Water-skiing ban may exempt exhibitions

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

Only select water-ski shows, such as a Fourth of July exhibition, will be allowed on the Iowa River by special permission, according to a proposal to be sent to the Iowa Conservation Commission from the Iowa City Council.

The council decided at its informal meeting Monday night to request the conservation commission adopt special rules for use of the Iowa River, including the prohibition of boats towing people on water-skis, surfboards or other devices between the Coralville

Milldam and the Burlington Street Dam.

Currently, City Manager Neal Berlin can grant or deny permits for use of the river by water-ski clubs. In the case of denial, however, the ski clubs can appeal to the conservation commission, which is mandated by Iowa law to authorize use of state rivers for events such as boat races or water-ski shows.

BECAUSE THE special rules would be adopted at the request of the city, conservation commission officials have said Iowa City police would have to respond to violations of the rules.

City Attorney Robert Jansen said, however, the city could be liable for not enforcing the rules in the case of an accident.

"There's always a concern that once you start to enforce the rules, it carries with it a duty to enforce," Jansen told the council. "If you don't enforce it and there's an accident, you could be held liable for not enforcing it."

Jansen also noted Coralville should adopt a similar city ordinance because part of the river is in Coralville's jurisdiction.

The city's Riverfront Commission had requested the city ask for a total prohibition on water-skiing, rather than allowing exceptions by special permission.

"Leave us the option of permitting the water-ski show on the Fourth of July," Councilor William Ambrisco said.

The Riverfront Commission had argued for the water-ski ban due to the passive use of the Iowa River and the possibility that water-ski exhibitions would disrupt other river users.

"The river in the summer is a beehive of activity," said Craig Willis, chairman of the Riverfront Commission.

He said it is an "eye opener" to see the number of people using the portion of the river bounded by the Coralville Milldam and the Burlington Street Bridge.

Don Clow, safety director for the Coralville Ski Club, told the council his hour-long ski show has never interrupted use of the Iowa River by other individuals.

Clow said the ski club sweeps the river prior to each performance in order to remove debris from the water. "We make it safer before we go out and we make it safer for others," he said.

Panelists discuss thwarting violence

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

Safeguarding against crime is a matter of "neighbor watching out for neighbor," according to Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller.

Miller was one of four panelists addressing the topics of self-defense, vigilantes and violent crime during a Monday night discussion sponsored by Riverfest in the Union Yale Room.

"When people ask what the Iowa City police are doing about crime, I tell them, 'Not a heck of a lot,'" Miller said. "By the time we get done unlocking your cars and tucking you into bed and giving you parking tickets — oh, and do we ever love to give parking tickets in Iowa City — there isn't a lot of time for fighting violence."

MILLER SAID the Iowa City Police Department has received 6,100 reports of major crimes so far this year. He went on to propose that estimates indicate only one-fifth to one-third of all crimes are reported.

"If these social scientists are accurate, Iowa City could actually be host to as many as 30,000 major crimes," Miller said.

The police chief emphasized alcohol is a contributing factor to most types of crime.

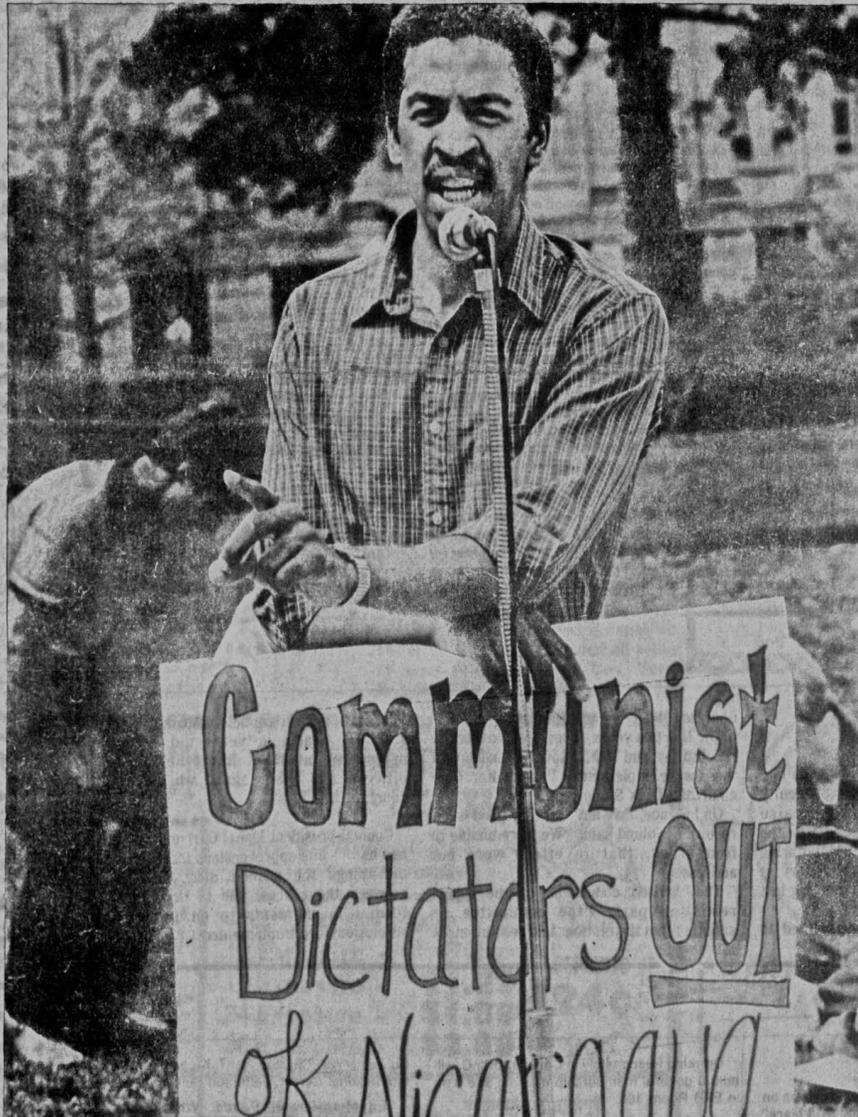

"I'm not here to give a temperance lecture; I just want you to remember four things," he said. "First of all, you have to know who you are; secondly, know what you are; thirdly, know where you are and lastly, know what to do."

Miller said Iowa's and Iowa City's crime rates are low when compared to other states, a fact he attributed to the area's "rural values." He added, however, the Iowa City police receive more calls than any other police department in Iowa.

K. MILLER, coordinator of the Iowa City Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said safety is "not so much a matter of police protection as it is a matter of looking out for yourself and your

Shouting heats Nicaraguan rally

Chief Reporter

An angry shouting match between a UI professor and a graduate assistant regarding U.S. aid to Nicaraguan rebels highlighted an emotional rally sponsored by the UI Maranatha Christian Fellowship Monday on the Pentacrest.

A press release announcing the rally stated a group calling itself the Ad Hoc Committee for Freedom sponsored the noon rally because, "We are tired and disgusted by the one-sided portrayal of the repressive Sandinista regime" ruling Nicaragua.

BUT UI DEAN of Student Services Philip Jones said the UI Maranatha Christian Fellowship organization was officially responsible for staging the rally.

An official listing of UI student groups states the purpose of the Maranatha Christian Fellowship organization is "to spread the news to all students that salvation is available only through Jesus Christ and that it is free for the taking."

According to the press release, however, the rally was held "to send a signal" to Iowa congressmen that "it is in the nation's best interest to oppose the establishment of Soviet satellite governments in Central America and around the world."

UI JUNIOR Kevin Ross, a Maranatha member, admitted a large number of the group's members attended the rally, but he maintained "it was not a Maranatha event."

"We wanted to voice a different opinion today. That is why we came out," said Ross, who, along with other Maranatha members, often appears on the Pentacrest to preach religious messages to passersby.

UI English Professor David Chamberlain opened the rally by speaking in favor of President Ronald Reagan's proposal to provide the Contras with $14 million in U.S. aid next year.

BUT HIS SPEECH was quickly interrupted by vocal protesters opposing U.S. involvement in Central America. Chamberlain and one of these protesters, UI History Graduate Assistant Tom Smith, stood toe-to-toe shouting at each other for nearly five minutes.

Chamberlain called the protesters "crude and obstructive," adding they displayed "the kind of tactics that Cuban and Soviet dictatorships represent."

URGING CONGRESSIONAL approval of U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, Chamberlain said, "The Contras represent democracy and a pluralistic society — not tyranny."

Smith said he interrupted Chamberlain's speech because, "I think it is very important that Americans speak out as powerfully as they can against American aggression in Nicaragua." Another protester, UI Central American Solidarity Committee member Bob Hearst, categorized the rally organizers as "a small, isolated right-wing religious cult who are afraid we'll be fighting Russians on the shore of the Iowa River tomorrow."

ROSS CRITICIZED attempts by protesters to disrupt the rally. He said these actions prove "the liberals only want free speech until it is something they don't want to hear."

During his rally speech, Ross accused Nicaragua's Sandinista government of oppressing the freedom of the country's citizens.

To illustrate his point Ross said, "Christianity supports freedom," adding, "the Sandinistas have destroyed over 100 churches" since they gained power.

"I don't even suggest that the Contras are angels," continued Ross. "But they have the right to defend themselves against the Soviet Union and Cuba."

ROSS ALSO WARNED that the Soviet Union and Cuba's influence in Nicaragua poses a threat to the security of the United States.

"If you can't see that the Soviet Union and Cuba are behind the Sandinistas, then you ought to open your eyes a little bit," Ross said. "The facts are simple. We are standing in the United States of America and there is not much standing between us and communism in Central America."

But a UI student from El Salvador, Mario Martinez, accused Ross of "disseminating disinformation and spreading lies."

"How can Reagan justify aid for the rebels in Nicaragua and not support the rebels in El Salvador?" Martinez asked. "Who gives the United States the right to tell what type of system we should have?"

UI FRESHMAN Noel Heller said he believes the rally's speakers were advocating the overthrow of the Nicaraguan government by using "fascist techniques."

Noting that more than 7,000 American military personnel are currently engaged in military maneuvers in Central America, Heller said, "I think that if public opinion wasn't as hostile as it is" concerning U.S. military involvement in the region, these troops would already be fighting in Nicaragua.

But Ross disagreed that public opinion opposes U.S. intervention in Central America. He said a recent poll conducted by the 700 Club — a Christian evangelical organization — indicated a large majority of Americans favor aid to the Contras.

"It's time for Americans to stand up," said Ross. "I am behind freedom and if it takes fighting for, I'll fight for it."

Freeway development may burden sewer system

By Greg Philby
Staff Writer

Although Iowa City officials welcome the possibility of more area development due to Freeway 218, the current sewer system may not be as accommodating.

"We've got a trunk sewer problem right now," said Dennis Gannon, assistant city engineer. "We've got some problems with it now getting near capacity. It handles quite a bit of stuff on the west side and a lot of land there is not even developed."

This is the second article in a five-part series examining commercial development in the Iowa City area.

Charles Schmadeke, director of public works, said the trunk sewer system that would take most of the added burden on the west part of town "is still in pretty good shape," but the city's sewage treatment plant remains overloaded.

The added burden may start following completion this summer of Freeway 218 which will pass on the west edge of Iowa City. The road, which runs northwest from Iowa City to the intersection of Interstate 80 and Interstate 380, has brought with it increased interest in developing the west side of Iowa City.

THE SEWAGE TREATMENT plant handles an average daily flow of 9 million to 10 million gallons of sewage, but the plant capacity has been set at 8 million gallons of sewage a day.

"The question is, we're over (the limit) now, and how much over can we go," Schmadeke said. The treatment of the waste remains efficient during the summer months, Schmadeke said, although the plant is processing more than its capacity. But during the winter months, "we have trouble meeting effluent limits."

The city has not yet found a way to meet the additional demands the development will place on the city's sewer system. But Schmadeke said several "available options" are being studied.

METCALF & EDDY INC., an engineering firm from Arlington Heights, Ill., has researched 13 alternative solutions and has selected three of the most favorable plans. The firm is currently studying the three plans and Mayor John McDonald said the city council should receive the results in four to six weeks.

The Iowa City Council will then choose which plan to implement.

Lawrence P. Jaworski, project manager of the firm, stated in the report, "The Iowa City wastewater collection system, like many other systems, has been used for purposes other than transportation of wastewaters," such as roof and foundation drains and the storm sewer

UI counselor cites financial woes, inability to cope as suicide factors

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

Stress related to financial difficulties and inability to cope with college life is on the rise among students and may be increasing the potential for suicide, according to UI officials.

Last Tuesday the results of an Iowa State University Office of Student Life telephone survey of 212 ISU students showed 50 students — about one in four of the total ISU population surveyed — responded "yes" to the question, "Have you ever felt so stressed that you felt that life was not worth living?"

If the same poll were taken at the UI, the results "would not be dissimilar to what they (ISU) found there — at least not significantly dissimilar," said Bruce Etringer, staff psychologist in the UI Counseling Service.

The overlap in similarities between the two universities is "much more extensive than the differences," he added.

THE ISU SURVEY also contained questions designed to measure levels of college-related stress and opinions about the economy, said Augustine Pounds, ISU dean of students.

She said the focus of the survey "has moved" to center around the suicide-related question, which is "part of my unhappiness about the publicity" the results have received.

She added further analyses of the survey results will be conducted, but declined to elaborate.

The main sources of stress reported

UI students may face having "their morals and values challenged by the university environment," says Bruce Etringer, staff psychologist in the UI Counseling Service.

by UI students who have sought help at the UI Counseling Service are worries about federal cutbacks in student financial aid, adjusting and coping to the university atmosphere and finding a job after graduation in a "tough job market," Etringer said.

"Some people react to the largeness — the logistics of the UI," Etringer said.

THE PRESSURES OF taking large class loads, being in large classes with a high student-to-instructor ratio and "getting classes and out in four years" can contribute to high levels of potentially lethal stress, Etringer said.

Many UI students who are from very small or very large communities "can't adjust to Iowa City" and students may face having "their morals and values challenged by the university environment," he added.

Of the UI students who have sought counseling, about 15 to 20 percent have reported seriously considering suicide as a result of one or a combination of these "stressors," the UI psychologist said.

"Spring seems to be a real busy time for us," Etringer said, explaining that many students experience "cabin fever" during the waning winter months and expect to feel better with the arrival of warmer weather.

IF THEY DON'T recover from the winter blues, some students may become depressed, Etringer added.

In the last five years, two suicides and 13 attempts have occurred at the UI, according to Patsy Porter of UI Campus Security.

ISU conducted its survey in an attempt to isolate the sources of stress after five students committed suicide in five months.

Eleanora "Betsy" Ross, founder of Ray of Hope — a support group for the families of suicide victims — said college students decide to take their lives when faced with the high expectations society places upon them to achieve while the "odds against accomplishing that are so great," she said.

According to Ross, pressure to take one's life builds when society "dangles the dollar sign in front of everybody."

"It's like being turned upside down, spun around and not pointed in any direction," she said.

Public hearing on block grants set

By Susan Stoga
Staff Writer

The Appropriations Committee of the Iowa House and Senate will conduct a public hearing at 12 p.m. April 25 in the State Capitol Building Room 116.

The hearing is intended to present information concerning federal block grants that will be received by the state beginning July 1, 1985.

The state will receive money from the Community Services Block Grant, federal Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Services Block Grant, federal Preventive Health Care and Services Block Grant and the Social Services Block Grant.

Members of the public wishing to comment on the grants will be allotted five minutes.

A work-study bill previously debated in the Senate Education Committee is currently under consideration by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Sen. Milo Colton, D-Sioux City, sponsor of the bill, said the measure still has a chance for passage this legislative session. The bill would widen the scope of the existing work-study bill.

"This is such a vital bill for the students of our state that I'm continuing to support it," Colton said.

If passed by the Senate Appropriations Committee, the measure would be brought before the Senate as a whole.

The Iowa House today is expected to take up debate on legislation calling for the divestment of state funds from corporations conducting business in South Africa that do not adhere to the Sullivan Principles — a set of human rights guidelines.

A similar measure was approved in the Senate earlier this month.

A presentation on a national tax program was presented to the Iowa House Monday by U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, said Gephardt presented the federal tax plan for the upcoming year.

Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, is currently working on legislation allowing the Iowa Development Commission to promote special interest organizations.

Lloyd-Jones said the commission would be able to promote establishments such as the proposed Iowa Institute of Peace or the Institute of State Governments.

The legislation is tied in with an appropriations measure on trade and transportation.

Democratic members of the House met in an informational caucus Monday afternoon.

Varn said the group agreed to pass all appropriations bills out of the House and Senate by Friday evening.

"It's going to mean a lot of extra work for all of us," Varn said.

Varn said the push to pass legislation will enable the legislature to review all vetoes or item vetoes made by Gov. Terry Branstad.

Teachers' aides plan picket at meeting of school board

By James Hintzen
Staff Writer

Teachers' aides, angered by alleged pay inequities within the Iowa City school system, say they will picket tonight's meeting of the Iowa City School Board.

A news release from Iowa City-Educational Support Staff Association, which is made up of teachers' aides from the Iowa City School District, state the picket is being staged to "protest the school district's refusal to conduct a comparable worth study and its refusal to settle the teacher aides' contract (negotiations) through binding arbitration."

Local teachers and school secretaries will also attend the informational picket, which is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. in the school board parking lot at 509 S. Dubuque St.

Iowa City currently employs approximately 88 educational aides, who assist with special education students, help teachers and monitor students in hallways, study halls and parking lots.

DAVID ULRICK, director of a local bargaining unit for school employees, claims the school board has failed to "follow the laws for collective bargaining and has ignored the whole concept of comparable worth."

"Our goal is to bring the attention of the board once again to the issues that are raised by this problem," he said.

The union, which has been at the bargaining table with the school board since October, did not reach a contract agreement by March 15, the date when the school board's proposed budget was due.

Ulrick said the teachers' aides "are requesting a salary raise comparable to what other bargaining units got."

The teachers' aides are asking for a raise of between 5.5 and 5.7 percent. The final offer from the school board would have resulted in a 3.6 percent raise.

SCHOOL DISTRICT officials say a comparable worth study would be difficult to complete in a short time frame. The school board's negotiator, Al Azinger, said, "The university has done a (comparable worth) study, and there's been some difficulty going on there. Everything we know about it suggests it's a complicated process."

Ulrick said school districts in Charles City and Sioux City have already completed comparable worth studies. "They found that secretaries and clerks were 10 to 15 percent undervalued," he said. "Educational aides were also undervalued."

The Public Employment Relations Board, a committee set up to oversee the collective bargaining process in Iowa, has ruled that a comparable worth study is a mandatory subject for bargaining.

Teachers' aides would have to work without a contract during the next year if PERB rules against holding binding arbitration hearings after March 15.

CBS rejects hostile takeover offer, files suit in U.S. District Court

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS Inc.'s board of directors Monday "firmly and unambiguously" rejected Ted Turner's $5.5 billion hostile takeover offer and filed suit against the Atlanta cable entrepreneur on grounds he violated state and federal securities laws.

CBS also said it is not considering a merger or stock recapitalization plan to fight off the Turner bid.

A spokesman for the network said the board determined that the Turner tender offer was "grossly inadequate and detrimental to the interests of CBS and its shareholders."

Turner must acquire at least two-thirds of CBS stock under New York takeover laws to achieve his objective of merging CBS with his own company.

The merger is vital to Turner's takeover plan because he plans to use CBS's cash to pay off shareholders who receive his securities. Turner is not offering cash in his offer, merely securities in the newly merged company.

CBS STOCK was up $3 to $110 a share in active trading at mid-session on the New York Stock Exchange Monday.

CBS filed suit in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, charging that Turner and his Turner Broadcasting Systems Inc. — the 24-hour cable news network based in Atlanta — had breached federal and state securities laws in statements made before the April 19 announcement of the takeover bid.

In Washington, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici proposed a moratorium on hostile corporate takeovers financed by "junk bonds" — a method similar to the one being used by Turner in his bid for CBS.

Domenici, R-N.M., said he would introduce legislation Tuesday that would bar use of the financing tool until Congress could review its effect on the economy.

Arrests of leader, four followers ends seige of Neo-Nazi campground

THREE BROTHERS, Ark. (UPI) — Federal authorities Monday arrested the leader of a paramilitary group and four followers, ending a four-day seige of a sprawling campground where Neo-Nazi survivalists prepared for the violent end of society.

Stephen Higgins, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said James Ellison, the founder and leader of the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord camp near the Missouri-Arkansas border, was arrested for numerous firearms violations.

Federal agents surrounded the camp Friday and since then have negotiated Ellison's peaceful surrender.

The others arrested were identified as Randall Evans and Thomas Bentley, wanted as fugitives in Seattle, and James Wallington and Jefferson D. Butler, also survivalists but who are not wanted on any federal warrants.

Ellison is charged with directing CSA members to produce illegal automatic weapons and silencers from 1981 to 1984.

FBI spokesman Ray McElhaneey during a news conference Monday said a search last weekend of two-thirds of the 224-acre paramilitary camp turned up items that link the CSA with The Order, a violent offshot of the north Idaho-based Aryan Nations Church.

The organization, closely tied to such anti-Jewish and anti-black groups as the Ku Klux Klan, believes non-whites and Jews should be separated from white Christians.

Columbia students defy court order

NEW YORK (UPI) — A judge Monday ordered anti-apartheid demonstrators at Columbia University to unchain the entrance to a classroom and administration building, but students vowed to defy the court order until Thursday.

"The door will certainly stay chained. We will be in contempt of the court order through Thursday," said David Kornacker, a junior at Columbia and spokesman for the protesting students.

The students said they would not end their 2-and-a-half-week-old protest against Columbia until Thursday, and then would "use other ways" to press their demands.

State Supreme Court Judge Burton Sherman said the doors to Hamilton Hall should be unchained for safety reasons. "While the evil policy of apartheid is an affront to human rights, the narrow issue here is one of public safety," he said.

Sherman said students will be allowed to demonstrate in a "designated area." He imposed no restriction on the conduct of the demonstrators.

The students have been protesting since April 4, demanding the university divest itself of $33 million of stock in companies that do business with the South African government.

The students plan to end their rally with a march to Harlem with supporters from the community and labor groups.

Ignorance of geography plagues students

DETROIT (UPI) — American students are so bad at geography that most of them cannot find Vietnam on the map or locate the African nations with starving multitudes, the president of the National Geographic Society said Monday.

Gilbert M. Grosvenor, who also is editor of the National Geographic magazine, said a University of North Carolina study showed 71 percent could not name one of the more than 30 countries south of the Sahara in Africa.

"We know about malnutrition but very little about where millions are dying," he told the Economic Club of Detroit.

IGNORANCE of Indochina's geography and ethnic rivalries caused the initial blunders of the United States in Vietnam, Grosvenor said.

"If ignorance of geography helped trigger our original involvement, what did we learn?" he asked. "Today, 95 percent of the incoming freshmen at a nearby college could not find Vietnam on a map."

Twenty percent of the students in a Dallas test put the United States in Brazil on the globe, 50 percent could not name the two largest states and 70 percent could not identify the two smallest, he said.

Grosvenor, speaking as the Association of American Geographers convened in Detroit, said the study of geography was lost in public schools when it was folded into the social sciences.

Iowa strives to implement law...

By Christine Lee
Staff Writer

Ever since the Iowa Legislature passed the comparable worth law in 1983, the state has been inundated with problems stemming from the legislation, which mandates employers "shall not discriminate in compensation for work of comparable worth between jobs held predominantly by women and jobs held predominantly by men."

Implementing comparable worth in Iowa has not been as easy as it looks on paper. Shortly after the law's passage, consultants were commissioned by the state to conduct studies on the worth of jobs held by state employees.

But the reports submitted by the consultants were judged to be of poor quality and the state Board of Regents decided last fall to conduct its own employee evaluations. The results of the regents evaluations had a two-fold purpose — to provide an estimate of how much it would cost to implement comparable worth and to provide an accurate point-count of jobs in order to make pay grade adjustments.

From surveys that regents employees claimed had to be hastily completed just before the Thanksgiving holiday, committees set up to evaluate comparable worth for the regents universities estimated that $5 million would be needed to correct existing salary inequalities between selected male and female employees at the three state universities next year.

BECAUSE EMPLOYEES complained they were not given enough time to complete accurate descriptions of their jobs on the surveys distributed last fall, the regents are in the midst of evaluating a second, more extensive batch of surveys completed in February. The results of these surveys will then be used to assign point-counts to jobs for the pay-grade scale.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which has been a strong advocate of comparable worth, has been charged by some with "bargaining away comparable worth" for state merit employees last fall. In an agreement with the state, it was decided that about 2,300 AFSCME-represented state workers would move down on the experience scale by one merit step. These employees had risen one pay grade the previous year.

All state merit employees are assigned a pay grade and a merit step that is awarded on the basis of seniority and longevity. Each grade and each step represents a difference in wages ranging from 4 to 5 percent.

Most of the 2,300 organized employees, in effect, received a pay freeze because their comparable worth pay-grade increase was canceled out by the merit step downgrade.

AFSCME AGREED to the arrangement for these workers — classified as underpaid — in order to avoid a wage freeze or cut for other employees it represents who were classified as overpaid.

Disputes have arisen in recent months over whether some 1,900 non-organized employees would also receive the same downgrade in merit as organized employees. Gov. Terry Branstad ordered a decrease in the pay grade of all non-organized state merit employees last month, and if the legislature decides to grant these employees an appeals process, it would break a 10-year state tradition of treating organized and non-organized employees alike.

Bills designed to resolve this dispute have been proposed and struck down in various legislative committees. The most recent bill was passed by the Iowa House earlier this month, and if approved by the Iowa Senate, it would prevent non-organized employees from being downgraded if their individual appeals are granted but leave the contract between the state and AFSCME intact.

AFSCME has reportedly agreed to support the bill as it moves to the Iowa Senate, where many lawmakers say they are optimistic that it will pass.

THIS BILL passed the House despite a report released by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights this month concluding that "comparable worth as a theory of discrimination or as a remedy for discrimination is profoundly and irretrievably flawed."

The report said there is "no legally certain, 'objective' way of comparing the value or worth of two different jobs." The commission also reported the Equal Pay Act of 1963 and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 already provide adequate remedies for pay discrimination and recommended "uncompromising enforcement" of the 1963 act requiring equal pay for equal work.

On the same day that the House passed the most recent comparable worth bill, the Civil Rights Commission decided on a 5-2 vote not to recommend comparable worth as a remedy to end pay discrimination against women. Commission Chairman Clarence Pendleton, a Reagan appointee, called the comparable worth concept "the looniest idea since 'Looney Tunes.'"

Since Iowa is one of the first states in the nation to enact a comparable worth law, how it is implemented and its effectiveness will be watched closely by the rest of the nation. Iowa's success with comparable worth may determine whether other states will follow suit and pass comparable worth legislation, or instead heed the recommendation of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

...while Britain lags on equal pay

By Elizabeth Grindrod
Special to The Daily Iowan

As one wave of feminism ebbs away in Britain, it appears the women's movement in the 1980s is becoming more concerned with bread-and-butter issues such as equal pay for equal work.

Women seem to be quietly moving into the system as they seek to climb the ladder of the male-dominated world of business and industry.

For the more successful women, equal pay is no longer an issue. A female computer systems analyst, for example, is valued just as highly as a male sales representative selling the computer hardware — and that sense of comparable worth is reflected equally in their pay checks.

But what about those traditionally low-paying "women's jobs" — cooks, clerks, secretaries? Can their jobs be compared to those of painters, carpenters or bus drivers and be considered of equal worth?

In Britain, as in the United States, the "comparable worth" issue is an important one, but Britain is following tentatively in America's footsteps.

Analysis

Five U.S. states, including Iowa, have adopted comparable worth policies for at least some public employees, according to a recent study by the National Governors Association, and 29 states are conducting studies on the issue.

DESPITE a U.S. Civil Rights Commission report that concluded "comparable worth, as a theory of discrimination or as a remedy for discrimination, is profoundly and irrationally flawed," the Iowa House and the Iowa Senate State Government Committee have both approved the comparable worth bill for Iowa.

But in Britain such committees or city councils are not willing to tackle the problem — in fact, reluctance shadows the entire issue. Last year the European Economic Community had to force the British government to accept an amendment to the Equal Pay Act of 1970.

It is the responsibility of the individual to make a discrimination claim through a complicated appeal procedure administered by the Equal Opportunities Commission. Each case goes to an industrial tribunal and the job in question is assessed in terms of skills, physical demands and decision-making.

Only one case has tested the amendment in Britain. In November 1984, a canteen cook won the right to pay parity with carpenters and heating engineers in the same shipyard, but her victory has not been taken as a precedent.

THE TRIBUNAL held that Julie Hayward's work at the shipyard, for which she received 99 pounds a week, was of equal worth and demanded equal skill and responsibility as the jobs of men in the shipyard who were paid 130 pounds a week. Hayward was apprenticed at the same time as her male colleagues, and argued that her cooking qualifications, gained after a four-year course, were the equivalent of the men's craft apprenticeships. But she received the weekly wage of a canteen assistant — 30 pounds less than her male colleagues in the yard.

The tribunal upheld the report of an independent expert who compared the jobs over a five-month period and judged Hayward's work to be of equal value. The Equal Opportunities Commission said it was greatly encouraged by this case, which challenged the traditional assumption that skills involved in male fields should be more highly rewarded than skills in female jobs.

But the Equal Opportunities Commission warned that the nature of the legislation meant future claims were not assured of success. Each case must be considered on its merits and usually faces an array of obstacles. Since the Hayward case, four more have passed the preliminary stage and about 60 are being prepared, but the commission expects thousands more in its wake.

Directory to give evacuation plans

PALO, Iowa (UPI) — Should an emergency occur at the Duane Arnold nuclear plant, residents of the Cedar Rapids area will soon be able to consult their telephone books for evacuation plans.

"While we don't anticipate an emergency, we want people to be familiar with our evacuation plan," said Dundeana Langer, public information coordinator at Iowa Electric Co.

"We suggest that area residents locate the instructions in their new phone books and take some time to read the plan."

The new telephone books with the evacuation instructions will be distributed during the next two weeks.

The evacuation plan divides the surrounding areas into seven zones. The instructions found in the Customer Guide Section of the telephone directory tell residents where the nearest regional shelter is located.

According to an official with the Iowa Electric Light and Power Co., the plan covers the communities of Cedar Rapids, Marion, Hiawatha, Alburnett, Atkins, Center Point, Covington, Palo, Robins, Shellsburg and Toddville.

Officials stressed the evacuation plan is just an added safety precaution.

The Duane Arnold nuclear plant is approximately sixty miles north of Iowa City, which was not included in the evacuation plans.

Brazilian president takes office

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — Jose Sarney was sworn in as Brazil's first civilian president in 21 years Monday as the body of president-elect Tancredo Neves was carried through the jammed streets of Sao Paulo and then flown to the national capital.

Sarney, the 54-year-old vice president who assumed Neves' duties when the newly elected president became ill in mid-March, officially became president for a six-year term in a ceremony at the Senate offices in the federal capital. He pledged "the legacy of Tancredo Neves will live on."

"I did not deserve this," were said to have been the last words of the 75-year-old Neves before he lapsed into a final coma last week.

His aides said Neves made the remark to his favorite grandson, Aécio Neves, a few days before he died of heart failure Sunday night at Clinicas Hospital in Sao Paulo. The president-elect had undergone seven operations in the last 38 days.

"There was widespread belief in Brazil that Tancredo Neves had not died of natural causes," Williams told the British Broadcasting Corp.

Williams, a former member of Parliament, said she had received a letter from a friend who is well-connected in diplomatic circles in Brazil, saying it was thought Neves was murdered.

"He was perfectly healthy 12 hours before his inauguration and then he was suddenly rushed into the hospital," Williams said.

However, an autopsy report released by Clinicas Hospital superintendent Guilherme Rodrigues listed a benign tumor, general infection and "lesions and failure in major organs" as the principal causes of death.

Neves, elected by an electoral college, was to have taken office on March 15. But the night before, he was taken to a hospital for emergency intestinal surgery and he never recovered from six subsequent operations and bacterial infections.

In Sao Paulo, thousands of mourners packed the streets applauding, shouting "Brazil, Brazil" and waving handkerchiefs as Neves' body was taken slowly through the city in a coffin placed atop a red fire truck — a Brazilian tradition for dignitaries.

A green, yellow and blue national flag draped the coffin, which was surrounded by bouquets of tropical flowers.

The cortege threaded its way slowly through the streets and arrived at the city's airport to a 21-gun military salute to Neves, whose body was placed inside an air force jet that flew to Brasilia.

Sarney, who supported the military regime until last year, and other leaders were on hand as the plane carrying the president-elect's remains landed at Brasilia's military air base.

Thousands of people lined broad avenues of the airy, futuristic capital to pay their last respects to Neves, whose coffin was taken atop an army troop carrier to the presidential palace in the center of Brasilia.

Neves apparently knew for weeks before his scheduled inauguration that he was suffering a serious ailment but insisted on trying to take office before treating it. Aides said he feared that any pre-inaugural infirmity might give the military an excuse to stay in power.

Leaders of all parties said they would support Sarney, although some jurists have questioned whether he should be allowed to stay in power automatically for Neves' full six-year term.

Analysts said no immediate political crisis was likely in the world's sixth most populous nation.

Neves is survived by his wife, Rosalita, and three children.

In Washington, President Ronald Reagan said he was profoundly saddened over Neves' "untimely demise" and named Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige to head the U.S. delegation to the funeral.

In a message to President Jose Sarney, Reagan said, "I would like to express my most profound condolences to you and the people of Brazil, at your great loss. My prayers, and those of Brazil's many friends in the United States, are with you as you take up your new responsibilities."

IN LONDON, the president of Britain's Social Democratic Party, Shirley Williams, said some Brazilians expressed doubts about the circumstances of Neves' death. She called for a full inquiry.

IN A BROADCAST address shortly after being sworn in as president, Sarney said, "Mine will be a government of concordance, of change, of hard work and morality and austerity."

AFTER LYING in state at the palace, Neves will be buried Wednesday at a small cemetery in his hometown, Sao Joao Del Rei.

Argentine junta leaders on trial

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Nine former junta members — including three ex-presidents — went on trial Monday on charges that their iron-fisted military regime was responsible for the torture and murder of 9,000 people over seven years.

President Raul Alfonsin ordered the trials shortly after his civilian government took power in December 1983 after a series of four military juntas.

The defendants, who said they would not appear in court and are not legally required to do so, face a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

The defendants include former president Jorge Videla, a retired army commander who led the overthrow of President Isabel Peron in 1976 and ruled until March 1981.

Videla's successor, retired army commander Roberto Viola, and ex-president Leopoldo Galtieri, who led the ill-fated Falkland Islands invasion in 1982, also are on trial.

Their respective air force and navy ex-commanders are being tried as well.

ABOUT 200 PEOPLE filled an oak-paneled courtroom for the trial in Buenos Aires. The proceedings were mostly businesslike, although defense attorneys entered their objections in angry tones.

In a park outside the court, about 500 human rights demonstrators gathered for a protest against the defendants.

A presidential investigatory commission concluded last year that 9,000 people disappeared during military rule from 1976 to 1983 when security forces, with complicity from the highest government levels, kidnapped people suspected of aiding leftist guerrillas.

The report said most of those who vanished were killed following their interrogation under torture.

District Attorney Julio Strassera, who is leading the prosecution, has said that in the interest of speeding the trial, he will concentrate on 709 specific disappearances and human rights abuses.

ALFONSIN'S REQUEST for summary court martials went unheeded by the military supreme court, which ruled last year it had neither enough time nor evidence to decide the cases.

The cases were then transferred to a civilian federal court of appeals. Defense objections that the transfer was unconstitutional were overturned last year by the Argentine Supreme Court.

The trials coincide with an increase in political tension in Argentina, where the economy has been battered by a burdensome foreign debt and an inflation rate of more than 850 percent this year.

Maronite rebels declare cease-fire in Sidon

SIDON, Lebanon (UPI) — Rebel Maronite gunmen Monday declared a unilateral cease-fire to halt a bloody month long artillery battle with Moslem militiamen, but police said a toddler was killed and 33 civilians were wounded before the fighting ended.

Maronite rebel chief Samir Geagea, in a news conference in Beirut, announced that his men would stop firing on Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut, from their positions in hillside villages to the east of the city. He also said his troops would be withdrawing today.

"We will meticulously abide by the cease-fire to give peace a chance," Geagea told reporters. "We will also withdraw those of our forces which had been sent to the region as reinforcements but the local armed villagers will stay and defend their lands and homes."

An estimated 90 people have been killed and 700 wounded in the Sidon area since Christian militia rebels began fighting with Moslem militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas on March 18.

The shelling came to a halt Monday one hour after the cease-fire deadline at 4 p.m. local time, Lebanese officials said.

"NOT A SINGLE shell has been fired into Sidon since and there has been no firing from the city center at the Christian villages," a police officer said. "Things are easing but they still have trouble on the front lines."

In the hours before the cease-fire took effect in Sidon, hospital spokesmen said the back-and-forth shelling killed a 3-year-old and wounded 31 other civilians.

After the deadline, scattered fighting was reported still rocking the front lines separating rebellious Maronite Christian "Lebanese Forces" militiamen from Moslem gunmen and their Palestinian allies.

The pro-Israeli Lebanese Forces rebelled against President Amin

Gemayel, also a Christian, on March 12 in a dispute over his Syrian-oriented policies and began fighting with their Moslem and Palestinian rivals six days later.

Moslem leaders have called the Lebanese Forces pawns in what they charge is an Israeli plot to stir up enough fighting in order to frighten Christians in the Moslem-dominated area to flee south to the Israeli border. There, they could become a buffer between Israel and its Moslem enemies in Lebanon.

But Geagea has charged the Palestinian and Moslem forces with starting the fighting.

A day like any other?

Wednesday, April 24, 1985. UI administrators settle down for a relaxing noon-hour lunch inside their offices at Jessup Hall, prepared to escape for just a moment the day-to-day pressures of running a university.

But wait — today a minor annoyance threatens to impose on this peace. The president observes from the window of Room 101 that a bunch of those crazy kids are at it again, walking around with signs about South Africa. He beckons his supportive underlings.

He calls to his associate vice president for finance, the one who has been taking a lot of the recent flack about divesting UI funds from corporations doing business in the apartheid country. "What's the meaning of this?"

"We're lucky," she tells him. "On some college campuses they're holding full-scale student strikes today. Thousands of them protesting ..."

The administrators peer out at the some 100 protesters surrounded by a few observers and a large number of disinterested students making their way to class. They realize the sign-waving students are simply using the "political forum" they so often tout as a student benefit of the university setting, but it's irritating that today's protest will bring that pesky issue into the public mind again.

"Don't they know about the divestment bill?" asks the vice president for finance. He is quite content with the recent watered-down Iowa Senate legislation calling for divestment of state funds from corporations that don't comply with the Sullivan Principles, because it means the UI wouldn't have to divest much of its stock. Wouldn't it figure these students won't be content until the UI divests all its South Africa holdings, which could make potential donors too mad to hand over the green stuff?

"Always wanting more — they want us to make a statement against racism and prejudice, but I keep telling them we can't. The neutrality argument isn't going to work much longer, especially since other universities are divesting."

"Thank goodness they're not a majority on this campus," the president mutters. "Do you think one of you should go down there?"

"There's not much we can say that we haven't said before," his advisers tell him. "We could just tell that reporter from The Daily Iowan to use one of our earlier statements."

"Maybe we should commend the students for having the sense not to take part in the disruptive activities going on at other campuses," another vice president suggests.

"Or maybe we should just ignore it and let it blow over like all the other protests."

"There's certainly not enough of them to take over the office," the president says, closing his curtains and preparing to go back to work.

"True. And our lunches are getting cold."

The memory medicine

Many human rights causes compete to claim our attention and our hearts, to the point that even the most caring among us sometimes become inured and forgetful. Newspapers' press release files brim with announcements for commemorative weeks and days. Many are worthy; but in a class by itself, demanding our most passionate attention, was the Holocaust remembrance observed last Thursday.

It is unique because of the horror of the genocide of 6 million Jews and others. Something on that grand a scale provides the ultimate example of the evil of which our species is capable. Looked at in this way, it is almost shocking that every American did not wear a black arm band that day.

As Jewish leaders admonished all last week, we must never forget. And remembering entails much more than dragging out some sad survivors for talk shows once a year. It means actively educating youth on that period of history. It means facing the difficult images in films and books about the Nazi persecutions. It means honoring the liberators. It means taking a hard look at signs of bigotry and sadism that exist today, which history has shown can blow up into full-scale genocide.

All this may seem obvious, and it should not need repeating. But apparently it does. First, our own president seems to think that 40 years is long enough to hold a grudge against certain sectors of a the German population. But 40 years is nothing. Even 400 years should not obliterate the memory of the Holocaust.

Second, the Jews were not the sole victims of the Holocaust. Homosexuals, Poles, communists, intellectuals and the mentally and physically disabled were also among those butchered and tortured by the Nazis. In other words, when genocide happens, it could happen to any group different from the perpetrators.

Third, not only sick, sadistic people supported the Nazi regime. The vast majority of people who get involved in such violent fringe movements are scared and riled, not evil. The neo-Nazi now being held in Missouri is an extremist who portends a real racist movement closeted in this country.

Finally, how many young people are being taught about the Holocaust? As Mary Tabor wrote on this page last week, many students think the Vietnam era is ancient history. How much more so with the Holocaust. Every high school should require a course on it; every college should offer films and seminars on the subject. And other groups besides Jewish groups should commemorate it. It isn't morbidity. It is preventative medicine for humanity.

Roses are nice, but raises nicer

By Diana Rock

THIS WEEK secretaries (traditionally women) and their bosses (traditionally men) all across the country are observing National Secretaries Week in traditional ways.

Radio stations will sponsor contests for the boss who can come up with the best reasons (in 25 words or less) that his secretary-clerical worker-gal Friday is the best in town. And florists from Kennebunkport to Cucamonga will make an early seasonal killing on the roses, daffodils, peonies, hyacinths and other botanical tokens of esteem and appreciation bosses will give to secretaries.

By the following week, the flowers will wilt and things will be back to usual. Or will they?

Probably not. For even as the traditional observances of traditional workplace role models are played out in offices across the country, the nature of working America is changing, and the issues employees are concerned about are changing, too.

IT ALL STEMS from one major factor: In the past 25 years, the number of women who work has doubled from about 23 million to more than 50 million. More and more, they are working out of economic necessity; more and more they are the sole earner in the household. And, as a result, more and more they are saying, "Yes, roses are nice. But raises are nicer."

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees represents about half a million working women across the country. Just as women have established themselves in ever greater numbers in the workplace, so they have established themselves in the leadership of our union.

Women's issues are an important part of the job AFSCME does for its 1.1 million members in almost every state in the union. These include legal and bargaining battles for pay equity; office stress; career ladders; childcare; sexual harassment; and responses to the new technology that is fast creating a totally new environment in offices everywhere in the country.

Video display terminals are increasingly common in offices. Nearly 10 million VDTs are now in use. But there are problems. The officeplace of the future shouldn't be like the assembly line of the past.

There are major health problems that have been linked to VDTs: aches and pains in muscles and joints from poor work station layout and repetitive work; job stress from monotonous work; lack of control over tasks and excessive work load; vision problems; and possible health hazards due to low levels of radiation given off by VDTs.

AFSCME has bargained for guidelines on VDT safety, including advance notice before VDTs are introduced in the workplace; consultation with labor-management committees before new technology is placed in the office; proper training standards; monitoring health and safety effects of VDT terminals on operators and union access to technical information regarding equipment purchases, alternative designs, operation and maintenance.

The problem of exposure to toxic substances in the office may be made worse by new energy-saving building designs and techniques. Many of these new office buildings are poorly ventilated.

Formaldehyde has been found to cause cancer in test animals. Skin, nose and throat irritation can result from handling carbonless paper treated with formaldehyde.

Ozone from copiers and other office machines causes headaches and drowsiness. It can also irritate the eyes and affect the respiratory system.

Solvents used in cleaners, rubber cements and some copiers can irritate the eyes and skin, damage the nervous system or cause respiratory problems.

Sexual harassment has been a common, recurring problem of working women for decades. Surveys have shown that the majority of working women have been victims of sexual harassment at some time during their careers.

In most cases, the victim is in a no-win situation.

If a victim does not give in, economic retaliation is commonplace.

If the situation becomes intolerable, frequently the victim quits the job.

Sexual harassment can have devastating psychological effects.

If the victim submits, the worker may be fired anyway because of potential embarrassment to the harasser.

AFSCME has developed specific programs to aid victims of sexual harassment and to prevent the problem. Language in many AFSCME contracts provides steps to protect the victim and punish the offender. In addition, union programs have been developed that frankly and openly discuss and document real or potential problems at the worksite.

Union-sponsored "career ladder" programs can provide more equitable opportunities for entry-level employees to move up to better-paying jobs. Career ladder programs for working women provide additional training for long-term, dead-end workers.

Union-sponsored career development programs help to ensure its members will have the opportunity to advance in reasonable steps to higher-level jobs while they continue to earn their regular salaries. In the career ladder program:

- Jobs are linked in a series of promotional sequences.
- Employees move directly up or laterally through jobs that are related in skill and knowledge.
- The steps between jobs are close together to make it easier to progress.
- Training and basic education related to the steps on the career ladder are offered on work-release time.

Successful career ladder programs prove that lack of opportunity, not lack of ability or motivation, has kept low-skill and low-wage women workers from advancing.

With increased participation in the workforce by working mothers, child-care has become a major union issue in the 1980s. Employer/employee-sponsored child care services are becoming more prevalent in the public sector.

AFSCME has been a leader in efforts to win child-care provisions in its union contracts. For example, a landmark contract negotiated by AFSCME's affiliate in New York provides on-site day-care centers for working mothers. Presently there are more than 400 child care centers in this country that are sponsored by state and local government agencies.

Ugly, dirty words

To the editor:

If you happened to read my column titled "A bunch of trolls," which appeared in the most recent issue of The Campus Review, you'll know that it was laced with the tenderest affections for the lost sheep of American feminism.

Natalie Pearson's animadversions on it in The Daily Iowan, then, are quite unfair — quite unchivalrous, if you want to know the truth (DI, April 8).

The whole point of the column was that the mind is an erogenous zone, something perspicacious men have known all along. And, to the extent that a woman lets her mind be nourished by foolish and destructive ideology, the poor thing, by some alchemy, will be disfigured. And, inasmuch as ideological feminism is almost exclusively an American phenomenon, it follows logically that American women, pound for pound, will be the world's ugliest. That, now, is a private aesthetic judgment, and it is made in the full realization that there are scores of millions of American women who are not ugly.

Returning to Pearson's column, I can find only one sentence that makes sense: "The word feminist is fast becoming a dirty word for many otherwise intelligent, thoughtful people."

Indeed it has, and reality asserting itself is always charming.

An act of Will

To the editor:

Dear Hoyt Olsen:

I have just read your review of your good friend's play. I am glad you know Will Shakespeare so well. Could he get me a job? (DI, April 12.)

Why did you leave Tom Moseman out? He created some truly frightening moments on stage, and was less charming than the others that you mentioned. And why didn't you talk about Michael Hacker's Albany? He is certainly important to the play and his stage presence as usual was brilliant. As for Michael Barto, I didn't have problems with his articulation. And Sly Stallone does have a unique voice. Isn't that important in acting? As for Deborah Bremer, I thought her reconciliation scene was touching. That is a demanding scene and both Deb and Paul were very believable.

I think Mark Fite did a good job. It makes sense that the Fool would kill himself. He has nothing left after Lear goes mad, so there is no course left but for him to end his life, too.

So, Hoyt, give my regards to Will. The audience seemed very moved and touched Wednesday night. And wasn't your good buddy writing mainly for the audience? Why don't you brush up on your Shakespeare?

Plans to establish area Institute of Peace stalled

By Susan Stoga
Staff Writer

Plans to establish a National Institute of Peace near Iowa City have been temporarily halted after the federal government delayed the appointment of a national peace institute board.

Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, founder and state chairwoman of a steering committee to explore locating the Peace Institute in Iowa, said President Ronald Reagan is delaying the appointment of 15 members to a national committee because federal legislators have added amendments to the bill establishing the institute.

"The president was to have submitted a list of nominees for Senate approval by the 20th (of April), but he did not do so because of the addition of an amendment to add another member to the board," Lloyd-Jones said. "There is also another recommendation that the Secretary of State be the permanent chair of the committee."

Jean Lloyd-Jones

BECAUSE OF the amendments, Lloyd-Jones said final appointments to the national board could take several weeks or months.

The Iowa committee, however, decided at its second meeting Monday to move forward with plans to lobby for the establishment of the National Institute of Peace in Iowa.

"Even if we are passed over for a national institute, Iowa is the most logical place in the world to locate an institute of peace," said committee member and former Iowa Gov. Robert D. Ray. "It's really much better to have an institute (of peace) here in Iowa because it is not on the East Coast and it hopefully won't be absorbed into the bureaucracy of the federal government."

Lloyd-Jones said the peace institute would tentatively be located somewhere between Iowa City and Cedar Rapids and work in conjunction with the UI.

"The University of Iowa is the ideal place to have a peace institute to be centered by," Lloyd-Jones said. "(The UI) has always offered a multitude of multi-cultural programs as well as foreign language classes. It would truly be a place for higher learning."

"THE IDEALS AND goals of the university and the stated objectives President (James O.) Freedman has set for the university makes the University of Iowa an ideal location" for the peace institute, said committee member Marvin A. Pomerantz, president of the Mid-America Group.

In addition to utilizing the UI, Lloyd-Jones said the committee is attempting to enlist the services of the Hoover Presidential Library in West Branch as a possible resource for the institute.

"Many diplomats may come here to do research and the library would be a great asset to the institute," Lloyd-Jones said. "Anyone using the library would have an inter-library loan with other presidential libraries."

"With the Hoover Library being in such great proximity to the UI and the future institute, it would enable participants to do research," Pomerantz said.

THE STATED OBJECTIVE of the peace institute is to provide ongoing courses in history, culture, religion and the language of major world communities, the art of negotiation and conflict resolution. The institute would also operate an international communication network to supplement that of the CIA and State Department and design alternative strategies of settling international disputes.

Although Lloyd-Jones said she is unsure of Iowa's chance to be named as a location for the institute, she said the committee is "doing everything they can to make sure the (national) committee knows that Iowa is very interested in this project."

The committee, currently consisting of 18 members from across Iowa, has formed into budget and planning committees to facilitate planning for the institute. Members of the steering committee include Lt. Gov. Robert Anderson, Freedman and Gilbert Cranberg, former UI professor of journalism.

SECRETARY OF STATE Mary Jane Odell said, "When I was asked by Jean (Lloyd-Jones) to serve on the committee, I said, 'Yes, yes, yes, what better a cause to have in Iowa?'"

"Iowa is so down to earth," she said. "The people understand that peace is the underlying issue in everything... we're also very pragmatic, extremely industrious, close to earth and we have a high intelligence rate."

Odell said the committee is "extremely hopeful" the peace institute will be located in Iowa.

"When you see many people who are as busy as the members of this committee are, who have so many other things to do, put this much time in a project, it has a great chance to succeed," she said. "It's a grassroots organization that is going to go to the top."

Senate leaders disagree on Contra aid compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican and Democratic leaders met for more than eight hours at the White House Monday but failed to agree on a compromise to salvage at least part of President Ronald Reagan's request for $14 million in aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

Senate Majority leader Robert Dole told reporters after the marathon meeting in the Cabinet room, "We're still not there. We don't have a consensus. We don't have an agreement."

He said the GOP and Democratic leaders would "take a look" at each other's revised proposals and possibly meet again this morning before the Senate convenes to vote on the aid.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said, "I feel upbeat about the prospects," but, "I agree with Sen. Dole no agreement was reached."

"On some points I think we were moving together," Byrd said.

HE SAID that in the last half hour each side came up with a revised proposal.

"It's obvious we were not able to reach full agreement tonight," Byrd said. "We hope to resolve this thing ..."

"We've done our best," Byrd said. He added that the Democratic proposal recommends that there be a cease-fire, a resumption of bilateral talks between the United States and Nicaragua, $14 million in "humanitarian aid" and that the cease-fire and aid be monitored.

While the so-called humanitarian aid would be limited to funding needed medicine and food for the Contra rebels, it would allow the Contras to divert their limited funds away from these areas into other military needs, such as guns and ammunition.

Dole said that the administration preferred the CIA handle the distribution of the humanitarian aid.

He said that Reagan was consulted during the deliberations, although he was not in the room and there were still some sticking points.

The administration still is urging that it should be the rebels, not the United States, that would negotiate with the Sandinista government.

neighbors."

She added police foot patrols through the downtown area and programs such as RVAP's "Whistlestop" are "good deterrents ... but, at the same time, we don't want women to think having a whistle on their key chain is the answer. I only wish it were that easy."

According to Karla Miller, most assailants look for three things in their victims — availability, vulnerability and accessibility. "I tell women to do whatever they can to reduce all of these variables," she said.

While both Harvey Miller and Karla Miller said protecting oneself often depends upon physical force, the Rev. Sheldon Burkhalter of the Iowa City First Mennonite Church said he is "totally opposed to violence as self-defense."

"I WILL NEVER use violence toward another individual," Burkhalter said. "I believe in the sanctity of life and I believe in God ... I view life as an entity that goes beyond what we know as life here on earth. My church, the Mennonite Church, is a church of peace and that is the attitude I maintain in my personal life."

Burkhalter said rather than physical force, he prefers "the weapon of reason."

"When I see a case, just as the (subway vigilante) Bernard Goetz case, I ask myself what is it this person needs in his life," Burkhalter said. "I, rather than hating an individual who is violent, ask what can be changed in this person's lifestyle to make them a better and more loving person."

HARVEY MILLER said although he would like to live in a culture like the one Burkhalter described, he realizes "that's not ever going to happen, at least not on this earth." He encouraged, instead, the use of expanded education in the area of personal safety.

"There are a lot of myths out there about what citizens and cops should and shouldn't do," Harvey Miller said.

He continued: "Police officers, excluding those on TV, are not very gun happy. Most of us couldn't even hit a mule in the ass with a shovel for that matter. Police aren't the answer. The answer is people looking out for people."

Sewer

system. He said this constitutes the major problem in overloading Iowa City's sewer system.

CITY OFFICIALS SAID the sewer, although needing work, should not interfere with development.

"Obviously, with the economic climate the way it is, things aren't happening overnight," McDonald said. "Even if we are fortunate enough to attract someone or if a local business expands, the capacity is still there. The problem is during heavy rains, but obviously it isn't a daily occurrence."

The engineering firm stated the new treatment facilities would not be completed until 1990.

The condition of the west side trunk systems make a sewer treatment plant "not needed in the near future," Jaworski stated in the report. "Development in the southeast is more critical as the existing system is operating at capacity and land development projects have been proposed."

THE SEWER PROPOSALS, in general, include improving the existing wastewater treatment site, building a new facility south of Iowa City on Sand Road or in that area, south of the Heinz lift station on the east side of town, or a combination of those alternatives.

Currently, the west trunk line runs along Highway 1 to just west of Sunset Street. It follows the path of Willow Creek as it winds through the residential neighborhood.

If development schedules are ahead of sewer improvements, another option could be to extend the trunk line out at least to Mormon Trek Road, which would increase the sewer capacity.

"IT SEEMS TO ME those sewers are about half full so there is quite a bit of development that could occur out there," Schmadeke said.

Before the trunk line could be extended, the property would need to be annexed by the developer, he said.

"But we probably won't see any trunk sewer construction in this town until something is done with the existing sewage treatment plant," Gannon said.

But city officials said it is difficult to gauge the condition of the system.

Sewers "have peak times when they have more in them," Gannon said, such as early morning when people shower and later in the evening. This makes it difficult to measure the demand on the sewage system.

Schmadeke said each business and industry will vary in how much they add to the sewer, "plus each development is an incremental impact. Each is minimal by itself, but as they multiply, they have a major impact."

Iowa sweep could open door to third-place seat

Softball

Defending Big Ten champion Northwestern stands between the Iowa softball team and sole ownership of third place in the league.

The two Big Ten teams will battle this afternoon for the first time this season in a doubleheader beginning at 3 p.m. at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

The Hawkeyes are coming off of an impressive weekend against Michigan State. Iowa lost the first of a four-game series against the Spartans before taking the next three. The Hawkeyes' record now stands at 7-5 in the conference and 15-15 overall.

DESPITE TAKING three of four games from Michigan State, the Hawkeyes are currently in fourth place in the conference. Michigan which had a bye last weekend remains in first with a 7-3 record. Indiana swept a four-game series against Minnesota to hold onto second place with a 10-4 record. Northwestern gained sole possession of third place by winning four games against Ohio State over the weekend.

The Wildcats shutout Ohio State in three games, 10-0, 10-0, and 8-0 and won the fourth game, 14-2.

The Hawkeyes are only one game behind Northwestern in the league making today's confrontation a must-win situation for both teams. Iowa needs to win both ends of the doubleheader to take over third place. A split with the Wildcats would keep the Hawkeyes in fourth, Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish said.

"The Big Ten race is really up for grabs this season," Parrish said. "Whoever wants to take charge and play some good ball is going to win."

THE WILDCATS won the league title

last season with a 17-4 record in the conference and an overall mark of 42-17. Northwestern took the Big Ten championship by riding the hot arm of pitcher Lisa Ishikawa.

But this season Northwestern and their star pitcher are struggling, Parrish said.

"They're always tough," the Iowa coach said. "But they were struggling a little in the beginning of the season."

Earlier in the season the Wildcats lost three out of four games to Michigan, who is currently sitting in first place in the league. "They're definitely beatable," Parrish said. "If we put everything together, we can take two from Northwestern."

To beat Northwestern the Hawkeyes will need to generate consistency from their offense, Parrish said. "If we can stay up for both games, we will win."

THE IOWA COACH added the Wildcats have strong pitching again this season but the Northwestern pitchers have also had their ups and downs.

Ishikawa rewrote several records last season and was named the freshman Big Ten Player of the Year, along with being selected to the first team All-American team. But this season she has been plagued by tendonitis.

The sophomore from Stockton, Calif., pitched 302 innings for the Wildcats last season but this year shares the pitching duties with Kathy Tawse, who sat out last season with an injury.

Ishikawa's record stands at 13-5 for the season and Tawse is currently 7-5. Despite her injury, Iowa pitcher Tracy Langhurst expects Ishikawa to be tough today. "She's got a good rise and throws it quite often," Langhurst said. "She's also pretty fast."

The Iowa pitcher added that facing someone like Ishikawa will motivate Iowa's pitching staff. "I think we'll rise to the occasion," she said.

Comiskey celebrates 75 years of baseball

CHICAGO — When Comiskey Park — home of the Chicago White Sox — received a fresh coat of paint before the weekend's home opener, one observer noted, "with the amount of the paint on the park was there any steel left underneath?"

There must be some, as the "baseball palace of the world," — the nation's oldest active ball park — begins its 75th season.

"It's a tie to yesterday, a shrine to a bygone era, and an American sports landmark," the Sox 1985 media guide reads.

Charles Comiskey purchased land at 5th and Shields from the estate of Chicago's first mayor John Wentworth. He then arranged a committee to study plans for the park.

BIG ED WALSH, the White Stockings ace pitcher, was one of the members on that committee.

Walsh wanted a spacious outfield and the original dimensions were 362 feet down the foul lines and 420 feet to dead center field, definitely a "pitcher's paradise."

It opened its doors on July 1, 1910, as Walsh was ironically the losing pitcher, 2-0, to the St. Louis Browns.

During the first decade Comiskey Park was host to three consecutive World Series in 1917, 1918 and 1919.

The Sox played in the '17 and '19 — the year of the famed Black Sox scandal — and the other Chicago team, the Cubs leased the building for the 1918 championship.

The first major change of the edifice occurred after the 1926 season.

BECAUSE OF OVERFLOWING crowds during this Ruth and Gehrig era, the original wooden bleachers were torn down and replaced with steel, while the outfield was double decked. The seating capacity jumped from 35,000 to 52,000.

Babe Ruth hit the first homer over the Comiskey Park roof. Only 31 players have equaled that feat, with Sox slugger Ron Kittle doing it five times.

In 1933, Comiskey was the site of the first All-Star Game and 50 years later the "Golden Anniversary All-Star Game," was played. The American league won the first contest, 4-2, and repeated with a 13-3 rout in 1983.

It could never be said that the Sox were afraid to experiment.

Over the 1967-68, an artificial turf was installed only in the infield. It returned to the natural sod in 1975. Also to tailor to Sox' hitmen, the infield was moved eight feet closer to the outfield in 1982-83.

While the park has its traditional flavor, the "new" is also present.

A full-color Diamond Vision scoreboard, still equipped with fireworks that explode when a Sox player plays long ball, and 33 super-suites give the park some touches of today's modern facilities.

"All ballparks should look like this," Sox' pitcher Tom Seaver said. "Modern parks are too antiseptic. You come here and it feels like baseball. It has history and character."

In spite of its changes and renovations, Comiskey Park remains as a park built exclusively for baseball.

Dave Snedeker, a forward on the Iowa men's basketball team, practices a jump following the instructions of New York native Edward Vilella, the most celebrated male ballet star in America, during a movement session with Iowa athletes Monday afternoon in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Vilella has been involved in dancing for 40 years.

Ballet star helps Hawks with dance

By Melissa Rapoport
Assistant Sports Editor

Two seats away a woman whispered, "God, that was beautiful," summing up the sentiments of the athletes involved in Edward Vilella's movement session Monday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

As a member of the New York Ballet, Vilella, probably one of the most celebrated male ballet dancers in America, demonstrated through hand and body movements the similarities of dance and athletics to about 30 Iowa athletes.

"Moment-to-moment it may seem kind of strange that a dancer is teaching athletics..." Vilella said. "It's a question of the approach of physicality. There are considerable similarities, but our approach is more formalized."

"OUR FUNCTION IS to make the unnatural look natural and the difficult look easy."

It was not a typical dance class with bar work and dance jargon. Vilella introduced dance through the athlete's understanding. "The best thing about Vilella was the way he related to athletes at their level," Lisa Steffen, a former dancer said. "For instance, instead of using the technical terms, like plie, he said, 'knee bend.'"

Ironically, Vilella, once a collegiate welterweight champion, took up dance after a serious baseball injury. When the Bayside, New York native was knocked unconscious at the tender age of 10, his parents sent him to his sister's ballet class, hoping it would serve as a safer outlet for his natural athletic talents.

BUT IN A society where ballet is often separated from athletics, it would be fair to say all dancers are athletes, but not all athletes are dancers. Vilella, who directed and produced a show featuring athletes and ballet dancers said, "Dancers dance all of the time; athletes dance some of the time. Athletes just don't realize when they're dancing."

In the show (professional tennis player) Virginia Wade reached towards an imaginary ball on her backhand side and it looked exactly like a reach in ballet," he said.

After speaking to the athletes for about an hour, Vilella invited them to participate in a short "ballet for athletes" session.

During the half-hour "class," he offered tips to basketball player Jolynn Schneider on how to increase her vertical jump, used basketball player Dave Snedeker in demonstrating how to stretch back muscles, helped gymnast Wendy Hussar with spotting when doing pirouettes, and helped cheerleaders Bill Ajram and Anita Williams with lifts.

THE TALK SESSION and on-floor demonstration left the athletes inspired, giving them reason to believe dance could enhance their athletic performance. "I liked it, I really did," Schneider said. "It was very interesting. He presented his material very well. I've always been told to lift weights to help my jump. He told me something I have never been told before."

Vilella believes a derivative of ballet could be taught to athletes on a regular basis and guarantees it would make the athletes better performers. "It would be beneficial, but what you would have to do is find the similar principals in both dance and athletics — it would be smart and healthy."

In fact most of the athletes believed ballet lessons would be beneficial if implemented into their athletic programs. "I think it would be beneficial," Schneider said. "I think if they made it mandatory, though, the athletes may feel closed in, but if it was optional, I think they would enjoy it."

WILLIAMS AND Ajram, who both cheered for the women's basketball team, believe dance should definitely become integrated into athletics. "I think it's important for athletes to take dance," Williams said. "It gives you general awareness of your body and of space."

"It's really important for coordination," Ajram said. "You really wouldn't believe how many athletes are uncoordinated."

With such an extensive background of dance and athletics, Vilella has found a "theatrical" beauty in athletics. "To watch someone make an incredible catch is great," he said. "To see someone throw a no-hitter is not exciting to me, but to see someone make an incredible catch — that takes finesse. It's beautiful."

NFC Central coaches trade barbs, quips

Mike Ditka

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bud Grant got a warm, albeit sarcastic, welcome back to the coaching ranks of the National Football League's NFC Central Division Monday along with two real rookies to the division.

Grant has returned to the head coaching job of the Minnesota Vikings after taking a year off. He was in Chicago Monday along with Mike Ditka of the Bears, Forrest Gregg of Green Bay and first-year men Darryl Rogers of Detroit and Leeman Bennett of Tampa Bay to discuss the division's strengths and weaknesses.

Grant, who coached the Vikings for 17 years before giving up the reins to Les Steckel for last season, was late for the meeting. Gregg, for one, said jokingly he wished Grant wasn't showing up at all.

"I WISH HE was still out fishing,"

Gregg said when Grant showed up for the meeting. "He always seems to get the best out of what he's got."

Ditka promised, "We'll try to give Bud some tips and bring him along slowly."

Ditka returns not only as the dean of NFC Central coaches going into his fifth season with the Bears, but also as the coach of the defending champions. Chicago won the NFC Central Division with a 10-6 record in 1984.

Ditka said the Bears, who have the 22nd pick in the first round, need to draft for help on the defensive line, the secondary and at the running back position, where Walter Payton is entering his 12th season.

"Walter is not going to run forever," Ditka said. "We're not desperate at any area. We don't want to take a second or third-round player in the first round just because we need somebody at a particular position."

GREGG IS GETTING ready for his second season at Green Bay after seeing the Packers go 1-7 in the first half of 1984 and 7-1 in the second half.

"We sort of had two seasons," Gregg said. The good second half, he said, "gives you a feeling that things are really ripe and moving in the right direction."

Gregg also refused to be pinned down on what the Packers will do with their draft choices. He admitted his team is looking for a quarterback to go along with veteran Lynn Dickey and backup Randy Wright, who is recovering from an injury.

Gregg said he liked what he saw in Vince Ferragamo, the former Los Angeles Rams quarterback who worked out with the Packers at their mini-camp. But, "now we have to see if we can make a deal for him."

ROGERS, THE former Arizona State and Michigan State coach, admitted he knew little about his new club other than their 4-11-1 record for 1984.

"You can't tell anything from films and three days (of mini-camp) in our underwear in Tampa," Rogers said. "There is no question that the big question mark is whether (running back) Billy Sims will recover (from an injury)."

Bennett is the new man at Tampa Bay after spending six years with the Atlanta Falcons and going to the playoffs three times with them.

"We need another running back to use with James Wilder in a two-back set," Bennett said of the 6-10 Buccaneers. "On defense, we need to start thinking about bringing some young guys along behind Lee Roy Selmon (at right end)."

Barnett to take cage job at Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — J.D. Barnett resigned as basketball coach at Virginia Commonwealth Monday to accept the same position at Tulsa, school sources said.

The Richmond News-Leader and sources at Tulsa confirmed Barnett's resignation at Virginia Commonwealth. He replaces Nolan Richardson, who resigned as coach at Tulsa April 9 to go to Arkansas.

Barnett was to be introduced at Tulsa today. His VCU squad was the Sun Belt Conference champion last season. They were ranked as high as No. 11 last season and were the No. 2 seed in the NCAA West Regional.

Barnett told the News-Leader he was taking the Tulsa job because of "more money and better job security." Sources told UPI Barnett will sign a five-year contract with Tulsa, but a dollar figure was not available.

Barnett apparently told the newspaper that he would accept the job if he could bring Virginia Commonwealth assistant Coach Dave Hobbs with him. Hobbs, who handled recruiting and other coaching duties, was promised a position in Tulsa's Development Department, Barnett said.

Before going to Virginia Commonwealth, Barnett coached Louisiana Tech for two years and was named Southland Conference Coach of the Year in his second season.

There were reports earlier in the day that as many as four people were under consideration for the job. While president J. Paschal Twyman said he hoped a selection would be made before the banquet, picking the right coach was more important than a deadline.

Some of the names that cropped up regarding the job included Gene Bartow of Alabama-Birmingham, Gary Williams of Boston College, Lynn Archibald of Utah and Murray Arnold of Tennessee-Chattanooga. Tulsa assistant Coach Bob Spivey did not interview for the job.

Bears' Hampton will miss training camp

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dan Hampton, a seven-year veteran defensive tackle for the Chicago Bears, will not be available until the first regular season game this year because of off-season knee surgery, Bears' Coach Mike Ditka said Monday.

It will take him that long to recover fully from the surgery, he said. "Dan is very valuable to our team and really is the glue that holds our defensive line in place," Ditka said. "He is a very important part of the defense. We need to be careful with him."

On the good side, Ditka said both quarterbackbacks Jim McMahon and Steve Fuller are healthy and played during recent Bear workout sessions. "You don't know what happens when he has contact," Ditka said of McMahon, who suffered a lacerated kidney and missed the last six games of the regular season and the two playoff games. "But he looked good."

White Sox reactivate right-hander Dotson

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago White Sox Monday activated starting pitcher Richard Dotson and put reliever Al Jones on the 15-day supplemental disabled list.

Dotson was scheduled to pitch Monday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Dotson had some inflammation in his right elbow during spring training and was not brought up with the club from Sarasota, Fla. He made two minor league appearances in Florida before being brought up.

Jones, 1-0 with a 1.80 ERA in four appearances this season, had pain in his elbow after pitching against Boston Sunday.

Struggling Hawks take on 9-9 Bulldogs

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

Drake and Iowa are two women's tennis teams that have suffered through tough seasons. Today at 1:30 p.m. in Des Moines, one team will be able to ease the frustrations a bit with a win.

The Bulldogs, coached by Mark Wesslink, have a 9-9 record this season but is a bit misleading. "We don't play anywhere near as tough a schedule as Iowa plays," Wesslink said. "You'd have to say Iowa is the favorite going into the match."

Last fall, the two teams met in Iowa City and the Hawkeyes came away with an impressive 7-2 win. But Iowa Coach Charley Darley says it an entirely different team he is taking to Des Moines this afternoon.

Charley Darley

"WHEN WE BEAT them we had (Jenny) Reuter and (Jennifer) Forti in the line-up," he said. "We're a much different team now. I have a hard time trying to figure how each individual match might come out."

Darley has already ruled sophomore co-captain Kim Martin out of the meet. "Kim has some nerve damage in her shoulder," the first-year Iowa coach said. "It's really hard to tell how long she'll be out of action."

Wesslink believes the loss of Martin could make the meet much closer. "If Kim Martin doesn't play, I really think the meet will go down to the doubles," he said. "We have good players in the top three but we've had problems at the bottom."

Martin said Monday that her shoulder is feeling much better. The Solon, Ohio native is hopeful that she'll be able to return to action for the Indiana meet on May 1.

THE HAWKEYES should have the services of Lisa Rozenboom for the meet. The Oskaloosa, Iowa native missed last weekend's meets at Minnesota and Wisconsin with strep throat.

But Drake isn't without problems.

Tennis

"Jean Letner, who played at the top for us in the fall, isn't playing this spring," Wesslink said. "She's injured and had to miss the entire season."

The Hawkeyes are coming off a rugged trip which saw them losing two matches. Darley doesn't believe his players will have any problem getting back up for another meet. "We talked about the positive finish we had at Minnesota on Sunday," he said. "I'm hopeful they'll go out and play with a lot of pride because Drake is an in-state rival."

THE BULLDOGS WILL be led by former Hawkeye player, Rachel McClelland. The Ankeny native played her freshman year at Iowa before transferring to Drake, where she has developed into the Bulldogs' No. 1 player.

"Rachel has been playing real well for us," Wesslink said. "She is the most predictable, steady player we have."

Ice Hawks find home in new conference

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

The UI Ice Hawks are one step closer to gaining support for an indoor ice rink in Iowa City after the Midwest Collegiate Hockey Association was formed last week.

However, because of the lack of ice in Iowa City, the team will be moving its home rink to Waterloo.

Bradley University, Cornell College, Drake University, Grinnell College, Palmer College of Chiropractic Medicine, Knox College and Loras College will be the other schools competing in the first season next fall. The league will be based in Iowa City due to the fact that it is centrally located among the member schools.

DAN SELIGER from Iowa will be the president, Cornell's Keno Ruth was elected vice-president, Mike Dahms from Palmer was elected secretary and Bradley's Kevin Schmalty was elected treasurer.

There will be 16 conference games on the A level between Bradley, Drake, Iowa A and Palmer. Non-conference games will be played against University of Wisconsin-Platteville.

The B league will include teams from Grinnell, Cornell, Loras, Iowa B and Knox. There is a tentative schedule of 10 games for the B league because of insufficient funds from the smaller colleges.

The main problem confronting the Ice Hawks is a lack of recognition in the Iowa City area. Iowa City has no indoor ice skating facilities and the club played all their games last year in Dubuque.

The ultimate goal of the club is to establish the league and hopefully move up and play against the likes of Iowa State and Northwestern, members of the Central States Hockey League.

The club is looking for any players interested at any level. There will be a meeting on April 25 at 8 p.m. in the Union. Elections will be held. For more information contact Billy Vigdor at 353-8790.

The Hawkeye Soccer Club beat The Connections, a team of Iowa City high school players, 2-1, Sunday morning.

"IT WAS A beautiful game to watch," Raul Curto, president of the Hawkeye Soccer Club said, "because both teams played high-quality soccer with good passing. It took a great effort on our part to overcome their marking scheme and solid defense."

Curto said his club won because of good midfield play during the first half, but that The Connections never gave up and "kept threatening our goal until the very end."

Jose Aguayo and Andre Borgeuc scored goals for Iowa. Next week the club faces C.R. United in Cedar Rapids.

The Hawkeye Tae Kwon Do Club brought home 11 trophies last weekend from the Central U.S. Open Tae Kwon Do championship in Lincoln, Neb.

IN TOURNAMENT competition, there are two types: form competition and fighting competition. In form competition, the competitors are judged according to style, power and technical proficiency. The fighting competition is free sparring — light contact for below black belts and full contact for black belts.

John Treangen finished third in white belt fighting. In the yellow belt division, Eddie Grazier took third in forms. Scott Steele took third in fighting and Kent Peterson took second in forms.

Greg Walters swept first in forms and fighting and Dirk Quayle took third in the brown belt division in forms and fighting.

Linda Logan finished third in forms in the black belt division and Bob Logan took first in forms and fighting in the black belt division.

THE HAWKEYE Tae Kwon Do Club works out Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in Room 5515 of the Field House. For more information contact Linda and Bob Logan at 351-5256.

The UI Rowing Association will be holding their only home spring season meet Thursday against Washburn University. Iowa will be competing against the Knickabocker from the Park Street bridge to the Union bridge. The club will be competing in the Midwest Rowing Championships Saturday in Madison, Wis.

It's that time of year again for the annual Frisbee Golf Tournament. Play begins Sat. April 27 at 11 a.m. at the Coralville Reservoir. Entries can be picked up at the Field House office in E216. They must be turned in by April 25 at 5 p.m. For more information, call Rec Services at 353-3494.

In rugby action over the weekend, the Iowa rugby A team won, 8-0, over Northern Iowa Saturday afternoon. Opie Altman and Pinkie Floyd each had tries for the winners in the shutout of the Panthers.

On Sunday, the B team had a wild contest with the Iowa City Ruffians. The match ended in a 16-16 tie as Lon Britt, Greg Spontac and David Deiemer all had tries for the B team. Britt also added two conversions.

Sportsclubs is a Tuesday feature of The Daily Iowan. If you would like further information or results published about your club sport, call the D1 at 353-6220 on 7-9 p.m. on Sundays and 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Mondays.

Grant unsure of Kosar situation

CHICAGO (UPI) — Don't ask Minnesota Vikings Coach Bud Grant about the Bert Kosar situation because he just doesn't know what's going on.

At a meeting of National Football League NFC Central Division coaches Monday, Grant at first pretended not to hear questions about Kosar, the University of Miami (Fla.) quarterback coveted by the Vikings and the Cleveland Browns. Then he admitted he was in the dark as much as everyone else in the league.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle is expected to issue his decision Tuesday on the Hurricane quarterback's draft status.

An NFL spokeswoman said Rozelle did not intend to call a news conference, but would release a statement sometime during the day from the league's New York offices.

"I AM AS CONFUSED as you are about what is going to happen," Grant said. "It's up to the commissioner to decide whether he needs a verbal or written commitment. The only thing he (Kosar) didn't do is sign a letter."

Kosar, who still has two years of college eligibility left, has verbally declared himself eligible for the draft because he will have enough credits to graduate in June.

But Kosar has not signed the official statement that he is eligible. Under current rules, he cannot be drafted by the Vikings, who have the first available pick in the April 30 draft.

Kosar could end up in a supplemental draft, which is for players who somehow miss the regular selection process. Unfortunately for the Vikings, the Cleveland Browns have the first pick in the supplemental draft.

"The commissioner must decide if he is available in the draft," Grant said.

"The supplemental draft is for players not selected in the regular draft," Chicago Coach Mike Ditka said. "I shouldn't be used as a loophole. The teams pay the commissioner to make these kinds of decisions and we need a decision."

Grant said the Vikings are willing to discuss what will probably be an expensive contract with Kosar.

"It is an investment in an asset (a quarterback) that is probably the most valuable asset you can have in a club," Grant said.

Olympic trials limit U.S. jumpers

ATLANTA (UPI) — Jim Howard, one of America's best high jumpers, didn't compete in last summer's Olympic Games and he thinks the qualification rules should be changed before the '88 Olympics.

"I made the '80 team, which was an honor even though we didn't get to go to Moscow," said Howard, who jumped a U.S. indoor record 7 feet 8-1/2 inches this winter. "But I was sick during the trials for the '84 Olympics and unable to perform as usual."

"There I was, winner of both the indoor and outdoor Grand Prix, had even set a record, and because I wasn't feeling well at that particular time, I failed to qualify for Los Angeles."

"FOR THE FIRST time, I knew how some of those good jumpers who didn't make our '80 team felt," said Howard. "I'd only jumped 7-3 back then and there were several who were more deserving to be on that team than I was. I really didn't belong on the team at that time. But I made it through the trials when some of those who had done a lot better than I had before didn't do as well as they should have."

Howard, who competes for the Pacific Coast Club, has his sights on the '88 Olympic Games in Korea. He's 25 now and figures his prime jumping years are immediately ahead.

"But no matter how high I go, no matter what records I might set, whether or not I get to Seoul will depend on how I perform during the U.S. Trials that summer," said Howard. "You could be an 8-foot jumper (the world record is 7-10) the rest of the year, but if you don't have one of the best jumps at that particular time, forget it."

HOWARD, WHO has cleared close to 7-10 in practice, feels the United States would assure itself a stronger team if it took other things than just its Olympic trials in consideration when picking the '88 team.

"They could use some sort of point system for events leading up to the trials and then, maybe, qualify part of the team that way and round it out with the trials themselves," said Howard. "Maybe they could even designate several of the pre-trial meets as ones whose winners would qualify for the Olympic team."

"That way, they'd have a better chance of winding up with people who have proven themselves over a considerable period and not make the trials the sort of gamble they now are.

"We see it at a lot of meets," he said. "Performers, for one reason or another, are way off their norm at a particular meet. But the really good ones stand out over the long haul."

HOWARD PROVED HIS point Sunday at the Martin Luther King Jr. Freedom Games at Emory University in Atlanta. He won the high jump — beating Dwight Stones and Dennis Lewis, co-holders of the U.S. outdoor record of 7-8 1/4. But he did it with a jump of only 7-3 1/4.

"It shows you what can happen," said Howard, who during a Saturday practice cleared 7-0, 7-4 and 7-7 before raising the bar to 7-9 1/4 — and making that on his second try.

"I really felt I had a shot at the American record Sunday," he said. "I really felt great (after the 7-9 1/4 jump). In retrospect, that might have made me expect too much."

After clearing 7-3 1/4, an inch and a half better than Stones or Lewis could do, Howard had the bar raised to 7-7 1/4

— and missed all three times.

"AFTER THE WAY I had jumped the day before, I didn't think that would be any trouble," said Howard. "I should have taken it in steps. I should have tried 7-5 and 7-6 first. Then there might have been more rhythm in my jumping."

Stones, who qualifies at 31 as the dean of high jumpers, will tell you practice does not necessarily make perfect.

"You can spend too much time training in this event," said Stones, who won his first Olympic medal back in 1972 and who was rated the best high jumper in the world a decade ago. "It's just a waste of time. Concentration is what's most important — whether you are high jumping or driving a car."

"I prefer to believe that the practice session got me ready for the meet," countered Howard. "But it turned out to be hotter (85 degrees) than I had expected, so, figuring I might have only 50 many jumps because of the heat, I waited until the bar got up over 7-3 before I made my first jump."

"It's still very early in the season," said Howard. "There'll be plenty of more chances."

Langer seeks to continue streak

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — West Germany's Bernhard Langer is after gold and goals on the PGA tour. And he's doing pretty good in both categories.

He's had jackpots of $126,000 and $72,000 in the past two weeks, in the Masters and Sea Pines Heritage Golf Classic. That boosted his American earnings to over a quarter-million dollars — and he says he's just getting started.

"I hope to be in the winner's circle many times," said Langer after Sunday's playoff victory over Bobby Wadkins in the Heritage.

So, he's off to another challenge — the Houston Open this week in Texas — hoping to duplicate another Gary Player feat.

The 27-year-old Langer became the first golfer since Player to follow up a Masters win with another victory the following week.

PLAYER WON THE Tournament of Champions after his Masters triumph in 1978 and then went on to win the Houston Open in the following week to make it three PGA wins in a row.

Langer obviously has that feat in mind, too. Leading the Heritage by one stroke at the start of the final round, he officially entered the Houston Open before he teed off Sunday.

Wadkins was two strokes behind going into final round and shot a 68 to tie Langer's 70 score for the day's effort. The combined totals matched at 11-under-par 273.

In the playoff, Langer parred the first hole and watched the frustrated Wadkins miss a 12-foot putt for a bogey that once again kept him winless on the PGA tour.

LANGER WANTED to show fellow golfers and the American public that his victory in the Masters was "no fluke."

But he was somewhat irked that he had to prove it, after officially joining PGA tour this year with a string of European victories.

"They should know it already," he said of his winning credentials.

For Wadkins, the 33-year-old younger brother of Lanny Wadkins, it was another disappointment in his 11 years on the tour, another "victory" that eluded his grasp, like the sudden-death loss to Lou Graham in the 1979 Philadelphia Open.

"I feel I played well enough to win," he said, while congratulating Langer as a "great champion" who deserved his victory.

His putter was his "main enemy" Sunday, Wadkins said, adding that he came close on several birdie chances, but just couldn't sink them during a string of 12 consecutive pars.

But he has seen improvement in his game after working hard to correct defects that have kept him a loser.

"If I continue to swing as well as I have this week," Wadkins said, "I will win soon."

Award-winning poet Olds to read from recent works

By Kathy S. Kyte
Special to The Daily Iowan

Poet Sharon Olds will give a reading of her work tonight at 8 in the English-Philosophy Building Room 304.

Olds' second book, The Dead and the Living (Alfred A. Knopf), was the Lamont Poetry Selection of the Academy of American Poets for 1984 and won the National Book Critics' Circle Award for poetry in that year.

The book begins with poems honoring the dead, moves into poems recalling childhood, and concludes with poems celebrating love, marriage and children. This excerpt is from "35-10":

Brushing out my daughter's dark
silken hair before the mirror
I see the gray gleaming on my head,
the silver-haired servant behind her. Why is it just as we begin to go
they begin to arrive, the folds in my neck clarifying as the fine bones of her hips sharpen? ...

Marilyn Hacker called Olds' first book Satan Says (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1980) "a daring and elegant first book. This is a poetry which affirms and redeems the art."

Olds has received National Endowment for the Arts and Guggenheim fellowships, as well as a grant from New York state. Her work has twice been included in The Pushcart Prize: Best of the Small Presses (1981 and 1982) and is anthologized in The Norton Introduction to Poetry.

Olds received her Ph.D. from Columbia University and has taught at Sarah Lawrence College and New York State University.

Tonight's reading is free, and the public is invited.

Iowa sweep could open door to third-place seat

By Jill Hokinson

Softball

Defending Big Ten champion Northwestern stands between the Iowa softball team and sole ownership of third place in the league.

The two Big Ten teams will battle this afternoon for the first time this season in a doubleheader beginning at 3 p.m. at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

The Hawkeyes are coming off of an impressive weekend against Michigan State. Iowa lost the first of a four-game series against the Spartans before taking the next three. The Hawkeyes' record now stands at 7-5 in the conference and 15-15 overall.

DESPITE TAKING three of four games from Michigan State, the Hawkeyes are currently in fourth place in the conference. Michigan which had a bye last weekend remains in first with a 7-3 record. Indiana swept a four-game series against Minnesota to hold onto second place with a 10-4 record. Northwestern gained sole possession of third place by winning four games against Ohio State over the weekend.

The Wildcats shutout Ohio State in three games, 10-0, 10-0, and 8-0 and won the fourth game, 14-2.

The Hawkeyes are only one game behind Northwestern in the league making today's confrontation a must-win situation for both teams. Iowa needs to win both ends of the doubleheader to take over third place. A split with the Wildcats would keep the Hawkeyes in fourth, Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish said.

"The Big Ten race is really up for grabs this season," Parrish said. "Whoever wants to take charge and play some good ball is going to win."

THE WILDCATS won the league title

last season with a 17-4 record in the conference and an overall mark of 42-17. Northwestern took the Big Ten championship by riding the hot arm of pitcher Lisa Ishikawa.

But this season Northwestern and their star pitcher are struggling, Parrish said.

"They're always tough," the Iowa coach said. "But they were struggling a little in the beginning of the season."

Earlier in the season the Wildcats lost three out of four games to Michigan, who is currently sitting in first place in the league. "They're definitely beatable," Parrish said. "If we put everything together, we can take two from Northwestern."

To beat Northwestern the Hawkeyes will need to generate consistency during their offense, Parrish said. "If we can stay up for both games, we will win."

THE IOWA COACH added the Wildcats have strong pitching again this season but the Northwestern pitchers have also had their ups and downs.

Ishikawa rewrote several records last season and was named the freshman Big Ten Player of the Year, along with being selected to the first team All-American team. But this season she has been plagued by tendonitis.

The sophomore from Stockton, Calif., pitched 302 innings for the Wildcats last season but this year shares the pitching duties with Kathy Tawse, who sat out last season with an injury.

Ishikawa's record stands at 13-5 for the season and Tawse is currently 7-5. Despite her injury, Iowa pitcher Tracy Langhurst expects Ishikawa to be tough today. "She's got a good rise and throws it quite often," Langhurst said. "She's also pretty fast."

The Iowa pitcher added that facing someone like Ishikawa will motivate Iowa's pitching staff. "I think we'll rise to the occasion," she said.

Comiskey celebrates 75 years of baseball

CHICAGO — When Comiskey Park — home of the Chicago White Sox — received a fresh coat of paint before the weekend's home opener, one observer noted, "with the amount of the paint on the park was there any steel left underneath?"

There must be some, as the "baseball palace of the world," — the nation's oldest active ball park — begins its 75th season.

"It's a tie to yesterday, a shrine to a bygone era, and an American sports landmark," the Sox 1985 media guide reads.

Charles Comiskey purchased land at 35th and Shields from the estate of Chicago's first mayor John Wentworth. He then arranged a committee to study plans for the park.

BIG ED WALSH, the White Stockings' ace pitcher, was one of the members on that committee.

Walsh wanted a spacious outfield and the original dimensions were 362 feet down the foul lines and 420 feet to dead center field, definitely a "pitcher's paradise."

It opened its doors on July 1, 1910, as Walsh was ironically the losing pitcher, 2-0, to the St. Louis Browns.

During the first decade Comiskey Park was host to three consecutive World Series in 1917, 1918 and 1919.

The Sox played in the '17 and '19 — the year of the famed Black Sox scandal — and the other Chicago team, the Cubs leased the building for the 1918 championship.

The first major change of the edifice occurred after the 1926 season.

BECAUSE OF OVERFLOWING crowds during this Ruth and Gehrig era, the original wooden bleachers were torn down and replaced with steel, while the outfield was double decked. The seating capacity jumped from 35,000 to 52,000.

Babe Ruth hit the first homer over the Comiskey Park roof. Only 31 players have equaled that feat, with Sox' slugger Ron Kittle doing it five times.

In 1933, Comiskey was the site of the first All-Star Game and 50 years later the "Golden Anniversary All-Star Game" was played. The American league won the first contest, 4-2, and repeated with a 13-3 rout in 1983.

It could never be said that the Sox' were afraid to experiment.

Over the 1967-68, an artificial turf was installed only in the infield. It returned to the natural sod in 1975. Also to tailor the Sox' hitmen, the infield was moved eight feet closer to the outfield in 1982-83.

While the park has its tradition flavor, the "new" is also present.

A full-color Diamond Vision scoreboard, still equipped with fireworks that explode when a Sox' player plays long ball, and 33 super-suiters give the park some touches of today's modern facilities.

"All ballparks should look like this," Sox' pitcher Tom Seaver said. "Modern parks are too antiseptic. You come here and it feels like baseball. It has history and character."

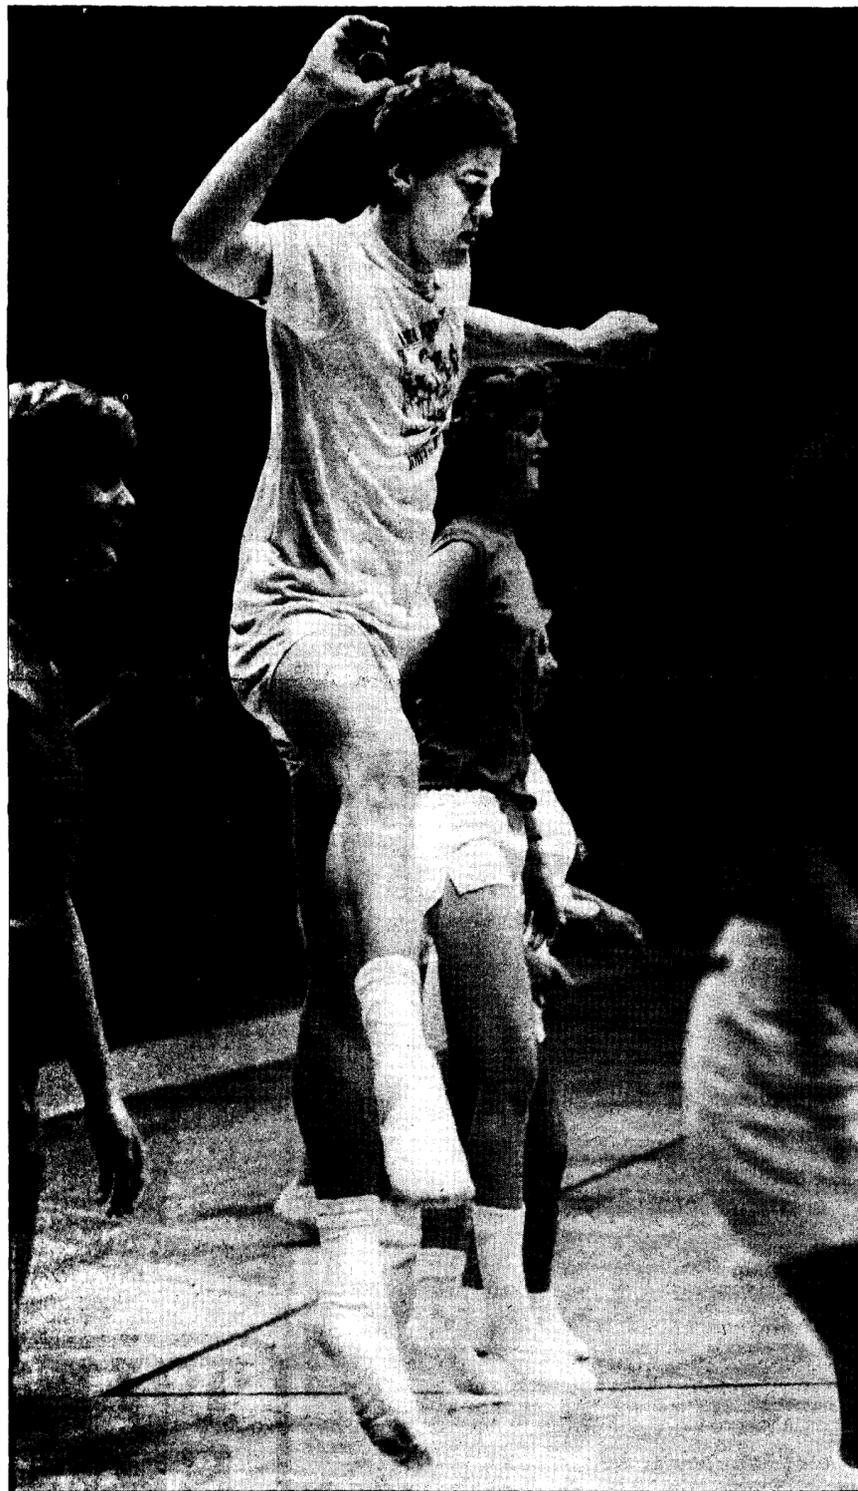

In spite of its changes and renovations, Comiskey Park remains as a park built exclusively for baseball.

Dave Snedeker, a forward on the Iowa men's basketball team, practices a jump following the instructions of New York native Edward Vilella, the most celebrated male ballet star in America, during a movement session with Iowa athletes Monday afternoon in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Vilella has been involved in dancing for 40 years.

Ballet star helps Hawks with dance

By Melissa Rapoport
Assistant Sports Editor

Two seats away a woman whispered, "God, that was beautiful," summing up the sentiments of the athletes involved in Edward Vilella's movement session Monday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

As a member of the New York Ballet, Vilella, probably one of the most celebrated male ballet dancers in America, demonstrated through hand and body movements the similarities of dance and athletics to about 30 Iowa athletes.

"Moment-to-moment it may seem kind of strange that a dancer is teaching athletics..." Vilella said. "It's a question of the approach of physicality. There are considerable similarities, but our approach is more formalized."

"OUR FUNCTION IS to make the unnatural look natural and the difficult look easy."

It was not a typical dance class with bar work and dance jargon. Vilella introduced dance through the athlete's understanding. "The best thing about Vilella was the way he related to athletes at their level," Lisa Steffen, a former dancer said. "For instance, instead of using the technical terms, like plie, he said, 'knee bend.'"

Ironically, Vilella, once a collegiate welterweight champion, took up dance after a serious baseball injury. When the Bayside, New York native was knocked unconscious at the tender age of 10, his parents sent him to his sister's ballet class, hoping it would serve as a safer outlet for his natural athletic talents.

BUT IN A society where ballet is often separated from athletics, it would be fair to say all dancers are athletes, but not all athletes are dancers. Vilella, who directed and produced a show featuring athletes and ballet dancers said, "Dancers dance all of the time; athletes dance some of the time. Athletes just don't realize when they're dancing."

"In the show (professional tennis player) Virginia Wade reached towards an imaginary ball on her backhand side and it looked exactly like a reach in ballet," he said.

After speaking to the athletes for about an hour, Vilella invited them to participate in a short "ballet for athletes" session.

During the half-hour "class," he offered tips to basketball player Jolynn Schneider on how to increase her vertical jump, used basketball player Dave Snedeker in demonstrating how to stretch back muscles, helped gymnast Wendy Hussar with spotting when doing pirouettes, and helped cheerleaders Bill Ajram and Anita Williams with lifts.

THE TALK SESSION and on-floor demonstration left the athletes inspired, giving them reason to believe dance could enhance their athletic performance. "I liked it, I really did," Schneider said. "It was very interesting. He presented his material very well. I've always been told to lift weights to help my jump. He told me something I have never been told before."

Vilella believes a derivative of ballet could be taught to athletes on a regular basis and guarantees it would make the athletes better performers. "It would be beneficial, but what you would have to do is find the similar principals in both dance and athletics — it would be smart and healthy."

In fact most of the athletes believed ballet lessons would be beneficial if implemented into their athletic programs. "I think it would be beneficial," Schneider said. "I think if they made it mandatory, though, the athletes may feel closed in, but if it was optional, I think they would enjoy it."

WILLIAMS AND Ajram, who both cheered for the women's basketball team, believe dance should definitely become integrated into athletics. "I think it's important for athletes to take dance," Williams said. "It gives you general awareness of your body and of space."

"It's really important for coordination," Ajram said. "You really wouldn't believe how many athletes are uncoordinated."

With such an extensive background of dance and athletics, Vilella has found a "theatrical" beauty in athletics. "To watch someone make an incredible catch is great," he said. "To see someone throw a no-hitter is not exciting to me, but to see someone make an incredible catch — that takes finesse. It's beautiful."

NFC Central coaches trade barbs, quips

Mike Ditka

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bud Grant got a warm, albeit sarcastic, welcome back to the coaching ranks of the National Football League's NFC Central Division Monday along with two real rookies to the division.

Grant has returned to the head coaching job of the Minnesota Vikings after taking a year off. He was in Chicago Monday along with Mike Ditka of the Bears, Forrest Gregg of Green Bay and first-year men Darryl Rogers of Detroit and Leeman Bennett of Tampa Bay to discuss the division's strengths and weaknesses.

Grant, who coached the Vikings for 17 years before giving up the reins to Les Steckel for last season, was late for the meeting. Gregg, for one, said jokingly he wished Grant wasn't showing up at all.

Gregg said when Grant showed up for the meeting. "He always seems to get the best out of what he's got."

Ditka promised, "We'll try to give Bud some tips and bring him along slowly."

Ditka returns not only as the dean of NFC Central coaches going into his fifth season with the Bears, but also as the coach of the defending champions. Chicago won the NFC Central Division with a 10-6 record in 1984.

Ditka said the Bears, who have the 22nd pick in the first round, need to draft for help on the defensive line, the secondary and at the running back position, where Walter Payton is entering his 12th season.

"Walter is not going to run forever," Ditka said. "We're not desperate at any area. We don't want to take a second or third-round player in the first round just because we need somebody at a particular position."

GREGG IS GETTING ready for his second season at Green Bay after seeing the Packers go 1-7 in the first half of 1984 and 7-1 in the second half.

"We sort of had two seasons," Gregg said. The good second half, he said, "gives you a feeling that things are really ripe and moving in the right direction."

Gregg also refused to be pinned down on what the Packers will do with their draft choices. He admitted his team is looking for a quarterback to go along with veteran Lynn Dickey and backup Randy Wright, who is recovering from an injury.

Gregg said he liked what he saw in Vince Ferragamo, the former Los Angeles Rams quarterback who worked out with the Packers at their mini-camp. But, "now we have to see if we can make a deal for him."

ROGERS, THE former Arizona State and Michigan State coach, admitted he knew little about his new club other than their 4-11-1 record for 1984.

"You can't tell anything from films and three days (of mini-camp) in our underwear in Tampa," Rogers said. "There is no question that the big question mark is whether (running back) Billy Sims will recover (from an injury)."

Bennett is the new man at Tampa Bay after spending six years with the Atlanta Falcons and going to the playoffs three times with them.

"We need another running back to use with James Wilder in a two-back set," Bennett said of the 6-10 Buccaneers. "On defense, we need to start thinking about bringing some young guys along behind Lee Roy Selmon (at right end)."

Barnett to take cage job at Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — J.D. Barnett resigned as basketball coach at Virginia Commonwealth Monday to accept the same position at Tulsa, school sources said.

The Richmond News-Leader and sources at Tulsa confirmed Barnett's resignation at Virginia Commonwealth. He replaces Nolan Richardson, who resigned as coach at Tulsa April 9 to go to Arkansas.

Barnett was to be introduced at Tulsa today. His VCU squad was the Sun Belt Conference champion last season. They were ranked as high as No. 11 last season and were the No. 2 seed in the NCAA West Regional.

Barnett told the News-Leader he was taking the Tulsa job because of "more money and better job security." Sources told UPI Barnett will sign a five-year contract with Tulsa, but a dollar figure was not available.

Barnett apparently told the newspaper that he would accept the job if he could bring Virginia Commonwealth assistant Coach Dave Hobbs with him. Hobbs, who handled recruiting and other coaching duties, was promised a position in Tulsa's Development Department, Barnett said.

Before going to Virginia Commonwealth, Barnett coached Louisiana Tech for two years and was named Southland Conference Coach of the Year in his second season.

There were reports earlier in the day that as many as four people were under consideration for the job. While president J. Paschal Twyman said he hoped a selection would be made before the banquet, picking the right coach was more important than a deadline.

Some of the names that cropped up regarding the job included Gene Bartow of Alabama-Birmingham, Gary Williams of Boston College, Lynn Archibald of Utah and Murray Arnold of Tennessee-Chattanooga. Tulsa assistant Coach Bob Spivey did not interview for the job.

Bears' Hampton will miss training camp

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dan Hampton, a seven-year veteran defensive tackle for the Chicago Bears, will not be available until the first regular season game this year because of off-season knee surgery, Bears' Coach Mike Ditka said Monday.

It will take him that long to recover fully from the surgery, he said. "Dan is very valuable to our team and really is the glue that holds our defensive line in place," Ditka said. "He is a very important part of the defense. We need to be careful with him."

On the good side, Ditka said both quarterbacks Jim McMahon and Steve Fuller are healthy and played during recent Bear workout sessions. "You don't know what happens when he has contact," Ditka said of McMahon, who suffered a lacerated kidney and missed the last six games of the regular season and the two playoff games. "But he looked good."

White Sox reactivate right-hander Dotson

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago White Sox Monday activated starting pitcher Richard Dotson and put reliever Al Jones on the 15-day supplemental disabled list.

Dotson was scheduled to pitch Monday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Dotson had some inflammation in his right elbow during spring training and was not brought up with the club from Sarasota, Fla. He made two minor league appearances in Florida before being brought up.

Jones, 1-0 with a 1.80 ERA in four appearances this season, had pain in his elbow after pitching against Boston Sunday.

Struggling Hawks take on 9-9 Bulldogs

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

Drake and Iowa are two women's tennis teams that have suffered through tough seasons. Today at 1:30 p.m. in Des Moines, one team will be able to ease the frustrations a bit with a win.

The Bulldogs, coached by Mark Wesslink, have a 9-9 record this season but the first-year Drake coach says that is a bit misleading. "We don't play anywhere near as tough a schedule as Iowa plays," Wesslink said. "You'd have to say Iowa is the favorite going into the match."

Last fall, the two teams met in Iowa City and the Hawkeyes came away with an impressive 7-2 win. But Iowa Coach Charley Darley says it is an entirely different team he is taking to Des Moines this afternoon.

Charley Darley

"WHEN WE BEAT them we had (Jenny) Reuter and (Jennifer) Forti in the line-up," he said. "We're a much different team now. I have a hard time trying to figure how each individual match might come out."

Darley has already ruled sophomore co-captain Kim Martin out of the meet. "Kim has some nerve damage in her shoulder," the first-year Iowa coach said. "It's really hard to tell how long she'll be out of action."

Wesslink believes the loss of Martin could make the meet much closer. "If Kim Martin doesn't play, I really think the meet will go down to the doubles," he said. "We have good players in the top three but we've had problems at the bottom."

Martin said Monday that her shoulder is feeling much better. The Solon, Ohio native is hopeful that she'll be able to return to action for the Indiana meet on May 1.

THE HAWKEYES should have the services of Lisa Rozenboom for the meet. The Oskaloosa, Iowa native missed last weekend's meets at Minnesota and Wisconsin with strep throat.

But Drake isn't without problems.

Tennis

"Jean Letner, who played at the top for us in the fall, isn't playing this spring," Wesslink said. "She's injured and had to miss the entire season."

The Hawkeyes are coming off a rugged trip which saw them losing two matches. Darley doesn't believe his players will have any problem getting back up for another meet. "We talked about the positive finish we had at Minnesota on Sunday," he said. "I'm hopeful they'll go out and play with a lot of pride because Drake is an in-state rival."

THE BULLDOGS WILL be led by former Hawkeye player, Rachel McClelland. The Ankeny native played her freshman year at Iowa before transferring to Drake, where she has developed into the Bulldogs' No. 1 player.

"Rachel has been playing real well for us," Wesslink said. "She is the most predictable, steady player we have."

Chicago (AL) — Activated starting pitcher Richard Dotson and put reliever Al Jones on the 15-day supplemental disabled list.

Detroit — Placed first baseman Dave Bergman on supplemental 15-day disabled list while left elbow is examined to determine whether surgery is necessary; brought up outfielder Alex Sanchez from its AAA Nashville affiliate.

New York (AL) — Activated outfielder Ricky Henderson, who had been on disabled list since March 30, and sent outfielder Vic Maita to Columbus of the International League.

Ice Hawks find home in new conference

By John Gilardi
Staff Writer

The UI Ice Hawks are one step closer to gaining support for an indoor ice rink in Iowa City after the Midwest Collegiate Hockey Association was formed last week.

However, because of the lack of ice in Iowa City, the team will be moving its home rink to Waterloo.

Bradley University, Cornell College, Drake University, Grinnell College, Palmer College of Chiropractic Medicine, Knox College and Loras College will be the other schools competing in the first season next fall. The league will be based in Iowa City due to the fact that it is centrally located among the member schools.

DAN SELIGER from Iowa will be the president, Cornell's Ken Ruth was elected vice-president, Mike Dahms from Palmer was elected secretary and Bradley's Kevin Schmalz was elected treasurer.

There will be 16 conference games on the A level between Bradley, Drake, Iowa A and Palmer. Non-conference games will be played against University of Wisconsin-Platteville.

The B league will include teams from Grinnell, Cornell, Loras, Iowa B and Knox. There is a tentative schedule of 10 games for the B league because of insufficient funds from the smaller colleges.

The main problem confronting the Ice Hawks is a lack of recognition in the Iowa City area. Iowa City has no indoor ice skating facilities and the club played all their games last year in Dubuque.

The ultimate goal of the club is to establish the league and hopefully move up and play against the likes of Iowa State and Northwestern, members of the Central States Hockey League.

The club is looking for any players interested at any level. There will be a meeting on April 25 at 8 p.m. in the Union. Elections will be held. For more information contact Billy Vigdor at 353-8790.

The Hawkeye Soccer Club beat The Connections, a team of Iowa City high school players, 2-1, Sunday morning.

"IT WAS A beautiful game to watch," Raul Curto, president of the Hawkeye Soccer Club said, "because both teams played high-quality soccer with good passing. It took a great effort on our part to overcome their marking scheme and solid defense."

Jose Aguayo and Andre Borgeucq scored goals for Iowa. Next week the club faces C.R. United in Cedar Rapids.

Sportsclubs

The Hawkeye Tae Kwon Do Club brought home 11 trophies last weekend from the Central U.S. Open Tae Kwon Do championship in Lincoln, Neb.

IN TOURNAMENT competition, there are two types: form competition and fighting competition. In form competition, the competitors are judged according to style, power and technical proficiency. The fighting competition is free sparring — light contact for below black belts and full contact for black belts.

John Treangen finished third in white belt fighting. In the yellow belt division, Eddie Greazle took third in forms, Scott Steele took third in fighting and Kent Peterson took second in forms.

Greg Walters swept first in forms and fighting and Dirk Quayle took third in the brown belt division in forms and fighting.

Linda Logan finished third in forms in the black belt division and Bob Logan took first in forms and fighting in the black belt division.

THE HAWKEYE Tae Kwon Do Club works out Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in Room 515 of the Field House. For more information contact Linda and Bob Logan at 351-5256.

The UI Rowing Association will be holding their only home spring season meet Thursday against Washburn University. Iowa will be competing against the Knickabocker from the Park Street bridge to the Union bridge. The club will be competing in the Midwest Rowing Championships Saturday in Madison, Wis.

It's that time of year again for the annual Frisbee Golf Tournament. Play begins Sat. April 27 at 11 a.m. at the Coralville Reservoir. Entries can be picked up at the Field House office in E216. They must be turned in by April 25 at 5 p.m. For more information, call Rec Services at 353-3494.

In rugby action over the weekend, the Iowa rugby A team won, 8-0, over Northern Iowa Saturday afternoon. Opie Altman and Pinkie Floyd each had tries for the winners in the shutout of the Panthers.

On Sunday, the B team had a wild contest with the Iowa City Ruffians. The match ended in a 16-16 tie as Lon Britt, Greg Spontac and David Deiemer all had tries for the B team. Britt also added two conversions.

Sportsclubs is a Tuesday feature of The Daily Iowan. If you would like further information or results published about your club sport, call the DI at 353-6220 from 7-9 p.m. on Sundays and 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Mondays.

Grant unsure of Kosar situation

CHICAGO (UPI) — Don't ask Minnesota Vikings Coach Bud Grant about the Ben Kosar situation because he just doesn't know what's going on.

At a meeting of National Football League NFC Central Division coaches Monday, Grant at first pretended not to hear questions about Kosar, the University of Miami (Fla.) quarterback coveted by the Vikings and the Cleveland Browns. Then he admitted he was in the dark as much as everyone else in the league.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle is expected to issue his decision Tuesday

on the Hurricane quarterback's draft status.

An NFL spokeswoman said Rozelle did not intend to call a news conference, but would release a statement sometime during the day from the league's New York offices.

"I AM AS CONFUSED as you are about what is going to happen," Grant said. "It's up to the commissioner to decide whether he needs a verbal or written commitment. The only thing he (Kosar) didn't do is sign a letter."

Kosar, who still has two years of college eligibility left, has verbally declared himself eligible for the draft because he will have enough credits to graduate in June.

But Kosar has not signed the official statement that he is eligible. Under current rules, he cannot be drafted by the Vikings, who have the first available pick in the April 30 draft.

Kosar could end up in a supplemental draft, which is for players who somehow miss the regular selection process. Unfortunately for the Vikings, the Cleveland Browns have the first pick in the supplemental draft.

"The commissioner must decide if he is available in the draft," Grant said.

"The supplemental draft is for players not selected in the regular draft," Chicago Coach Mike Ditka said. "It shouldn't be used as a loophole. The teams pay the commissioner to make these kinds of decisions and we need a decision."

Grant said the Vikings are willing to discuss what will probably be an expensive contract with Kosar.

"It is an investment in an asset (a quarterback) that is probably the most valuable asset you can have in a club," Grant said.

Olympic trials limit U.S. jumpers

ATLANTA (UPI) — Jim Howard, one of America's best high jumpers, didn't compete in last summer's Olympic Games and he thinks the qualification rules should be changed before the '88 Olympics.

"I made the '80 team, which was an honor even though we didn't get to go to Moscow," said Howard, who jumped a U.S. indoor record 7 feet 8-1/2 inches this winter. "But I was sick during the trials for the '84 Olympics and unable to perform as usual."

"There I was, winner of both the indoor and outdoor Grand Prix, had even set a record, and because I wasn't feeling well at that particular time, I failed to qualify for Los Angeles."

"FOR THE FIRST time, I knew how some of those good jumpers who didn't make our '80 team felt," said Howard. "I'd only jumped 7-3 back then and there were several who were more deserving to be on that team than I was. I really didn't belong on the team at that time. But I made it through the trials when some of those who had done a lot better than I had before didn't do as well as they should have."

Howard, who competes for the Pacific Coast Club, has his sights on the '88 Olympic Games in Korea. He's 25 now and figures his prime jumping years are immediately ahead.

"But no matter how high I go, no matter what records I might set, whether or not I get to Seoul will depend on how I perform during the U.S. Trials that summer," said Howard. "You could be an 8-foot jumper (the world record is 7-10) the rest of the year, but if you don't have one of the best jumps at that particular time, forget it."

HOWARD, WHO has cleared close to 7-10 in practice, feels the United States would assure itself a stronger team if it took other things than just its Olympic trials in consideration when picking the '88 team.

"They could use some sort of point system for events leading up to the trials and then, maybe, qualify part of the team that way and round it out with the trials themselves," said Howard. "Maybe they could even designate several of the pre-trial meets as ones whose winners would qualify for the Olympic team."

"That way, they'd have a better chance of winding up with people who have proven themselves over a considerable period and not make the trials the sort of gamble they now are.

"We see it at a lot of meets," he said. "Performers, for one reason or another, are way off their norm at a particular meet. But the really good ones stand out over the long haul."

HOWARD PROVED HIS point Sunday at the Martin Luther King Jr. Freedom Games at Emory University in Atlanta. He won the high jump — beating Dwight Stones and Dennis Lewis, co-holders of the U.S. outdoor record of 7-8 1/4. But he did it with a jump of only 7-3 1/4.

"It shows you what can happen," said Howard, who during a Saturday practice cleared 7-0, 7-4 and 7-7 before raising the bar to 7-9 1/4 — and making that on his second try.

"I really felt I had a shot at the American record Sunday," he said. "I really felt great (after the 7-9 1/4 jump). In retrospect, that might have made me expect too much."

After clearing 7-3 1/4, an inch and a half better than Stones or Lewis could do, Howard had the bar raised to 7-7 1/4

— and missed all three times.

"AFTER THE WAY I had jumped the day before, I didn't think that would be any trouble," said Howard. "I should have taken it in steps. I should have tried 7-5 and 7-6 first. Then there might have been more rhythm in my jumping."

Stones, who qualifies at 31 as the dean of high jumpers, will tell you practice does not necessarily make perfect.

"You can spend too much time training in this event," said Stones, who won his first Olympic medal back in 1972 and who was rated the best high jumper in the world a decade ago. "It's just a waste of time. Concentration is what's most important — whether you are high jumping or driving a car."

"I prefer to believe that the practice session got me ready for the meet," countered Howard. "But it turned out to be hotter (85 degrees) than I had expected, so, figuring I might have only so many jumps because of the heat, I waited until the bar got up over 7-3 before I made my first jump."

"It's still very early in the season," said Howard. "There'll be plenty of more chances."

Langer seeks to continue streak

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — West Germany's Bernhard Langer is after gold and goals on the PGA tour. And he's doing pretty good in both categories.

He's had jackpots of $126,000 and $72,000 in the past two weeks, in the Masters and Sea Pines Heritage Golf Classic. That boosted his American earnings to over a quarter-million dollars — and he says he's just getting started.

"I hope to be in the winner's circle many times," said Langer after Sunday's playoff victory over Bobby Wadkins in the Heritage.

So, he's off to another challenge — the Houston Open this week in Texas — hoping to duplicate another Gary Player feat.

The 27-year-old Langer became the first golfer since Player to follow up a Masters win with another victory the following week.

PLAYER WON THE Tournament of Champions after his Masters triumph in 1978 and then went on to win the Houston Open in the following week to make it three PGA wins in a row.

Langer obviously has that feat in mind, too. Leading the Heritage by one stroke at the start of the final round, he officially entered the Houston Open before he teed off Sunday.

Wadkins was two strokes behind going into final round and shot a 68 to tie Langer's 70 score for the day's effort. The combined totals matched at 11-under-par 273.

In the playoff, Langer parred the first hole and watched the frustrated Wadkins miss a 12-foot putt for a bogey that once again kept him winless on the PGA tour.

LANGER WANTED TO show fellow golfers and the American public that his victory in the Masters was "no fluke."

But he was somewhat irked that he had to prove it, after officially joining PGA tour this year with a string of European victories.

"They should know it already," he said of his winning credentials.

For Wadkins, the 33-year-old younger brother of Lanny Wadkins, it was another disappointment in his 11 years on the tour, another "victory" that eluded his grasp, like the sudden-death loss to Lou Graham in the 1979 Philadelphia Open.

"I feel I played well enough to win," he said, while congratulating Langer as a "great champion" who deserved his victory.

His putter was his "main enemy" Sunday, Wadkins said, adding that he came close on several birdie chances, but just couldn't sink them during a string of 12 consecutive pars.

But he has seen improvement in his game after working hard to correct defects that have kept him a loser.

"If I continue to swing as well as I have this week," Wadkins said, "I will win soon."

'Great White Way' may soon become one Great White Elephant

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

NEW YORK — As a source of important new plays, Broadway hasn't been reliable for decades. Over the past few years — and during the current season especially — its influence on serious American theater has dwindled almost to invisibility.

Yet Broadway remains a big business, a focus for the national media, a grand tradition if nothing else. In the career of a serious playwright, a serious actor or a serious stage director, a Broadway credit can have a serious impact.

So Broadway retains its title as the Great White Way. But it's clearly in danger of also becoming the Great White Elephant.

This season, for instance, box office business has almost equaled the record high it reached last season, yet the number of new plays and musicals likely will set a record low. On any night, nearly half of Broadway's 36 theaters are dark.

HOW TO ACCOUNT for this seeming contradiction? Easy. Broadway's relatively few hits are charging so much (up to $50 a ticket), they more than compensate for all the missing shows.

And most of those hits are holdovers from previous seasons — A Chorus Line, Cats, La Cage Aux Folles. So far this year (the season traditionally runs from June 1 to May 31) only one new musical has survived, and it's officially a revival — The King and I, starring Yul Brynner in his "farewell" tour.

The overwhelming odds against success and the prohibitive costs of production con-

On Broadway

This is the first in a three-part series on the current state of Broadway.

spire to keep Broadway dark. So do Actors' Equity restrictions on rehearsal time — four weeks for a play, six weeks for a musical, neither period nearly long enough to assuage the jitters of producers with a $2.5 million or so investment.

Yet new plays and musicals do reach Broadway, although they rarely follow the old out-of-town-tryouts-leading-to-a-big-Broadway-opening route. Instead, a musical often begins in a workshop — a production mounted in a small New York theater with an eye toward an eventual Broadway berth. And a play, more and more often, emerges from one of the regional theaters across the country.

These regional theaters, which seem to be flourishing in indirect proportion to Broadway's decline, offer to important playwrights a proving ground for their new works. At such outposts as the Yale Repertory Theatre, the American Repertory Theatre in Cambridge, Mass., and the Arena Stage in Washington, D.C., new plays can grow and mature away from the New York media spotlight.

At The New Theatre Company in Chicago, for instance, resident playwrights John Guare and David Mamet are each contributing new works to the maiden season, which started just last month. Mamet has been associated with Chicago theater for more than a decade, so his choice to return there is not too surprising, even considering his extensive Broadway and Hollywood credits. But the questions nag: Why Chicago? Why not Broadway?

"BROADWAY IS REALLY dead," Mamet told the Chicago Sun-Times last month. "Theaters are being torn down. And too many people don't want anything to provoke or trouble them. They come home tired from the office and they just want to relax, hear some silly nonsense, watch 'The Love Boat.' Broadway is basically dinner theater without food."

Dinner theater or not, it's still Broadway, home to bright lights, big breaks and bigger bucks. And the occasional good play still finds its way there — after it's proven itself at a regional theater.

The Goodman Theatre in Chicago, the parent of The New Theatre Company, has had its share of New York successes. Mamet's Pulitzer Prize-winning Glengarry Glen Ross recently completed a 10-month run on Broadway, following its U.S. premiere at the Goodman. Mamet's Edmond likewise opened at the Goodman before transferring virtually intact to off-Broadway. And David Rabe's Hurllyburly, still running on Broadway, premiered at the Goodman last year specifically so that director Mike Nichols could tend to its problems without New York critics looking over his shoulder.

Tomorrow: The serious side of Broadway — Hurllyburly and Ma Rainey's Black Bottom.

Central States sets no return date for Art Film Series to Iowa City

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

WHATEVER HAPPENED to the Art Film Series?

After a three-month run last semester, the series was scheduled to resume at the Campus 2 this past January, but Central States Theatre Corp. postponed the opening to early March. After a one-week booking of Lonely Hearts, however, the series disappeared. When, if ever, will it return?

"To save further humiliation, we feel we'd be better off saying we don't know," Emmett Frazer, Iowa City manager for Central States, which operates the city's eight commercial theaters, said. "To be honest, we got caught with our pants down."

Frazer blamed booking conflicts for the continuing delays in the series.

"We never dreamed that Witness would play the way it did," Frazer said. "We never dreamed that Beverly Hills Cop would last 21 weeks. We knew Amadeus was a good movie, but good movies aren't always accepted, and it was."

THE CENTRAL STATES home office in Des Moines, Frazer said, is "very well satisfied with the results" of the Art Film Series from last semester, "and they want to continue it. They just got into a bind on some of these movies."

Frazer conceded that part of the problem in scheduling an Art Film Series is designating one theater as an art house.

"I don't know if we can ever convince them (the home office) it's a seven-screen town, with one extra art house," Frazer said.

He cited the simultaneous bookings of such films as A Passage to India, The Killing Fields and Amadeus as a hopeful sign for art film fans.

"One thing it's proven to the home office is we can do more than one art film at a time and the people of Iowa City will support them for more than one week at a time," he said.

Several of the films promised for this semester's Art Film Series, he added, might be scheduled before summer break. Other art films, he said, might run during break or over the summer. The movies still most likely to appear here, according to Frazer, are 1984, Careful, He Might Hear You and Paris, Texas.

Heiles to present harpsichord recital

William Heiles, a guest artist at the UI School of Music, will present a harpsichord recital at 8 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall and will offer a lecture-demonstration at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday in Harper Hall of the UI Music Building.

four duets from Clavierbung III, the "Goldberg" variations from Clavierbung IV and five sonatas by Scarlatti. The lecture-demonstration on Wednesday, part of the weekly Wednesday in Harper series, is entitled "Harpsichord for Pianists."

Lectures, films highlight 'Art and Life in Africa'

A series of public events accompanying the "Art and Life in Africa: Selections from the Stanley Collection" exhibition at the UI Museum of Art will continue with lectures by Ana Lopez and Michael McNulty.

McNulty will give illustrations of the close relationship that exists between urban and rural development, and of how rural-based institutions such as the extended family and the rural market affect urbanization in Africa.

Award-winning poet Olds to read from recent works

By Kathy S. Kyte
Special to The Daily Iowan

Poet Sharon Olds will give a reading of her work tonight at 8 in the English-Philosophy Building Room 304.

Olds' second book, The Dead and the Living (Alfred A. Knopf), was the Lamont Poetry Selection of the Academy of American Poets for 1984 and won the National Book Critics' Circle Award for poetry in that year.

The book begins with poems honoring the dead, moves into poems recalling childhood, and concludes with poems celebrating love, marriage and children. This excerpt is from "35-10":

Brushing out my daughter's dark
silken hair before the mirror
I see the gray gleaming on my head,
the silver-haired servant behind her. Why is it
just as we begin to go
they begin to arrive, the folds in my neck
clarifying as the fine bones of her hips sharpen? ...

Marilyn Hacker called Olds' first book Satan Says (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1980) "a daring and elegant first book. This is a poetry which affirms and redeems the art."

Olds has received National Endowment for the Arts and Guggenheim fellowships, as well as a grant from New York state. Her work has twice been included in The Pushcart Prize: Best of the Small Presses (1981 and 1982) and is anthologized in The Norton Introduction to Poetry.

Olds received her Ph.D. from Columbia University and has taught at Sarah Lawrence College and New York State University.

Tonight's reading is free, and the public is invited.

Entertainment today

At the Bijou

Jom: The Story of a People. Ababacar Samb's 1982 film travels back through West Africa's past via the songs of a troubadour-like historian. At 7 p.m.

Ball of Fire. Barbara Stanwyck stars as a nightclub singer who moves in with seven prissy professors, led by Gary Cooper, who are studying slang for an encyclopedia, in this 1941 Howard Hawks' comedy. At 8:45 p.m.

Television

On the networks: Mickey Mantle and Whitey Ford make guest appearances as Laura and "Remington Steele" (NBC at 9 p.m.) investigate chicanery at a baseball camp. "Frontline" (IPT-12 at 8 p.m.) looks at "Catholics in America: Is Nothing Sacred?," examining the conflicts within the church on birth control, homosexuality and women in the priesthood. And Loretta Swit faces a man's world in "Games Mother Never Taught You" (CBS at 8 p.m.).

On cable: Ed Asner, Fred Willard, Martin Short, Robert Klein, Andrea Martin and Eugene Levy are among the alumni who show up for "The Second City 12th Anniversary Special" (HBO at 9:30), a program of classic skits. Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey play themselves in 1947's The Fabulous Dorseys (CBN-21 at 12 noon). And, of all people, the fabulous Liberace is this week's "Guest VJ" on MTV at 9 p.m.).

Music

William Heiles, a professor of music at the University of Illinois, will present a harpsichord recital honoring Bach and Scarlatti at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall.

Michael W. Smith, winner of the 1985 Grammy Award for best male vocalist in gospel music, will appear with Kathy Troccoli in concert at 7:30 p.m. in the Paramount Theatre in Cedar Rapids.

Art

Visiting artist Caren Canier will give a public lecture presenting her work at 8 p.m. in the Art Building Room E109.

Readings

Sharon Olds, author of The Dead and the Living and Satan Says, will read her poetry at 8 p.m. in the English-Philosophy Building Room 304.

Nightlife

First there was Beatlemania. Then there were the Bootleg Beatles. Now there is ... 1964. Wait, first there was the Beatles, wasn't there? Anyway, this group, brought to you by Stage Productions (yes, the same people who are responsible for the Backdoors and the Revival), will feel fine as they take a ticket to ride and drive their car into the Crow's Nest with all their loving on this hard day's night.
