Phoenix forecasts comeback despite election loss

By Mary Boone
and Karen Burns
Staff Writers

Analysis

"Phoenix will be back" was the message the losing party left on the chalkboard at election headquarters Wednesday night.

The proclamation was scribbled over voting totals that gave its opposition — the Students First Party — a sweep of every contested UI Student Senate seat and created what Students First Party leaders are calling "a victory by and for the students."

Students First won 25 of 28 seats in this year's UI Student Senate election, yielding only one uncontested off-campus seat, family housing and international student seats to the once-dominant Phoenix Party.

Former Phoenix senator Byron Wikstrom called the Students First landslide a "temporary setback ... To me there is no question — when election time rolls around again, students will be ready for a party like Phoenix. We'll definitely bring it back."

Throughout the campaign, members of the Students First slate were labeled by many as "right-wing conservatives," and, according to some Phoenix supporters, the Students First victory came on the heels of a nationwide swing toward campus conservatism.

KATE HEAD, Phoenix campaign manager, contrasted her party to Students First this way: "It was simply a case of our liberals against their conservatives, our activists against their bureaucrats, the old against the young. We ran on international and national issues; they made unrealistic promises. We are the mobilizers; they are the paper shufflers."

"These people consider planting trees and public relations for the senate an issue," Head said. "Oh, heck, they might even get a little mad at the administration once in a while."

Andy Martin, president of the UI Graduate Student Senate, said Phoenix's bid to maintain control of the senate was unsuccessful because its "campaign issues were too intellectual and too heavy ... Students First purely campaigned on name recognition and this time it worked."

Martin called the Phoenix loss "the revenge of the 'me' generation," adding, "The progressive liberal left of this campus has got to regroup. We've got to hit the bunker and figure out where we went wrong."

Martin said although the Students First slate members "are not all right-wingers," the party's leadership is "ultra-conservative."

"THIS PARTY has members who belong to cults. They're (former Republican Sen. Roger) Jepsen organizers with all kinds of fundamental characteristics. Yet, the party has some senators who I've always thought were fairly liberal," Martin said. "We'll just have to wait and see who takes the leadership in this party."

Incumbent Senate Executive Associate Tracy Davis, a Students First victor, countered Martin's attack by saying, "I have serious doubts that an educated student body would elect a senate that's anything like what we've been described as."

Steve Grubbs, president of the new senate, said Phoenix lost the election because "they lost touch with the students ... They stayed in their own little group and didn't bother to gain contact with the student body. They lost because of 'group-think'."

Grubbs denied accusations that his party won the student election on a wave of campus conservatism, reiterating the diversity of Students First Party members.

"IF THERE IS a conservative tide on this campus it's amazing how many liberals they just elected to the student senate," Grubbs said.

Davis added some students were confused concerning the Students First platform. "We are going to deal with every issue that affects students," See Election, page 8A

Reagan hits MX, budget in press talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan said Thursday in a nationally televised press conference that it is "high time" for a U.S.-Soviet summit and he is ready to meet with Mikhail Gorbachev whenever the new Kremlin chief finds it convenient.

"I think there is a good chance" of a summit being arranged, Reagan said, citing some unspecified areas of negotiation between Washington and Moscow that "could probably be further advanced if we met at a summit."

Appearing in the White House East Room, Reagan also indicated a willingness to compromise on contentious budget issues, but drew the line at further cuts in Pentagon spending. He dismissed freezing Social Security payments on the ground that this would not ease the budget deficit.

The president also prodded the House to follow the Senate's lead and approve the building of 21 MX missiles this year — a $1.5 billion expenditure he said is crucial to the success of nuclear weapons talks with the Soviet Union.

THE PRESIDENT ALSO:

- Reiterated that he views the system of apartheid in South Africa as "repugnant," but said the recent outbreak of violence there will not lead to a change in U.S. policy of "quiet diplomacy" rather than trying to force it through economic and other sanctions.

- Expressed regret at the deaths of CBS News crew members in Lebanon, but said he was certain the action of Israeli forces that fired the artillery shells "wasn't deliberate."

- Said he decided not to visit a Nazi concentration camp site during his visit to Germany in May because that would reawaken "the memories and the passions" of World War II. Instead, he said, the visit coinciding with the 40th anniversary of the end of the war should mark "the beginning of peace and friendship among us."

Reagan insisted he was not "rebuffed" by Gorbachev's failure to respond promptly and directly to his invitation to a summit, delivered by Vice President George Bush last week when he went to Moscow for the funeral of Konstantin Chernenko, Gorbachev's Ronald Reagan predecessor.

"THE MAN HAS ONLY been in office for a few days, and I have some idea of what is confronting him now," Reagan said of Gorbachev, who at 54 is the youngest Soviet leader since Stalin took power.

Reagan said he had not abandoned his previous requirement that any summit be "well prepared," but rather that recent contacts between the superpowers have now laid sufficient groundwork for such a meeting.

The news conference, the second of Reagan's second term, kept up the once-a-month pace he has adopted at the urging of first lady Nancy Reagan.

Reagan bantered easily with reporters several times during the news conference. When asked about a move by conservatives to take over the CBS television network, Reagan said, "Boone Pickens, is that what you're talking about?"

His reference to the acquisitive Texas entrepreneur carefully maneuvered around any mention of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the outspoken conservative who is encouraging a take-over of CBS to end its "liberal bias."

In response to a follow-up, Reagan gave this view of TV news: "I just turn it on, look at it, and scream every once in a while — to myself."

REAGAN USED HIS opening statement to continue a hard-sell campaign for the MX, a highly accurate 10-warhead intercontinental weapons that must win two House votes next week to stay in production.

The Senate gave two affirmative votes to the MX this week. Approving that action, Reagan said, "Now is the testing time for the House."

"The votes there will answer the question of whether we stand united at Geneva or whether America will face the Soviet Union as a nation divided over the most fundamental questions of national security," he said.

"No request by an American president for a major strategic system deemed vital to national security has ever been denied by an American Congress," Reagan said. "It is that tradition of bipartisan unity on national defense that brought the Soviets back" to the arms talks.

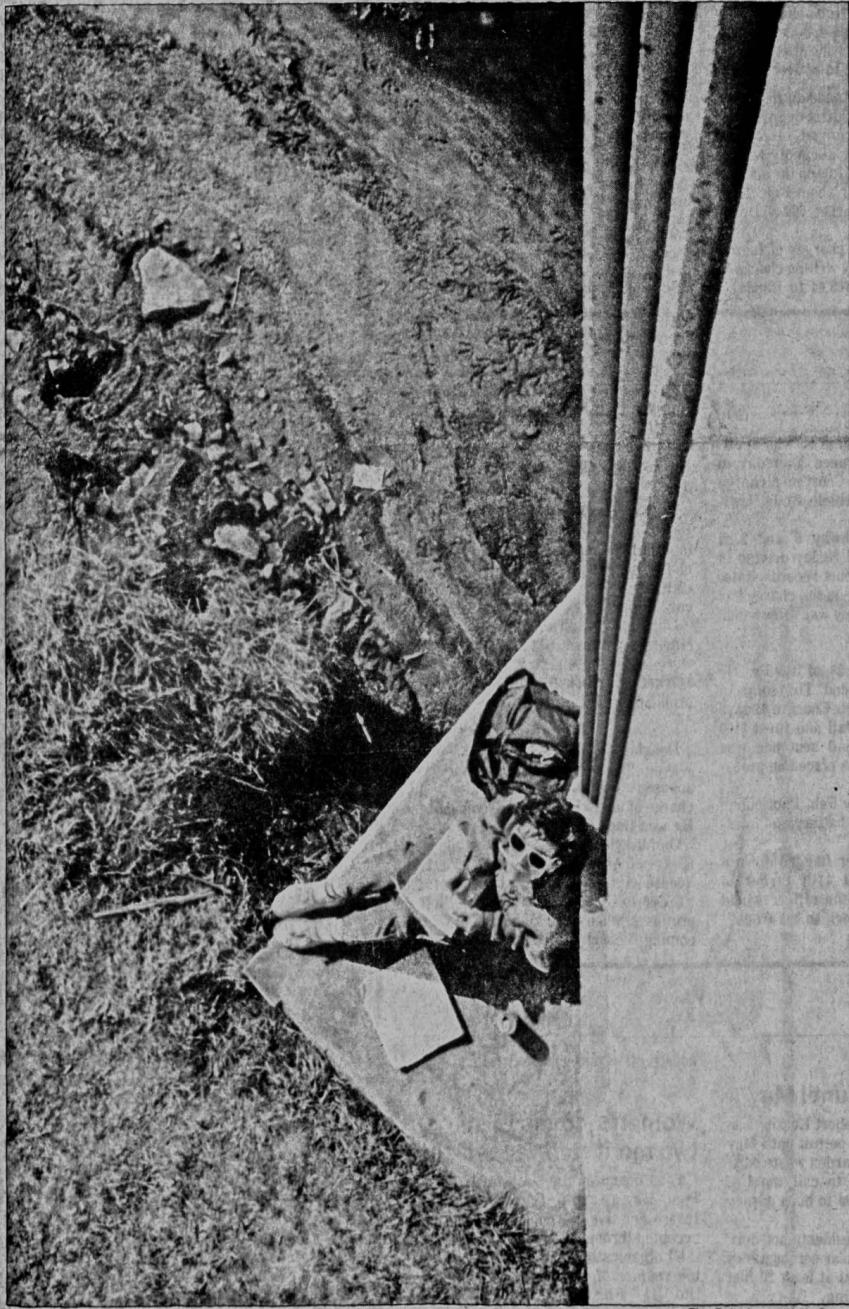

On the budget, Reagan warned that his request for the Pentagon is a rock-bottom figure. "Any further cuts are actually going to run the risk of lowering our (military) capability," he said. "If we cut it in half there are people on (Capitol) Hill that would still think it would have to be cut more than that," he said.

THE REPUBLICAN-LED Senate Budget Committee voted for an increase in military outlays only to cover inflation next fiscal year, but Reagan has sought a 6 percent hike. Senate Republicans planned to meet with Reagan today in an effort to reach a compromise on the budget.

Asked if he was prepared to look at the senators' work and make compromises, Reagan said, "Oh, yes. They have something we can sit down and talk about and see where we come out."

But in addition to standing firm on military spending, Reagan also rejected freezing Social Security cost-of-living increases, which the Senate panel proposes.

Reagan indirectly responded to a Wall Street Journal report Wednesday that said he often calls on reporters who wear red at his news conferences. Reagan, who wore a red tie, recognized 12 reporters wearing red ties or dresses.

CBS journalists killed in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Two CBS News journalists and at least 21 other people were killed Thursday by Israeli troops who swept through a string of south Lebanese villages dynamiting homes and arresting suspected Moslem guerrillas.

CBS News said cameraman Toufik Ghazzawi, 45, and sound man Bahije Metni, 35, were killed and driver Ayad Hassan Harake, 45, was seriously wounded by gunfire from an Israeli tank in the village of Kfar Melki, near the port of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut.

A CBS spokeswoman in New York quoted witnesses as saying the three — all Lebanese nationals — were attacked after stopping to film a car belonging to the UPITN television news agency that had been hit by Israeli gunfire. UPITN is not affiliated with UPI.

Vladimir Popov, a Lebanese cameraman working for UPITN, suffered a slight head wound from splinters of glass from the car window, UPITN Editor John Connor said in Beirut.

THE SOURCES confirmed that an Israeli tank fired on a group of people near the village of Kfar Melki, apparently hitting a free-lance cameraman and sound man, both Lebanese nationals working for CBS.

French television reporter Marine Jacquemain, who was helping the UPITN crew, described the attack as "deliberate" and "not preceded by a warning."

CBS News President Ed Joyce, who sent a letter of protest to Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, said he believed from what Jacquemain and another French journalist, Alain Meargues, told him that "fire by an Israeli tank was directed at our people with intent to kill."

Jacquemain said she could not be certain it was a deliberate anti-journalistic act, but added that the Israelis were watching them through binoculars and could clearly see cameras and other television equipment.

ISRAELI MILITARY sources said 21 suspected Lebanese guerrillas were killed and seven wounded in the villages of Jbaa, Hounin al Tahta and Shrifia, and one Israeli soldier was slightly wounded.

"An Israeli force that was engaged in military duty on the outskirts of the village of Melki in southern Lebanon spotted armed people who had taken firing position," one Israeli military source said. "A tank that was in the area opened fire. It appears that the CBS people reported hurt were among those armed people."

"The IDF (Israeli forces) does not fire on civilians, including journalists, who are clearly identified as such," the source said. "If journalists are approaching an area where armed terrorists are, they take upon themselves the risk of getting hurt."

Official Beirut Radio said 25 people were killed in the village of Hounin Al Tahta alone, but the report could not be confirmed. The radio said the Israeli soldiers prevented officials of the

Gillespie testifies he made sketch

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

After testifying earlier that he had not designed a caricature of Big Ten basketball official Jim Bain on T-shirts he sold, John Gillespie said Thursday in Johnson County District Court he had "sketched out" the design.

"I drew it up over coffee one morning. I drew up the picture and the logo," Bain's attorney David Dutton quoted Gillespie as saying at an August 1982 proceeding for a temporary injunction against Gillespie's production of the shirts.

Gillespie said Thursday he "did not remember" saying during the proceeding that he personally had drawn the picture of the caricature.

"I remember telling them that I wanted it to say 'Jim Bain Fan Club' to my manager," Gillespie testified. "I remember sketching just something to put a picture in. I think that I sketched it on a napkin in the restaurant that morning," he said. Wednesday, Gillespie had testified that he did not draw the design.

"I don't remember a great deal about the actual design. I did not draw the design. I did not talk to the artist that drew it. I paid for it," Gillespie said Wednesday.

GILLESPIE, OWNER of the Hawkeye Trading Post of Coralville, is being sued for invasion of privacy by Bain for printing shirts depicting Bain with a rope around his neck.

Bain testified that he thought the rope was a noose, but Gillespie testified the shirt showed a referee "choked up" about a call.

The shirts were produced after a March 6, 1982 basketball game between Iowa and Purdue in West Lafayette, Ind. Iowa lost 66-65 following a successful free throw attempt by Purdue player Dan Palombizio. Bain had called UI basketball player Kevin Boyle for a foul against Palombizio. Bain admitted Tuesday in court that UI basketball player Greg Stokes, not Boyle, had committed the foul at the end of the game.

Dutton read from the 1982 proceedings that Gillespie said he wanted to have the shirts printed up the day after the game and some of them were printed early Sunday evening, March 7, 1982.

Gillespie said in earlier testimony he did not want to make the language on the shirt "stronger" than it was. Dutton accused him of wanting to use stronger language but that friends told him to tone it down.

"It's my nature not to put abusive language on shirts. I thought his officiating was a joke," Gillespie testified. "I have no regrets about making the shirt. If the message of the shirt is taken in the context of what I meant it to be, I have no regrets."

The body of an Iowa City woman was found in a car in a storage unit by Iowa City police Wednesday evening.

The body of Janice Kay Suchomel, 38, of 2502 Bartelt Road Apt. 1C, was found at U Store All Mini Storage, 37 Commercial Drive. Johnson County Medical Examiner Dr. T.T. Bozek "determined the cause of death to be a suicide," police records state.

Last week, police charged Suchomel with "forgery" in connection with a series of falsely written checks.

Suchomel's brother, Randy Rotzinger of Knollridge Garden Apartments in Coralville, said his sister had been missing since March 15, when she was released from the Johnson County Jail, police records state.

Rotzinger told police Wednesday afternoon that when he saw his sister she "was very depressed." He then called her children early Saturday morning at the residence of her husband, Jerry Suchomel of 145 Glenn Drive, and told them that "she was going away for a couple of days," police records state.

Rotzinger also told police that his sister had not shown for work at Sheller Globe Corp. and was fired. She was not at her apartment and had not kept her appointment with the Department of Corrections, police records state.

Iowa City police put out an attempt to locate bulletin on the missing woman at 8 p.m. Wednesday evening.

Suchomel's husband reported to Iowa City police Wednesday evening that he found a contract written to the storage lot and dated March 16. He found the contract to the rear of the sofa while he was cleaning out her apartment because her lease had expired, police records state. Jerry Suchomel said the contract was written in Janice Suchomel's handwriting, but in her daughter's name. He then told police that she might be at the storage lot with one of her two cars.

Jerry Suchomel told police that Dave Streb, owner of U Store All Mini Storage, remembered making out the contract, police records state.

Rotzinger told police that Jerry Suchomel didn't think his wife was "suicidal," but did feel "she was possibly doing drugs," according to police records.

Janice Suchomel had made an initial appearance on charges of first-degree false use of a financial instrument in Johnson County District Court for allegedly writing seven checks totaling $341.09 on the account of Karen L. Davis, on or about Feb. 27, at Eagle Discount Supermarket, 600 N. Dodge St., court records state.

She also appeared on charges of fourth-degree theft for allegedly writing checks on Nov. 30, 1984, totaling $85.64 to Randall's Mini-Priced Foods, Sycamore Mall Shopping Center. The checks did not clear, court records state.

Janice Suchomel had been scheduled for a preliminary hearing on April 2. Cited: Jeffrey S. Natzinger, 18, of 1036 First Ave., and Darren E. O'Donnell, 19, of 2224 Arizona Ave., were charged by Iowa City police with public intoxication in an alley near 300 E. Court St. early Thursday.

Cited: James Michael Doyno, 19, of 5301 Daum Residence Hall, was charged by Iowa City police with public intoxication in an alley north of the intersection of Linn and Market streets early Thursday.

Cited: Michael R. Morris, 18, of 114 South Quadrangle Residence Hall, was charged with unlawful use of a driver's license and possession of beer under the legal age by Iowa City police at Dooley's Dancin and Drinkin, 18-20 S. Clinton St., early Thursday.

Cited: Gina M. Cervetti, 18, of 443 Rienow Residence Hall, was charged with possession of beer under the legal age by Iowa City police at the Capitol Street parking ramp early Tuesday. Theft charge: Janelle M. Kurth, 32, of Marshalltown, Iowa, was charged with fifth-degree theft by Iowa City police at K-Mart Discount Store, 901 Hollywood Blvd., Wednesday. Cited: Charles C. Doerr, 20, of 306 Grandview Court, was charged with criminal trespassing at Connections, 121 E. College St., Wednesday evening.

Theft charge: Peter Douglas Raine, 24, of 67 Gleason Ave., was charged with fifth-degree theft at K-Mart Discount Store, 901 Hollywood Blvd., Wednesday evening.

An attorney representing an Iowa City woman who was injured in a car accident in March 1983 filed a $1 million suit Thursday in Johnson County District Court.

Kay Konz charges in the suit that "gross negligence" on the part of Stewart Wayne Ehly caused the accident, which occurred on Interstate 80.

Ehly, a UI associate professor in special education, was driving a state-owned van with eight passengers, including Konz, when he allegedly drove the vehicle off the road and into the highway median, the suit states.

The vehicle then rolled over "several times with severe impact," the suit states. Konz claims that as a result of the accident she has undergone "continuous and continuing care for serious and severe head injuries," pain and the need for treatment at a pain management center, loss of wages and loss of future earning capacity and permanent disability.

Konz is asking for $750,000 in punitive damages and $250,000 due to loss of income, medical expenses and permanent disability.

Muriel Marie Nisley, 35, of Kalona, Iowa, made an initial appearance Thursday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

On Thursday at Highway 6 and 23rd Avenue, police observed Nisley driving in an "erratic manner," court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the charge has been set for April 4. Nisley was released on her own recognizance.

Robert Eugene Guyer, 38, of 1529 Prairie du Chien, was sentenced Thursday in Johnson County Magistrate Court to 30 days in the Johnson County Jail and fined $100 plus court costs. The jail sentence was suspended and Guyer was placed on probation for one year.

Guyer was found guilty Feb. 12 of public intoxication, assault and battery and interference with police.

On Nov. 2, 1984, Guyer flagged down a police officer on East 11th Street in Coralville and asked if the officer would "give him a ride one block to his truck," court records state.

Guyer then began "engaging in abusive profanity," "repeatedly struck" the police officer in the chest and "grabbed" his gun belt and leg, court records state.

Steven John Sommer, 22, of 810 W. Benton St., Apt. 30B, pleaded guilty Thursday in Johnson County Magistrate Court to a charge of giving a false report to law enforcement authorities. He was fined $50 plus court costs.

On Feb. 8, Sommer called the 911 emergency line at 3:43 a.m. and said there were 30 people "fighting" at QuikTrip, 301 Market St., when there was actually "no problem at that time," court records state.

Douglas William Winter, 18, of 2809 Wayne St., pleaded guilty Thursday in Johnson County Magistrate Court to a charge of unlawful use of a driver's license. He was fined $30 plus court costs.

On March 13 at the Pleasure Palace, 315 Kirkwood Ave., Winter displayed a driver's license with the birthdate altered from Oct. 10, 1966 to Oct. 10, 1965, and then "left the premises when told that the police were coming," court records state.

GOD'S PLAN FOR UNITY

The Unity of the Spirit is based on the most elementary concept imaginable. It is founded on the concept of ONE. Unity implies ONENESS. More than one allows for confusion. But ONE cannot get mixed up with ONE! God's plan is simple. Men and their doctrines, teachings and traditions have confused the issue. God has given us a platform for Spiritual Unity. Read Ephesians 4:1-6 and then notice the following:

- ONE BODY: Paul had already told them that the BODY is the CHURCH. (Eph. 1:22-23). Therefore there is only ONE TRUE CHURCH.
- ONE SPIRIT: The Holy Spirit revealed the mind of God to us through the Word. (2 Tim. 3:16-17) He revealed ALL truth to the Apostles (Jn. 16:13). Therefore there is no room for latter day revelations or the creeds of men in the Bible. (Gal. 1:8-9).
- ONE HOPE: This hope is based on the resurrection of Jesus Christ and thus it becomes the living hope reserved in Heaven for us (1 Pet. 1:3-4).
- ONE LORD: Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the King of Kings, is Lord of all, therefore the Lawgiver. To Him we must listen (Mt. 17:5). He has ALL authority. (Mt. 28:18).
- ONE FAITH: This faith was "once for all delivered to the Saints (Jude)." The world says many faiths, the Bible says, ONE faith.
- ONE BAPTISM: It is immersion in water for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38; 8:34-39; 10:47-48) (Rom. 6:1-6; Col. 2:12). It is for "adults" not "babies".
- ONE GOD: The Father of all. He is in control. He is the Sovereign God. (1 Tim. 2:5).

Roberts: Acid rain is 'time bomb'

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

Acid rain is a "time bomb" in relation between the United States and Canada, both scientifically and diplomatically, according to former Canadian Cabinet member John Roberts.

Roberts, who served as a liberal member of the Canadian Parliament for 20 years and as minister for environment and minister of labor under Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, addressed a crowd of about 30 people at the UI International Student Center Thursday.

"I have a suspicion that Americans and Iowans are probably less concerned with acid rain and less concerned with U.S./Canadian relations than Canadians are concerned with acid rain and Canadian/U.S. relations," he said.

Roberts called the Canadians' concern about the issue of acid rain a "peculiar Canadian obsession."

"My involvement with this issue goes back now five years when I first became minister of the environment," he said. "I found that acid rain — which many of my compatriots thought at that time was the name of a rock group — posed a serious question not only of environmental concern, but also of economic concern.

"LONG-RANGE transportation of airborne pollutants" — a phrase Roberts translated as "bureaucratic jargon for acid rain" — is caused by entry of sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere. According to Roberts, the sulfur dioxide is generally emitted by smelters or electricity-producing coal generators.

Roberts said the impact of acid rain "can be particularly devastating" when it builds up in the snow of eastern Canada. He added three-fourths of Canada's acid rain "problems" come from the United States.

The environmentalist emphasized that Canadians are not concerned about the issue of acid rain "simply because we want to keep Canada picturesque... Acid rain attacks the economic foundation of my country."

Roberts cited salmon-spawning grounds and sports fishing as examples of Canadian industries affected by acid rain.

"If all that's not bad enough, acid rain is undermining the regenerative power of the forest floor. That sounds rather dull," Roberts said. He added, however, that Canadian forestry is a $40 billion business and one of every 10 Canadians is employed in that industry.

"Unfortunately, to depend upon a forest for a healthy economy, you must first have a healthy forest," Roberts said.

THE FORMER CANADIAN statesman said United States/Canada relations during the past five years have been "stuck in a stalemate," and he blamed the stall on the Reagan administration.

"I cannot see any possibility of movement in this field on behalf of the administration, until after the Reagan administration" is no longer in power, he said.

Roberts criticized the recent summit meeting between President Reagan and newly-elected Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, saying the acid rain problem "goes above and beyond politics."

"In the U.S. it (acid rain) hits mainly New England and New York City, although it is extending south to Florida," Roberts said. "In Canada, acid rain attacks the heartland of the economy."

Roberts said he used to "jokingly suggest" that Canada enter into an economical development program with Mexico to industrialize the southwest corner of the United States. He predicted if California were being bombarded with acid rain problems, "something would be done."

ROBERTS SAID in order for the dilemma of acid rain to be dealt with effectively, Canada must cut the amount of sulfur emitted into the atmosphere in half by 1995.

However, he added: "This is not a one-way street. Some success will be attained if Canada cuts back, but in order for true progress to be made, the U.S. must cooperate and also cut back their emission of sulfur by at least 25 percent."

"This problem was drawn to Canada's attention by the United States Congress a number of years ago," Roberts said. "At that point Congress was complaining that some of the acid rain falling in New England was coming from Canada. We later discovered that the U.S. was sending two to three times more acid rain to Canada than we were sending to the United States."

He added: "President Reagan currently sees this as a conflict between environmental needs and economics — he isn't about to do anything to remedy the problem. If anything happens to our advantage, I predict it will be because of a move initiated by Congress."

Police open fire on demonstrators; at least 17 blacks reported killed

UITENHAGE, South Africa (UPI) — Police in an armored truck opened fire Thursday on thousands of blacks who defied a ban on demonstrations, killing at least 17 in the worst such clash since the massacre of 69 blacks in Sharpeville exactly 25 years ago.

A witness said the street was covered with blood after the slayings in the black township of Langa near Uitenhage, about 15 miles west of the southern coastal city of Port Elizabeth.

A black journalist on the scene said the official figure of 17 dead was probably low and a spokeswoman for the Black Sash civil rights group said up to 43 may have died. Police said 22 blacks were wounded but other groups said scores were injured.

Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu said the shooting by "trigger-happy" police was "deeply, deeply distressing."

"One would have thought that in 25 years, the police would have learned to deal with civil disturbances," he said.

The shooting occurred a day after magistrates in Port Elizabeth and the capital of Pretoria banned all gatherings to commemorate the 1960 killing of 69 blacks who burned their identity documents and demanded arrest outside the Sharpeville police station about 50 miles south of Johannesburg.

WITNESSES SAID Thursday's shooting occurred when 3,000 to 4,000 blacks headed from Langa to the nearby town of Kwanobuhle for a service in memory of victims of riots that claimed 18 lives during the previous week.

The Black Sash spokeswoman said the crowd planned to travel by bus and taxi but were ordered out of their vehicles by police traveling in an armored vehicle.

Police opened fire on the crowd with semi-automatic rifles and shotguns machine guns. Some witnesses told police the officers fired without warning.

But speaking in Parliament, Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange said a 19-man police patrol came under attack with stones, sticks and fire bombs and was forced to open fire in self-defense after the crowd ignored orders to disperse and a warning shot fired into the ground.

He said six rifle bullets, 27 shotgun shells and 10 pistol bullets were fired in what he called a "most unfortunate incident."

Police said the armored vehicle was the only unit involved but witnesses said the crowd was boxed in by six vehicles about a mile from Uitenhage.

THE JOURNALIST, who asked not to be named, said the road was left littered with shoes, clothing and bodies. The Black Sash quoted a witness who said the street ran with blood and later was hosed down by the fire brigade.

The South African Institute of Race Relations said Thursday 242 people had died in countrywide black riots since Feb. 16, 1984.

A spokeswoman said Thursday's shooting was the worst single incident since the Sharpeville massacre.

Witnesses said the march was organized by the Uitenhage Youth Congress, a movement affiliated with the United Democratic Front, South Africa's largest dissident organization.

In Washington, Secretary of State George Shultz called the shooting "deplorable" and said "there's no excuse for it."

But Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., who is black, told Shultz he had failed to provide a "clear answer" as to what the administration is doing about such violence. He faulted its "constructive engagement policy" of leaving the lines of communication open with the white supremacist government.

GRAY, DURING AN APPEARANCE by Shultz before the House Appropriations foreign operations subcommittee, asked Shultz what the administration had done about "the new massacre that occurred in the last 24 hours, bringing the total number of majority South Africans killed in the last six and a half months to well over 200."

Shultz replied, "Let me say again, as I have on many occasions, that the system of apartheid is totally repugnant to me, to the administration, to the president and the pattern of violence that you cite only underlines how evil and unacceptable that system is."

Gray said, "It seems to me that at the height of the Solidarity movement in Poland when the administration was urging Americans to light candles, we didn't have that kind of brutality, even by that Polish regime which we all abhor and which you quickly moved the administration to apply restrictions economically."

"And yet we see this brutality and I have not seen the administration speak with a clear voice to even ask Americans to strike a match."

Iraq claims it downed Iranian jets; Khomeini vows to continue the fight

BAGHDAD, Iraq (UPI) — Iraq claimed Thursday it shot down two of Iran's U.S.-made F-5 jet fighters in the first air battles since Baghdad declared Iranian air space a war zone, and Iran reported Iraqi air raids on towns holding celebrations for the Iranian New Year.

Iraq said one F-5 was downed Thursday in a dogfight with Iraqi planes over the central Iranian city of Hamadan, while the other was destroyed Wednesday north of the northeastern city of Sanandaj as Iraqi fighters flew combat patrols.

Iran denied its planes had been downed but Tehran Radio said Iraqi warplanes early Thursday bombed the Iranian town of Ibb, about 320 miles southwest of Tehran. The official Islamic Republic News Agency said 12 residents of the town were "martyred" and 45 injured in the attack.

Iran also said two Iraqi missiles landed Wednesday night in the city of Dezful, 300 miles southwest of Tehran. There was no word on casualties. The towns were attacked as they were holding celebrations for the Islamic nation's New Year, Nowruz.

THERE WAS NO response to the reports from Iraq and neither country's claims could be verified independently. Both have exaggerated past war claims.

In Tehran, Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said he would continue the fight.

"We do not want to inflict losses on anyone, even if they are our enemies, so long as they do not oppose Islam... but we also do not want to remain silent on warmongering by the other side," Khomeini said in statements carried by Tehran radio.

The official Iraqi News Agency announced plans for an attack against Ahvaz, the economic capital of Iran's Khuzestan region, and it urged residents to evacuate the city by Sunday.

Ahvaz is east of the Howeza marshlands, where Iraq last week repulsed an invasion by tens of thousands of poorly-trained Iranian troops. It is 47 miles from the border between the two countries, who have been fighting since Sept. 22, 1980.

THE IRAQI NEWS Agency announcement of plans for the Ahvaz attack came as Iraqi President Saddam Hussein met with two envoys dispatched by Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on a mission to arrange a cease-fire between Baghdad and Tehran.

There was no word from Baghdad on the outcome of the one-hour meeting between Hussein and India's Minister of State for External Affairs Kurshed Khan and Foreign Minister Romesh Bhandari.

In New Delhi, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said Gandhi was awaiting a reply from Hussein before sending envoys to Tehran.

The spokesman said Gandhi had sent a personal message to Iranian President Syed Ali Khamenei, urging an end to the conflict. Gandhi is promoting the effort as head of the 100-nation Non-Aligned Movement.

Should the war in the Persian Gulf spread, the United States has taken action to insure access to the strategic oil reserves of the area.

IN WASHINGTON, Pentagon spokesman Maj. Gen. David Watts said Thursday that the United States has nearly finished building facilities in Oman and two east African countries for use by the Rapid Deployment Force in the event of a crisis in the region.

Videotapes used in Aquino inquiry

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Prosecutors Thursday presented videotapes as evidence against armed forces chief Fabian Ver and 25 others charged in the slaying of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

The tapes of the Aug. 21, 1983, assassination at Manila airport were taken by the state-run television and crews of ABC News and Tokyo Broadcasting System, who were among a dozen journalists with the former senator on his return from three years of self-exile in the United States.

The tapes were among the evidence that led a fact-finding board to conclude a soldier shot Aquino as he stepped off a China Airlines jet.

The board rejected military claims that alleged communist hitman Rolando Galman gunned down Aquino. Galman was killed moments later in a volley of military gunfire.

The tapes do not show the actual shooting of Aquino, but the board relied heavily on the events captured on film moments before and after the shooting in reaching their conclusion.

A MICROCASSETTE tape recording of the slaying by Time magazine correspondent Sandra Burton corroborated the films, the board said.

The timing of the sounds of gunfire recorded on the tape prompted the board to conclude Aquino was killed on an airline staircase and not on the tarmac as the military contended.

Jose Mari Gonzales, an electronics communication engineer, testified during Thursday's hearing that members of the fact-finding board examined the tapes for 30 days at his studio.

Gonzales said he was asked by the board to enhance the sound quality and do a composite film of crucial scenes to help the board in its deliberations.

The anti-corruption court held part of its session Thursday at a downtown television store's video room to view the tapes.

Jordanian airline offices blown up

United Press International

Suspected Arab terrorists hurled grenades Thursday into the Jordanian airline's offices in Rome, Athens and Nicosia, injuring five employees in what appeared to be a coordinated protest against peace efforts by Jordan's King Hussein.

Grenade splinters injured two employees of the Alia airline offices in Rome, and the director and two other employees of the Athens office. Police reported no injuries in the Nicosia, Cyprus attack. None of the victims was seriously injured.

The mid-morning attacks caused only superficial damage to the offices of Alia, Jordan's state-owned national carrier, indicating they were intended primarily as a political protest.

The attacks were apparently linked to Arab hardliners who oppose recent efforts by Hussein and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to promote new Middle East peace talks involving the United States.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility but police spokesmen in Rome and Nicosia speculated the three terrorist attacks were the work of an Arab group. "We cannot exclude the possibility that it may be connected with similar bomb attacks in Athens and Rome," a high-ranking police officer in Nicosia said of the Cyprus bombing.

WITNESSES TOLD police at each location the terrorists appeared to be Arabs. They all had curly hair, dark complexions and wore casual clothes.

In Rome, two men walked into the Jordanian airline office near the tourist-famed Via Veneto and hurled two grenades inside the office and a third outside the entrance. The bombers fled just before the grenades exploded.

Two women — the only people in the office at the time — were rushed to the hospital with minor splinter wounds, officials said.

Police said two armed officers chased the men on foot several blocks to Rome's central railroad station but "they ran into a subway station and jumped into a subway train that was just leaving and escaped," an officer said.

In Athens, three men threw two grenades inside the Alia office on the second floor of a building near the central Constitution Square. The office director and two Greek employees were injured by splinters.

IN NICOSIA, one man threw a grenade at the airline office on fashionable Makarios Avenue. The explosion shattered a display window but caused no casualties.

In an interview published Wednesday in a Lebanese newspaper, Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy vowed to launch a terrorist campaign against Arab leaders who support U.S.-mediated Middle East peace talks.

Khadafy's comments were believed aimed at efforts by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Hussein to promote a new Middle East peace initiative involving U.S. mediation.

The plan is based on a Feb. 11 agreement between Hussein and Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat to jointly pursue a peace accord. Arab hardliners are opposed to the agreement.

'Hosts' ruling gets mixed review

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer
and Dawn Ummel
City Editor

Jean Lloyd-Jones

Local lawmakers were pleased but Iowa City tavern owners expressed apprehension with an Iowa Supreme Court ruling Wednesday that holds hosts of private parties liable for serving alcohol to drunks who injure or kill someone in a car accident.

"It's going to bring to the forefront just how antiquated" the Dram Shop Act is, said Doug Tvedt, owner of two Iowa City taverns — the Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., and Connections, 121 E. College St.

The Dram Shop Act holds bar owners responsible for selling alcohol to intoxicated individuals. Tvedt, however, believes "every adult should be responsible for his own actions."

The high court, in a 5-4 decision, extended the scope of the Dram Shop Act with the ruling that "social hosts" can be sued in cases where it can be proven the guest was intoxicated and the host was aware of the guest's condition, the guest drank alcohol available through the host and the guest operated a vehicle in a reckless way and injured someone while intoxicated.

TVEDT SAID the court's decision "is going to make people stand up and say, 'Hey, this isn't right. Why should I be responsible for my neighbor when he's partaking under his own power an adult act.'"

Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said the ruling "is a logical conclusion to be drawn from the (Dram Shop) law. We hold people who sell liquor responsible and all of us should have to be a little more responsible."

"I think it's long overdue," County Attorney J. Patrick White said.

White served on an Iowa Legislature committee that reviewed Iowa's drunken driving laws. The committee presented its report to the legislature in January. Although White favored a liability statute for hosts of private parties, the committee did not recommend such a ruling to the legislature.

"I think the court accurately indicated what the common law rules of negligence should be," White said.

Dan Berry, owner of Joe's Place and Berry's at 115 Iowa Ave., said some responsibility — but not the majority of it — should rest with people who serve alcohol to intoxicated individuals who later cause injurious traffic accidents.

"WHAT HAS HAPPENED to the law is that it's been twisted to where the primary responsibility is on the secondary party," Berry said. "However, I think there is some degree of responsibility" for servers of alcohol, he said.

The Supreme Court's ruling was sparked by two lawsuits filed in Linn County. One of the suits was brought by the parents of a 7-year-old girl killed in a traffic accident in 1982 when the van she was riding in rolled over. The driver of the van, who was also killed in the accident, had been drinking at a cookout held by the two people named in the suit.

Justice Harvey Uhlhopp, writing for the court's majority opinion Wednesday, said the host should hold the same responsibility as owners of cars who lend their vehicles to intoxicated individuals.

"If, by lending a car to a drunk, a host becomes liable to third parties injured by the drunken driver's negligence, the same liability should extend to a host who furnished liquor to a visibly drunken guest who he knows will thereafter drive away," Uhlhopp stated.

Schools financing may raise taxes

By James Hintzen
Staff Writer

Declining Iowa property and farmland values have triggered a move by the Iowa Legislature to restructure the way Iowa's schools are financed, which could raise local property taxes.

A bill currently in the legislature would enable state government to provide 55 percent of the funding to schools, while local school districts would pay the rest. The current funding is split equally between the two bodies.

Jerry Palmer, finance director for the Iowa City School District, said that although the amount of state aid would remain roughly similar under the bill, it would only be used to pay for a specific portion of districts' budgets.

"That means more dollars are going to have to be coming from local tax dollars to pay for the state education budget," he said. The bill would make changes in who pays for what in the state's educational system. State government would become responsible for "direct instructional costs," such as teachers' salaries, administrative costs, career education programs and other operational expenses.

Individual school districts would have the power to levy local option taxes. The districts would levy additional income or property taxes to pay for sports, extracurricular activities, library books, community education and continuing education.

SCHOOL BOARDS would gain the power to levy property taxes to pay for buildings, utility costs and transportation costs.

"The current finance system was written in the early '70s when school enrollments were up, property values were up and inflation was up," said Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, who is a co-sponsor of the bill. "None of these things are there anymore, that's why we have to replace this system."

Brown said that statewide education mandates made by the legislature should and would be paid for by the state. Other programs that aren't required by the state, such as sports and extracurricular activities, could be decided upon and financed by individual school districts.

"One hundred percent of direct instructional costs would be paid for directly out of state financing," he said.

Sen. Lowell Junkins, D-Montrose, who is also co-sponsoring the bill, said it is important for Iowa to "determine what our education policy is... what kind of minimum educational requirements do we want in this state."

Palmer said the bill would make "no notable changes probably on the programs (the Iowa City School District) would offer."

Senate to consider lowering OWI level

DES MOINES (UPI) — The Senate Judiciary Committee Thursday approved a bill lowering the state's intoxication standard, but the House failed to flush a companion bill from its judiciary panel.

The bills would lower from .13 percent to .10 percent the legal blood-alcohol level for a motorist to be considered legally intoxicated.

The Senate bill deals strictly with the blood-alcohol issue. It does not address a proposal by Gov. Terry Branstad to impose a 30-day "hard" drivers license suspension for anyone convicted of a first drunken driving offense.

The two changes, if enacted by 1987, would entitle the state to nearly $2.5 million in federal highway safety funds during three years.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Don Doyle, D-Sioux City, said his committee agreed to tackle the blood-alcohol issue this session and leave the suspension issue for consideration next year.

The House bill, which Judiciary Committee Chairman Dan Jay, D-Denterville, opposes, includes the mandatory suspension provisions.

Jay has refused to bring the bill up for a vote in committee, a decision that prompted a rare attempt to flush the bill onto the House calendar for debate.

The lawmakers defeated the attempt 55-40.

Rep. John McIntee, R-Waterloo, made a motion to pull the drunk driving bill out of the committee and onto the House debate calendar. He said the measure is in a "burial ground" in the judiciary committee.

"This would give you an opportunity to deal with the bill despite the efforts of the House Judiciary Committee to keep it bottled up," McIntee said. "The subcommittee met yesterday and they refused to even consider it."

Iowa, Colorado and West Virginia are the only three states in the nation with a legal level of .13 percent or higher.

Long way to go

The UI was the site of a very important conference last weekend. Entitled "The Quest for Freedom and Literacy," the meeting dealt with problems facing American blacks, focusing on leadership and historical perspectives on the problem.

With the Reagan administration in power, racial and cultural diversity has once again fallen out of favor in this country, as has any political focus on disadvantaged Americans.

This trend has fallen particularly hard on members of minority groups such as blacks. These groups had to fight for social and economic equity even when their causes were in favor. Now that they are out of favor, conference speakers revealed just how much more difficult their work has become.

Speakers highlighted a generation gap that separates blacks who worked for civil rights gains during the 1960s and young blacks of today. Many young blacks are more interested in fitting in, and in the process of their "deracialization" have cut themselves off from the continuing struggle for equal rights.

As always, ignoring a problem makes it more difficult to solve, and festering problems such as intolerable levels of unemployment for blacks, poor inner-city schools and ignorance or neglect of Afro-American culture intensify as they go untreated. To solve the problem, conference speakers encouraged building up black cultural bonds. They discussed generating political activism, involving young blacks in conferences and organizations and teaching them a firm sense of history and culture.

The discussion provoked by the conference should be a very fruitful one. It is especially timely now, when the few racial issues in the news include abandoning affirmative action programs, allowing racial discrimination in private schools and pursuing "constructive engagement" in South Africa. Now more than ever, a resurgence of activism in American minority communities is needed.

No scaffolding nails?

The pitched battle in Washington over the MX missile has progressed now through three major skirmishes — Senate committee, full Senate and House committee votes — and the military-industrial-Republican legions, ably generalised by President Reagan, have taken two out of three, which, we are constantly reminded, ain't bad.

In each and every case both support for and opposition to the $1.5 billion appropriation has been lukewarm; close votes have been the rule. Various reasons for this are the ongoing Geneva arms-control talks with the Soviet Union, the upgrading of existing Minuteman III missiles and concern over the vulnerability of present basing strategies for the MX.

What Congress should be thinking about is whether it is willing to fund a missile system that will be just as much a sitting duck in its silos as the present Minutemen are. If it approves funding for the MX, as seems likely, you can be sure another "request" will come during the Reagan term for not only more missiles, but hardening of silos, improved radar and satellite detection of imaginary incoming Soviet missiles, and, eventually, a new basing strategy — which is exactly the dilemma with which former President Jimmy Carter wrestled six and seven years ago.

Now isn't the time to belabor the faults of the MX or the pros and cons of its construction. What should be discussed is how the missile can be strangled after its birth by refusing to provide the Pentagon with the unlimited credit it will need to make the devastating and destabilizing MX a workable missile system.

Reagan's White House needs to learn the lesson that you can't start hanging people with a length of rope: you need timber and nails — and the will of the people — to build a scaffold. If we don't allow needless Russophobia and technophilia to cloud our judgement, we'll deprive the nuclear accelerationists of their most needed weapon: support.

Trading down

Last week Japan agreed to open access to its market for a number of American goods, particularly the telecommunication industry. The Reagan administration is cautiously hopeful and some congressmen, who were about to declare war, reholstered their guns.

A better historical memory would eliminate any optimism, however cautious; and the administration was wise to set a deadline for Japanese action on the telecommunication rules. The administration is also wise to have a list of retaliatory measures waiting; they will be needed.

The Americans have been complaining about Japanese trade barriers since the late 1950s and early 1960s. The pattern has been that the Japanese stall, make a few token concessions here, impose a little voluntary quota on exports there, and nothing major changes.

Now it is that only the United States is playing under free trade rules. Europe and Japan each have rather stringent barriers and protections for their own goods in their home markets, and both are doing their best to export to the lucrative American market. That task is being made easier by the strong American dollar, which makes our exports expensive to them and their exports cheap to us.

In fact, a good case can be made for some protection for fledgling growth industries and from newly developing countries. What seems to be deadly is stiff protection for stagnant or declining industries when that protection is in lieu of efforts to modernize and become competitive again.

The United States cannot afford to open its markets to all comers, importing goods like mad, while those American industries that are advanced and competitive are barred from foreign markets. The U.S. trade deficit is more than $100 billion and growing. The result is lost jobs and the destruction of industries that could grow and pay for the imports we do get.

A bad night out leads to trouble

By Jeffrey Miller

GOTEBORG, SWEDEN — Submitted for your approval:

Reporters from The New York Times, the Chicago Tribune, National Public Radio, NBC, CBS and the Associated Press invited George Shultz to dinner to discuss problems in the relationship between the press and the State Department;

Shultz at said dinner announcing that studies concerning the Soviet Union's defense capabilities carried out by the Defense Department and adopted by President Reagan into policy were wrong;

The reporters then electing to sit on the story for four days until they met and decided that what each of them had heard at the dinner had been heard by everyone else.

Fairly implausible, no?

BUT WHILE AMERICANS sat enthralled with the "Dallas"-like intrigue of the Westmoreland-Sharon vs. CBS-Time courtroom battles, that "Twilight Zone" scenario is exactly what developed in Sweden recently. It's a situation that resulted in as much criticism of the press here as did the trials in the United States, and one that reveals the strengths and weaknesses of the way the press operates in both countries.

Representatives of Sweden's influential morning dailies, Svenska Dagbladet and Dagens Nyheter; the news programs of both state-controlled television networks and its national radio network; and Tidningens Telegrambyrå, the country's wire service, met for dinner Jan. 30 at Dagens Nyheter's headquarters with Swedish Foreign Minister Lennart Bodstrom.

During the course of the dinner, conversation turned (as it so often does here) to the sightings and rumors of sightings of submarines that have kept Swedes jumpy about their national security for most of the past four years. According to the journalists, Bodstrom said there had been no incursions into Swedish territory by any submarines since a verified discovery of a Soviet sub in Stockholm's harbor in 1982.

Bodstrom's comment directly contradicted a Swedish Defense Department report on submarine prowling that had guided government policy toward a long chill in relations with the Soviet Union.

PRESENTED WITH THIS kind of

Guest opinion

news, most American journalists would have trampled over anything that stood between them and their VDT screens. But the Swedes sat tight. "We thought it was an off-the-record dinner," Dagens Nyheter reporter Harald Hamrin told the afternoon daily Expressen, "so we decided not to write anything."

Even journalists can be wrong, though, as Hamrin discovered two days later when he called Bodstrom's office for a statement on another submarine story. Bodstrom's press secretary told Hamrin that the minister's position on the submarine issue was the same as the one expressed at the dinner. Any such statement, he went on, could be used for publication.

One would think that the rush, at least at Dagens Nyheter, would then be on — but one would be mistaken. Instead of filing a story, Hamrin contacted the other reporters at the dinner to see if their notes on and understanding of Bodstrom's statement matched.

WITH FIVE OF the six in agreement with Hamrin's interpretation of the event (radio news editor Inger Arenander thought that "his comments followed current Swedish policy"), they decided to file stories — not for Saturday, but for Sunday. Hamrin claimed that the delay came because he and Svenska Dagbladet reporter Lars Christiansson had agreed not to submit stories before any of the others, and wire reporter Inger Persson had not had a chance to write hers. Persson, however, indicated no such problem in interviews with both Expressen and Dagens Nyheter.

Once the story finally did appear in the Feb. 3 papers, response was swift and predictable. Bodstrom, a member of the ruling Social Democratic Party, said that he merely remarked that there had been no proof that any subs sighted since 1982 had been Soviet. Leaders of opposition parties called for Bodstrom's dismissal, and introduced a vote of no confidence in the Swedish parliament. (The Social Democrat-dominated legislature voted the measure down.)

And Prime Minister Olof Palme backed his foreign minister, telling Dagens Nyheter that the journalists had acted "like a cartel" in creating a story and not bothering to check the facts.

PUBLIC REACTION was favorable to neither side. Bodstrom's performance in the matter merely cemented his reputation, even among members of his own party, as a bureaucrat whose lack of insight in political affairs both foreign and domestic is exceeded only by his arrogance.

The journalists, meanwhile, came under attack from both the left, which saw their attempt at a "Swedish Watergate" as little more than making a maelstrom out of a ripple, and from the right, which couldn't believe that a maelstrom or a ripple would take four days to reach shore.

Neither side was helped when Expressen published the Jan. 30 dinner menu — or, rather, the drinks list: cocktails, beer with the appetizers, special imported French wine with dinner, a different wine with dessert and cognac and liqueur with coffee afterwards. Even Prime Minister Palme joked on television that anyone would be hard-pressed to remember anything after all that booze.

THE "BODSTROM-AFFAIR," as the press called it, quickly settled in the public consciousness here as little more than a dinner date in which both parties make fools of themselves and after which both parties wake up alone and wonder why they did it. Opposition parties may use the incident, along with some of Bodstrom's previous gaffes, as ammunition against Palme and the Social Democrats in this fall's election, but its power is dubious.

What the behavior of the journalists in the matter does indicate, however, is both a collectivity and a reticence in Swedish journalism that is truly foreign to the American press.

One could no more imagine six reporters for six major American news sources gathering to agree on their stories and when they would submit them than one could imagine monsters on Maple Street. Yet that seems perfectly reasonable here, where the necessary symbiosis between news sources is much more pronounced and open than it is in the United States.

THAT'S THE CASE in part because of the nature of Swedish society, a society that eschews competition in favor of collective actions whenever possible. It's also in part due to the fact that the American ideal of "objective journalism" is nothing more than a myth here. Newspapers in particular identify themselves and are identified by their readers more in terms of the political lines each follows than by how quickly, thoroughly or stylistically they present the news.

There isn't the need in Sweden, therefore, for the stop-the-presses scoops or immediate analyses that prevail in American journalism. News gets out with equal swiftness to all sources, and analyses go on — and on and on — for days. It's the light in which the news is presented that's important.

The journalists' actions in holding the story, meanwhile, though perhaps more indicative of a lack of professionalism than anything else, also point out the way that the characteristic Swedish reserve finds its way into the press.

SWEDES ARE AS venomous in gossiping as anyone else. But lines of privacy are more quickly drawn here, particularly in regard to political figures or personal tragedies. So when King Carl-Gustav last year barred one of the so-called "weekly women's newspapers" from royal press conferences after it published a scurrilous article on one of his relatives, public reaction was generally favorable.

And when authorities discovered that a recent double murder in rural Sweden had been committed by the victims' 14-year-old daughter, who was suicidal because of her father's repeated incestuous attacks, the story vanished from the papers overnight.

Even the afternoon tabloids — with their countless photos, banner headlines and chatty styles — are shy when compared with the "Page 3" nudes and vicious backbiting that occupies the space in British and Danish tabloids.

The respect for privacy that still in part defines the Swedish press is not always a bad thing, given the prying pencils and voyeuristic camera lenses that are the tools of journalism in America, Britain and numerous other places.

But when doubts over publicity enter into political reportage, neither the public nor the press is served particularly well, as the Bodstrom affair indicates. As Time magazine can now attest, a lot can go wrong when you're too fast with the news. But as the Swedish press demonstrates, a lot can go wrong when you're too slow.

Trashing Iowa

To the editor:

I would publicly like to congratulate those in charge of marketing the name of Iowa. Not only have these people brought the name of Iowa and the Hawk symbol into homes across the state, they have also managed to bring these products to the yards of many Iowa City residents, in the form of free advertising, carried by the wind.

My only question to these enterprising persons is: "What type response are you trying to gain from this type of advertising?" Is it not enough that Iowa City residents are exposed to Herky the Hawk and the name of Iowa on many billboards, water towers and buildings — without having to come home to a yard full of Iowa cups?

I have no quarrels about spreading the name of Iowa and telling the nation what great things we have to offer, but we are going too far when the name becomes a nuisance in the form of antagonizing paper cups.

Let's have some consideration for the residents of this city; use the Iowa name wisely. Thank you, from a concerned citizen who doesn't want to see Iowa's good name go out with the trash.

Don't speed drunk

To the editor:

The Iowa Senate recently passed a bill to raise the drinking age to 21. This law will supposedly reduce traffic accidents. This measure now goes to the House where passage is highly probable.

Ironically, our very same state legislature is considering a bill that would allow motorists to exceed the speed limit by 10 mph without any penalty. The speeding violation would not count against a driver's record, and it would not be reported to the driver's insurance company. At most, the speeder would receive a confidential reprimand or a slap on the hand.

I find it hard to understand how our state legislators can have such contradictory views concerning traffic safety. What they are essentially saying is that it's acceptable for people who speed to cause traffic accidents, but not drunken teenagers.

Causing accidents is definitely wrong and immoral, whether it's by drinking teenagers or people with a heavy foot. I think our state legislators need to rationally examine their contradictory views on traffic safety and come up with a bill that not only punishes drunken teenagers but also people who speed — so that lives can be saved.

Lame duck Senate discusses Bijou, absenteeism

By Karen Burns
Staff Writer

The UI Student Senate discussed a constitutional amendment at its meeting Thursday to give responsibility for the Bijou to the UI Collegiate Associations Council, but the senate's tie vote did not constitute the majority necessary to do so.

Senate President Lawrence Kitsmiller, overseeing his last senate meeting, broke the tie vote to transfer governance of the Bijou from the senate to the CAC, but a two-thirds majority vote was necessary for it to change hands.

The CAC wanted to amend the UI Student Associations constitution to shift the Bijou from the non-academic body to the academic body because the Bijou's stated purpose is to bring films for "educational purposes." The CAC also discussed the amendment Thursday night, but the issue was tabled.

IN A PREVIOUS meeting, the senate passed an amendment, which must be approved by both bodies, to create a joint commission to oversee the Bijou group, which is responsible for films shown at the Union. Senate treasurer Joel Mintzer said the senate's role with the Bijou is to pay off any deficits it has at the end of its fiscal year.

Mintzer, stressing the need for a joint commission, said the group will "always show non-academic films" as well as academic films in order to bring in a larger audience. With a joint commission, the group would "have the best of both worlds," because with the CAC subsidy it could afford to bring in more non-academic films.

In other business before the new senators assumed their seats Thursday, an amendment concerning senate attendance and absences was passed.

THE AMENDMENT will only allow senators three unexcused absences from regular senate meetings and senate committee meetings. Senators who do not have pre-excused absences will not be reinstated, according to the amendment.

Pre-excused absences include illness, family emergencies, academic reasons other than a regularly scheduled Thursday night class, religious holidays and necessary senate work.

Sen. Bob Rafferty said he is opposed to requiring excuses for absences from committee meetings because, "if you tend to be busy, three meetings are not much" to miss. Rafferty added that despite his absences from committee meetings, he was still able to get committee work done.

BUT SEN. JIM HEADLEY said "to be an effective senator you have to be here and work at your committee."

Sen. Molly Gillogly agreed. "When you become a senator, you have got to know what you are getting into."

Before the newly elected senate took office, a bill was passed to appoint former senator Mike Skinner — who has been working with architects and administrators on Union renovation — as the student body liaison in the Union renovation process.

This bill also calls for a committee to be formed that will include a representative from the CAC and senate and their respective presidents.

SEN. CRAIG PERRIN said he wrote this bill to keep Skinner as the student liaison — a position he has held since October — because "Mike knows the people; he has dealt with architects. They are not nice people; they're mean ... To change horses in midstream is not a good idea."

The bill was necessary because Skinner was not re-elected as a student senator in senate elections Tuesday and Wednesday.

In addition, the new senate was formally seated while others are being elected. Steve Grubbs and Sara Moeller were elected president and vice president by acclamation.

Tracy Davis, former senate executive associate, was re-appointed, and Mike Ketchmark was appointed treasurer. Ramu Reddy was appointed parliamentarian. He said his role will be to assist the president in "making sure the meeting goes in correct order" of parliamentary procedure.

Lebanese Red Cross from entering the area.

IN WASHINGTON, State Department spokesman Joseph Reap said, "We deplore the deaths of these newsmen as we deplore all the deaths of innocent people in the violence in South Lebanon. We are seeking further information on this tragic event."

President Reagan called the newsmen's deaths "a tragedy" but said he needed complete details of the incident before he would make a decision on whether to file a protest with the Israeli government. "I am sure this was not a deliberate killing," he said at news conference.

Israeli officials said the sweep through the villages was aimed at routing Lebanese guerrillas who have been attacking Israeli troops since they began a three-part withdrawal from the region Feb. 16.

Lebanese military sources described the operation as one of the largest launched by Israel since the pull-out began, saying at least nine villages were raided.

Election

whether those issues are state, national or international. We are simply going to focus on issues we can be most effective on, including tuition increases, financial aid cuts, Bionic Bus and Cambus and the Rape Victim Advocacy Program."

Mike Connell, UI Campus Coordinator for United Students of Iowa, said Students First is "more moderate than conservative," adding, "Students were simply looking for a party that will pay attention to them and their concerns for a change."

Connell attributed the Phoenix loss to the UI student body's "desire for something new ... People were getting tired of the party in power, and they probably would have elected whoever ran against Phoenix."

Phoenix candidate and former senator Jim Headley agreed with Connell, but said Phoenix will not give up. "Voters are speaking and they say they want a change ... but we haven't begun to fight."

"I THINK THIS election is a clear abhorrent," said Craig Perrin, the only Phoenix senator to win an off-campus seat.

"Students First does not have a popular mandate," Perrin said. "They were able to mobilize a couple thousand students who went out and voted for them and that's that. While there may be a move toward campus conservatism, Iowa City is still a place of liberal ideas.

"Students don't realize that senate business, as it directly relates to students — like funding for Cambus — takes very little time. The student senate has 30 potential workers, and I see absolutely no reason why we won't have time and energy to deal with national and international issues," he said.

Several Phoenix Party members attributed the party's loss to poor use of the media.

Despite the fact that both parties ran television commercials and radio announcements, Phoenix presidential candidate Ehtisham Rabbani suggested "slicker marketing techniques" might have helped his party's image. "I guess we tried too hard to relate to the students exactly what we stood for. We tried to never have any ambiguities."

WIKSTROM SAID the parties tried to attract votes using two distinct approaches. "Our (campaign) was more issues-oriented and Students First's was more of a media approach. In this case, the media approach won."

Perrin said Phoenix lost off-campus "because of our own bad publicity ... We got a lot of flack from the media and that didn't help."

Grubbs said the Phoenix Party "gave the press the shaft throughout the elections ... They did some dumb things that made headlines. That was an unfortunate move for them."

Hawks, Minnesota out to upset No. 2 Ohio State

By Brad Zimanek
Staff Writer

Gymnastics

This weekend instead of heading off to spring break the Iowa men's gymnastics team will be heading off to Minneapolis, Minn., to battle Ohio State and Minnesota for the Big Ten Championship.

Ohio State, currently ranked second in the nation, seems to be the clear favorite but both Iowa Coach Tom Dunn and Minnesota Coach Fred Roethlisberger believe that if things happen to go their way they may end up with the Big Ten Championship.

"To beat Ohio State we'll have to hit about 90 percent of our routines like we did in the Illinois Open," Dunn said. "If we do that we'll score 281 or 282 and I think that could be enough."

"I KNOW OUR score is going to be high and I know we are going to perform well," Roethlisberger said. "It will probably be our best meet of the year."

Roethlisberger also doesn't think that having the Big Ten Championships at home is any advantage at all.

"I think in a dual meet there is an advantage," he said. "I've taken my team to Ohio State and won there. I took my team to Michigan when Michigan was the favorite and won there. The way the Big Ten Championships are, it just doesn't make any difference."

Minnesota is ranked 11th in the nation and needs a strong showing at the Big Ten meet to qualify for the NCAA Championships that will be held April 13-14 in Lincoln, Neb.

LAST YEAR Minnesota pulled a surprise upset and defeated Ohio State to win the Big Ten Championship when Ohio State was supposed to walk away with the title. This year the role might be reversed as Iowa's all-around star Dan Bachman believes the Hawkeyes can pull the upset.

"Ohio State is the team that is known to choke at Big Tens," Bachman said. "We have been really psyched up for this meet and I think that if we just go into this meet and perform the way that we have prepared lately, we may be able to go in and walk away with the meet."

One of the problems for the Iowa team in capturing the Big Ten title may be Stu Breitenstine's injured ankle, which he sustained in last weekend's dual meet with Northern Illinois.

"BREITENSTINE CAN'T do anything on his ankle yet and Tom Auer has the flu or something. Other than that we seem to be in pretty good shape," Dunn said.

"I think there's a good chance that Breitenstine will be back this weekend and I think there is a good chance that he will compete in at least the four events that he did at Northern Illinois. I couldn't say if he will be able to do the floor exercise or the vaulting."

Bachman, who just represented the United States in a meet with Canada and France and placed 10th out of 27 gymnasts, may have the opportunity to unseat Illinois' Charles Lakes as the Big Ten all-around champion.

"Anything can happen because they have these new compulsorians out. Everybody is very inexperienced with them and on any given day I think it would be tough for anybody to dominate the competition," Bachman said. "I think there's a good chance."

"I THINK CHARLIE has got it," Roethlisberger said. "Unless he wants to throw it away, which he has been known to do. Charlie could definitely throw it away if he misses two or three at a time. If not him then I would expect Bachman to take it."

The all-around competition will be decided Sunday after the team competition has been completed. The new compulsorians are those set after the 1984 Olympics and these will be used at the Big Ten Championships.

"Sunday the all-around men will do the compulsorians that will be used for the next four years up until the Olympics (the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, Korea)," Dunn said. "These routines will count for half of the all-around scores. Saturday night, plus the compulsorians Sunday afternoon, will determine the all-around champion."

Hawkeyes struggle at NCAA meet

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

Before the start of the NCAA women's Swimming and Diving Championships, Iowa diving Coach Bob Rydze said it was a "wait and see" situation for his two divers, Kelly Johnson and Diane Goldsworthy.

After Thursday's performance, Rydze probably wishes the meet would have been on a different day.

Neither Johnson or Goldsworthy

Swimming

could even make it to the semifinals in the one-meter contest at Tuscaloosa, Ala. Johnson, the Big Ten champion at three-meters, finished in 32nd place with a total score of 160.75 for five dives.

GOLDSWORTHY DID slightly better, finishing with 180.15 points, good enough for 25th place, one position short of moving on to the semi-finals. The finish of the Iowa divers was a surprise because of their strong showings at the Big Ten meet.

"I'm sure Bob's disappointed," Iowa swimming Coach Pete Kennedy said. "He's been on the road a lot and hasn't been able to spend time with his divers. I think the divers can bounce back on the three-meter board."

Things didn't go a whole lot better for Kennedy's swimmers.

In the morning preliminaries, sophomore Allison Lloyd swam the second-best time of her life but it was only good enough for 18th-place in the 100-yard butterfly. The Winston-Salem, N.C. native, finished in a time of 56.30 seconds.

"THE HIGHLIGHT OF the day had to be Allison's swim in the 100 fly," Kennedy said. "She swam a strong race against a very tough field."

The disappointment of the day came in the 50 freestyle where sophomore Kim Stevens finished a disappointing 29th in a time of 24.13, nearly a half second slower than her qualifying time. "With Kim, her problem was a case of not being used to the starting blocks," Kennedy said. "She tried to adapt to them but she had a little problem."

"We talked to her following the race," the fourth-year Iowa coach added. "She's young as far as big-time swimming is concerned. I think she'll bounce back (today) in the 200 and the 400 relay."

Iowa's other two entries of the day were in the 200 medley relay and the 800 freestyle relay. The foursome of Vickie Nauman, Chris Dieterle, Lloyd and Donna Strilich finished 28th in 1:48.04.

IN THE 800, the Hawkeyes got strong splits from Sophie Lindeskog (1:52.49) and Strilich (1:53.70). "Stevens was a little slow and Nauman gave us the best she had," Kennedy said of the 7:36.24 effort.

In the team competition, Texas, as expected, is out in front after the first day. The Longhorns' Tori Trees (200 backstroke), Olympic gold medalist Tiffany Cohen (500 freestyle in an NCAA record time of 4:37.90), Kim Rodenbaugh (200 individual medley) and the school's 200 freestyle relay team won titles.

California's Olympic gold-medalist Mary T. Meagher won the 100 butterfly while teammate Conny Van Bentum won the 50 freestyle.

Georgia Tech forward Scott Petway is faked off his feet by Illinois' Anthony Welch during the first half of the Yellow Jackets' 61-53 victory in the Eastern Regional semifinals Thursday night in Providence, R.I. With the win, the Yellow Jackets, who got 20 points from Mark Price, move on to the regional final Saturday afternoon in Providence. Illinois got a game-high 24 points from Doug Altenberger but it wasn't enough as the Illini end 26-9.

Tisdale sinks winning shot in overtime

United Press International

All-American Wayman Tisdale made a six-foot jump shot with three seconds remaining in overtime Thursday night that boosted fifth-ranked Oklahoma past No. 8 Louisiana Tech, 86-84, and into the Midwest regional finals of the NCAA Tournament at Dallas.

In other action at the Eastern regional at Providence, R.I., Georgia Tech advanced with a 61-53 win over Illinois while Georgetown defeated Loyola 65-53. In the other game in the Midwest regional, Memphis State edged Boston College, 59-57, on a jumper at the buzzer by guard Andre Turner.

The Sooners let a 10-point lead slip away in the second half, but never allowed Louisiana Tech to get in front, running their record to 31-5 and moving them to one step of the Final Four.

TISDALE, A 6-FOOT-9 junior who played the final nine minutes of the game with four fouls, scored eight of his 23 points in the overtime, including six in a row.

But just as it did in regulation, Louisiana Tech came from behind in overtime, overcoming a four-point deficit to tie the game with 18 seconds left on two free throws by Robert Godbolt.

Oklahoma worked for the final shot, with Louisiana Tech trying its best to deny Tisdale the ball.

But with three players surrounding him, Tisdale got the ball just outside the lane, turned and tossed up a soft left-handed shot.

The ball bounced around the rim three times before falling through the net.

THE NIGHTCAP AT Reunion Arena was as exciting as the opener.

Turner's winning shot came after Vincent Askew had stolen the ball from Boston College's Roger McCreehy with 10 seconds left, ruining the Eagles' hopes of pulling off their third straight tournament upset.

Memphis State owned a 12-point lead midway through the second half only to see the Eagles score a dozen points in a row.

The game was tied at 57-57 after McCreehy hit two free throws with 4:37 to play and nobody could score again until Turner's game-winner.

Boston College gained possession with 2:03 to play and chose to hold the ball for the final shot.

The Eagles called time out with 14 seconds to go but, when they threw the ball inbounds, Askew came up with his critical steal.

IN THE OPENER in the East, Mark Price scored 20 points to lead Georgia Tech past Illinois.

Leading 39-35 with 13:40 remaining, Georgia Tech exploded for a 13-2 run by working the ball into their big men, Yvon Joseph and John Salley, who scored four points each in the run.

Joseph, 7-feet, and the 6-11 Salley couldn't be stopped by the Illini's smaller front line.

After Georgia took a 52-37 lead, Doug Altenberger scored Illinois' next 14 points on six jumpers and two free throws before fouling out with 1:25 remaining, after single-handedly drawing his team within 55-51.

Altenberger, who finished with a game-high 24, scored all but eight of the Illini's second-half points. The last Big Ten team in the NCAA Tournament, No. 10 Illinois finishes the season with a 26-9 mark.

In the second game at the Providence Civic Center, Patrick Ewing scored 21 points and grabbed 14 rebounds and Georgetown needed a second-half rally to end Loyola's dream season.

Unlike many of Georgetown's opponents this year, the Ramblers refused to be rattled by a swarming press or give ground under the boards. Georgetown trailed 28-26 at the half before regrouping behind Ewing. Loyola had just two points in the last 4:18.

In extending their record to 33-2 and winning their 15th-straight game, the No. 1 Hoyas brought the Ramblers' stirring season to a close.

Quick-starting baseball squad travels west

By Jeff Stratton
Staff Writer

Baseball

The Iowa baseball team will pack its travel bags and head west, taking a 7-1 record with them for a 10-day road trip that begins today with games against Utah and New Mexico at Albuquerque, N.M.

Coach Duane Banks has his squad off to one of its best starts in recent years. "This is the best start we've ever had," he said. "The year we won 44 ballgames we started 12-4. But we should be 7-1, we're an experienced team."

The experience Banks referred to may have led to two Hawkeye wins last weekend. "We are playing well for this early in the season," Banks said. "They are doing what they have to do. We were down twice by five runs last weekend and came back to win."

IOWA WILL PLAY 15 games in the span of 10 days, and Banks thinks that may take its toll on the Hawkeyes. "It will be a real tough trip from a mental standpoint," he said. "The kids will get awfully tired. Thank goodness we have played some games. Who knows what will happen with the won-loss record."

The Hawkeyes will use the trip to prepare for the rugged battles ahead in the Big Ten. "We will be a better team coming out," Banks said. "We're playing to get ready for the Big Ten season."

Up to this point in the season, the Hawkeye bats have been a potent offensive force, providing the pitching staff with a cushion.

RANDY FRAKES, a sophomore from Des Moines, is off to a hot start on the season. Frakes is hitting .313 on the year, a total that includes 14 runs batted in and six home runs. Outfielder Tom Snowberger, a junior from Pittsburgh, Penn., is hitting .348, with 10 runs batted in for Iowa.

Other top averages for the Hawkeyes are: Jeff Gurtcheff at .481, Mike Darby at .450, Rob Eddie at .444 and Bryan Luedtke at .400.

The Hawkeyes will get a stern test in their game with New Mexico as Coach Vince Capelli has his team off to a 19-6 record on the year, but Iowa will be facing a squad that has had injury problems lately.

"We started off 17-2," Capelli said, "but recently we have had some injuries to key people. We don't have everybody healthy. Rod Nichols, one of our top pitchers, just twisted his ankle, and Doug Lindsay, our first baseman, may be lost for the year."

CONSISTENCY HAS been the key to the Aggies season, Capelli said, particularly in the areas of defense and hitting, but pitching is the strength of the New Mexico team this year.

"I am satisfied with the first four or five pitchers and our top reliever," Capelli said. "You can't get by without pitching."

Heading up the Aggie staff are Dean Dwain and Brett Davis. Dwain sports a 6-0 record for the season, while Davis is 6-1 on the year. Reliever Eddie Bartholomew has also performed well, Capelli said.

The New Mexico coach is also looking forward to renewing his friendly rivalry with Iowa's Banks. "Duane is always griping at the umpires when he loses," Capelli laughingly said. "And he eats too much food when he comes over to my house. Seriously, Duane is one of the nicer people in the game. I wish we could get up to Iowa City to play some games."

When Iowa squares off with Missouri Saturday, the Hawkeyes will face a team that has discovered the home-run ball this year. The Tigers, 14-1 on the year, have hit 30 home runs this year, a total that exceeds all of last season's output.

Missouri is led by designated hitter/pitcher Dave Otto who is hitting .471 and has a 3-0 record on the mound with two complete games to his credit.

Duane Banks: "We will be a better team coming out. We're playing to get ready for the Big Ten season."

Wife of ex-Bruin coach Wooden dies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Nell Wooden, wife of former UCLA basketball coach John Wooden, died early Thursday at St. Vincent's Medical Center after a long illness. She was 73.

Wooden died at 5:55 a.m., Iowa time, after being hospitalized for nearly three months, hospital spokeswoman Karen Agelson said. Doctors said she died of a "combination of factors."

She had reportedly suffered from emphysema for 2½ years, undergone double replacement hip surgery, suffered two heart attacks, endured a 93-day coma and developed cancer of the pancreas and diabetes.

The former Bruins' coach and his wife were married 52 years. Before each game of his illustrious career, Wooden would wink, nod, smile or blow a kiss to Nell. She would make a circle with her thumb and index finger in response.

Wooden, known as the Wizard of Westwood, amassed a 620-147 record in 27 seasons at UCLA, and won a record 10 NCAA titles. He retired in 1975 after defeating Kentucky for his final title.

Wooden and Nell Riley met at a carnival in Martinsville, Ind., when he was a high school freshman.

Funeral services will be private. The family has asked in lieu of flowers that donations be made to the American Cancer Society or American Heart Association.

She is survived by her husband and two children.

Owners seeking seven-game playoff series

CLEARWATER, Fla. (UPI) — Major League owners proposed Thursday that baseball switch from a five-game to a seven-game playoff series beginning this season and asked the Players Association for an answer by next week.

The owners made the proposal at a negotiating session on the basic agreement.

The Players Association, however, is not sure it will accept the proposal under the current financial setup and indicated it might agree to the change on a one-year trial basis.

Savard says he discussed trade with Lafleur

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal Canadiens general manager Serge Savard said Thursday that he and Guy Lafleur discussed the feasibility of a trade last year involving the former all-star right winger.

Savard said Lafleur initiated the discussion because he was depressed about his play with the Canadiens.

"We discussed it as friends; not as general manager-player," Savard said in an interview. "Nothing came of the discussion because Lafleur did not follow it up."

When asked whether Lafleur had formally asked to be traded, Savard replied: "It could have been. I don't know. There have been general managers before me. I don't want to talk about it. We didn't discuss it this year."

Lafleur said in an interview Wednesday that prior to his retirement last November, he asked three times to be traded but Savard refused.

Giants trade Ex-Wolverine Woolfolk to Oilers

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — The New York Giants Thursday traded running back Butch Woolfolk to the Houston Oilers for a third-round choice in the April 30 draft, the club announced Thursday.

Woolfolk, a first-round draft choice out of Michigan in 1982, never lived up to expectations with the Giants. He barely played over the last half of the 1984 season and finished the year with 92 yards on 40 carries.

Woolfolk did not carry the ball in two playoff games as Joe Morris, the team's second-round choice in 1982, took over the halfback spot. The Giants recently signed fullback Maurice Carthon, currently of the USFL's New Jersey Generals, to go along with Morris and fullback Rob Carpenter.

Conlon to return for Illini match

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

Earlier this season, the Iowa women's tennis team defeated Illinois, 5-4, at the Indiana Invitational.

Since then, the Hawkeyes have come up blank in the win column but excitement is running high because the Illini come to Iowa City today for a rematch with the Hawkeyes.

The meet is scheduled for 2 p.m. on the Kinnick Stadium Courts. If the weather is bad, the meet will start at 1 p.m. at the Iowa City Racquet Club.

Iowa will then take off Saturday to California for a week-long trip that will include matches against Cal-Santa Barbara, Pepperdine, Brown, San Diego and U.S. International.

BUT FIRST ON the agenda is Illinois.

"We played very aggressive against (Illinois) when we played them earlier this season," Iowa Coach Charley Darley said. "We're going to have to play very well to beat them this time and I feel we're capable of doing it."

Tennis

Today's match will mark the return of No. 1 player Michele Conlon to the line-up. The Iowa City native has missed nearly a month due to a pulled stomach muscle. "Having Michele back will be a big plus for us," Darley said. "Pennie's been playing well at No. 1 and with Michele back we'll be twice as tough."

Kim Martin says the return of her teammate should fire up the entire squad. "She played with us when we beat Illinois," the Iowa co-captain said. "It'll be great to have the entire team back together and we're expecting similar results."

WOHLFORD'S RETURN to No. 2 sets up an interesting match-up. The River Forest, Ill., native will be playing against former high school teammate Kathy Neil, who Wohlford beat for the first time in her career at Indiana. "To finally beat her really felt great," Wohlford said. "I was really ready for that match and I'll be ready for this one."

"I know she'll be wanting to get back at me," the freshman left-hander added. "But I'll just have to go out and play the same aggressive tennis I've been playing."

The Hawkeyes are equally excited about their trip to California. "I'm really looking forward to it," freshman Kathy Ruck said. "We're going to play a lot of good teams out there."

THE SEASON HAS been especially rough for Ruck, who is winless since walking on the team in January. "It was really tough in the beginning," she said. "There's a lot of pressure to win but I like that. I know it's only a matter of time before I break through. I just have to keep on working hard."

Wohlford knows the competition in California will be tough. "Most of the people out there will be real strong players," she said. "I can't afford to look at other players. I just have to play my own game."

Darley has added yet another walk-on to the squad. Pam Moyer, who was a member of the Iowa field hockey team, has joined the Hawkeyes. "She won the intramural tournament," Darley said. "She hits the ball pretty well."

Wheeler's squad off to California

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

Although the Iowa men's indoor track season ended on a sour note, and injuries have hampered the team's spring progress, Coach Ted Wheeler's Hawkeyes will meet a brighter side of athletics over the next few days, in the warm form of the California coast as they gear up for the outdoor season with a spring trip to the west.

The team will spend its spring-break weekdays in Santa Barbara, where it will be training daily, and its weekends competing in two California meets.

This weekend, Iowa will join Southern California and San Diego State in a triangular at USC, in Los Angeles.

NEXT WEEKEND, Mar. 29 and 30, the Hawkeyes will be participating in the Stanford Relays in Palo Alto, Calif.

Between the meets the team won't be just shaking hands with Goofy, Micky and Minnie at Disneyland, or hanging ten at Malibu. Wheeler plans to put his crew to work in Santa Barbara.

Track

"We'll be training in Santa Barbara," Wheeler said. "It's very nice out there, and I've been there (Santa Barbara) before, but the team hasn't."

Wheeler is hoping the outdoor season will get off to a running start in California, after the indoor year fizzled to a close with the protested disqualification of Iowa's mile-relay team at the Big Ten Indoor Championships.

IOWA'S RONNIE MCCOY was called for bumping John Thomas of Indiana during the third leg of the race, but Wheeler said that after he spoke with others who observed the incident, as well as McCoy and Thomas, he was convinced that Thomas was at fault.

The Iowa coach also had a film of the alleged bump which he said indicated that the meet judges were mistaken in their ruling.

Wheeler, who protested the ruling during the meet, but to no avail, has since sent that film to the Big Ten office, where it is still being reviewed.

The disqualification dropped Iowa from sixth to eighth in the final team standings at the meet. Wheeler felt that the incident could have a positive rather than a negative effect on his team during the outdoor season.

"I presume (the team) won't let it happen again," Wheeler said. "We'll have to wait and see if it motivates them, but I don't know what the effect will be."

INJURIES WILL probably have a negative effect on the Hawkeyes early in the year. Distance man Andy Wiese is still hampered by an Achilles tendon injury, and freshman sensation Patrick McGhee is being slowed by a stress fracture of the second metatarsus — a bone in the instep of the foot — which he suffered at the Big Ten meet.

Both are doubtful for the USC triangular, but Wheeler hopes to have them available for the Stanford Relays. Doctors are working on a special shoe for McGhee, according to Wheeler.

Despite the injuries, Wheeler was able to give a tentative race lineup for the season, although he was unable to name lineups in some events.

Wheeler, who throughout the generally successful indoor season contended that Iowa is an outdoor squad, believes an upper division finish in the Big Ten Outdoor Championships has to be the goal for his team.

"There is a collective goal," Wheeler said, "and that is to finish in the top division of the Big Ten. And there are individual goals, where each man tries to perform his best, and maybe advance to the NCAAs (championships)."

NCAA swim meet to challenge Iowa

By Jeff Stratton Staff Writer
The Iowa men's swimming team will get a chance to measure itself against some of the best competition in the world at the NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships, March 28-30, in Austin, Texas, and Coach Glenn Patton is looking forward to the opportunity.

Glenn Patton

"The NAAs are billed as the most exciting meet in the world," Patton said. "The greatest swimmers in the United States and the world will be there."

Iowa, which has been idle since finishing third at the Big Ten Championships behind Indiana and Michigan, is taking a small, but talented team to the NAAs meet.

THE HAWKEYES WILL be led by their trio of Big Ten titlists, John Davey, who won the 500-yard freestyle and the 400 individual medley, Tom Williams, who successfully defended his title in the 50 freestyle and Mike Curley, who won the 200 individual medley for the second-straight year, will be shooting for all-American honors, Patton said.

"We are looking for as many all-Americans as we can get," Patton said. "Davey, Williams and Curley are our realistic shot at all-Americans, and those three are the only guys that can go into the meet with any kind of shot at winning a title."

The top 12 finishers in each event win all-American honors, an achievement Patton called "very prestigious."

Patton is also hoping that Iowa's three relay teams will finish in the top 12 at the NAAs meet.

IN THE 400 medley relay Iowa will be represented by Curley, Steve Ferguson, Dick Orbell and Williams. In the 400 freestyle relay Williams, Ferguson, Ed Lower and either Davey or Martin Svensson will swim. Iowa will go with Ferguson, Lower, Davey and Alan Hays in the 800 freestyle relay.

Other swimmers representing Iowa will be Mark Stori and diver Glen Galemno.

Swimming

Curley said competing in the NCAA championships is the dream of every swimmer. "The ultimate goal is to make the Olympic team," he said. "Then, next is to make the NAAs. It is the second fastest meet in the world and is the highest goal I can attain."

Williams, who finished eighth last season in the 50 freestyle at the NAAs championships, looks at the meet as an opportunity to swim as fast as he possibly can. "I'm excited," he said. "All I want to do is go there and swim fast. If I do that I'll do well and that's all I want to do."

IN RECENT YEARS the NCAA championships have been dominated by the sunbelt schools, and Patton said he expects that to be the case this year. The Iowa Coach said Florida looks like the team to beat, with Alabama, Texas, Southern Methodist and the Pacific-10 Conference schools battling for spots in the top 10.

Iowa finished 23rd in the NAAs meet last year and Patton hopes to improve on that showing this season. "This year we are hoping for the top 20 and aspiring to be in the top 15," Patton said.

From Austin, Iowa will head to Los Angeles to compete in the United States Swimming Senior Nationals, April 2-6.

Blues master B. B. King lets loose with some licks on his guitar Lucille, much to the delight of 2,054 fans at Hancher Auditorium Wednesday night. As one fan put it, "The thrill is definitely not gone."

Dependable King makes his guitar talk at Hancher

By Alex Wilding-White
Staff Writer

THANK GOD, some things in this life never change. For most, stagnancy equals boredom, but in the case of blues guitar master B. B. King, never changing just means dependability. At the Student Commission of Programming and Entertainment-sponsored Hancher Auditorium concert Wednesday night, 2,054 devotees showed their appreciation for that.

Opening the show for King and Co. was Chicago favorite Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows. Being from the Windy City myself, I can personally attest to the fact that everything about the Fellows is pure Chicago. The way they look, act, sound and just carry on about the place could only have been the result of playing Chi-town.

HEAVY'S THE WORD for these guys, and I ain't talkin' about Big Twist's physique. Whether they were strolling through "Funky Town," having themselves a "Street Party," coming on like a "Steam Roller" or serenading to "Just One Woman," the Fellows knew how to put things across.

The Fellows put the emphasis on good times and judging from the crowd reaction, I'd have to say they did the trick alright. My only beef, and it ain't much of one, is that the Fellows are definitely suited for someplace where the folks can dance.

That said, King's set started out the same way Big Twists' did, with the band cooking for a couple of numbers before the big man hit the stage. Dressed in matching cream-colored three-piece suits (sans ties) and looking as "with it" as you please, the band was in top form, hitting their changes and ripping through solos with the polish of a seasoned jazz group.

WHEN KING FINALLY got up onto the stage, the roar must have been heard a mile away. Talk about dependable, "Everyday, I Have The Blues" kicked off his set and got everyone in the right mood. And all the favorites were here: "Caledonia," "How Blue Can You Get," "The Thrill Is Gone," "Rock Me, Baby" and so on.

In contrast to shows in the past, King placed more emphasis on his playing than his singing. Solos were drawn out as far as they could go without getting redundant. Having such a crack outfit behind him no doubt had a lot to do with this, with King giving his band members lots of room to solo. King himself showed all the tricks he has come to be famous for and elicited numerous hoots and howls when his phrases hit the mark. As they say in blues circles, the man knew how to make his guitar talk.

For his encore, King played the title song he wrote for the soundtrack of Into The Night. Maybe not the most impressive number of the evening, but certainly done well enough to see the Hancher crowd out well. As one member of the audience put it, "The thrill is definitely not gone."

Movies in town

Witness. "Constant shifts (in the film's focus) eventually diffuse the moral tension... This equivocation isn't crucial, but neither is it minor." (R. Panek, Feb. 11). At the Cinema 1.

Beverly Hills Cop. "Like the Beverly Hills police in the movie, (Eddie Murphy) wins the viewer over in spite of his irreverence, or maybe, because of it." (M. Grote, Dec. 7). At the Englert 1.

Into the Night. "(Director John) Landis' usual slam-bang, anything-to-keep-'em-awake approach has been subdued to make way for a quirky little comedy-thriller that falls somewhere between an Alfred Hitchcock parody and a stylish end-up/update of the traditional film noir." (M. Grote, March 11). At the Englert 2.

A Passage to India. "A Passage to India occasionally exhibits a nice sense of humor (especially early in the film) and Judy Davis is engaging in her role, but for the most part, all it does is make one wonder what the hoopla is all about." (A. Hogg, Feb. 8). At the Campus 2.

Mask. This Peter Bogdanovich film stars Cher and Eric Stoltz in the true story of a biker lady and her son, whose face is disfigured by a congenital condition. At the Campus 1.

The Last Dragon. This film from Motown chief Berry Gordy is a contemporary urban fantasy combining music, dance and martial arts. Talmak stars as a New York City karate student and Vanity portrays the high priestess of the video-disc jockeys. At the Cinema 11.

Porky's Revenge. And just when you thought it was safe to go to the movies, the spring sequels arrive. This third installment of the Porky's series features the Angel Beach Six once again battling the arch-enemy of the film's title. At the Campus 3.

Friday the 13th Part V. Then comes the return of Jason as he slashes his way through a whole new bloodfest. And they called part four "The Final Chapter." Promises, promises. At the Astro.

Oscar suspense concerns TV ratings

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — The suspense at Monday's Oscar ceremony will not be over who will win the major awards, but how long they will talk.

The winners aren't quite foregone conclusions, but there are sure enough bets that this year's Oscar competition is, as one commentator for a San Diego television station noted off-camera, "almost a bore."

The talk of this town instead has been whether the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will regain the ratings it lost at last year's Oscar broadcast. The strategy is simple — keep it glamorous, keep it brief and keep it moving.

The most visible change from recent Oscar ceremonies is the replacement of Johnny Carson as the evening's host. Rather than let him lampoon the long speeches and the boring production numbers that have plagued recent broadcasts of the Oscars, this year's producers are addressing those problems directly. So out goes Johnny — who is, after all, a TV face — and in comes Jack Lemmon, a genuine movie star.

"That's nothing against Johnny," the show's co-producer Gregory Peck told the Hollywood Reporter last week. "He did a terrific job. Our intention has been to use as many film people as possible."

THOSE LUMINARIES include two representatives of Hollywood's golden era —

Jimmy Stewart, who will receive an Honorary Oscar, and Cary Grant, who will present him with the statuette.

The new Hollywood will be represented by rotating groups of hosts, including Candice Bergen, Jeff Bridges, Glenn Close, Michael Douglas, Gregory Hines, William Hurt, Amy Irving, Diana Ross, Tom Selleck and Kathleen Turner. Academy president and co-producer Gene Allen estimates this measure will save at least 20 minutes.

To encourage brevity even further, long-winded winners will receive several gentle, then several rude, reminders. A red light, unseen by viewers at home but visible on stage at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, will start flashing 30 seconds into an acceptance speech and gradually increase in intensity. Also at the 30-second mark, music will start to play softly, then increase in volume.

And the evening's major awards, usually clumped at the conclusion, will be interspersed throughout the show.

SUCH MEASURES might be more necessary this year than most. The evening should proceed with numbing predictability, and the wisdom of the industry forecasts these winners:

Best Picture: Amadeus;
Best Director: Milos Forman, for Amadeus;

Best Actor: F. Murray Abraham, as Antonio Salieri in Amadeus;

Best Actress: Sally Field, for her role in Places in the Heart;

Best Supporting Actress: Peggy Ashcroft, in A Passage to India;

Best Supporting Actor: Haing S. Ngor, in The Killing Fields.

Academy ignores first-rate movies in Oscar balloting

By Merwyn Grote
Staff Writer

IT IS OSCAR time, the period of the year when the Hollywood hotshots obscenely celebrate their own egos. It is also the time in which bewildered and irate critics bitterly complain that their favorite film, actor, actress or whatever was unfairly bypassed by the Academy. I, of course, am above such petty griping. After all, if the Philistines of Tinseltown wish to humiliate themselves by ignoring my superior vision of cinematic quality and giving out their precious little trophy to a bunch of untalented hacks, why should I care?

STILL, IT must be admitted that many fine works were overlooked in this year's roundup of nominees. Because of a lack of wide distribution, small publicity budgets or cross professional jealousies, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science failed to give some films their due. These omissions should not be completely unrecognized, so let us honor them here:

• Marvin's Room. Based on not one shred of historical fact, this film recounts the bitter professional and personal rivalries between Wolfgang Marvindeus Hamlich and the musical "boy genius" Salieri Manilow. The intensity of the feud is brilliantly summed up in a thought-provoking monologue in which Hamlich curses God for "giving me the soul of a Beach Boy, and the personality of a certified public accountant." After which he laments, "If God had given me a fraction of Manilow's charisma, I wouldn't have to plagiarize Scott Joplin in order to win an Oscar." According to New York Times critic Vincent Mayhe, "As Hamlich, Robby Benson sets the screen ablaze with a consummately passionate performance, but it is David Lee Roth's sensitive portrayal of Manilow that sets a new standard by which all future screen acting must be judged." Praline Kernel of The New Yorker added: "The sequence where Hamlich sabotages the staging of the 'Copacabana' production number at the Grammy Awards is a cinematic tour de force, ranking with the 'Time Warp' number in Rocky Horror Picture Show as a filmic landmark."

• Splices in the Heart. One of the many "save the studio" pictures of last year, this film stars Sally Field as Edna Zankewicz, a poor but honest widow and movie studio executive fighting to save her ailing film company from bank foreclosure. She desperately needs a box office blockbuster, but the only film she has in production is One from the Cheekbook, a bloated $60 million epic from the egomaniacal director Francis Ford Coppola (played with an endearing lack of pretense by Dom De Luise). Planned as a sequel to his previous flop, the bloated $50 million epic, The Rotten Flub, Cheekbook is already $20 million over budget and 6 months behind schedule after only 5 minutes of filming. So with the aid of her black stage hand (Eddie Murphy) and blind cinematographer (John Whatshisname), Edna bounces the infantile director off the lot and rewrites the film, making the 1920s period musical into a 1980s breakdance epic with a score by Irene Cara. The film is a boffo smash, but Splices in the Heart ends tragically when Edna foolishly invests all of her profits in Coppola's next project, Worms of Endearment, a bloated, $70 million musical remake of Dune starring Pia Zadora and Luciano Pavarotti.

• The Killing Fools. Responding to the demands of his fans that he should make "funny movies, like he used to," Woody Allen has concocted this absurdist fantasy based on his own 1976 Broadway smash, "Shoot 'em Again, Chuck." Allen stars, playing Garhardt Betz, a bumbling, mild-mannered, neurotic New York City intellectual who idolizes Charles Bronson and is particularly fascinated with the film Death Wish. One day when acting out his fantasy of being a crusading vigilante, Betz inadvertently guns down four young muggers who he has mistaken for a quartet of Nazi Volkswagen dealers. His deed is taken as an act of heroism and he becomes an instant media celebrity.

At the opening of the play in 1976, Allen said, "It is, of course, an absolute fantasy. How could a society possibly admire any individual who is totally ruthless, cold-blooded and lacks any sign of human compassion. If that were possible, then, you know, even someone like Ronald Reagan could get elected president, or something." The film co-stars Diane Keaton as a funny ACLU lawyer, Tony Roberts as a womanizing arms dealer and Howard Cosell as Mayor Edward Koch. Charles Bronson makes a special appearance as "The Spirit of Bronson," materializing throughout the movie to lend moral support and supply sharpshooting tips.

• A Soldier's Sorry. When an aging general's reputation is found beaten to death, investigative reporter Geraldo Rivera (played with self-amused smugness by Tony Orlando) is sent to solve the mystery. As the drama unfolds Rivera must determine if the general's reputation was the victim of a gang of roving anti-military, liberal TV journalists, or if the general himself accidentally destroyed his credibility with his own myopic miscalculations. This riveting mystery is highlighted by a sterling performance from George C. Scott, who gives just the right blend of Patton and Ebenezer Scrooge to his interpretation of Gen. William Westmoreland, the beleaguered soldier. And Rex Reed's impersonation of Mike Wallace is uncanny in its authenticity. (Note: The film was originally entitled A Soldier's Glory, but was hastily renamed after last-minute editing altered the ending.)

• A Passage to the DI. In yet another of her "consciousness-raising" films, Goldie Hawn stars as Muffy St. Regis, a cute-as-a-button young Yuppie, who plans to make a lot of money. "Although warned not to associate with 'the wrong kind of persons,' she impulsively journeys to the newsroom of a university newspaper so she can 'see how the poor wretches live.'" While there, she is possessed by the spirit of Lily Tomlin and long-repressed liberal impulses come to the surface. Later, at a Young Republican fundraiser at the country club, she compulsively admits that she voted for Mondale, once boycotted grapes and has secretly attended Jane Fonda film festivals. When she blurts out that she thinks William F. Buckley is "kinda yukky," she is ostracized by her conservative cohorts, cut off by Daddy and thrust into the real world to fend for herself. Fortunately, she is saved from becoming a bag lady when the benevolent staff of the newspaper takes her in and puts her to work on the editorial staff. There she lives happily ever after writing angry feminist editorials denouncing the male chauvinist conspiracy that denies women equal access to parking spaces in the student union parking lot.
