Leaders want to put research 'to work'

UI open house draws together various sectors

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Nearly 100 officials from the UI, state and local government and private industry attended a UI College of Engineering open house Tuesday intended to highlight how they can work together to enhance economic development in Iowa.

Although Paul Scholz, associate dean of the College of Engineering, said the college's annual open house is usually devoted to showcasing ongoing research programs, he explained UI officials decided this year to concentrate on the transfer of technology from the UI to the private sector.

Citing figures that indicate "universities conduct more than 50 percent of all the basic research in the United States," Ted Johnson, founder of the Cedar Rapids-based J-Tac Associates firm, said, "We need to take high-technology out of its white gloves and ivory towers and put it to work before it's too late."

UI PRESIDENT James O. Freedman agreed, stating, "Nothing is more important to our College of Engineering than to have relations" with the private sector.

But Freedman added that unlike universities in other areas of the country — where he said "links between university research efforts and industry and business" are simply "relationships on paper" — the UI has tried to implement programs that help make "significant advances between the university and industry."

He mentioned the UI Technology Innovation Center as an example of one of these programs.

Professor says software firm was hindered

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

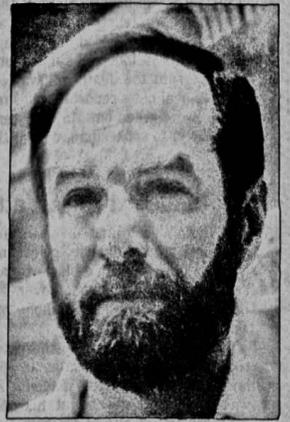

UI Center for Computer Aided Design Director Edward Haug chided The Daily lowan and state Board of Regents officials Tuesday for impeding the progress of the private computer software firm that UI officials established in 1983, and predicted the company will realize a profit this year.

Using an overhead projector to outline his complaints, Haug, a UI materials engineering professor, said UI officials "got hell from the press" when they created Computer Aided Design Software, Inc., in September 1983. CADSI was the first large-scale private corporation established by UI officials.

"We were on the front page of the campus newspaper three days a week," said Haug during a College of Engineering open house that attracted nearly 100 officials representing the UI, state and local government and private companies.

Contract negotiation provokes resignation

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

A member of the city's Resources Conservation Commission who sent a letter of resignation to the Iowa City Council last week said Tuesday his departure is due in part to the way the city has handled negotiations for renewed utility contracts.

Bob Singerman, a former chairman of the commission, who had served since 1982, said negotiations for new gas and electric franchises with Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. were "one of the things I got on the commission to work with."

HOWEVER, HE SAID the council's veto of a 1 percent franchise fee and some councilors' push for a 25-year franchise, which was longer than Singerman advocated, were "pretty important" reasons for his resignation.

"The city and Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric reached a franchise agreement, several years in the making, including a 1 percent rental fee to fund a local conservation program," Singerman stated in his letter received by the council last Friday.

"This agreement was abandoned when the city attorney (Robert Jansen), after several years of silence, vacillated with regard to the fee," he stated. "The RCC recommended getting a second legal opinion. Again, the council was not interested."

"Most council members jumped on the 'save-the-poor-taxpayer' bandwagon. Where was this concern earlier when a business tax-abatement program was established?"

AT ITS FORMAL meeting Tuesday, the council deferred taking the second of two votes approving the proposed 25-year utility franchises with Iowa-Illinois. City officials late last week discovered discrepancies between the city's previous 25-year franchises, which expired last October, and the proposed agreements.

Mayor John McDonald told the council Monday the proposed franchises were written solely by Iowa-Illinois and "the city loses some of the power and authority that we now have."

"I think we all have a lot of egg on our faces," Councilor Clemens Erdahl said at the meeting Tuesday. "One mistake we made as a matter of See Resources, page 8

Girl explodes bomb, kills two Israelis

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A teenage girl detonated a car packed with explosives near an Israeli checkpoint in southern Lebanon Tuesday, killing two Israeli soldiers and wounding two others, the Israeli military said.

The Lebanese National Resistance Front guerrilla group issued a communique saying, "There were several casualties among the Israelis, estimated at 50, in addition to the destruction of several vehicles." It was unclear if the Front meant there were 50 Israelis at the scene or 50 killed or wounded.

The 16-year-old driver, identified as Sana Mohaydaleh, was killed in the suicide attack, the Front said.

The girl drove a Peugeot 504 automobile packed with some 440 pounds of TNT into a group of Israeli soldiers and vehicles on a road between the villages of Bater and Jezzine, 23 miles southeast of Beirut, the guerrilla group said.

IN JERUSALEM, an Israeli military spokesman confirmed that a girl drove the car, but said the auto did not "storm" into the soldiers as the guerrillas claimed. He said it stopped short of the checkpoint before exploding.

"Two Israel Defense Forces soldiers were killed and two others slightly wounded when a vehicle that had arrived from the north exploded at the Batr Esh Shouf crossing point" into Israeli-held territory, the Israeli spokesman said.

Beirut television showed what it said was film of Mohaydaleh — a member of the pro-Syrian Popular Syrian Party — in which she talked about her suicide mission prior to leaving.

"I decided on martyrdom to free our land because I saw the misery of my countrymen under the occupation," the girl said. "I am feeling good because I am going to do an operation that I chose myself."

Court rejects race as grounds for suit

By Tamara Rood
Staff Writer

Race is not a valid reason to reject a potential apartment mate, Magistrate Stephen C. Gerard ruled Tuesday in Johnson County Small Claims Court.

Gerard dismissed a claim made by two women against their former roommate, who moved out after finding a replacement whom the two rejected because she was black.

"There must be specific and articulable reasons" to reject a proposed roommate, the judgment states, saying the two women rejected the roommate "solely because of her race."

Gerard called the case "unusual," saying that racial discrimination cases don't normally involve private citizens and researchers looking for legal precedence found "nothing similar" to this case.

Donna J. Wendel and Whitney L.

Harn, both of Iowa City, filed a $273 claim Dec. 5 against Kathryn L. Miller, after Miller moved out in October of the Iowa City apartment the three shared.

WENDEL AND HARN sought $173 for rent, cable TV and phone bills, and $100 in punitive damages for their "time wasted and mental distress," the claim states.

Miller, who now lives in Kalona, Iowa, found a black female student to take her place in the apartment before moving out. Wendel had met the woman and initially told Miller that she was an acceptable roommate, court records state.

But Harn refused to meet the woman and objected to living with a black person. Wendel then agreed to respect her feelings, according to the judgment.

Dr. Ruth embraces 'sexual literacy'

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

With her 4-foot-7-inch frame perched atop a wooden crate, Dr. Ruth Westheimer — or, as she'd pronounce it, Dr. Ruth Westheimer — spent two hours Tuesday night talking sex to UI students.

Westheimer, whose lucrative profession has been to advise absolute strangers about sex, addressed a crowd of more than 3,200 people in the Union Main Lounge and via closed-circuit television to the Union Ballroom.

In her thick German accent,

Westheimer — whose degree is not in medicine, but rather the "interdisciplinary study of the family" — counseled the UI crowd on topics ranging from premature ejaculations and contraception to oral sex and masturbation.

"I am not on a bandwagon to educate a generation of masturbators," she said. "I don't want a kindergarten teacher to walk into her classroom tomorrow and say, 'OK everybody, pull down your pants.'"

But Westheimer did attempt to squelch "those horrible myths Americans have about masturbation." "People in America believe if you bring yourself to sexual pleasure you will grow hair in the palms of your hands," she said. Westheimer went on to dispel fables concerning the effect of masturbation on one's eyesight, hair loss, diseases of the nose and insanity.

"NOT EVERYONE masturbates and that's OK," Westheimer said. "If I hear, however, that there is a student at The University of Iowa who masturbates four hours a day, I would say to him, 'Let me see your transcript so I know how you have time to masturbate so much.'"

Westheimer, who is currently an adjunct professor in the Human Sexuality

Teaching Program at The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, informed the UI crowd by citing examples of past clients and past "problems."

"There was one girl who came to me in the spring semester of her freshman year and she said, 'Look, I've been away from home eight months, I'm still a virgin and I've got to do something about it,'" Westheimer reported. "This girl, she looks around at the boys she knows and she goes, 'Eeny, meeny, miney, moe,' and says, 'OK, you are it and tonight we are doing it.'"

She continued: "Then she comes to See Ruth, page 8

Washington Post is libelous

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal appeals court Tuesday reinstated a libel verdict against the Washington Post, saying the newspaper had a "reckless disregard" for the truth in an article about former Mobil Oil Corp. President William Tavoulares.

Salmonella poisoning spreads

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Officials Tuesday investigated a second brand of milk in the largest outbreak of salmonella poisoning in U.S. history, linked to two deaths and suspected of causing illnesses in 2,200 people in five states.

The investigation into the deaths came as Jewel Companies Inc. announced it had indefinitely closed its Hillfarm Dairy in Melrose Park and removed all milk from its Jewel and Eisner food stores after a second brand of milk processed at the dairy was suspected of salmonella contamination.

Korea is poised at a very delicate time in its history" and if the government "continues to support dictatorial policies," the Chun-Reagan meeting could "fuel the right wing ideology that currently lies dormant." Reck, Manderscheid elected to LASA posts

In the Liberal Arts Student Associations executive elections held Tuesday, UI junior Mike Reck was elected president and UI sophomore Dave Manderscheid was elected vice president.

The winners garnered 185 votes, while the other slate drew in 102 votes, and one vote went to Donald Duck from the 17,500 Liberal Arts students eligible to vote.

Reck said he was "very pleased" about winning. He added that it was a "rough campaign with a lot of mudslinging behind the scenes. I'm glad it's over."

His running mate, Manderscheid, said he was "extremely elated." He estimated working about 40 hours during the week-long campaign.

Reck and Manderscheid ran a platform built on "experience, ability and enthusiasm."

At the top of their list of goals is a letter-writing campaign aimed at state and national legislators to protest financial aid cuts, budget cuts and tuition increases.

The new president and vice president also plan to re-evaluate credit hours assigned to courses, making it feasible to graduate in four years.

Their third goal is to improve the quality of a liberal arts education through upgrading conditions for teaching and research assistants by supporting their attempts to unionize.

Other goals include restructuring some LASA committees, improving communication with the nearly 50 LASA organizations through more frequent surveys and newsletters, and to recruit more members to the organizations.

In addition, their platform calls for divestment of UI funds from corporations doing business in South Africa and an alternative financial aid plan for students who don't comply with the Solomon amendment draft registration requirement.

UI collegiate council elects Devitt, Thompson

The UI Collegiate Associations Council, the academic arm of student government, elected UI senior Jeff Devitt to be president and UI junior Paul Thompson as vice president Monday.

The president elect said he was "thrilled about winning." When Devitt becomes the president May 17, he said he will continue with the work CAC is currently engaged in, such as union renovation.

Devitt, current CAC vice president, and CAC treasurer for two years, said although the CAC has a "definite role, academically, I don't think we should be afraid to deal with some issues that affect students indirectly... but we should be concerned with home first."

He emphasizes the need for student representation in Union renovation and stressed the need for more communication with the approximately 100 CAC subgroups.

CAC fits into a network, Devitt said, with the subgroups linked to the CAC which is in turn linked to state and federal student lobbying organizations.

Thompson, who has been a CAC member for one year, said he plans to continue the role Devitt has played in the vice presidential position — that is working with the state Board of Regents, state legislators and the governor on academic issues such as funding and tuition.

In addition, Thompson said his role includes reporting back to Devitt and the other CAC members on the progress of his state relations work.

Thompson was the vice president of the Associated Students of Business.

The two will be paid $500 a month for the president and $375 for vice president.

Lame duck CAC president Larry Lassiter said he believes the two will do a "fantastic job."

MD marathon starts Friday

In an effort to raise funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Association and UI Hospitals, Students Offering Service will sponsor its 11th annual Muscular Dystrophy Dance Marathon Friday and Saturday.

An estimated 450 students will dance in teams at the Union Main Lounge in order to raise pledge funds for MDA. In order to minimize fatigue among participants, five-minute breaks and sleep breaks as well as partner exchanges will be allowed, according to SOS Director Adam Miller.

Miller also said he expects the dance to bring in about $7,500 in proceeds.

But the amount of money raised, as well as the level of student participation in events such as this, has been somewhat disappointing in the past, according to Mitch Robinson, co-director of recruitment and registration for the UI residence halls.

"I think that the problem is that people who come to the dance don't come for the right reason," he said.

Bob Baker, co-director of recruitment and registration for the residence halls, said low participation in the marathon may be because "people think it's a greek activity. It's hard to sell to them."

Baker said a greater effort is being made to increase participation among dormitory residents. Students have the old image of an exhausting dance marathon, he said. "They don't realize that it's more like a party."

The MDA Dance Marathon will begin at 6:00 p.m. Friday and will conclude midnight Saturday.

Regents appointees meet with rigorous scrutiny

Brandstad's nominations should pass

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Legislative leaders are predicting the Iowa Senate will confirm the three people Gov. Terry Branstad has named to the state Board of Regents despite stiff opposition recently encountered by several of the governor's state agency appointments.

The Senate has already rejected Branstad's re-appointment of Norman Pawlewski as director of the state Department of Health and several of the governor's other appointees are expected to face uphill fights to gain confirmation.

But Senate Majority Leader Lowell Junkins, D-Montrose, said Monday,

"My prediction is that they (the three regents appointees) will most likely be confirmed, probably within the next week or so."

BRANSTAD ANNOUNCED the regents appointments of Jacklyn Van Ekeren, an Iowa State University junior, John Greig, an Estherville, Iowa cattleman, and Jim Tyler, a businessman from Atlantic, Iowa, March 15. If confirmed by the Senate, they will replace Board President S.J. Brownlee, former Lt. Governor Art Neu and Ann Jorgensen on the nine-member panel that is responsible for governing Iowa's three state universities.

Patti Cale, legislative director for United Students of Iowa, said while "all three" of Branstad's appointments to the board may have a difficult time gaining Senate approval, she thinks Van Ekeren may have the best chance of being confirmed.

NOTING THAT Van Ekeren, the first student who has been named to the board in 12 years, has been actively involved in student government and USI, Cale pointed out "the other two (appointees) have no background in higher education in Iowa."

Sen. Michael Gronstal, D-Council Bluffs, said, "In my view, Jacklyn Van Ekeren is the most qualified of three" regents appointees. But Gronstal, chairman of the subcommittee that reviewed her appointment, pointed out that "other members expressed concern about her qualifications" and reservations about naming a student to a six-year term on the board.

Two Senate subcommittees have reviewed Branstad's regent appointees — all Republicans — to the board, but each panel has declined to recommend approval or disapproval.

ALTHOUGH GRONSTAL said subcommittees usually recommend Senate approval for appointments to the board, he explained Branstad's three appointees have been closely scrutinized because some senators are unhappy with the governor for not re-appointing Neu to a second term on the board.

"There was a real big concern when Art Neu wasn't re-appointed back to the board," said Gronstal. Neu "was deeply involved in the work of the board and was a very dedicated regent."

He said both subcommittees mailed questionnaires to the three appointees to make "sure they have the same dedication that Neu did."

Gronstal also said although he believes the neutral recommendations regarding Branstad's three appointments indicate the displeasure some senators have with removal of Neu from the board, he also thinks they preserve the appointees' chances of gaining confirmation.

"We don't want to take one of those three and shoot them down because Neu was turned down," Gronstal said.

House denies state lawmakers ex officio status

DES MOINES — Concerned that individual lawmakers would become acting lobbyists for the State Board of Regents, the Iowa House Tuesday rejected an attempt to appoint four legislators as non-voting members of the board.

The bill, which failed 48-46, called for two senators and two representatives to be appointed to two-year terms on the board in charge of Iowa's three state universities and two special schools.

The four ex officio members, who would join the board's nine voting members, were to be selected by the majority and minority leaders of both legislative bodies. Official members are appointed to six-year terms by the governor and confirmed by the Senate. Supporters of the proposal said it would improve communication between the regents and the legislature, but opponents said it would put lawmakers in the position of being lobbyists or antagonists of the board.

Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said she opposed the bill because it would establish a bad precedent of placing legislators on boards.

"Some boards should be insulated as much as possible from political concerns," she said. "I don't think the legislature should prescribe what courses should be taught and what hours and those kinds of things."

The defeat of the bill marked the second time it had failed in the House. It came within one vote of the necessary 51 votes last month, then was debated again Tuesday on a motion to reconsider. The reconsideration motion by Rep. Clay Spear, D-Burlington, passed 51-46, but the bill died on the floor again.

Legislature debates controversial tax bill

By Sue Stoga
Staff Writer

The Iowa Legislature Tuesday forestalled debate on the controversial sales tax plan that will repeal Iowa's current tax on agricultural and industrial machinery and equipment.

The bill, which was written by a joint conference committee after both legislative bodies failed to reach a compromise on the logistics of the measure, was made public Monday evening.

Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, said the bill is expected to be brought before both the House and the Senate today for debate.

"There were (Democratic) caucus meetings (Tuesday) and we've taken a stand on the plan," Small said.

He said debate on the bill was delayed until today in order to allow conference committee members to meet again before final debate on the plan begins.

IF APPROVED, the bill would increase the number of services currently subject to the state's 4 percent sales tax and impose an 8 cent per package tax on cigarettes.

Items that would be subject to the state's sales tax include: candy, soft drinks, tanning salons and beds, interstate telephone calls, cable television, lottery tickets, cleaning services, pet grooming, water conditioning, lobbying fees, janitorial services, surveying services, camping fees, carpet cleaning, credit reporting, gun repair, landscaping and reflexology.

In addition, the bill would end the state's monopoly on wine sales and allow the private sector to sell the beverage. Establishments wishing to sell wine would be taxed $1.50 per gallon and be subject to wholesale and retail taxes.

The conference committee bill is not subject to amendment by the House or Senate.

Nakasone lauded for campaign to 'buy American'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — The Reagan administration praised Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone for political courage Tuesday in pledging to open Japanese markets, but said "concrete progress is urgently needed" to stave off protectionist pressures and ease trade tensions.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said President Ronald Reagan "was pleasantly surprised" by Nakasone's "unprecedented appeal to the Japanese people to embark on the path to free trade."

Announcement of the Japanese trade package, which was mostly a summary of concessions made in recent trade talks with the United States, came as Regan reached the midpoint of a 10-day vacation at his 'mountain-top' ranch.

The praise was offered despite an acknowledgment by Regan that the package of trade liberalization steps announced by Nakasone contained "few new or immediate market-opening measures."

However, he said its importance lies in the bold manner in which Nakasone, under intense pressure from the United States and countervailing political weight at home, went to the Japanese people in a bid to lower trade barriers and urged a dramatic shift in buying habits.

WHEN ASKED to predict how successful Nakasone will be in his "buy American" campaign, Regan replied, "I think it could be quite persuasive, because of the quite unusual nature of the plea."

Regan called the move "a pretty courageous action," by Nakasone — the first time a public appeal of that type has been issued directly to the Japanese people. "He's risking a lot politically here," Regan said.

Regan said Senate passage of a resolution directing Reagan to retaliate against the Japanese if significant trade concessions were not obtained within 60 days "had a jarring effect on many people in Japan" and spurred the Japanese government to action.

At the same time, he was careful not to encourage the protectionist sentiment on Capitol Hill that Regan has opposed in public and used in private to press the Japanese to reduce a trade imbalance that hit $37 billion last year.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Nakasone's statement indicates no real progress in the trade dispute. The prime minister could have offered a significant proposal, such as an immediate cut in tariffs on wood products, Packwood said in a statement.

"Instead, he just repeated what he's been saying all along," Packwood said.

Treasury Secretary James Baker said on the NBC "Today" show that the Nakasone proposal would be judged "on the basis of efforts to implement it, not just on the basis of what was said."

IRS agents raid tax protest group

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Agents seized tax protest material and 10 tons of silver bullion worth an estimated $1.9 million in raids on a suspected multimillion-dollar "warehouse banking" operation, documents released Tuesday show.

Internal Revenue Service agents carried out raids in seven cities Friday at residences and businesses affiliated with the Denver-based National Commodity & Barter Association.

Affidavits show the NCBA handled approximately $500,000 cash a day for its members and that the organization received more than $13 million in cash from two Colorado banks between January 1982 and November 1983.

IRS spokesman Scott Waffle described the NCBA as "kind of an umbrella" for groups protesting federal taxation.

"We aren't conducting our investigations to put the fear of God into taxpayers," Waffle said. "We base our investigations on whether or not there is evidence of violation of federal income tax laws."

The NCBA advocates non-payment of income taxes and "launders" money to prevent the IRS from learning an individual's tax liabilities, James Rosenbaum, U.S. attorney for Minnesota, said.

THE ASSOCIATION'S warehouse in Denver was raided, along with offices and residences in Littleton, Colo., Albany and Edina, Minn., Clackamas, Ore., Alexandria, S.D., and Sioux City, Iowa.

The 10 tons of silver bullion confiscated in the Denver area is worth $1.9 million, based on the $6.65 per ounce value of the commodity on the spot market in New York. Agents also seized about $250,000 in gold bullion in Colorado.

The U.S. attorney's office in Minneapolis, which is coordinating the investigation, Tuesday released inventories of the raids, except those in Colorado.

The inventory of material confiscated from the Albany office of Norbert Stelten includes 56 items — documents, tax protest literature and other records.

Stelten is described in affidavits as a charter member of the Posse Comitatus, a militant tax protest organization whose leader, Gordon Kahl, killed two U.S. marshals in a 1983 North Dakota shootout. Kahl later died in a shootout with law officers in Arkansas.

THE NCBA WENT to court Tuesday seeking motions to restrain the government from carrying out other raids on NCBA locations. The organization also wants to stop the IRS from using the information obtained in the raids and is trying to recover records and commodities, John Voss, a Denver member, said.

The NCBA contends government agents should be held in contempt of court because they violated a court order to obtain the information. That order required the government to show a compelling need and to seek a hearing before a search warrant was issued, Voss said.

Stelten sold a number of trusts to undercover IRS agents, whom he referred to the NCBA. The undercover agents were told the combination of his trusts and recordless cash transactions at NCBA would make it impossible for the IRS to successfully determine tax liability.

Stelten told undercover agents to tell the IRS to "go jump in the lake," an affidavit said.

More than 20,000 members belong to the NCBA, Stelten told undercover agents.

Pentagon praises controversial 'Star Wars' plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While the director of the "Stars Wars" program said today that the United States is making "incredible" progress in research toward its proposed space defense system, others throughout the world were questioning the program.

Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson said progress during the past year "really bodes well in terms of hope for the future, and of course, that's what this is all about."

Abrahamson opened an unusual series of space defense symposia at the annual meeting of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and gave an upbeat report to an overflow crowd of engineers and aerospace industry representatives.

"It has been a year of bureaucratic struggle getting established with a completely new concept and a new organization," he said. "It has been a year where we've tried to establish new and more rapid and responsive procedures of this scope and size.

"BUT MOST OF all it has been a year of incredible technical progress. And a year of rather amazing intellectual effort that goes well beyond just the technical program, but into the strategies, the policy implications of the program and the arms control implications."

Abrahamson, named to head the Strategic Defense Initiative after directing NASA's space shuttle program, borrowed a line from President Ronald Reagan and said, "The force is really with us."

"But the force is the people that are across this whole country... that are causing this to happen so much more rapidly than even myself, a technical optimist, believe could have happened."

Abrahamson said, "The real key is to have the people of this nation and the West, even the East, understand what we are trying to do, understand it well enough so they can see its inherent merits and in the end resolve to do the program."

MEANWHILE IN PARIS, French Defense Minister Charles Hernu conferred Tuesday with a high-level delegation of U.S. senators on Reagan's plan for the space-based defense, a ministry spokesman said.

The United States' NATO allies have expressed skepticism about Reagan's $26 billion, five-year "Star Wars" program, fearing any defensive shield could protect the United States, but leave Europe to fend off an enemy attack by itself.

European critics also have argued that the enormous cost of the project would divert funds needed for conventional forces, and also could outmode the nuclear defenses of Britain and France.

Hernu told the senators that

France's defense policy is linked to its principles of independence but also solidarity with its allies, the ministry spokesman said.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, arrived from London for a one-day visit to Paris. They also scheduled talks with Dole's French counterpart, Senate leader Alain Poper, and Finance Minister Pierre Berégovoy.

AND IN ST. LOUIS, scientist Carl Sagan said the defense industry welcomes the proposed federal funding for Reagan's "Star Wars" nuclear shield system although it is unworkable and "ruinously expensive."

"Before Star Wars sprang from the president's brow, the amount spent for nuclear weapons was a small fraction of what was spent for conventional weapons," said Sagan. "Now that we have Star Wars waved before the defense industry, it will become a juggernaut."

"IT CAN ONLY stop a certain fraction of the nuclear warheads coming in," he said. "Nobody — not even the most ardent administration supporter — believes a shield that will stop all Soviet warheads is technically feasible."

"If 10 percent get through, that's 1,000 warheads — enough to destroy the United States."

He said the Soviets could fire 10,000 warheads mixed with 50,000 decoys, and the computer system could not pick out the real bombs.

"It can be underflown, outfoxed, overwhelmed and is ruinously expensive," said Sagan.

Another problem with Star Wars, said Sagan, is it cannot be tested without an actual nuclear war. "You're betting the human species on that untried, untested computer system," he said.

Sagan made the comments at a news conference following a speech before about 14,000 teachers and educators attending the conference of the National Catholic Educational Association.

Eagle Forum, the group headed by arch-conservative Phyllis Schlafly, handed out a news release that said Sagan sought to fill children's minds with "fear, guilt and despair" with his talk on nuclear war.

And at the United Nations, Soviet Ambassador Richard Ovinnikov accused the United States Tuesday of using "cheap tricks" in connection with the Geneva arms reduction talks and called on Washington to put "all the cards" on the table.

The Soviet diplomat said, "Star Wars is not a defensive weapons system, it is really an offensive system."

"It could be used for a first strike itself, not just to prevent one," Ovinnikov said. "It is not a shield, but a sword."

Citizen groups denounce cuts in Social Security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of citizen groups, with birthday cakes and cards, Tuesday began a campaign against a proposed budget-cutting revision in Social Security, which marks its 50th anniversary this year.

They also accused President Reagan of making "an about-face" on Social Security by vowing the past year not to reduce benefits and then adopting a plan last week that would cut cost-of-living increases.

"You can't have our cake and cut it too," is a theme of the National Social Security and Health Care Campaign, which has scheduled more than 170 meetings this week with members of Congress, who are in recess this week.

"We think we have a pretty good chance of winning," Arthur Flemming, who headed the Department of Health, Education and Welfare during the Eisenhower administration, told a news conference.

Flemming, now co-chairman of Save Our Security coalition, one of the campaign's coordinators, charged it would be morally and legally wrong for Reagan or Congress to meddle with Social Security benefits.

THE CAMPAIGN estimated that the average Social Security recipient would lose $1,600 over the next five years under the compromise budget plan adopted Thursday by Reagan and Senate Republicans.

The National Council of Senior Citizens issued a five-page compendium of statements by Reagan during the past six months in which he said he would not reduce Social Security benefits.

In Des Moines, representatives from several senior citizens' and women's organizations plan to hold their birthday observance today for the federal Social Security System and the Medicaid and Medicare programs.

The celebration will mark the anniversary of Social Security and the 20th birthday of Medicare and Medicaid, but organizers also plan to use the occasion to demand that Iowa's congressional delegation vote against any budget cuts in those programs.

"They are trying to freeze our Social Security, increase our costs for Medicare and cut Medicaid," said Olive Ross, a spokeswoman for the Iowa State Council of Senior Citizens.

Students deplore latest aid limits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Student and college groups Tuesday denounced a compromise between President Reagan and Senate Republicans on federal student aid, charging the measure would drive a financial wedge between rich and poor.

"We think this is pretty radical, pretty outrageous," said Richard Jerue, a vice president for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. "I don't see this flying in Congress — no way."

The proposal, reached last Thursday as part of an overall budget-cutting compromise, would slash student assistance by about $2.2 billion over the next three years.

Most of the criticism is directed at a proposal to impose an assumed annual cost of a college education, $8,000, when deciding the amount of federal aid available to a student, based on financial need.

IF A STUDENT selects a college where the annual tuition tops $8,000, it would be up to him and his family to make up the difference — which could be several thousand dollars — without federal assistance.

"Clearly, this cap would have an impact on student choices — with only the wealthy being able to go to expensive private schools," said Kathy Ozer, legislative director for the United States Student Association.

Bruce Post, a staff member of a Senate education subcommittee, which is analyzing the measure, said, "It would separate the haves from the have-nots."

A spokesman for Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., the panel's chairman, said the senator "is reserving judgment," pending a review of the possible impact.

Stafford was one of the leading foes in Congress of Reagan's initial proposal to cut student loans and grants.

Under the compromise, Reagan's proposed $4,000 cap was replaced by an assumed annual cost of an college education of $8,000 in determining aid. And the limit of $32,500 for a family income of an assistance recipient was raised to $60,000.

Higher-education groups, as well as congressional staffers, said some members of Congress left town for their Easter recess a bit confused by the compromise, falsely believing the $4,000 cap had been doubled to $8,000.

Two sentenced in Liu murder

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — A court Tuesday sentenced two gangsters to life in prison for the California murder of a Chinese-American journalist and rejected their claims that Taiwan's military intelligence chief ordered the crime.

Chen Chi-li, reputed leader of Taiwan's largest gang — the counterpart to the Mafia — and Wu Tun, head of one of the group's syndicates, were found guilty of killing Henry Liu at his Daly City, Calif., home on Oct. 15, 1984.

The defendants were not in Taipei District Court when the sentences were announced. Their lawyers said they would appeal the sentences, which the law requires must be done within 10 days.

The court said the three-judge panel did not call for the maximum penalty of death for Chen, 41, because he had surrendered and confessed to the killing. Wu, 35, also received a lighter sentence because he acted on Chen's instructions.

THE COURT, however, rejected Chen's claim made during the trial that the two gangland leaders killed Liu on the orders of Vice Adm. Wong Hsi-ling, then director of the Defense Ministry Intelligence Bureau.

Chen had testified that Wong ordered him to murder Liu because Wong believed the journalist was working as a spy for Peking.

Chen said Wong "knew that Liu had in his possession information damaging to Wong and might even be planning some action against Wong."

Chen said he was convinced that by killing Liu, "he might do the country a great service and at the same time receive protection from (Wong's) intelligence bureau against his gangster activities."

The court said Chen left a tape in the United States and told one of his friends to turn it over to the FBI when and if he was arrested after he returned to Taiwan.

ON THE TAPE, released by the FBI to Taiwan's law authorities, Chen described Liu's killing in detail and claimed he carried out the crime on Wong's order, the court said.

Wong and his two colleagues, Deputy Director Lt. Gen. Hu Yi-ming and third department assistant chief, Col. Chen Fu-men, were removed from their jobs and detained Jan. 15.

They are charged as accomplices in the murder and are being tried separately by a military court, which will meet for its second session Friday. If convicted, they face sentences ranging from 10 years imprisonment to death.

Liu, a native of mainland China who fled to Taiwan in 1949, came to the United States in 1967 as the Washington correspondent for the Taiwan Daily News. He became a naturalized U.S. citizen.

A copyrighted story in the May issue of Mother Jones Magazine, however, indicated Taiwanese government complicity in the murder.

ACCORDING TO THE report, Liu had written articles and books critical of the Kuomintang, the Nationalist party that has ruled the Republic of China since 1949, under the pen name of Jiang Nan.

The report also alleges that Chen Chi-li, one of the convicted defendants, is "widely known to be a close personal friend of Chiang Kai-shek's grandson Chiang Hsiao-wu, son of the current president of Taiwan and considered by many to be next in line."

The report paraphrases a story in the Hong Kong magazine Asiaweek alleging that Chen Chi-li placed an overseas call to Chen Hu-men, a Taiwanese intelligence official, following the murder and prior to Chen Chi-li's departure to Taiwan.

The magazine article states, "The call, saying the mission had been accomplished, was recorded by the National Security Agency and provided irrefutable evidence that the Taiwan government was involved in the assassination."

Police officer says no warning issued

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A white police sergeant testified Tuesday that no warning was given before members of his police unit opened fire on a crowd of about 4,000 blacks last month, killing at least 19.

"I did not hear any warning," Sgt. Benjamin Rudman said in testimony on the March 21 shooting in the southern town of Uitenhage, 540 miles south of Johannesburg.

Sporadic violence continued in the Uitenhage area, with police reporting four houses, a beerhall, a church hall and a school were set ablaze by black rioters in a 24-hour period up to noon Tuesday.

A police spokesman said police fired tear gas to disperse the crowds and that there were no injuries in the incidents, which followed a weekend of violence in which at least five people lost their lives.

RUDDMAN TESTIFIED in Uitenhage before Judge Donald Kannemeyer, appointed by the government to investigate the incident that claimed more lives than any other single police action since the 1960 killing of 69 blacks at Sharpeville.

The crowd of 4,000 blacks was marching from the black township of Langa in Uitenhage to an outlawed funeral when the shooting began.

Lt. John Fouche, who led the unit involved in the incident, has said he gave the order to fire after one stone was hurled at his men because he feared they were in danger and that the blacks were on their way "to kill white people."

In other testimony before Kannemeyer, police Maj. Daniel Bignaut, who is in charge of local riot control units, said in Uitenhage Tuesday that he had requested heavy ammunition for police after hearing rioters were laughing off light shotgun wounds.

He said that when heavier ammunition is used against rioters, "they are more careful, whereas in the past they would have stormed police vehicles without hesitation."

Cambodian rebels try to regain camp

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand, (UPI) — Cambodian rebels battled for control of their Vietnamese-occupied stronghold Tuesday and Vietnamese shells fell on a refugee camp in Thailand.

Fighting for the Khmer Peoples' National Liberation Front's camp Nong Chan was intense but slowed when rain swept the base, Thai military sources said.

The guerrillas regained half of the sprawling stronghold Monday, a day after it was overrun by Hanoi's forces for the second time in Vietnam's offensive, which began in November.

Nong Chan, 15 miles northeast of the key Thai border town of Aranyaprathet, originally was captured by the Vietnamese Nov. 21 after four days of fierce fighting.

It was the first guerrilla base to fall to the Vietnamese during the offensive, which has subsequently overrun all major rebel camps along the Thai border and dealt a serious blow to the resistance.

Rebel and Thai military sources said eight guerrillas have been killed and 48 wounded since the battle began at Nong Chan. They estimated that between 70 and 80 Vietnamese had been killed or wounded.

SEVERAL VIETNAMESE shells hit a nearby U.N. refugee camp inside Thailand known as Site 6 and another Liberation Front camp — Nong Samet, also called Rithisen.

About 20,000 former civilian residents of Nong Chan are being housed at the Site 6 refugee camp. They were packed and waiting for the signal to evacuate to a safer area farther inside Thailand.

Meanwhile in Washington, two non-communist Cambodian resistance leaders fighting the Vietnamese forces occupying their country met Tuesday with State Department officials to seek expanded U.S. aid.

"We cannot fight the Vietnamese with our bare hands," said H.E. Son Sann, president of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front and a former prime minister.

Joined by Prince Norodom Ranariddh, supreme commander of the Sihanoukist National Army and son of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Son Sann met at the State Department with Paul Wolfowitz, assistant secretary for East Asian and Pacific Affairs.

When money talks

The compromise divestment bill that would remove state funds from American corporations in South Africa that discriminate racially, passed Monday by the Iowa Senate, is a small step — but better than nothing.

The question of divestiture is a difficult one. By South African standards, most American corporations there are enlightened. Many argue that they better the lives of countless blacks, serve as a model of how nondiscriminatory employment and pay practices can and should work and provide an opportunity for the U.S. government to press for continued democratic reform. Those are reasonable and humane positions.

But they don't seem to be working. There have been some token and cosmetic changes: Asian and "Colored" inhabitants now have a separate, but powerless, house of Parliament, but the black majority is excluded from even that; and some sports, hotels and restaurants are integrated now. But, with only a temporary slowdown, the move to forcibly remove blacks to artificial homelands in South Africa continues. Those homelands are in fact arid wastelands set up as powerless islands; they are more like concentration camps.

The Botha administration shows no signs of realizing that keeping the majority of the population in little better than slave status is a policy doomed to failure.

Unfortunately, that failure is likely to be bloody, because the government is taking no steps to ensure a peaceful transition to majority rule. If the United States allies itself with the forces of oppression it will be seen as the oppressor and one more country will hate the United States. Divestment is the only tool powerful enough to force South Africa to change.

Actions like those of the Iowa Senate are good first steps, but they must be prepared to go further to force the hand of the U.S. government. It must be made clear that unless the government of South Africa begins now to move toward full political and economic rights for the black majority, the United States will put its money where its mouth is.

Chile today ...

Two very small stories, having very sinister implications, were buried in March's newspapers.

The first was that Nestor D. Sanchez, deputy assistant secretary of defense, visited Chile to strengthen ties between the Chilean government and the Pentagon that had cooled since 1976. The second came later in the month when Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Langhorne A. Motley paid a visit to Chilean President Augusto Pinochet Ugarte. The purpose was to extend U.S. influence in the South American coastal country.

These news stories are sinister because they indicate a renewed support by the Reagan administration and the Pentagon for the repressive and reactionary Chilean military junta.

This should not happen, and it especially should not happen secretly.

It should not happen because it violates a Congressional resolution concerning human rights enacted in 1976 and amended in 1981. The 1976 resolution banned both security assistance to the Chilean state police and arms sales and military assistance to Chile. The 1981 amendment allowed for rescinding this ban if three conditions were fulfilled.

First, Chile must make significant progress in human rights according to recognized principles. Second, Chile must neither aid nor abet international terrorism. Third, Chile must take appropriate steps to bring to justice those implicated in the 1976 murder in the United States of former Chilean ambassador to the United States Orlando Letelier and a U.S. citizen, Ronni Moffit.

The third condition has not been met. Chile has continued to refuse to extradite three former intelligence officers implicated in the murder. And although the Chilean government has refrained from international terrorism in the form of harassing Chileans now living in the United States, it continues to terrorize its citizens who remain at home.

The U.S. human rights policy enacted by Congress recognizes three broad areas of rights that should be guaranteed by a country if it is to receive foreign aid: the right against physical violation by the government against the person; civil rights, including freedom of speech; and political rights including the right of citizens to change their government.

The military dictatorship under General Pinochet systematically violates all three.

Amnesty International annually documents the use of torture used by the Chilean secret police. These tortures include routine use of electrical shocks to every part of the body.

There is no freedom of speech in Chile. People who speak out against the government face retribution.

And there are no political rights for Chileans. They won't be allowed to participate in the government until 1990, when they will be allowed to vote for the candidates who have been appointed by the present junta.

It wasn't always so repressive in Chile. In the 1950s and 60s, Chile had a democratic system that rivaled those of Western Europe. The problems began in the early 1970s when a socialist coalition government, under Salvador Allende Gossens, began to enact changes in the system of capital ownership and in the system of international trade.

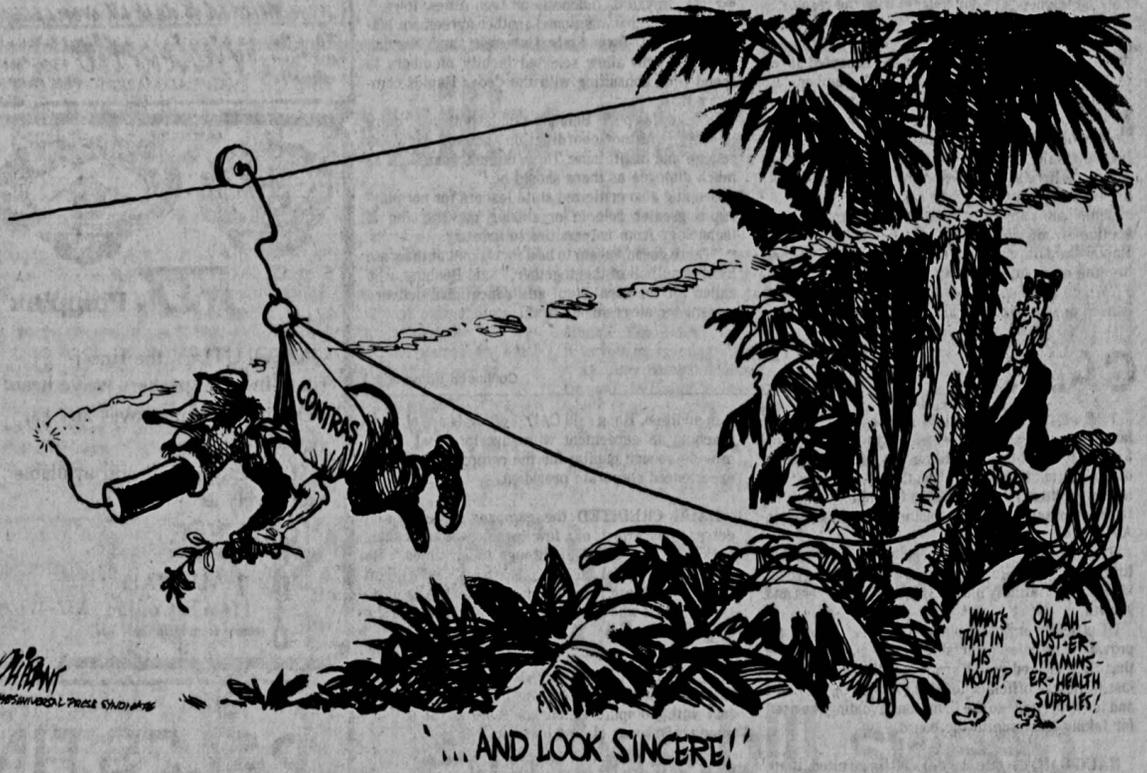

One of Allende's moves was to nationalize the U.S. copper mines in Chile. Those mines represent more than a quarter of the world's copper reserve. A military coup d'etat followed. Allende was murdered. And the United States, under the presidency of Richard Nixon, quickly recognized the new government.

Now it appears that the Reagan administration is anxious to legitimize the Pinochet regime in order to resume military cooperation and to protect U.S. interests in the country.

The United States accounts for 21 percent of the exports and 26 percent of the imports of Chile. We get industrial metals and off-season produce from them while they get petroleum and manufactured goods from us.

But we should not provide the Chilean government with the military tools to repress its citizens. And we should not allow the ethic of "the bottom line" to interfere with our goal of ensuring human rights and justice.

Cash-or-credit choice isn't easy

By Tim Solinger

THE OTHER DAY in the mail I received a very unusual offer from a bank marketing one of the country's major credit cards. The application stipulated that in return for signing on the dotted line I would instantly qualify for a credit line of $50,000.

Like any person of average curiosity and intelligence, I immediately began to search through the fine print for the catch, no easy feat with all of the accompanying leaflets pushing such things as luggage, seatcovers and coffee-makers.

After a few minutes, however, I was still holding this piece of paper, unable to find any tricks, the $50,000 figure staring at me in boldface type. Unbelievably enough, the bank's offer seemed legit. No catch.

SO LIKE ANY PERSON with average self-control, I quickly tossed the application into a wastebasket. A $50,000 credit line is not only terribly flattering, it is also terribly tempting. For a moment or two, visions of that dream, two-bedroom starter home danced in my head, but these were spoiled by the image of a realtor asking me to write my address and phone number on a charge slip.

Since then I have thought about that application and wondered exactly how a bank could even think of extending that kind of credit to a person like me.

Guest opinion

I have nothing against lenders making overtures to borrowers, but I do think a little sense of proportion is necessary. Without some restraint, we'll likely end up with customers biting off more than they can chew and lenders furiously swallowing losses, which is the case today.

MY WIFE AND I are not people of extraordinary means. We rent, make a modest living and own two aging cars beset by fairly typical maladies. It's in no way a bad life, it's just one that somehow doesn't come out to a $50,000 credit line.

I really have to wonder about banking. Today we have large countries like Brazil creeping toward default, savings and loan associations in Ohio are in serious trouble, many rural banks have either closed or are on the verge and thousands of deserving farmers can't get the help they need.

But amid all this financial travail it is somehow possible for a $50,000 credit application to find its way to my mailbox.

I suppose I should feel honored to be among such card-carrying elite. Given today's epidemic of careerism, it would certainly be a fashionable reaction. Actually, I don't get it, but obviously some clever bankers do. With such a show of confidence in me and my wife, they seem to have stumbled upon the secret to our future. I wish they would give me the name of their astrologer.

IN A WAY I have to hand it to that bank. When I think of that application and then look at our rusting cars and hodgepodge of possessions, I have to admit that bank has pluck — not much sense, maybe, but pluck surely. They also must want customers awfully bad.

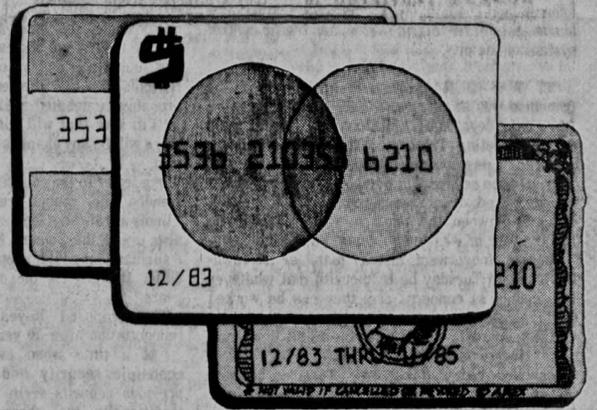

I never thought I would profess admiring my own ignorance on a subject, but I'm glad I don't understand economics any better than I do.

There's something wrong when banks can dream up such wild, frivolous marketing campaigns while farmers and other people in need can't get help, let alone a foot inside the proverbial door.

One thing I do know is that for every person who succumbs to the pressures of moderation, there's going to be someone who signs on for one of these credit card bonanzas.

Already I am bracing for my next trip to the car lot, when I hear a salesman say, "Will that be cash or charge?"

Reform plan brought back to life

LAST NOVEMBER I opined that the administration's tax reform package was one of those large, gaudy trial balloons that would quickly be shot full of holes and sink from sight. It was a device sent aloft to test the political winds. But it is about to emerge again in a reconstructed form.

The fact of the matter is that President Reagan and company are serious about this tax reform business. They are apparently going to take a good hard run at it, and there is a chance they might succeed.

No firm date has been set for the unveiling of the revised plan, but the talk is of early next month. The specific content of the reconstituted package is even less certain, but if it is reasonably close to the original Treasury Department proposal it will be one of the more far-reaching initiatives to emerge from the White House in years.

Jody Powell

IN ADDITION TO the indications of administration commitment, evidence abounds that those most sensitive of all political creatures, the Washington lobbyists, are convinced that tax reform is now a live issue.

The obstacles to sweeping tax reform are formidable. The fact remains that all those so-called loopholes were put there for a reason, not always improper, and that major segments of our economy have grown up around them. Every one of those segments is well represented in Washington by people who don't have to be told how the cow ate the cabbage.

Nevertheless, the prospects that something might actually happen are at least marginally better, primarily because the political dynamics of the issue have greatly clarified.

Some, including me, dismissed the Treasury proposal last fall because it seemed to make no political sense for the president to alienate the business core of his constituency, which has the greatest stake in the existing complicated system. It is now clear that the Gipper has bigger political fish to fry.

REPUBLICAN FAT CATS who gathered in Washington recently to welcome Jeane Kirkpatrick into the fold were urged to swallow tax reform despite their reservations because the result would be a GOP lock on the middle class and a Republican in the White House for the rest of the century.

That may be an exaggeration, but more than a few Democrats are beginning to think it's not much of one. They have nightmares about a popular and sensible reform bill from the White House being chopped to bits in Congress. Though most of the chopping would be done by traditionally Republican interests, they suspect that the Democrats would get much of the blame, particularly if the plan were stalemated in the House. Some have gone so far as to suggest that the best thing to do is pass the thing through the House as is and let any mangling take place in the Republican-controlled Senate.

There is at least the possibility that Democrats in both houses will decide that the best way to keep the GOP from riding to realignment on the back of tax reform is to make the effort, and thus the political credit, bipartisan. That would make for the most interesting summer Washington has seen in quite some time.

Spring at the beach

To the editor:

Last spring teaching assistants on this campus, angered by Gov. Terry Branstad's education budget cuts, picketed several UI teaching facilities and mobilized the largest demonstration seen on the Pentacrest since the 1960s. In the process the T.A.s also sparked unprecedented political debate on the subject of higher education in Iowa and focused media attention on the plight of the American system of higher education in a period of fiscal conservatism.

Education is once again under attack, only this spring from the Reagan administration — one that will pump billions of dollars into an already bloated arms industry, and will not maintain adequate funding for educational purposes.

This administration is calling for a 25 percent cut — $2.3 billion — in funds for student aid. This will mean some 2 million students will lose eligibility for federal grants and loans, and 29 percent of current Pell Grant recipients will lose their eligibility. Other programs scheduled for elimination include the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (727,000 recipients), National Direct Student Loans (143,000 recipients) and State Student Incentive Grants (304,000 recipients).

This is not simply a problem facing undergraduates; several graduate student fellowship programs are also on the block. So make no mistake about it: We are looking at fundamental changes that can set education back 60 years to a time when university life was an elitist affair available only to the rich. It is time to make our voices heard again.

Last spring we made our voices heard in the local assembly through a concerted effort that involved faculty, staff and both graduate and undergraduate students. That time we got our concerns onto the local political agenda. This spring we urge you to join in the national student effort to stop the Reagan administration cuts at the federal level by joining with us in a mass rally on the Pentacrest — renamed Bennett Beach for the occasion — at 12 noon Thursday.

"Out of that incubation center ... we hope new businesses in Iowa will have a chance to establish themselves, put down roots and stay in the state," Freedman said.

BRUCE WHEATON, director of the technology innovation center, said its primary purpose is to "match the needs of our tenants with the resources of the university."

"We have grown rapidly and expect to continue to do so," said Wheaton, adding it has accepted seven tenants since it opened its doors in November.

Wheaton was quick to point out that the center, which is being funded by a grant from the Iowa High Technology Council, is not "a life-support system for fundamentally weak companies."

"We're here to consider economic development, not economic miracles," he said.

While complimenting the UI programs, an executive from Rockwell International in Cedar Rapids said there is a need for the UI faculty to become more accessible to private industry.

"We do not have access to faculty members that can come out and provide continuing education," said George Benning, a Rockwell vice president for technology and engineering.

IN AN ATTEMPT TO alleviate this problem, Freedman announced Rockwell and the UI have agreed to establish a satellite uplink that "will permit our faculty to offer courses" to people "as far away as Tokyo or Indonesia or even Ames, Iowa."

Freedman also mentioned another agreement between the UI, Iowa State University and Norand, Inc., that will allow selected faculty members to spend time consulting with the Cedar Rapids computer firm.

Despite this pact, Benning said he believes "there is only limited coordination among (Iowa's) educational institutions. There doesn't seem to be as much dialogue as there should be."

Benning also criticized state leaders for not playing a greater role in organizing the transfer of technology from universities to industry.

"There doesn't seem to be a focal point at the state level to pull all of this together," said Benning, who called for the creation of an "educational delivery system for all residents in the state."

THE MAJORITY of the DI articles about CADSI last year centered on the firm's eight-month search for initial investors. In addition, the DI also reported on an internal UI investigation that found Haug "acted precipitously" and violated UI policies when he fired a foreign graduate assistant without notice in August 1983.

Haug charged the DI's stories prompted "overly timid" regents officials to erect a number of "roadblocks" that initially hindered CADSI's progress and growth.

UI officials originally planned to seek regents approval to transfer ownership of the software code that Haug helped design from the UI to CADSI. But last fall these officials decided to "spin off" CADSI and lease the code to the firm, thus avoiding the need for taking the issue to the board.

HAUG SAID despite the difficulties he cited, it appears the firm "may make a profit this year that will make up last year's losses."

According to Haug, Computervision — a multinational computer firm located in Bedford, Mass. — will begin marketing CADSI's mechanical analysis software code in June. He also said CADSI officials agreed last week to license the software code to a Pennsylvania-based firm.

In addition, Haug said CADSI officials are close to reaching an agreement with investors that would provide enough capital for the company to hire an experienced corporate president.

HAUG CREDITED the company's recent successes to the efforts of a few "people who stuck their necks out to get CADSI through tough times." He mentioned several UI officials as well as William Nusser and Clare Rice, two businessmen with close ties to the UI who have become members of CADSI's board of directors.

UI officials have said Nusser — now CADSI's chairman of the board — and Rice played instrumental roles in helping the company reach an investment deal with Computervision last summer at a time when CADSI was almost bankrupt.

Haug said there is a need for private sector officials to contribute their expertise to assist universities in transforming research findings into industrial products.

"There is a humongous gap between ideas and a product," Haug said. "The thing that has got to happen is to get engineers who have been involved in the product cycle involved with universities as soon as possible."

procedure was the failure to have the commission involved in a line-by-line review of the proposal," he said.

Under the expired utility franchises agreed upon by the city and the utility in 1959, Iowa-Illinois was required to provide the city with maps showing the location of gas lines and electrical extensions under city streets. No mention is made of this provision in the proposed ordinances, which passed the council, 4-3, on their first reading March 12.

The proposed ordinances also omit a previous statement allowing the city to use "poles, towers and underground conduits of the company for the police alarm system, fire alarm system and traffic control system of the city ..."

"IT WAS OUR understanding that when the franchise was sent to us, it had been reviewed by (the city's) legal staff," McDonald said prior to the council meeting Tuesday. "There was a misunderstanding as to exactly what the council wanted."

He said the council will compare the previous and the proposed franchise agreements to detect changes between the two. "Iowa-Illinois will be made aware of what we're doing," McDonald said.

Thomas Hoogerwerf, district manager for Iowa-Illinois, said Tuesday he is "hopeful that whatever (the council's) concerns are, they can be worked out."

"We're ready, willing and able to sit down and talk," Hoogerwerf said.

Councilor Larry Baker said Tuesday he was shocked the "ordinance voted on previously was written totally by the utility company."

"The legal department might have reviewed it, but there was no staff input," he said. Baker said members of the Resources Conservation Commission "have every reason to be upset."

"OVER THE PAST two years when Bob has worked for the commission, the council has completely ignored or rejected without reason many, many recommendations from the commission — most notably the utility franchises," commission Chairman Phil Nychay said.

"I know for a fact that there has been frustration among some of the commission members and there has been disagreement between the majority of the council on what should be implemented" in the utility franchises, McDonald said.

Once the council begins renewed discussion of the gas and electric franchises, McDonald said the franchise fee and the length of the franchise will probably be debated again.

"I'm sure that will come up, but I don't know if there will be any changes from the original vote," he said.

In a letter to the council in March, Nychay recommended the council reconsider charging Iowa-Illinois a franchise fee for the use of city streets. He also urged the council to negotiate for a 10-year franchise that could be opened up for negotiation by either the city or the utility company after five years.

The proposed 25-year franchises allow for renegotiation after 10 years.

"At a time when everyone is talking about economic security and development, this and previous councils seem uninterested in what are traditionally the cheapest development dollars available, i.e. conservation dollars," Singerman wrote in his letter of resignation.

was rejected for that reason — that a person could do that to someone without meeting them," Miller said Tuesday.

"Harn's rejection without even meeting the proposed roommate becomes all the more unreasonable" because Wendel knew the woman personally and would have shared a room with her, the judgment states.

BY FINDING the woman, "Miller performed her obligation to produce a suitable substitute roommate," and Harn and Wendel could then decide whether to accept the roommate, search for another one themselves or live alone in the apartment, the judgment states.

Harn and Wendel said at a Jan. 15 trial that the roommates had agreed that a new roommate would have to be acceptable to all three of them, court records state.

That agreement was "vague" and the three "didn't sit down and say what was acceptable in a roommate and what was not," Gerard said.

"To me, if we had an oral agreement, (Miller) should have respected Whitney's opinion regardless of her reason," Wendel said. "I thought that's the way it should be — if (Harn) didn't agree that wasn't all three of us."

"VALID AND SUFFICIENT" reasons to reject a roommate would depend upon the facts of each case, Gerard states in the judgment. "For example, female roommates could reject a proposed male roommate. Nonsmoking roommates could reject a roommate who smoked."

"When it boils down to the fact" that the woman was rejected because of her race, "I can't understand that ... We've reached the point of being unreasonable," Gerard said.

However, Phyllis Williams, the city's Human Rights Specialist, said the two women were not violating the city's nondiscriminatory ordinance by rejecting the woman because of her race.

"Roommates can choose who they want to live with," since the ordinance only prohibits landlords, realtors and owners of property from discriminating because of race, Williams said.

Attempts to contact Harn for comment were unsuccessful.

me and she says, 'Dr. Westheimer, I cannot understand why I'm pregnant. You see, my best girlfriend told me the first time doesn't count.'"

Westheimer proclaimed over and over again the need for "sexual literacy" in America.

"THERE ARE some really screwed up people out there," she said. "There was a girl who came to me and said she couldn't believe she was pregnant, because they did it standing up. And there was one who said she can't understand why she's pregnant — she douched with Coca-Cola right afterwards. And then there's one who said, 'Dr. Westheimer, I swear to you, I did not enjoy it.'"

"Where are people getting this misinformation, I ask you? And why do we not talk this out like adults, so everyone knows what is true?" she asked.

Westheimer's plea for sexual awareness was by no means limited to masturbation. The host of WYNY radio's weekly "Sexually Speaking" program repeatedly urged the crowd to "enjoy sex, but do not forget to take precautions."

Westheimer's recommended birth control methods are simple — the condom and the diaphragm. She agrees, however, neither are perfect.

"We are a strange society. We can send a man to the moon. We have all kinds of technology, but we still have no fool-proof methods of birth control," she said.

THE CROWD roared with laughter, prominently male laughter, when the former Planned Parenthood project director announced: "Men come to me and tell me wearing a condom is like taking a shower with a raincoat on. Kapooy! I say a woman ought to carry a condom in her pocketbook and that's the condom they ought to use when they carry on the sexual act. I, personally, would feel safer carrying a condom with me than using one some guy has been carrying in his back pocket since he was 14."

Tulane guard enters guilty plea

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Senior guard Bobby Thompson and another Tulane University student entered surprise guilty pleas Tuesday to charges they conspired to commit sports bribery in the basketball team's point-shaving scandal.

"They weren't even on the docket," a court clerk said. "They apparently wanted to plead guilty and get it over with as fast as possible."

Thompson and David Rothenberg, a senior economics major from Wilton, Conn., both had been charged with conspiracy to commit sports bribery — the mildest of the indictments returned by a grand jury against eight people last week.

Thompson pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy and Rothenberg to two counts. Rothenberg also pleaded guilty to one count of cocaine possession, a new charge, the clerk said.

JUDGE ALVIN OSER said he will sentence the two July 9. Conspiracy carries a maximum sentence of 2 1/2 years in prison and a $5,000 fine, the drug charge five years and $5,000.

Lawyers for the others players — star center John "Hot Rod" Williams and sophomore swingman David Dominique — have said their clients will plead innocent at the arraignment scheduled Monday.

The two are charged with sports bribery and conspiracy on grounds they manipulated the point spread in Metro Conference games against Southern Mississippi and Memphis State for $19,500.

Their lawyers went to court separately Tuesday, asking the judge not to let Tulane destroy film and statistics from the games in which Williams and Dominique played.

"WE ARE HEARING that Tulane has ended its basketball program, and we don't want defense evidence to wind up in a warehouse somewhere it can't be found," said attorney Edwards

Castagna Jr., who represents Dominique.

Tulane President Eamon Kelly has recommended dropping men's basketball entirely at Tulane but has met strong resistance from students and alumni. The Board of Administrators is to vote on his suggestion next week.

Attorney Russell Schonekas of New Orleans had said earlier Thompson could cooperate with prosecutors if he could plead guilty to just one count of conspiracy. Thompson testified to the grand jury last Thursday before indict-

Beck's golf game swings to new level

By Brad Zimaneck

Kathy Beck, a member of the Iowa women's golf team, started out the season in the number five or six position and turned things around on Iowa's spring trip to Texas by placing first among the Iowa golfers at the Rayburn Country Classic March 28-30.

"I think Kathy Beck had an outstanding tournament. That was one of our bright spots," Iowa women's golf Coach Diane Thomason said. "She played a very consistent tournament and played No. 6 for us and ended up being the medalist for our team."

Beck shot rounds of 84-80-81 en route to a 245, which placed her ninth overall and five strokes ahead of Iowa teammates Mary Baecke and Mary McDermott.

THE NINTH PLACE finish was impressive when you consider that most of the people that finished ahead of Beck were from the warm-weather schools that had nearly completed their golf seasons while Beck and Iowa were competing in their first tournament of the season. The Iowa team was actually on the golf course for the first time just a few days before the tournament was to begin.

"I was really confident going into this season and I know that they would be needing my help because they lost two players (Lisa Masters to marriage and Phoebe Colliflower transferred to Illinois State)," Beck said.

"So I felt that I had to do well and I was confident that I could."

BECK SAW LIMITED action as a freshman and struggled during last year's spring season as she recorded a 97.0 average for six rounds. She did recover to play well at the Big Ten Championship by shooting a 78 on the last day of the tournament to finish in 22nd place.

Iowa shuts out St. Ambrose in twinbill sweep

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

Ann Coughenour and Tracy Langhurst held St. Ambrose scoreless for 14 innings Tuesday in leading the Hawkeyes to a doubleheader sweep at the Hawkeye Softball Complex, 1-0 and 5-0.

Wendy White pitched all 14 innings for St. Ambrose, taking both losses.

Coughenour, 4-4, notched 10 strikeouts and allowed only one hit in the second game, while in the first, Langhurst, 2-1, held St. Ambrose to just two hits, despite working herself into a jam in the top of the sixth.

After St. Ambrose's Deb Callahan led off with a single, White bunted back to Langhurst, who threw to Lisa Steele at second base to get the force out.

STEELE DROPPED THE ball trying to make the tag however, leaving runners at first and second with no outs.

A sacrifice bunt by Tina Patterson advanced both runners, and left St. Ambrose with two runners in scoring position.

Langhurst responded by getting Patti Stepp and Kay LaKose to ground out to end the inning, which came as no surprise to Hawkeye Coach Ginny Parrish.

"I wasn't too concerned about it (the scoring threat)," Parrish said. "If we'd been playing someone like Indiana, then I'd have been worried."

"Tracy's arm is a little bit sore, but I really felt she could get out of (the inning)."

Parrish said she was pleased with both pitcher's efforts, particularly Coughenour, who continually put St. Ambrose batters in a bind with quick strikes.

"ANN IS A very strong pitcher," Parrish said. "I knew that our pitchers would be fine today."

Parrish's praise of her pitchers didn't extend to the Hawkeye offense Tuesday, as the team got just one hit, an infield single by Steele in the sixth inning.

That hit led to the game's only score, by Lisa Nicola who came in as a pinch runner for Steele.

Nicola stole second, and advanced to

In the second game, Iowa's batting improved for seven hits off White, who was noticeably tired on the mound.

Parrish said she let the players know she was unhappy with their offense in the first game, and that may have made a difference in the second, along with the St. Ambrose pitching.

"I TOLD THEM their batting was horrible," Parrish said. "They should have been whomping the ball."

"(White) had to be tired out there, and I don't care who is batting, when you face a pitcher that many times you're going to catch on to her."

Mary Wisniewski managed to catch on long enough to launch a double down the left field line to start off the Iowa half of the second.

A ground ball single into center by Marty Pump scored Wisniewski to give Iowa a 1-0 lead.

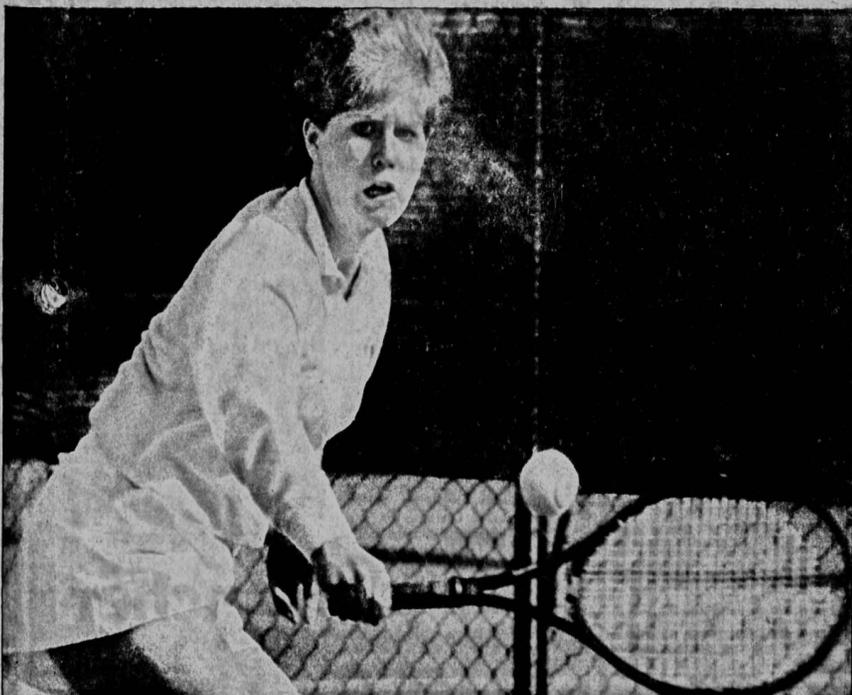

White got out of the inning but was touched again in the fourth, for two runs.

Carol Bruggeman was hit by a pitch to start the inning, and after she stole second, Wisniewski advanced her to third with her second double to left.

Pump then lifted a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Bruggeman and moving Wisniewski to third. Coughenour followed Pump with a single, scoring Wisniewski, which ended the fourth inning damage.

Darley pleased with Hawkeyes after 8-1 loss to Northwestern

By Mike Condon

There was no doubt that the Northwestern Wildcats deserved their No. 6 national ranking after defeating Iowa, 8-1, Tuesday afternoon on the Kinnick Stadium Courts.

But the Hawkeyes once again proved they are an improving team. In the past few years, the Iowa-Northwestern match-up has produced few good matches and even fewer Hawkeye wins.

Coach Charley Darley's crew accomplished both feats in the meet. The best match of the day came at No. 1 singles where the Wildcats' Stephanie Lightvoet, ranked among the top 50 in the country, battled back in both the second and third sets to down Iowa's Michele Conlon, 6-7 (8-10), 6-4, 6-4.

THE LONE IOWA win came from the beleaguered No. 2 doubles team of Pat Leary and Kim Martin. The duo entered the match with only one win in 11 previous outings but were impressive in downing Northwestern's Kirstin Laux and Jennifer Hilton, 6-4, 6-3.

aggressive," Martin said. "We played really smart and did the things that we have been working on in practice."

"I think Pat and I know we can be a good doubles team," the Iowa co-captain added. "To be honest, we both think we can win a lot more matches and we're going to give it our all in an attempt to do so."

Darley was pleased with the effort of his No. 2 team. "We worked hard with Kim (Monday) on doubles," the first-year Iowa coach said. "We worked on her placement and shot selection. Patty really just went out and played an inspired match. Playing outside (on a slower surface) had to be an advantage for them."

CONLON WAS A victim of good shots from Lightvoet and a little bad luck. The Iowa City native played brilliantly in a first-set tiebreaker, winning 10-8 and took a 3-0 lead in the second when she broke a string on her second racquet of the afternoon, leaving her with none of her own available.

She borrowed teammate Pennie Wohlford's and struggled through the rest of the set, losing 6-4. "It does make a difference when you're forced to use a different racquet," Darley said. "I know it probably affected Michele on her volleys."

Conlon must of adjusted quickly to the new racquet, as she again jumped to a 3-0 lead. At that point, Iowa assistant Coach Su Ortel returned, having re-strung one of her racquets. "It may have just been a coincidence," Darley said. "But she did start having trouble after she got her racquet back."

Richardson named Arkansas cage coach

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — University of Tulsa basketball Coach Nolan Richardson Tuesday said he will accept the head coaching job at the University of Arkansas.

"I'm sorry guys but I'm taking it," Richardson said shortly before his departure.

There had been published reports that Richardson would be named to the Arkansas job, but no previous confirmation came from the coach.

Arkansas began looking for a new coach after 11-year veteran Eddie Sutton suddenly resigned April 2 to become coach at Kentucky. Athletic director Frank Broyles combed the country for a week to find a replacement, flying to meet some candidates who did not want to be seen on the Arkansas campus.

Two of the three coaches interviewed by Broyles in Fayetteville last week — Illinois State's Bob Donewald and Virginia Commonwealth's J.D. Barnett — withdrew their names from consideration.

Gary Williams, the Boston College head coach, told the Boston Globe Monday he talked to Arkansas officials three times over the weekend before taking his name out of contention.

Cubs defeat Pirates in season opener

CHICAGO (UPI) — Rick Sutcliffe and Lee Smith combined on a six-hitter and Keith Moreland drove in two runs Tuesday to give the Chicago Cubs a 2-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the season opener for both clubs.

Sutcliffe, last year's Cy Young Award winner, won his 15th-straight game over two years, breaking the Cubs' record set by Ed Reulbach who won 14 straight for Chicago in 1909. Smith relieved after Sutcliffe permitted a run in the eighth and retired the Pirates in the ninth to gain the save.

Moreland had an RBI single in the first and belted a solo homer off starter Rick Rhoden to lead off the fourth for the defending National League Eastern Division champions. A sellout crowd of 34,551 braved 35 degree weather for the opener.

In the first, Bob Dernier led off with a single but was picked off. One out later, Gary Matthews doubled over first base and went to third on Leon Durham's infield single. Moreland followed with a single to left, scoring Matthews.

Moreland led off the fourth by lining a 3-1 pitch over the left field wall. Pinch hitter Lee Mazzilli led off the eighth with a double and Ray walked with one out. Bill Madlock filed out but Jason Thompson followed with an RBI single to center, scoring Mazzilli.

Smith relieved and got George Hendrick to strike out to end the inning.

Sailing Club to meet tonight

The University of Iowa Sailing Club will be holding two meetings tonight in Lecture Room 2 of Van Allen.

The first meeting, at 7 p.m., is for all current members to discuss business matters. At 7:30 p.m., all interested people are invited to attend the spring membership meeting.

For more information contact Lisa Birley at 353-3170.

Finalists to compete for IM racquetball title

The men's intramural racquetball final will be held on Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on one of the glass-backed championship courts at the Field House.

The original field of 120 players has been reduced to two, Bill Riker and Scot Brechon. In order to reach the finals, Riker, an independent, defeated dormitory champion Rob Baughman and Brechon, the fraternity champion, advanced with a win over Scott Peterson.

Judge again rejects Skiles evidence plea

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (UPI) — A judge ruled again Tuesday that cocaine and marijuana seized from Michigan State basketball guard Scott Skiles' team equipment bag can be used as evidence at his trial next week.

The judge for the second time rejected arguments police illegally confiscated small quantities of the drugs from the bag when Skiles was stopped in his hometown of Plymouth last summer.

Without comment, Marshall County Circuit Judge Michael D. Cook rejected a defense attorney's contention a recent Indiana Court of Appeals decision required Cook to reverse his earlier ruling on admissibility of the evidence.

Defense lawyer Charles Scruggs said Skiles, an MSU junior and three-year starter for the Spartans, still maintains his innocence and will continue to fight the charges when his trial opens next Tuesday.

"He wasn't aware they (the drugs) were in there until the bag was unzipped," Scruggs said.

Had Cook granted the defense motion, prosecutors would have been unable to produce in court either the drugs or a handwritten statement Skiles gave police. The charges likely would have been dropped.

Court records indicate Skiles is also scheduled to face drunken driving charges in a separate case in East Lansing, Mich., next Tuesday. But Scruggs said the Michigan case would be postponed. Skiles' lawyer in that case was unavailable for comment.

Iowa's 'picnic' ends as season rolls on

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

The picnic for the Iowa Hawkeyes baseball team is over. That's what Coach Duane Banks told his troops Monday afternoon during practice.

"We told them that the easy games are over," Banks said, "and now it's serious. This week is going to be tough and it will prepare us for the upcoming Big Ten season."

Iowa will start off the week today against Northwest Missouri State in a doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. at the Iowa Diamond.

The Bearcats (13-17-1) started the season off on the wrong foot on their spring trip to Wichita and Arkansas, playing mainly Division I schools and losing ten of 11 games. But since then, Northwest Missouri has racked up an 11-9 record against Division II and III schools.

"WE WERE overmatched against a lot of the schools," Northwest Missouri Coach Jim Johnson said. "Then we started to play schools more our size. But the way our season starts out is always that way — we have to struggle to get back up to .500."

The Hawkeyes can expect to face Terry Marquardt (0-4) with a 7.41 earned run average and Rob Olsen (4-0) with a 3.00 ERA. The Bearcats are known for some hitting strength — knocking 24 home runs so far this season. The team record for a season is 45.

"There really isn't a leading power hitter on the team," Johnson said. "All of the players produce and that's the way we win. I think we are going to break the record for home runs at the pace we are going at now. But we also come up with the contact hits when we need them."

ments were returned.

TWO OF ROTHENBERG'S fraternity brothers were also charged, along with two suspected New Orleans bookmakers.

Two other players, senior forwards Clyde Eads and Jon Johnson, were given immunity to testify against their teammates.

When news of the point-shaving allegations first broke in late March, Coach Ned Fowler said the game films revealed no evidence the players were deliberately missing shots.

Fowler and two assistants resigned last week under fire for making cash payments to players, including $100 a week to Williams last season.

Williams also reportedly told prosecutors he was paid $10,000 in a shoebox when he signed to play for Tulane in 1981. That money allegedly came through an assistant coach before Fowler joined Tulane.

Paying college players is not illegal but is a violation of NCAA rules.

surance runs in the fifth. Amy Drake singled and eventually scored on a wild pitch, and Beth Kirchner reached first on the same wild pitch, after swinging at strike three, and scored on a Bruggeman double.

The Hawkeyes, now 8-10 overall and 2-2 in the Big Ten, travel to Ames for a doubleheader with Iowa State today and then make the trip to Columbus, Ohio, for four games with Ohio State Friday and Saturday.

on our team. She has a very fast tempo and we're trying to get her to be more deliberate," Thomason said.

"We want her to think a little bit on what she is trying to do on the course. I think she learned an important lesson with emotional control in Texas. That is important to learn to be at an even keel even if you get a birdie or happen to do poorly on a hole."

"SHE CUTS THE ball and insides it out and we have been working on it for two years," Thomason said. "We're trying to get rid of it, but if we can't we want to minimize it. We have to play with what we've got."

The sophomore business major also would like to continue keeping a strong mental outlook on the course as it is important to a good golf game.

BECK WAS A three-year member of the Ottawa, Ill., High School girls squad and placed fourth at the 1982 Illinois State Championship after winning her sectional tournament. She decided to attend Iowa on the advice of a club pro and is happy with her decision to become a Hawkeye.

"Mostly I'm trying to keep my attitude under control and everything," Beck said. "If I hit a bad shot I don't want to let it bother my game. I want to keep mentally and physically alert."

"Kathy will be traveling this weekend and that will add to her confidence some more," Thomason said.

"My pro (Mary Dagherit) in the summer recommended it and of course I really like the campus and everything that goes along with that," Beck said. "I'm happy with my decision so far."

"She asked me how to build her confidence and I told her to build her confidence on little success. She has confidence in her swing and we built on that and know we'll see if that can jump her into a good tournament."

Right now there is one thing that Beck would like to work on to improve her golf game and that is her slice.

Beck and the rest of the Iowa team will be competing with 23 other teams this weekend at the Lady Seahawk Classic in Wilmington, N.C.

"I have to fix my slice," Beck said. "I've been hitting everything to the right lately and we have been working pretty hard on trying to change that and get that straightened out."

"I think it will be a tough tournament," Thomason said. "Teams from the east and southeast will be there along with the Carolina schools, Kentucky and maybe Florida."

Dossett leads Iowa to Big Four victory

By Stratton
Staff Writer

Trent Dossett made his first two competitive rounds of the year hot ones, shooting rounds of 69 and 71 for a six-under-par total of 140, to lead the Iowa men's golf team to victory in the Big Four Meet in Des Moines.

Iowa won the team competition with a total of 578 strokes, six-under-par on the Des Moines Golf and Country Club course. Iowa State finished a distant second with 597 strokes, while Northern Iowa took third with 623 strokes and Drake brought up the rear at 662 strokes.

Dossett wasn't the only hot Hawkeye as Tim Joselyn put together rounds of 71 and 74 for a one-under-par total of 145 on the day.

GREGG TEBBUTT followed with rounds of 75 and 74 for a 149 total for Iowa, while Mike Eckerman shot rounds of 71 and 79 for a 150, and Steve Reilly shot two rounds of 76 for a 152 on the day. Guy Boros added rounds of 80 and 73 for a 153 total for the Hawkeyes.

"I'm very happy with our play," Iowa Coach Chuck Zwiener said. "We shot 286 which is six-under in the morning and 292, for even par in the afternoon. That is very good play for this early in the year."

Dossett's play earned him medalist honors on the day. Iowa State's Dan Stonionis finished second to Dossett with rounds of 75 and a six-under-par 67 for a 142 total. Iowa's Joselyn took third in the meet with his 145 total.

Iowa was forced to play without Dossett at the Purdue Invitational, where the Hawkeyes finished sixth, last weekend, as the senior from Wapello, Iowa was recovering from a hand injury he suffered on the Hawkeyes' spring break trip to Florida.

ZWIENER WAS worried about Dossett's play going into the Big Four Meet. "The fact that he was coming off of an injury had me a little concerned," he said. "He hasn't played as much golf. Trent bogeyed the last two holes or he could have done better. He hit the ball well and he putted well."

The Iowa coach was pleased with the balance his squad showed on the day. "Our balance is good," Zwiener said. "It is nice to see someone shoot even par, and then someone comes in under par. We had good, solid play all around."

Iowa's next tournament action will be this weekend at the Indiana Invitational in Bloomington, Ind.

SIU cage coach quits; illegal payoffs unveiled

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Southern Illinois University basketball Coach Allen Van Winkle resigned Tuesday in the wake of revelations a Saluki player received hundreds of dollars in illegal payoffs.

The announcement of Van Winkle's resignation was made by Dean Stuck, special assistant to Southern Illinois president Albert Somit. Stuck gave no reason for the resignation of Van Winkle, who has one year remaining on his contract.

Van Winkle, 37, has been under fire since last week when assistant Coach Stafford Stephenson quit, admitting that he knew that payments of $200-a-week were being under the table to center Kenny Perry.

"I expect to make no other announcements about the program until the ongoing investigation is complete," Stuck said at a news conference.

He said the NCAA has advised him to make no further comments about the investigation of illegal payoffs to Perry.

STUCK SAID HE has asked assistant Coach Herman Williams and assistant athletic director Bruce McCutcheon to assume joint responsibility for coordi-inating the basketball program at the school on an interim basis.

According to published reports, Van Winkle said his decision to quit was not based Dr. Roy S. White's admission he had made the illegal payments to Perry.

In his continuing investigation of the Southern Illinois basketball program, Stuck said he has not uncovered any evidence to corroborate an allegation by White that Van Winkle was aware of payments to Perry. Stephenson also has denied that Van Winkle was aware of the payments.

Stuck said he had talked to Van Winkle Monday and that Van Winkle "had offered it (his resignation) to me. I told him where I was in the investigation."

"I have not talked to him about where he is going. I would not care to speculate on his reasons for resigning," Stuck said.

Stuck said there was "no buyout" of the remaining one year on Van Winkle's contract.

He said he had no idea what effect the resignations of Van Winkle and Stephenson would have on basketball recruiting.

CBS set to provide viewers with coverage of golf's grand event

It is to golf what the Kentucky Derby is to horse racing; what the Super Bowl is to football; what Wimbledon is to tennis. "It" is The Masters.

Just the name symbolizes the best the game of golf has to give and the USA Network and CBS will provide start to finish coverage of this tournament played on the most hallowed ground in America to golfers — the beautiful Augusta National Golf Course in Augusta, Ga.

The first of the four majors on the PGA tour gets underway Thursday as the field of the best golfers in the world will be out to beat defending champion Ben Crenshaw.

Mike Condon

Bobby Jones.
The course itself is a thing of beauty. It's been said the nation knows spring is in full bloom after watching the scenery unfold.

CBS, WHOSE CREW will also provide the commentary on the first two rounds for USA, does nothing to hurt the image of the tournament. Anchor Pat Summerall along with analysts Ken Venturi and Tom Weiskopf make the viewer feel like a part of history.

The network airs pieces on the history and tradition of the tournament and the commercials for this year have shown one of golf's greats, Jack Nicklaus, touring different parts of the course and describing the historical events that have taken place on the grounds.

This year's tournament is shaping up to be one of the best ever. Who knows, somebody could come up with a shot that will go down in the annals of golf history along side Sarazen's double-eagle. That's the prestige of The Masters.

Video games

The 49th edition of The Masters tees off at 3 p.m. Thursday on USA (Cable-23) with three hours of coverage. USA will be back on the air Friday with another three hours at 3 p.m.

CBS (WHBF-14) will air half-hour highlights shows both days, beginning at 10:30 p.m. The network then picks up coverage of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday. Saturday's coverage begins at 3 p.m. while Sunday's final round is slated for 2 p.m.

Baseball season will be in full swing by Saturday when NBC's Game of the Week will feature the defending World Champion Detroit Tigers against the Kansas City Royals at 12:15 p.m. on KWWL-7.

The NHL playoffs begin tonight and USA will provide coverage of a first-round game beginning at 6:30 p.m. Check local listings for other playoff contests throughout the week.

The USFL continues this week with a key inter-divisional battle between the Oakland Invaders and the Birmingham Stallions at 7 p.m. on ESPN (Cable-32).

The week wouldn't be complete without the return of Harry Caray and Steve Stone and Chicago Cubs baseball. The Cubs are on each day this weekend. Check listings for times to see Harry get his voice back in championship form.

THE MASTERS IS one of the few sporting events (another is the Indianapolis 500) left that doesn't let the megabucks of television dictate how it is run. The contract with the networks is very specific. The number of commercials are left to a minimum, so the spectator can enjoy the golf.

In fact, the tournament even controls what sponsors are chosen. Add to that the fact that the times can't be changed for television. The Masters has the same tee times every year and television works around them to put out a product.

Tradition is what makes The Masters. People still talk of Gene Sarazen's "miraculous" double-eagle 50 years ago and of the co-founders of the tournament, Cliff Roberts and the great golfing legend,

Group training program prepares runners for Quad City's marathon

Do you have some solid training and would you like to run a marathon but just need that extra push to get you to the starting line of a 26.2 mile journey?

I think I have the race for you in the One Quad-City Marathon that starts in Rock Island, Ill., and winds it way through Davenport and Bettendorf and then heads back to the Illinois side of the river through Moline and on to the finish line at Augustana College.

The One Quad-City Marathon (formerly the Athletes Foot Quad City Marathon) is scheduled for May 5 and what makes it different from other marathons is a series of training runs that started in mid-February which helps runners go through a training program with other runners.

THE TRAINING RUNS are held every Sunday morning before race day and have been averaging nearly fifty runners and started at eight miles and are progressing their way to near marathon distance before the May 5 race day.

"Last year they registered for them (the training runs)," Nancy Kapheim, who is in charge of the training runs said. "You paid a fee and got a shirt. A training shirt. This year we decided to go informal. If you wanted to run a long run you could come and join us."

Brad Zimanek

The next One Quad-City Marathon training run is scheduled for 7:30 a.m., April 14. The meeting place is the Hardees at 1715 Division Street in Davenport. For more information call Kapheim at (319) 391-7900.

THE DISTANCE FOR the April 14 training run is set at 20 miles though shorter courses will be available to those only wishing to run 12, 14 or 18 miles. The course starts in northwest Davenport and proceeds to northeast Davenport to east Davenport into Bettendorf and then back to the starting point.

"It seems to be that we've been running 40 to 50 people every week and they really seem to enjoy it," Kapheim said. "I think the informal way is much better."

"We started at eight miles and than we increase it by two miles every other run. We do give people the option of running as far as they want."

About 30 or 40 of the people in the training runs are actually running the marathon race in May and the companionship during the training runs seem to make the distance much more enjoyable.

"YOU GET UP in those distances of 16, 18 or 20 miles and its kind of nice to have somebody to run with," Kapheim said. "We don't all stay together in a group. We have the fast paced people ahead of you and of course the slower ones in the back, but you can usually find someone to run with who is running about your pace for the whole distance."

The starting time for the marathon is 7 a.m., while a 5,000-meter race will also be held at 8:20 a.m. The registration fee for the marathon is $9 for Cornbelt Running Club members and $10.00 for non-members. Fee for the 5,000 is $7.00 for CBRC members and $8.00 for non-members.

T-shirts are to be given to all entries and certificates to the finishers of both events. Trophies and plaques will be awarded to men and women marathon runners and 5,000-meter runners in the following age categories: 18-under, 19-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49, 50-59, 60-69 and 70 and over.

The registration is slow but is starting to pick up. About 50 people have registered for the race that is nearly a month away. In past years the marathon has averaged about 250 entrants while the other race or races that have been scheduled average about 1,000 runners.

Peete hopes to continue 'hot' streak as Masters opens in cold weather

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — A drop in the temperature sent a shock through the chilled patrons at the Masters Tuesday, but Calvin Peete had hopes that his current hot streak would be enough to overcome any unseasonable weather.

The weather system which sprinkled snow on major league baseball openers across the northern portion of the nation Monday pushed the mercury into the 30's in Augusta early Tuesday.

And even though the sun shone brightly at the Augusta National Golf Club, the chilly temperatures and gusty winds made things uncomfortable for the thousands of sweater-bedecked enthusiasts who have made this town a mecca of the sport.

Another night of near freezing temperatures was forecast, but a steady moderation was expected during the week.

That would be fine with Peete since, like most players, he would take warmth over chill any day. The way Peete has played this year, however, temperatures have not mattered.

PEETE, THEREFORE, has become the first black player to be considered a realistic threat to win this tournament — which almost as much as any other enterprise stands as a symbol of the Old South.

"There is no doubt I'm playing with confidence," said Peete as he headed out for his first practice tour of the 6,905-yard, par-3 acreage created by golf immortal Bobby Jones and manicured as always to look its springtime best.

"When you win a tournament it always gives you confidence."

Peete's closing-round 66 over the treacherous Tournament Players Club course two Sundays ago brought him the RBC title — his second win of the year.

He is second to Curtis Strange in money winnings this year, but has played 18 less rounds than has Strange.

IN ADDITION, PEETE feels whatever concerns he might have had with the Augusta National course were dispelled last year.

"I think I showed last year I could play this course," said Peete, who in 1984 followed an opening-round 79 with scores of 66-70-70.

"Those rounds were important to me," he said. "Confidence is important and because I played well here it gives me confidence coming into this year."

Confidence is always a key at Augusta and several big-name players were trying to find it as Thursday's opening round approached.

Tom Kite, who has finished in the top 10 in all but one of his previous 10 professional appearances at Augusta, was among them. Kite opened the third-round lead a year ago, but faltered to a 75 and finished fifth.

HE SPENT EXTRA time on the practice tee early this week trying to find the touch which has made him the sixth leading money winner in the history of golf. This year Kite is 25th on the money list.

"Those rounds were important to me," says Calvin Peete about his performance last year at the Masters. "Confidence is important and because I played well here it gives me confidence coming into this year."

Added to Kite's preparation this year has been the inevitable question about his finish a year ago.

"I certainly haven't forgotten last year," he said. "But I don't want to forget about it. I want to remember it. After all I played very well last year. I didn't win, but I played well and that is something you like to remember."

"I haven't won here, but I've played awfully well (with one second, one third, four fifths, two sixths and a tenth-place finish since 1975). A lot of people would like to have that record."

As for the course itself, the players were giving their annual round of praise.

"These greens," said 83-year-old Gene Sarazen (whose double eagle at the par-5 15th brought him the 1935 Masters title), "are just the way Bobby Jones would have wanted them."

Islanders seek to regain crown

United Press International

New York Islanders, in recent years the top dog during the post-season, are just another underdog this year heading into their Stanley Cup matchup with the Washington Capitals.

The Islanders, NHL champions for four straight years before being dethroned in the finals by Edmonton last season, completed the regular season with 86 points — their lowest total in any of their playoff-qualifying seasons. They allowed 312 goals, the most since their dismal first season, and have won only once (1-1) in the last six games.

NEW YORK BEGINS their best-of-five Patrick Division semifinal with the Capitals tonight at the Capital Centre. The New York Rangers are at Philadelphia, Boston is at Montreal, Quebec is at Buffalo, Minnesota is at St. Louis, Detroit is at Chicago, Los Angeles is at Edmonton and Calgary is at Winnipeg in other opening-round matchups.

Washington, with the league's third-best point total while permitting the second fewest goals, has been eliminated in the playoffs the last two years by the Islanders. Capitals defenseman Rod Langway knows what to expect from New York in the playoffs.

"It's going to be a war," said Langway. "There's no doubt it's going to be decided by one-point games. I just know we better be ready to play."

WASHINGTON HAS 50-goal scorers Bobby Carpenter and Mike Gartner.

The Flyers, the NHL's regular-season champions, have been eliminated the last three years in the first round and have lost nine straight post-season games. However, they are heavy favorites to crush the 26-44-10 Rangers.

"They are obviously a comfortable, confident team, but confidence is something you can shatter," said the Rangers' Anders Hedberg, who will retire after this season. "They have to live with bad playoff experiences. We have to live with a bad season."

The Canadiens, the Adams Division champions, look to eliminate the Bruins for the second-straight year. Montreal does not have anyone among the top 25 scorers in the league and rely on tight checking and strong goaltending by Steve Penney and Doug Soetaert.

MICHEL GOULET, with 55 goals, and Peter Stastny, with 32 goals and 68 assists, lead the Nordiques' potent offense. Quebec swept Buffalo out of the playoffs last year.

The Blues, with their first division championship since 1980-81, go up against the North Stars — with the worst record among the playoff squads — in a Norris Division matchup. St. Louis Coach Jacques Demers said his club wins with defense and heart.

"We outscore few opponents," he said. "We are No. 1 in the Campbell Conference in goals against. That keeps us in games. Our opponents know the Blues never die. I think other teams respect us."

The Black Hawks have turned their season around under General Manager Bob Pulford, who replaced Orval Tessier behind the bench after a 22-28-3 start. Chicago is 16-7-4 since the change.

"IT'S PROPER timing," said Chicago's Al Secord. "Under Pully, everyone's playing with confidence and therefore playing well. We couldn't ask for things to fall in place any better." Defending Stanley Cup champion Edmonton has remained a well-oiled scoring machine, with Wayne Gretzky (73 goals, 135 assists), Jari Kurri (71-64) and defenseman Paul Coffey (37-84) supplying most of the offense. The Oilers still remember a bitter first-round playoff defeat at the hands of the Kings in 1982.

The Jets and Flames meet in what appears to be the most even of all the first-round matchups. Winnipeg, behind the league's third-leading scorer in Dale Hawerchuk (130 points), finished fourth overall in the NHL while the Flames used a fine season by Kent Nilsson to finish at No. 5.

Field hockey team seeks players

Judith Davidson

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

Women at Iowa have the rare opportunity to learn a new sport and be a part of a winning program.

The Iowa field hockey team is looking for women who will practice with the team this spring and then play on the squad next fall.

The Hawkeyes have just completed their most successful season. The Iowa squad finished second at the NCAA field hockey championships behind Old Dominion and took second in the National Indoor Field Hockey Championships.

The Hawkeyes took second in the Big Ten last fall and were selected to represent the United States at the Canadian Indoor Tournament where they finished eighth.

PRIOR TO LAST season, Iowa won four consecutive Big Ten titles and made six straight appearances in post season play.

Field hockey

Iowa Coach Judith Davidson spent most of last season with few substitutes on the bench and is trying to increase the size of the team for next season. The Iowa coach finished the season with only one extra field player and goalie on the bench for the Final Four games.

Davidson wants to boost the size of the squad for next season by opening up the game to nonfield hockey players.

Women interested in field hockey do not need to know how to play the sport to join the team. Davidson and her staff will teach the game to any new players.

This spring new players will practice a couple times a week with the Hawkeyes and learn the basic rules and skills of the game.

The Iowa coach is looking for women with athletic ability and have a freshman or sophomore status so that they can be with the team a couple years.

"They should be pretty good athletes," Davidson said, "preferably softball players because they're used to hitting a ball."

Interested athletes should also have a "real desire to be a part of a team," she added.

Soccer players could also easily make the switch to field hockey, Davidson said.

Interested persons should contact Davidson for further information at 353-7288.

Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchased or applied for football tickets at the University of Iowa with no loss in priority for student exchange programs off campus or bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.
3. Students, to receive their priority for football, must order sometime during the period from April 15 to May 17, 1985. These orders will be filled according to priority and will be available for pickup at fall registration. The student ID card and current registration must be presented at the time of pickup.
4. A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than 8, provided he or she has the additional student credentials with him or her. Each student must pay for his/her own tickets and all students must pick up their own tickets and sign for them. All students must be currently registered and "in good standing" (University bill paid) by August 27. All students cancelled on that date will forfeit their tickets and will receive refunds.
5. The lowest priority within a group will determine the location of the entire block of tickets for that group. That is, all students within a group will carry the lowest priority of any member of that group.
6. Student season tickets will continue on sale on a non-priority basis after May 17, and will remain on sale through Friday, August 24, 1985, if available.
7. A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by an ID card and a current registration certificate. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or any other University of Iowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student ticket policy. DUPLICATE TICKETS CANNOT BE ISSUED FOR LOST OR STOLEN TICKETS.

British Academy Award-winner Paul Massie stars in The University Theatres production of Shakespeare's King Lear.

Massie fills 'Lear' with life experience

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

UNIVERSITY THEATRES certainly doesn't take the easy way out with its contributions to the Iowa Shakespeare Festival. After having tackled two of Shakespeare's most problematic comedies, Measure for Measure and The Merchant of Venice, University Theatres now presents King Lear, easily the most demanding stage of Shakespeare's four major tragedies — and accordingly the least performed, although many scholars consider it the highpoint of Shakespeare's career.

One of the play's principal difficulties is its demand on its male lead a demand that is displayed dramatically by the stage and film versions of The Dresser, about the deterioration of an aging actor, "Sir," faced with another Shakespearean tour and another performance as Lear. Having played Sir's role himself in a recent production, Paul Massie did not accept his first opportunity to play Lear blindly.

WHOEVER PERFORMS Lear must be capable of regal dignity and imperial command, yet equally capable of projecting abject despair and failing sanity — sometimes all within the framework of a single speech. He must make an audience believe him capable of disowning the daughter he loves and still be stunned by the mistreatment of the daughters who hate him. He must show that in the throes of madness he increases his understanding of the human condition and of himself. He must be a believable 80-year-old while exhibiting the stamina and conditioning of a young athlete onstage. In short, Lear is not a role for the shallow or inexperienced.

And "shallow" and "inexperienced" are not adjectives one would use to describe Paul Massie. From the moment in the late 1940s when he experienced a kind of epiphany while listening to a guest speaker on acting at his high school, he has pursued a career in drama with a single-minded intensity, even when leaving his native Canada for an apprenticeship on the London stage meant an obligatory two years of national service in her Majesty's military.

NOT LONG AFTER his discharge, Massie earned one of those career making or breaking roles in the film Orders to Kill, directed by Anthony Asquith and co-starring Lillian Gish, Irene Worth and Eddie Albert. Massie played an American pilot in World War II who has been grounded for psychological reasons; while grounded he is asked to go into occupied France to kill a supposed collaborator.

"It was ahead of its time, very anti-war," Massie says. "It showed the difference between death and the bomb and killing countless people who are absolutely anonymous and having to stick a knife into a single person."

The film's success was a mixed blessing for Massie, perhaps a reason he now prefers "as much as possible to live in the present." It earned him a best actor nomination at the 1958 Cannes Film Festival, and won him a British Film Academy Award for best performance in 1959. But it also thrust Massie into prominence at a time he was still trying to develop his skills.

THE AWARD CAME "far too early," Massie says now with the benefit of hindsight. "I was asked to do things that, in hindsight, I really wasn't prepared for, didn't have enough experience for. In that respect it did a fair amount of internal damage ... I did my learning very, very publicly, on BBC, on the London stage."

Learning is a very important word for Massie, cropping up again and again in his conversation. By the time Orders to Kill started filming, Massie had learned enough from his observation of Asquith and from his own probing that he "knew what everybody's job was in the whole studio."

That varied interest in the profession continued, so that while his early career activities were all in acting, Massie developed skills that easily allowed the later transition into directing and teaching. A professor at the University of South Florida since 1974, and an Ida Beam Visiting Professor at the UI during the current 1984-85 school year, Massie possesses the varied expertise to have taught such disparate courses as Text Analysis, Television and Radio Techniques, Stage Makeup and Opera Workshop, or to have directed Mozart's Magic Flute and then acted at the prestigious Stratford, Ontario Shakespeare Festival the same year.

IT TAKES a full experience of the theater and of life to tackle a Lear, a personage Massie often refers to in the first person. His face reflects the character, the prolonged learning and experience, that one associates with the role. One can discern in Massie's description of King Lear an undercurrent of Massie's attitude to his own experience:

"I personally don't consider that a journey through life is very simple. If you decide to live life, it can be very painful, and you have to live with the cruelty that exists. And here we have it, within a few short hours, encapsulated. If you can allow the play to act upon you, as I as an actor have to do, it can be actually uplifting, it can be enlightening. If you fight it, it can be absolute agony."

King Lear will be performed in Mabie Theatre at 8 tonight through Saturday, April 20, 26 and 27 and at 3 p.m. April 21 and 28.

For centuries, the finest beers in the world were brewed over direct fire. Stroh still brews this way.

EVERY DAY WE SET THE BEER BUSINESS BACK 200 YEARS.

In 1881, The Stroh Brewery Company bought one of the world's most modern and efficient breweries for $90 million.

Then we spent $15 million to change it.

The money went for a brand-new brewhouse where beer could be made by a centuries-old method called fire-brewing.

Two hundred years ago, practically all beers were brewed over direct fire. But as American brewers turned to steam heat to cut costs, fire-brewing died out.

Then Julius Stroh visited the breweries of Europe.

He found the best beers were still brewed over direct fire. They tasted smoother, more flavorful.

So, he decided, his family's beer would be fire-brewed—even though it cost more.

We also brew Schaefer, Old Milwaukee, Schlitz, Malt Liquor and other fine beers to the same uncompromising standards of quality in a variety of ways. But it's the unique character of fire-brewed Stroh's and Stroh Light that has helped us become America's third-largest brewer.

Sometimes, looking backwards is the best way to get ahead.

STROH
We haven't lost the family touch.

America's premier fire-brewed beers come from the copper kettles of Stroh.

Art events for Central America, pro wrestling pinning down public

THERE ARE two subjects I'd like to address this morning, both of which are national in scope, just emerging into the collective awareness and commanding loyal and vocal legions of supporters, including several celebrities.

While one is avowedly serious and the other is strictly for laughs, both are interpreted by their detractors as being disposable and/or impactless. This is probably due to their former underground status; nothing is perceived as more pointless than "fads" that were once real issues (or at least interests).

Give up yet? Me too. So the answer is: pro wrestling and U.S.-based Central American political activism.

Let the invective begin flying and the amateur pundits start punditing, let me say that I consider the end of United States oppression and heavy-handed "friendship" in various Central American countries to be entirely laudable and timely. Events in the region have, according to every source I'm aware of, reached the flashpoint, and all the Prez's horses and all of his men can't hold back the tide of self-determinism that is sweeping the countries there.

Furthermore, although I'm sensible to the allure of professional wrestling and admire the kind of showmanship that goes into the selling of the "sport," in no way do I consider it more than a pimple on the, uh, face of pop culture. It certainly ain't worth analyzing, f'r Chrissake.

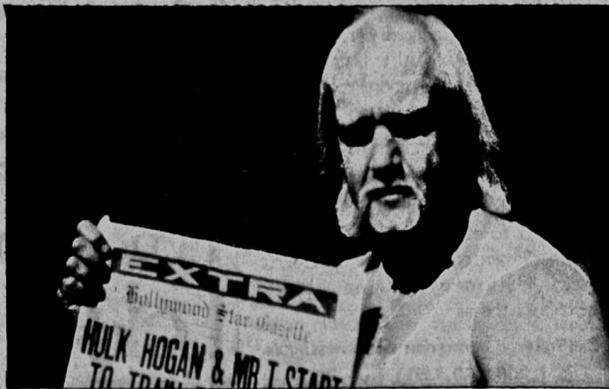

So, with that offa my chest, let's proceed.

Although most of the people with whom I spoke don't regard it as such, there is an ongoing explosion of entertainment events in Iowa City and environs supporting various groups doing work for the cause of self-determinism in Central America.

From the local and specific, such as Bonnie Raitt's urging of Central American awareness and singing of a song about same during her show in Hancher Auditorium, to the national and generic, such as various other superstar fundraising efforts, artists everywhere are pushing for change in U.S. policy in the area.

This weekend alone witnesses three different events all geared to provide funding and support for varying Central American relief organizations: two on Saturday night and one proceeding through the weekend.

FIRST OFF, the internationally famous Bread and Puppet Theatre will happen into the Iowa City Recreation Center gymnasium Saturday night at 8. They'll perform The Door, a play depicting the history of Guatemala from its ancient days of animist cults to the present day, and is based in part on information gleaned from Amnesty International, America's Watch and other civil rights organizations. You may pay any amount as an entry donation, but $3 is the suggested contribution. The event is sponsored locally by the Iowa City Caucus on Central America and the Committee in Solidarity with Central America. "We think there's a real crisis now in Central America," said Jesse Singerman, Hulk Hogan, one of pro wrestling's biggest names, has legions of supporters, including several celebrities.

John Voland

spokesman for the Caucus. "President Reagan's off-the-wall comments aren't helping. And now that there seems to be a groundswell of people concerned about the situation, we're starting to really reach out in a new way."

Also on Saturday night (at 8, in Old Brick) is a benefit performance by the excellent folk/bluegrass outfit, the Waubeek Trackers, UI School of Music faculty harpist Georganne Cassat and the jazz group Rhetorical Question. The tickets cost $5 for general admission and $3 for students and seniors, and the proceeds will go toward helping Amnesty International's work for the release of "political" prisoners worldwide — of whom no small part are jailed in Central America's various dictatorships.

THEN, FOR three days beginning on Sunday, there'll be an exhibit and sale of national and local artists' work at Old Brick (Sunday 4 to 9 p.m.; Monday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Tuesday 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.). Among the many talented and committed artists whose work will be on display are John Borofsky, Jennifer Bartlett, Leon Golub and Nancy Spero.

The proceeds of this sale will go to help the MADRE Project — which is seeking to support a womens' hospital in Managua, Nicaragua — and to the New El Salvador Today (NEST) Project, which is working to establish daycare centers and agricultural development in that war-ravaged country.

While this country does not have a terribly impressive record of artists creating social and political change, there is no better time to express your concern, your anger or your support for the essential work these various organizations are doing to keep the essential human element under desperate circumstances.

In this way, art can mean more than a unique expression of communication. It could just possibly save someone's life — literally.

When Us Magazine devotes six pages of its oh-so-precious weekly space to something, you've got to know somebody out there digs that something. And when about two zillion people from sea to shining sea watch something on television with the fervor usually reserved for Mom's apple pie in the shape of a flag, you've got yourself one hot property.

Yep, wrestling — the "professional" kind, not the legitimate sport mastered by our own Dan Gable and his Hawkeye dynasty — is big news these days: Oddposter Cyndi Lauper manages two wrestlers (The Incredible Hulk Hogan and Wendi Richter), Diane Keaton thinks it's the hippest thing since smoking ganja and Mr. T took time out from his bulging social calendar to join Hogan and two pals in a closed-circuit-TV deal as big as any title fight you'd care to name. Besides, Andy Warhol says it's the Sport of the 80s. So there.

LIKE MR. T himself, wrestling is just one big Saturday morning cartoon. It pits glaring good guys against bumbling bad guys and stages the spontaneity out of the encounter. It provides the voyeur with fantasies aplenty, all right, but it's to be taken about as seriously as a Pat Paulsen presidential campaign.

Actually, that's not quite true for two reasons. First, there's an uncomfortable kind of flag-waving that goes along with wrestlers. Dusty Rhodes, The American Dream; Sgt. Slaughter, who "loves to wave the flag and brutalize the unpatriotic"; and most of the non-Americans are tagged as bad guys, especially Rowdy Roddy Piper, a Scot with a nasty disposition — they all represent a kind of nonsensical jingoism that fits Reaganism all too well for my tastes.

And the second? Pat Paulsen probably won't come looking for me should he read this. But the Road Warriors, well... I'll send ya a postcard.

Voland is a DI staff writer whose column on arts/entertainment appears every Wednesday.

Christopher Parkening, America's most accomplished classical guitarist, was featured soloist with the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra in Hancher Tuesday night.

Dutch orchestra shows its mettle in polished concert

By John Voland
Staff Writer

TIME WAS, there were only two or three chamber orchestras with reputations large enough (or with pockets deep enough) to enable it to tour and record extensively: the English Chamber Orchestra, Neville Marriner's Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields and perhaps the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra.

But now, as Monday night's appearance in Hancher by the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra confirmed, any number of excellent small orchestras are making the rounds, with results that seemingly never fall below the competent.

The NCO — a 27-member ensemble composed of strings, a harpsichordist and pairs of oboes and horns — was unflinching clean, precise and perky Monday, and while conductor Antoni Ros-Marba generally favored tempi bordering on the breathless, the ensemble was never flustered enough to produce an ugly sound.

So smooth is the NCO sound that, although I lack the current roster for the Concertgebouw Orchestra, it wouldn't surprise me to learn that that august orchestra shares some players with the NCO. Both ensembles are unflappable and unflinching refined. Perhaps it's a Dutch trademark.

IN ANY CASE, the ensemble opened its program with an elegant yet bouncy reading of Mozart's Symphony No. 29 in A, K. 201, one of the composer's first mature works in the form. The NCO is just the right size for most Mozart symphonies, and the resulting string/wind and string/choir balances were finely tuned. And if Ros-Marba got a touch carried away with the final Allegro con spirito — which, after all, is an emotional cue and not a chronological one — the NCO stayed with him measure for measure, even if it cost some inner string detail to do so.

Eminent classical guitar virtuoso Christopher Parkening joined the ensemble for an essay of

with the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra in Hancher Tuesday night.

Music

Vivaldi's popular Guitar Concerto in D (RV 93), which saw the NCO pared down to eight violins, two cello and continuo in order not to drown out the guitar. It worked: Parkening's deft fingerings and lovely tone were heard to their best advantage in the concerto format, and Ros-Marba was on his best accompaniment behavior throughout the brief work.

Several virtuoso solo offerings followed, with Gaspar Sanz's "Canarios" and Fernando Sor's finger-busting Variations on a Theme of Mozart, Op. 9, as the standouts. As advertised, Parkening is a guitarist's guitarist: His technical accomplishment borders on the unbelievable, and while the line was sometimes lost under the flurry of fioriture, Parkening's ability to produce lute tones for Dowland's "My Lady Hunsdon's Allemande" and create two distinct melodic sounds (mimicking a two-manual harpsichord) for Francois Couperin's "Les Baricades Misterieuses" was nothing short of amazing.

AFTER THE INTERMISSION, Frank Martin's Pavane Couleur de temps was quite lovely-sounding, though perhaps the NCO played it too coolly for a work whose twin inspirations seem to be Ravel's Pavane pour une infante defunte and Schoenberg's Verklarte Nacht.

A last-moment program change unfortunately substituted Tchaikovsky's anemic Souvenir de Florence, Op. 70, for Dvorak's incandescent String Serenade, and while the NCO made their best effort, the warhorse refused to rise to the occasion this time around. Ros-Marba's willful tempo changes and lunging accents did little to help the piece out, either, even though lovely solo playing in the Adagio cantabile by violist Marie Christine Springuel and cellist Herre-Jan Stegenga made that movement an island of inspiration amidst much chaff.

Film tour offers unique program

By Robert Arnold
Special to The Daily Iowan

THIS WEEKEND, the Ann Arbor Tour, a collection of 20 award-winning films selected from over 500 entries at the 23rd Ann Arbor Film Festival, will make its first stop in Iowa City, thanks to the efforts of the recently sanctioned Production Students Association. This event promises to make available to Iowa City moviegoers a cinematic experience completely different from what one can find downtown, at the malls or even at the Bijou.

Since 1963, the Ann Arbor Film Festival has been one of the premiere showcases for independent cinema in the United States. Independent cinema is film work which is opposed to Hollywood's commercialism and its ideological strategies. Independent filmmakers often work alone, controlling every aspect of their productions in the name of personal expression.

Freedom from box-office pressure allows for an "anything goes" attitude in independent cinema. Encompassing documentary, animation, narrative, non-narrative, experimental, political, art-for-art's sake, long and short films, independent cinema is characterized more by its heterogeneity than by any common themes or approaches. If independent cinema has any common denominator at all, it is a manifest interest in the nature of the film medium itself. Sometimes challenging, sometimes funny and often engaging, independent films persist in investigating the formal and representational possibilities of cinema.

DESPITE ANN ARBOR'S claim that the festival is interested in promoting film as art, independent cinema's relationship to the mainstream isn't simply one of "art vs. industry." Independent cinema is like all cinema to the extent that there are indeed conventions regulating its various subgenres, and it too requires an institutional framework of some kind for production and exhibition. And last, but certainly not least, all cinemas require a participating audience. Ann Arbor is unique among festivals in that it makes a package of selected films available to a wider audience as a touring exhibition. Everyone with an interest in cinema, from strictly serious to strictly fun, will find the experience worthwhile.

Iowa City filmmakers past and present are frequently represented at Ann Arbor. This year's tour includes films by ex-Iowa student Chuck Houdina and new faculty member Leighton Pierce. Past festivals have included work by Franklin Miller, head of the Division of Broadcasting and Film, and former students Peter Bundy and J.J. Murphy.

The Ann Arbor Film Festival Tour will be presented in three completely different programs, each repeated twice. Program A, featuring Houdina's "Baby in a Rage," will be presented at 7 p.m. Friday and 6 p.m. Saturday. Program B will be presented at 9 p.m. Friday and 7 p.m. Saturday. Program C, including Price's "Not Much Time," will be shown at 9 p.m. Saturday and 3:30 p.m. Sunday. Admission for each program is $1.50 at the door. All screenings will be held in Room 101 of the Communications Studies Building.

Run-D.M.C. trio creates powerful new musical genre of 'rap 'n' roll'

By Allen Hogg Arts/entertainment Editor

IT'S TIME TO catch up on some more 1985 releases. Last round it was veteran British artists, today here are some distinctly American groups.

King of Rock, Run-D.M.C.

One of the most important pieces of vinyl released so far this year is undoubtedly this second LP from New York City emcees Joe Simmons and Darryl McDaniels (Run and D.M.C.) and D.J. Jam Master Jay.

Although in many ways this trio treads in familiar rap territories — "message" songs and boasting — the extent to which they use hard rock to present these themes is completely new. Run-D.M.C. doesn't seem ready to stop at being the freshest rap outfit around, they seem to want to conquer the heavy metal field as well.

Make no mistake, this isn't mere rap music. This is a whole new genre; for lack of a better term, let's call it "rap 'n' roll." Just listen to the title cut of King of Rock, with the crunching guitar of Eddie Martinez backing up Run and D.M.C. as they trade off lines, announcing, "It's not Michael Jackson/And this is not Thriller," and it will be clear what this new musical style entails.

BUT THE GIANT wall between rap and heavy metal isn't all Run-D.M.C. is intent on knocking down. The connection between rap and reggae is also made explicit on "Roots, Rap, Reggae," a collaboration with Yellowman, Jamaica's premier toaster.

Records

All in all, King of Rock is a fun, funny and powerful record from one of the hottest bands of any genre. Run-D.M.C.'s "rap 'n' roll" may not be the shape of things to come, but for those who truly care about music, it probably should be.

Hard Line, the Blasters. Slash/Warner Bros.

With their self-titled Slash records debut in 1982, the Blasters established themselves as the forerunners of the renewed interest in the mix of rhythm 'n' blues, Western swing and rockabilly that they call American roots music. With their 1983 album Non-Fiction, the Los Angeles-based outfit maintained this musical style, but lyrically dove headfirst into recession rock, addressing more topical concerns. This created somewhat of a contradiction, however, with the band performing essentially fun, danceable music to lyrics about suicide, unemployment and despair.

ON HARD LINE, the Blasters have resolved this contradiction, finding a starker, more appropriate sound to accompany lead guitarist Dave Alvin's tales of hard times in the heartland. But this is by no means a joyless record. The rave-up "Rock and Roll Stand," for example, displays how the music lives on even through the failure of one performer, and Phil Alvin's vocals on "Help You Dream" and John Melencamp's "Colored Lights" show how a little cockiness can get one through some hard times. The heart of the record, however, is in such acts as the fierce anti-Reagan rocker "Common Man" and "Dark Night," with its tale of love-motivated murder.

All in all, Hard Line is the Blasters best effort yet — a Springsteen-esque exploration of the troubles of the American soul, circa 1985.

Maverick, George Thorogood and the Destroyers. EMI-America

One has to feel somewhat guilty liking George Thorogood. After all, he's made his money and reputation primarily through playing cover versions of songs which usually aren't significantly better than the originals. And the songs he does write himself are usually so derivative its amazing he hasn't been sued.

Still, the man has great taste in what he covers and copies, and his work is so clearly a labor of love, it's pretty hard to blame the guy. On Maverick, the covers include Carl Perkins' "Dixie Fried," Chuck Berry's "Memphis, Tennessee" and "(Let's) Go Go Go," Johnny Otis' "Willie and the Hand Jive," John Lee Hooker's "Crawling King Snake," and the title cut, the theme to the old James Garner TV show.

As for the originals, the best is "I Drink Alone," which finds Thorogood growling out verses about exploits with his good buddies Johnny Walker and Jimmy Beam as the Destroyers pound out the sound. It's probably a carbon copy of some old Muddy Waters riff, but who cares? After all, Elvis and Jerry Lee didn't perform originals, either.

Talks on poet, dye spice Africa series

Discussions of indigo dyeing techniques in Burkina Faso and African literature will continue the UI Museum of Art's "Art and Life in Africa" series today and Sunday, Nora Leonard Roy will speak on "Indigo: A Folk Tradition in Burkina Faso" at 12:30 p.m. today, and Peter Nazareth will discuss "Literature of the Peoples of Africa" at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Roy has lived in Burkina Faso on three different occasions, most recently in 1984. Her talk will focus on indigo dyeing techniques among the Mossi and the Marka Dafing, two ethnic groups in Burkina Faso, formerly known as Upper Volta. She will illustrate her talk with field photos and samples of dyed cloth using tie-and-dye, sew-and-dye, cassava paste resist and other techniques to produce intricate patterns.

ROY WILL ALSO discuss the uses of indigo among the Yoruba, the Hausa peoples, and the Tuareg, who are known as "the blue men of the desert."

On Sunday, Nazareth will speak on the writing of Taban Lo Liyong and other topics. Liyong is a Ugandan folklorist-poet-critic who received his masters degree from the UI.

Nazareth is a member of the faculty of the UI Department of English and the Afro-American studies program. He is also an advisor to the UI International Writing Program and is president of the African Literature Association. His most recent publication is the novel The General is Up.

The events are held in conjunction with the exhibition, "Art and Life in Africa: Selections from the Stanley Collection," which will be on display at the UI Museum of Art through August 16.

Bach choir resumes 300th anniversary fest

Bach's B minor mass will be performed by the University of Iowa Bach Choir, student and faculty soloists and members of the University Symphony Orchestra, all under the direction of Don V. Moses, at 8 tonight in Hancher Auditorium.

Soloists will be UI voice faculty members Elizabeth Neufeld, soprano, and Jocelyn Reiter, soprano, contralto; and six UI voice students — soprano Carla LeFevre Milhollin, mezzo-soprano Katharine Goeldner, tenor William Gabbard, tenor Scott McCoy, bass Don Milhollin and bass Harris Loewen.

The Bach Choir is composed of the Kantorei, the university's most select vocal ensemble, and the University Choir. The instrumental accompaniment will be provided by a chamber orchestra derived from the University Symphony Orchestra.

The performance continues the UI School of Music's Baroque Fest, celebrating the 300th birth anniversary of Bach, Handel and Scarlatti, and the 400th birth anniversary of Heinrich Schütz.

The concert is free and no tickets are required.

King Lear. The University Theatres production of this Shakespeare tragedy, starring Paul Massie in the title role, debuts at 8 p.m. in Mable Theatre.

Music

The UI Bach Choir, student and faculty soloists, and members of the University Symphony Orchestra, all under the direction of Don V. Moses, will perform Bach's B minor mass at 8 p.m. in Hancher Auditorium.

Leopold La Fosse, violinist on the faculty of the UI School of Music, will discuss and demonstrate "Baroque Strings" at 12:30 p.m. in Harper Hall.

As part of the series of public events being held in conjunction with the "Art and Life in Africa" exhibit at the UI Museum of Art, Nora Leonard Roy will speak on "Indigo: A Folk Tradition in Burkina Faso" at 12:30 p.m. in the museum.

Readings

Poet Sara London and fiction writer Dean Albarelli will read from their works at 8 p.m. at Prairie Lights Bookstore.

Television

On the networks: Billy Dee Williams, as a high-class cat burglar, and Ken Wahl, as one of his street-wise brethren, pair up with a little persuasion by the San Francisco police to become crimefighters in "Double Dare" (ABC at 7 p.m.), a limited-run series that premieres tonight. Nicolas Surovy (formerly Mike Roy on "All My Children") plays a hard-boiled Kansas City cop who pairs up with a gorgeous casino dealer (Mariu Henner) to track down his wayward sister in "Stark" (CBS at 8 p.m.).

On cable: Despite a surprisingly fine dramatic performance by Jerry Lewis, Martin Scorsese's 1982 black farce, The King of Comedy, proved to be one of the year's bigger box-office flops, thanks largely to its unrelentingly grim sense of the absurd. Absurdities of a less depressing sort are promised in King Richard and the Crusaders, a 1954 film that earned mention in The Fifty Worst
