Jeanette Welp, center, a senior from Bancroft, Iowa, plays puppet to a group of students involved in a puppetry workshop held in the Old Music Building Wednesday morning. The workshop was conducted by Peter Schumann, left, in conjunction with a performance by Schumann's Bread and Puppet Theater troupe, which will be performing at the UI Saturday and Sunday. Schumann's theatrical style combines general ideas of expression with manipulative statements to give life to themes important to him. The theater troupe consists primarily of larger-than-life puppets which often are so huge they must be operated by a puppeteer on stilts. Schumann, originally from Germany, called the troupe's work improvisational, adding "the performances start as experiments and then settle down, depending if I'm on the tour or not. If I'm there the whole tour is likely to be an experiment." Schumann took up this type of puppetry as a way of bringing art to people after becoming disenchanted with his original medium — traditional sculpture.

Workshops will continue today with participants putting on a performance Friday night. "The Door," which will be presented Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Iowa City Recreation Center, is an example of the troupe's founder's ability to present political themes through theater. Schumann's visit to the UI is being sponsored by the UI Caucus for Central America and will be followed by the Artist's Call exhibition and sale at Old Brick on Sunday. Proceeds from the Artists' Call sale will be given to the MADRE project for hospital care in Nicaragua and to the New El Salvador Today Project for day care centers and agricultural development. Ruler vows to keep U.S., Sudan ties

KHARTOUM, Sudan (UPI) — Sudan's new military ruler said Wednesday he would form a new Cabinet, which will include civilian members, "within weeks if not days" and vowed to maintain Sudan's close ties with the United States.

Also Wednesday, the United States offered Sudan a $40 million grant to buy oil, the first material show of support by a foreign country for Gen. Abdul Rahman Suwar al-Dahab's military junta.

IN HIS FIRST news conference since bloodlessly deposing President Jaafar Numeiry Saturday, al-Dahab defended the military for seizing power while Numeiry was in Cairo.

The United States had considered the staunchly anti-communist Numeiry a valuable ally situated between Libya and Marxist Ethiopia. Al-Dahab said close ties would be maintained with Washington despite the harsh anti-American rhetoric expressed by some labor unions during street protests last week.

"I would like to say that relations of friendship with the United States will continue," said al-Dahab, 50, a career military man and former defense minister.

"We are intent on maintaining close relations with all countries and also those friends who give us aid at a time when we are suffering from drought and a shortage of food, such as the United States in particular," he said.

THE UNITED STATES virtually feeds the drought-stricken northeast African nation single-handedly, supplying 843,000 tons of food a year — more than 10 times the total provided by all other Western donors combined.

In his press conference, al-Dahab said, "We are actually holding consultations with civilians who will take part in this Cabinet which we are trying to form."

When asked how long it would take to form a Cabinet, al-Dahab said the project was one of the most important tasks facing the 15-man Military Council he established Tuesday to run Sudan until the transition to civilian rule.

"This depends on the progress of the consultations," he said at the heavily fortified, white sandstone army headquarters a few blocks from Numeiry's presidential palace on the banks of the Nile River.

"It can be formed within weeks, if not days," al-Dahab said. "The army has decided to assume power to transfer it to the people — not to keep it."

U.S. may increase Cambodian support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz told two Cambodian rebel leaders Wednesday the United States will continue giving them humanitarian aid and will consider military aid to help in the fight against occupying Vietnamese forces.

After a one-hour meeting with Shultz, Son Sann, president of the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front and a former prime minister, told reporters, "I think the U.S.A. will give all aid to the non-communist fighters."

ASKED IF SHULTZ made any specific promises, Sann said, "We are discussing about the procedure and what is good for us."

He said, "You cannot have 100 percent of what you want ... If you have 60 or 70 percent of what you wish that's a good thing. But I can tell you the question is going on and I am very optimistic."

The rebels are already receiving military assistance from China and some countries in the Association of South East Asian Nations.

But Sann told reporters he is seeking U.S. military assistance because "we cannot be independent if we get only aid from China. That's why the Cambodian people asked me to come and obtain any assistance from the U.S. leaders."

IN A STATEMENT issued later, the State Department said Shultz "reaffirmed that the United States will continue its firm support" for efforts to achieve a settlement of the Cambodian problem "based on the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese forces and free elections under international auspices."

The department said, "He also reaffirmed strong U.S. support for the non-communist resistance, and said that we are prepared to consider how we might most appropriately assist further."

Earlier, the State Department had opened the door for eventual U.S. military assistance to the non-communist resistance fighting the Vietnamese in Cambodia.

THE STATEMENT of U.S. policy came just hours before Sann and Prince Norodom Ranariddh, Supreme Commander of the Sihanoukist National Army, met with Shultz.

The two met Tuesday with other State Department officials whom Sann told, "We cannot fight the Vietnamese with our bare hands."

In the Tuesday meeting, assistant secretary of State Paul Wolfowitz, according to a State Department spokesman, reaffirmed U.S. support for the non-communist resistance in See Khmers, page 8

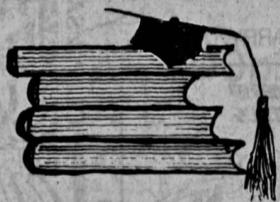

UI credit structure hinders four-year graduation

By Andrew Lersten
 Staff Writer

Once again it's spring, and the fancies of most UI seniors are turning to thoughts of ... scrambling to meet graduation requirements.

About 2,600 UI students will participate in commencement ceremonies May 18, but almost as many seniors — 2,068 of them — will find themselves short of the credits necessary to graduate.

"It's the very rare student who actually gets through in four years," said Joel Mintzer, a former UI student senator who ran unsuccessfully for president of the UI Liberal Arts Student Association. "The problem is that students are coming to the university thinking that they can get through in four years. It's getting kind of ludicrous now."

BOTH MINTZER and his opponent, LASA president-elect Mike Reck, campaigned with promises to take a hard look at the UI's credit structure. "It's somewhat foolish," Reck said. "We feel you can learn something much more thoroughly if you don't have to always run around. The hours don't match up with the difficulty of some of the courses."

"We do feel it is very important ... because many students aren't graduating in four years," Reck said. "That's not right."

In 1980 and 1981 several UI committees re-evaluated the university's curriculum and credit structure. That review led to a reduction in the number of credit hours offered in many UI courses, as well as a new requirement system known as General Education Requirements.

PRIOR TO THE review, four credit hours per course was a standard amount. Today three credit hours per course is the norm for most UI GER courses.

Reck said graduating in four years is almost impossible, especially if the student is involved in extra-curricular activities. "People who are involved become fifth-year and sixth-year seniors," he said.

Sherwood Tuttle, associate dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts at the time of the changes, said the purpose of the change was "that the total of semester hours (required) be the same but that there be more classes in there."

"I think what some students are saying is that a three-hour course is as much work as a four-hour course," Tuttle said. "If that's the case, then either the three-hour course is not being taught right or else the four-hour course is not being taught right."

HE SAID THERE has been a trend at the UI in recent years that "students have not carried as heavy of loads as they did 10 years ago." Several factors have contributed to this trend, Tuttle said, including students working, getting involved with extra-curricular activities and "a feeling of not wanting to overload yourself."

Tuttle said in order to graduate in eight semesters, a student must take an average of a little more than 15 semester hours per semester.

WALTER HERZOG, assistant to the head of the UI Physical Education Skills Office, said every year liberal arts students come in "really desperate," scrambling for last-minute skills credits. Liberal arts students are required to complete three physical education skills credits.

"There's always a couple of people who take two or three PE skills classes their last two quarters," Herzog said. "There are very many people who are not aware of what it takes to graduate."

"It's not a situation that's new to us — it happens all the time," he said. "It's really not our problem."

Last week, about 225 students took physical education exemption tests in classes ranging from swimming and fencing to jogging and racquetball, in efforts to secure more credits. About 70 percent of those students passed.

Herzog said students should "definitely" have a graduation analysis done their third year at the UI to avoid last-minute credit scrambling.

O'Neill praises Gorbachev

MOSCOW — House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill met with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for four hours Wednesday, where they talked about "a wide range of issues" and the Soviet chief was given a letter from President Ronald Reagan expressing hope for a future meeting.

O'Neill praised Gorbachev as a politician and diplomat. "About his ability, his talents, his frankness, his openness, I was tremendously impressed," O'Neill told American reporters. "There is no question that he is a master of words, a master in the art of politics and diplomacy... He's hard, he's tough, he's strong."

Gromyko to meet Shultz

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will meet May 14 in Vienna, the State Department said Wednesday.

The brief announcement of the meeting gave no agenda, nor did it say whether there might be a subsequent meeting of the two men. They are both expected to attend the 40th anniversary ceremonies marking the 1945 Austrian State Treaty in Vienna.

Reagan rejects talk offer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The administration Wednesday rejected an offer by the Nicaraguan government for direct peace talks with the United States on grounds that the Sandinistas' disagreement is with their own rebels.

In a communique, Ortega denounced Reagan's proposed peace plan — calling for negotiations between the Sandinistas and the Contra rebels — as an ultimatum but said his government "has always been disposed to speak with the government of the United States."

Tax protest planned for 15th

WASHINGTON — A broad coalition of unions, churches and consumer groups announced a nationwide petition drive Wednesday to persuade Congress to close corporate tax loopholes that it says cost the country more than $90 billion every year.

The petition drive will begin April 15 — the tax return deadline outside post offices in 40 cities to catch last-minute taxpayers. At a time of concern about the federal budget deficit and proposals to further cut many domestic programs, the real scandal in America is the federal tax code, the group said.

MIA remains returned home

HICKAM AFB, Hawaii — The remains of six Americans who perished in Vietnam, including two who died in captivity, were sent home to their families Tuesday aboard a camouflage-colored Air Force plane.

The remains were handed over to U.S. officials in Hanoi by the Vietnamese government March 20, among them Air Force Col. Melvin Killian of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Bradley back as L.A. mayor

LOS ANGELES — Riding on a wave of popularity fed by the success of the Summer Olympics, Mayor Tom Bradley clinched a landslide victory in his bid for an unprecedented fourth term as mayor of the nation's second largest city.

Bradley narrowly missed being elected California governor two years ago and was interviewed as a running mate for 1984 presidential candidate Walter Mondale in 1984.

Kanga rues unruly barbecue

PERTH, Australia — A barbecue broke up in hysteria when a large red kangaroo attacked a group of people at Narnung, 285 miles north of Perth, witnesses said today.

The kangaroo, described as about 5 feet, 9 inches tall, bit a man and his daughter and repeatedly came after the guests until one of them killed it by hitting it with a post.

'Review' contempt verdict upheld

By Tamara Rood
Staff Writer

An application made by Jeffrey Renander, former editor-in-chief of The Hawkeye Review, to have the publication's co-founder Jerry Taylor found in contempt of court was sustained Wednesday by District Court Judge Vern Robinson.

A hearing on the contempt charge was scheduled for June 11, and Robinson ordered that Taylor be served at least 20 days before the hearing with a rule to show why he should not be held in contempt for allegedly violating an Aug. 13 legal stipulation between the two parties.

Renander was found in contempt of court on Feb. 22, for publishing articles in the September and October issues of the Review which violated a legal stipulation between Renander and Taylor, court records state.

Renander's April 9 application to have Taylor found in contempt claims that Taylor violated the court's stipulation when he filed a $400,000 suit April 1 against Renander.

That suit charged Renander and Leroy Corey, of Cedar Falls, with embezzling $200,000 from the Review's corporate funds, and asked for the return of that money and $200,000 in punitive damages.

Sandra Lee Williams, 23, of 904 E. Fairchild St., made an initial appearance Wednesday in Johnson County District Court on four charges of first-degree false use of a financial instrument and one charge of second-degree false use of a financial instrument.

Williams is charged with writing a $119.60 check to Seifert's, Old Capitol Center, on another person's account on March 22; and writing a $64.48 check to Seifert's on Feb. 18, court records state.

She is also charged with using a VISA card belonging to someone else to purchase $22 worth of merchandise from The Brown Bottle, 111 E. Washington St.; $20.80 from Rainbow Cleaners and Shoe Repair, 601 Highway 6 East Bypass; and $14.72 from Osco Drug, Old Capitol Center, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the charges has Kyle Doolin, of Cedar Rapids, made an initial appearance Wednesday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of escape.

On Jan. 5, Doolin did not return to project HOPE, a correctional center, as he was required to do, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the escape charge has been set for April 19. Doolin is being held in lieu of $2,500 bond.

Gary Lee Oleary, 36, of 719 Fifth Ave. Place, Coralville, made an initial appearance April 9 in Johnson County District Court on a charge of third-offense operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

On April 9 at Sixth Avenue and Sixth Street, Coralville, police found Oleary "passed out" in a vehicle with the motor running, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the OWI charge has been set for April 26. Oleary was released on his own recognizance.

James E. Gerstbrein, 21, and Andrew Martin Howell, 19, both of 636 C Mayflower Apartments; and Walter J. Brouder, 20, of 303 N. Riverside Drive, the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity house, each pleaded guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct on April 6 in Johnson County Magistrate Court. Each was fined $30 plus court costs. Gerstbrein also pleaded guilty to a charge of public intoxication and was fined an additional $25.

On April 6, police discovered an altercation in an alley near Rocky Rococo, 118 S. Dubuque St., which apparently began when Howell was asked to "step outside" of Burger King, 124 S. Dubuque St., "after some comments were made about fraternities," court records state.

Scott Louis Sojka, 23, of 227 1/2 Wolf Ave., pleaded guilty April 9 in Johnson County Magistrate Court to charges of disorderly conduct and interference with official acts. He was fined $50 plus court costs.

After police answered a disturbance call April 9 at the Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., Sojka said, "Here, have a beer" and offered one to a police officer. When the officer walked away, Sojka then "threw a beer at the officer's feet," court records state.

Sojka then "stated he was sorry and that he was only clowning around," court records state.

James Michael Farrell, 23, of 209 Teeters Court, made an initial appearance Wednesday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of driving with a suspended license.

Thomas Michael Snyder, 29, of 1827 C Street, made an initial appearance Wednesday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of driving with a revoked license.

On April 9, a check showed Snyder's license was suspended until May, 1986, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the charge has been set for April 24. Snyder was released to the custody of the Department of Corrections.

Computer committee attacks 'bugs' in program

By Nancy Duncan
Staff Writer

The fate of the troubled UI Student Computer Pilot Project will be decided in a series of meetings between students and faculty members expected to begin within the next two weeks, according to UI officials.

The committee will work to iron out the "bugs" in the program, which began last October and offers UI students the opportunity to buy or lease two computers from the university.

UI officials cited a number of problems in the program, including high monthly rentals, lack of support from the UI Weeg Computer Center and discontinuation of the IBM PCjr — one of the computers offered.

Through the project UI students have the choice to buy or lease two computers: the Apple Macintosh 128K for $50 per month or the IBM PCjr for $35 per month. There is an additional ordering fee of $50 per machine, and students can also rent software accessories.

UI Collegiate Associations Council President Larry Lassiter said "despite what the Secretary of Education says," the per-month rental charges are a "little high."

"Certainly the plan, as it was presented to students, drove a lot of them out," said Tom Schiek, chairman of the UI Student Committee on Information Technology.

WHEN THE PROGRAM was initiated, participants could buy out their rental contracts after five months, but in January that period was extended to 18 months, Lassiter said.

Under the original plan a student would have to shell out over $1,000 in remaining principal and interest in one lump sum after renting a computer for only five months, he said.

"The financing plan should be as easy as possible or only the rich" students will be able to afford the computers, Lassiter added.

"Obviously we know the student market is price sensitive," said Lee Shope, director of Weeg. But he added that because of the project's novelty, UI officials had no way to foresee finance problems.

In addition to ironing out financing problems, the committee will also discuss the amount of administrative support students who buy or lease the terminals should receive.

Lassiter said consultants, newsletters, surveys and greater information exchange between Weeg and student renters are needed to help students who have computer-related problems.

IN JANUARY STUDENTS participating in the project received notice that their option to buy had been extended to 18 months, Schiek said.

The notice was the "only communication students have had with Weeg or the Office of Information Technology," he said.

Therefore, lack of support is a "legitimate point to be raised," Shope said.

But the pilot project had a greater impact on Weeg "staff loading" than expected, Shope said. "For a period of time there was a tremendous overload on staffing."

Schiek said 379 full-time students took advantage of the 500 computers offered for lease or sale.

UI officials said they initially thought the response would be better.

Shope said he thinks the existing payment terms had a "significant bearing on the number of students using" the machines and that the committee will try to develop a financial plan "that is long-term in nature to attract student interest."

One issue of "major concern" at the discussions will be what to do about the students who leased the IBM PCjr. IBM discontinued making the product this month after the UI had purchased 300 of the machines, Schiek said.

SCHIEK SAID QUESTIONS will be raised at the committee discussions about the propriety of leasing the once highly-marketed product.

"There was a lot of bad press about the PCjr while the decision was made," Schiek said.

"The PCjr is not nearly as attractive an item as last fall," Shope agreed, but added the production halt will not be a serious problem.

"IBM's past record says they will continue to support the machine... it's still a useful piece of equipment," he said.

Although the officials agreed that because of the project's novelty there are a few "bugs to kill," they are also optimistic about the program's educational benefits.

"If students can find it viable to pay the per month charge for a microcomputer, then as a tool it will make more of a difference in their education than any other tool," Schiek said.

"It's an idea whose time has come," Lassiter said.

Teachers urged to lobby for nuclear arms free zone

By James Hintzen
Staff Writer

If an idea by Roger Powers, a North Linn school teacher, meets with approval in the Iowa Legislature, the state could be declared a Nuclear Weapons Free Zone.

In a press release, Powers puts forth a proposal for the Iowa State Education Association to "lobby Iowa legislators to discuss the possibility of passing legislation in prohibiting the production, transport, storage, placement or deployment of nuclear weapons within the territorial limits of the state of Iowa, and (to) proclaim and designate the state of Iowa a Nuclear Weapons Free Zone."

Although the bill hasn't yet come up for debate in the Iowa Legislature, House and Senate members are divided on whether such a plan would be feasible.

"I wouldn't be in favor of it," said Sen. Thomas Lind, R-Waterloo. "We might need them some time in the future. In Waterloo, Chamberlain Manufacturing is actually hiring people to make the shells they use for warheads or to store them, or whatever they do with them."

"I'D BE IN FAVOR OF" declaring Iowa a Nuclear Weapons Free Zone, said Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma. "Children are really becoming scared. Lots of studies have shown that one of their biggest fears is the imminent threat of nuclear warfare."

Sen. Richard VandeHoef, R-Harris, said, "I would probably have some reservations" about declaring the state a Nuclear Weapons Free Zone.

"I don't know if it's an area that we as a state government should get involved in," he said. "In issues like this, when emotion takes place of better judgment you always have some problems."

"It sounds like a great idea," said Lana Openheim, publications specialist for the ISEA. "Any activity that's designed to decrease the threat of nuclear war would have my support."

Sen. Arne Waldstein, R-Alta, said he would be in favor of such a resolution. "You can't always sit back and do some wishful thinking and hope that the nuclear weapons problem will go away," he said. The nuclear buildup is "continuing to proliferate weapons and I think too many of us are standing on the sidelines with our hands in our pockets."

REP. WENDELL PELLET, R-Atlantic, said he "would probably be against" declaring the state a Nuclear Free Zone. "There are certain times the federal government has to take care of things like these," he said.

Pellet said although the resolution might make it through the House, he would predict it would have a "tough time in the Senate."

Joe Isobaker, a local member of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, said "there's a growing number of communities that have already done it. And there's an effort afoot to make Iowa City a Nuclear Free Zone. It's a project that has some international support."

Isobaker said "all of Antarctica is a Nuclear Free Zone, and there's a move by all the nations that have coasts on the Indian Ocean to have the Indian Ocean declared a Nuclear Free Zone."

Food poisoning strikes about 3,000

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Inspectors reviewed "battle plans" Wednesday for coping with the nation's largest reported outbreak of salmonella and examined blueprints of the dairy suspected of causing illnesses in nearly 3,000 people.

Public Health Department officials said two deaths have been linked to salmonella-tainted milk, with 2,827 cases of food poisoning reported in five states. Of the total number of reported cases, 2,214 have been confirmed.

Jewel Cos. Inc., which voluntarily closed its Hillfarm Dairy in Melrose Park on Monday, issued a statement extending its "sympathies to all those who have been affected" by the outbreak.

Jewel also said it arranged for Dean Foods Co. to supply dairy products to replace its own Hillfarm and Bluebrook brands which have been removed from store shelves. Both Hillfarm and Bluebrook were processed at the Jewel-owned dairy and distributed to Jewel and Eisner food stores.

Jewel stores are located in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan. In the Quad-Cities area an estimated 83 have been hit by the illness.

In Illinois, Kane County health officials said salmonella was a contributing factor in the death of William True, 53, Crystal Lake, who died Monday. And Cook County health officials awaited results of an autopsy conducted on Mary Kierzek, 61, Alsip, who also died Monday after experiencing salmonella-type symptoms. A $13 million wrongful death suit was filed on her behalf Wednesday.

HEALTH OFFICIALS last week found salmonella in Bluebrook brand 2 percent milk in one-gallon paper cartons with a March 29 expiration date. Officials said they also are analyzing stool samples from people who suffered illnesses after drinking Hillfarm brand milk.

"We should have, by late Thursday or early Friday, presumptive tests either positive or negative and that's the same kind of tests we did on the other (Bluebrook) product," said Chet June, spokesman for the state Public Health Department.

Authorities have been unable to come up with a cause for the outbreak, which officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta called the largest number of reported cases of salmonella in the nation's history.

June said the dairy would not be reopened until a source of contamination was discovered or until officials have "exhausted every conceivable possibility available."

June said he expects the number of reported cases of salmonella to increase in the next few days. But, he said, the actual number of people experiencing salmonella infection from milk products should be declining.

Video dating comes to Iowa City

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

Tube love or not tube love? That is the question.

Russ Madden, proprietor of Iowa City's first-ever video dating service, hopes love via video is the answer.

The Video Connection isn't scheduled to open until Saturday, but Madden said classified advertisements he has placed in several local newspapers have already solicited responses from about 40 people.

"I'm surprised no one has tried this in Iowa City before," Madden said. "The potential in this town is amazing. There are a lot of lonely college students and young professionals here who are sick and tired of the bar scene. They want to go out and meet someone but, especially in our fast-paced society, they just don't have the time or energy to do it."

Madden conceived the idea for Video Connection after reading a magazine article about video dating two years ago.

"I've been toying around with this idea for some time now," he said. "Love is big business in a lot of cities and I think video dating is something whose time has come in Iowa City."

Video Connection, which will operate out of Madden's Iowa City home, offers one-month, six-month and one-year memberships for clients at rates of $40 to $400 dollars, with considerably lower fees for students.

AFTER JOINING Video Connection, members are asked questions about their age, height, weight, profession, salary, interests and similar vital statistics about "the his/hers you're searching for."

After a client documents his or her desires on paper, it's off to the recording booth to record their every whim and desire. A provided list of "on air" questions suggests discussion topics ranging from life-long goals and secret fantasies to the role one believes sex should play in a relationship.

The questionnaires and video-cassettes are then filed in the company's library under "P" for potential and all that's left to do is browse and wait.

Each Video Connection member is entitled to peruse compiled interest sheets in the appropriately labeled "his" and "hers" notebooks. They will be allowed to select three members each week whose videotapes they would like to view, and from those tapes they may select one potential date.

Madden then contacts the person selected for the "connection," and it's up to the client to view the other's tape, read the questionnaire and give the final okay. There is no limit to the number of times one can be selected by other members for a connection.

THE WHOLE PROCESS, as Madden pointed out, is very confidential. Only first names and identification numbers are used until the selected member decides he or she would be interested in contacting another. Video Connection then provides each party with the name and phone number of the other and it's up to them to make contact.

"This is not an escort service or a computer dating service where I punch a lot of statistics into a computer and tell you who your perfect match is," Madden said. "This is a legitimate opportunity to meet people and, although it's a risk, it's probably less of a risk than going to a bar and picking up somebody there."

Although Madden will initially balance management of the Video Connection with his job as a clerk-typist at the UI, he hopes the video-dating service will eventually become a full-time job.

"I'd really like to have about 150 to 200 members in the club to start off with to provide some sort of age and interest diversity," he said, adding he would like to expand his business and someday offer memberships in Cedar Rapids, Davenport and Dubuque.

"THIS IS NOT a losers' club," Madden said. "That's a terrible misconception people have about video-dating services. It takes a positive attitude and self-image to even come in and make a tape. A loser is somebody who sits at home and moans or complains about the fact that they don't have any dates. People who go to video-dating services are at least attempting to get out and meet people."

Video dating isn't perfect though, and Madden admits there may be some clients who choose to "stretch the truth" when filling out their membership questionnaires.

"I'm not a policeman or a detective or a social worker, so there's really not a whole lot I can do if somebody shades the truth on their questionnaire," he said. "Sure, there's a chance someone could be lying through their teeth on one of these tapes, but you're running the exact same risk with someone you meet in a bar."

"Sure, this is a business, but it's a service-oriented business. Frankly, I think it's a service Iowa City's been needing for a long, long time," he said.

Dance instructor called outstanding by Federation of Women's Clubs

By Greg Philby
Staff Writer

UI dance instructor Susan Dickson is an outstanding young woman.

At least, Dickson was named one of 30,000 women across the nation to receive a certificate as a 1984 Outstanding Young Woman of America by the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Margaret Long Arnold, chairwoman of the advisory board of the selection committee, said the awards program is designed to "recognize the talents, abilities and successes of exceptional young women throughout America. These individuals are being honored not only for their professional accomplishments, but for important contributions to their communities, states and nation as well."

Dickson, who has been at the UI for five years, said, "To tell you the truth, I don't know what (the award is) for. I'm a little confused as to why I got it. I suppose it combines my creative work and being a teacher and helping to run the department. But they sent me no criteria as to why I got it."

Dickson sent the council a resume four months ago and the decision was based largely on that.

A PRESS RELEASE states the award is "designed to honor and encourage young women between the ages of 21 and 36 who have distinguished themselves in their homes, their professions and their communities."

Dickson, UI assistant professor in the school of dance, has primarily distinguished herself through dancing and choreography.

Her dancing career informally began at the age of 16 and became more serious when she gave up studying law at Connecticut College to pursue a B.A. in dance, graduating in 1974.

She has been involved in choreographing material for the University Dance Company and has done solo work. Dickson has choreographed several pieces performed in professional concerts, such as the dance "Corbel" by the Joffrey II Company, and her dances "Predator" and "the unhomed."

"They've gotten various kinds of recognition for being good dances," Dickson said.

Dickson has also worked with the Nebraska Dance Arts Council and teaches modern jazz at the UI, in addition to doing research on flexibility. She also is a trainer for the UI dance program and is "interested in prevention and rehabilitation of injuries."

Dickson has danced with Doug Woods and IWORX Co. and has performed at many area arts councils, including Riverfest, Iowa City, and the Amana Colonies.

She also instructs dancers at the Iowa City Gym-Nest Inc., 1611 Willow Creek Road.

But Dickson may change her career plans yet another time, becoming a "dancing doctor."

"Now what I think I would like to do is to be a doctor," she said. "Maybe my next dance piece will be about getting well."

Observers question PAC decision

By Charlene Lee
Staff Writer

Although last month's Supreme Court decision upholding the status quo for independent campaign spending by political action committees comes as no surprise to expert observers of the political arena, they question its impact.

"It's a very insignificant decision by the court and it's been greatly exaggerated by the media," said Jack Wright, assistant UI political science professor. He said the ruling was simply a clarification of current election laws in regard to PACs.

Wright also said most PACs don't spend much independently.

Although multi-candidate PACs are limited by election laws to $5,000 per candidate per election in direct contributions to a candidate's campaign coffers, the sky's the limit on the amount they can independently spend on behalf of the candidate.

With the high cost of commercial air time on television and radio stations, a heavy burden is taken off a candidate when PACs independently pay for ads supporting her or him — or in many cases, attacking the opponent. Such activity has pushed the cost of the average congressional campaign run to well over $250,000.

LAST MONTH the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the status quo, ruling that limiting the amount of independent spending by PACs is a violation of the First Amendment.

In the majority opinion, Justice William Rehnquist said "there can be no doubt" that independent PAC spending is speech protected under the First Amendment.

The Democratic National Committee expressed disappointment with the decision, saying, "We cannot accept allegedly independent spending which in reality is coordinated with the Republicans."

But UI Assistant Political Science Professor Cary Covington said he believes "the liberals will catch up with conservatives in independent spending."

Covington noted the vast bulk of independent PAC spending on behalf of President Ronald Reagan last year was spent building up his image. However, if both the Republicans and Democrats discover that negative advertising campaigns are more effective, they won't hesitate to use them in the future. "Neither has a monopoly on playing fair," he said.

Covington also said, "We've assumed that the court would hand down this judgment."

But he added the decision also opens up the potential for abuse in future election campaigns, especially in the amount of spending for negative campaigns against opponents. "The thing that concerns me is the problem of accountability," he said.

ON THE OTHER HAND, Nelson Polsby, well-known political science professor from the University of California, Berkeley, said he believes the Supreme Court made the right decision. "I'm really worried about solving political problems by denying people free speech."

Polsby said the current system is not without faults, but infringement upon a PAC's freedom of speech is a more serious violation. "If you don't permit people to spend money to propose their views, then you're giving an advantage to those who own newspapers."

Rep. Jim Leach, R-1st District, is one in a handful of U.S. Congressmen who refuse to accept any PAC money. Legislative Assistant Ken Ruberg said Leach feels the ruling is a "regrettable decision."

Ruberg said Leach believes PAC campaign tactics are "already out of hand," especially in the way PACs raise money through "heated hate mail." Another deception PACs are guilty of, he said, is that people who contribute to PACs don't realize that no more than a third of their contributions go toward direct political activity while the rest are spent on overhead costs.

Johnson County Republican Chairman Barry Jackson said he doubts PAC concerns will become a priority over constituent concerns — even in a high student constituency such as Iowa City. Jackson noted the vote is always stronger than the dollar to a candidate.

Although Jackson said he favors the Supreme Court decision, he also feels the present system is not without its faults. He said PAC support limits who is able to run for office. "You're losing some candidates that are articulate and have good ideas."

Anti-racism conference set for next week

By Elizabeth Grindrod
Special to The Daily Iowan

Four female activists from across the country will arrive in Iowa City Friday to take part in a unique week-long conference entitled "Racism: A Woman's Issue."

The conference, organized by an ad hoc committee calling itself Women Against Racism, is the third annual of its kind and is by far the most ambitious effort.

For the past two years it has been a one-day event attracting one speaker and a small number of local people. This year's $4,000 venture has been sponsored by more than 50 organizations and is expected to attract about 200 people.

Local sponsors answered appeals by the women's group when it became clear that the UI Humanities Board would not fund the conference. A spokesman for the board said although the conference proposal was sound, it was not clear how the films and poetry that will be featured relate to the humanities or that participants are humanities scholars.

However, program developer Cindy Cleary said, "We are so pleased with the enthusiasm and support we have had, and appealing for sponsors has had the effect of creating more interest than any other year."

THE FOUR NATIONALLY known women will participate with panelists and program organizers from the UI and the state in lectures, panels, workshops, discussion groups, films and a reading.

Barbara Smith, a black feminist author and theorist, will open the conference Friday with a keynote address.

Lillie Allen, a family medicine educator, and Ann Makie, a counselor and social work instructor, will conduct day-long workshops entitled "Breaking Through the Barriers" Saturday. White women and "women of color" will take part in separate workshops during the day and the two groups will come together in the evening to discuss their experiences.

"Both groups of women come to this issue in different ways and have different experiences. The separate workshops will give the women a chance to lay a foundation before coming together," Cleary explained.

As a follow-up to the weekend activities, a series of programs will be held next week. The film Mitsuye and Nellie juxtaposes the poetry, ideas and memories of Mitsuye Yamada, a Japanese American, and Nellie Wong, a Chinese American, with rare newsreels and photos. A second film, Salt of the Earth, documents a strike in a New Mexico mining community during the early 1950s in which Hispanic women played a major role.

The fourth visiting speaker, writer Paula Gunn Allen, will close the conference with readings from her poetry and other works.

Pre-registration is not necessary and all conference events are free and open to the public except for the "Breaking Through the Barriers" sessions, which will be limited to 25 women. For further information contact the UI Women's Resource and Action Center.

New fraternity chartered at UI

The Sigma Tau Gamma Iowa Colony will become the first fraternity to receive a charter at the UI in the past 17 years at the fraternity's installation program in Iowa City this weekend.

More than 300 people from across the country are expected to attend initiation activities beginning Friday evening with an alumni reception at the downtown Holiday Inn.

A Saturday morning coffee hour and initiation will provide the opportunity for induction of an honorary "Sig Tau" member. The Hawkeye Achievement Awards Brunch will follow at the Abbey Inn in Coralville. Fifteen Sigma Tau Gamma alumni living in Iowa will be honored for "distinguished accomplishments" at the noon brunch.

THE MAIN EVENT of the weekend will be the Saturday evening Installation Program and White Rose Ball at the Highlander Inn in Coralville. The 44-member Iowa Colony will receive its national charter as the Delta Lambda Chapter presented by National Sigma Tau Gamma President Ron Erickson of Greensboro, N.C., during the program. Dr. Ronald W. Roskens, president of the University of Nebraska and former Sigma Tau Gamma national board member, will provide the evening's keynote address.

The Iowa Colony of Sigma Tau Gamma was first recognized by the UI Interfraternity Council in April 1984.

Bus station is home to transients

By Jennifer Marx
Special to The Daily Iowan

First there was Walter. He would buy $10 worth of junk food at QuikTrip and then take a cab two blocks to his "home" — the Iowa City bus depot. "He didn't look like he had a nickel," ticket agent Shelly Blue said.

Next there was the "money lady." Blue, who has worked at the Greyhound station for about six years, said, "She came in with $20 bills pinned to her coat."

Then there was the 93-year-old man who thought he was in Cincinnati. Blue said an employee at the depot directed the man to a sign proving his actual whereabouts.

Blue, referring to the transient population which floats in and out of Iowa City's Greyhound Bus Lines, 404 E. College, said it's easy to find "a little slice of Americana here at the bus depot."

"This one's been here three weeks," Blue said last month, "ever since Campus Security asked him to leave" a residence hall lounge. Her reference was to one of the depot's recent guests, Stephen Ross Patrick Smith.

SMITH, 42, is one of almost half a million homeless people in the United States. According to a study by Madeleine Stoner, assistant dean of the University of Southern California School of Social Work, many transients are believed to be mentally ill with no place to go and little means of supporting themselves; others are teenage runaways.

Smith, a Rockford, Ill., native, said he has been on the road for about a year. He said that to earn money he plays the drums and works on "a little side business," about which he declined to give any details.

Smith, who has now moved on, said he gets around the Midwest by thumbing rides and sometimes traveling by bus. During his stay in Iowa City, he said he slept in the Greyhound station, guarding his belongings closely.

Smith said he usually bought his own meals, but he did take advantage of free lunches offered by the Free Lunch Program. "I spent a little more than my (Social Security) check allowed me this month," Smith said.

POLICE CHIEF Harvey Miller said he believes transients are not a major problem in Iowa City. Last year there was a total of 54 vagrancy complaints, but no arrests. In Iowa, there is no law covering vagrancy. Therefore, Miller said, no arrests can be made on such charges.

Police records show most complaints pertain to people sleeping in public areas or panhandling. The majority of cases are handled by asking the individuals to leave the premises and sometimes directing them to the Crisis Center.

Although Miller believes vagrancy in Iowa City is a minor concern, the situation does exist. There are a number of organizations in Iowa City willing and prepared to meet transients' needs.

The Crisis Center is one such organization. Located at 26 E. Market, it acts mainly as a referral service.

One Crisis Center volunteer said that sometimes transients are given bus tickets out of town and a meal at the Hamburg Inn. In most instances, though, they are informed about programs such as the Free Lunch Program and the Emergency Housing Project.

Ronnye Wieland, who co-founded the Free Lunch Program, said between 30 and 50 people usually take advantage of the lunches. The majority of those participating, she said, are transients.

WIELAND, A COUNSELOR at the Community Mental Health Center, said the program was started two years ago "because I knew of people coming here (the mental health center) that didn't have any food."

The hot lunches are served at the Wesley Foundation, 120 N. Dubuque, every day except Wednesday and Sunday. The program is staffed by community volunteers and supported by food donations, grants and local churches.

Located at 331 N. Gilbert, the Emergency Housing Project provides shelter for stranded, homeless and low-income people. Volunteer Becky Bateman said nearly half of the people who stay there are transients.

Bateman said the project houses about 50 people each month and that "referring agencies, such as the Crisis Center and Department of Human Services, provide vouchers for a stay of a few nights." If no voucher is provided, Bateman said, the housing project asks guests to pay a $7 nightly fee if they are able.

Funding for this project is primarily through grants and the sponsorship of 19 local churches, Bateman said.

In spite of these local programs, transient Smith said he believes that as a society, "We've grown away from our service to each other... we don't have to care for all we come in contact with."

Senate debate on tax bill delayed

By Susan Stoga
Staff Writer

Iowa Senate debate on a joint Senate-House conference committee's report on the state's multi-million dollar tax bill was halted Wednesday when the report was ruled "non-germane" by Lt. Gov. Bob Anderson.

The committee's plan would repeal Iowa's tax on agricultural and industrial machinery and corporate personal property while adding items and services subject to Iowa's 4 cent sales tax. It would also allow wine to be sold by both the public and private sector and enable Iowa cities to institute local option taxes.

The report, which was presented for debate early Wednesday afternoon, was ruled non-germane because the conference committee added items not previously included in either legislative body's version of the bill.

"The committee expanded the scope of the bill and in doing that added items that did not originally appear in the bill," said Sen. Richard Drake, R-Muscatine.

Because the committee violated joint House-Senate rules, the Senate voted 30-17 to suspend legislative rules and overrule Anderson's decision. In order for debate to be continued on the tax measure, the House will also need to vote to suspend conference committee rules.

"In overriding it (the ruling), the Senate is respecting that the lieutenant governor is right but that we're going to overrule and continue with debate on the bill," Drake said.

Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon, said the House is expected to vote on whether to suspend conference committee rules early this morning.

"I can't foresee that it will be forestalled any further," Varn said.

If the House overturns Anderson's ruling, the Senate will resume debate on the measure today.

The joint House-Senate conference committee voted Tuesday to eliminate items previously included in a comprehensive tax bill.

Items now exempt from the state's 4-cent sales tax include long distance, interstate telephone calls, land surveying and credit reporting services.

The conference committee's list of items subject to taxation are: non-carbonated soft drinks, candy, soda pop, cable television, janitorial service, building and maintenance service, lottery tickets, camping grounds, carpet and upholstery cleaning, gun and camera repair, landscaping, pet grooming, foot massage, security and detective services, tanning salons and water conditioning.

The House State Government Committee today is expected to approve legislation calling for the divestiture of funds owned by Iowa businesses from South Africa.

State Government Chairwoman Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said the committee is not expected to change the bill approved by the Senate early this week.

"I don't think that we will make any changes at all from what the Senate sent over," Lloyd-Jones said.

The Senate version of the divestment legislation calls for the withdrawal of state funds from corporations doing business in apartheid South Africa in the next five years as well as prohibiting future investments in South Africa by Iowa companies.

If approved by the committee, the bill will be debated in front of the entire House.

Lloyd-Jones said the committee will also discuss limiting the contributions of political action committees to individuals running for public office as well as provisions on comparable worth legislation.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, is currently working on legislation which would give amnesty to individuals delinquent in paying taxes to the state.

Doderer said the the bill is intended to "collect on the over $100 million dollars in unpaid taxes" the state has outstanding.

"We're going after the guilt conscious who haven't paid taxes for one reason or the other," Doderer said.

One for the 'ladies'

The recent informal agreement of the Iowa City Human Rights Commission that the "ladies' nights" often featured by local taverns are discriminatory has elicited some gasps of dismay — notably from tavern owners, of course, but also from females who enjoyed the lower drinking prices and males who appreciated the increased opportunity to meet females during such promotions.

Before the commission's informal ruling, few if any locals seemed concerned with this particular gender distinction; the issue was considered only because of a local restaurant owner's request for a clarification. The commission itself will take no further action unless a formal complaint is filed.

So for now all that has been accomplished is desirable. Tavern owners and the public have been reminded that even a form of discrimination that appeals to the majority is still discrimination. Without being forced to do so, those who sponsor and attend ladies' nights have an opportunity to re-evaluate their attitudes toward an event that patronizes women and implicitly uses female customers as a lure to attract more males.

Furthermore, all involved may be reminded of the implications of such distinction-making: If prices may be selectively decreased on the basis of gender, race or age, it stands to reason that they may be increased on the same basis, allowing businesses to effectively exclude whatever segment of humanity a bigoted owner may consider undesirable.

The Human Rights Commission also has an opportunity to re-evaluate the limitations of the Iowa City Code on discrimination, particularly as it applies to cases where only a beneficial effect on society is intended. Technically such actions as permitting senior citizens to ride free on the city bus system or children to pay reduced movie admission prices may also be discriminatory under a literal reading of the code; the code may need to be altered to prevent complaints where nothing may be gained but much lost for Iowa City residents.

Making the grade

"To see ourselves as others see us" is an unattainable goal, but one worth striving for nonetheless. Ideally, evaluations ought to provide the individual with constructive comments both positive and negative; enumeration of points to be improved upon leavened with recognition of areas of good performance.

In a university, because employment is often virtually permanent for tenured faculty, or necessarily transient as in the case of teaching assistantships, evaluations have their best chance of being used in the ideal manner: as a guide for individual improvement rather than as a basis on which to make decisions to retain or terminate employees.

Students are evaluated, in a sense, when they receive their grades. At the UI, faculty and T.A.s are in turn evaluated by students. But both students and teachers are members of the masses; foot soldiers in the struggle toward erudition. What of the officers and generals? If they truly are fulfilling their function of providing enlightened leadership and conscious planning, they are making efforts on behalf of all that deserve both acclaim and criticism, and opportunities should more reliably be provided for providing this.

The UI College of Liberal Arts Executive Council has opted for evaluation of department executive officers every three years. This does not seem often enough to those who have been told that the value of the evaluation procedure warrants doing it at least once every year, if not twice. Are individual Indians so important that, in contrast to the Chiefs, the system will benefit from scrutinizing them from three to six times more often?

Universities ideally should be places for the free exchange of ideas. Policy executors and policy planners should be evaluated as often and as thoughtfully as are policy recipients. Why aren't they? They would benefit from the process, too.

Inappropriate choice

Former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick was not a public figure who inspired lukewarm emotions. Whether it was because of her not-too-surprising party switch, her combative oratory before the Republican National Convention or her ability to go four straight years without smiling, Americans loved or hated Jeane.

But Kirkpatrick was only offensive and her abuses of power largely verbal ones. Her replacement, Gen. Vernon A. Walters, is equally offensive, but he has been more dangerous. Whether it was in his role as our military attache to the U.S. Embassy in Brazil overseeing the 1964 government takeover by an old army buddy, or as deputy director of Central Intelligence for Richard Nixon at the height of Watergate, Walters has given more than lip service to overthrowing democratic ideals, both inside and outside of this country.

If Walters' life history is revealing, his personal statements are even more so. The 68-year-old veteran of the cold war has never been enthusiastic about ideological diversity. He has written: "The greatest danger to our way of life and freedoms does not come from the communist parties of the world. For my part, I fear far more the pious dupes of the new left."

In Reagan's Orwellian tradition of calling nuclear weapons "peacemakers" and terrorists "freedom fighters," we now have a paranoid military man representing the United States at a forum that promotes peace. Moreover, Walters is not simply a military man, but a man with demonstrated contempt for the openness and freedom the U.N. is supposed to promote.

Considering his record, it would be unreasonable to expect this president to appoint a U.N. representative who truly believed in United Nations ideals. Even so, Gen. Walters is more than simply a bad bargain, he is dangerous. With "advisors" in El Salvador and a general in the U.N., hold onto your seats, folks, it's going to be a bumpy four years.

Education cuts will hurt economy

By James O. Freedman

THIS COUNTRY'S potential for economic growth is closely tied to the level of knowledge, skill and motivation that its young people have attained. Now a federal debt of unprecedented proportions has forced a reassessment of spending priorities in every segment of our society.

President Reagan's fiscal year 1986 budget recommends deep cuts for higher education, down 25 percent — or $2.3 billion — from the fiscal year 1985 level of $8.8 billion. All but $100 million of these reductions would come from student aid.

Approximately 5.3 million students across the country would be affected, and many thousands of Iowa students would be denied access to higher education.

NEARLY 6,500 UI students who now receive aid fall into categories marked for reduction — about 1,000 receiving

Guest opinion

Pell Grants who are from families with incomes above $25,000; more than 1,600 receiving federal loans who are from families with incomes above $32,500; and more than 3,800 whose aid from all sources exceeds $4,000 annually.

The $25,000 ceiling on family income for recipients of Pell Grants, which would disqualify about 880,000 students across the country, would reduce the number of Pell Grant recipients at the UI from 4,000 to about 3,000. The average Pell Grant, which last year was $1,052, would be reduced to only about $800 per recipient.

Almost 1 million current borrowers across the country would be eliminated from the Guaranteed Student Loan program by the proposed cap on eligibility of a family income level of $32,500. Most of our 1,664 student borrowers from families with incomes at this level, now receiving $5,810,855 in federal loans, would be affected.

THIS ABSOLUTE CEILING on family income would not allow use of a "needs test" to determine eligibility of families experiencing such special financial hardships as the enrollment of several students in college during the same year.

And the proposed ceiling of $4,000 for federal aid from all sources would cause hardships for 3,800 students who now receive aid at the UI. Most are enrolled in medicine, law, dentistry and the graduate college and are financially independent of their parents.

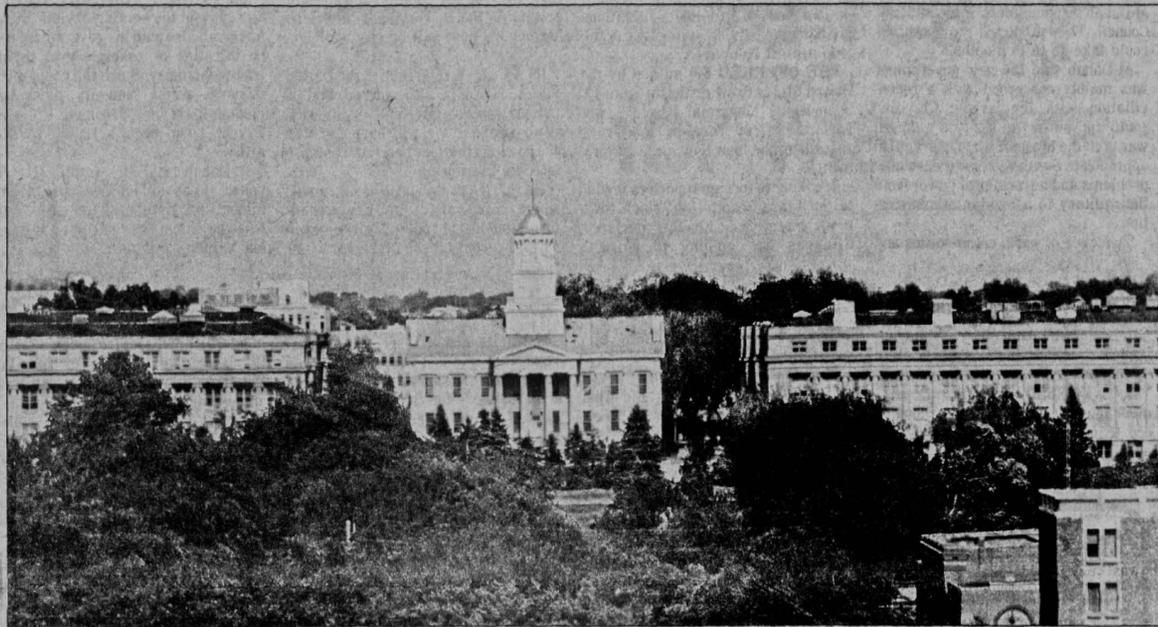

At present, these students may obtain enough funds from subsidized loans to cover the full cost of their education, including books and supplies, with adjustments in living expenses for those with dependents. Under the proposed limit, these students would have to supplement their subsidized loans with higher-cost unsubsidized loans, adding to the financial burden that already weighs heavily upon graduate and professional students with dependents.

All these cuts threaten a carefully developed system that balances fair access to educational resources with freedom of choice for students in public or private institutions. It provides outside help where it must and promotes self-help where it can.

STUDENT AID DOES NOT simply benefit the students who receive support; it also benefits society. In making higher education as broadly accessible as possible, our nation and our state have reaped rich rewards. As we enlarge the pool of young people who have access to a college education, we strengthen the intellectual base of our democratic society and sharpen our competitive edge in a demanding economic climate.

It's not for Falwell to be tolerant

DID THE REV. Jerry Falwell watch the Academy Awards? And if he did, did he see Dr. Haing S. Ngor, a 34-year-old Cambodian refugee, gleefully accept his Oscar? "I thank God — Buddha — that I am here tonight," Ngor exulted. Falwell must have slapped his forehead in consternation: Thank who?

Granted there's not an overwhelming number of Americans who call the deity Buddha, but there are still about 4 million of them and the numbers are growing. Many other Americans are Muhammadan or Hindu and there are many others who pray to no one and nothing at all, having rejected religion for whatever reason suits them.

I thought of Ngor because Falwell, who envisions America as a vast private club, has opened his membership rolls to Jews. In the past several months he's been appearing before Jewish groups, telling them that he repudiates the doctrine that America is a Christian nation. "Now we say Judeo-Christian republic," Falwell has announced. Wonderful. But where does that leave Ngor?

ONE OF THE BENEFITS of Falwell's celebrity is that he has spawned a cottage industry devoted to keeping an eye on him. These Falwell-watchers are in some disagreement about why he's now granting full citizenship to Jews. It might be, as he has claimed, that he got tolerance or it just might be, as some suspect, that he looked at the results of the last election and decided he had to clean up his act.

It was Falwell, after all, who was given almost universal credit for keeping American Jews overwhelmingly in the Democratic column. Some 70 percent of them voted for Walter Mondale.

That was the outcome despite Ronald Reagan's strong support for Israel, his antipathy to quotas and the fact that American Jews, overwhelmingly affluent, benefited from both Reagan's tax reduction program and the economic boom the president claimed as his own. And what Reagan had not done on his own, it seemed the Rev. Jesse Jackson would do for him. Between Jackson and his traveling companion, the Rev. Louis Farrakhan, Jews had seemed certain to vote Republican.

ALONG CAME FALWELL. At the Republican National Convention in Dallas, he and his cohorts in the Christian Right seemed ubiquitous. Over and over, they described America as a "Christian nation," words the president finally uttered himself. That did it. The movement of Jews toward the GOP stalled and then went into reverse. By election day they were back in the Democratic Party and everyone was pointing a finger at Falwell. Moi? he drawled.

But the finger should not be relaxed. It hardly matters for what reason Falwell has now changed his rhetoric and whether his words reflect what he really thinks. What matters is that Falwell continues to envision America as a quasi-religious state. Where once it was just Christian, now it is both Christian and Jewish. The result is the same.

By any name, such a state excludes. It withholds 100 percent citizenship from those who are neither Christian nor Jewish and suggests that their rights are dispensed by the majority rather than being — to use the word employed in the Declaration of Independence — unalienable.

HISTORY AFFIRMS THAT the American ethic is largely a Christian one. That's evidenced in everything from the obnoxious to the lofty, from blue laws to the very laws of the land. But a part of that ethic, too, is secularism — the conviction that religion is essentially a personal matter and its public role ought to be limited.

Falwell, for instance, is entitled to his strong and, to my mind, repugnant, views on homosexuality. But if they were translated into law, they would become clear violations of civil liberties.

The best you can say is that Falwell's heading in the right direction. But his new position is not a repudiation of his Christian Nation doctrine, but a modification of it — an expansion not of his tolerance, but of the limited welcome he extends. Now he includes Jews in his community of true Americans.

But the invitation is not his to offer and in no way changes the nature of America. It is a nation in which the majority of the people are Christians or Jews, and not, as Falwell says, a Judeo-Christian nation. That's a distinction that makes a difference. Americans like Dr. Haing S. Ngor thank Buddha for it.

On ugly feminism

To the editor:
 Natalie Pearson's column of April 8 on feminism and "ugliness" (John Gillis's term) was quite accurate.

I've found that men's putdowns of feminism and the arrogance of that treatment is often born of a great fear of women's capabilities — be they intellectual or physical. Certainly, that is indicated externally by their over-inflated egos, but it comes internally from a fear to allow others the freedom they possess.

So they fear losing their job to a woman (or minority) with greater qualifications, or control of a woman that has been "maid" and "mommy" to them; or even that women have greater physical superiority. Why else would someone like Gillis not want a woman to enjoy sports just like any man can? That fear of women almost sounds like paranoia to me.

I realized a long time ago that I would be more proud of my wife if she were as free to think and act as I. That means being free to be an athlete (which she is); free to be employed (which she is); and, hence, freely contributing her own thoughts and actions for the good of people (which she does).

For that I consider her (and Pearson) feminists — and beautiful ones at that. Only someone as mentally ugly as Gillis could think otherwise about feminism. Too bad he doesn't have the guts or intelligence to support and encourage such basic freedoms.

Realistic landslide

To the editor:
 For several weeks, the outcome of the last UI Student Senate election has been equated with a "me-first" attitude on the part of the voters. It was not, however, selfishness that led to the Students First landslide — it was realism.

Every organization has a specific purpose, and losing sight of this purpose carries the danger of losing all effectiveness as well. The main responsibilities of the student senate are working for an increased quality of education and promoting a better educational atmosphere. These duties must be its first priority. Many claims are made that the senate should spend a large amount of time on international issues, but does the same reasoning imply that the Collegiate Associations Council, as the academic body, should devote much of its time to literacy drives in the Third World? Is this reasonable?

We are here for one purpose: to get an education. Hopefully, once we have bettered ourselves, we can go out into the world with the most altruistic of motives, but helping us change the world is not the purpose of this university or its student senate. Their purpose, above all else, is to aid the students in receiving an education — and any self-righteous individuals who believe otherwise would be better off in the Peace Corps.

As a responsible student, I do not in any way claim that students should not be interested in world affairs. On the contrary, they should be as informed and as active as possible in changing these affairs for the better. That is a primary purpose of student groups. It is important to realize, however, that the student senate is not the United Nations, and for the senate to work effectively, it is vital for its representatives to understand that most of all.

Brenner cuffs Israeli 'racism'

By David Roll
Special to The Daily Iowan

Lenni Brenner, a Jewish historian and writer, condemned Israel as "racist" and "corrupt" and accused Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir of conspiring to make a pact with Adolf Hitler during World War II in a UI speech Tuesday night.

"I do not stand for an Israeli state," Brenner said in a speech sponsored by the General Union of Palestinian Students. "This is what I stand for — a state that is neither Arab nor Jewish, but Arab and Jewish."

BRENNER ADVOCATED removal of the current Israeli government, by force if necessary, because he said it doesn't grant equality to its women and its Arab minority. In its place, he wants the establishment of a "democratic secular Palestine" for both Jews and Arabs.

"Without absolute equality of every Arab and Jew ... peace in the Middle East is impossible," he said. "I am for equality, even if we have to blow up the world."

Brenner said Jews and Arabs should work together against Zionism — the movement that supports a Jewish national state. He focused his attack on a small 1940 group of fanatic Zionists called the "Stern gang." In his book The Iron Wall, Brenner states that Shamir, Israel's current foreign minister, was a member of the Stern gang when it sent a letter to Adolf Hitler in 1941. The letter offered to establish "the historical Jewish state on a national and totalitarian basis, and bound by a treaty with the German Reich."

UNDER THE AGREEMENT, Germany would train Zionist troops to conquer Palestine, he said. The Stern gang, in exchange, would "actively take part in the war on Germany's side."

"Only 2 percent of the Zionists took this insane line," said Brenner, but added that number is significant because Shamir was among the 2 percent.

"A Jewish state with a pro-Nazi foreign minister — it's hideous and hilarious at the same time," said Brenner. "What's disgraceful is that they don't hang him now."

SHAMIR HAS SAID he did not get involved with the Stern gang until after it dropped the plan to form an alliance with Germany, but Brenner claimed that is a lie. Brenner said Shamir was undoubtedly a member of the Stern gang when it tried to make a pact with the Nazis. Mitchell Ash, a UI history professor, said Brenner's charges against Shamir are based on "circumstantial evidence and no more." Ash emphasized that even if the letter Brenner cited is authentic, it was written by only a few members of the Stern gang, which was only a splinter of the Zionist movement.

But even if Shamir didn't know about the letter to Hitler, Brenner said his involvement in this "racist, imperialist, militarist" group betrays his attitude toward Arabs and consequently the attitude of the country that elected him.

"WHAT ARE THE CHANCES of a Jewish state ... granting equality to its Arab minority? Zero," he said. "Do you think an Israeli state can live in peace surrounded by Arabs? Impossible."

Ash said Israel's position in the Middle East does raise substantial concern. Although only 17 percent of Israel's population is now Arab, Ash said there is a good chance that Arabs will be the majority in Israel some day.

"It's difficult to say how, when that happens, that it can stay a Jewish state and a democratic state," said Ash. The danger is that a Jewish minority would try to remain in power by imposing an apartheid-type government upon its Arab population, he said. "The concern is legitimate, but the demagogic way he (Brenner) is going about it is not," Ash said.

BRENNER'S KEY WORD in Tuesday's speech was "equality" — at any cost.

"You are either for equality or against equality, and that is the end of the matter," said Brenner. "I wish to avoid violence by all means possible. However, if I thought the only way to get equality was through violence, I would be for that violence."

In addition to Israel, Brenner advocated the overthrow of all Arab governments "without a single exception."

Rabbi Jeff Portman, director of the Hillel House for Jewish students, said after the speech that Brenner "has no sense of reality." He added, "What sense is there in bringing in a speaker like that — fanning the flames of hatred?"

Brenner was called a "Trotskyite who happens to be a Jew" in a review in the London Times. His other book, Zionism in the Age of Dictators, explores other cases in which Zionists allegedly collaborated with anti-Semitic, totalitarian governments.

capital have said hopes for a quick return to civilian rule were set back by Al-Dahab's appointment of the Military Council. They predicted the transition could take up to 18 months.

Al-Dahab said the new government was mainly concerned with a reconciliation with the largely Christian south and an end to a 2-year-old civil war with the Moslem north, a practical approach to Sudan's pressing economic problems and a transfer of power from the military to a civilian administration.

Shortages of basic commodities and recent food price hikes under U.S. and International Monetary Fund pressure led to a week of street demonstrations in Khartoum, which culminated in the coup against Numeiry.

THE OFFERED $40 million by the United States drew criticism from Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, who was the first foreign leader to recognize the new Sudanese government.

Speaking to foreign reporters invited to the Libyan capital of Tripoli for a news conference, Khadafy declared, "Reagan has nothing to do with Sudan ... Sudan is ours. Reagan must take care of his country and his big problems there. He don't interfere here or his nose will be cut."

IN A CLEAR reference to the United States, Khadafy also warned that if outside powers interfered in internal Arab affairs, "We will have to carry the battle to the very heartland of those who are interfering."

He refused to elaborate on his threat, which came after the Reagan administration reportedly rejected several recent Libyan overtures to improve relations with the United States.

MEANWHILE NUMEIRY remains in Egypt and is seeking asylum there. Al-Dahab also said his government had no intention of asking Egypt to extradite Numeiry. Since the coup, more than 30 senior Numeiry aides, including First Vice President Omar El Tayeb, have been arrested by the army.

Al-Dahab said the military intervened "to avoid bloodshed and the imminent dismantling of the nation" by what he called the "corrupt" 16-year-old Numeiry regime.

Khmers

Cambodia, and said "we are studying how we might most appropriately assist further."

ON WEDNESDAY, a State Department spokesman said, "We are convinced that the resistance forces do not need U.S. weapons now, but we do not think it is wise to forego having flexibility on this point should circumstances change."

The United States now gives humanitarian aid, through the Thai government, to Cambodian refugees, but the State Department has previously ruled out direct military assistance to the rebel groups.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said last week the time has come for a "visible sign of increased U.S. support" for the non-communist forces battling the Soviet-backed Vietnamese occupying forces.

The groups are fighting the Vietnamese in coalition with the Communist Khmer Rouge, which ruled Cambodia brutally under dictator Pol Pot from 1975 to 1979, when the Vietnamese took over.

Last year, the United States provided $15 million in aid to Cambodian refugees last year and so far this year has provided $5.5 million.

Gable signs Iowa's prep heavyweight champion

Wednesday was the signing day for many coaches at Iowa and Hawkeye wrestling Coach Dan Gable may have gotten the best catch of all.

Newton native Brooks Simpson, an Iowa state champion (Class 3A), signed on with the eight-time defending national champions Wednesday.

The Hawkeyes will probably sign between three and four more recruits within the next week.

"I've always wanted to come to Iowa," Simpson, whose father Gary played football for Iowa in the mid-60s, said. "Coach Gable had a lot to do with it."

The 6-foot-1, 210-pounder chose Gable and company over intrastate rivals Iowa State and Northern Iowa. He was also looking at Russ Hellickson's Wisconsin wrestling team.

"I HAVE TO learn quite a bit," Simpson said. "I will probably be redshirted my first year," a custom for almost all Iowa freshman wrestlers.

According to assistant wrestling Coach Mark Johnson, Simpson has "limited experience and great potential," as he did not begin to wrestle "hard" until his freshman year in high school.

As a sophomore on the varsity level at Newton High, Simpson was 2-3. He was 24-2 as a junior and 35-0 as a senior en route to winning the state title, Newton's first since 1953.

"He's a hard-working kid," Newton Coach Chuck Knutsen said. "He's willing to pay the price and I'm sure he'll find that out now."

"Gable really didn't talk to him until the state tournament," Knutsen said, adding that Iowa State was really interested in Simpson all season and did not miss a meet he wrestled in.

"ONCE HE FOUND out Iowa was interested, I was willing to bet he would go there, but Gary (Simpson, his father) was willing to let him go to Iowa State."

Knutsen, who has been at Newton for eight years, said Simpson is aggressive and a good technician. "His technique has improved all the way through. He's as nice a kid as I've ever had."

Simpson will join redshirt freshman Andy Haman, from Iowa City, and Mark Sindlinger, the football center who recorded a pin in his first and only collegiate match, as the heavyweights for Iowa.

Concerning other recruits, Gable still hopes to land Steve Martin, a 118-pounder from Virginia Beach, Va., along with Jeff Strauss, 134, and Chris Welch, 177, both from North Olmstead, Ohio.

Martin compiled a 60-1 three-year mark and has visited Iowa State and Oklahoma State. He still is looking at Oklahoma.

Gable has better chances with the two Ohio recruits, as both Strauss, a 126-pound state titlist this season, and Welch attend St. Edwards High School — from which Hawkeyes Jim and John Heffernan graduated.

Iowa wins prolong Bearcats' skid

One team showed up to play, one apparently didn't.

That was more than apparent after Iowa took two games from Northwest Missouri State Wednesday afternoon at the Iowa Diamond. The Hawkeyes won the first game, 8-3, and the second game, 8-1.

"We're on the skids. This is our eighth loss in nine games," Northwest Missouri Coach Jim Johnson said after the second game. "Everytime Iowa hit the ball you could count another run for them. We couldn't do anything today."

A four-run second inning put the Hawkeyes in the lead for good in the first game. With the bases loaded, Wayne Snook walked Tom Snowberger for the first run to start the Hawkeye scoring barrage.

VANCE MCKINNON scored John Knapp when Northwest Missouri's Rob Robb bobbled a routine ground ball at second base. Robb was charged with an error on the throw to first base which allowed McKinnon to stay on base.

On a pick-off attempt to first base, Snook threw the ball over first baseman Jeff Sykes' head, allowing Snowberger to score from third base.

The Hawkeyes added another run in the third on Jeff Gurtcheff's RBI single to score Rick Jennings from second. Craig Conti hit a home run in the fifth to give Iowa a 6-2 lead. In the seventh Rob Eddie scored on Snowberger's RBI triple to leftfield and then Snowberger scored on a wild pitch to

Redshirt beneficial to Goodman

In the event Ronnie Harmon's injured ankle doesn't mend, what does that do to the Iowa running back situation for the 1985 football season?

Not would the Hawkeyes miss Harmon's experience and talent — Harmon gained 964 yards in 190 carries and scored 11 touchdowns to lead Iowa last year, Iowa would have to fill the gap with inexperienced players.

"We have several bodies (to replace Harmon)," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said at his spring football press conference. "We have his little brother, Kevin Harmon, that we moved over the last two ball games of the season to the running back position from quarterback."

"WE HAVE Rick Bayless, who will not participate (in spring drills) mainly because he stepped off a curb and turned an ankle. We have a redshirt freshman, Grant Goodman, of Des Moines and then we have a walk-on by the name of John Marchese."

The above group includes two walk-on players (Bayless and Marchese), a player who switched positions (Har-

"I feel real confident and the main reason is that I'm a lot bigger and stronger, but I have kept my quickness," says Iowa running back Grant Goodman "I feel like I can have a good spring and then, hopefully, have a good fall."

mon) and Goodman, who was recruited out of Des Moines Valley to run the football.

Goodman spent last season on the scout team, and looks back at the experience as dues-paying time. "Basically, last year proved to be a learning experience for me," he said. "Running against the first team defense improved my ability as a running back. I didn't learn the system, but I learned the tempo of Big Ten football and what it will be like."

AFTER A HIGH school career in which Goodman set school records for total yards (1,799), career carries (287), career touchdowns (18) and career points (108) on his way to earning first-team all-state honors, it might be expected that Goodman was disappointed spending last season on the scout team. That was not the case, however.

"I knew I would be redshirted," Goodman said. "A lot of freshmen have big hopes when they come in, but I didn't have that problem. I was happy with the way things went."

Goodman spent the winter lifting weights three times a week, jumping rope and working on agility drills preparing himself for spring football practice. He enters spring drills twenty pounds heavier (220) than when he came to Iowa, but he hasn't sacrificed any speed with the added weight. Goodman still runs a 4.6 second 40-yard dash, the same time he ran in high school.

GOODMAN HEADS into spring ball with the knowledge that this will be his shot at impressing the Iowa staff. "This is the time you have to go all out and let people know you are here," he said. "I have to work hard to impress the coaches and then I hope to move up on the depth chart."

The year spent learning the ropes and lifting weights has left Goodman with the confidence necessary to play Big Ten football. "I feel real confident and the main reason is that I'm a lot bigger and stronger, but I have kept my quickness," Goodman said. "I feel like I can have a good spring and then, hopefully, have a good fall."

Grant Goodman eyes the blocking dummy as he prepares to take a hit during a practice drill in Kinnick Stadium during the first day of spring practice. Goodman, a redshirt freshman from Des Moines, will be battling with returners Ronnie Harmon and Rick Bayless for starting tailback position.

Prestigious field ready for Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Golf's endearing springtime tradition — the Masters — opens this morning with this year's tournament possibly signaling an alteration in the hierarchy of the sport.

Seventy-seven players — only 54 of them being regular members of the PGA tour — have been invited this year to walk up and down the hills and between the pines and dogwoods of the Augusta National Golf Club course, acclaimed as one of world's most scenic sporting venues.

Gene Sarazen, whose double-eagle at the 15th hole 50 years ago brought instant recognition to the event, will join Sam Snead at 7:45 a.m., Iowa time, to make up the honorary starting twosome and 15 minutes later the competing players — 11 of them here for the first time — will begin their assault on the rolling fairways and glass-slick greens of the par-72 layout.

Jack Nicklaus

"HOW CAN YOU ask for anything more than this?" said Joey Sindelar, the second-year pro who picked up his invitation only last Sunday by winning the Greater Greensboro Open. "I've been plastered with so much information about this course and all of it is true."

"This place is just gorgeous." Clear skies were forecast for the first round with chilly temperatures expected in the morning moderating into the lower 70's by midday.

As usual, the player that wins the Masters should be the one who does the best job on the drastically undulating greens which have become so fast that even the Masters officials are trying to slow them down.

"There are spots on the greens that make it almost unplayable," said Jack Nicklaus, a winner of this tournament five times but whose last victory came 10 years ago.

"THEY HAVE GOTTEN the greens a little too fast," said two-time winner Tom Watson. "It is difficult to play this golf course when the greens are fast. You can't get close to the hole."

Masters chairman Hord Hardin agreed the greens were too fast.

"We are well aware of the speed of the greens," Hardin said. "They are a little faster than I would like. We will make an attempt to slow them down a little."

"The last thing we want is for the greens to be unfair."

Pre-tournament speculation normally centers on one or two players, but this year's event is looked upon as being one of the most wide open ever.

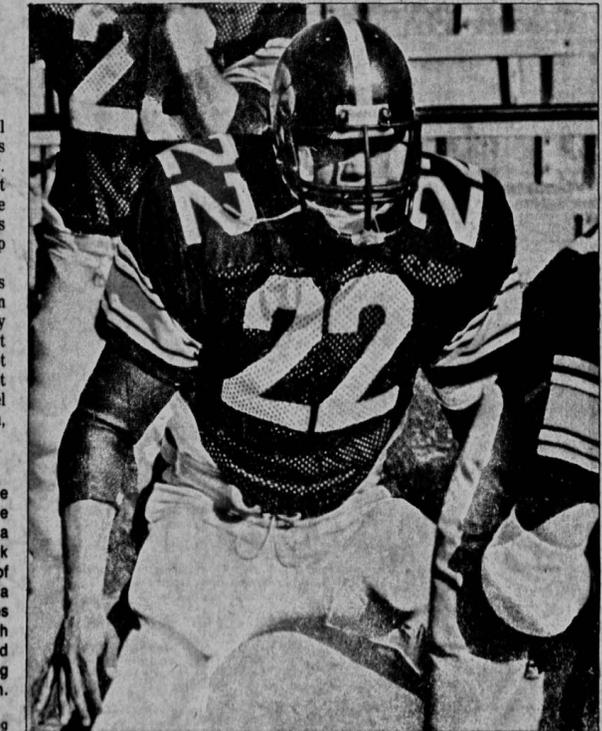

The California and Florida portions of the tour were dominated by an emerging wave of players this year and a win by one of them this week could be looked upon by future golf historians as a turning point in the game.

HANDICAPPING THIS week's tournament is made tough, however, because the players who are at the top of this year's money winning list do not have good track records at Augusta while the traditional Masters favorites are not playing up to form.

Curtis Strange leads the money list, but in 24 previous rounds at the Augusta National he had broken 70 just once. Calvin Peete is coming off a win at the TPC, but even though he had good closing rounds here last year, he has yet to show he can put four good days together on the testing greens.

Tallest college cage player goes pro

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) — Manute Bol, the University of Bridgeport's 7-foot-6 center from Sudan, told his coach Thursday he will be joining the National Basketball Association.

Bol, an all-American selection who led Bridgeport to the Division II regionals in his freshman season, informed Coach Bruce Webster that he will declare himself eligible for the NBA draft in June.

Ken Best, a spokesman at Bridgeport, said Bol made his decision after conferring with Boston attorney Frank Catapano. Bol had not been seen on campus since Friday and earlier reports speculated he was joining the fledgling United States Basketball League.

Bol has been considering offers from the league for several weeks, and the NBA also had requested game films and sent scouts to Bridgeport games, Best said.

Bol indicated that he will fulfill his academic responsibilities for the current school year in order to leave in good standing as well as maintain proper status under his student visa.

Bol was not available for comment. Best said the star center was on his way back to Bridgeport from Boston.

Bol averaged 22.8 points and 13.8 rebounds per game, while leading Bridgeport to a 26-6 record — the most victories in the history of the school.

Owens named Oral Roberts' cage coach

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Evangelist Oral Roberts announced Wednesday the appointment of former Kansas Coach Ted Owens as head basketball coach of the Oral Roberts University Titans, saying Owens is "a man called of God."

"We wanted a man who's a winner, a man who understands this ministry, a man called of God and a man who understands that athletics is an extension of this ministry," Roberts said in introducing Owens as his longtime friend.

"I have long admired what Oral Roberts University stands for," Owens said at a news conference.

Owens, who spent the past two years with an investment firm in Kansas City and worked as a color commentator with Wichita State's cable TV network, replaced Dick Acres.

"This was difficult for me to come back to coaching because the investment work was starting to pay off, but basketball is in my blood," Owens said.

Acres was pressured to resign March 12 after 2½ seasons, posting a record of 46-34.

Owens said he will retain Oral Roberts' two assistant coaches, John Block and Dolph Carroll, "and recruiting is now our top priority."

Owens coached Kansas for 19 seasons before being fired two years ago to be replaced by Larry Brown, current Kansas coach.

Kansas went 348-182 under Owens, with six Big Eight Conference championships and seven NCAA tournament appearances. Kansas reached the NCAA tournament Final Four in 1971 and 1974 and won the 1968 NIT title under Owens.

X-rays negative on Ripken's ankle

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Baltimore Orioles officials said X-rays performed Wednesday on the left ankle of All-Star shortstop Cal Ripken proved negative, but doctors advised the power-hitting infielder to stay off the ankle for 24 hours.

Ripken sprained the ankle when he tripped over second base during an attempted pick-off play in the third inning of Wednesday's 7-1 win over Texas Rangers.

Ripken, who boasts a string of 444 straight games over a two-year span, had the ankle X-rayed at the Greater Baltimore Medical Center. His condition will be re-evaluated by Orioles orthopedic specialist Dr. Charles Silberstein prior to Friday's home game against the Toronto Blue Jays.

Hawkeye comeback bypasses Cyclones

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

After being held to one hit in the opener, the Iowa softball team put its hitting shoes on in the nightcap to gain a split with Iowa State Wednesday afternoon in Ames.

The Cyclones, behind the three-hit performance of Lori Young, edged the Hawkeyes 1-0 in the first game. Coach Ginny Parrish's Hawkeyes rallied from a 6-1 deficit to win game two, 7-6.

In the first game, Young gained her ninth victory of the season, holding Iowa in check while her teammates pushed across the only run of the contest in the third.

DARLA ANDERSON led off with a single and went to second on a Jean Lauffer sacrifice before Iowa City native Kelli Alberts singled her home off tough-luck loser Diane Reynolds.

Iowa State looked ready to sweep the Hawkeyes after jumping ahead 6-1 after four innings, but the Hawkeyes wouldn't die. Reynolds opened the Iowa fifth by reaching first on an error. Pitcher Ann Coughenour then rifled an RBI double to center, scoring Reynolds. Catcher Alice Darland then singled home Coughenour, closing the gap to 6-3.

After Coughenour retired the Cyclones in their half of the fifth, the Hawkeyes went on a hitting rampage in the sixth.

Third baseman Carol Bruggeman led off with a single and was forced on a fielders choice by Lisa Nicola. Mary Coughenour then toughened up in the final two innings to secure Iowa's ninth win in 20 outings. The loss dropped the Cyclones to 18-7.

Array of IM events will enhance Riverfest

By Anne Sidney
Staff Writer

Spring intramural events are underway with the spotlight shining on the softball tournament to start things off. The entry deadline is April 15 at 4 p.m. in Room E216 of the Field House. The tournament will be single elimination and will be held in conjunction with Riverfest at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

"The softball tournament will be the highlight of the spring events and one of the most exciting events held since it is a perfect opportunity for the all-U point teams to pick up extra points," said Andy Piro, assistant director of intramurals.

THERE WILL ALSO be frisbee golf and ultimate frisbee, which are events that started last year. Frisbee golf is played much like miniature golf, but instead of putting a ball into a small hole, a frisbee is thrown into a large basket attached to a long pole.

Ultimate frisbee is a mixture of football and lacrosse.

The other events to be held are coed sandpit volleyball and coed tennis doubles. Sand volleyball will be played at the softball complex with bare feet to make the traction more difficult and add to the complexity of the game. Doubles tennis will be played at the Kinnick Stadium Courts.

The deadlines for sandpit volleyball and ultimate frisbee are April 17, while the deadline for tennis doubles and frisbee golf is April 25.

Entries may be obtained at the Rec Services office.

- Students, to receive their priority for football, must order sometime during the period from April 15 to May 17, 1985. These orders will be filled according to priority and will be available for pickup at fall registration. The student ID card and current registration must be presented at the time of pickup.
- A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than 8, provided he or she has the additional student credentials with him or her. Each student must pay for his/her own tickets and all students must pick up their own tickets and sign for them. All students must be currently registered and "in good standing" (University bill paid) by August 27. All students cancelled on that date will forfeit their tickets and will receive refunds.
- The lowest priority within a group will determine the location of the entire block of tickets for that group. That is, all students within a group will carry the lowest priority of any member of that group.
- Student season tickets will continue on sale on a non-priority basis after May 17, and will remain on sale through Friday, August 24, 1985, if available.
- A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by an ID card and a current registration certificate. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or any other University of Iowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student ticket policy. DUPLICATE TICKETS CANNOT BE ISSUED FOR LOST OR STOLEN TICKETS.

Despite abominable record, Hawks make progress

After spending the better part of the last few weeks observing the Iowa women's tennis team, I've come to a conclusion.

First-year Coach Charley Darley's team is without a doubt the most improved team at Iowa despite its abominable 2-17 dual-meet record this spring.

Before you all think I've gone off the deep end, take this into account. Darley wasn't even hired until the middle of last summer, leaving him no time to recruit any of his own talent.

Secondly, the entire Iowa program was in a shambles when he arrived. The Hawkeyes, who saw ex-coach Cathy Ballard resign at midseason after the loss of five players, were coming off a last-place finish in the Big Ten and only seven players awaited Darley when practices began last August.

THE PROBLEMS didn't stop there. After finishing a respectable 4-3 during the fall season, Jenny Reuter, who had been playing at the top of the Iowa line-up, was declared academically ineligible and walk-on Jennifer Forti, miffed because she wasn't tendered a scholarship, transferred to Baylor.

Left with only five players, Darley had to appeal to people such as Kathy Ruck and Pam Moyer to come out for the team. Yet through all the adversity, Darley's optimism never wavered and neither did his players' spirits.

The Hawkeyes have dropped four, 5-4 matches this spring that could have easily been wins under the right circumstances. Of course there have been the expected routs by national powers Indiana, Pepperdine and Northwestern.

THIS TEAM IS one of character, though. To watch the likes of Michele

Conlon and Pennie Wohlford battle their hearts out in each match; to see Kim Martin and Pat Leary perform well in positions maybe a bit higher than they should be playing; to observe the courage of walk-ons Ruck, Moyer and Lisa Rozenboom against high-caliber players makes one believe that the Iowa program will soon be on the rise.

Last year, Iowa players would go on the court hoping to win. This year, the confidence is etched in the faces of each Hawkeye player. Times used to be when just the mention of Northwestern would strike fear into the Iowa player's eyes, but no more.

REPUTATION ALONE used to be enough to defeat the Hawkeyes. Conlon proved that has changed, as did the doubles team of Martin and Leary, Tuesday afternoon. Conlon pushed Northwestern's Stephanie Lightvoet to the limit before losing in three tough sets while Leary and Martin were easy winners. Yes, easy winners. The last time that could be said, women's athletics was in the infancy stage across America.

The man responsible for the turnaround is Darley. The frustration of losing matches shows from time-to-time. That is expected from a competitor. But a competitor also plows ahead, no matter what the obstacle.

Defeat may get Darley down, but never for very long.

Never once has he cursed the misfortunes that have hindered him in his first year at Iowa. His constant rallying point with his team is improvement and mental toughness.

There's a good chance the Hawkeyes might be the bottom seed for the Big Ten Championships to be held next month in Iowa City. While Indiana and Northwestern battle it out for the championship, a small, yet determined band of Hawkeyes just might win a few battles of their own.

Mike Condon is the DI sports editor.

have both won twice this year, but O'Meara is making his first appearance as a professional (having failed to break 80 in two rounds as an amateur five years ago) and Wadkins has only one round in the 60's out of the 36 he has played at Augusta.

FROM THE OTHER perspective defending champion Ben Crenshaw is mired in another terrible slump, annual challenger Tom Kite has not lived up to his normal talents, Watson has been up and down and Nicklaus' putter no longer allows him to be called the man to beat.

That leaves such notables as Spain's Seve Ballesteros, who during the last five years has won here twice and missed the cut twice, and Craig Stadler, who is playing well and might be as good a choice this week as anyone.

Watson said he thought he was playing well enough to have a chance to win, although, "I'm not as consistent as I was five or six years ago."

"When you talk about people who play well here, you have to go with length and drawing the ball (hitting it right to left). You have to go with Greg Norman, Fuzzy Zoeller and Seve Ballesteros.

"AND AS LONG as the golf course does not get too wet, Calvin Peete has a chance."

Meanwhile, among those given almost no chance of winning is 19-year-old Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain, the 1984 British Amateur champion.

Olazabal is one of seven amateurs playing this year, continuing a tradition which tournament founder Bobby Jones felt was important in order to preserve the heritage of the sport.

On the other hand, a third of this year's top 15 money winners are not here.

Baseball

when Jennings hit a two-RBI double to left field and then Randy Frakes belted a two-run homer to left, putting Iowa in the lead, 4-0.

Conti earned his second RBI of the day on a single to right field, scoring Snowberger from second base in the fourth inning to put the game out of reach of the Bearcats, 5-1.

MIKE McLAUGHLIN, a freshman from Clementon, N.J., took Northwest Missouri relief pitcher Dave Newman's first pitch for a three-run homer in the sixth inning to put Iowa up by seven runs, 8-1.

"Since there was a new pitcher in the game, I was expecting a fastball," McLaughlin said. "It was a fastball and I made good contact."

Eddie was two-for-three and Snowberger was two-for-two. Thomas' two home runs made him two-for-three for the Bearcats. Snowberger was again two-for-two in the second game and McLaughlin was also two-for-two.

Johnson had nothing but praise for the Hawkeyes. "We've played some of the top five teams in the country, like Wichita State and Wichita, and Iowa compares very well with them. They are off to a good start and will do very well, especially considering how they played against us today," Johnson said.

But Banks is still somewhat concerned with the pitching. "The pitching was not the best today, but they surely didn't give up since both (Mike) Darby and (Chuck) Georgantas finished their games. Mike's pitches weren't breaking that well and Charlie was sore getting started. But they really got the job done for us."

A tough weekend is in store for Iowa as they play St. Francis Friday in Joliet, Ill., and St. Xavier Saturday and Sunday in Chicago.

Tulane student enters innocent plea; says he didn't supply drugs, cash

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Gary Kranz, the Tulane University student accused of supplying cocaine and cash to basketball players implicated in a point-shaving scandal, pleaded innocent Wednesday to narcotics and bribery charges.

Kranz, a junior business major from New Rochelle, N.Y., made an unannounced court appearance, just as two others entered surprise guilty pleas Tuesday.

Senior guard Bobby Thompson and David Rothenberg, one of Kranz's fraternity brothers, cooperated with prosecutors and were allowed to plead guilty to light charges of conspiracy to commit sports bribery.

Five others, including NBA prospect John "Hot Rod" Williams and sophomore David Dominique, still are to be arraigned Monday, a district attorney's spokeswoman said. Their lawyers have said they will plead innocent.

KRANZ, 21, pleaded innocent to nine counts of cocaine distribution, one count of cocaine possession, 10 counts of sports bribery and three counts of conspiracy.

If convicted on all counts, he could receive a maximum 332-year prison sentence.

Kranz reportedly became friends with senior forward Clyde Eads early this year and approached Eads about point shaving. Eads and forward Jon Johnson drew in the others to manipulate the point spread in Metro Conference games against Southern Mississippi and Memphis State, according to sources familiar with grand jury testimony.

THE INDICTMENT returned last Thursday said there was also conspiracy concerning Tulane's game against Virginia Tech, but it did not say points were shaved in that game.

Eads and Johnson were granted immunity for testimony against their teammates and the others — a third student, Mark Olensky, and two suspected bookmakers.

Thompson and Rothenberg also cut a deal with prosecutors that allowed them to plead guilty to conspiracy, which carries a maximum sentence of 2½ years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Judge Alvin Oser said he will sentence the two July 9.

Minnesota preparing for legal battle in attempt to secure Kosar's rights

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Vikings are readying their lawyers while they wait for NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to rule on Bernie Kosar's eligibility for the 1985 draft, general manager Mike Lynn said Wednesday.

Lynn also said he asked Rozelle to look into the Cleveland Browns' attempt to obtain the University of Miami quarterback. The commissioner responded by ordering the Vikings, the Browns, the Houston Oilers and the Buffalo Bills to send him letters expressing their views of the situation.

Rozelle said he will make no ruling until he hears from all four clubs. Lynn said he may consider legal action if Rozelle rules against Minnesota.

THE VIKINGS Tuesday traded their first two draft picks to the Houston Oilers for the No. 2 pick overall in the April 30 draft. Buffalo has the No. 1 pick, but has already signed defensive end Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech.

Kosar has indicated he will graduate early from Miami, therefore making him eligible for the draft. But the NFL cited a rule stating that Kosar must file a letter indicating his intentions by April 15.

If he fails to do so, and completes his academic requirements by the fall semester, he could petition the NFL to hold a special supplemental draft for him.

The Browns got a jump on the rest of the league by dealing "future considerations" to Buffalo to obtain the No. 1 pick if a supplemental draft is held. Kosar has said he wants to play for Cleveland, which is 60 miles from his hometown of Boardman, Ohio.

LYNN SAID HE was surprised the Browns are actively seeking Kosar because the Vikings are the only team with the right to negotiate with him.

"I just don't like the way it smells," Lynn said. "The whole thing is kind of bizarre. It just doesn't smell right."

"We spent a lot of time doing this (the Houston deal) and we did it for a purpose," he said.

Lynn said Rozelle must rule on whether Kosar is available for a supplemental draft. Lynn also believes that Kosar can no longer play college football.

"Our contention is that he is no longer eligible to return to the University of Miami to play football," Lynn said, citing an NCAA rule that says a player who employs an agent is ineligible.

DR. JOHN GELETKA, who is the Kosar family dentist, has represented the 21-year-old quarterback in negotiations with the USFL. Lynn has a letter from the NCAA to the Houston franchise, explaining that because Kosar has an agent his college career is over.

Louisiana Tech's Malone to go pro

RUSTON, La. (UPI) — Junior center Karl Malone said he will forego his senior year at Louisiana Tech in order to be drafted by the NBA in June, the Ruston Daily Leader reported Wednesday.

"Deep down, I knew all along what I was planning to do but didn't really come to a firm decision in my heart until I did a lot of praying in the last several weeks," Malone said.

"I arrived at a firm decision, a final decision, last Wednesday night that I would go into the pros this year. I knew at that time the decision was final and I was ready to make that change in my life."

Malone, 6-foot-10, led Tech in scoring with 16.5 points a game, said he would make a formal announcement at a news conference later this week.

HE AND OTHER collegiate players eligible for the NBA draft June 19 must declare their intentions by May 4.

Malone, who took out a $500,000 Lloyds of London insurance policy against injury last season, said playing in his senior year would have increased the chance he might be hurt and miss out on a pro career.

"I didn't want to take that chance," he said. "Not with something I've wanted to do all my life."

Malone, who also led the team in rebounding with 9 per game, helped Tech to a 29-3 season and the Southland Conference title. The Bulldogs reached the semifinals of the NCAA Midwest Regionals and finished eighth in the final ratings.

Malone said he believes he can play power forward in the pros.

Space luncheon features scintillating conversation

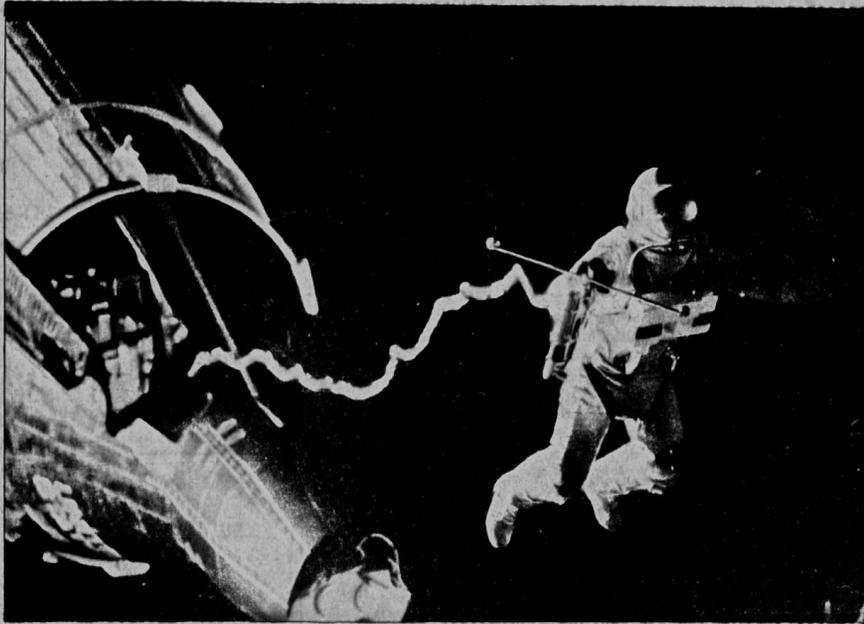

By Merwyn Grote
Staff Writer

DINING WITH the Stars; Take 1: After haunting the boutiques and emporiums along Rodeo with Meryl, we drop by Ma Maison's for a late brunch. We stop to chat with Cary, who is sharing a table with Sophia, apparently in town for the Academy Awards. When we reach our table, I notice Meryl is distracted. After a bit of prompting, she confides that she is worried: Her last film was a flop and she is hoping that I can provide her with some sound career advice. I tell her I hate to interfere, but I will do all I can. She is, after all, a friend; how can I refuse?

Dining with the Stars; Take 2: In a small chocolate-brown cubical in the heart of the Rock Island's WHBF-TV, CBS's mighty eye in the Midwest, a select group of media journalists from the heartland gather for a bite of lunch and to chat (via video teleconference) with James A. Michener, the prolific writer of encyclopedia-length books that become instant fodder for the mini-series mill. His work in question is "Space," which has been transmuted into a new $33 million, 13-hour, 5-day marathon of a series that is airing on CBS beginning Sunday. As I arrive at the viewing room, I am offered my choice of gourmet meals: turkey or ham. I choose the latter, which is served to me on a tray made of the finest imported styrofoam and accompanied by the finest antique plastic silverware. A tiny paper cup of well-chilled Pepsi is served with the meal.

THE MOTIF for the luncheon is, naturally enough, space: There is very little of it in the viewing room and vast amounts of it separating us from the actual interview. In the CBS studios in New York, the network and mini-series brass have gathered together numerous luminaries from the series to brag about the merits of their program. In attendance are "Space" stars Blair Brown, Michael York, Susan Anspach, Beau Bridges, Bruce Dern and Harry Hamlin, as well as producer and co-writer Dick Berg and co-directors Joseph Sargent and Lee Phillips and a gaggle of media journalists. Michener is not present, supposedly held up in traffic, although I suspect he is just trying to be fashionably late.

Connected by satellite from Los Angeles, actor David Dukes bravely faces a room full of West Coast scribes. Obviously disgruntled that work "hero" into their answers as often as possible.) He seems particularly proud when he claims the studio recreation of a lunar walk was so realistic that it fooled NASA workers who thought it was the real thing.

Harry Hamlin stars as a young man who achieves a lifelong dream when he walks in orbit in "Space," based on the novel by James A. Michener, which will be broadcast in five parts on CBS beginning Sunday.

I LISTEN TO ALL this intently, distracted only by my salad: The piece of fruit on my fork looks like a bit of peach but tastes like something else. As I contemplate this, Michener finally shows up, although exactly why he is present is unclear. After selling the rights to his book, he had nothing to do with "Space" except spend his profits. After a work leaves his hand, he admits, they can do anything they want with it, and usually they improve on it. Book sales usually increase after a work has been filmed, he says, and the thought of a possible "Space II" mini-series is not displeasing to him.

About this time, the press conference reaches a high point: I start to eat my brownie, a moist and chewy piece of pastry generously strewn with nuts and layered with rich creamy icing. As I indulge, the teleconference focuses on Bruce Dern, who, in his enthusiasm for the project, becomes sort of a manic cheerleader. His eyes take on that slightly crazed, steely-eyed glare they had just before he tried to blow up the Super Bowl in Black Sunday. He makes a parallel between Woodstock and the space shuttle that I don't quite understand, but the thrust of his message is that the space program represents the hopes and dreams of mankind and that this is what the series is really all about.

I am intrigued and want to hear more but suddenly the conference comes to a halt. WHBF needs their satellite connection to pick up today's segment of "Entertainment Tonight." Our little video luncheon is disrupted and the televised guests of honor are sent into a gust of electronic snow. It was, however, a worthwhile meal — good food, glamorous dining companions and scintillating conversation. My only regret is that I did not get to finish my brownie.

Dining with the Stars; Take 3: Having late lunch with Woody and Mia at the Russian Tea Room, he asks me to do a cameo in his next picture. I tell him I'm flattered but have to check my schedule first. Suddenly, Bobby De Niro sidles up next to me, obviously quite agitated. His last film was a flop, he needs some career advice. I tell him I hate to interfere, but I will do all I can. He is, after all, a friend; how can I refuse?

Television

they were not given an opportunity to preview the film like the East Coast reviewers, the L.A. correspondents seem a bit peeved and are, therefore, ignored as much as possible. Dotting the rest of the country are an assortment of network affiliates playing host to the press representatives who can call in questions "Donahue" style or just eavesdrop on the press conference. It is impressive, the latest in space-age communication used to promote a film about space-age exploration.

AS LAURENCE LUCKINBILL, the series narrator, introduces the V.I.P.s to the in-studio press. I explore the contents of my lunch: ham and cheese with tomato on a too-dry croissant, a plastic cup of brightly colored fruit (that I suspect might taste like plastic as well) and a generous-sized fudge brownie. I dig in as the press conference begins.

The first (and only) really provocative question was directed to producer Berg by a reporter who demanding to know why Hollywood so often hired British actors (in this case, Michael York) to play German Nazis (German scientists were recruited during the early years of the space program for their expertise). In diplomatic fashion, Berg side-steps the entire issue by insisting that York is not a British actor, but a "good" actor, and, therefore, the question is presumably moot.

Berg is also asked if he is worried that $33 million has been invested in a mini-series about the space program when (a) the film The Right Stuff was a major box-office flop, (b) programming concerning science rarely proves to be successful in the ratings, and (c) other mini-series dealing with historical events have also proved to be ratings disappointments. He answers no to all of the above, but makes a special point of distancing "Space" from The Right Stuff, insisting that the thrust of the mini-series will be about people, not history.

He uses a lot of nice catch phrases in his answers, saying "Space" is a "metaphor for progress," it is about "life on the cutting edge" and the heroes weren't "limited to those in uniforms." (Berg and his cohorts seem to

Bread and Puppet Theater to give show based on Guatemala history

By Ken Hanson Staff Writer

LARGER-THAN-LIFE puppets and visual art forms will serve as vehicles of expression when the Bread and Puppet Theater on Saturday and Sunday and the Artists Call exhibition Sunday through Tuesday.

"The purpose of both events is to bring community attention to United States policy in Central America," David Dunlap, one of four coordinators of the weekend's activities, said. "And the Bread and Puppet Theater have a way of making this issue come alive through theater and art."

"I'm concerned with themes, with public addresses that are inherent to the arts," Peter Schumann, creator of the Bread and Puppet Theater, said.

Although the troupe has toured Europe, the United States and Central America and has become internationally known, Schumann insists that success is arbitrary. "We are always underdogs," he said. "And that's the way we want it to be."

Schumann, who is originally from Germany, designs the company's puppets and masks, which are often so large they must be manipulated by a puppeteer on stilts. He said much of the company's work is improvisational. "The performances start as experiments and then settle down, depending if I'm on the tour or not. If I'm there, the whole tour is likely to be an experiment."

SCHUMANN DID NOT get his beginning in the more traditional fields of hand or rod puppetry, but rather as a sculptor. "I became dissatisfied with the orthodox raison d'etre of sculpture, and that is namely to decorate banks and schools. So I took my work out into the street and told people what it was. That's puppet theater," he said.

Central America has been the troupe's theme for the past year. In keeping with that emphasis, the Bread and Puppet Theater will present The Door Saturday night at 8 p.m. at the Iowa City Recreation Center. The play, which features Schumann's unusual puppets, traces the history of Guatemala from the birth of the Indian population to the current political situation. A biography of an Indian woman named Rigoberta Menchu, as well as reports from Amnesty International are the bases of information for newest play created by the nine-member troupe. The suggested donation is $3 dollars.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, the company will present a more lighthearted piece called Traveling Circus, to take place on the Union field with a school bus as a backdrop.

Following the troupe's Sunday performance, the Artists Call exhibition and sale will open at Old Brick. Included in the showing will be works by both local and nationally known artists. Proceeds from Artists Call will be given to the MADRE Project for hospital care in Managua, Nicaragua, and to the New El Salvador Today Project for day care centers and agricultural development.

Other events will include a public performance by UI students who attended Schumann's workshop, Friday at 9 p.m. in the Old Music Building. Schumann will also be a guest lecturer tonight for the School of Art and Art History, showing a film and talking about his work at the Art Building Auditorium.

Chicago band hopes to make 'Splash'

By Allen Hogg Arts/entertainment Editor

Nato Splash, a Chicago band that plays original music in the style of the Police, XTC and Thomas Dolby, returns to Gabe's Oasis this weekend for only the second time, hoping to repeat what one band member termed "the best job we've ever done."

The band's only previous stint in the whole state was in February, when the four-member group opened for the Uptown Rulers at Gabe's. "We really weren't too excited about playing in Iowa," keyboardist, guitarist and saxophonist Anne LaPorte said. "I just thought Iowa was a lot of corn. But it turned out to be a lot of fun. The people were great; they really got on the floor."

Nato Splash began a couple of years ago when guitarist, songwriter and former Uptown Rulers member Bob Colton got together with Jamie Barnard, a jazz drummer who had just become interested in reggae and rock. Bass guitarist Steve Roe joined the duo last August and LaPorte rounded out the quartet in September. All four members share vocals on the group's songs, which are almost all original, but do include a ska version of the Dave Clark Five's "Do You Love Me?"

The group has since begun to make a name for itself on the Illinois club scene, and also is featured as the house band on "The Friday Show," a David Letterman-style show on a Chicago cable channel. They have recorded a six-song cassette which will be on sale at this weekend's shows.

African art expert lecture relates to Stanley exhibition

Prominent African art expert Robert Farris Thompson will present a lecture at 8 tonight as part of the public series of events occurring in conjunction with the exhibition "Art and Life in Africa: Selections From the Stanley Collection" at the UI Museum of Art. He will speak on "Mambu Zole: the Kongo-Atlantic Universe of Forms."

Thompson, who is the Master of Timothy Dwight College at Yale University, has devoted his life to the historical study of African and Afro-American art and music. He has designed and organized four major exhibitions of African and Afro-American art: "African and Afro-American Art: The Transatlantic Tradition" at New York's Museum of Primitive Art in 1968; "Black Gods and Kings" at UCLA's Museum of Ethnic Arts in 1971; "African Art in Motion" at the National Gallery of Art in 1974; and "The Four Moments of the Sun" at the National Gallery in 1981.

Thompson is currently at work on three books, each outlining a different aspect of the impact of classical African peoples on the modern world, and is preparing a major exhibition at the National Gallery of Art entitled "The Face of the Gods: Arts and Altars of the Black Atlantic World."

HIS PUBLICATIONS include: Black Gods and Kings, a celebration of the art and philosophy of the Yoruba people of southwestern Nigeria; African Art and Motion, a book on the main organizing principles of dance, music and art in tropical Africa; The Four Moments of the Sun: Kongo Art in Two Worlds, a book on the continuation of ancient Kongo art traditions among blacks in the New World; and Flash of the Spirit: African and Afro-American Art and Philosophy, the first book in any language to examine the reinstatement of the art traditions of the five major classical African civilizations on art and philosophy in New World settings.

His articles have been anthologized in more than 14 books. He has published chapters in two books on Haitian art, the most recent being "State Notations for the Theatre of God" in Master Painters of Haiti.

The lecture, sponsored in part by a grant from the Iowa Humanities Board and the National Endowment for the Humanities, is free and the public is invited to attend.

The exhibition "Art and Life in Africa" will be on display at the UI Museum of Art through August 16.

THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA

SECOND ANNUAL HUMANITIES SYMPOSIUM

Exploring the concept of mind

APRIL 11-13, 1985
IOWA MEMORIAL UNION, IOWA CITY, IOWA

Because of the great breadth of MIND as a topic, participation in this conference—in whole or in part—will be interesting and fruitful to an unusually broad audience of students, faculty, and the general public. We seek to enlarge our knowledge and understanding through discussions ranging from metaphor to mapping the brain.

THIS PROGRAM IS FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

VISITING SPEAKERS

Hilary Putnam, Ph.D., Professor of Philosophy, Harvard University, is a leading American philosopher with a special interest in the history of ideas and the history of science. He is the author of many books, among them Mathematics, Matter and Method; Meaning and the Moral Sciences; Mind, Language, and Reality; Realism and Reason; Philosophy of Logic; Philosophy of Mathematics; and Reason, Truth and History.

David Morris, Ph.D., a former faculty member of the University of Iowa's Department of English, now lives in Kalamazoo, Michigan. In addition to many scholarly articles, he has received plaudits for his 1983 book, Alexander Pope, published by the Harvard University Press. In recent years he has developed a special interest in the language used by writers and patients to express pain.

Julian Jaynes, Ph.D., Professor of Psychology, Princeton University, is best known for his controversial book, The Origin of Consciousness in the Breakdown of the Bicameral Mind. Although his academic position is in the Department of Psychology, his erudition and expertise clearly stem from, and branch into, philosophy, linguistics, archeology, literature, and history.

David Perkins, Ph.D., is a senior research associate working in the Graduate School of Education at Harvard University. His many publications include The Arts and Cognition, Teaching Thinking, and The Mind's Best Work, growing from his extensive work regarding the development and expression of imagination and creativity, particularly among gifted children. Dr. Perkins did his doctoral work in computer science and artificial intelligence.

Antonio Damasio, M.D., Ph.D., Professor of Neurology and Chief of the Division of Behavioral Neurology at The University of Iowa, is internationally known for his numerous investigations in neurobiology and clinical medicine, especially Alzheimer's disease. His presentation will focus on the "scientific" end of the spectrum represented at this highly interdisciplinary symposium.

Maxine Greene, Ph.D., a philosopher of education at Columbia University, has an unusual breadth of background in literature and the humanities. Her published books include Existential Encounters for Teachers, Landscapes of Learning, The Public School and the Private Vision, and Teacher as Stranger.

Doris Grumbach, Ph.D., is a successful novelist and literary critic. She appears regularly as a commentator on public radio. In the fall semester of 1984, she served as visiting professor and director of The University of Iowa Writers' Workshop. Her published novels include The Spoil of the Flowers, The Short Throat, The Tender Mouth, The Company She Keeps, Chamber Music, The Missing Person; and in 1984, The Ladies.

Richard Meinhard-Pellens, Ph.D., Assistant Professor of Education at the University of Portland, has particular interest in the "developmental" theories of Jean Piaget.
