Governor appoints three new regents to Board

Neu, Jorgensen 'disappointed' by position loss

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Two members of the state Board of Regents expressed disappointment Thursday with Gov. Terry Branstad's decision not to re-appoint them to a second six-year term on the board. Branstad insisted at a press conference Thursday that he followed

"tradition" by appointing three new members to the board. Regent Art Neu said, "Clearly, I am disappointed" with the governor's appointments of Jacklyn Van Ekeren, a junior at Iowa State University, John Grieg, an Estherville, Iowa, cattleman, and Jim Tyler, a businessman from Atlantic, Iowa, to the nine-member board.

If confirmed by the Iowa Senate, Branstad's appointees will replace Neu, Regents President S.J. Brownlee, and Regent Ann Jorgensen — who were all appointed by former Gov. Robert Ray — beginning May 1.

ALTHOUGH BROWNLEE, who has served as a regent for 12 years, asked not to be re-appointed, Neu and Jorgensen had expressed willingness to remain on the board.

"I will miss serving on the Board of Regents," said Jorgensen. "There are outstanding universities in Iowa, and I hope they continue to stay that way."

Branstad's press secretary Susan Neely said the governor felt Brownlee, Neu and Jorgensen "had all done a fine job." But Branstad decided against re-nominating any current board members because he was concerned with "passing around the opportunity to serve on the board," according to Neely.

"The governor indicated tradition has not been to re-appoint people after one term," said Neely.

Student regent told to consider all sides fairly

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Gov. Terry Branstad appointed an Iowa State University junior to the state Board of Regents Thursday, marking the first time in 12 years a student has been named to the board that oversees Iowa's three state universities.

In announcing the appointment of Jacklyn Van Ekeren, 21, Branstad said, "The Board of Regents makes decisions on so many issues that directly affect students. It seems only fair to give those students representation on the board."

Van Ekeren, a student senator and chairwoman of ISU College Republicans, was one of several students from the UI and ISU who formally applied for a six-year position on the board.

"I knew it was a long shot, but I thought it was worth a try," she said.

DESPITE HER affiliation with the College Republicans, Van Ekeren said, "I am not going to be a special interest regent. I will make every effort to represent all Iowans."

Van Ekeren, a political science/pre-law major at ISU, plans to graduate in 1986. She said she hopes to attend law school at the UI after being graduated from ISU.

Iowa Senate Education Chairman Joe Brown, D-Montezuma — who in the past two years has introduced unsuccessful bills mandating a student seat on the board — said he is "very pleased" with Van Ekeren's appointment and credited Branstad with "making a good decision."

Brown said he became acquainted with Van Ekeren when she served as a

Study charges B.A. losing value

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

Although UI officials don't completely agree with a recent national study charging the bachelor's degree has become a "virtually meaningless credential," they contend an undergraduate degree "isn't what it used to be."

A committee of the Association of American Colleges issued its report on what it describes as the "decline and devaluation" of education during its annual meeting last month.

The report, entitled "Integrity in the College Curriculum: A Report to the Academic Community," places much of the blame for the "crisis in American education" on university faculty members.

UI Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Kenneth Moll said he does not completely agree with the "severity of language" used in the education report, but added, "The bachelor's degree certainly doesn't mean what it used to."

"A few years ago, a number of schools stopped requiring core classes like language, historical/cultural and science classes," he said. "The quality of a liberal arts education may have deteriorated at those schools, but Iowa maintained the general education requirements. We've always believed in requiring a varied set of courses in liberal arts and that probably won't change."

MOLL ADDED, "We have a much greater variety in the education we offer students now — circumstances have changed over time. How many things do you know that have stayed the same over the past 40 years? Some things change for the better and some change for the worse, but most things do change."

Gerhard Loewenberg, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said although subtle changes have occurred within the baccalaureate program, the UI has "maintained a strong set of standards."

"At Iowa it's not possible to get a degree cafeteria-style," he said.

Loewenberg applauded the UI faculty for "not being afraid to make judgments about what's indispensable" and said the UI's general education requirements reflect those judgments.

He added the UI places a strong emphasis on the teaching abilities and experience of faculty members.

WHILE THE NATIONAL study committee acknowledged the importance of scholarly research, it faulted graduate education for "failing to prepare people to teach." The report cited: "During the long years of work toward the doctoral degree, the candidate is rarely, if ever, introduced to any of the ingredients that make up the art, the science and the special responsibilities of teaching. 'Yet, the major career objective for most holders of the Ph.D. degree is full-time teaching in a college or university.'"

The report also set forth a proposed minimum required program of study for all students that it said consists of "the intellectual, aesthetic and philosophic experiences that should enter into the lives of men and women engaged in baccalaureate education."

The proposal calls for universities to establish requirements in the areas of literature, historical consciousness, science values and inquiries, art. See Degree, page 8A

Commissions urge park fund creation

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

Two Iowa City commissions would like to establish parkland acquisition funds so residents could donate money or land towards the development of parks in their neighborhoods.

The Parks and Recreation Commission discussed at its meeting Wednesday night the possibility of creating a parks and recreation foundation to receive monetary or land donations.

"It would be a tool for us to serve as a way to attract gifts of land, development or scholarship assistance for youth or senior citizens not able to participate" in recreational programs, said Al Cassidy, acting Parks and Recreation Director.

Cassidy said budget constraints have hurt the city's efforts to set aside money to acquire land for neighborhood parks.

The city's parkland acquisition fund currently has a balance of $192,000. The money has come from several sources, including funds from the city's hotel/motel tax, the sale of Central Junior High, interest income on the fund's balance and $10,000 budgeted annually from the city's general fund.

THE CITY'S PARKLAND fund will get another $200,000 from the sale of Elm Grove Park to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors. The Iowa City Council formally approved the sale Tuesday.

In February, the city's Planning and Zoning Commission also discussed forming a parkland acquisition fund where public donations could be earmarked for specific neighborhood sites.

Commission member Sue Horowitz, who suggested the parkland acquisition program be funded by donations, said the idea evolved from an Iowa City neighborhood's attempt to get a park two years ago.

Residents wanted land at 521 Kirkwood Ave. to be developed as a park, but the city could not provide enough money to purchase the land.

She suggested the parkland acquisition fund at the commission meeting in February after recalling how the Kirkwood Avenue area residents wanted to donate money to supplement city funds.

Horowitz stressed the idea for a park acquisition fund is still in the initial stages. Details have not been worked out addressing how long donations would remain in the park fund or how developers would react to the proposal.

"It's very preliminary," she said, "but hopefully it can be a useful suggestion."

UI Senate approves 'disabled' seat

By Andrew Lersten
Staff Writer

The UI Student Senate unanimously approved an amendment to its constitution Thursday night that will grant disabled students a special senate seat. The bill must now be approved by the UI Collegiate Associations Council before a special election can be held for the handicapped students later this semester.

"We feel there is a need for representation" for disabled students on the senate, said President Lawrence Kitsmiller before the senate voted on the issue.

Sen. Doug McVay said UI disabled students "need a voice — we are not giving them the strongest voice possible."

The disabled students face problems that are "not really so obvious," said Sen. Jeff Compton. "We don't really notice the cracks in the sidewalk ... or the doors that are hard to open."

BUT SENATE treasurer Joel Mintzer urged the senate to set the amendment aside until another time.

"We need to be certain of what we're doing ... This sort of bill can be adopted later."

Mintzer argued the precedent of establishing such a seat would encourage other specialized student groups to attempt to obtain representation. He said the bill is "opening the door for other groups" to try something similar. "I don't think it's impossible to envision others" doing it, he said.

Mintzer said there are "at least three groups" that "deserve this representation," including the UI gay and lesbian population, members of fraternities and sororities who don't live in their chapter houses and adult students. "These same issues can be raised for" the other groups as well as for UI disabled students, he said.

However, McVay said other UI special interest groups "have not approached us ... nor have they demonstrated the need for a special senate seat. Disabled students are a very distinct group with very distinct problems."

Sen. Jim Headley said the idea of the disabled seat creating a flurry of similar requests was "utterly absurd."

Dog shooting settled out of court

By Mark Leonard
 City Editor

A lawsuit filed by an Iowa City man after a police officer shot and killed his pregnant dog two years ago has been settled out of court.

In his suit against the City of Iowa City, Randall Harrison, 921 N. Dodge St., claimed Iowa City police officer Edward Schultz was negligent in shooting his wolf-dog Katsic.

"The shooting was unprovoked and unnecessary because the plaintiff's pet was lying down and facing away from Officer Schultz at the time" of the shooting, according to a petition filed by Harrison's attorney in December 1982.

According to court documents, Schultz responded twice to a house on North Summit Street after police received complaints of a "large dog attacking rabbits in a cage."

When he responded to the second call, Schultz took a .22 caliber bolt-action rifle with him.

"I just decided that the dog had given me no indication that it was domestic," Schultz stated in a taped interview that appears in the case file.

"AN ANIMAL THAT LARGE and that wild-looking could and would be very dangerous. I've seen too many people ... that have been bitten severely by dogs and I just didn't think that dog needed to be around."

Schultz then walked over to where Katsic was lying down and shot her. "She didn't know exactly where I was at," he stated. "She was lying down, and I shot her through the head, and she just laid her head down on the ground and died."

In his suit, Harrison claimed Schultz followed too drastic a course of action and should have first attempted to have Katsic either trapped, tranquilized or impounded.

"Katsic was very gentle," Harrison said Thursday. "She would never had hurt anything."

THE DETAILS of the settlement have not been made public.

David Brown, assistant city attorney, confirmed the lawsuit had been settled out of court "several weeks ago," and added that "part of the terms of the agreement was that there would be no disclosure" of the settlement figure.

"I'm happy with the settlement," Harrison said.

"It's a moral victory," Harrison added. "I'll never be able to get Katsic back, but at least (the city) gave in."

Student Senate resolution opposes citizenship check

The UI Student Senate has passed a resolution opposing the Simpson-Mizoli Act, which inhibits undocumented employees from seeking working in the United States.

If this act is passed by the federal government, it would "interfere with rights of our Chicano friends, neighbors and fellow citizens," according to the resolution written by Senate President Lawrence Kitsmiller.

The act calls for all workers to have documented proof of their U.S. citizenship and would impose sanctions against employers who hired undocumented workers.

Kitsmiller said the proposed act would not "stem the tide of the numbers coming over the border (of Mexico) ... but would inhibit them from employment."

An amendment was added to state that over 300 UI Chicano students would be "directly or indirectly" affected by the Simpson-Mizoli Act.

According to the resolution, Kitsmiller will write the appropriate U.S. representatives and the Speaker of the House to relay the senate's opposition and request an update of the legislation's status.

IF THE LORD BE GOD

How do you act when confronted with Truth? Too often there is bitter retaliation. We think that if we reject the Word of God, it will change to suit our lifestyle! This will never happen. (Rom. 3:4). We must take a stand. We cannot remain neutral. "If the Lord be God then serve Him" (1 Kings 18:21). Note the following:

1. IF there is a God, then serve Him (Ps. 14:1).
2. IF JESUS CHRIST is the Son of God, submit to His authority. (Mtt. 28:18).
3. IF there is going to be a judgement, then prepare for it. (Acts 17:30-31).
4. IF the church was purchased by the Blood of Christ, then be a member of it. (Acts 2:38-47).
5. IF the Gospel is God's power to save, then obey it. (Mk. 16:15-16).

Too often, too many people speculate about salvation who have never asked what to do to be saved. Many "feel" they are right, who have never consulted the Word of God. You too, can be just a Christian. Write for FREE information and our FREE Bible Correspondence Course.

Advocates pull for marital rape law

By Sue Stoga
Staff Writer

Although the Iowa House of Representatives Thursday passed a comprehensive domestic violence measure, some local women's advocates feel the measure is not complete enough to fully protect women.

"Sure, it's a step in the right direction, but the next step is to change the laws dealing with marital rape," said Karla Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

The Iowa House passed the bill establishing domestic violence shelters, warrantless arrests, client-counselor confidentiality and a domestic violence registry, but failed to pass an amendment enabling women to prosecute their husbands for rape within the context of a marriage.

Currently, women can prosecute their spouses for rape in the second-degree if the husband threatens his wife with a weapon, or uses or threatens to use force. Women can also prosecute their husbands for first-degree sexual abuse if she is seriously injured during the sexual act.

Women cannot, however, prosecute if they are forced to participate in sexual intercourse or sexual acts, but sustain no visible injury or were not threatened with a weapon.

"I DON'T THINK Iowa wants to protect rapists, but that's what they're doing here," said Dianne Fagner, president of the Iowa Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

Women "can't prosecute because there isn't any vehicle for them to go through," Fagner said.

Linda McGuire, assistant Johnson County attorney, said women do not generally prosecute rape within the context of a marriage for several reasons, but mainly because the laws aren't strong enough.

"The real reason (that women don't prosecute) is because it's generally known that they can't... it's common knowledge," McGuire said.

In addition, McGuire said the county and the state have had little success in successfully prosecuting marital rape cases because of their ambiguity.

"It's really hard to draw the line to where marriage ends and force begins," she said. "Also, society is accustomed to saying that it's the woman's duty to abide by her husband, including sexual activity."

Miller also feels that many women do not prosecute marital rape because of societal pressure.

"Many women don't define it as marital rape," Miller said. "Often times in marital abuse there will be sexual power dynamics — the man controls the finances, the discipline and other important issues so the woman feels it is her duty."

"WOMEN CARRY MYTHS with them," said Jude Jensen, children's program coordinator for the Domestic Violence Project. "They say, 'He loves me, but he just can't tell me.' They can't feel the rage and fear of it until they step back and really look at the situation."

Regardless of women's motives for not reporting the rape and the lack of prosecutions, convictions and the sensitivity of the subject — marital rape does occur.

"I'm sure it happens, in fact I'm positive," Miller said. "We're not the primary source of reporting domestic violence, but if (domestic violence) occurs, I'm sure the rape does."

"The women we see here,.... many tell us they have been raped," Jensen said. "It's one of the tools a man uses against a woman. If women are repeatedly being sexually abused in a marital situation, it's rape."

Domestic violence bill to insure rights of victims

By Sue Stoga
Staff Writer

The Iowa House of Representatives Thursday unanimously passed legislation strengthening the rights of victims of domestic violence and establishing domestic violence shelters throughout the state.

Sponsored by Rep. Don Shoultz, D-Waterloo, the four-part bill met little opposition and passed on a 99-0 vote in the House.

"I think there were only a few (legislators) who initially opposed it... it's going to do so much good," said Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon.

"I think it's great and it's a step in the right direction for women and it validates women's experiences with rape," said Karla Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program. "There is much more domestic violence going on than we know about."

Varn said the major part of the bill provides for a warrantless arrest in domestic violence cases if a police officer feels one party is in danger of injury. Currently, law officials cannot make an arrest in a domestic violence case without obtaining a warrant.

"This is really going to help women out and prevent some injuries that might have otherwise happened," said Dianne Fagner, president of the Iowa Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

In addition to warrantless arrests, the measure also insures victim-counselor confidentiality by prohibiting defense attorneys from subpoenaing victim support counselors to testify in domestic violence and sexual assault cases.

"A COUNSELOR CAN now be subpoenaed and is denied access to the courtroom," said Jude Jensen, coordinator of the children's program at the Domestic Violence Project. "That breaks down the woman's support system because the person she has been working with can't be with her during her trial."

Counselor confidentiality "is an extension of the privilege of what physicians and psychiatrists are currently protected under," Fagner said.

The bill also mandates a $15 charge on all proceedings of dissolutions of marriages occurring within the state. "There was an attempt to take out the $15 charges on divorces," said Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City. "But, it passed overwhelmingly."

Varn said the estimated $150,000 in revenue from the marriage dissolution measures will be channeled into the state's general fund. That amount will be combined with $125,000 already budgeted by Gov. Terry Branstad to fund and establish domestic violence shelters statewide.

The final phase of the domestic violence victim protection legislation allocated $19,000 to set up a domestic violence registry that will house the names of criminal offenders in domestic violence crimes. The registry will be operated by the Iowa Department of Public Safety.

Billy Idol look-alike hopes for MS win

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

Todd Adamson is just like any other contestant in any other contest — he'd like to win.

Adamson, however, is shooting for a prize bigger than the MTV internship at stake in the finals of the Multiple Sclerosis rock star look-alike contest tonight. The UI freshman is hoping to score a victory against MS — the disease that's forced his mother in and out of hospitals for more than four years.

Students at the UI and 11 other universities in the Big Ten region are participating in the "Rock Alike" contests, a fund-raising program sponsored by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and MTV. People vote for their favorite rock star look-alikes by donating money to MS — $1 equals one vote.

Tonight Adamson and six other UI contestants will make their final bid for local "Rock Alike" honors at the Field House bar. The public is invited to observe the pageantry, where finances will be tallied and a winner crowned from among the Adam Ant, Billy Idol and Cyndi Lauper impersonators.

Adamson, who entered the contest as a Billy Idol look-alike, has been busy coordinating MS projects on and off campus for nearly a month.

IN ADDITION to three group appearances during Greek Week, the MS-MTV Valentine's Dance and Residence Hall Week that were mandatory for contest participants, Adamson scheduled several of his own fund-raising projects, including parties in Burge Residence Hall and at Dooley's bar.

Adamson, a native of Iowa City, has donned heavy make up, chains, spikes and black leather frequently during the campaign. He and his brother even started a scheme to allow students the chance to have their pictures taken with the UI's own Billy Idol.

"People always told me I looked like Billy Idol before, but since this contest it's been real weird," Adamson said. "Even if I'm just walking through the Union or downtown. I have all kinds of people walking up to me or yelling 'Hey, aren't you Billy Idol?'"

Adamson's mother, Juanita, said although she's "not thrilled" with her son's desire to pose as a rock star, she "lives with it because it's for such a good cause."

Todd Adamson

"I DIDN'T KNOW anything about the contest until I saw Todd's picture in the paper after one of the dances they had," Juanita Adamson said.

She added, "I don't know much about Billy Idol, but my friends and their kids keep telling me Todd looks a lot like him. Why, I wouldn't know Billy Idol if he came up and bit me on the nose. But if this is what Todd wants to do, it's sure okay by me."

Juanita Adamson remembers much of the past four years as time spent in and out of hospitals.

"I was sick a lot and I went to lot of different doctors and hospitals before I finally went up to Rochester (Mayo Clinic) three years ago. That's when they diagnosed me as having MS," she said.

MS is a chronic, often disabling disease of the central nervous system which most often affects people between the ages of 20 and 40. Juanita Adamson said MS has made her weak and said her "most difficult symptom to deal with" has been bladder incontinence.

"There have been a lot of troubling things that have happened in my life during the past four years, but I'm not sure I can blame them all on MS," she said. "Being diagnosed as an MS patient took some adjusting. It wasn't an easy thing for me or my family to accept."

She added, "My friends have been very supportive and have stood by me ever since I was diagnosed as having MS."

Activist to lecture on 'Pan-Africanism' in '85

Kwame Ture, formerly known as Stokely Carmichael, will speak on "Pan-Africanism in 1985" in the Union Michigan Room at 6:30 tonight.

Ture, famous for his role in the American civil rights movement of the 1960s, has travelled extensively during the last 18 years, and has lectured at more than 30 campuses nationwide.

He is probably most famous for his activities in the the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee (SNIC), from which the Black Panther party was formed in 1968.

Also through SNIC, Ture organized the Mississippi Freedom Party, which challenged the Democratic Party's right to represent black people in Mississippi in the 1964 Democratic Convention.

Ture has been described as a "vanguard" of the civil rights movement in the 1960s, and was instrumental in creating the peace and anti-draft movements during the Vietnam War period.

SNIC was also the first black organization in the United States to declare its support for the Palestinian Revolution.

IN 1969, Ture moved to New Guinea, where he helped organize the Pan-Africanist movement. He currently has a wife and son in Guinea, and he taught there during the 1970s.

Moyisi Majeke, a member of the UI African Association, said, "The majority of oppressed black people in the world come from Africa. Their social fabric has been disrupted and their economic system destroyed. Pan-Africanism is saying 'look for your roots.'"

"Pan-Africanism is a political philosophy which emphasizes the political unity of oppressed black people all over the world," said Majeke.

Civilian president to serve Brazil

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — World leaders arrived Thursday in the sixth-largest nation for the inauguration of lawyer Tancredo Neves as Brazil's first civilian president after 21 years of military rule.

Among the leaders to attend today's inauguration was Vice President George Bush, scheduled to arrive in the nation's capital of Brasilia late Thursday.

Neves, who pledged earlier this week to revive the nation's battered economy, will replace Gen. Joao Figueiredo, the last of five military leaders to rule Brazil since a 1964 coup.

Figueiredo leaves Neves to cope with a $100 billion foreign debt — the world's largest — and an annual inflation rate of 230 percent.

"I will do whatever is necessary to fight inflation and restimulate the economy, whatever the cost," Neves, a 75-year-old moderate conservative lawyer, said Tuesday.

Neves has said he would honor foreign debt contracts but press for lower interest rates and longer repayment terms for Brazil, the most recent in the series of Latin American nations moving from military to civilian rule. His opponents, however, say Neves' austere economic policies will not be a radical departure from those of Figueiredo. The new leader, however, may give some relief to the poorest workers whose weekly wages are $28 or less.

OLAVO SETUBAL, a conservative banker chosen as Neves' foreign minister, has said relations with the United States, which he described as neither too good nor too bad, will not change under the new administration.

During the past three years, the Brazilian government has followed economic recessionary policies made in agreement with the International Monetary Fund, which has enabled it to make interest payments.

Under the austere policies, however, prices and unemployment have soared and living standards in the nation of 130 million people — the world's sixth largest — have plummeted.

Neves was elected president in January by a 686-member electoral college because Figueiredo refused to allow direct elections. He won by a majority of 480 votes to 180 for businessman Paulo Maluf.

Arms control talks begin in Geneva

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators held their first working session of the new arms control talks Thursday, with an American delegate saying they tried to cover areas "where we agree."

Negotiators for the superpowers — 21 for each side — met for two hours at the U.S. mission to the United Nations and agreed to meet again next Tuesday. Tradition dictates the next round will be at the Soviet mission in Geneva.

A strict news blackout has been imposed on all details of substance, just as it was at previous arms control talks. The two sides agreed to limit their statements to how long each session lasted and when the next one is scheduled.

"Welcome to our mission," U.S. delegation leader Max M. Kampelman greeted the three top Soviet negotiators as their team arrived at the U.S. mission with its spectacular view of a mist-covered Lake Geneva.

Kampelman, a Washington attorney, career diplomat Maynard W. Giltman and former Texas senator John G. Tower are leading the U.S. team. The Soviets are led by chief delegate Viktor Karpov, Yuli Kvitinsky and Alexei Obukhov.

The delegates shook hands before getting down to work in the conference room, where anti-bugging devices lined the window sills. It was the same room where arms talks broke off in 1983 and where the 1979 SALT II arms limitation talks were held.

THE NEW TALKS will cover three major areas: intercontinental nuclear weapons, medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and space weapons.

Meanwhile in Washington, President Ronald Reagan called production of the first 21 of 100 MX missiles an "unmistakable" signal to the Soviets at the beginning of the Geneva arms, in a speech to magazine publishers Thursday.

"Nothing could endanger us more than the perception in the East that America, after making so much progress, would suddenly be losing her will to keep the peace and negotiate from strength," Reagan said. "And that, in a few words, is the importance of the upcoming MX vote."

Reagan, within striking distance of a Senate victory on the MX missile according to a United Press International survey, suffered a setback when Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., once an MX backer, decided to vote against the weapon.

Among those declared outright or whose staffs told UPI how senators would probably vote, MX supporters held a 41-39 edge.

Nineteen members, 12 Republicans and seven Democrats, were undecided or would not reveal their intentions.

The MX, designed to be the hardest-hitting, most-mobile weapon in the nation's nuclear arsenal, has been in the works for 12 years and has already cost $13 billion.

British scientist kidnapped in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Gunmen kidnapped a British scientist Thursday in Beirut — apparently mistaking him for an American — and across town, U.S. Embassy officials were evacuated amid increasing Shiite Moslem threats.

Gregory Vernon Nash was stopped by three gunmen in mainly Moslem west Beirut as he walked from home to work at the government-run Institute of Industrial Research in the afternoon, a police spokesman said.

"The men took him away," the spokesman said. "We have no further details but we believe he may have been mistaken for an American."

The British Embassy in west Beirut confirmed Nash's disappearance and issued an urgent appeal for his release, saying he suffers from a serious heart ailment. The scientist has lived in Lebanon since 1957.

The U.S. State Department refused to say how many Americans were pulled out of the embassy in Christian east Beirut or where they were taken.

U.N. resolution condemning Israel for alleged atrocities during its occupation of southern Lebanon, raising fears of new terrorist attacks against Americans.

After the latest threats, the United States sent two U.S. warships steaming toward Lebanon last Thursday from a Spanish island. At the time, it was believed the ships might be used in an evacuation.

Little bloodshed has been reported in the 2-day-old revolt by pro-Israeli Christians opposed to the Gemayel government's alliance with Syria.

Meeting with Gemayel Thursday, a Syrian military envoy discussed the rift in the Christian "Lebanese Forces" militia as rebels threatened to end an army siege of their stronghold, government sources said.

Chinese visitors get research tour

By Andrew Lersten
Staff Writer

A delegation of scientists from Hebei Province in the People's Republic of China — one of Iowa's "sister states" — spent three days on the UI campus this week exploring its technological and cultural offerings.

The UI visit — part of a tour of the three state universities and some industrial regions — went smoothly, said those who accompanied the six scientists from the Hebei Academy of Science through the tight schedule of events that ended Wednesday. The scientists were given tours of about a dozen UI research facilities in such areas as laser technology, soil erosion prevention, microbiology, genetics and computers.

"I thought it was an interesting week," said Janeen Felsing, one of the UI hosts for the delegation. On the research tours, the scientists "were busy taking notes and asking a lot of questions. Everybody made a good effort to answer all their questions — I think they left satisfied."

Dr. Andrew Yen, a UI assistant professor of internal medicine who works at the Flow Cytometry Lab, said the scientists were struck by the possibilities revealed in the research being conducted at that facility. "I think they were interested and impressed by the things we can do with this technology," he said.

BECAUSE THE NATURE of the scientists' expertise wasn't revealed to the coordinators of the UI visit until the scientists arrived Sunday, the hosts had to "set up three extra meetings quickly" to please the delegation. Extra meetings were scheduled to address the UI's work in genetics, plant tissue cultures and geography, Felsing said.

Communication hasn't been a great problem during the delegation's visit to Iowa so far, despite the fact that only two of the six scientists can speak English. "You lose a little bit when you go from English to Chinese — but it wasn't too bad," said David Swanson, one of the hosts for the delegation at Iowa State University last week.

In Iowa City, the communication gap was alleviated with the aid of about 10 volunteers, including the president and vice president of a UI organization for Chinese students and scholars. These individuals translated the information into Chinese for the scientists.

The scientists' UI visit included plenty of lighter moments as well as the serious scientific exploration. Sunday night, Hua Ling Engle, the director of the UI International Writers' Workshop, and her husband Paul entertained the scientists in their home and took them to dinner at the Iowa River and Power Company restaurant in Coralville.

"THEY WERE VERY HAPPY at our home ... It was a very pleasant and amiable occasion," Engle said. For an appetizer, "we bought a huge lobster and put it on a huge tray — they were just so surprised that they wanted to take pictures."

The delegation stayed at the homes of Gordon and Laureen Searle and James and Virginia Spalding while they were in Iowa City. "There were a lot of laughing and relaxing moments," Loureen Searle said. "The highlight of the visit was when they saw the ping-pong table — they got into a rip-roaring game."

Former Iowa Gov. Robert D. Ray, chairman of the Iowa Sister State Friendship Committee that sponsored the visit, said the scientists "seem to be delighted with the visit so far."

"The Chinese are a people that take friendship very seriously," Ray said. "They like to know they have a state where there is an attachment ... a common bond."

No formal agreements concerning future scientific or cultural exchanges between Iowa and Hebei Province have been generated by the visit so far, although Swanson said "there is an assumption" that agreements will eventually be made.

"The idea is to come up with ideas where we could both benefit," Felsing said. "It's almost impossible to make plans out of the air," but the delegation plans to mull the possibilities and then contact the Friendship Committee, she said.

A red letter day

Various attempts to improve education periodically sweep through the education system. We are now seeing efforts to go back to basics, to improve science education, to re-emphasize the humanities, to teach students how to think and so on. But all such efforts are doomed to only partial success unless students and their parents are encouraged to respect learning for its own sake.

Right now society tells its young that education is important so that they don't get left behind in the competition for good jobs — in other words, that education is a necessary tool to achieve money and status, and thus respect. But society does not say that learning itself is worth respect, although it respects the athlete simply for her or his achievement and the discipline and hard work that went into that achievement.

One way high schools tell the young that athletic achievement is valuable is through the symbol bestowed upon the achiever: the athletic letter. Now some high schools are trying to use that symbol to say that academic achievement is just as valuable, just as worthy of respect. They are awarding school letters to those who have achieved academically.

The idea is a good one. Traditional awards for academic achievement are membership in honor societies and certificates and pins. Those are nice, but everyone who has ever been in high school knows that the school letter for your sweater says you are special in a way that certificates don't.

Neither City High nor West High currently gives letters for academics, though West is considering it. They should both go ahead and award the letters. It's a small symbol, but one that says something important.

Myopically speaking

In yet another fascinating instance of what state legislators do for the $13,000-plus we pay them each year, both houses of the Iowa Legislature are presently considering a bill that would make English the official language of the state.

Aside from its obvious redundancy, the bill's Swiftian passage through the legislative machinery points out the cultural chauvinism of the American mainstream — something that, in our increasingly intimate world, we should leave behind us.

State Sen. Edgar Holden, R-Davenport, is an eloquent spokesman for this brand of cultural myopia. "English ought to be our first language," Holden says. "Most people can learn English at the [same] time they learn other subjects." Perhaps Sen. Holden should be parachuted into the heart of Saudi Arabia without a dictionary and without any prior training in Arabic, and he'd see just how easy it is to learn an incredibly complex and idiomatic tongue.

While fears of some other tongue — German, for example — coming to dominate Iowan's cultural landscape might have been defensible in the wake of the great wave of immigration during the late 19th century, nowadays the notion is frankly laughable in a state as insulated from in-migration as Iowa. To proclaim English as Iowa's mother tongue would serve only to underline the isolation most Americans feel from all things non-American and to further de-emphasize the importance of a minimal awareness of other languages and other cultures.

And for the legislature to spend its time over such a frippery — while attempting to emasculate the state's educational system — is a paradox so incomprehensible as almost to be laughable.

Still no proof

Check your local listings. Silent Scream, a 28-minute film showing the abortion of a 12-week-old fetus, is now playing at selected theaters across the country — from the Union to the White House.

Sensational visuals come courtesy of ultrasound — a technique that creates an image by bouncing soundwaves off an object. The film is narrated by Dr. Bernard Nathanson, who says: "We see the child's mouth wide open in a silent scream.... It is moving away in... a pathetic attempt to escape the inexorable instruments which the abortionist is using."

The Silent Scream, Nathanson says, is "high-tech proof of what abortion is all about."

But listen carefully. Without Nathanson's narrative, Silent Scream is only a silent movie; the fetus may be opening its mouth in a silent yawn. Even absolute proof of a scream would be as irrelevant to the abortion debate as the sound of a tree falling in an empty forest.

The value of Silent Scream should rest in whatever influence it has in helping individuals make the decision about abortion that is "right" for them. But Nathanson says the film's value lies in its "proof" — that it supports the "right" decision and should, therefore, influence national abortion policy.

That kind of dogmatic logic proves Nathanson does not recognize the fundamental differences between the pro-lifers and pro-choicers.

No one is pro-abortion. The most effective way to reduce the number of abortions is to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies, especially among teenagers. About 96 of 1,000 women aged 19 become pregnant, according to a study by the Alan Guttmacher Institute.

The teenage pregnancy and abortion rates are far lower, however, in other developed nations that have more liberal attitudes toward sex. The pregnancy rate among French teens, who receive free contraceptives from the government, is 43 per 1,000. Logical social policy would recognize birth control as preferable to abortion. Yet the Reagan administration has repeatedly pushed to require doctors to inform parents when their children are prescribed contraceptives.

And, sexually active teens need better sex education. In Sweden, where a comprehensive sex education curriculum is taught, the teen pregnancy and abortion rates were far lower than those of American teens.

If Silent Scream has any educational value, it is not in providing "proof" that anti-abortionists are "right." There is no scream, much less Silent Scream, that can settle the abortion debate.

Phoenix acts on student issues

The following was written in behalf of the Phoenix slate for the UI Student Senate elections March 19 and 20.

This article was written by Jeff Compton, Molly Gillogly, Susie Kocher and Ehtisham Rabbani.

ON JAN. 31, members of the Phoenix Party introduced their 69th piece of legislation to the UI Student Senate. This resolution was written in support of a bill in the Iowa Legislature that would allow state universities to redirect funds held in losing stocks to profitable stocks. The increased revenue would go toward greater student aid.

All incumbent Phoenix candidates supported this resolution. All incumbent Students First candidates voted no, including their presidential and vice presidential candidates.

This typifies Student Senate meetings in the past term. Phoenix members prepare legislation that will benefit UI students, and all the opposition can do is vote no. Moreover, the vote on this resolution epitomizes the hypocrisy of the Students First.

PHOENIX HAS put concern for student issues into action. The opposition has not. Again, an example will make the point. The City Relations Committee organized the City Lighting Project, which enabled students and other members of the community to pinpoint inadequate city lighting. The opposition's presidential and vice presidential candidates are members of this committee, but neither could find the time to assist in any way.

But a few weeks later, during campaign time, these same individuals found the time to call students to discuss general concerns. Who are they trying to fool?

One thing has become clear during this Student Senate campaign: Phoenix has a plan.

• Excellence in education. Crowded classrooms, insufficient numbers of educators and the lack of technical facilities are problems that must be confronted. Phoenix has a thorough understanding of these problems.

We will remedy the current situation by lobbying state lawmakers to give education the highest consideration when appropriating lottery revenues; working for the creation of a student seat on the state Board of Regents; working to ensure student representation on the committee that plans the UI's budget; and helping graduate students to organize as a collective bargaining unit.

• Access to education. The federal government's philosophy emphasizes student borrowing as opposed to employment or scholarship programs. Phoenix realizes that most students would prefer to work their way through college. Consequently, Phoenix is committed to creating a state-funded work-study program that will allow students to graduate without the burden of large debts.

We will continue to work with United Students of Iowa, the Collegiate Associations Council and other student governments in Iowa to lobby the Iowa Legislature for increased financial aid. We also use this strategy in our opposition to budget cuts.

• Human and civil rights. We feel discrimination must not occur on the basis of any criterion. Through Student Senate legislation and contact with the public, Phoenix was a strong force in achieving the added section of the UI's human rights policy that provided specific protection for gays, lesbians and bisexuals.

Phoenix believes in a well-rounded academic atmosphere. We urge increased recruitment and support services for international students, the disabled and people of color. We will continue our tradition of fair and adequate funding of all student organizations.

• Women's issues. The equal status status of women must be promoted and preserved. Women's rights can best be preserved through the creation and maintenance of advocacy programs and support services for women. Phoenix pledges to advocate women's rights by supporting adequate funding for the University Daycare Commission, the Women's Resource and Action Center, the Rape Victim Advocacy, Whistlestop, weekend and evening Campus service and the Women's Transit Authority.

Violence against women is a serious problem. Phoenix will continue to work to provide adequate street lighting and increased campus security.

• Divestiture. Phoenix believes that our education should not be built on slave labor in South Africa. The UI, through the state Board of Regents, has nearly $2.5 million invested in companies that are financially supporting the racist regime of South Africa. Phoenix feels that it is morally inconsistent for an institution of higher learning to be a participant, directly or indirectly, in the mass oppression of a people.

We will continue to demand that the board divest itself from all financial involvement in South Africa. This proposal is also financially sound, as wise reinvestment will yield greater revenue for student financial aid.

• Opposing militarism on campus. In the past few years, there has been an alarming trend in federal policy that emphasizes the military at the expense of every other sector of the nation's economy. Aid to education has been drastically cut at the national and state levels. It is not enough, however, to simply lobby for more money for ourselves. We must also present a unified front against the increased militarism in our society and especially on our campus.

Phoenix clearly has a plan. Phoenix members have been responsive, responsible and active. The list of Phoenix accomplishments is long. Our work on city lighting and divestiture has already been noted. Phoenix has represented UI students in Union renovation and has proven that we will not rubber-stamp administration proposals concerning renovation. We demand greater accessibility for the disabled and greater student space in the Union.

Other accomplishments include working with Iowa City on increased parking space and voicing student concerns against the keg ordinance and the proposed ban on happy hours. Phoenix successfully implemented and funded a weekend Campus, organized the Farm Forum to educate students on Iowa agricultural issues, lobbied the state legislature with CAC and USI and fairly and impartially funded all student organizations and commissions.

IT MUST BE noted that a list of senate accomplishments of Students First would necessarily be short. There are five incumbents on the Students First ticket; the general lack of attention and legislation they have devoted to the very issues they are campaigning on highlights their inconsistency and hypocrisy. Phoenix has ideas, and we will continue to put our ideas into action. Phoenix — we are working for you. Vote Phoenix March 19 and 20.

Molly Gillogly and Susie Kocher are candidates for the UI Student Senate on the Phoenix slate. Ehtisham Rabbani and Jeff Compton are the party's presidential and vice-presidential candidates, respectively.

Iowa frost gives way to baseball

THE PERMAFROST has turned into something like muddy bubblegum, the parkas have been neatly wadded up and tucked away into their parking places and, thank God, we didn't find any frozen mammoths in the back yard this year when the glaciers retreated. (The animal control people get snitty when we call them to remove the carcasses, remarking, "I don't see any licenses on them, now do I?")

This can mean one of two things: Either massive volcanic activity in Louisiana County has recurred after millennia of quiescence, raising air temperature throughout the state and causing a sudden catastrophic melt of the great Iowa Ice Shelf, which will soon result in the formation of a freshwater lake from Odebolt to Keosauqua. Or, baseball season is about to start.

An ongoing debate among aficionados of the game is whether God intended baseball to be played on real grass in the sunshine, or inside something like a reinforced air mattress (such as the Humphrey Dome) on a surface made of compressed mats of the shredded green plastic meant to symbolize grass that your parents used to put in your Easter basket — or whether we could go bowling for all God cares.

I AM NEUTRAL in this debate, other than to express the theological certainties that (a) wherever God intended people to play baseball, He never intended them to play hockey under any circumstances, and (b) He intended the Yankees to win the pennant.

Before I make my predictions for the coming season, I would like to point out that my average for last year's picks was 1 for 4, or .250. Before you callous young sophisticates make some urbane comment like "Pew! Stinko! Who cut the cheese?" I should like to point out that several major leaguers have an average somewhat lower than that and yet make several hundred squillion dollars a second. Just keep that in mind.

• American League West: When a team has a poor season, they are said to languish in the second division or even in last place. Last year, the Kansas City Royals became the first team in history to languish in first place. They barely finished over .500, but their competition, the Chicago White Sox and the Minnesota Twinkies, finished barely over .400, so the Royals won for the simple reason that somebody had to.

This year should be no different. I'll give the nod (or perhaps more of an involuntary tic) to the White Sox, if for no other reason than they lost even uglier last season than they won the season before, and I'd hate to see a repeat performance. The horror, the horror.

• American League East: I bring as much impartiality to this race as Jesse Helms would to CBS. The Red Sox are so far beneath my contempt they couldn't see its underside with a radio telescope and bifocals; Sparky Anderson's luck with the Tigers last season wasn't just characteristically dumb, it was unconscious; the Orioles finally played down to their potential; and the Yankees played like the Yankees, if only for half the season. This year, they might remember the season starts before the All-Star break.

• National League East: It seems that as soon as a baseball team gets saddled with that "America's Team" nonsense, they fall apart. A couple of seasons ago the Braves were designated America's Team; immediately thereafter, any stiff breeze that wafted through would give them multiple fractures. Now, that title seems to have been inflicted on the Cubs. What happens to them this season isn't going to be a pretty sight — the league office will browbeat them into installing lights, which will give them all radiation sickness. The Mets are going to kick them around like a hackysack, too. Sorry.

• National League West: Hey, too bad about the Dodgers last season. Under .500, what a pity. Hee, hee, hee. And finished below the San Diego Pods, too. Giggle, Gee, I hope they don't get embarrassed like that again this year. Snicker.

Humes is an Iowa City writer. His column appears every Friday.

Columnist Humes wisely picks the magnificent Chicago White Sox, shown here in a team photo, to win the American League West.

Bars gear up for St. Pat's day

By Regina Mc Duffie
Special to The Daily Iowan

From Irish folk tune sing-alongs to a St. Patrick's Day run, several local bars are planning a festive time this weekend.

"It's always our biggest time of the year," said Magoo's manager James Halloran. Magoo's, 206 N. Linn St., will serve the usual green-dyed beer along with a special on Irish whiskey.

According to Halloran, sitting in the bar's traditional barber's chair for upside-down margaritas will change a little for the occasion. For St. Patrick's Day, Magoo's will have green upside-down margaritas. "It's always amazing what people will drink that day," he said.

Magoo's will begin its pre-party on Saturday afternoon. "We've had lines outside in the past," he recalled.

Halloran claims the bar's popularity on St. Patrick's Day is because "it's as thick as an Irish brogue in here." In addition, party goes this weekend will be able to sing and dance to Bing Crosby classics such as "Toora loora lura" or "McNamara's Band."

DAN BERRY, owner of Joe's Place, 115 Iowa Ave., said, "It's the most fun holiday we have because mid-terms are usually over, people want to relax and the weather is getting better. It seems like (on St. Patrick's Day) everyone's got a little bit of Irish in them."

Berry said hats and buttons will be passed out at Joe's to help patrons celebrate.

Fitzpatrick's, 525 S. Gilbert St., intends to begin an annual celebration with a Fitzpatrick's and Iowa City Striders St. Patrick's Day Run, which will begin Sunday at 1 p.m.

Gary Fitzpatrick, owner of the pub, decided to sponsor the event so runners would "have one Irish bar to go to before and after the race."

He said the run is patterned after the Boston Marathon, where participants meet after the race in Irish bars.

"ANYONE WHO IS dressed in green from head to toe gets in free" on Saturday, said manager Michael Donahue of

The Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St.

Mike Waltz, manager of Connections, 121 E. College St., said the bar will have specials on drinks every hour Saturday night.

Waltz said for the past four years, St. Patrick's Day has fallen during the UI's spring break. "This is the first year students are in town, so people will want to go out and see what everyone's up to for spring break," he said.

"Years ago, St. Patrick's Day was the biggest event of the year," said Doug Tvedt, owner of The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St.

Tvedt said the famous green beer is created by adding an ounce of green food coloring to each keg of beer.

Degree

numerical data and multi-cultural and international experiences. Loewenberg said the UI "meets these requirements and has been particularly steady in setting requirements for the bachelor's degree."

THE UI GENERAL education requirements require students to take courses in the areas of rhetoric, mathematics, quantitative of formal reasoning, foreign language, physical education, natural science, social sciences, humanities, historical perspectives, and foreign civilization and culture.

Regents

Branstad has now made eight appointments to the board since he was elected in 1982 and the only regent he asked to serve a second term is Cedar Rapids physician Percy Harris.

"This is normally what new governors do," said Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey. "In the last decade or so, it is usually the case that a person serves only one term."

NEU AND JORGENSEN said they respect Branstad's wishes to make his own appointments to the board rather than retaining those named by a previous governor.

"I think any new governor will want to make new appointments to those boards that are the most visible," said Neu, former lieutenant governor under Ray. "That is his prerogative."

But Neu said he was unhappy with Branstad's decision to name a student to the board. "I think there's problems with that," he said, adding he is concerned a student regent might "never fill out their (six year) term."

He also said naming a student to the board could encourage other special interest groups to seek representation. "The faculty could come in and say 'the students are represented, so we should be represented,'" he said.

Regent Bass Van Gilst, whom Branstad appointed to the board last year, said, "I certainly would have been surprised if he (Branstad) didn't name a student" to the board.

But Van Gilst expressed disfavor over Branstad's decision not to reappoint Neu. "Art Neu is a fine member of the Board of Regents," he said.

Student

Senate page in 1983. He called her "an intense and very articulate person."

ISU Student Governing Body President Mike Reilly also said he is pleased Branstad yielded to student requests for representation.

"I expected we would get one of the three (open) seats" on the board, said Reilly, adding he believes Van Ekeren's appointment "sets a good precedent."

REILLY AGREED the appointment wasn't surprising. He pointed out that because state law — mandating that the governor make appointments to maintain a partisan balance on the board — required Branstad to fill each of the open seats with Republicans, Van Ekeren's involvement with ISU College Republicans made her a likely choice.

United Students of Iowa has lobbied extensively to gain student representation on the board. USI Legislative Director Patti Cale said Van Ekeren also "did some lobbying of her own" to receive the appointment.

"She had quite a few letters solicited for her to Branstad," said Cale.

Noting Van Ekeren is a member of USI's legislative assembly, Cale said her appointment is a "great step."

"I think she will bring the perspective of students to the board," Cale said.

MIKE CONNELL, UI campus director for USI, said Van Ekeren's appointment is "terrific."

"I didn't think it was that probable" Branstad would appoint a student regent after Brown's bill mandating a special two-year student appointment died recently in a Senate committee.

"It's nice he (Branstad) has appointed a student," said UI Student Senate President Lawrence Kitsmiller.

Kitsmiller, who sparked controversy by endorsing Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, during Harkin's campaign against Roger Jepsen last fall, also said he has "no trouble" supporting a Republican student regent. "By and far, most issues the regents handle aren't political."

The last time a student was named to the board was in 1973 when former Gov. Robert Ray selected Steve Zumbach, a UI graduate student, to fill an unexpired four-year term.

"Students are capable of doing a good job as a member of the board," said Zumbach, who is now employed at a Des Moines law firm.

He urged Van Ekeren to "do her homework, listen to all sides and consider all things fairly."

Big Ten gymnastics crown up for grabs

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

Don't expect the Big Ten gymnastics coaches to predict a definite winner until the final scores are tabulated Friday night at the conference championships.

This year the scoring is so tight between the eight teams that Iowa Coach Diane Chapela expects the team that hits the most routines near the end at Michigan State's Jenison Field House will win the Big Ten title.

"I think it will all come down to who hits their routines that day. The teams that are on that day are going to take it," Chapela said. "It'll be a fun meet and very competitive."

MICHIGAN STATE is hosting the meet this weekend and Spartan Coach Michael Kasavana says the meet will be wide open for any team to claim the title. "It's tighter from the bottom to the top this year. I don't think any team can be predicted to finish at the bottom," he said.

All eight teams have been scoring in the high 170s to low 180s this season and Kasavana expects the team scores to be "bunched together" at the end of the team competition. He added some Big Ten teams have a tendency not to do well at the conference meet and the scoring hasn't been as close as predicted in the past.

"Traditionally the pressure has bothered some teams and it has not been a tight race," Kasavana said. "It's surprising how its not so close sometimes."

OHIO STATE has turned in the highest team score this season with a 183.35. The Illini are the only other team to crack 183 with a 183.0.

Michigan and Michigan State have each gone 182 this season. Minnesota's best is a 180.3 and the Hawkeyes have scored a 180.1. Indiana's highest score is a 178.75 and Wisconsin's best is a 178.2.

But if one had to pick the top teams, Ohio State, Minnesota and Michigan State would be there, according to Kasavana. The three schools have done well in the past at the championship meet.

Ohio State, currently ranked 10th in the country, has won the title the last two years and have turned in the highest score this season, a 183.35. Buckeye Coach Larry Cox has six gymnasts on each event that can score above a 9.0 and three all-arounders that can score above 37.

"THIS IS THE strongest team I have had since I've been here," said the See Gymnastics, page 2B

Defending national champion and top-ranked Georgetown got off to a flying start as expected in defense of its crown Thursday, and seven other teams advanced with afternoon victories in the NCAA tournament's opening round.

Virginia Tech, 60-57. At South Bend, Ind., Kansas defeated Ohio, 49-38; North Carolina held off Middle Tennessee State 76-67 and Auburn defeated Purdue, 59-58.

Also, at Tulsa, Okla., Ohio State defeated Iowa State, 75-64; and Louisiana Tech defeated Pittsburgh, 78-54. At Salt Lake City, Utah, St. John's defeated Southern, 83-59; and Arkansas defeated Iowa, 63-54.

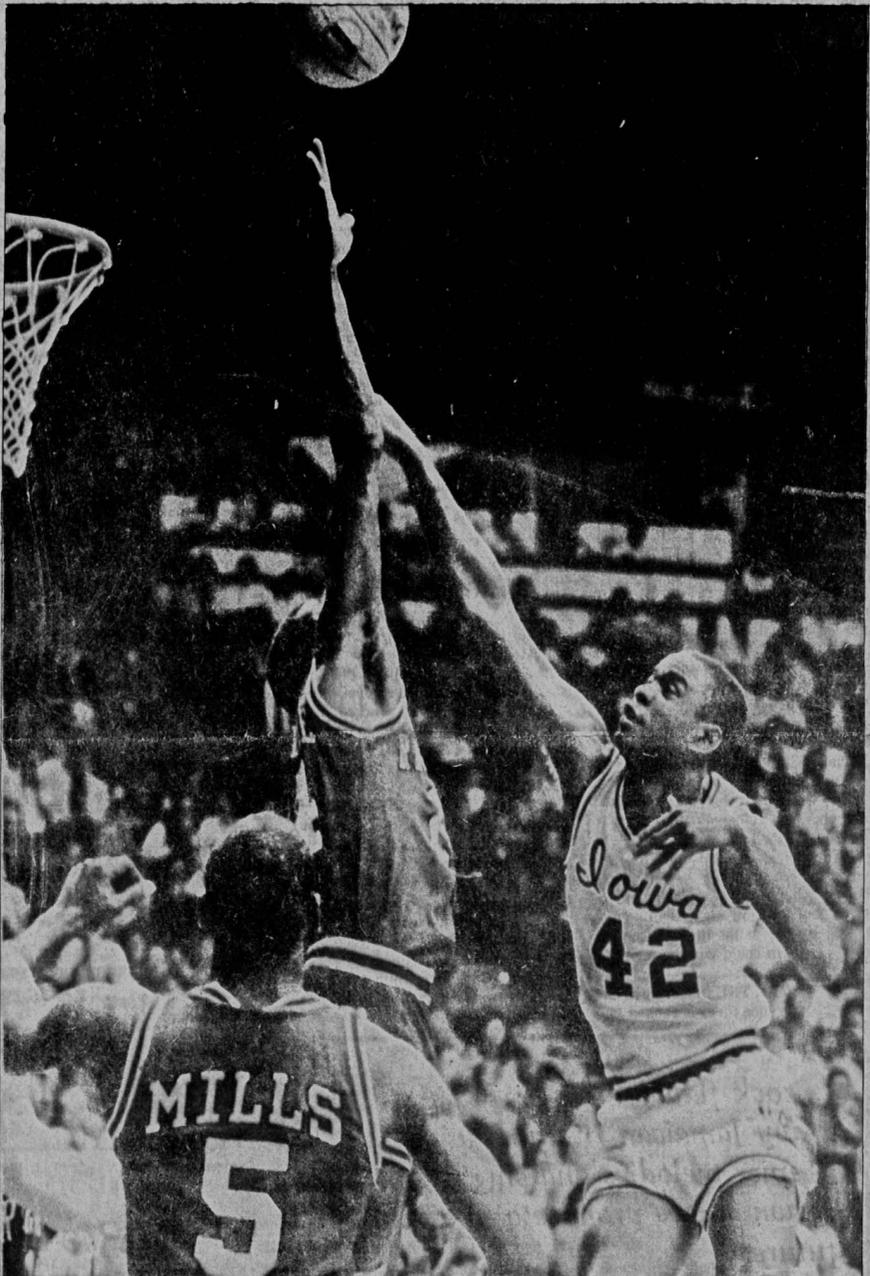

"I'M ANGRY ABOUT some things I saw out there, but that's good," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson, whose team was outscored 32-29 in the second half. "We would have won by 50 if I'd left my starters in during the second half."

Reggie Williams and David Wingate led Georgetown with 14 points each. The Engineers, 33-point underdogs and 90,000-to-1 shots to win the NCAA tournament, trailed 39-11 at halftime.

Lehigh, 12-19, and the only team in the tournament with a losing record, was led by Mike Polaha with 20 points and Daren Queenan with 13. None of its starters were over 6-foot-7.

For Temple, Granger Hall scored 22 points to lead the Owls.

VIRGINIA TECH did not start two key players, Perry Young and Tim Lewis, because they missed practice Wednesday. Hall, the Atlantic 10 Conference's Player of the Year, was backed by Nat Blackwell with 13 See NCAA, page 5B

Iowa's Michael Payne goes up for a shot over Arkansas forward Charles Balentine during the Hawkeyes 63-54 loss to the Razorbacks in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament Thursday afternoon in Salt Lake City. Iowa was led in scoring by Todd Berkenpas with 16. Arkansas will face St. John's Saturday afternoon. The winner will move on to regional action in Denver next weekend. The defeat ended the Hawks' season at 21-11.

Razorbacks bounce back to beat Iowa

By Brad Zimaneck

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah — To win a basketball game it is imperative for a team to play two strong halves of basketball and once again the Iowa basketball team found that to be true after losing to Arkansas, 63-54, here at the Special Events Center Thursday afternoon.

The game marked the second-straight loss where the Hawkeyes have blown second-half leads. But Arkansas' tough defense had a lot to do with Iowa's demise.

"We have played well the last five games," Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton said. "We were so inconsistent early in the season and we really had some bad ones like that one against Iowa in Hawaii."

"IT WAS A great disappointment and losing like this tends to take away from the season," Iowa Coach George Raveling said. "I would like to look to the whole season. I'm proud of these kids. They're a much more mature team than they were before."

The Hawkeyes held a 33-26 halftime lead but were unable to continue that performance as they scored only 21 points in the second half to Arkansas' 37.

"The second half our man (man to man defense) defense wore them down and probably affected their shooting," Sutton said. "They missed many shots that would normally fall for them."

"There were times that we lacked the patience, particularly today without the shot clock," Raveling said. "I lack the educational background and I can't deal with young peoples minds so I don't know today if their mentality was with the 45-second clock."

"THEY FELT THEY had to get a shot up and I felt that down the stretch we took some ill-advised shots and a lot of that was due to the type of defense that Arkansas played," he added.

Kleine, the Razorbacks' star center, who played for Raveling during last summer's Olympics in Los Angeles, then added four of his game-high 25 points in an eight-point run by Arkansas as it took a 52-44 lead.

Hawks hang tough; nine advance to semifinals

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Iowa wrestling Coach Dan Gable philosophy says, "You have to win the close ones."

And although Iowa did not have a sterling showing in the 55th national tournament's second round, the Hawkeyes hung tough to pull in front of the pack.

Gable's crew pushed nine of its 10 wrestlers through the second round as the Hawkeyes tallied 34.25 points. Oklahoma, which has five remaining wrestlers, is in second with 27.25 points. Iowa State is in third with 25.5 points and Oklahoma is in fourth with 22 points.

Wrestling continues today at the Myriad Convention Center with quarterfinal action. The tournament concludes Saturday night.

"WE'RE WINNING a lot of close ones," Gable said. "But that's the name of the game. You get people mad at you, but that's what it's all about."

Of Iowa's tough second-round matches, third-seeded 134-pounder Greg Randall went into overtime to beat Iowa State's Joe Ghezzi (4-4 in regulation, 5-3 in overtime). Randall's win was one of three Hawkeye victories over Cyclone wrestlers in the round.

Second-seeded Jim Heffernan (150) had to go into overtime for the second time in the tournament. He beat Nebraska-Omaha wrestler Mark Manning on a referee's criteria.

At 158 pounds, top-seed Marty Kistler beat Cyclone Dave Ewing, 6-4, with a controversial takedown.

"THEY ARE PICKING on me," Kistler said. "It was a close takedown, but it was a takedown. I wish that everytime I lost I could pick a gripe and cause a hassle for the other guy. That's just the way I feel about it, but tomorrow is another day."

Iowa did have some strong performances in the round as No. 8 seed Matt Egeland got Iowa going with a 14-9 decision over Iowa State's Bill Kelly at 118 pounds.

Also Barry Davis (126) — the only former champion in the 348-man field — scored his second technical fall with a three-point near fall in the closing moments of the match over Portland State's Anthony Amado.

"I'm just keeping at it, fighting hard," Davis said after the 20-5 win. "It would have been easy to get the 12-point, but I wanted the 15-point win."

OTHER SECOND-ROUND winners for Iowa included Kevin Dresser, who beat Bruce Swierczewski of Northern Illinois, 14-6. "I take them one at a time," Dresser simply said.

Lindley Kissler, the No. 2 seed at 167, scored a 7-1 decision over Missouri's Doug Anderson. Also Rico Chiapparelli pinned Andy Voit of Penn State at four minutes, 15 seconds at 177 pounds.

No. 1 seed Duane Goldman (190) won by technical fall over Southern Illinois-Edwardsville's Ernie Badger, 21-4 at 7:00.

The Hawkeyes pushed nine wrestlers through the first round as heavyweight Steve Wilbur was the only casualty, losing to Syracuse's Andy Schwab, 7-2.

IOWA FINISHED the preliminary round with 21 1/4 points, while intrastate rival Iowa State, which had eight wrestlers advance, was in second with 21 1/2 points.

Oklahoma was third with 20 1/2, moving eight wrestlers ahead, and Oklahoma State was fourth with 16.

Big Ten Champion Ohio State features two of its players on the first-team all-Big Ten women's basketball team in junior forward/center Francine Lewis and senior guard Yvette Angel.

Representing Northwestern, forward Anucha Browne was honored all-Big Ten for the second-straight year. Browne was the nation's leading scorer this year averaging 30.5 points per game.

Rounding out the first team is Minnesota's forward/center Laura Coenen and Indiana's forward/center Karna Abram. Coenen is the Gophers' all-time leading scorer with 2,044 career points.

Named to second-team all-Big Ten was Iowa forward Lisa Long, Indiana forward Cindy Bumgarner, Illinois center Jonelle Polk, Minnesota forward/center Molly Tadich and Ohio State guard Tracey Hall.

The conference attendance figures also showed Iowa led the league with an average of 5,027 fans per game.

IM cage finals set for Sunday night

The finals of the intramural basketball tournament is tabbed to start Sunday at 7 p.m. with the women's championship game at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The women's game will feature Razzle-Dazzle pitted against Happy Hoopster, which will be followed by the 8 p.m. coed championship game. The finals will commence with the 9 p.m. men's battle between BFD's and Water Boys.

All games will be broadcast live by KRUI.

Ex-Clemson aide will return for trial

ANDERSON, S.C. (UPI) — The third former Clemson University coach indicted for illegally dispensing prescription drugs to athletes says he will return from Canada to face the charges.

Prosecutors had said Wednesday that Jack Harkness, a former graduate assistant strength coach, told the State Law Enforcement Division he would remain at his Ontario home and would not face the charges in Pickens County.

But Harkness said in a telephone interview that his message to SLED agent A.Y. Brown must have been misunderstood. The Anderson Independent reported Thursday.

"I will come down later, when I can afford the time off and the time away from here," Harkness told the newspaper, explaining that he recently got a job in a bar and "can't take a chance of losing it."

Harkness is charged with two counts of illegally distributing and two counts of illegally possessing prescription drugs. Each of the misdemeanor charges carries a maximum jail term of 18 months and a $500 fine.

Two of his former colleagues, strength coach Sam Colson and men's track coach Stan Narewski, pleaded guilty Monday to similar charges. Colson was fined $2,000 and given a three-year probation, while Narewski was fined $750 and placed on one year probation. Both men also were ordered to perform community service work for their local YMCA.

Star downhill skier Klammer retires

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Austria's Franz Klammer, who won five World Cup championships and carved one of the great, gold-medal runs in Olympic skiing history, has decided to retire from competitive skiing, his agent said Thursday.

Ernestus Schnabler, Klammer's agent for the United States, said the world ski star had become concerned the last few years over his advancing age and decided that the 1984-85 season would be his last on the World Cup circuit.

"Last summer, Franz decided he was getting older and would turn his efforts toward promoting his sportswear," Schnabler said in a telephone interview from Las Vegas. "We planned to make the announcement all along in Las Vegas because we are introducing his line of skiwear there."

Klammer, 31, will unveil his sportswear line at the international ski show beginning in Las Vegas this weekend. His agent said Klammer would officially announce his retirement at a press conference Friday night.

"There has been a lot of speculation in the European press this year about Franz," the agent said. "However, he has chosen not to comment on his future until now."

St. Louis center Wickenheiser out for season

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Center Doug Wickenheiser, struck by a car Wednesday night while boarding a St. Louis Blues team bus, underwent surgery for ligament damage to his left knee Thursday and is out for the season.

A spokesman for the hockey club said the surgery was performed by Dr. Jerome Gilden, the team's orthopedic surgeon, at Jewish Hospital. Wickenheiser scored 23 goals and 20 assists. No charges were filed against the driver.

The Blues last year traded for Wickenheiser, a No. 1 draft choice of the Montreal Canadiens in 1980, giving up Perry Turnbull. St. Louis also obtained Greg Paslawski and Gilbert Delorme in the deal that has been regarded as one of the finest in the team's history.

Water Boys slip by Image Depot, 48-45

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

The Water Boys want to challenge the Iowa women's basketball attendance record at the intramural championships Sunday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"We want to pack out Carver, we have dream," Water Boys' Kerry Burt said after his team slipped by Image Depot, 48-45, in the semifinals of the men's tournament.

Maybe the arena should be packed as tight as it was when Iowa set the record against Ohio State in February if the teams in the finals play the same way as they did Thursday night in the Field House.

The thriller of the night was the battle between Water Boys and Image Depot in one of the men's game. Water Boys' Devon Mitchell nailed a three-point jump shot from the corner with six seconds left in overtime to seal a 48-45 victory for his team.

WATER BOYS, the dorm bracket winner, led 21-13 at the half after Bob Schmitt scored seven of his 13 points in three minutes, 30 seconds. But Image Depot was not going to give up just yet.

Todd Speer and Tom Gillis led the Image Depot attack and narrowed the deficit to three points with 3:41 left. Image Depot's determination paid off when they took a 40-39 lead with 31 seconds left on Gillis' shot from the key.

Jay Norvell gave Water Boys a second chance at winning after he hit the second free throw of a two shot foul with 27 seconds left.

And Mitchell's shot, as well as Kevin Harmon's free throw, saved the day for Water Boys after trailing 45-44. "As it came off my hands I knew that it was going in," Mitchell said. "We didn't know that they were that good. They caught us off guard, they have a lot of intensity."

"THIS WAS ONLY our second loss of the year," Image Depot's Tim Minor said. "We lost our first game in the pre-holiday tournament and then won 15 straight. We had some bad shooting and were cold in the first half. We just came up one short."

Sigma Chi fell short to BFD's in the other men's semifinal game, 37-35. BFD's were ahead 21-17 at the half and kept the lead the rest of the second half, despite distractions at their basket by some Sigma Chi fans.

"Their fans had no effect on us, in fact, we like that kind of stuff," BFD's Don Fluker said after scoring 18 points in the game.

"It was a good tough game and they kept coming at us, they never gave up. They almost caught us when we became complacent near the end," Fluker said.

IN THE WOMEN'S semifinal game played Thursday, Razzle Dazzle disposed of Radiators, 33-22, as Razzle Dazzle's Carol Bruggeman burned the bottom of the nets with 19 points.

"Tonight we were just hitting them," Bruggeman said. "I got a lot of lay-ups and that's because of our tough defense. They really hustled and that made the shots easy."

Razzle Dazzle fell behind 6-0 and then came up with four straight baskets to take a 10-6 lead at halftime, a lead they held for the rest of the game.

sixth-year Buckeye coach. "If we have a good meet, we have a good chance of winning it."

Cox added his team has the capability this season to finish among the top six teams at the NCAA meet.

Michigan State will be another strong contender for the title this weekend. The Spartans won the title five-straight years before being unseated by Ohio State in 1983. Last season the Spartans finish third. Michigan State is currently ranked 14th in the country.

"We're gunning for this meet, but everybody is going into this meet to win," Kasavana said.

Kasavana gives Ohio State a slight edge over the other seven teams because they are the defending champions, but with all eight teams competing at the same time, Kasavana said any team could win the meet.

MINNESOTA, THE runner-up at last year's conference meet is ranked 16th in the country this season and Kasavana expects the Gophers will also be tough at the conference meet.

The Hawkeyes are hoping to improve on last season's eighth-place finish, Chapela said. Iowa has competed against five of the Big Ten teams this season and Chapela believes her squad is as good as those five competitors.

"Our gymnasts have worked hard and are well-prepared mentally and physically," the Iowa coach said. "I feel very confident in our ability to do well in the meet."

Consistency will be the Hawkeyes' strategy for success in the meet, Chapela said. "If we continue with our game plan we've been focusing on, win, lose or draw; whatever place we finish up in we'll feel proud and pleased."

The team competition is Friday night and the gymnasts will compete for individual titles Saturday. Wendy Hussar and Stephanie Smith are two of the Hawkeyes best chances to place in the individual competition.

Ohio State's Stokes, Taylor combine to stop Cyclones

OKLA., Okla. (UPI) — If and when Ohio State is eliminated from the NCAA Tournament this month, Coach Gordon Miller will have tears in his eyes. And it won't be because his Big Ten Buckeyes failed to win the national championship.

The tears will be for the departure of senior guards Ronnie Stokes and Troy Taylor. Their importance to the Buckeyes was magnified Thursday when they combined for 38 points to lead Ohio State to a 75-64 NCAA Midwest subregional victory over Iowa State.

Stokes and Taylor have been teammates for eight seasons — four at McKinley High in Canton, four more at Ohio State — and probably play as comfortably together as any backcourt combination in the nation. Taylor is a three-year starter, Stokes a two-year starter and they have taken the Buckeyes to the three straight NCAA tournaments.

"I DON'T EVEN want to think about that (their graduation) now," Miller said. "This is the end of an era. When they take their uniforms off for the last time, I'm going to cry."

Stokes scored 21 points and Taylor 17 as the Big Ten Buckeyes improved their record to 20-9 and advanced to the second round Saturday. Barry Stevens scored 24 points to pace Iowa State, which finished the season 21-13.

Iowa State trailed by two points at halftime, 39-37, and got a basket by Jeff Grayer and a free throw by Jeff Hornacek to pull within one, 41-40, with 17 minutes, 40 seconds remaining. But Stokes converted a three-point play 14 seconds later to send Ohio State on a 10-2 charge that gave the Buckeyes their biggest lead of the game, 51-42.

STEVENS SCORED 10 points over the next 10 minutes as the Cyclones trailed 65-58 with 4:39 remaining. But Iowa State went the next three minutes without scoring and did not hit a basket until the final 30 seconds when both teams had filled the court with reserves.

Stokes, who scored 13 points in the second half, had a basket and four free throws in the final three minutes to spoil Iowa State's first NCAA Tournament appearance in 41 years.

ment appearance in 41 years. Grayer chipped in 21 points for the Big Eight Cyclones and Brad Sellers had 14 for the Buckeyes, a third-place finisher during the Big Ten season and the No. 4 seed in the Midwest.

Ohio State's 7-foot center Sellers scored two baskets from the low post and Taylor added six points on perimeter jumpers to give the Buckeyes a 12-4 lead five minutes into the game.

But Iowa State took advantage of a defensive mismatch, posting Stevens low against 6-foot Taylor, and he scored 12 points the rest of the way to help the Cyclones cut the deficit to 39-37 by halftime.

Wimbledon champ McEnroe named top men's tennis player

NEW YORK (UPI) — John McEnroe, ever the patriot, very much would like to resume playing Davis Cup for the United States. The American team leaders, ever the realists, certainly would welcome his return.

What's the problem? Simply a slip of paper that requires a signature.

"Ideally, I'd like to play," McEnroe said during a quick business trip Thursday to pick up yet another trophy and a check for $10,000. "But I don't really know what the situation is now."

McEnroe was honored as the Seagram Men's Tennis Player of the Year for 1984, a year when he won 13 of 15 tournaments, including the U.S. Open and Wimbledon, and earned a career-high $2,026,109 in prize money.

THE BUG BOTHERING McEnroe in regard to Davis Cup play is the insistence of the team sponsor, Louisiana Pacific, that members of the squad sign a code of conduct promising proper behavior. This code resulted from the team's dismal showing in Gothenburg, Sweden, last December when the United States was routed in the Cup final by Sweden.

McEnroe harshly criticized the condition of the court and the timing of the series (just before Christmas), while teammate Jimmy Connors was fined $2,000 for his court behavior.

"I don't see why I should have to sign it simply because they (the U.S. Tennis Association) were backed into a corner by a sponsor. It's the same set of rules — nothing is different — and I've been going by those rules since I came up. I've fulfilled all my commitments to the team.

"NOW I'M THE bad guy if I don't sign it. It's pretty easy to make me the bad guy in anything, so maybe that's what's going to happen."

When the United States initiated its 1985 campaign last week in Japan, McEnroe and Connors remained home while Eliot Teltscher, Aaron Krickstein, Ken Flach and Robert Seguso earned a 5-0 victory.

"It was a good move for me not to play and to give a couple of other guys a chance," McEnroe said. "You need a total team effort to win the Davis Cup, and playing against Japan was a good chance to test the other players. It would be like padding your record if I played Japan. It would be an easy way to add a couple of victories to my record, but I don't really want to play matches like that."

THE COMPETITION gets a lot tougher now, starting with a second-round series in West Germany in August. Connors isn't expected to return to the team, making it even more important for McEnroe to play. There was friction between the two last year, and Connors' absence would make the situation less trying for McEnroe.

And while McEnroe wants to play, there are obstacles to be overcome.

"There's been a lot of negative feedback about last year," he said. "It's very disappointing and frustrating to see that after seven years (the time he has been a team member). They made it sound like I did crazy things in Sweden, but I didn't. All I did was answer questions people asked me.

"You don't play for the money, so it should be something you enjoy, and I haven't enjoyed it the last couple of years."

McEnroe added, "I'm sure I'll play Davis Cup again before my career is over."

The question remains as to when that will be.

Miami, New Orleans picked to host future Super Bowls

PHOENIX (UPI) — The National Football League Thursday awarded the 1989 Super Bowl to Miami and the 1990 game to New Orleans, the cities which have hosted the most NFL championship games.

By the time the Super Bowl returns to Miami, it will have been absent from that city for 10 years.

The NFL chose to bypass Miami in recent years because of what league owners considered to be the unfit condition of the Orange Bowl, but with a new stadium expected to be ready in time for the 1989 game the league chose to return to Florida.

"Joe Robbie gave up two years of his life and time away from his family to spearhead the move to build this stadium," said New England Patriots owner Bill Sullivan. "It would have been a great shame if our partners had not recognized that."

IT WILL BE the sixth Super Bowl for Miami and the seventh for New Orleans. The Miami game will be played on Jan. 22, 1989 with the New Orleans game taking place on Jan. 28, 1990.

Next year's game will also be played in the Louisiana Superdome, the 1987 game will be in Pasadena, Calif., and the 1988 affair in San Diego.

Although there was sentiment to select a site for the 25th Super Bowl in 1991, no action was taken. Much of the feeling ran toward holding that year's game in a northern domed stadium.

"This is a national game," said Minnesota Vikings executive vice president Mike Lynn. "It isn't just a game that should be held in Florida, California and Louisiana.

"THERE WAS A lot of feeling that every six or seven years at least the game should be held in the north.

"As people started talking about it, it became obvious they were talking about Minnesota."

"Joe Robbie gave up two years of his life and time away from his family to spearhead the move to build this stadium," says New England Patriots owner Bill Sullivan. "It would have been a great shame if our partners had not recognized that."

Robbie said ground would be broken for the new stadium in June with completion expected in time for the 1987 season at a cost of $90 million.

It will hold 73,000 fans for football and can be converted into a 50,000-seat baseball facility.

"In addition to being a great football stadium, this stadium is going to be the forerunner of having major-league baseball in south Florida," Robbie said. "We expect to sell all of our season tickets within six weeks after they go on sale."

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said league owners did not appear concerned by the fact they awarded the game to a stadium that has yet to be built.

They did so in the 1970's, giving Super Bowl IX to the Superdome only to wind up playing it at Tulane Stadium.

"We don't anticipate that happening," said Rozelle. "But if it did happen the 1989 game would be played in the Orange Bowl."

Rozelle said Tampa was the runner-up for both the 1989 and 1990 games.

Miami's Kosar gives up eligibility; will be available for NFL draft

NILES, Ohio (UPI) — Bernie Kosar, who established several school passing records and helped engineer a national championship, said Thursday he would make himself available for the April NFL draft, foregoing two more years of eligibility at the University of Miami.

"This has been a hot issue over the last couple of months," Kosar, 21, told a news conference in Niles. "It's been kind of a curse on my life. The time is right for me to continue my growth as a quarterback and as a person in the NFL."

Kosar, visiting his nearby Boardman, Ohio, home during spring break, had two years of college eligibility left, although he is scheduled to graduate in June with a degree in finance.

HE DECIDED TO end his college career and enter the April 30th draft because "I think it's best for all concerned and (the decision) can let the University of Miami go on with their program."

Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson has been "very supportive in helping me through this ordeal," Kosar said. "He expected it (Kosar's decision) to a degree."

The Cleveland Browns are Kosar's first choice, although he said no team has contacted him yet.

Bernie Kosar

"I'm very home-oriented," he said. "I'd like nothing better than to stay close to my family and play in Cleveland. The situation is so perfect to come home and play for Cleveland. That really excites me."

Cleveland, however, would have to trade up for a higher first-round choice in order to get Kosar. The Buffalo Bills had the No. 1 draft choice, but signed defensive lineman Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech.

THE HOUSTON Oilers have the No. 2 choice, but are reportedly not interested in a quarterback. The Minnesota Vikings, who recently hired Hurricane quarterback coach Marc Trestman as an assistant coach, draft next.

"In the words of my dad, (Minnesota is) a 'viable option,'" Kosar said.

The USFL might be an option if nothing works out in the NFL, he said, but added, "I'm taking this one step at a time. Too many variables can pop up."

He said he was not interested in staying in college to try and top former Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie's records, but said he had been told by some agents he was worth at least as much as the highly-paid Flutie, now with the USFL's New Jersey Generals, in the pros.

Kosar finished fourth to Flutie in this year's Heisman Trophy balloting. He played two seasons for Miami after redshirting one year. He led the Hurricanes to a 12-1 record and the national championship two seasons ago, but the Hurricanes stumbled, last season and finished 8-5.

Former close friends Holmes, Bey exchange insults prior to title fight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — When the fight was announced many months ago, heavyweight champion Larry Holmes and challenger David Bey seemed to have a sincere friendship.

"He's a nice guy," Holmes had said. "After the fight I want to be his friend and want him to be my friend."

"He's a great champion," Bey responded.

That friendship has ended. Thursday morning, when the two met at their weigh-in for Friday night's title fight, there were angry words. Not the hyped-up angry words that Cassius Clay made so popular in the early 60s. Real angry words.

Holmes, who weighed 223 1-2 pounds, and Bey, who weighed 233 1-4, have a relationship now that's as cordial as that between a hungry rattlesnake and a lame mouse.

THE ANGER surfaced at their final press conference when Bey was asked about cuts he sustained in his last fight, a victory over Greg Page.

"I got cut because I went swimming before the fight and my skin was soft," he offered.

"You're going to bleed, but not because of swimming," Holmes responded. "You're going to bleed because you're a half-breed."

The likeable, 28-year-old Bey, the son of a black father and white mother, nearly erupted. Holmes had issued the same taunt Bey had endured as a youngster growing up in the misnamed Nicetown section of Philadelphia.

"Larry, you're old and senile," a seething Bey told the champion. "I'd fight you for nothing."

HOLMES, 46-0, now the International Boxing Federation champion who has said this will be his final fight — he would join Rocky Marciano as the only heavyweights to retire undefeated — tried Thursday to bring his remark about Bey out of the gutter.

"I said he's a half-breed, and it's true," Holmes said. "And it's true that light-skinned people bleed easier than dark-skinned people. It's a fact. I just pointed that fact out and was telling everyone that David Bey is going to get cut up against me."

Holmes has been installed as a 4-1 favorite in the scheduled 15-round bout, his 18th title defense. A champion of the division for seven years with a perfect record would seemingly be an even heavier favorite against the relatively untested, 14-0 Bey.

BUT THE BETTING line reflects the growing belief that Holmes, at age 35 with sometimes rubbery legs and coming off several lackluster performances, could be ripe for a beating against a powerful, gummy challenger such as Bey.

"This is my time right now," Bey said. "I think Larry will be an easier target than Greg Page was."

"This is his time to go."

The fight, to be shown on the Home Box Office cable system, will be held in a specially built 6,000-seat arena in the parking lot of the Riviera Hotel.

Hot bats keep veterans in baseball

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Lots of baseball players will head back to the minor leagues this spring. Because they can't hit.

Many of them can run, a few can field, and most, if not all of them, wish like crazy they could stay in the major leagues.

But they can't. Because they can't hit. Now George Brett, he can hit. When he returned from injury with a three-hit game last year, Kansas City manager Dick Howser marveled at him.

"George Brett can flat-out hit," Howser said.

This lengthy preamble is by way of introducing two people who, in Howser's words, can "flat-out hit."

One is Al Oliver. The other is Tony Perez.

Oliver is with the Los Angeles Dodgers now. They got him from the Phillies for right-hander Pat Zachry. The Dodgers want his bat so much, they may even put him in left field, where he hasn't exactly been a fixture the last few years.

WHEN ASKED WHY he acquired Oliver, Los Angeles personnel man Al Campanis said, "Because he can hit."

As for Perez, his situation is different. He's not even sure he'll make the club. If he does, it will be as a pinch hitter and reserve first baseman. And part of the reason will be player-manager Pete Rose's admiration for him.

In his prime, Tony Perez could certainly hit.

That's why it was a treat to meet the two aging hitters at an intra-squad game between the Dodgers and the Reds at Al Lopez field.

It was fun talking to them — about hitting.

"IT'S MENTAL," said Oliver, 38 years old and owner of a .306 lifetime batting average. "I don't think there are many players who came to the majors with less ability than me. They get up here and they wonder if they belong."

"Now the people I played with, (Pittsburgh Pirates) Richie Hebner, Manny Sanguillen, Bob Robertson, and Dave Cash, we always felt we belonged."

Perez always had the knack of driving in runs. He said it came from taking advantage of the pitcher's plight.

"If I come up with the bases loaded and no one out, who's in trouble," he asked rhetorically. "When you're in trouble, you make mistakes. Everyone does. When I got that mistake, I hit it. When the game is on the line, you can wait for a pitch."

MANY PEOPLE WILL remember his performance in the 1975 World Series, when Perez hit a three-run homer off Boston's Bill Lee to pull Cincinnati into a 3-3 tie in the seventh game.

Joe Morgan then won the game with a broken-bat hit.

Perez said he homered off a slow curve and that Lee had previously thrown him two such pitches in the Series.

backs' lead to 52-48 with 5:30 remaining.

Arkansas then continued to build the lead as Iowa was forced to send the Razorbacks to the free-throw line in the final few minutes of the game.

"I'm pressing a bit early on and we made some changes in the second half that helped our inside game," Kleine said. "In the second half we hit some big shots. I wasn't worried when Iowa got a lead but I was worried before the ballgame because I knew Iowa was a good team."

In the first half Iowa started very slowly but finally got moving when guard Todd Berkenpas fired in six-straight points to give the Hawkeyes a 22-14 lead with 8:11 remaining in the first half.

BERKENPAS, WHO hasn't seen much playing time lately, scored 10 points in the first half and finished with 16 to lead the Hawkeyes in scoring.

"I thought that Todd (Berkenpas) played very well," Raveling said. "I think that Berkenpas has played well the last four or five games and I certainly don't think he has let us down."

Iowa's largest lead of 12 points, 30-18, came with 4:39 remaining in the half.

Arkansas fought back to cut the lead to 31-26 but Iowa held the ball for the final two minutes in the first half enabling the Hawkeyes to take the last shot of the half. Iowa capitalized on the opportunity and increased the lead to 33-26 when Wright hit a jump shot from the left baseline with three seconds remaining.

"WE ALWAYS BELIEVE unless you just get blown out that you got a chance to come back," Sutton said. "We're always advocating that if you keep your poise and just keep playing hard, and we did that when we had our opportunities, we made the big run."

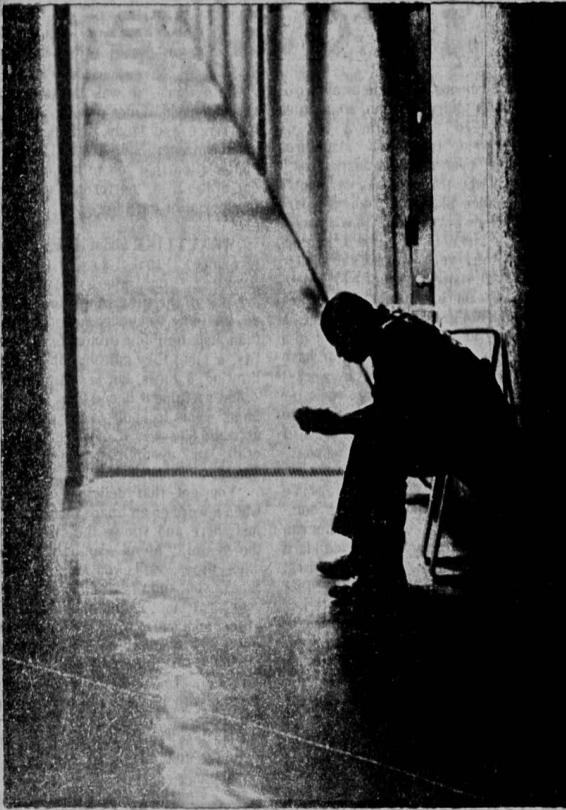

The big run started when Iowa was holding a 39-30 lead early in the second half. Arkansas came up with a four-point play as Kleine hit a jumper with a foul called on Wright away from the ball.

Kevin Rehl then hit a jumper on the inbounds pass to cut Iowa's lead to five with 17:01 remaining. The Razorbacks kept coming at the Hawkeyes and took the lead for the first time, on two free throws from William Mills, since the score was 10-8 early in the first half.

Iowa finishes the season with a 21-11 record while Arkansas moves to 22-12 and earns the right to play the No. 3-ranked St. John's Redmen in a nationally televised contest Saturday afternoon.

Iowa's Ken Fullard sits in silence in the hallway outside of the Iowa locker room after the Hawkeyes 63-54 loss to Arkansas in the first round of the NCAA tournament Thursday afternoon. The senior guard saw no action in his last appearance as a Hawkeye.

points, while Charles Rayne added 12 and Ed Coe 10 as Temple improved its record to 25-5.

For Virginia Tech, 20-9, Del Curry scored 13 points, followed by Keith Colbert with 11 and Perry Young with 10.

Tony Hargraves of Iona missed the second of a pair of foul shots with three seconds left, allowing No. 17 Loyola (Ill.) to escape in its return to NCAA Tournament play with a 59-58 decision over the Gaels.

With Loyola leading 59-57 and Iona rallying furiously in the final minute, Hargraves was fouled on a shot from the lane.

THE 6-FOOT-4 senior made the first free throw with Loyola then calling timeout. Hargraves was short on his second attempt and covered his face with his hands.

For No. 13 Kansas, Calvin Thompson scored 12 points to lead a balanced scoring attack.

For Auburn, Chuck Person scored 20 points and freshman Chris Morris added 19, including the go-ahead free throw with 14 seconds left.

The Jayhawks, 26-7, forced Ohio, 22-8, into several scoring droughts. Ron Kellogg and Greg Dreiling each scored 10 points while Danny Manning added 9 for the Jayhaws.

Purdue had a chance to win, but James Bullock's eight-foot turn-around jump shot with three seconds left was no good. Auburn held on for its 21st win against 11 losses.

PURDUE, WHICH ENDED its season 20-9, was led by freshman Troy Lewis with 19, 17 in the second half while Steve Reid added 18, 14 in the first half.

North Carolina used 25 points from Brad Daugherty and 18 from Joe Wolf to rally past Middle Tennessee State after being tied at halftime. Middle Tennessee State hung tough in the first half but the size and strength of Coach Dean Smith's crew was too much in the second half.

Robert Godbolt had 17 points and eight rebounds, Willie Simmons 13 points and 10 rebounds and reserve forward Willie Bland 16 points and four rebounds to go along with Karl Malone's nine points and 10 rebounds as No. 8 Louisiana Tech thrashed Pitt.

THE BULLDOGS GOT out to an 11-2 start, and was on the way to its 12th straight victory. Darryl Shepperd scored 18 to pace Pitt, which closed the season 17-12.

The Bulldogs led 37-20 at halftime and increased the advantage to as many as 36 points in the second half to improve their record to 28-2.

For St. John's, Walter Berry scored 24 points and grabbed 13 rebounds. Seven-foot center Bill Wennington scored 23 points and All-America guard Chris Mullin added 21 for the top-seed in the West, 28-3.

Donevin Hoskins led Southern with 17 points while Byron Gabriel had 13 and Glenn Dedmon added 12.

The Jaguars, 19-11, never led in the game and tied the score only once, 6-6. St. John's pulled out to a 34-18 halftime lead as the Redmen held Southern to 26.7 percent shooting performance in the opening period.

The Jaguars never got closer than nine points in the second half.

Action continues today with four games at four other sites throughout the nation.

Hawkeyes ready for final dual

By Brad Zimanek

Minus star Dan Bachman, the Iowa men's gymnastics team will be heading to its final dual meet of the season against Northern Illinois this weekend.

The meet will help the Hawkeyes prepare for the Big Ten Championships to be held March 23-24 in Minneapolis, Minn.

Bachman will be in Montreal, Canada, to compete in international competition with both Canada and France. Iowa Coach Tom Dunn characterizes the meet as a pre-World Championship event.

Gymnastics

"I'm starting to really get ready both mentally and physically, so I just have to go out there and hit my best," Bachman said.

"THEY HAD THE USA Cham-ionships in June and I was ranked 24th in the country at the time," he added. "After the Olympics they wanted to send their Olympic team to this meet out in Canada but since most of those guys are making a lot of money they started going down the line to find guys who could compete in this and it happened that they got down to me and I'll be going."

THE MEET AT Northern Illinois will be a good opportunity for Dunn to look at some other gymnasts with Bachman at the triangular meet in Canada.

"We'll be looking for a win primarily. We won't be quite looking for the score we had (last) week because Dan Bachman will be competing in Montreal at the same time," Dunn said.

"We want to continue to be consistent in the performance of our routines," he added. "We'll obviously be able to look at one or two extra people. We still haven't decided finally on our Big Ten line-up."

Monk startles with innovative art

By John Voland
Staff Writer

ANYTIME A GIVEN artist reaches the plateau of two full decades as an active contributor to her/his field, the tendency is to follow after Whitman and cast a glance backward over traveled roads.

Leave it to Meredith Monk to shatter that comfortable proposition, as she has done to so many others in her 20-odd-year career, when her Retrospective Concert of music, film and very modern dance sets itself into Hancher Auditorium at 8 tonight.

As one on the vanguard of performance art in the United States, Monk has no intention of taking it easy (at the ripe old age of 40, give or take a year) and resting on her considerable laurels.

According to her philosophy, the work you're doing is only as fresh as the thing you're working on now. And that means keeping a fresh eye on the art form and your own work in it.

"Performance art differs from theater, say, in that theater has many professionals working on their individual territories, each doing their individual things very expertly," Monk said during a recent telephone interview from her base in New York City. "Performance art is more like enlightened amateurism, because it gives you a chance to realize as fully as possible an individual work ... everybody tries hard to keep the flexibility."

THAT KIND OF sensory flexibility is something Monk demands from her audiences as well. Her 1972 "epic opera," Vessel, was tangentially about the life of Joan of Arc, and it happened in a parking lot, a New York loft and a garage, with the audience moving from place to place between acts.

But while her work incorporates audience presence, as a conscious formative strategy, Monk says she doesn't feel comfortable with the notion of letting the whole work go into the air and become completely aleatory or improvisational. The shape of the work remains indubitably Monkish, and that's the way she likes it.

"My stuff never has that rigid control, but then it isn't completely improvised, either," she said, "I've never been too interested in complete improvisation.

"When I was working on Vessel, if you were in the audience you'd hear a lot of extraneous noise and be aware of other stuff going on, but sometimes that would allow in a lot of transparency. It let my structures breathe — even laugh at themselves."

For all the transparency of Monk's performance pieces — audiences are usually very aware that she is actively changing and challenging their perceptions — she is very aware of the need to ground her visions in the world that all of us walk on, eat and breathe.

"I ALWAYS WANT to have a grounding in reality," Monk said in a 1972 interview. "I always need to have something that grounds (the works) because some images I use are so far away from reality, and I am trying to deal with simultaneous realities. So I try to make as much contrast as possible."

Monk came from a creative household — her mother was a commercial singer and her grandfather ran a music school — and got the standard musical training as a child. Her first inkling of the cross-culturalism that would later absorb her came with her exposure to Dalko's Eurhythmics, a technique of teaching musicians to relate physically to musical rhythms.

"It was a very exciting find," she said with a laugh. "I began to express myself by bopping around. My mom said, 'Maybe this way she'll learn to walk or something.'"

From there, it was increasing involvement in dance (work at Sarah Lawrence and study with San Francisco choreographer Ann Halprin) and composition that led to her becoming one of the first "performance artists" to emerge in the 1970s.

"WHAT I LIKE about the term (performance) is that it so well describes the things I do," Monk said. "People ask me all the time what I am, what I do, and now I can say something else than just stumbling around for an identity, a label they can use. It's a little limiting, I guess, but very useful."

And usefulness is one trait Meredith Monk wants to apply to her own work as well: She sees it most certainly as craft, and disciplines herself accordingly.

"You get that delicious sensation when a word or an image comes ... it's just there and you're the distributor, the vessel," Monk explained. "Then other times, well, you have to make shoes, you know? You have to keep your craft up. That's what gets you through the times when the bell doesn't ring. And when it does ring, you're ready to do something well."

Tickets for Monk's appearance tonight with her collaborative group, The House, are priced at $15, $12.50 and $10 ($2 less for UI students) and are available at the Hancher box office.

Jazz Tap Ensemble comes to Hancher

The San Francisco-based Jazz Tap Ensemble will kick up its heels and do the "Shim Sham Shimmy" at 3 p.m. Sunday in Hancher Auditorium.

The JTE blends two distinctively American art forms, tap dancing and jazz music, capitalizing on the infectious rhythm they share. Music by Duke Ellington, Duke Jordan, Freddie Hubbard, Thelonious Monk and the group's own musicians, pianist Jeffrey Colella, percussionist Jerry Kalaf and bassist Eric Von Essen, provide the beat. Dancers Lynn Dally, Linda Sohl-Donnell and Fred Strickler then take that beat and improvise their own choreography, using not only their feet, but their hands, knees, thighs, sides, chests and cheeks as well.

Since its Los Angeles debut in 1979, the JTE has danced its way across America and Europe in the tradition of tap dance masters like Bill "Bojangles" Robinson and Charles "Honi" Coles. The group has learned a lot from these master toe-tappers, particularly from Coles, who brought to the group his version of the "Shim Sham Shimmy," a step that dates back to the 1930s and is considered "The National Anthem of Tap Dance." Coles' version features a step where the legs and feet shoot sideways.

AS A TRIBUTE to its master, the group performs a variation of the shim sham in a piece they titled "Jammin' with Honi." They performed the work with Coles in three standing-room only performances at the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C., in 1982.

"Blues Suite," a work with choreography by Dally and music by Colella and Tom Dannenberg, is performed by Strickler in a trench coat and wide-brimmed hat onto an eerily lit stage resembling a dark alley. Other numbers in the JTE repertoire are "Night in Tunisia," a work just premiered on the group's spring tour, with choreography by Dally and music by Dizzy Gillespie; and "Caravan," choreographed by Dally to the music of Duke Ellington.

Tickets for the Sunday performance of the Jazz Tap Ensemble are available at the Hancher box office and cost $12, $9.50, $7.50 and $5 for the general public and $9.60, $7.50, $5.50, $4 and $3 for UI students, senior citizens and persons 18 and under.

The appearance of the Jazz Tap Ensemble is supported by Affiliated State Arts Agencies of the Upper Midwest with funds from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Alligator records promotes blues

By Alex Wilding-White
Staff Writer

High Compression. James Cotton. Alligator.
Nightflight. Fenton Robinson. Alligator.
Bad. Son Seals. Alligator.

WHEN PRODUCER Bruce Iglauer formed Alligator Records in the early 1970s, his main intention was to record and provide at least nominal exposure for a new generation of black blues musicians. "Hidden in the big city ghettos and the small rural towns of the Deep South," Iglauer once wrote, "these musicians remain almost unknown because most major record companies would rather record their white imitators, and the smaller labels they record for (if they record at all) can't afford to promote them."

Iglauer's work over the last ten years has not only done much to correct this situation but has had no small part in a mild revival of interest in the blues, as seen by the pop successes of George Thorogood and Stevie Ray Vaughn. The careers of many of the artists on the label (Koko Taylor, Mighty Joe Young, Lonnie Brooks, Albert Collins and Sonny Terry, to name a few) have received a much-needed boost because of the label's steadily increasing market.

Alligator has also been in the center of controversy among long-standing blues fans. A recurring criticism has been that many of these musicians have watered down their music with gimmicks from rock and pop in an attempt to reach a wider audience, leaving straight blues, in all its gritty appeal, to die a slow death.

THE BLUES, HOWEVER, more so than probably any other form of music, rely on feeling, and the recorded work of Alligator's artists has clearly shown a strong attachment to the feeling of the blues. These artists realize not only that the music cannot survive without some changes in form, but also that rock music has ripped off their art for too long and that the time has come to take some of it back. And rock audiences need to know where it all came from in the first place.

Records

The label's three latest releases show the vitality, energy and invention that have come to characterize contemporary blues. Best known as the harmonica player with Muddy Waters, James Cotton can blow up a storm big enough to knock over the Sears Tower and he has garnered a well-deserved reputation as one of the premier blues performers. High Compression, Cotton's first release in several years, is unquestionably the best-produced record of his career, with several tracks highlighting his powerful and unique style of playing as never before.

Cotton plays with two different line-ups here, the James Cotton Chicago Blues All-Stars, which emphasizes the traditional Chicago blues sound, and the James Cotton Band, which uses elements of funk, soul, and rock within the classic 12-bar structure.

THE FORMER GETS its chops in on "23 Hours Too Long", which features some fine rolling-and-tumbling guitar work from Magic Slim and Cotton's rasping and warbling vocals, and on the up-tempo instrumental title track, in which Cotton & Co. show their deep respect for their roots.

The latter take those "good ol' blues" and make them sound brand new with a host of contemporary tricks, such as thumb-snap bass licks, funky keyboard work, and crisp horn arrangements. "Superharp," which boogies to a rock solid beat, is one fine example of this, as is "Ain't Doin' Too Bad," which is powered by an infectious drums-and-horns hook.

The only problem with High Compression, as has been the case with many earlier albums, is that it just does not stack up to one of Cotton's gigs. Cotton has the ability in concert to leave his audience literally in a daze. Now that he is recording for a sympathetic label, Cotton should work towards a "live" album for his next release.

Although he is not a big seller, guitarist Fenton Robinson has been a major figure among blues players and fans for over 20 years. His two previous Alligator records, Somebody Loan Me A Dime and I Hear Some Blues Downstairs, have been well received and garnered a solid following for his warm, jazz-flavored guitar stylings and his high-and-crying vocal delivery.

ROBINSON'S PLAYING on Nightflight deviates little from past efforts (one track, "Laundry Man," sounds an awful lot like "Somebody Loan Me A Dime"), but his ability to appeal straight to the heart makes this only a minor quibble.

"I Found Out Yesterday," with its steadily paced lines and chord fills, "I Lost My True Love," with its inventive opening figure, and the title track, which features a catchy pop-style unison melody and a fat, Hammond B-3 organ sound, will all undoubtedly go down as instant classics with Robinson's fans. Robinson may not have changed much, but he's one of the few musicians who doesn't need too.

The one musician who probably best epitomizes the blues-rock fusion stylings of late has been guitarist Son Seals. Seals' development over the last 12 years and four albums has been nothing short of amazing. His singing, playing, arrangements and production on his 1972 debut album and 1980's Chicago Fire differ so much, they sound as if they were not done by the same musician.

HIS FIFTH LP for Alligator, Bad Axe, presents further changes in Seals' music, but in subtler ways. The only obvious change from Fire is the absence of the horn section that lent depth to the arrangements. Seals' songwriting style is more or less the same, only it lacks the hooks many of his previous tunes have had.

Because his songs are not the album's strong point, Seals seems to stress the importance of his playing style and he does deliver on this count. The stinging opening figure of "Don't Pick Me For Your Fool," the calm demeanor of his lines on "I Can Count On My Blues," the shuffling swing of his attack on "Person to Person," and the rock-solid feel "Cold Blood" all show Seals developing a firmer grasp on his musical vocabulary and a tighter, more compact sense of phrasing.

Like many of Alligator's recent releases, these three records do much to prove that the blues are a dynamic part of contemporary music. The music of blues musicians has not only stood as a unique musical form, but has been the foundation for so much of what is characteristic of American music in general. With any amount of luck, there will always be a place for the blues in our musical culture.

Final Three Performances

'Sarah Phillips' echoes Lee's youth

By Kate Van Orden
Staff Writer

Sarah Phillips, by Andrea Lee. Random House, New York, 1984.

SARAH PHILLIPS, Andrea Lee — the two names keep getting confused. Andrea Lee wrote Sarah Phillips, a gorgeous first novel, but the names don't really matter, for Lee's voice is clearly and unmistakably reflected in her work.

With an unassuming ease, Lee takes the reader from her Philadelphia home to a Paris seen very much through her own eyes, where she and "scores of Americans were still gamely struggling to cast off kin and convention in a foreign tongue."

"The previous June I had graduated from Harvard, having just turned 21. I was tall and lanky and light-skinned, quite pretty in a nervous sort of way; I came out of college equipped with an unfocused snobbery, vague literary aspirations, and a lively appetite for white boys. When before commencement my father died of a stroke, I found that my lifelong impulse to discard Philadelphia had turned into a loathing of everything that made up my past. And so, with a certain amazement at the ruthless ingenuity that replaced my grief, I left to study French literature in Lausanne, intending to never come back."

SARAH PHILLIPS IS, however, really about return, return to the inexorable past of one's family. For Sarah Phillips, the past is "the hermetic world of the old-fashioned black bourgeoisie — a group largely unknown to other Americans, which has carried on with cautious pomp for years in eastern cities and suburbs, using its considerable funds to attempt poignant imitations of high society, acting with genuine gallantry in the struggle for civil rights, and finally producing a generation of children educated in newly integrated schools and impatient to escape the outworn rituals of their parents." It is in this tone of bemused surety mixed with poignant moments of sheer poetry that Andrea Lee has written a deeply self-reflective, yet not self-involved, novel. It is both entertaining in detail and moving in its inner content.

The way in which the details of daily life are overlaid on the inner life of mind and soul shows a masterful hand at work, and it is no wonder to find that although this is indeed a first novel, much of it has appeared in the New Yorker, a magazine for which Lee is a staff writer.

LIKE SARAH PHILLIPS (she and her protagonist are more than just soul mates), Andrea Lee was born in Philadelphia and received her bachelor's and master's degrees from Harvard University. Her first book, Russian Journal, was nominated for a National Book Award and received the 1984 Jean Stein Award from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

But despite the author's formidable education, the novel never fails to see through the pretensions of seemingly charmed names and places. Paris can be rotten, Harvard banal, and Sarah doesn't rise above it all during these examinations so much as she just moves through the experiences, slightly alienated or perturbed.

This book brims with the pursuits of youth, with a keen eye for fraud, and a zealous and often misdirected hunger for life and truth. The passages opening the novel are full of a desire for the dissolution of her familial ties and middle-class background, but the body of the novel lovingly renders that same past in the light of Lee's greater knowledge, not only depicting the reasons for leaving, but the compelling reasons for return as well. The writing is so strong it is impossible to imagine Sarah Phillips casting away forever all of this which she knows so well. For any who believe one's past, and especially one's childhood, is disposable, Andrea Lee's Sarah Phillips is a must to read.

Shacochis will read short stories from lauded 'Easy in the Islands'

By David Reilly
Special to The Daily Iowan

BOB SHACOCHIS will read from his fiction at 3:30 p.m. today in the English-Philosophy Building Room 304.

Shacochis, a recent graduate of the Writers' Workshop here at the UI, has won Playboy magazine's Best New Fiction Award and is a recipient of a James Michener Award. His book of short stories, Easy in the Islands, is earning strong reviews around the country.

The stories in Easy in the Islands are set among the palm trees, Australian pines, and emerald lagoons of the Caribbean Islands and Florida's Gold Coast. Shacochis spent his time between college degrees roaming the Caribbean and developing a slightly jaded, comic view of the area.

Shacochis draws Paradise as a place of heat-fogged understanding, torpid sensuality and muddled corruption. But it is also a place of lush colors, vibrant and portentous dreams, and air that is "luscious with the smells of spices, of frying coconut oil and garlic and cumin, the scents of frangipani and lime." Even if it is not the case that nothing ever happens here, the heat makes it seem so. The characters are rolled into action by accidents and laughing fates.

Readings

Tillman, the hero of the book's title story, is an American expatriate who owns a dying resort hotel and stores his dead mother in the hotel's refrigerator until the island bureaucracy permits him to bury her. He has learned that "the terms of life in the islands were that nothing ever made sense, unless you were a mystic or a politician, or studied both with ambition."

Shacochis writes with an easy irony that usually turns to comedy before reaching cynicism, but there is an undercurrent of corruption in Easy in the Islands. In these stories, drug dealers support Wall Street, dreams permit the theft of turtles, women are traded for monkeys and revolutions bloom in the heat.

Shacochis was born in Virginia. He received his B.A. in journalism and M.A. in English from the University of Missouri, where he is now a visiting writer in residence. He was a Peace Corps volunteer and received his M.F.A. from the UI. He is currently working on a novel set in the Caribbean.

Today's reading is sponsored by the Writers' Workshop and is free and open to the public.

Lippman brings political songfest

Songwriter David Lippman will appear Monday in a concert sponsored by the Central America Solidarity Committee.

Songwriter David Lippman will appear at 10 S. Gilbert beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday in a concert sponsored by the Central America Solidarity Committee.

The Village Voice has written that Lippman's "style is a cross between Tom Lehrer and the Clash, his politics a blend of Helen Caldicott and Che Guevara." He writes both satirical and serious songs addressing such issues as nuclear war, the draft and the situation in Central America.

Sometimes Lippman also appears as his arch-nemesis George Schrub, a singing agent from the Committee to Intervene Anywhere.

Lippman has recorded several singles on Urgent Records, as well as two album-length cassettes, Comin' on 1981 and 500 Years to the '80s. His songs have also been recorded by Country Joe MacDonald and broadcast on Swedish and Yugoslavian television.

Donations of one dollar are requested from those attending Monday's performance. Beer and refreshments will be served.

'Sure Thing' may fill film-quality gap

By Merwyn Grote
Staff Writer

IF MOVIES ARE to be believed, the modern American male is not a particularly complex creature. He has but a few basic desires in life: to look good; to live in a warm, luxurious climate; to live life in the fast lane; and to have a great car, preferably a Ferrari. In short, he wants to be Tom Selleck.

Also he wants "a sure thing," that is, a purely physical relationship with a tanned and tantalizing sexual plaything who is ready, willing and ever-so able to fulfill his wildest fantasies without effort, without questions, without entanglements, without guilt and preferably without the exchange of money or last names. As desires go, these are pretty glib and superficial. On the other hand, as glib and superficial desires go, they are none too shabby.

And they are none too easily obtained as evidenced by Walter "Gib" Gibson, the young protagonist in Rob Reiner's new comedy, The Sure Thing. Gib is a college student in New England with no car, little money, many sexual frustrations and looks that more resemble Tom Sawyer than Tom Selleck.

Gib has little going for him, but even so, he just might have "a sure thing." His best friend in Southern California has informed him that he has a beautiful and inviting blonde beach bunny waiting for him who is there for the asking. All Gib has to do is come on out and get her over Christmas break.

GIB, HOWEVER, has two problems: (1) "So. Cal" is 3000 miles away (although this is admittedly a small distance to travel for "a sure thing") and (2) Alison Bradbury. In his sexual frustrations, Gib made the mistake of making a move on Alison, a corduroy-clad woman who is a compulsive note-taker, and it led to one of the more disastrous social encounters in his life.

When he signs on to ride to California with a couple of hopelessly cheerful Yuppies in a Volvo, Gib discovers that he must share the back seat with Alison, who is headed West to see her fiancé. Gib and Alison hate each other. Their animosity increases as they travel out of New England and reaches its peak somewhere in the Midwest. The no-longer-cheerful Yuppies abandon them somewhere in the heartland, and they are forced to fend for themselves all the rest of the way to L.A. Naturally, they fall in love.

The Sure Thing is an update of the old road pictures where a hopelessly mismatched couple learns about love and each other through adverse circumstances. It is a light and airy, but nonetheless enjoyable little comedy about opposites attracting and discovering love for the first time.

This is Reiner's second film, following the wickedly straight-faced but pointed satire of This is Spinal Tap, the mock documentary about a decaying heavy metal rock band. If nothing else, The Sure Thing shows off Reiner's versatility by letting him harness his more outrageous impulses in favor of more intimate and tender humor and sentiments.

WHILE THE FILM does display some of the more sexist attitudes of the current barrage of teenage sex comedies, Reiner undercuts this with a romantic and slightly satirical approach. It is more romantic comedy than sex comedy.

Reiner gets especially nice work out of his cast, right down to the various bit players. Viveca Lindfors has a some nice moments as one of Gib and Alison's professors, who advises her students to loosen up and live a little. Tim Robbins and Lisa Jane Persky are marvelous scene stealers as the slow burning Yuppies. And despite being billed as "the sure thing," Nicolette Sheridan is not portrayed as a condescending stereotype, but is allowed to display a sweet amiability in her few scenes. Only Boyd Gaines as Alison's boyfriend disappoints as he plays his nerdy role too stereotypically. He is just too much of a jerk to be believed.

The surest things about The Sure Thing, however, are the lead performances by the two young stars, John Cusack and Daphne Zuniga. The two actors pull off the remarkable feat of being utterly obnoxious, while at the same time being totally likable. Cusack's Gib is the type of kid who spends his time memorizing scenes from "Saturday Night Live" and dialogue from Bill Murray movies. He is not nearly as hip as he thinks he is. His vulnerability shows through, making him also a nicer person than he would admit to being.

Zuniga has a trickier role because she has to evolve convincingly from a somewhat repressed preppe to a warm and adventurous young woman, but she manages to make her sometimes impulsive behavior seem credible. She has a nice rapport with Gib, which is vital to film, since the whole premise hinges on their interplay.

Admittedly, The Sure Thing is lightweight material, almost of TV movie quality. Even so it is very entertaining. The Sure Thing might not actually be a sure thing, but it will do until something better comes along.

'True Crime' stretches mystery genre

By Kelly McNertney
Staff Writer

True Crime by Max Allan Collins. St. Martin's Press, 1985.

MYSTERY FICTION writers have a new model: Max Allan Collins' concept of the historical novel. With his first such novel, True Detective, he may have created a genre; mystery scholars Robert Baker and Michael Nietzal called the book "the best historical novel ever written."

True Crime is the new sequel to True Detective, and it appears it may outdo its predecessor's success. The book is a stunningly detailed glimpse into the Chicago of 1934, a world of policemen as corrupt as the gangsters they admonish, and of politicians and bureaucrats more eager to serve themselves than the public.

Detective Nate Heller, the only fictional character in the book, deals with such historical figures as gangsters Frank Nitti,

Books

Baby Face Nelson and the Barker boys; FBI G-man Melvin Purvis; and attorney Louis Piquett, while he entangles himself in the historical mystery about John Dillinger's death.

HELLER IS A tough-talking but honest ex-cop, whose conscience has driven him out of the hearts and the company of corrupt Chicago policemen. While investigating a seemingly innocent case, he becomes unintentionally involved in the cloudy FBI shooting of a man believed to be Dillinger in front of the Chicago's Biograph Theater. Heller's suspicions about the real identity of the dead man are quieted by what he learns later while going undercover and running through the countryside with Nelson and the Barker boys. At the time he also learns of a fictional, but highly likely plot to assassinate J. Edgar Hoover, which he manages to become involved in, much to his distaste.

The characters in True Crime, as well as the historical events involved in the plot, have been thoroughly researched. Collins has "fleshed out" personalities based on snatches of the speech and writing of the actual people. The result is uncommonly life-like portrayals of criminals and lawmen who are all too often stereotyped and two-dimensional when encountered in historical and biographical texts. Collins' gangsters are not mindless, cold-hearted criminals; like all of Collins' characters, they have needs, fears, and insecurities. The Barker boys will do anything for their Ma, not short of carting her back and forth between her apartment in the city and her country home for visits. Nitti worries about his ulcers; Purvis is a little nervous about everything, including, it seems, being too short.

HELLER'S NARRATIVE is also a break from the stereotypical detective novel pattern about sleazy offices and big blondes with problems. Heller does have kind of a nasty sense of humor, but he only spits on the bad guys. He has natural talent as a con man, but when he catches himself using it on a young farm girl who is falling in love with him while unknowingly helping him earn some cash, he reprimands himself: "Shit. Without knowing it, without meaning to, I'd joined the club. I'd joined the ranks of men who'd abused this girl, pushed her around, hurt her. Dammit. Fuck. Shit." It's not exactly religion, but somebody taught this guy a little common decency.

Collins plans to continue the True Detective and True Crime legacy and create a series, with a third novel set during World War II (more heavy homework for Collins). In the meantime, True Crime is a provocative and entertaining piece of true fiction in its own right, and it ought to be reread a few times before the next one comes out anyway.
