Gas user fee would pave way for highway repair

By James Hintzen
Staff Writer

Under a proposal in the Iowa Legislature, the state's gasoline user fee would be increased in order to raise $48 million for the construction and repair of Iowa's roads and highways. Iowans now pay 13 cents in state gas taxes on every gallon of gas purchased and 15-and-a-half cents on diesel fuel. If the bill is approved, Sen. Dave Reader, R-Des Moines, said the fee would be increased later this year 2 cents per gallon on gasoline and 1 cent on diesel fuel purchased in Iowa.

According to a legislative report, a person who drives 12,000 miles a year in a car that gets 20 miles to the gallon would then pay about $6 per year in gasoline user fees.

Reader, who believes the bill will pass the Senate later this week, said the money raised by the user fee would go toward funding the Iowa Department of Transportation's "Revive Iowa's Sound Economy" program.

THE PROGRAM IS charged with overseeing the construction of roads that entice economic development in Iowa. RISE will take applications from cities, counties and the state before deciding which projects to fund.

One function of the RISE program is to make sure road access is available to economically-depressed areas, trucking terminals, agricultural shipment points and scenic, recreational and tourist areas.

Proponents of the bill say it is necessary to raise additional tax money in Iowa to counteract the state's deteriorating road system.

"The roads in Iowa are wearing out and we know that for a fact," said Chet Sloan, executive vice president of the Iowa Good Roads Association, a citizens' organization concerned with the condition of Iowa roads. "Right now, we're replacing one road and wearing out four."

In addition to the projected $48 million in revenue that is expected to be raised by the increased user fee, Reader said that each penny the tax is raised would create 1,000 jobs.

THE BILL CONTAINS an exemption from the state's 4 percent sales tax for truckers who do 25 percent or more of their business out of state. The truckers, however, would still be required to pay the increased gasoline user fee.

A second exemption in the bill would favor ethanol fuels and hinges on the expenditure of $40 million dollars in in-state construction by Archer Daniels Midlands, the largest maker of ethanol fuels worldwide.

Linda Nelson holds her son Tony Manuel and a sign the boy made for the Nuclear Weapons Awareness Week kick-off rally held on the Pentacrest Monday afternoon. The rally begins a week of activities aimed at informing the public on nuclear arms issues and will include workshops, speakers and films. The week will end with a national student peace march and rally in Washington, D.C., on Saturday.

Rally blasts nuclear arms race

By Elizabeth Grindrod
Special to The Daily iowan

Folk music, flying banners and speeches kicked off Nuclear Weapons Awareness Week Monday during a midday rally on the UI Pentacrest that attracted about 100 students.

The rally was the first of nine days of activities co-sponsored by the UI Student Senate and the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

Gary Lamb, president of the American Agriculture Movement, called for peace and parity in the opening speech, saying the "food and fiber" issue and the peace issue are inseparable.

"What is it within our nation today that says we have the intellect to put men on the moon, we have the intellect to build a nuclear warhead that we can pinpoint to land anywhere in the world, but we don't have the intellect to develop programs to feed starving people all over the nation and the world?" he asked.

"We do have the intellect, we just do not have the will," he answered.

Lamb went on to question the concept behind the arms race. "Why is it that the Pentagon says we have to be on par with Russia, but if the American farmers ask for parity they're told it's obsolete and outdated?"

LAMB REMINDED the crowd of former President Dwight Eisenhower's warning: "Every gun that is built, every warship launched, every missile fired signifies a step from those who are hungry and not dead, those who are cold and not clothed. If it is truly peace we seek we must strike a balance between what we spend for war and what we spend for peace."

Lamb said these words should echo across the nation like the roar of a cannon.

Professor James McCue, chair of the UI Global Studies Department, coined a new acronym for the arms race, calling it MUC for maximum unintended confusion.

MUC, by McCue's definition, "enables us to think of what we are proposing as the best thing that decent people and a decent government can do in a savage world. And it provides both sides with arguments that they can make for their own public about the villainous intent of the other side."

"People must cut through the 'muck' if they are to have a greater impact on halting the arms race," he added.

He said both sides in the arms race have, with apparent sincerity, said they develop nuclear weapons to ensure the other side never wants to use theirs — a purely defensive measure. But the military planners live in a different world, where nuclear war is just conventional war at large and where having twice as many nuclear weapons means the same as having twice as many tanks used to, he added.

MCCUE ALSO QUOTED Eisenhower, who said "the only function which these monstrous creations could perform was to frighten the other side into not using its weapons" and vice versa. But he said by the time Eisenhower left office, the United States had 18,000 nuclear weapons pointed at every conceivable target in the Soviet Union and plans to use them had been developed by the armed forces without reference to Eisenhower's words.

At the same time, Russia was saying it would not let the "aggressor" strike first as it did in World War II, and this dual policy has not changed, McCue said.

McCue also criticized President Ronald Reagan's claim that his "Star Wars" strategic defense initiative really is a defensive system that might be shared with the Soviets to "help the world out from under the threat of nuclear annihilation."

"It seems to me that it becomes increasingly implausible, to the point where it is totally incredible, that we will ever cash in our offensive weapons

Sidon marks 28th day of fighting

SIDON, Lebanon (UPI) — Artillery shells slammed into the southern port city of Sidon Monday in the 28th day of fighting in the city. Hospital officials said at least five people were killed and 30 wounded in the sectarian violence, most of them civilians.

At least 80 people have been killed and 460 wounded since the fighting began on March 18, Lebanese security source said.

"There are lulls but no cease-fires," said Nazih Bizri, a Parliament member from the ancient Mediterranean port city.

"We are faced with a contemptible conspiracy plotted by the Zionists under American protection to murder, displace and separate our people," Bizri charged. Israel had no immediate comment on his allegations.

Bizri reiterated Prime Minister Rashid Karami's accusation Sunday that the 28 days of fighting pitting Lebanese Moslems and Palestinians against rebellious gunmen of the Maronite Christian "Lebanese Forces" militia was initiated by the Maronites.

Karami charged that the Israeli-backed Christian militiamen, who rebelled against President Amin Gemayel's pro-Syrian policies last month, started the fighting as part of an Israeli plot to force Christian civilians to move closer to the Israeli border to provide a new buffer zone for Israel.

MANY SIDON residents pleaded for Lebanese army units to take control of the city 24 miles south of Beirut. But plans to do so were overshadowed by continued bickering among the various political leaders whose militias control the Beirut-to-Sidon highway.

In contrast to a jubilant welcome for Lebanese troops who arrived in Sidon after an Israeli withdrawal on Feb. 16, few people were on hand when 30 empty armored personnel carriers arrived Monday from Beirut.

Within hours, 20 of the U.S.-made APCs had rumbled far away from the battle zone, heading for positions farther to the east.

Some 300 government troops who have waited since April 2 for orders to move from Beirut airport to Sidon remained at the airport Monday, their transfer a matter still disputed by the Cabinet.

"The women and children will come back when the Christian fighters leave," said a 28-year-old Palestinian teacher in the Ain Helweh refugee camp, who identified himself by his nom de guerre of Abu Ali.

"The oldest fighter is here," said Abu Ali, pointing to a white-haired man with a Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifle. "He is 60 years old, and here is the youngest at 12," he said as a skinny youth with a pistol stood by. "We are all ready to face death."

Colloton asks approval for surgery unit

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

In an attempt to meet the increasing demand for same-day surgical operations, UI Hospitals officials will seek preliminary approval from the state Board of Regents later this week to construct a $1.5 million centralized ambulatory surgery center.

"This project will include the construction of four outpatient operating rooms with future expansion capability for two additional operating rooms," states a proposal submitted to the board by UI Hospitals Director John Colloton. "The project will also include the construction of recovery areas for pediatric and adult patients, preoperative examination rooms, patient dressing and locker rooms and patient and family reception and waiting areas."

Dean Borg, director of UI Hospitals Information Services, said construction of the center is expected to be funded without state appropriations.

Instead, he said, the UI Hospitals Building Usage Fund will cover the center's expected $1.5 million price tag. "This is a fund set aside for capital development out of patient revenues," explained Borg.

ACCORDING TO COLLTON, "Over the past several years there has been a significant increase in the number of surgical procedures performed on a same-day or ambulatory basis throughout the country."

Hospital records indicate 1,500 same-day surgeries were performed at UI Hospitals in 1983-84, an increase of 173 percent from 1981-82. Colloton's proposal also predicts this number may grow to "2,000 during the current fiscal year."

"The forces driving this increased interest in ambulatory surgery are varied but may be primarily attributed to third party payers requiring that specific procedures be performed on an outpatient basis and advances made in surgical and anesthetic techniques

Jepsen commission promoted by Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan asked Congress Monday to provide $1.1 million for the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, which got off to a shaky start earlier this year as a made-to-order home for an out-of-work senator — Roger Jepsen.

Reagan requested funds for the commission, created by Congress to promote events marking the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution on Sept. 17, 1787, to begin formal operations and continue through fiscal 1986.

Reagan signed the bill creating the commission on Sept. 19, 1983. For more than a year, the panel existed only on paper.

But in the last several months, the yet-to-be-activated commission has become known as something of a bureaucratic enigma, with Jepsen, a casualty of the 1984 elections, at its helm.

Jepsen landed a federal appointment in early January at a salary of $70,500. Senators currently make $72,600 a year.

Jepsen was assigned to the bicentennial commission, but was put on the payroll of the Justice Department, where officials said he has been "on detail" to the White House.

HIS FORMER Senate administrative assistant, Don Johnson, was hired at $67,940 a year and detailed to the same work. The two work out of a government-owned townhouse that sits along Lafayette Park across the street from the White House. A Justice Department spokesman, asked Monday what Jepsen and Johnson are doing, replied, "That's the White House's worry."

In late January, Jepsen was identified as executive director of the commission. But there was a legal hitch — under the law that established the panel, the commission members select the executive director.

At that time, the commission had not been named. In fact, a White House spokesman said Monday, the appointments are not expected to be announced.

Sudan changes foreign policy

KHARTOUM, Sudan — The new military ruler of Sudan said Monday his government had taken steps to establish closer ties with the Soviet Union, Libya and Ethiopia. He also pledged to revise Sudan's strict Islamic laws. "We would like to correct certain relations with countries that the past regime allowed to deteriorate, or didn't receive a full response to or perhaps the relations with Sudan were not as good as they should be," said Gen. Abdul Rahman Swar al-Dahab, chairman of the ruling Military Council.

Garcia gets Peruvian victory

LIMA, Peru — A left-of-center party led by Congressman Alan Garcia emerged from Peru's presidential elections with a landslide victory Monday, and its nearest competitor considered conceding defeat without bothering with a runoff.

Unofficial returns from Sunday's first round of balloting gave Garcia of the Popular American Revolutionary Alliance (APRA) 48 percent of the vote — just shy of the 50 percent needed for outright victory. The other top vote-getter was Lima's Marxist Mayor, Alfonso Barrantes who headed a United Left coalition comprising socialist and communist parties.

South Africa alters apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South Africa's white minority government agreed Monday to repeal laws forbidding sex and marriage between people of different races — key legal components of its segregationist policies.

Dissidents, however, said repealing the laws will be mere "crumbs of concession" that will have no basic impact on the system of racial segregation known as apartheid.

EPA said to be sabotaged

WASHINGTON — The administration is "prepared to sabotage" efforts to remove toxic asbestos from the nation's schools, Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., chairman of a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee charged Monday.

Florio blamed the Office of Management and Budget for blocking efforts by the Environmental Protection Agency to handle asbestos contamination because a cost-benefit analysis showed that it would cost less for citizens to get cancer than it would to enforce the regulations.

Reagan aides seek new sites

WASHINGTON — Two White House aides left for West Germany Monday to try to defuse a growing furor over President Reagan's plans to visit a German cemetery but not a former concentration camp.

White House chief of staff Donald Regan dispatched deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver and head advance man William Henkel to survey sites that could be added to the schedule for his trip to Germany for the Economic Summit and a state visit.

Israel to try accused Nazi

CLEVELAND — A federal judge Monday ordered a retired autoworker extradited to Israel for trial on charges he was the "Ivan the Terrible" responsible for thousands of deaths at a Nazi death camp in Poland during World War II.

John Demjanjuk, 64, from nearby Seven Hills, Ohio, was arrested and held at the Cuyahoga County Jail awaiting transfer to a federal facility. He could face the death penalty if convicted in Israel of murdering Jews during World War II.

Seatbelt debate hinges on ruling

By Sue Stoga
Staff Writer

The House today is expected to vote on whether to suspend its rules and allow debate on legislation mandating the use of seatbelts in all motor vehicles.

Rep. Donald Shultz, D-Waterloo, petitioned the rules committee last week after the measure failed to meet last Friday's deadline for House committee approval of Senate bills. Shultz said he wants the issue debated because of the "great importance" of the legislation.

"The issue involved here is a matter of saving lives or people from serious and permanent injury," he said. "It's of great importance to suspend the rules for this (bill)."

In order to suspend legislative rules, a petitioner must acquire 51 signatures so the matter can be brought before the House for debate.

"I'm certain there are enough votes to suspend the rules," Shultz said. "The votes are also there to pass the entire (package) out of the House."

Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon, said the bill is "being considered because the federal government is mandating that we do something."

A provision of the current federal safety law will require the installation of air bags in cars, according to a graduated schedule devised by the government.

The schedule will require 10 percent of new 1987 model cars to be equipped with air bags, 25 percent of 1988 models, 40 percent of 1989 models and 100 percent of new cars manufactured in 1990.

The only way to prevent the federal law from forcing consumers to purchase the safety restraints, which cost between $500 and $1,000 per car to install, is for 34 states to pass legislation requiring drivers to use seat belts.

Democratic members of the Iowa Senate Monday met in open caucus to discuss proposed appointments to state boards made by Gov. Terry Branstad.

Currently, Branstad is naming appointees to the state Board of Regents and the state Parole Board. All gubernatorial appointments must meet with

Art Small

Senate approval.

The Iowa Senate Monday deferred debate on a bill allowing children to give court testimony on video tape.

Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, said debate was suspended until a compromise could be reached between supporters of the measure in the House and Senate.

The Iowa House Monday approved legislation allowing Iowa voters to decide on the inclusion of a publish-ment clause in forthcoming legislation.

The bill, which was sponsored by Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, enables the Iowa General Assembly to pass legislation with a specified starting date without printing the specifics of the measure in an Iowa publication.

Currently, Iowa law requires a measure to be published before the bill can become effective. If no starting date is included in the logistics of the bill, the legislation is effective the following July 1.

Small said the legislation will be included on a referendum during the next statewide election for approval by Iowa voters.

The Iowa House Monday defeated an amendment enabling adoptees to view adoption records and then deferred further debate on the rights of adopted children until later in the legislative session.

The amendment, which was defeated on a narrow vote, would have allowed adopted children to petition the court to gain access to their birth records regardless of the wishes of the natural mother.

Currently, a child's natural mother may order the closure of adoption records and specify that the records not be opened except under extreme circumstances.

Debate on the rights of adoptees will be rescheduled before the end of the legislative session.

Legislators approve regents appointees

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

Despite claims by several legislators that the people Gov. Terry Branstad named to the state Board of Regents are inexperienced, all three appointments were approved by the Iowa Senate Monday.

John Greig, an Estherville cattleman, and Jim Tyler, a businessman from Atlantic, received approval by margins of 46-2 and 44-2, respectively.

Jacki Van Ekeren, an Iowa State University junior majoring in political science, was the third regents appointee to gain Senate approval. The ISU student senator and chairwoman of the ISU College Republicans' won Senate endorsement on a 39-7 vote.

"I'm very, very happy with the Senate's decision to approve my appointment and I don't think it will be too long before I can prove to the people of Iowa that Gov. Branstad acted wisely in naming me to the board," Van Ekeren said.

Little floor debate preceded the regents appointments vote, but Sen. Charles Bruner, D-Ames, did voice concern about the new regents inexperience.

"We are replacing regents Art Neu, S.J. Brownlee and Ann Jorgenson with three individuals who have virtually no experience in the area of higher education decision-making," Bruner said.

ALTHOUGH BROWNLEE, who has served as a regent for 12 years, asked not to be re-appointed, Neu and Jorgenson had expressed willingness to remain on the board.

Bruner said although he voted for approval of all three regents, he is concerned the new board members will "not be adequately prepared to deal with the responsibilities demanded by the state Board of Regents."

"We sent a questionnaire asking the applicants to explain their philosophies concerning the direction of higher education and we asked the three individuals why they applied to be regents. Good grief, Tyler didn't even apply, Branstad just appointed him. What does that have to say about his 'desire' to be on the board?" Bruner said.

Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, said he supported the governor's appointments because there was "no reason to vote against them."

"The general feeling was that these were not the most distinguished appointments that could have been offered," Small said. He added any reluctance to approve the regents appointments was "due to a belief that by failing to reappoint Art Neu, the governor weakened the board considerably."

BRUNER ALSO VOICED disappointment that a proposal calling for a special two-year student seat on the board was killed in committee earlier this session. "We have just elected a junior-level college student to a six-year regents seat. Even if Jacki (Van Ekeren) goes on to graduate school, chances are she won't spend all of the next six years as a student."

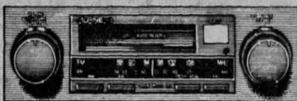

Van Ekeren said she plans to attend the UI College of Law after her 1986 graduation from ISU. "I see the six-year regents term as an asset rather than a problem. As the years go by, I will become more and more experienced and of more help to the people I serve."

Larry Lassiter, former UI Collegiate Associations Council president, said he is pleased the Senate granted approval of Branstad's regent appointments, particularly Van Ekeren.

"I think this demonstrates that the governor and the legislature know students are important to the decision-making process," Lassiter said. "This goes to prove it's not bad for a student to serve on the board of regents, and we have to be pleased about that."

Deng stresses free market in today's Chinese economy

PEKING (UPI) — Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping said Monday his nation has wasted 21 of its 36 years under communist rule in political chaos and economic upheaval sparked by radical leftists.

"In the years from 1957 to 1978, China was plagued by leftist ideology and as a result, China's productive forces were severely hampered," the official Xinhua News Agency quoted Deng as telling visiting Tanzanian Vice President Ali Hassan Mwinyi.

The years mentioned by Deng encompass Mao Tse-tung's 1958-60 Great Leap Forward — a plan to generate an overnight "leap" in production by mobilizing peasants to set up thousands of backyard industrial projects.

They also span the drive launched in 1964 and pushed throughout the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, aimed at forcing China's 800 million peasants to band together in collective farming and communal living.

Deng, 80, long allied with China's pragmatic economists, was twice purged and denounced as a "capitalist roader" for daring to oppose Mao's policies and those of the "Gang of Four" led by Mao's widow, Jiang Qing.

"China learned the lessons of the past after the fall of the Gang of Four," said Deng, architect of the nation's sweeping free-market economic reforms.

ALTHOUGH DENG repeatedly tells visitors he has retired from actively directing China's day-to-day affairs, the chain-smoking leader retains the indisputable right to veto or approve all major policies.

Deng, according to Xinhua, did not object to Mwinyi's lavish praise for him as "the mastermind" of China's bold, internationally-renowned reforms.

Moreover, Deng hailed his economic decentralization and open-door policies as "something unprecedented in (China's) history of thousands of years," which would alter the course of world events.

Condemning China's past, puritanical emphasis on self-denial and suffering as supreme revolutionary virtues, Deng declared that "socialism's goal is common prosperity."

"Socialism does not mean poverty," said Deng, who has won wide popularity among Chinese for his down-to-earth stress on raising living standards, expanding the production of consumer goods and allowing peasants to grow rich through private farming.

"Without developing the productive forces and improving people's living standards, you cannot say you are building socialism," he said.

Meanwhile, Chinese officials announced Monday that "conventionally powered" American warships may visit China but left open the question of whether they could carry nuclear weapons on the first U.S. port call to China in more than 35 years.

"U.S. CONVENTIONALLY POWERED" naval vessels may call at a Chinese port on an informal, ceremonial visit," Xinhua News Agency quoted a government spokesman as saying Monday.

The port call, the first by U.S. Navy ships to China since the 1949 communist revolution, had been planned for sometime in May or June. But the possibility remained Monday that it might be canceled over the Reagan administration's refusal to guarantee the warships would not be carrying nuclear arms.

Chinese Foreign Ministry officials said the word "may" in Xinhua's dispatch meant the ships "might or might not" come — not that they would be permitted without any conditions to make the port call.

Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang told journalists in Peking last Wednesday the United States had agreed its warships would be conventionally powered and would not carry nuclear weapons when they visit Shanghai.

But in Washington, the State Department immediately denied it had given such assurances to China, reiterating a firm U.S. policy neither to confirm nor deny the presence of nuclear weapons aboard American naval vessels.

Cabinet okays Weizman trip

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres won belated Cabinet approval Monday to send controversial envoy Ezer Weizman to Egypt on a delicate diplomatic mission, ending a crisis that threatened Israel's fragile coalition government.

A day after the Cabinet refused permission for the visit, it reversed itself in a special telephone vote to sanction the trip by Weizman. The vote tabulation was not immediately known.

Weizman, an architect of the 1979 Israeli-Egyptian Camp David peace treaty, left Monday night for Cairo and planned to return to Israel Thursday, Israeli officials said.

Peres has used the charismatic Weizman, a former defense minister and now minister without portfolio, as a key Israeli contact with Cairo. It was believed that Weizman planned to try to arrange a summit meeting between Peres and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, slated to become prime minister in 18 months under the coalition government's charter, objected to the trip on the grounds that Weizman was usurping the Foreign Ministry's duties.

"Shamir does not like the decision to send Weizman but he will not create a government crisis," Cabinet Secretary Yosi Beilin said.

IT WAS CLEAR, however, that Shamir had successfully displayed a show of strength against his government rivals and, having done so, agreed to let Weizman's trip go on as planned.

The Cabinet's 10-9 vote against the visit Sunday amounted to a stinging rebuke for Peres, who took office last Sept. 13 under an arrangement in which he would serve as prime minister for 25 months and Shamir would take over the post for the following 25 months.

Political sources quoted by Israeli newspapers Monday said neither Peres nor Shamir could seem to gain anything in torpedoing their fragile coalition. But the controversy still unleashed a good deal of bitterness on both sides.

On Sunday, Shamir criticized Weizman in a talk to the Histadrut, Israel's equivalent of the AFL-CIO labor organization, in the town of Petah Tikvah.

"Now comes a person who has decided that he's been crowned Israel's messiah of peace, and who has decided that he has a monopoly and the ability and that hearts just melt in the face of his charm," Shamir was quoted as saying.

Deputy Foreign Minister Ronni Milo, a key Shamir ally, accused Weizman of blaming Israel for its recent poor relations with Egypt.

"It is unthinkable that the Egyptians — without making any commitment or giving anything in exchange, or keeping their commitments under the accords — should invite Weizman, who's currently in the mood to give the Arabs everything," Milo told state-run Israel radio.

"He's become the man who takes land away from Jews and gives it to Arabs," Milo said.

Police charge Indian spy suspects

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Police formally charged 18 suspects Monday in India's biggest spy scandal, accusing them of passing secrets to countries believed to include France, the Soviet Union, Poland and East Germany.

An Indian official said the suspects, along with a Bombay-based export company, were charged with entering into a conspiracy to sell sensitive information regarding India's defense, electronics, trade and commerce to officials of foreign embassies.

"The prosecution has identified the foreign agents to whom secret information was being passed," said the official, who declined to be identified.

Among those charged were the alleged mastermind of the spy ring, Yogesh T. Maneklal, managing director of the Bombay-based export company, S.L.M. Maneklal Industries, and his New Delhi operative, Commar Narain.

The charges were filed under several sections of the Officials Secret Act and the Indian Penal Code and carry a maximum punishment of life imprisonment.

THE SUSPECTS, already in custody, were not present as prosecutor B.R. Handa submitted the charges before Metropolitan Magistrate Bharat Bhushan in a closed session.

One official said testimony from 188 witnesses was contained in the list of charges that ran 2,100 words.

Eleven of the 18 people charged, including Narain, have confessed their crimes before Bhushan. Three of them later recanted, claiming they were tortured into confessing to police.

The Press Trust of India news agency said six diplomats were believed named by the prosecution as the main beneficiaries of the secrets — two each from France, Poland and East Germany.

Five diplomats based in New Delhi were recalled by their governments shortly after the spy ring was uncovered in mid-January, including French Ambassador Serge Boidevaix, deputy French military attaché Lt. Col. Alain Bolley and three junior embassy officials, one each from the Soviet, East German and Polish missions.

NARAIN ALLEGEDLY recruited junior and middle-ranking officials in the offices of the prime minister, president and various ministries, including defense and commerce, police said.

Narain "lured junior government employees occupying sensitive posts with money and good entertainment to steal files from their offices, which were later photographed by Narain and copies sent to the foreign agents," police said.

"The accused are stated to have passed on top-secret defense contracts with the Soviet Union, maneuvers of army divisions in sensitive border areas and secret codes of intelligence, which were broken by the accused by procuring classified telegrams mentioning the codes," the Press Trust said.

Report says macho role in flux

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — This is an early warning to all the beer-swilling, hell-raising, football-loving guys out there: the times they are a-changing.

A recent report by the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization saw the Western world moving slowly away from the stereotyped roles of man as the provider and woman as the homemaker.

But before any American macho male crushes a beer can — the changes in the United States are awfully slow in coming.

"One of the most difficult problems facing the elimination of sex stereotyping is to convince men that it is also in their interest to get rid of such stereotypes," UNESCO said.

This was one of the principal conclusions in the report titled "Eliminating Sex Stereotyping in Schools" prepared by Professor L. Sunny Sundal-Hansen of the University of Minnesota.

The report said the biggest obstacle to change was man himself, but that in the United States at least changes in attitude were being nudged along by "an emerging men's movement."

SPOKESMEN FOR the movement take the position that "men have been limited by messages that they must be strong, athletic and unemotional and that vocational success is everything," it said.

Sundal-Hansen, who is married with two children, said she believed that as men "get an opposite message" they might consider women as "persons to be valued in multiple roles inside and outside the home" and that "equal partnerships at home and at work are both possible and satisfying for both men and women."

"Utilization of the full potential of both sexes is essential to solve the problems of a changing world," her report said.

She blames the Reagan administration in part for the slow progress in the United States.

"In the current political climate... the widely publicized 'gender gap' is getting larger, with no evidence of commitment by the administration in power, and indeed reversals in actions to enforce civil rights affirmative action and sex and race equality," Sundal-Hansen said.

Discovery 'swat team' to attempt satellite rescue

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Calling themselves the "swat team," Discovery's astronauts built two "fly swatters" Monday to try what no one else has done — save a stricken satellite by snaring an errant switch with the shuttle's robot arm.

The emergency action calls for a spacewalk 40 miles from the $80 million Syncom satellite this morning to attach the swatters to the end of the mechanical arm, and a repair rendezvous Wednesday. Landing will be delayed two days and now is rescheduled for Friday.

"OK, we'll look forward to that," said co-pilot Donald Williams when word of the decision to proceed with the bold salvage mission was radioed to the seven-member crew.

Using scissors, a Swiss army knife, a sailmaker's needle and other onboard tools, and following instructions radioed from Houston, the astronauts fashioned the fly swatters out of plastic flight plan covers costing 59 cents and ordinary duct tape of the kind used in the home.

THE FLEXIBLE SWATTERS were attached to metal rods that were aboard for other purposes.

"Jake's helping us," Rhea Seddon said of Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, "He says it's a lot more fun than listening to bowel sounds." The congressional observer was wired with two stethoscopes earlier in the flight to study the digestive tract in weightlessness.

Also helping was McDonnell Douglas engineer Charles Walker, on board to operate a biological processor.

"I'll tell you this has been some flight," said Jeffrey Hoffman, who will walk in space with David Griggs. "First we have toys in space and then we spend all afternoon doing arts and crafts. You guys have got everything for us."

The astronauts had taken time off earlier to demonstrate how toys like a yo-yo, a Slinky and a plastic wind-up mouse nicknamed "Rat Stuff" behave in the dreamlike weightlessness of space.

SEN. GARN SHOWED how a paper airplane "flies" in weightless space while co-pilot and part-time juggler Williams hung oranges and apples in mid-air and moved them about one at a time.

The orbital toy work is for a documentary designed to illustrate physics principles in terms school children can readily visualize.

"Here's the first and probably the last yo-yo show in space," Griggs said, narrating a videotape of crew members playing with the toys.

Williams demonstrated what happens when the plastic mouse Rat Stuff tries to do a flip. On Earth, the tiny toy jumps up in the air, flips and lands on its feet. But aboard Discovery, Rat Stuff simply went whizzing across the crew cabin.

Hoffman demonstrated a "Wheel-O" toy, in which a magnetic wheel rolls back and forth along metal strips, and Seddon illustrated the difficulties involved in playing jacks in orbit.

ON WEDNESDAY, commander Karol Bobko and Williams will track down the slowly-spinning military radio relay satellite and gently maneuver Discovery beneath the 15,200-pound satellite, taking care not to bump it.

Then it will be up to Seddon, a doctor and the fifth American woman in space, to try to salvage the satellite.

She will guide the robot arm up to the side of the satellite, sweep the flexible swatter against Syncom's glittering solar cells and try to snag a 4-inch lever that should have opened when the satellite was launched from Discovery Saturday. Both swatters will have three holes to snare the switch.

If the switch is snagged, it should open and then the plastic should rip from the force imposed by the momentum of the spin of the spacecraft.

Flight director John Cox said engineers from Hughes Aircraft Co., which built the satellite, are confident the lever is extending slightly from the side of the spacecraft and therefore is out to be snagged by the fly swatter. If it is fully recessed, the operation will fail.

THE LEVER SHOULD have opened automatically so it is perpendicular to the satellite side, but apparently did not. Once open fully, the lever is to activate an electrical switch that turns on the satellite's timing mechanism.

The pre-programmed sequence of events calls for an antenna to unfold atop the satellite 80 seconds after the lever is activated, small jets to fire in six-and-a-half minutes to speed up the satellite's rotation and the craft's rocket to fire in 45 minutes.

None of this happened Saturday when the satellite was deployed from Discovery.

As soon as the lever is opened, the astronauts will back off quickly and move away from the satellite to be clear of its rocket exhaust.

Inmates capture 22 hostages in Alabama prison riot

ODENVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — About 200 rioting convicts seized control of the St. Clair prison Monday, took Warden Larry Spears and 21 others hostage, but freed five injured prison workers and 17 others who had been hiding all day.

Officials said 15 of the rebellious prisoners had apparently broke into the pharmacy, took some drugs and then surrendered to seek treatment for overdoses. Alabama Corrections Commissioner Fred Smith flew to the 2-year-old maximum-security prison to negotiate with the inmates and Gov. George Wallace put the National Guard on alert.

"There are now 22 hostages," Smith said. "Ten of these are women and 12 are men."

Five other prison employees, including the deputy warden, were beaten and released by the rioting inmates Monday morning. Three were hospitalized with serious injuries and the other two received minor injuries.

State officials said Spears was a veteran warden who had been at the 1,075-inmate prison 25 miles east of Birmingham since it opened.

Monday evening, after several hours of negotiations, Smith said 17 other prison employees were allowed to leave areas of the prison where they had been hiding from the rioting inmates for more than seven hours.

"We have tight security on the perimeter, with troopers and other law enforcement personnel, including trooper tactical teams, our own tactical team and 250-plus correctional officers," Smith said.

BY MONDAY AFTERNOON, Smith said the negotiations with the prisoners "are progressing satisfactorily."

"We do have a list of demands that we're working with the inmates on now," Smith said, but declined to reveal the demands.

Officials said the rebellion began Monday morning in the office of the deputy warden and spread quickly throughout the prison, ultimately involving about 200 inmates — some armed with guns, clubs and knives from the kitchen.

Several shots were fired, but there was no immediate word if anyone was wounded.

"We do know that the prisoners are armed," said Wallace press aide Billy Joe Camp. "One weapon is a shotgun, another is a .38-caliber revolver and another is a .32-caliber revolver."

Neo-Nazi group indicted for murder, robbery, bombing

SEATTLE (UPI) — Two dozen members of a white supremacist "hate group" killed two people and stole more than $4 million in armored car loot to further their revolutionary plans, a 20-count racketeering indictment unsealed Monday charged.

A federal grand jury, which met in secret for four months, accused the suspects of four armored car robberies and the slayings of Alan Berg, a liberal Denver radio talk show host, and Walter West, a former member of the Aryan Nations Church of Idaho who disappeared under mysterious circumstances last year.

The suspects were identified by the FBI as members of The Order, an offshoot of the Aryan Nations Church, an umbrella organization for rightist extremists.

Several members of the group were charged in the 93-page indictment with the attempted murders of FBI agents during shootouts last November in Portland, Ore., and in December on Whidbey Island, Wash., in Puget Sound.

Gang members also bombed an adult theater in Seattle and a Jewish synagogue in Boise, Idaho, last year, authorities said.

The indictment included allegations that the neo-Nazis plotted to steal $30 million from a Brinks Co. vault in San Francisco.

"A warning message is buried in this indictment," Bill Baker, an assistant FBI director, said at a news conference announcing the charging of 24 suspects, most of whom are in custody in various states.

"IF A PERSON on the fringe of a hate group thinks that he is only minimally involved, then that person should take another look," Baker said.

U.S. Attorney Gene Anderson said the investigation is continuing but declared, "I believe it (The Order) to be neutralized."

The indictment said the white supremacists "banded together to commit murders and robberies as part of a plan to advance their extreme right-wing and anti-semitic views."

Among those charged:

- Bruce Carroll Pierce of Hayden Lake, Idaho, identified as a leader of The Order. Pierce, who was taken into custody in Georgia, "committed the crimes of murder, arson, robbery, counterfeiting, and dealing in stolen property," the indictment said.

- David Lane of Denver, accused of murder, counterfeiting and dealing in stolen property.

- Gary Lee Yarbrough, of Sandpoint, Idaho, also identified as a leader of the group, accused of arson, robbery, counterfeiting and dealing in stolen property. Yarbrough also "assumed the role of recruiting new members for the enterprise from the population of prisons," the indictment said.

- Randolph George Duey, a leader of The Order, suspected of murder, counterfeiting, robbery and dealing in stolen property.

Reagan lobbies for aid to Contras

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan, warning of atrocities and "institutionalized cruelty" in Nicaragua, told Congress Monday night a refusal to aid insurgents would be "a rejection of all the forces of moderation" in Central America.

In a major push to overcome opposition to his policies, Reagan asked Congress to close ranks behind his $14 million aid request and argued that a failure to do so would risk U.S. prestige and credibility abroad.

"The truth is, there are atrocities going on in Nicaragua," Reagan said at a fund-raising dinner for Nicaraguan refugees in Honduras and Costa Rica.

"They are largely the work of the institutionalized cruelty of the Sandinista government — cruelty that is the natural expression of a communist government, a cruelty that flows naturally from the heart of totalitarianism," Reagan said.

REAGAN, DEFENDING the need for $14 million in U.S. aid to the rebels, said it is "completely untrue" that the Nicaraguan government enjoys the support of the majority.

"It's so little," he said in a statement read to reporters in the Oval Office, "yet such an important symbol of our resolve — a signal to all of Central America and, yes, to those everywhere in the world who depend on us."

The appeal came as Reagan plunged into a round of public appearances and White House meetings intended to spotlight his offer to provide the rebel Contras with only food, clothing and medical supplies if the Nicaraguan government agrees to a cease-fire and peace talks with its opposition.

His daylong effort, which set the tone for the next two weeks, culminated at the $250-a-person fund-raising dinner for Nicaraguan refugees, where Reagan denounced the "Sandinista police state" in Nicaragua and said a vote on his proposal is a vote on the objectives pursued by the Catholic Church and the four-nation Contadora group seeking a negotiated peace for the region.

Library no-food rule works with monitors

By Dan Hauser
Special to The Daily Iowan

A student, backpack over shoulder, enters the UI Main Library, walks up to the second floor and finds an empty table. The student looks left, then right, and seeing that the coast is clear pops open a can of Coke. Ears twitch and heads turn.

Two years ago this would be a common occurrence at the library, but in the fall of 1983 UI Libraries administrators decided to crack down on the number of students making the study areas a "pigpen" with food wrappers and empty cans.

Although for several years there has been a sign at each of the library's entrances prohibiting food and drink in the building, administrators William Sayre and Wayne Rawley said students ignored the warnings. So the library began to enforce the rule with the help of student monitors, who now patrol the library and ask students to adhere to the rule.

"Many (library) patrons would complain about the food and drink," said Assistant University Librarian Sayre. He said he read numerous letters to the editor in The Daily Iowan and received complaints that the library was not conducive to studying.

RAWLEY SAID since enforcement of the rule began there have been no full-course meals reported eaten at the library. One night, before the rule was enforced, a student reportedly ordered a pizza at the library.

"Most people will agree that the chaos has gone down," Sayre said. Most students are cooperative about the rule, he said.

"I don't see what's the big deal with having a can of pop," junior business student Sue Stasukewicz said. Stasukewicz, who studies at the library every day, said she violates the rule at least twice a week. "I can tell when they (the monitors) are coming. I hide it (the food or beverage) sometimes." Sayre and Rawley said that when a monitor catches a violator, the monitor will first ask the student to dispose of the food or beverage. Then, if the student is caught again, a report is made to the library's night supervisor.

If the problem persists, the monitor will call UI Campus Security, but Sayre said this has never happened.

Sayre said the monitors keep track of the number of violations they run into each night. On the average, he said, there are about "two dozen to 50 a day." "We'll maintain a level we can live with. We can't get rid of all cans and bottles at the door," Rawley said. One night, before the rule was enforced, library janitors collected 527 cans.

LISA KINSER, a junior in pharmacy, said she does not like the rule because she is gone from home all day and has "nowhere to eat lunch." Kinser said the library should create a lounge area for students.

Last fall, the UI Student Senate passed a resolution urging library officials to "consider" a food lounge. Former Vice President Sheila Cutchlow met with UI Head Librarian Dale Bentz on the matter, but the idea was "squashed," she said.

Cutchlow said she also met with Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for student services, but the lounge proposal still went nowhere.

"It's only up to the library administration and they don't want one," Cutchlow said.

Rawley said the chances of students obtaining a food lounge in the library are "slim to none." He said there is no room for a lounge and the library does not want to pay for creating one.

Sayre cited a study by the University of Chicago that said academic libraries with lounges still have the problem of the food "spilling out" into the rest of the building.

"IF WE HAVE an Oriental reading room why can't we have a lounge?" junior accounting major Brad Schlotfeldt said. He said although he doesn't bring food or drink into the library, he thinks a lounge would be a good idea.

Rawley said a lounge is available to students studying in the Health-Science Library. He said so far there have not been any major problems with this lounge area, which is separate from study areas.

Another reason for the enforcement of the food and drink rule at the Main Library is to combat the bug and rodent problem, Rawley said. "We don't want to encourage them (bugs and rodents)." "They can live on the starch paste of the book binding," Rawley said.

Although the library is sprayed for bugs twice a year, he said food and drink would be an invitation to these creatures.

To illustrate this problem, Sayre said, Stanford University has on display an enclosed glass case with rats inside living on books alone.

Normal tachycardia occurs with fever, excitement, exercise and other similar temporary events, and treatment is not needed. Some diseases, such as an anemia or increased thyroid activity, cause tachycardia and, in those cases, the underlying diseases should be treated. ## Persistent racism

Iowa City likes to think of itself as a liberal, open-minded place. The presence of the UI lends this small city an intellectual and international flavor. Because of that flavor, Iowa City should not have a problem with bigotry.

Through the fog of that self-image, Iowa City got a lesson last week on how prevalent racism still is — even here.

Two white UI students, after refusing to live with a black woman, sued for expenses and damages from their former roommate. That roommate had arranged with the black woman to take over her part of the apartment's lease. The magistrate who settled the suit rejected the women's claim, stating that they acted unreasonably and are not entitled to any compensation.

The response of the two white students to the decision was especially revealing. "Even if it's discrimination, you can't help how you feel inside," said one. The other said: "I think it's similar to saying I wouldn't room with a male."

Assuming that they have a right to be bigots is objectionable enough, but these women expect to have their personal racism subsidized by others. Racism is not, as one of them seems to believe, biologically influenced. For more than a century in this country, legislators and others have attempted to change racial attitudes, and in many ways they have succeeded. To approach racist attitudes as matters of personal taste as the two students are doing is not only wrong, it is dangerous.

That the UI is host this week to a conference on racism makes this incident particularly timely. Entitled "Racism: A Woman's Issue," the conference will focus attention on attitudes such as those expressed by the two UI students. That racism is so persistent, and is adopting such "respectable" clothing, is something that cannot be ignored.

Covert operation

Friday morning about 20 members of the Progressive Student Network anxiously awaited their opportunity to place the UI among the universities across the nation that are making a statement against CIA campus recruitment.

At the University of Colorado at Boulder last week, more than 300 students, faculty and community members joined forces to protest the CIA's presence on their campus. A reportedly "ugly" and violent protest of the same nature took place at the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

But while the protesters elsewhere successfully generated a media blitz that heralded their views on a national scale, the UI effort was a disappointment at best.

The protesters led up to Friday's expected confrontation by vowing to "go to jail for what we believe in," despite the official line from UI administrators that the CIA recruiter was "expected and encouraged" to conduct interviews with UI students. Armed with plans to make a citizen's arrest of the recruiter, John Hopkins, these students arrived Friday morning and waited ... and waited ...

They were again thwarted by the UI administrators, who are unbelievably adept at squelching the voices it disapproves of. Their methods are not always up front and honest, but inevitably prove they do indeed enjoy the upper hand in controlling the statements that flow out of the university.

The administration actually came up with a very simple answer to its dilemma regarding how to quiet those campus radicals that make the whole place look bad — the CIA interviews were rescheduled at an earlier time. By the time the protesters arrived, they faced only the embarrassment of answering to a slew of media representatives, who have been frothing at the mouths for some real action lately.

Foiled again — but the protesters declared the rescheduling a "moral victory" nonetheless. It appears one has to get up pretty early in the morning to enjoy anything more than that at the UI.

A hard one to write

A four-inch blurb on page 1 of Saturday's Des Moines Register, written by Jill Lawrence, reports a study of the percentage of female bylines on page 1 of the nation's big newspapers. It's low, with an average of less than one quarter in 11 papers over a two-week period. The study, which was conducted by the National Organization for Women's Legal Defense and Education Fund, rated The New York Times worst with only 10 percent.

Do these statistics show that women are in short supply in journalism? Yes, but things seem to be getting better. It seems more women are entering communications fields. It seems that television news shows use women reporters and anchors — a visible sign of progress. It seems we see women increasingly prominent in public affairs, public relations and political communications. It appears more undergraduate women are studying journalism, as well.

Given these apparent strides for women in journalism, the study's findings come as a surprise. The first conclusion one might reach is that newspapers are more conservative than other media in creating opportunities for women and that newspaper women are stuck in less desirable beats.

There is a point beyond the obvious here, however. That is, there may be a narrowness in the judgment of what constitutes page 1 news. Newspapers tend to play "hard" news on page 1 — wars, crime, political and government news — all traditionally the province of male reporters.

USA Today rated best for female bylines with a respectable 41.5 percent. This is interesting, as USA Today is known for publishing more features, human interest and in-depth stories on its front page — the traditional bailiwick of female reporters. USA Today is also headed by a woman, Cathleen Black.

Certainly women reporters should be allowed equal opportunity for the hard news beats. But it is arguable that typical women's stories, the women's perspective, are not being judged as important, as newsworthy as the world of men that men report.

Nonprejudice is a 'little white lie'

By Fannie LeFlore

TO SAY THAT I'm not prejudiced would be more than a little white lie. But, as a black person, I can definitely say I'm not a racist, and I would argue that most blacks and other minorities in this country don't qualify to be labeled as such.

Though we all know of black and white extremists who embrace black nationalism or white supremacy, the question of whether blacks can be racists is more than a matter of semantics.

Racism, definitively, comes down to the power issue. Racism is prejudice in action, such as discriminating against others by denying them access to opportunities. And that power still takes the form of overwhelming social, political and economic domination and control by whites in this country. That's why I believe racism, and whether it continues to thrive, is almost exclusively in the hands of whites.

IT'S TIME THEY admit it and take responsibility for their part in it instead of shifting all the blame to the victims. There will continue to be racial conflict and irreparable damage to society if we don't try to fight this disease.

Even if blacks wanted to be racists — and I don't know of anyone who'd be proud of it — we still haven't comparably attained the positions in society that ascribe the power to discriminate. More than 20 years after the civil rights movement, total equality still seems elusive to blacks. Instead, there seems to be a trend emerging to repress black gains in education, leadership and employment credibility.

Because of this backlash against black gains and against efforts like affirmative action that could help make up for past inequities, as well as some people's insistence on clinging to racial stereotypes about blacks, I've become angry. Such realities as this backlash and the reluctance to acknowledge historical contributions made by blacks have made me question our nation and ask whether it is truly democratic and fair, as it wants the world to believe.

THESE REALITIES HAVE stirred up prejudicial feelings in me because I believe that behind the backlash is the notion of white supremacy at work, at least on an institutional level. I vehemently reject the notion of white superiority; the idea itself is repulsive.

It seems I'm forced to be angry if I want to do my part to protect black gains, black culture and black credibility. Some people may want to call such a reaction defensive or equate it to a chip on the shoulder when blacks assert their blackness. But if you were in a stifling situation, living under the democratic guise of a country that seems to cherish a president who disregards blacks and their contributions as an integral part of society, you'd have to defend your existence, too.

So I certainly don't count myself among the people polled after President Reagan's re-election who said they have good feelings about the country and its direction. It's extremely hard to feel good about this country when Reagan condones South Africa's apartheid regime and overtly advocates the violent actions of its government and police against the black population. Those 22 million oppressed people are black like me. More important, they're human. It's natural that I should be concerned.

THE FACT THAT MY own university also supports apartheid through the stock it holds in more than 40 companies that operate in South Africa makes me wonder. Even in this so-called liberal college environment, there are signs that racism — and the notion of white supremacy lurking with it — is alive and well.

Some of my classmates over the years have also shown me that integration hasn't helped them eliminate the stereotypes they have about black people. It's one thing when a person's only contact with blacks has been in the form of Amos and Andy or television, but it becomes tiring for black students to have to be accountable for their whole race. It's hard enough being students; we don't want to spend most of our energies disproving stereotypes we didn't invent.

(Certainly, the media have perpetuated the negative stereotypes by underlining blacks who commit crimes while overlooking blacks who make positive strides. Our newspapers and history books don't usually identify the race of black inventors, scholars, doctors and scientists who are helping shape the course of the nation's technological and educational advancements.)

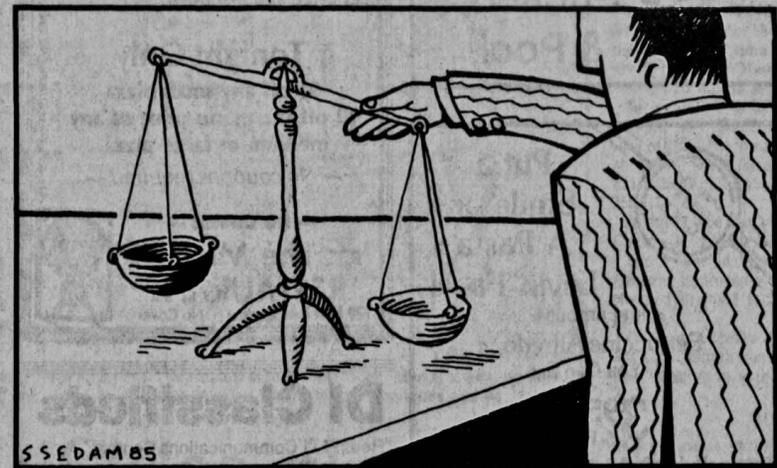

Even so, it's still obvious that some whites are intimidated when they see a group of blacks together. One white student even told me he used to conjure up thoughts of violent Chicago gangs when he saw a group of black students congregating.

SOME BLACK STUDENTS wonder whether it's worth it. The pattern of interaction between us and white students seems to demand that we are always the first to make efforts if there will be communication. Is that equality?

Indeed, the whole thing is a dilemma, but we can't shove it off as though the problem and disease of racism will cure itself. I've decided for myself that I won't let the anger inundate me or stop me from seeking and experiencing a broader, multi-cultural world. (Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks and others who struggled didn't give up.)

Attending the Women Against Racism workshops the past two years helped me discover that part of the problem is when we deny that we are prejudiced. Even though few people would be proud to label themselves racists, they certainly can't go on saying that it is something outside of themselves. It may be easier to shift the responsibility over to the institutions of society, but we make up those institutions.

Fannie LeFlore is a UI undergraduate studying journalism.

Letters

Nightrider

To the editor:

I am writing to comment on the practice of riding bicycles at night without any form of lighting. In addition to being illegal, the practice is just plain stupid! I propose that there are four reasons why people fail to use a light on their bikes:

1. Ignorance or stupidity. These people have not considered the problems that they create by their actions; or they may be too stupid to even comprehend the idea that it is hard to see a bike at night if the bike has no light.
2. Disregard for the safety of others. The people may not care about the fact that they are causing inconvenience to a number of people, including motorists, pedestrians and other bicyclists.
3. Lack of enforcement of laws. Bicycles are subject to the same regulations as motor vehicles, yet they are not enforced for bicyclists.
4. Macho attitudes. Some may feel that it's not "cool" to ride a bike with a headlight.

Some people may try to use the excuse that they can't afford a light for their bike, or that it's not worth the cost, but this is a poor excuse. They would not drive a car at night without headlights. Besides, you can get a good generator light for $20 to $30.

If you think this matter is trivial, consider the number of close calls that you've had with a bike at night. It also isn't trivial when you consider the bad reputation that is given to all bicyclists because of the irresponsible ones. Motorists who become frustrated with irresponsible bicyclists tend to be discourteous towards all bicyclists.

Bicyclists were afforded the rights of motorists so they could share the roads, but along with those rights come the responsibility to obey the rules. If you cannot obey the traffic rules, which include the use of a headlight after dark, then get rid of your bike or sell it to someone who will be a responsible rider.

Radio TKE

To the editor:

Two previous letters this semester have focused on perceived problems present among sorority and fraternity members. I can't understand why anyone could have problems with "the greeks." After all, during the past weekend many Iowa Citians heard how socially conscious and unselfish some "greeks" can be.

The men from Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity provided free entertainment both day and night and didn't even seek reimbursement for their efforts. You didn't know that the music audible east of the Union emanated from the TKE backyard? Well, by all means, give TKE a call and thank the members for their fledgling entrance into public broadcasting! Remember, unlike other public radio stations, Radio Station TKE hasn't been dunning you for financial contributions.

Admittedly, lauding all the men at TKE may be hasty. I'm not sure who to thank up there and I wouldn't suggest honoring everyone if only a few are responsible. Actually, I'm beginning to think that the butler turned the stereo on after making midnight snacks.

If you, like others, can't get through to the staff up there at Radio TKE, call the police to register your approval. From the sound of it, Friday night's session turned into an arresting performance.

Stay tuned radio fans.

Neo-Nazi murder suspect sought

BRANSON, Mo. (UPI) — A motorist shot and killed a highway patrol trooper and wounded another Monday, fleeing on foot and eluding a manhunt by dozens of officers who said the suspect is a member of a right-wing supremacist group.

Trooper Jimmy E. Linegar, 31, of Reeds Spring, Mo., was shot four times with an automatic rifle and pronounced dead at Skaggs Community Hospital in the southwest Missouri community of Branson, the patrol said.

Trooper Allen Hines, 36, of Branson, was shot three times and was taken to the same hospital. His injuries were not believed to be critical, officials said.

About 30 patrol officers and at least a dozen other law enforcement officers searched the rough, mountainous area near the Arkansas border for a 22-year-old man identified as David C. Tate, of Athol, Idaho.

"We've got men all over, planes all over," said patrol Sgt. Ray Divine.

Tate was one of several members of a Neo-Nazi group named in a 20-count indictment returned in Seattle by a federal grand jury investigating the murder of a Denver radio talk show host and an Idaho man.

Tate, a member of the group known as The Order, is suspected of murder, counterfeiting and dealing in stolen property, authorities said.

Linegar was shot shortly after stopping a motorist and calling for a license check through the patrol's computer at 1:41 p.m. on a man who gave his name as Matthew M. Samuels, authorities said. The computer revealed the name to be an alias used by Tate.

Hospital

which permit more procedures to be safely performed in an outpatient setting," states Colloton.

But Colloton's proposal also notes that the "dramatic increase" in ambulatory surgeries being performed at UI Hospitals "has placed a tremendous burden on the present operating suite facilities and staff as there has not been a concomitant decrease in the number of inpatient surgical procedures.

preoperative examination, patient preparation and holding and recovery facilities are not available in the operating suite," states Colloton. "The present system requires patients to be examined, gowned and prepped in an outpatient clinic, transferred to the sixth floor operating suite for their surgery and then transferred back to the clinic to recover."

Plans for the ambulatory surgery center call for it to be constructed in approximately 11,000 gross square feet of existing "shelled in" space on the hospital's fifth floor. This space was constructed in 1983 to meet the expect-ted need for future ambulatory surgical facilities, states the proposal.

In addition to seeking preliminary approval for this project at the regents meeting Thursday, UI Hospitals officials are also expected to unveil a list of more than 50 major capital projects they plan to undertake during the next three years.

AS WITH the ambulatory surgery center, hospital officials are planning to complete these projects without requesting state support for construction costs.

"All of these projects ... are to be supported by a combination of University Hospital Building Repair funds, building usage allowances and gift or grant funds," states an April 12 UI Hospitals report.

Borg said the listing of these projects will be included in a "quarterly report" hospital administrators will present to the board during its meeting. This report is expected to update the board on the hospital's governing structure, ongoing efforts to contain health costs and future plans to modernize the hospital's information systems.

Rally

because we are so confident about our defensive weapons. There will still be people around who will find some use or other for our offensive weapons," he said.

Joe Hansen, director of Students for a Nuclear Free Iowa City, told the crowd efforts are underway to prepare legally binding documents declaring Iowa City a nuclear free zone, a move that could rejuvenate the local peace movement.

PEACE IS THE MOST potent issue in U.S. politics today, said Hansen, and it should remain that way. "Nuclear free zones send a clear picture to Washington, D.C., and they tell our representatives to vote against these terrible missiles," he said.

The CND and Students for a Nuclear Free Iowa City are asking people to declare their homes nuclear free zones and to sign a petition to be presented to the Iowa City Council.

David Wall, spokesman for CND, said everyone is responsible for supporting the arms race through tax dollars and urged the crowd to think about withholding taxes.

According to Wall, 43 cents of every dollar pays for current military expenditures and 60 cents goes toward war-related purposes. "We can spend our time and energy planning, petitioning and rallying, but if you give your tax dollars, that's all the government needs," he said.

Tim Buttons provided folk music in support of the peace movement for the crowd between the speeches. Other speakers included Kate Foley, who lived in Germany for four years and spoke about the West German peace movement, and the Rev. Bob Welsh of First Christian Church.

Gas

The company, which also imports a large amount of ethanol from South Africa into Iowa, would be required to spend $40 million to either construct a new plant in Iowa or make $40 million in improvements to their existing plant, in order to have ethanol fuels qualify for the exemption.

Expressing opposition to the increase in the state's gas tax, Ed

Kitsmacher, of Pester Derby Inc. in Des Moines, said that Pester is "very concerned about being competitive with Iowa's bordering states."

HE NOTED THAT Missouri's current state gas tax rests at only 7 percent and that the increased Iowa gas user fee would hurt service stations in the southern part of the state.

"For the (gas) dealers on the Missouri border, it will be like selling the farm," he said. The Iowa Good Roads Association generally supports the bill, Sloan said, although they have some reservations about some of the bill's exemption provisions.

"It is part of the way of funding roads," Sloan said of proposed trucking exemption. "They (truckers) certainly use the roads and contribute to their wear."

Sloan said the association opposes exempting ethanol fuels from the tax because "the ethanol industry doesn't do anything" for the improvement or repair of state roads.

He said each penny collected in taxes on ethanol fuel would raise $5 million annually for the Iowa DOT.

Jepsen

ced for another five or six weeks, even though the commission's first report is due Sept. 29.

Jepsen has since described himself as "acting director" of the commission and said he expects a full staff position

once the panel is in full operation. "Nobody has asked me to go elsewhere," he told The Chicago Tribune last month. "There's not much to report now, other than we are laying the groundwork for the commission."

Hagler knocks out Hearn in 3rd round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — It didn't take Marvellous Marvin Hagler long to end what was being billed as the fight of the year.

The undisputed middleweight champion of the world recovered from a cut early in the fight to retain his title with a third round technical knockout over Thomas Hearn Monday night at Caesar's Palace.

The win raises Hagler's career mark to 61-2-2 with both losses in 1976. Hearn drops to 40-2, his only previous defeat coming at the hands of Sugar

Ray Leonard in 1981.

HEARN THEN STUNNED Hagler

HEARN WAS BEATING Hagler to the punch, but he paid for missing a left lead with two rights to the jaw from Hagler. Hagler was wild with a left, nearly turning completely around in mid-ring. Hagler clipped Hearn with a sharp left to the jaw and took a

In the third — and what proved to be the final round — Hearn dug a left and two rights to Hagler's body and accompanied it with two right leads to the middleweight champion's head. Hagler fought back with a left to the ribs but took a pair of rights to the head in return.

THE BLOOD was streaming from below Hagler's eye and referee

Richard Steele asked the doctor to check it. The doctor did and signified that Hagler could continue. Hagler made the Detroit native back-pedal. Hagler stunned him with two rights to the head. Hearn went down. When Hearn arose, he was groggy. Steele then stopped the fight, awarding Hagler a technical knockout at two minutes, one second of the round.

Both men will be rewarded heavily for their nine minutes of fighting. Hagler and Hearn stood to gross $10 million and $9 million respectively.

Hawks getting set for weekend

By J.B. Glass
Staff Writer

From Steve Duncan's vantage point, normally in and around the third base coaches box, Iowa is as good as any team in the Big Ten offensively.

But, the Hawkeyes (22-11), like most baseball teams, go as their pitching goes.

Iowa's hitters have maintained that sweet swing so far, as Duncan, Iowa Coach Duane Banks' top assistant, has waved 7.7 runners around third base a game, while the pitching staff has allowed 7.62 runs per game.

Duncan says he and the rest of the coaching staff can't ask for anything more from the offense and adds, "if our pitching staff can keep us anywhere close we have a chance to win."

"WE'RE ON THE verge of being a pretty good ball club," Duncan added, "but we need more consistency out of our pitching staff... and that seems to be coming now."

The tell-tale week begins today for the Hawkeyes, as Grandview of Des Moines is Iowa's first foe.

The two teams are scheduled for a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. on the Iowa Diamond.

Wednesday Iowa travels to Ames to take on Iowa State before returning home to host Augustana Thursday, Illinois — Iowa's first Big Ten test — visits Saturday and Sunday for a four-game series.

"We hope we'll get geared up going into the weekend," Duncan said about the games leading up to the tussle with the Illini. "Grandview, being a small college, many people don't think of them as being an outstanding team, but they are a good test for us."

"OF COURSE Iowa State will be like any Iowa-Iowa State event, and against Augustana we hope to get some of our pitchers down in the five, six, seven, eight (positions on the staff) some work," as the Hawkeyes will need those hurlers with the amount of doubleheaders scheduled.

"I think it will be difficult for any team (in the Big Ten) to win four games," Duncan said. "If someone wins four games they'll be in the driver's seat, but I don't see that because of the pitching or lack of pitching."

"Everybody in our division is basically the same; they have two or three kids that can go out and pitch against anybody. But when you get to that fourth or fifth guy — that's going to be the telling story," Duncan added.

IOWA WOULD LIKE to win three games, according to the sixth-year coach and if the Hawkeyes sweep the series it would be an added bonus. "And then you like to go on the road and split," Duncan said. "History told us if you can do that you can get in the playoffs."

Righthander Chuck Georgantas, who leads the pitching staff with a 2.48 earned run average and four wins in five tries, and Mike Darby (4-2, 4.99) will most likely get the call today.

Smith, Weidenbach win at Boston

A determined George Murray approaches the finish line to win the wheelchair portion of the 89th Boston Marathon Monday afternoon. Murray's winning time was an impressive one hour, 45 minutes and 34 seconds.

BOSTON (UPI) — Defending champion Geoff Smith of Great Britain overcame cramps, which knotted his hamstrings near the 20-mile mark, to win the 89th Boston Marathon Monday with an official time of two hours, 14 minutes and five seconds.

Smith, 31, a native of Liverpool, England, jumped out to a huge early lead and after 10 miles was on a 2:05 pace, which would have shattered the world's record by three minutes.

But the fast pace and temperatures in the upper 60s took their toll on the Englishman, who at the 20-mile mark — the foot of Heartbreak Hill — clutched the back of his right thigh and stopped to stretch out a cramping muscle.

HE THREW HIS head back in agony and put his hands to his face, looked down, then started running again.

At the bottom of Heartbreak Hill, Smith threw water on the back of his thigh and continued running, showing occasional difficulty with the cramping leg.

Smith's lead over his nearest challengers was six minutes before the cramp, but his advantage shrunk to 1:50.12 at the 22-mile mark.

Partly sunny skies and humid conditions greeted about 6,000 runners who started the race in Hopkinton, 26 miles, 385 yards from the finish line at the Prudential Center in downtown Boston.

Smith won last year's Boston Marathon with a 2:10:34 time.

Lisa Larsen Weidenbach, 23, of Marblehead, Mass., the overwhelming favorite in the women's division, won with a time of 2:34:06. The native of Battle Creek, Mich., now living in Marblehead, Mass., has a personal best of 2:31:31.

At the 20-mile mark, she was more than six minutes ahead of her closest challenger.

LYNNE HUNTINGTON of Texas finished second in the women's competition with a time of 2:42:14, just ahead of New Hampshire's Karen Dunn, who was 13 seconds back.

In second place in the men's competition was Gary Tuttle, 37, of Ventura, Calif., the owner of a running-shoe store and a former national AAU marathon champion, finishing at 2:19:12.

In third place was Mark Helgeston of Cincinnati, a late entry, at 2:21:15.

Smith ran his 23rd mile in 6:04 minutes, improved to 5:08 on the next one and dropped to 5:43 on the 25th mile.

Geoff Smith

AFTER THE RACE, Smith said, "The last five miles, I don't know how I kept on going. I just had to grit my teeth."

Smith said he was trying to run a controlled race and said he had cramps at the tops of both hamstrings.

"I wanted to win in a world-record time, no doubt. I was going for it," he said. Smith said he was not aware of how fast his early pace was.

Smith was crowned with the traditional laurel wreath by Gov. Michael Dukakis.

The marathon world record is 2:08:05, set by Steve Jones in the 1984 Chicago Marathon. The Boston Marathon record is 2:08:51, set in 1982 by Alberto Salazar, with Joan Benoit holding the women's world and course record with her 2:22:42 time in 1983.

Smith said for the last four miles he was thinking about the 1984 New York Marathon in which Rod Dixon came from behind just before the finish to beat him.

"I DON'T KNOW what caused the problem," he said. "I'm not a doctor. It hurt my ego more than anything else."

Smith, who took the lead before the one-mile post, said he didn't look over his shoulder until the 25-mile mark, and then "I took the turn to come up the hill. That was the first time I looked over my shoulder."

"I came here to run as fast as I could. I came here to run a record," said Smith. "But I'm still pleased I won."

The cramp "was sheer hell," he said. "It got to the point where I had to stop. I thought right there it would be all over, but it was just determination to keep going."

Unhappy Skiles pleads guilty in drug case

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (UPI) — Michigan State basketball guard Scott Skiles, saying he was denied any chance of a fair trial, gave up a seven-month legal battle and pleaded guilty Monday to possession of marijuana.

Skiles' plea to the misdemeanor, just in time to head off a trial scheduled to start Tuesday, came in return for a prosecution agreement to drop a felony charge of cocaine possession.

Marshall Circuit Judge Michael D. Cook suspended a one-year prison term and ordered Skiles to pay a $100 fine and court costs and spend either five days in jail or 120 hours doing community service in his hometown of Plymouth.

Michigan State Athletic Department officials said there would be no immediate determination whether Skiles will be allowed to play for the Spartans next year, his senior season.

"I'M RELIEVED it's all over, but the court has not been very cooperative," the honorable mention All-Big Ten guard said after Monday's one-hour hearing.

The three-year Spartan starter claimed Cook erred in ruling twice

"There's no way I could have gotten a fair trial," says Michigan State's Scott Skiles. "As far as this court is concerned, (the) evidence should have been suppressed in the first place."

since last fall that police acted properly in seizing 0.405 grams of cocaine and 0.601 grams of marijuana from his Michigan State gym bag.

Those rulings would have allowed prosecutors to use the drugs and a handwritten statement from Skiles as evidence at his trial.

"There's no way I could have gotten a fair trial," Skiles said. "As far as this court is concerned, that evidence should have been suppressed in the first place."

SKILES, WHO averaged nearly 18 points and six assists a game this year for the 19-10 Spartans, told Cook in court he was "very sorry" and promised, "It will never happen again."

"I made a mistake," he said. "It's been a great strain on me. My life will never be the same."

Skiles bowed his head at the defense table as Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote asked Cook not to sentence his player to prison.

Heathcote described Skiles as "very intelligent, very competitive, very aggressive, very sincere and very stubborn" and testified the athlete had suffered because of the drug charges, but stood up to his difficulties.

"He gets booed," Heathcote said. "People hold up negative signs from the stands. It's been a tremendous burden."

SKILES WAS VOTED by his teammates as Michigan State's Most Inspirational Player of 1985 "both on and off the court," Heathcote said.

Other witnesses included Skiles' high school principal and the coach of the Plymouth High School team he led to an Indiana state championship in 1982.

Skiles said after the hearing he might take jail time instead of performing public service because he is committed to summer school in East Lansing this summer. He also faces a drunken driving charge there in a separate case.

A police officer pulled Skiles' car over in the early morning of Aug. 29, 1984, and seized the drugs from a Michigan State gym bag emblazoned with his name, investigators said.

Discussion of a plea bargain began April 9 after Cook rejected the evidence suppression motion for the second time.

Skiles had insisted since he was charged in early September he would win his case at trial and, if not, would appeal "to the Supreme Court." Asked by Cook Monday why he had abandoned his "adamant" insistence on his innocence, Skiles said he still maintained he put no drugs in the bag, but was now admitting there were marijuana cigarettes on the floor of his car.

"I never said anything about the butts on the floor," Skiles said. "Nobody ever asked me about the marijuana."

Grid ticket sales continue through May 17

Iowa football tickets went on sale Monday and can be purchased to receive priority seating through May 17, not this Wednesday as was erroneously stated in last Friday's DI.

Student season tickets may be purchased for $39. One additional guest ticket can be bought for $84, but requests must be made by May 17.

The ticket office is open Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Cardinals, Smith agree to 5-year pact

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Shortstop Ozzie Smith, who would have been a free agent at the end of the season and seemed resigned to being traded by the St. Louis Cardinals, Monday signed a five-year contract with the team for more than $2 million per year.

Smith's agent, Ed Gottlieb, said the pact makes Smith the highest paid player in baseball. The five years include the current season.

The announcement was made at a news conference that included August A. Busch Jr., the venerable brewery owner and head of the baseball club.

"This is a great day for me today," Busch said in his rare appearance. "It's my pleasure to announce Ozzie Smith will be in a Cardinal uniform for the next five years."

"When I started playing, I didn't set out to be the highest paid player," said Smith. "I always work hard at what I do, and try to get people who come to the ball park their money's worth."

Gottlieb said the contract calls for more than $2 million a year for four years and includes an opportunity for Smith to buy a lucrative Anheuser-Busch beer distributorship "at a fair market price" at the end of his career. The distributorship had been a key factor in the negotiations.

The money is guaranteed and is not deferred, although Smith agreed to waive a no-trade clause in the contract.

Braves Murphy named NL Player of Week

ATLANTA (UPI) — Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves was named the National League's Player of the Week Monday after batting .500 and driving in 10 runs in his club's first five games.

Murphy had nine hits in 18 at-bats with four homers and a double and also scored seven runs during the week.

He also played in his 500th consecutive game, the longest current streak in the Major Leagues. He is only the 30th player in Major League history to have played in 500 consecutive games.

Other players considered for Player of the Week honors were Gary Carter of the New York Mets, Jack Clark of the St. Louis Cardinals, Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros and player-manager Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds.

Carter hit three home runs and had three game-winning hits, Clark hit two home runs and knocked in seven runs and Rose batted .368 with seven hits in 19 at-bats to move within 88 hits of Ty Cobb's career record of 4,191.

AL award goes to Seattle's Bradley

NEW YORK (UPI) — Phil Bradley of the Seattle Mariners was named the American League's Player of the Week Monday after helping his club get off to a 6-0 start in the West Division.

Bradley, the Mariners' left fielder, hit an even .400 for the week with two doubles, a pair of triples and two home runs for 22 total bases, 10 RBI and one game-winner. He slugged .880 and had a .423 on-base percentage.

Additionally, Bradley, a former football quarterback at Missouri, made a series of outstanding plays in left field in the Mariners' first six home games, topped by a sensational grab of what appeared to be a Dave Kingman home run. In the top of the sixth Kingman's drive hit a speaker high in left field, about 135 feet above the warning track. Bradley followed the ball and caught it as it caromed off the speaker.

Women's crew team wins first medal

The women's division of the Iowa crew team won its first medal ever in claiming the bronze medal in last weekend's regatta.

The women were only one-tenth of a second away from winning the silver medal, while in the second race they were only nine-tenths of a second away from earning another bronze medal.

In the men's novice light division, which consists of first-year rowers under 160 pounds, Iowa placed fourth in both races.

Rowing in a new boat, the men's varsity light rowers didn't quite fare as well, because the rowers had difficulties adjusting to the new boat.

The crew team will be hosting a regatta Thursday, April 25. It will begin at 3 p.m. at the Park St. bridge. The 1,000-meter race will end at the Union.

Healthy Hawks take on Purdue

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

It'll be a battle of two rookie coaches today when the Iowa women's tennis team hosts Purdue at 2:30 p.m. on the Kinnick Stadium Courts.

First-year coach Laurie Campbell's Purdue team has had a surprisingly good season so far. The Boilermakers are 6-8 overall, 1-2 in the Big Ten. Purdue's lone conference win came last Sunday against Michigan State, 6-3 after dropping a close 5-4 decision to Michigan on Saturday.

"We've been playing pretty well so far," Campbell said. "We look at every Big Ten match as an important one. Of course, Indiana and Northwestern are a cut above the rest of us, but we have to go out and play hard each time."

"In singles, Molly recently had a big win over Northwestern's Stephanie Lightvoet, who is among the top 50 in

Tennis

THE PROBLEM FOR both coaches is a lack of familiarity with each other and each other's teams. "It's a problem, that's for sure," Campbell said. "I'm just trying to feel my way through the Big Ten right now."

Two players making Campbell's road a little easier are Molly McGrath and Krista Schneck. "Both are nationally ranked in doubles right now," Campbell said. "They've been playing well together and have had some big wins."

"In singles, Molly recently had a big win over Northwestern's Stephanie Lightvoet, who is among the top 50 in the country," the Purdue coach added. "She has been very consistent so far this season."

The Hawkeyes, 2-18 overall, 1-5 in conference play, have been playing much-improved tennis in recent weeks. Iowa Coach Charley Darley was thankful for having a week off after last Tuesday's 8-1 loss to Northwestern.

"IT GAVE US a little bit of a rest," Darley said. "It gave the players a chance to catch up on their studies because some of them had midterms."

Darley also indicated that the Hawkeyes might be as healthy as they've been all year for the Purdue match. "Everybody is healthy and that's a good sign," the Iowa coach said. "I hope that means a victory for us but I'm not making any promises."

The Iowa coach said he knew nothing of Purdue, leaving him with a problem similar to Campbell's. "I don't really know anything about them," he said. "We just have to go out and play more strong performances."

The Hawkeyes will use the same line-up they used last week against Northwestern with Michele Conlon playing at No. 1, followed by Pennie Wohlford, Pat Leary, Kim Martin, Lisa Rozenboom, and Kathy Ruck.

The doubles teams will consist of Conlon and Wohlford at No. 1, Leary and Martin at No. 2 while Pam Moyer will join Rozenboom to play No. 3 doubles.

This weekend will be no picnic for the Hawkeyes as they travel to Minnesota and Wisconsin for a pair of conference dual meets.

Rugby club shuts out Purdue, 20-0

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

The UI Women's Rugby Club split two games this weekend in Bloomington, Ill., losing to Illinois State, 10-6, in the first game and blowing out Purdue, 20-0, in the second game.

Tanya Fry scored a try and then followed with the conversion kick for the only points in the first game. In the second game, Fry added another try and conversion. Diane Price, Gerry Steele and Jean O'Leary scored tries against the Boilermakers and Diane Bird scored a conversion kick to round out the scoring.

The UI Lacrosse Club also did not have a winning weekend at the Big Ten championships in Ann Arbor, Mich., after losing all three games — 11-9 to Illinois, 9-8 to Purdue and 7-1 to Michigan on Sunday.

"OUR MAIN PROBLEM" was that we were unable to produce any offense," Rick Schreuder said. "But our defense was outstanding — especially Ed Conrad, Jay McCormick, Chris Gibbs and Tony Locascio in the goal."

"About the only thing we did offensively was that Geoff Hawkins set an Iowa record for the shortest amount of time a goal was scored in after he got the ball in the net 30 seconds after the face off."

Iowa will be hosting the Michelob Invitational this weekend at the Field House field Saturday and Sunday with games both days at 10 a.m., noon and 3 p.m. Wheaton College of Wheaton, Ill., Wisconsin and Northern Illinois will be playing the round-robin tournament.

The UI ICE HAWKS held their first annual awards banquet at the Ironmen Inn Sunday night, giving out awards to players and receiving support for the program and for the building of a ice rink in Iowa City.

The Ice Hawks enjoyed their most successful season so far in their short history after winning their league with a 16-9 record. Iowa swept two games from Palmer College in the finals to win the title. The B team did not fare so well, compiling a 0-22 record, but winning two games against Knox College in non-conference play.

Trophies were presented to members of the A team by co-captains Steve Rosenbaum and Marc Drazner and to the B team by Dan Steuck and Tom Stewart.

The Most Valuable Player selected on the A team was Rick Trossman, who scored over 60 points in 25 games. Dave Anolik was selected as the B team's MVP after leading the team in scoring.

THE MOST IMPROVED Player on the A team award was given to Glen Calder. Along with Steve Rosenbaum and Trossman, Calder combined for 119 points in 25 games. Calder was the second leading scorer on the team.

Steuck was given the Most Improved Player for the B team after he came to be one of the most productive scorers on the team.

The Sportsmanship Award, given to a player whose attitude towards the Ice Hawk program demonstrates sportsmanship and dedication, was given to Chris Dolan, vice-president of the B team. Billy Vigdor was given the award for the A team.

"Sara Moeller, the vice-president of Student Senate, was very positive to what we are doing as a large group in student services," Vigdor said. "She said it appears we are well on our way to our goal of building an ice rink in Iowa City."

VIGDOR SAID that Al Cassidy, assistant director of Parks and Recreation of Iowa City, was "excited and impressed with the progress of the program."

"He has a background on ice rinks from Evanston, Ill., and the Crown Center there. He told us about the obstacles and stumbling blocks we would face," Vigdor said.

"But what he also said was that if the UI became more involved in the program, it could become more feasible to build a rink and that the Iowa City community would probably become involved, if there were other types of programs, such as ice dancing, youth hockey leagues and figure skating lessons."

Brian Weiler, a Student Senate senator, reiterated Moeller's speech, saying that the Student Senate would have a "change in attitude towards people working towards the community," according to Vigdor.

The Ice Hawks will be making their own college league with schools from Des Moines to Peoria. There will be an organizational meeting Thurs., April 25 in the Union. For more information about playing for the Ice Hawks, contact Vigdor at 353-8790 or Dan Seliger at 351-1143.

Sportsclubs is a Tuesday feature of The Daily Iowan. If you would like further information or results published about your club sport, call the DI at 353-8220 from 7-9 p.m. on Sundays and 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Mondays.

Tulane scandal returns to court

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Two Tulane University basketball players and two other suspects in a point-shaving scandal pleaded innocent Monday to sports bribery charges and then were ordered by the judge not to discuss the case.

NBA prospect John "Hot Rod" Williams and sophomore David Dominque, accused of accepting cash and cocaine to fix the results of two Metro Conference games in February, each pleaded not guilty to two counts of sports bribery and three counts of conspiracy to commit sports bribery.

Also appearing before Judge Alvin Oser were convicted bookie Roland Ruiz, 48, and Craig Bourgeois, 23, both of New Orleans. Each pleaded innocent to five counts of sports bribery and one count of conspiracy to commit sports bribery.

BOURGEOIS IS not a student at Tulane or an alumnus of the school, said his attorney, who refused to say whether his client has an occupation.

Oser gave defense lawyers 30 days to file motions in the case and granted a request by Williams' attorney that a gag order be placed on all parties — blocking them from discussing the point-shaving allegations publicly.

Later Monday, the Tulane University

Senate was expected to discuss a proposal by President Eamon Kelly that men's basketball be abolished at the school.

Kelly's recommendation came in the wake of eight indictments in the point-shaving scandal and the discovery that basketball Coach Ned Fowler and two assistants had paid some of the players in violation of NCAA rules. Fowler and the coaches have resigned.

African art series events continue with three films

Three films on African culture will be shown Wednesday and Friday in the UI Museum of Art in conjunction with the exhibition, "Art and Life in Africa: Selections from the Stanley Collection."

The film "Behind the Mask" will be shown at 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Made for the British Broadcasting Corporation by anthropologist David Attenborough, it is a film about the Dogon people of Mali, who are among the finest sculptors in the world.

ON SUNDAY AT 2 p.m. two films by award-winning African filmmaker Ousmane Sembene will be screened. The Museum of Art will show two of the first of his seven works, dating back to 1966 and 1969.

"Tau" focuses on the despair caused by Senegal's high rate of unemployment and the generational clash. Sembene tells the simple story of a young man in search of a job in Dakar. In the course of the quest, the decomposition of the ancient society is shown.

"Borom Sarret" is a 19-minute essay on the street life of a laborer in Dakar, Senegal. The title of the film refers to a cartman who provides for his family by transporting people and goods through Dakar's Shantytown.

Both films provide insight into the lives of workers in rapidly growing cities like Dakar.

Hancher swings with band sound in 'Miller Mood'

By John Loeschen Special to The Daily Iowan

FOR ALMOST two hours on Sunday afternoon, the swinging big band sound was back at Hancher Auditorium. The Modernaires and their 12-piece orchestra sang and played music "In the Miller Mood" with a style and verve that would have made Glenn Miller proud.

The band, fronted by Michael Traynor, a Modernaire since 1949, opened the show with "Tuxedo Junction," a slow-burning cooker filled with fat licks, changes into minor keys and great im-provisational solos from the sax and trumpet sections.

It was clear the band had come to play, and Bill Finnigan's arrangement of "Rhapsody in Blue," along with the difficult sax riffs and odd breaks in "St. Louis Blues March," set the pace for what proved to be a very swinging afternoon.

AT THE END of the bridge in "Little Brown Jug," the Modernaires, composed of Traynor, Paula Kelly Jr., Rich Maxwell and Steve Johnson, came out to provide a little vocal variety. Although the easy-listening hit "Sing" really didn't work when done in the swing style, the Modernaires clearly made up for it with original Miller hits such as "April in Paris," "Kalamazoo" and "Chattanooga Choo Choo."

The Miller Sound, frequently written by Miller as back-up music for vocal groups, was exploited to its fullest by the Modernaires. The balance between the vocalists and the band was exceptional.

There's no question that the Modernaires are a well-rehearsed outfit, although at times the tempo did slip and an occasional break was missed. This may have been partly due to Traynor and Johnson's attempts to sing and conduct the band at the same time, but also seemed to be caused by the fact that a swing band's small sections and carefully written arrangements won't let a musician hide in the music.

But the small problems aside, the Modernaires had everyone wishing they were "Stompin' at the Savoy." Judging from the audience reaction, it was clear that the big band sound was welcome at Hancher once again.

At the Bijou

A Day in the Country. This 40-minute film, made in 1936 by Jean Renoir, is based on a short story by Guy de Maupassant and tells about a young girl's sexual awakening during a family outing. At the Bijou at 8:30 p.m.

Seven Samurai. Akira Kurosawa's 1954 classic is shown here in its uncut, original version. The story concerns seven professional warriors who are hired to protect a 16th century Japanese village from annual attacks by bandits. At the Bijou at 7:15 p.m.

Television

On the networks: Spurred on by the Russians' launching of Sputnik, the American space program shifts into high gear in part three of "Space" (CBS at 7 p.m.). An evangelical minister schemes to get President Mansfield (Patty Duke) out of office on "Hail to the Chief" (ABC at 8:30 p.m.) and Johnny Cash schemes to kill his evangelist wife, Ida Lupino, on a memorable rerun of "Columbo" (WBHF-4 at 11:40 p.m.)

On Cable: Burt Lancaster and Peter Riegert have plans for plowing under a small Scottish fishing village to make way for a giant petroleum plant, but their plans go amusingly astray in Local Hero (HBO-4 at 12:30 p.m. and 12:45 a.m.), a wry and engaging little comedy. Its simple charms contrast glaringly with the bloated production values and oppressive style of Sydney Lumet's screen version of The Wiz (Cinemax-13 at 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.), a disasterously overdone musical with a truly terrible performance by its miscast star, Diana Ross.

Dance

The Dance Theatre of Harlem, under the direction of founder Arthur Mitchell, will present a program at Hancher Auditorium at 8 tonight featuring George Balanchine's "Concerto Barocco," the "Sylvia Pas de Deux" from the classical ballet "Raymonda," Glen Tetley's "Voluntaries," and a performance of Stravinsky's "Firebird," choreographed by John Taras.

Dance Theatre of Harlem presents its versatile artistry at Hancher

By Karin Hanson
Staff Writer

THE WAR IS OVER (thank goodness!) as far as the Dance Theatre of Harlem is concerned. The company has proven in theaters everywhere — from its 150th St. Harlem headquarters to a command performance for the Queen of England — that blacks can indeed dance ballet.

So it is with a new and brighter outlook that the 47-member company, directed by Arthur Mitchell, returns to Hancher Auditorium tonight and Wednesday to present two mixed-repertoire programs.

"We're no longer looking to prove that blacks can do ballet. We're past that," principal dancer Cassandra Phifer said. "We now want to promote ourselves as artists, and versatile artists at that."

The 16-year-old company has a repertoire of 80 works running the gamut in style from classical to modern to ethnic. Phifer said it is this diversity that has kept her at the DTH for all but four years since she first joined as a scholarship student in 1969.

THOSE FOUR YEARS began in 1973, when, at 17, Phifer took a leave of absence to pursue work with several modern dance companies. "My mother was a modern dancer; that had something to do with it I guess. But I figured I better taste all the desserts before I made my commitment," she said.

The dancer said those years away have had an effect on her work and have helped her grow as an artist. "Ballet dancers can be too stiff and modern dancers can be too loose. The best thing is to have a balance of the two."

One might wonder what keeps a person motivated to stay with one company for 14 years, but Phifer doesn't seem to have a hard time finding new challenges in her work.

"It varies with the seasons, but right now I'm very into dramatics. It's one thing to be a good technician and another to have the dramatics. But to do both at once — we're talking difficult," she said.

Phifer said she has a special fondness for the George Balanchine works included in the company's repertoire, one of which, "Concerto Barocco," will be presented on tonight's program.

nent member of the New York City Ballet. It began as a personal commitment to the people of Harlem following the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr.

A school, which now enrolls over 1,000 students from 31 states and 16 foreign countries, was established simultaneously with the company. According to Mitchell's plan, the DTH's training programs teach not only dance, but music, chorus, percussion, sewing, tailoring, stagecraft and administration as well.

Phifer attributes the DTH's success to the family spirit among the company members. "We're all brothers and sisters. If you think of (ballet) class as standing in front of a doctor naked, it's a lot easier to do when you're with family and friends," she said.

"When that spirit is there," Phifer continued, "you are free to experiment, to take a step farther."

AND WHAT DOES Mitchell see in the future for the company now that the battle to prove blacks can dance ballet has been won? In an interview with United magazine, he said, "I'd like to have two of every race and nationality in the company, like Noah's Ark. Each one has something special to give and I'd love to use it. You may start something for social reasons, but after a certain point, what you're striving for as an artist will outweigh anything."

Tonight's program of the Dance Theatre of Harlem will include, in addition to "Concerto Barocco," the "Sylvia Pas de Deux" from "Raymonda," Glen Tetley's "Voluntaries" and Stravinsky's "Firebird," choreographed by John Taras.

On Wednesday, the company will present Act II of "Swan Lake," choreographed by Fredric Franklin, Michael Smuin's "Song of Mahler" and "Caravansari," choreographed by Talley Beatty.
