'Can I have both a career and a family?'"

The group has also discussed "life messages" girls are given while growing up. "Little girls are told they should help people so they grow up wanting to go into dutiful occupations. And oftentimes girls are not socialized to be competitive so that too enters into her career decisions," Staley said. "A lack of role models has been a deterrent for many women. Think about it — how many female doctors or lawyers did you know while you were growing up?"

STALEY SAID "fear of success and fear of failure" are also key concerns of many college-age women.

"Women worry about being too successful and that's sad," she said. "They ask themselves 'Can I still be feminine if I'm a cor-

MUSCATINE, Iowa — The Muscatine County Board Monday approved a request to allow filming in the courthouse and around a nearby Cedar River backwater area for a movie about killer snapping turtles.

Kruidenier said no decision on the final disposition of the Cowles stock has been made at this time.

Officials hope boiler project gets bond financing

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

UI and state Board of Regents officials expressed optimism Monday that the board will be able to use self-liquidating bonds to finance installation of coal boilers at the UI and Iowa State University, despite legislation passed by the Iowa House of Representatives aimed at reducing their ability to sell the bonds.

Although regents officials vigorously opposed legislative reductions in the board's bonding authority, the House overwhelmingly approved a bill Friday requiring the regents to seek legislative approval before using self-liquidating bonds to finance major

"non-athletic" construction projects. According to Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, "only about 10 members of the House voted against the bill." Varn added, however, an amendment he offered to preserve the regents universities' ability to purchase research equipment with bonds was passed.

While regents and UI officials agreed the House bill could affect the board's plans for financing the $56 million installation of the new boilers, they said they are hopeful the legislation can still be side-tracked.

UI VICE PRESIDENT for Finance Dorsey Ellis predicted the Iowa Senate may either defeat the bill — sponsored by Rep. Richard Weldon, R-Iowa Falls, and Rep. Tom Jochum, D-Dubuque — or amend it to allow the board to use bonds for the boiler project.

Stressing that Gov. Terry Branstad has already endorsed the regents plans for installing the boilers, Board Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey said it is also possible Branstad might veto the bonding bill if it receives approval from the Senate.

In addition, Varn said he has begun work on a separate bonding resolution that would give the regents permission to sell bonds to finance installation of the boilers.

Varn said he believes "the best lobbying strategy" for UI and regents officials would be to urge the Senate Appropriations Committee to defeat the House bonding bill.

One member of the appropriations committee, Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, said Monday he opposes the bonding bill. But Small said he is not sure how the other committee members feel about the legislation.

A SPOKESMAN for appropriations chairman Sen. Joel Welsh said Welsh has not made up his mind on the House bonding bill.

"He (Welsh) was impressed by the large non-partisan coalition that supported the bill in the House," said Welsh's administrative assistant Randy Bower. However, he added, Welsh "plans to take a careful look at the bill before he makes a decision on it. He intends on speaking with regents officials, as well as Representative Jochum."

Richey said the regents are concerned about the House bonding bill "not only because of the boilers, but also for the effect it would have in the long-term on our ability to react advantageously to opportunities that present themselves."

He said the regents have wielded their bonding authority "judiciously," and the large number of representatives who voted in favor of the House bill "is a matter of deep concern."

"I HOPE THE Senate will be more attuned to the issues and will recognize the care the regents have used" in issuing bonds to finance projects.

Ellis said he remains "pretty optimistic" lawmakers will agree on some method of financing the installation of the boilers at ISU and the UI.

Pointing out that the boilers would be able to burn all types of coal mined in Iowa, Ellis said he believes it would be unfortunate if legislators didn't recognize "the major economic development benefits for Iowa" the boilers could produce.

He also warned that the UI will be forced to begin relying more heavily on out-of-state natural gas in the future if work on the installation of the boilers doesn't begin within the next year.

Delegation of Chinese scientists visit state universities

By Andrew Lersten
Staff Writer

A delegation of scientists from the Hebei Province of the People's Republic of China is in Iowa this week to visit the three state universities and some industrial regions.

The visit by the six-member delegation is sponsored by the Iowa Sister State Friendship Committee, which is chaired by former Iowa Gov. Robert Ray. It is designed "for the mutual benefit of both parties," said Luca Berrone, coordinator of the committee.

"They're here to learn about the high technology available" and to "perhaps consummate agreements regarding future exchanges," Berrone said. The delegation will investigate such technology as lasers, automation and microbiology, and will also discuss the development of trade and cultural ties between the two countries, he said.

THE DELEGATION began its two-week visit Monday at Iowa State University and will visit the University of Northern Iowa March 8-10. The scientists will be at the UI March 10-13, before visiting Norand Manufacturing in Cedar Rapids, the Duane Arnold Power Plant in Palo and Pioneer Hybrids in Des Moines.

UI President James O. Freedman said the visit will be beneficial for the UI. "We're trying very hard to open up and expand our contacts with the People's Republic (of China)," Freedman said. "All that we can do to expand our contacts ... is a decided plus."

Freedman, a member of the Iowa Sister State Friendship Committee, said China may be the most important nation in the world and called it "a sleeping giant in terms of its economy."

"It will have a more decisive influence on the course of events in the next 50 to 100 years than perhaps any other country," Freedman said. "There are great opportunities for scientific and humanistic collaboration" between the two countries, he added.

FUTURE TRADE AGREEMENTS between Iowa and China may result from the visit, said Berrone. "We would eventually like to consider China a large market for Iowa's products and technology," he said.

In addition, Freedman said the UI may eventually set up an academic exchange program with Hebei Province, although "we're a long way from it now. We're further along with other universities" such as Fudan University in Shanghai, he said. Hebei Province, which surrounds but does not include Peking, was designated as one of Iowa's three "sister states" in a 1983 agreement. Two visits by government officials, educators and food technology specialists resulted in exchange agreements between government, education and business groups in Hebei and Iowa. In 1984, Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad led a delegation from Iowa to Hebei.

Iowa's other two "sister states" are Yamanashi prefecture of Japan and the Yucatan Peninsula in Mexico, Berrone said.

Official says more MRIs in state wouldn't affect UI

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

UI Hospitals may soon lose its distinction as the only hospital in the state to operate a magnetic resonance imager, but a hospital official said this should not have much impact on the UI service.

The UI received approval from the Iowa Health Department to operate the x-ray alternative in 1983. UI Hospitals operates the only MRI in the state, but four Des Moines hospitals recently requested the right to install them as well.

The Iowa Health Facilities Council in Des Moines recently turned down all four applications because of "conflicting evidence" about whether they are necessary, said Health Department Certificate of Need Council Director Leona Ringgenberg.

MRI — also widely known as nuclear magnetic resonance — was installed at UI Hospitals in 1983 as a state-of-the-art diagnostic tool that has proven itself superior to computed tomography scanners and conventional x-rays in many cases, according to Dr. Val Dunn, UI radiology professor.

Last year about 1,000 UI examinations — including inpatients and referrals from eastern Iowa — were performed with the device. Dunn said installation of MRIs in Des Moines would not affect this rate at UI Hospitals because "we're busier than we'd like to be anyway."

In addition, Dunn said relatively few Des Moines patients come to UI Hospitals for MRI diagnosis, even though the nearest MRIs to Des Moines — besides the Iowa City site — are in Omaha, St. Louis and the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

The UI charges between $500 to $1,000 for the test and "our (patient) volume has been enough" to lengthen the number of hours the machine is in use from eight to 12 hours a day. Dunn added UI Hospitals is considering increasing use of the device to 16 hours a day.

"I anticipate use of MRI will grow and in the future we'll (the UI) get a second unit," he added.

RICK BREON, vice president of the Iowa Methodist Medical Center — one of the Des Moines hospitals that submitted an application for an MRI unit — agreed Des Moines hospitals entering the MRI market would have a "negligible" effect on the UI's service.

"The main advantage of MRI is we're able to see things better than with any other method in many cases ... or equally as well with added flexibility" of being able to view internal structures from varying angles, Dunn said.

The device has been used extensively in studies of the brain to detect neural disorders such as multiple sclerosis and stroke and in studies involving disorders of the spine and pelvis, Dunn said. These studies were originally done with CT scanners, but MRI is "more sensitive," he added.

UI residence halls plan 'Super Times'

By Andrew Lersten
Staff Writer

From pie-eating to assertiveness training, the UI dormitories are offering diverse educational and recreational events this week in celebration of Residence Halls Week '85.

"Super Times, Super Halls" is the theme of this year's Residence Halls Week sponsored by UI Associated Residence Halls, the various residence hall associations and UI Educational Programming.

The week's programs are "aimed at not only activities on the east side (of the river) but on the west side as well," said Associated Residence Halls President Mark Eckman.

"The purpose is to inform the residents of the residence halls that there are activities for them, that it's not just a place to eat and sleep," said Jeff Kaplan, director of the Residence Halls Week '85 committee. "We want to get them involved, to get them out of their rooms."

KAPLAN SAID the main objectives of this week's activities are to sponsor informational events, accentuate unity between the UI's residence halls and "let people know there are activities out there."

Residence Halls Week '85 kicked off Saturday night with "Gusto Latino," a Latin-flavored festival sponsored by Westlawn Foreign Language House.

About a hundred people had to be turned away from the "Super Submarine Dinner" Sunday night at the Quadrangle Residence Hall North Dining Room due to lack of space and available tickets. About 230 students attended the $1 all-you-can-eat dinner, which featured UI Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones as the speaker.

"I think that's a great sign," said Kaplan. "To me, that means the students want to get involved."

"Club Fest," which is designed to raise awareness about UI clubs and activities, will launch today's activities in the Burge Residence Hall Lobby from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"HOW TO SAY Bug Off and Mean It" will be the topic of a presentation tonight by Pam Boersig, UI assistant director of residence services, and Doug Kirchner, a UI Office of Campus Programs assistant. The workshop on assertiveness training is part of the UI Leadership Series and will be held in the Burge Mulberry Room from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Slater, Rienow, South Quad and Quadrangle residence halls are co-sponsoring "The Roommate Game" tonight in the Quad Study. The game, loosely based on TV's "The Newlywed Game," will test roommates' knowledge of each other.

Wednesday's activities feature another "Club Fest," in the Hillcrest Residence Hall Dining Area from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., and a pie-eating contest at Hillcrest at 7 p.m.

In addition, a "Coffee House" will be held from 7 to 11 p.m. in the Burge Lobby and will feature a number of singers, instrumental solos, skits and other comedy acts. "It's generally a lot of fun," said Kaplan. "It almost always draws a good crowd."

UI RELIGION Professor Jay Holstein will talk about "Intellectual and Physical Quests" Thursday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. in the Currier Residence Hall Party Room.

The Tyecon I.C., 223 E. Washington, will be the site of Residence Halls Week's Friday Afternoon Club and Muscular Dystrophy Association Superdance Kickoff.

Labor bill elicits partisan dispute

By Charlene Lee
Staff Writer

A partisan disagreement is brewing between members of the Iowa Senate over a bill that would open labor negotiations in the state to include all terms and conditions of employment.

Two weeks ago the Senate Labor and Industrial Relations Committee passed by a 6-3 margin a bill that would broaden the scope of contract negotiations to include every aspect of employment. The bill was up for debate on the Senate calendar Monday but actual debate and voting probably will not take place until later this week or early next week.

The "scope" bill has caused sharp division along party lines among members of the committee, with Democrats favoring the bill and Republicans opposing it. "It's a very partisan issue and that's exactly the way it was" in committee, said Sen. Jim Wells, D-Cedar Rapids.

Current Iowa law excludes the merit and retirement systems for state em-

A bill in the Iowa Senate that would expand the scope of labor negotiations "provides a means by which public employees can redress issues," says Sen. Thomas Mann, sponsor of the bill.

employees from the scope of negotiations. In effect, this means an employee's rights under the two systems cannot be bargained away during contract talks.

Sen. Thomas Mann, D-Des Moines, who is the bill's sponsor as well as chairman of the Senate Labor and Industrial Relations Committee, said "it provides a means by which public employees can redress issues."

WELLS SAID he supports the "scope" bill because state employees are "no different from the private sector...It's something the public employees have wanted for a long time."

Opponents say the bill would eliminate some cost-controlling measures in the current law. Sen. Calvin Hultman, R-Red Oak, said he opposes the bill "frankly because the one we've got works."

Sen. Jack Rife, R-Moscow, added teachers would be disadvantaged if merit pay and retirement systems are bargained away. That would have a negative impact on teacher morale and the quality of education in the state's public schools, he said.

Mann said he believes the "scope" bill has "a good chance to clear both houses," and even those against the bill's passage are hesitant to dispute this view. A similar bill died in the Senate last year by one vote and many believe the Democrats have enough votes to ensure passage this year.

Priest recalls Pinochet brutality

By Charlene Lee
Staff Writer

Describing the brutality of the military regime of Gen. Augusto Pinochet in Chile, Irish Jesuit Priest Michael O'Sullivan addressed an attentive audience of about 50 people at the English-Philosophy Building Monday night.

O'Sullivan served for two years as a pastor in Arica, Chile, of about 30,000 parishioners. In his speech, he recounted some of Chile's history under Pinochet and his experiences with the government's military police.

In 1970, O'Sullivan said, Marxist Salvador Allende was elected president of Chile by a narrow margin. Because Allende's victory was not by a majority vote, the Chilean Congress had to approve his election. During that interim, the United States — through the CIA — attempted to bribe the Chilean Congress against the approval of Allende, he said.

Following Allende's official recognition as president of Chile, the United States repeatedly supported attempts to overthrow him and was finally successful in Pinochet's 1973 military coup that resulted in Allende's murder, he told the audience.

THE INVOLVEMENT of the United States in the overthrow of Allende is not alleged, according to O'Sullivan. In 1975, extensive hearings chaired by the late Sen. Frank Church confirmed the involvement of the Nixon administration in ousting Allende. O'Sullivan read some testimony from those hearings in which former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger allegedly said, "I don't see why we should stand by and watch a country go communist due to the irresponsibility of its own people."

Internally, the military coup was influenced by chaos in Chile, O'Sullivan said. Allende's government failed to achieve anything because the opposition party controlled the congress.

"The U.S. also influenced its allies to break ties with Chile," he said. This severance led to a shortage of food and other necessities in the nation, which created support among the people for Allende's ouster, according to the priest.

"FOR THESE SORTS of reasons, then, the dissent was building up through manipulation and people weren't aware of their feelings," he said. When the military overthrow of Allende occurred in September 1973, O'Sullivan said the citizens of Chile were shocked with the extent and brutality of the military's actions against its own people.

Pinochet has remained in power for more than 11 years and during that time an estimated 30,000 Chileans have been murdered by the government and 1 million citizens of the approximately 10 million population have been exiled, O'Sullivan said.

In the past two years, O'Sullivan said protest against Pinochet has been growing slowly. Initially, people were afraid of protesting because they knew "what the government was capable of."

At least once a month, the citizens engage in non-violent forms of protest, including refusing to send children to school, boycotting stores and public transportation and banging pots and pans at night to symbolize the scarcity of food, he said.

IN AN INTERVIEW Monday evening, O'Sullivan described some of the actions taken against him by military police while he served in his Chilean parish with another priest and three Franciscan Sisters from Dubuque.

During O'Sullivan's two years in Chile, the military police — "perhaps the best secret police in Latin America" — kept him under constant surveillance, made two attempts to kidnap him, threatened his life, burned two chapels, distributed circulars accusing him of being a protector of communists and tried to run him over with a vehicle at 1 a.m., he said.

He said he left Chile because "it was considered that it was not advisable for me to stay any longer."

O'Sullivan said the Reagan Administration is willing to finance the overthrow of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua — which does not murder or torture its citizens — while turning its back on the brutal actions of the Pinochet government at the same time. He added American citizens can greatly influence U.S. foreign policy by writing letters to the State Department supporting freedom in Chile.

Sanctuary leaders consider caution

By David Roll
Special to The Daily Iowan

Local leaders in the sanctuary movement say they remain committed to helping Central American refugees despite the conviction of two national sanctuary leaders last month.

"We made the commitment and we knew the risks, and the risk is still the same, although there's been a conviction," said Barbara Du Mond, co-clerk for the Iowa City Monthly Meeting of Friends, which declared itself to be a sanctuary in December.

"We know what we're doing is right. We're not going to hide it," Friends Meeting member Georgia Teal said. "If they're going to come and get us, they're going to come and get us."

But the movement by 200 churches nationwide to aid the estimated 500,000 Central Americans who have fled to the United States may adopt a lower profile in the future.

"I think it will cause people to take more caution and exercise a more serious plan of security," said the Rev. Gil Dawes, whose Faith United Methodist Church in Cedar Rapids was the first to declare sanctuary in Iowa. "When you run an underground railroad, things have to be pretty secure for you to run it above ground, as we tried to do for a time," he said. "It will once again have to be an underground railroad."

DAWES ALSO CLAIMED that the federal court didn't allow sanctuary movement leaders Jack Elder and Stacy Lynn Merkt to defend themselves adequately in last month's trial in Houston.

"Practically every argument that could be used against the Immigration and Naturalization Service was ruled irrelevant by the judge," Dawes said. "The courts are going to be as useless to decide the question as they were during the Vietnam War."

Sanctuary workers have used two major arguments to defend their actions. First, they say their actions are based on their right to free exercise of religion. Second, they say that the people they shelter should be protected by the Refugee Act of 1980.

Dawes argued on behalf of religious freedom in an earlier sanctuary trial in Corpus Christi, Texas. In that trial, the judge ruled that the government's interest in prosecuting illegal aliens outweighed the right to free exercise of religion.

Sanctuary workers also claim that Salvadorans and Guatemalans should be protected by the Refugee Act, which defines a refugee as someone "unwilling or unable" to return to his homeland "because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group or political opinion."

The Immigration and Naturalization Service, however, rejects most Salvadoran applications for asylum, claiming the aliens come to the United States for economic reasons rather than political reasons.

SANCTUARY WORKERS look for help from a bill now before Congress. Introduced by Rep. John Moakley, D-Mass., the bill would grant a stay of deportation to any Salvadorans now in the United States.

The bill is now in the House Judiciary Committee and should come to a vote in about two months, according to Moakley's Washington, D.C., office.

The bill was introduced simultaneously in the Senate by Dennis DeConcini, a Democrat from the birthplace of the sanctuary movement, Tucson, Ariz.

Under the 1980 Refugee Act, the U.S. attorney general can also grant "extended voluntary departure status" to aliens who fear persecution, according to Dawes.

"That's the kind of thing that's been offered to the Cubans and people who are in far less danger" than Salvadorans, Dawes said.

But even if the government doesn't take any of the actions that would legalize the sanctuary movement, workers say they'll continue to help people fleeing Central America.

"Our first concern will be to provide for the immediate needs of the family — to find out what kind of life they want for themselves," Teal said.

Refugees will be housed in the Faith United Church of Christ in Iowa City and provided with food and medical attention, Teal said. Sanctuary workers will then help them find work and settle in the community or help them move to Canada, where they face no criminal charges.

THE SANCTUARY MOVEMENT began in 1981 in Tucson and first went public in March 1982. Since then, about 200 churches nationwide have declared themselves sanctuaries for undocumented Central American refugees. Most recently, the city of Berkeley, Calif., was declared a sanctuary by its city council.

The publicity surrounding the movement, however, has recently become a concern for workers and aliens alike.

"With the public sanctuary, there's a concern on the part of refugees participating in sanctuary that they might be safer staying in the woodwork," Teal said.

But she insists that Iowa City workers won't make a concerted effort to hide refugees, and will help them make public statements about the conditions they are fleeing, if they want to do so. In short, the workers won't shun publicity, but they want to make sure sanctuary remains a humanitarian movement first and a political movement second.

"Whenever it gets thrust to the forefront by being in the papers, I certainly rethink it," said Bonnie Murphy, coordinator of the project for Faith United Church of Christ, "but it doesn't diminish my commitment."

Women

porate vice president? "Can I still get married if I work 40 or 50 hours a week? Can I still have children?"

UI Counseling Service also offers a support group for women with eating disorders, which Staley said has been popular with UI students.

"Part of our mission as a women's group is to reach out to all the different constituencies of women in the community," Griggs said. "Whenever we identify a need within the community for a specific support group we try to respond. The catch is that we have to be told what local women are in need of."

setting case already had marshaled the state's legal forces. The Iowa Civil Liberties Union announced Monday it would aid the woman's cause in fighting the temporary order at a court hearing scheduled for Friday.

ICLU Executive Director Crissy Farley said her organization may still be involved legally if the issue is pressed. She said the ICLU would aid Planned Parenthood if it becomes legally involved.

Buel had argued in court papers that if the woman aborted the fetus he would be "irreparably harmed by denial of fundamental and constitutional rights as the natural parent of the unborn child."

"I feel I have the same rights she has," Buel said in a Sunday interview. "I don't believe in abortion. I don't see how anybody can destroy babies."

Buel said Sally "wanted a little girl" and he agreed last September, while the couple were living together, to try to have a baby. He said the woman had even selected six names. The couple were planning to marry at the end of February, but broke up Feb. 15 after a fight.

"THERE IS NO question that this woman's rights have been blatantly violated," Farley said. "The restraining order flies in the face of constitutional law. A woman has the right, unquestioned and unabrogated, to choose not to be pregnant."

Farley added that the U.S. Supreme Court in 1976 struck down as unconstitutional a Missouri "spousal consent" law which required a husband give consent prior to an abortion.

Buel's lawyer, Eric Borseth, said he was trying to keep the issue confined to fathers' rights and he didn't want the suit to turn into an anti-abortion crusade.

However, Gail Duff, the executive secretary of Iowans for LIFE, the state's umbrella pro-life group, said Monday it was monitoring the case very closely because of its implications.

Mackey

Mackey in planning the tour, is now assuming more leadership for the trip, she said.

"I originally was going along, as I jokingly told someone, just to carry the aspirin in case someone got a headache," Bates said.

But now, she will do the organizing to get the group to and from the Holy Lands. Most of the tour will be led by tour guides once the Iowans arrive there by airplane.

Mackey is facing an Iowa charge of first-degree theft and a charge of possession of a controlled substance filed against him in Illinois when drugs were found in his hotel room at the time of his arrest in Chicago this weekend.

MACKAY FACES an April 24 trial date in Illinois on the drug charge — the midway point of the Holy Land tour — while a trial date for the Iowa charge has not been set at this time.

The money had been saved in a special account at First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., but parts of the funds were later allegedly transferred to Mackey's personal account. Mackey was the only person authorized to make withdrawals from the account.

But even though the group was down $5,000 and without their first leader for the trip, parishioners are still looking forward to the Holy Land tour.

"We're in good shape," Bates said, then added she is still "very much" looking forward to the trip; the fact that she has never been there before "is one of the exciting things" about going.

Blackmun

at, according to the Supreme Court Historical Society. No justice has been assassinated.

Concerning the shooting Thursday night, a source said Blackmun and his wife were sitting in his home just prior to the shooting. Blackmun walked out of the room before one shot was fired. It was shortly before 11 p.m.

Blackmun's wife, who was described as "quite upset," was showered with glass. The bullet, which police said was a 9 mm slug, was found embedded in a chair.

"It put a hole in the window about the size of an apple or orange," an unidentified source said.

FBI spokesman Lane Bonner said the bullet had been recovered, and he said it came from either a rifle or a handgun.

BONNER SAID the FBI was jointly investigating the incident with the Arlington County police.

He declined to say whether there was a suspect, but said that if one is found, the charge would be assaulting a U.S. Supreme Court justice. That charge is a felony and carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

He also said the FBI was investigating the threatening letters sent to Blackmun. Conviction on such a felony carries up to 5 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

Another FBI spokesman, Bill Baker, said the FBI is investigating the shooting incident and letters Blackmun received but have not established a link between them.

"We have found no link between the separate incidents," Baker said. "We want to be sensitive to the fact that we're looking at the separate shooting incident and looking at the other letters received by the justice."

"We're mindful of the content of the letters while we investigate this shooting incident."

BLACKMUN SAT on the bench Monday morning while opinions were being released. His secretary confirmed Blackmun was at work later in the day "in the justice's library."

Security around Blackmun has been tightened since the shooting. He is under continuous protection, and no longer touches his mail, sources close to him confirmed.

Blackmun, who authored the high court's 1973 ruling that a woman has a legal right to an abortion, has received numerous death threats over the past decade.

His office acknowledged that Blackmun continued to receive mail denouncing him for the abortion ruling. In a 1982 television interview, Blackmun said he had been called "Butcher of Dachau, murderer, Pontius Pilate, King Herod — you name it."

Woodcut show stresses diversity

By Scott R. Williams
Special to The Daily Iowan

THE PRINT STUDY Room of the UI Museum of Art is exhibiting a collection of 27 woodblock prints from a variety of noted artists.

The exhibition, entitled "The Wood Block Print," presents a historic overview of the many approaches used in woodblock printing — surveying how artists have manipulated the medium to achieve various effects, primarily in the areas of line, color and the types of tools used.

Among the prints on display are two woodcuts by German artist Albrecht Durer. One of these prints, "Portrait of Maximilian I," is suspected to be a combination of the work of Durer and German artist Hans Weiditz, who added the elaborate border design around the portrait of the Roman emperor, and possibly even Durer's initials to the print.

"Durer often had woodcutters produce the woodblock from his original designs," Jeff Martin, Print Study Room assistant and organizer of the exhibit, said. "In many cases, the woodcutters were often paid more than the artists who created these works."

Other noted prints featured in the collection include Kathe Kollwitz's "Witwe I." Kollwitz was greatly affected by the plight of the German citizenry in the early 1920s and this print depicts a woman huddled in an aura of melancholy.

AMERICAN ARTIST Henry Wolf's "Lady With the Lute," is an example of the wood engraving in the show. Wolf's piece, the source of which comes from a painting of the same title by a 17th century Dutch artist Jan Vermeer, blends lines and shading to create an atmosphere with qualities similar to that of the original Vermeer.

According to Martin, the difference between wood cuts and wood engravings is found in the types of wood and tools used by the artist. Wood cuts are normally produced from blocks of soft wood manipulated by the engraver with varying effects. Wood engravings, on the other hand, are produced from blocks of much harder wood, such as oak, cherry or pear, the properties of which enable the artist to create precise lines and attempt greater detail. Artists often use metal-engraving tools to further manipulate the wood block.

ALSO FEATURED IN the exhibition are examples of hand-colored wood cut prints influenced by the early art of manuscript illustration. "Many of the earlier woodcuts were done as book illustrations and were hand-colored to resemble a manuscript page," Martin said. He added that artists often use hand-coloring technique in order to reproduce the effect of lighting often seen in painting.

"The Martyrdom of Saint Agatha," a hand-colored print from The Golden Legend, a book by 15th century writer Jacobus de Voragine, is an illustration of the martyrdom of the virgin saint through the removal of her breasts. The print is among the selection of medieval woodcuts in the exhibition.

Most prevalent in this exhibition, however, are the hand-colored prints of such noted Japanese artists as Katsushika Hokusai and Ichirysai Hiroshige. Hokusai's print, "Harvesting of Grain," a series of figures taken from the artist's sketchbook, and Hiroshige's print, "Early Departure of Dalmyo," are two of the 10 Japanese woodblock prints on display.

The exhibition will run until March 31 in the Print Study Room of the UI Museum of Art, and is open to the public from 10 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 4 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 2 to 4 p.m. on Wednesdays and from 10 a.m. to noon on Fridays.

The UI Museum of Art displays 27 woodblock prints in its new exhibit, "The Wood Block Print." Emphasis is on diversity within the medium, with such artists as Durer, Kollwitz and Wolf shown.

Graywolf anthology celebrates short fiction

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

The Graywolf Annual: Short Stories edited by Scott Walker. Graywolf Press, 1985.

IN THE Graywolf Annual: Short Stories, one of the nation's most prestigious small presses continues its crusade. The premise of this particular volume is vague, and its selection is questionable, but the impulse is pure — the promotion of the short story for contemporary readers.

"For years, fewer and fewer short stories were published in general magazines and fewer collections of stories were issued by book publishers," says the copy on the book's back cover. Recently Graywolf has worked to reverse that oversight under the imprint of its Short Fiction Series. The Graywolf Annual is the latest in that series.

In this regard, Graywolf's efforts have been part of a larger movement. The Fiction Network, for instance, was founded by a group of writers based in San Francisco to syndicate manuscripts to newspapers and magazines. And collections of stories by Raymond Carver and Bobbie Ann Mason, to name two prominent examples, have enjoyed that rarity in serious literature, particularly for short fiction — both critical and commercial success.

Carver, Mason and the Fiction Network, not coincidentally, contributed to The Graywolf Annual — Mason with a story, the Network with stories by Andre Dubus and Alice Adams and Carver with, according to the editor's acknowledgement, "advice, encouragement and assistance." The work of Mason and Carver has been especially influential, showing short fiction can find an audience without being either aggressively academic or socially elitist.

Instead, their writing fits the description of short stories on The Graywolf Annual's back cover: "those neat little bundles of life-as-it-is-truly-lived (that) can be read in a sitting, by the commuter, the traveler or the busy person in search of a bit of intellectual nourishment and pleasure." This egalitarian ideal is as close as this book comes to a statement of purpose — even though the volume promises to be the first in an annual series of anthologies.

The criteria for the selections (by editor Scott Walker) couldn't get any less specific: "a dozen stories by some of the best younger and established writers." In several cases, neither style nor quality seems to have been a factor.

Elizabeth Tallent's "Half a Mussel Shell" is an especially unfortunate story to open the volume; it clashes with all the fiction that follows. It belongs not among stories about life-as-it-is-truly-lived, but with a rarefied brand of fiction, in which characters would die before they'd emote, and which resolutely offers no resolution.

The next story, Andre Dubus' "After the Game," about a ballplayer for the Boston Red Sox, does have a resolution, but it comes literally and figuratively out of left field. The story is not at all representative of Dubus at his best.

Other stories, though, fulfill the intentions of this collection, however vague they are. Richard Ford's "Winterkill," for example, follows three acquaintances through an evening in a bar, then a night along a river, then a brush with love and a brush with death. It is narrated with chilling precision and concision, the specialty of short fiction.

The setting of Rick DeMarinis' "Under the Wheat," originally published in The Iowa Review, is equally ominous. Death here is part of the landscape. Much of the story takes place inside the missile silos of North Dakota during their installation in the 1960s, other scenes take place in the narrator's trailer while tornadoes roar nearby but never touch down. The final scene is set in a ghost town, a boom community built for the workers on a dam project, now as empty as a city after a holocaust. The narrator and his new lover play house inside an abandoned home that used to be somebody's dream, while outside a twister roars.

Bobbie Ann Mason's "Hunktown," which closes this collection, also evokes a desperate life. As in other of her stories, music offers an escape for her characters. This time it's country music, and now the goal is the Grand Ole Opry. But, as usual, the power in Mason's story comes from the intimation that this solution is only temporary, that the only real alternative to a small trap is a bigger trap.

These latter stories are neither affected, like Tallent's, nor falsely affirmative, like Dubus'. They are, instead, as close to slice of life-as-it-is-truly-lived as contemporary short fiction gets. These stories deserve the wider public that The Graywolf Annual gives them, just as the public deserves a wider range of stories — and just as both reader and writer deserve a better explanation from Graywolf of why this collection should be read.

Grand jury indicts ex-Clemson coaches

PICKENS, S.C. (UPI) — A grand jury indicted three former Clemson University coaches Monday on misdemeanor charges of dispensing prescription drugs to athletes at the school.

The indictments, which named former track coaches Sam Colson and Stan Narewski and former assistant football coach Jack Harkness, came just three days after Clemson President Bill Atchley resigned and Athletic Director Bill McLellan asked to be reassigned.

The Pickens County grand jury returned the indictments following a month investigation by the State Law Enforcement Division.

The two track coaches have admitted giving the muscle-relaxing drug phenylbutazone to several members of the track team.

Three Tiger football players also say they received muscle-building steroids from Colson, who doubled as the school's football strength coach.

Colson was named in eight counts while Narewski and Harkness were named in two counts each. Each count is a misdemeanor and carries a maximum penalty of 18 months in jail.

Iowa's Stokes named to USBWA team

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Iowa center Greg Stokes was among 10 players named to the United States Basketball Association Writers of America District 5 team announced Tuesday.

Center Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma and forward Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State were named co-players of the year by the writers, one of which is The Daily Iowan Sports Editor Steve Batterson.

Tisdale averaged 25.6 points and 9.9 rebounds to lead Oklahoma to its second consecutive Big Eight championship and a No. 6 rating in the UPI poll. McDaniel has been among the nation's Top 5 in both rebounding and scoring all winter long with averages of 27.2 points and 15.0 rebounds per game.

Also named to the 10-man all-district team along with Stokes, Tisdale and McDaniel were forwards Ron Kellogg and Danny Manning of Kansas, center Benoit Benjamin of Creighton, guard Steve Harris of Tulsa, center Dave Hoppen of Nebraska, forward Barry Stevens of Iowa State, and forward Malcolm Thomas of Missouri.

Larry Brown of Kansas was named district coach of the year for leading the Jayhawks to a 24-6 record and a No. 8 rating in the UPI poll.

District 5 includes the states of Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Tisdale, ISU's Stevens named all-Big Eight

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma was a unanimous selection to head United Press International's 1985 All-Big Eight basketball team announced Monday.

The 6-foot-9 Tisdale was the only player named on all 24 ballots by the UPI voting panel, which consisted of three voters from each conference city. He was joined on the first team by center Dave Hoppen of Nebraska and forwards Ron Kellogg of Kansas, Barry Stevens of Iowa State and Malcolm Thomas of Missouri.

The 6-10 Hoppen and 6-5 Kellogg, who are both Omaha, Neb., natives, were each named on 23 ballots while the 6-5 Stevens and 6-7 Thomas received 21 votes apiece. Tisdale, Hoppen and Kellogg are all juniors with Stevens and Thomas sophomores.

The 6-9 Tisdale became a unanimous All-Big Eight selection for the third straight year as he led the Sooners to their second consecutive conference championship. He became the Big Eight's all-time leading scorer this season with 2,498 points and also Oklahoma's career rebounding leader with 959.

Stevens, a native of Flint, Mich., averaged 21.4 points per game to rank third in the league behind Tisdale and Hoppen and lead Iowa State to a school-record 19 victories. He scored 47 points in a game against Morgan State and also became only the third player in Big Eight history to reach the 2,000 career point plateau this season with 2,093.

Voted to the All-Big Eight second team were forwards Danny Manning of Kansas, Darryl Kennedy of Oklahoma, Alex Stivrins of Colorado and Eddie Elder of Kansas State and guard Jeff Hornacek of Iowa State.

Iowa ROTC wins Ranger event

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

Intrastate school rivalries can now be found in another area besides athletics and academics — the Army.

Members of Army Reserve Officers Training Corp. from the UI, Iowa State and UNI met at Camp Dodge, south of Des Moines, this weekend to compete in the Ranger Challenge Competition.

There were three areas of competition: M-16 sub-caliber firing, the rope bridge event and the 10-mile ruck sack run.

Iowa didn't do that well in the M-16 event, finishing third behind UNI and Iowa State, respectively. And they didn't do that well in the rope bridge, also finishing third with Iowa State taking first and UNI second.

BUT AFTER meeting with the other officers in charge Saturday night, Captain Andrew Anderson, officer in charge of competition and a director of ROTC at Iowa, figured out that Iowa could win the challenge if they won the run.

"If we won the race, we would win the challenge," Anderson said. "That's because of the point system and the finish in the run would determine how the school would finish overall in the competition."

Anderson and the Iowa team were in a good mood when they saw the weather on Sunday morning. The rain was whipping around at about 40 miles per hour, according to Anderson.

"The weather on Sunday morning was the same that we had been training in," Anderson said. "The morale was high and we were ready for them."

Iowa had the luck of the pick and were the last team to start since they were split up in ten minute intervals. The eight-member team started out after Iowa State and UNI.

The only problem was that each member had to carry a 30-pound ruck sack full of military gear. Iowa took off and caught UNI at the seven-mile mark and could not catch Iowa State since they started 20 minutes ahead of Iowa.

IOWA'S TIME OF one hour, 44 minutes was the best and that clinched Iowa first place in the competition. Now the team will be training to compete in the national competition at Ft. Lewis, Wash. in April.

"They were proud of themselves. They have been training since November and none of them had run 10 miles before in their life," Anderson said. "Their time in the run has got to be one of the best in the nation."

One of the key members of the team was Brett Mott, a UI freshman from Iowa City. When one of the team members could not carry their sack anymore because of illness, Mott carried two sacks the rest of the run. That's 60 pounds while running.

"Someone got tired and I picked up their sack. We had to finish as a team within one minute of each other," Mott said. "School rivalry got to us. We wanted to take to the challenge."

Illinois

Iowa, which defeated Indiana 70-50 Sunday, dropped four straight beginning with a 56-52 loss to Michigan and ending with a 20-point loss to Northwestern Feb. 23, before bouncing back to beat Ohio State, 87-82 last Thursday night.

The Michigan loss "took a lot of air our of our balloon," Raveling said. Of the Northwestern loss, he said, "there's no way we could have played any worse."

Iowa is led by Greg Stokes, averaging 20 points a game, and described by Henson as "a great player."

"And the pros are starting to find out he's a great player," Henson said.

The Hawkeyes have been also getting strong efforts of late from senior forward Michael Payne and guard Todd Berkenpas. Despite its two strong wins last weekend, Iowa isn't expected to be among the top 20 when the new poll comes out this afternoon.

The Illini, ranked No. 16 last week, are virtually assured of an NCAA bid but Henson said he preferred to wait until bids are extended Sunday to comment on the tournament.

"I really don't want to talk too much about that," he said.

Team unity allowed No. 19 Hawks to survive year full of hardships

After Sunday's final event of the women's Big Ten Swimming and Diving Championships at the Field House Pool, Iowa Coach Pete Kennedy was a happy man.

No, his team didn't win the title. That honor went to Jim Montrella's Ohio State Buckeyes for the fourth-straight year. But Kennedy and his Hawkeyes walked out winners.

Iowa took third place for the second year in a row but it didn't come as easily this time around.

Everything the Hawkeyes attained this season: a No. 19 national ranking in dual meet competition; a school-record 13 wins and eight NCAA qualifiers came through a dedication to improvement and hard work.

Kennedy, his staff and his team has had more than its share of adversity to overcome over the past 12 months. After last year's meet, Kennedy was hopeful of having a strong recruiting year.

BUT HE DIDN'T sign his first athlete until May and proceeded to bring in a solid, if not spectacular, recruiting class. The problems didn't stop there. Once the season got underway, it was apparent that sophomore Jane Keating was not going to be able to return to the form of her freshman year following shoulder surgery. She ended up sitting out the entire season.

Mike Condon

Keating's injury wasn't the only health problem Iowa faced. Junior Jennifer Petty courageously swam in three events at the conference meet, despite having a damaged left shoulder that kept her out of action for much of the second half of the season.

Illness hit Iowa hard through the second half of the season. At one point prior to the conference meet, the Hawkeyes had only eight of 20 athletes healthy enough to practice.

IF THAT WASN'T enough, Kennedy had his breaststroke corp depleted, with the exception of freshman Chris Dieterle, when Wenche Olsen quit the team at midseason and Swedish recruit Helene Andersson wasn't allowed to enroll in January because of eligibility questions.

Through all of this, Kennedy, along with assistant coaches Jim Richardson and Dave Thomas, pulled the Hawkeyes together for the conference meet.

Iowa did have a number of bright moments throughout the season, though.

Sophomore Kim Stevens, who has to be one of the most improved swimmers in the conference, proved she is the top sprint/middle-distance freestyler in the Big Ten, winning the 100- and 200-yard freestyles after just getting touched out in the 50.

COACH BOB RYZDEZ's two divers, Kelly Johnson and Diane Goldsworthy, scored 67 points at the conference meet despite both being hampered by injuries. Goldsworthy's damaged left wrist was so bad that Ryzde had considered redshirting her earlier in the season.

The accomplishments of others are too lengthy to mention but one thing sets this Hawkeye team apart from the others I've covered in the past. The unity and togetherness of 20 athletes and three coaches was a constant throughout the season.

This is a team in every sense of the word. In an individual sport such as swimming, this group of people showed there is still room for the team concept.

No doubt about it, the Iowa women's swimmers and divers are winners in every sense of the word.

Poor weather delays Ice Hawk playoff tilt

By John Gilardi Staff Writer

Children are known to change the rules of a game if things are not going their way. That seems to be the case with the UI Ice Hawks and their playoff series with Kunnerts.

The problem started when Kunnerts canceled Sunday night's game Sunday afternoon. This was the third game in the best-of-three series after Iowa won 4-2 on Wednesday night.

"They called us up and told us that the game was canceled. We thought that they did it because of the weather or this was one of their tricks," Iowa player-coach Joe Barrash said.

"Most of the league supervisors are players from Kunnerts and that does not help the situation," Barrash added.

BARRASH SHOULD be upset after scoring three goals in the victory Wednesday. Rick Trossman got Iowa on the board first and Barrash added another to put Iowa in a commanding 2-0 lead.

Iowa kept up the attack and Barrash stuck the puck in the back of the net for his second goal in the middle of the second period and a 3-1 Hawkeye lead. Then Barrash scored again in the beginning of the third period to seal the victory.

"We don't know what the problem was in the first game when we lost," Barrash said. "This time we looked completely different and a lot of it was due to the increased number of fans that were there, that really motivated us."

Bill Vigdor, one of the league directors, said that the game was canceled Sunday night because of the inclement weather in the Waterloo and Dubuque area.

"TUESDAY NIGHT is the tentative date for the rescheduled game," Vigdor said. "A lot of the players on Kunnerts are from Waterloo and the weather was really bad up there. But this was the first time in two years that we have had a game canceled because of the weather."

The playoff dates, if Iowa wins, are March 6 at 9:15 p.m., March 8 at 9:15 p.m. and March 10 at 4:30 p.m., if necessary.

The B team finished its season earlier than they had wanted to when they lost 8-1 to Palmer College on Friday night. Joe Nelson scored his first goal of the season in the loss. The B team's final record is 0-20.

Spring is here and the UI Rowing Association is ready to get going for their spring season. Tonight at 8 p.m. in the Iowa City Recreation Center, the team will be having an important practice to determine who will row on what team. All interested individuals should attend.

The top women's crew and one of the men's crew will be competing in the "Dustbowl Regatta" in Austin, Texas, during spring break. The first official meet of the year is April 13.

Sportsclubs is a Tuesday feature of The Daily Iowan. If you would like further information or results published about your club sport, call the DI at 353-6220 from 7-9 p.m. on Sundays and 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Mondays.

I. City Dock Tours 'skywalks' to win

By J.B. Glass Staff Writer

The cagers of I. City Dock Tours had a point to prove.

And with a 46-40 'scrubbing' over Every Girl's Dream in intramural basketball action Tuesday evening, the team made up of first-year medical students proved its point.

"Today's game proves that med students can do other things than hit the books," team member Dave Maher said.

It wasn't all that easy. Every Girl's Dream, a team made up of four former prep wrestlers, an ex-football player, Paul Glynn, a Hawkeye wrestler and Steve Cade, its "only basketball player", jumped to a 7-2 lead.

But I. City Dock Tours came roaring back, as Colin Miller's lay-up off a fast break with four minutes, 21 seconds left in the first half, gave his team a 12-11 lead.

"THERE WOULD HAVE been a lot more skywalking if there hadn't been so much fouling on the fast breaks," Miller said.

However, the team of future doctors couldn't hold the lead, as Cade teamed up with Dale Magnuson to outscore I. City Dock Tours 10-2 in the next two and one half minutes of play.

Every Girl's Dream led 21-14 with under two minutes to play in the first half.

However the I. City Dock Tours came to play and consequently battled back to a 23-21 half time lead, culminating with Kelvin Burton's three-point field goal after a steal with six seconds to play.

"I said I was going to hit three three-pointers before the game and I did it," Burton said.

THE EARLY MINUTES of the second half were much the same as the two teams tussled back and forth.

With 4:18 remaining, the score was tied at 31-31 — and the doctors began to "operate".

Burton hit his second three-pointer, to give I. City Dock Tours a 34-31 lead. On the play Burton was fouled by Brian Pitzele. He then missed the free throw, but teammate Maher gathered in the rebound and scored, to make the score 36-31.

Maher was also fouled on the play by Pitzele, who fouled out.

Every Girl's Dream missed the next two times down the floor and I. City Dock Tours took advantage of the situation and tallied twice, building the lead to 40-31.

From then on it was mostly the team of doctors, as Every Girl's Dream never got closer than seven points.

"IT'S A GOOD way to end the season," Steve Pierotti said. "They had us going in the first half but we played tougher defense and got some breaks."

In the losing effort Cade, who finished with 21 points said, "We did pretty well. Considering our team consists of five ex-wrestlers and an ex-football player," the senior marketing major added.

Illinois looking only at Hawks

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — With a pair of games left in the Big Ten season, Illinois Coach Lou Henson thinks it's too early to start talking about the NCAA tournament — especially when one of those games is against Iowa.

Illinois, 22-8 and 10-6 in the Big Ten, carries a 22-game, home-winning streak into Thursday's game with Iowa (21-8 and 10-6) as the race for second place continues in the conference. Illinois hosts Minnesota, 13-13 and 6-10, Saturday.

"They're an awesome rebounding team," Henson said Monday of the Hawkeyes, who grab nearly eight more rebounds per game than their Big Ten opponents.

ILLINOIS, FRESH from a 43-point thrashing of Purdue, will start forward Ken Norman in place of Scott Meents, who slammed a door on his shooting hand, Henson said. Norman scored 25 points against the Boilermakers, but Henson said it was Meents' injury and not Norman's production that prompted the line-up change.

"We expect him to play Thursday," Henson said of Meents.

Illinois has been reduced to three reserves — Norman, and guards Tony Wysinger and Scott Haffner — through a combination of redshirts, transfers, injury and grade problems.

Problems caused by a shallow bench are overrated, Iowa Coach George Raveling said by telephone, noting Henson did not have to worry about players griping about a lack of playing time.

More important to Raveling is Illinois' Assembly Hall winning streak — which began following a 56-54 loss to Kentucky on Christmas Eve 1983.

"I CALLED (Big Ten Commissioner) Wayne Duke to see if the conference had any articles for surrender," Raveling joked. See Illinois, page 9

Lions tumble by Hawkeyes, BYU

By Steve Batterson

Penn State proved it deserves its No. 1 ranking in men's gymnastics Monday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, handily defeating 10th-ranked Iowa and No. 14 Brigham Young.

The Nittany Lions, however, were far from their 288.15 NCAA record scoring mark. Penn State hit a 281.1 to edge Iowa's 278.7 and Brigham Young's 270.2.

Neither Iowa Coach Tom Dunn or Nittany Lion Coach Karl Schier were pleased with the results.

"It was disappointing," Dunn said. "We could have scored a couple of points and would have been very close to 280. It could have made the team race pretty interesting."

Dunn cited problems on the parallel bars and the pommel horse as hurting the Hawkeyes the most. "With six men up we can afford to miss one routine, but the misses on parallel bars really hurt."

SCHIER SAID his 9-1 team was shooting for a 284 score. "It was a pretty rough meet for all three teams," he said. "Our pommel horse and parallel bars were way below average. It wasn't like us at all."

The Penn State coach said his team became cautious after Nittany Lion Mario Gonzalez injured his knee on the final landing of his floor exercise routine. Schier said the junior will likely miss the remainder of the season.

"Nobody seemed to be very inspired," Schier said. "Maybe it was because everyone was anticipating the record crowd and we just didn't get it."

Meet officials had hoped to set a new NCAA attendance record but only 1,131 fans braved the winter weather, far below the 8,460 total recorded at a triangular at Nebraska in 1982.

Though the attendance record wasn't broken, another mark was.

HAWKEYE JUNIOR Dan Bachman broke his own Iowa school standard by scoring a 57.3 in the all-around.

Iowa's Tom Auer extends for the vaulting horse during a triangular meet with Penn State and Brigham Young Monday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Auer scored a 9.15 on the vault as the Hawkeyes finished second with a team score of 278.7 to Penn State's 281.1.

Iowa men's gymnastics results

Penn State 280.1, Iowa 278.7, Brigham Young 270.2

Floor exercise — 1. tie between Dan Bachman (I) and Spider Maxwell (PS), 3. tie between Marcelo Ribeiro (PS) and Steve Friedman (PS); 9.65.

Pommel horse — 1. Bachman (I), 2. tie between Joe Short (I), Mario Gonzalez (PS) and Bob Gauthier (BYU); 9.6.

Still rings — 1. tie between Terry Bartlett (PS) and John Innocentini (BYU), 3. tie between Stu Breitenstine (I) and Mike Ambroz (PS); 9.65.

Vault — 1. tie between Breitenstine (I), Ian Shelley (PS), Maxwell (PS) and Bartlett (PS); 9.8.

Parallel bars — 1. Bartlett (PS), 2. Gauthier (BYU), 3. Bachman (I); 9.6.

Horizontal bar — 1. Bachman (I), 2. Maxwell (PSU), 3. tie between Lenny Lucarello (I) and Steve Friedman (PS); 9.9.

All-around — 1. Bachman (I) 57.3, 2. Bartlett (PSU) 56.7, 3. Gauthier (BYU) 56.45.

Bachman's old record was a 57.2 he set in Iowa's last meet, Feb. 23 at Iowa State.

In winning the all-around title, Bachman beat two of the nation's top-ranked gymnasts in Penn State's Spider Maxwell and Terry Bartlett. Maxwell came into the meet ranked fourth in the nation while Bartlett was sixth.

"I think the pressure of the other gymnasts helped me," Bachman said. "It really gets the adrenalin flowing. I've been thinking about beating these guys for the last few days."

THE PARMA, OHIO, native won three of the six individual events on his way to the record. Bachman won the pommel horse (9.6) and horizontal bar (9.8) and tied for first in the floor exercise (9.65). Bachman finished third on the parallel bars with a 9.35.

Iowa's Stu Breitenstine was among four gymnasts tying for first in the vault with a 9.6. Brigham Young's John Innocentini, who leads the nation on the still rings, tied for first with Penn State's Bartlett with a 9.65 score.

Bartlett also won the parallel bars with a 9.6.

The Nittany Lions and Hawkeyes were in a two-team tussle for first place after the first two events, thanks in part to a strong Iowa effort in the floor exercise. Penn State led, 93.5-93.15, following the floor exercise and the pommel horse.

Penn State demonstrated its power in the next two events, scoring a 47.2 on the still rings and a 47.9 in the vault to dampen any hopes of an Iowa upset.

The Hawkeyes will conclude their home schedule with a 7:30 p.m. dual against defending Big Ten champion Minnesota Friday at the Field House.

Study: Contributions don't hinge on win-loss record

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Relax, coaches. Cool off, athletic directors. Take it easy, university presidents. Contrary to popular opinion, those big-money alumni who keep your college's endowment growing and its budget in the black aren't going to be scared away by a few losing seasons on the football field or the basketball court.

A new study, perhaps the most sophisticated on the subject to date, found no significant correlation between the stat sheet and the balance sheet. And no matter what anyone tells you, a chunkier offensive line isn't going to yield a healthier bottom line.

In fact, the authors say in an article in a recent issue of "Social Behavior and Personality," there is "no ap-

"I have a feeling that if you looked at athletic fund raising there might be an impact," says Notre Dame marketing professor Michael J. Etzel. "But that's not the conventional wisdom. The conventional wisdom is that it affects the entire fund-raising effort, and it doesn't."

parent connection" at all between a university's major sports record and the generosity of donors to its general fund-raising efforts.

"THE CONVENTIONAL wisdom is that the two are related, and that leads you to wonder if in fact it's true," said Michael J. Etzel, chairman of the marketing department at the University of Notre Dame. He decided to explore the question with assistant marketing professor John F. Gaski. "I wasn't particularly surprised," he said of the results. "There's been a considerable number of studies done in the past, though not as extensive studies as ours. The majority found the same thing we did."

Gaski and Etzel compiled nine years of basketball and football won-loss records from 99 major colleges. All but three field teams in both sports.

SCHOOLS STUDIED ranged from members of the major conferences — Atlantic Coast, Big Ten, Pac-10, Southwest and others — to independents and the Ivy League. The researchers studied results from the 1970-71 school year through 1978-79.

They looked for any evidence that changes in won-loss percentage influenced the total amount of money a university raised, annual fund contributions, the number of alumni contributing, the average gift size or other important indicators of fund-raising success.

After converting the fund-raising statistics to constant dollars to compensate for inflation, the researchers found only a small number of cases in which fund raising improved significantly in the wake of a successful football or basketball season.

IN FACT, THERE were more cases — though by no means a statistically significant number — in which a winning year was actually followed by a reduction in fund-raising success or a losing year by an improvement.

"The relative absence of significant results indicates that athletic performance and monetary donations are not closely related," the professors said in their study.

The researchers concede their study does not cover all the bases. For instance, they did not look closely at the impact of winning on the money raised by athletic departments for their own use.

"I have a feeling that if you looked at athletic fund raising there might be an impact," Etzel said. "But that's not the conventional wisdom. The conventional wisdom is that it affects the entire fund-raising effort, and it doesn't."

"There's not enough impact in a given year for it to show up statistically," Etzel said.
