U.S.-Central American involvement continues

Shultz equates Contra aid vote, Vietnam war

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz, recalling the lesson of the Vietnam War, said Thursday that Congress's refusal to aid Nicaraguan rebels smacks of "lost faith" in America and could lead to "another Cuba in this hemisphere."

Shultz compared the situation in Nicaragua to Vietnam in an emotional speech to State Department employees that commemorated the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam 10 years ago this month.

"The larger lesson of the past decade," Shultz said, "is that when America lost faith in herself, world stability suffered and freedom lost ground. This must not happen again."

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes provided a unique assessment of the Reagan setbacks this week and raised the possibility that the president could revive his aid request.

Parliamentary snags appeared to rule out reconsideration of the House action. Democratic leaders declared the aid proposal dead for the time being and Speakes acknowledged political realities might bar a resumption of aid before the Sept. 30 end of the current fiscal year.

Vice President George Bush, appearing on ABC's "Good Morning America," said the administration will not abandon the Contras. "We feel strongly about it," he said. "We will be back and back and back until America does the right thing. This isn't over yet."

ACROSS TOWN, top Contra leaders Alfonso Robelo and Adolfo Calero called Thursday for the Democrats who worked against new U.S. aid for See Aid, page 6

Honduran says arms exercise is 'message'

TRUJILLO, Honduras — American military forces joined their Honduran counterparts in counter-guerrilla exercises that one Honduran army official called a "message" to neighboring Nicaragua, a field report said Thursday.

Lt. Col. Jose O'Connor, the official liaison between the Honduran army and the U.S. forces for the two-week exercise, said the operation is necessary at present because of "the threat right now, especially on the Nicaraguan side.

"We have to train ourselves to defend ourselves," he said.

In a continuation of the Universal Trek '85 military exercise, involving 7,000 U.S. military personnel and 420 Hondurans, Honduran army units joined U.S. paratroopers to relieve U.S. Marines guarding a remote air strip on the northern Caribbean coast 150 miles from the Nicaraguan border.

Planners of the war game renamed this picturesque tropical coastal region the country of "Victoria," and presented the Marine and Army forces with the problem of helping the central government put down an armed insurrection from the "Victoria Liberation Front."

O'CONNOR TOLD REPORTERS in a representative pool of journalists covering the war games that his small country feels a heightened threat from Nicaragua because it believes the games are training Hondurans to mount a guerrilla war.

O'Connor expressed concern over Wednesday's congressional vote against renewing U.S. military aid to the Contra rebels. He said that if the Contras were forced to cease operations in Nicaragua, they could well seek refuge in the Honduran frontier area.

"The problem is that if these people are not aided by the United States, it's a problem for Honduras. They have to go somewhere. If there are 10,000 armed troops in Honduras, that is a See Honduras, page 6

Eyed chicken

Vince Maggiore, a senior studio art major from Sigourney, Iowa, works on his sculpture outside the UI Art Building Thursday afternoon. Maggiore, who is calling the piece "Chickens Have Lips in Iowa" is planning to give the work to his sculpture instructor Jude Tallichet, an assistant professor in Art.

Martin gives up symbolic protest

By Robyn Griggs, University Editor

CEDAR RAPIDS — Claiming he was forced into a "moral compromise," UI senior Rusty Martin registered with the U.S. Selective Service Administration Thursday following a District Court ruling that also levied on him a $10,000 fine and a three-year probation sentence.

Martin's sentence, handed down by District Court Judge Edward McManus Thursday, ends his five-year battle with the U.S. Justice Department over his failure to register in 1980. He registered his name with the U.S. Post Office in the Cedar Rapids Federal building within an hour of the hearing, but said that "doesn't mean, by any stretch of the imagination, that I've changed my opinion" against draft.

MARTIN PLEADED GUILTY in U.S. District Court last month to failing to register with the Selective Service Administration, but obtained permission to appeal his case — claiming he was selectively prosecuted — at a future time. Later that month a U.S. Supreme Court decision upheld the legality of selective prosecution, rendering such an appeal worthless.

"I just registered for the draft and my father loaned me the money to pay the fine, because it's not worth the hardship to me and my wife" to continue the symbolic protest, he said later.

"I never tried to say that signing a registration form would violate every moral principle I have," he said, but bitterly, "Sometimes you can't

The 24-year-old UI senior — one of 17 men who have been prosecuted in the United States for draft evasion — added, "I could have registered for the draft and avoided all this stuff."

SAYING HE RECOGNIZED "youth is a factor" in Martin's civil disobedience, McManus chided him for his "impetuosity" before announcing the sentence.

"Perhaps somewhere in our late teens or late 20s, we are inclined to impetuosity and to chase an ideal," he said, but added Martin should have chosen one of the "other avenues See Martin, page 6

Dole rejects budget vote by senators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican leader Robert Dole Thursday refused to risk an "OK Corral shootout" on President Ronald Reagan's belt-tightening federal budget and the Senate adjourned without voting — a day after Reagan appealed on national television for hasty passage.

Dole, who had been pushing all day for the vote, did a sudden reversal late Thursday and decided not to take Democratic leader Robert Byrd up on his surprise offer to end delaying tactics and go immediately to a vote.

Instead, Dole moved to recess until today. The Senate voted 52-44, mostly along party lines, to recess.

"I'm not sure I have them all yet, so I didn't want to take the chance," Dole said after the Senate finished.

"We're going to try to turn it around tomorrow," Dole said. "If it takes a month to turn it around, we'll take a month."

SEN. CHUCK GRASSLEY, R-Iowa, who has consistently pushed a budget freeze plan rather than Reagan's blueprint, said he was "on the fence" and estimated the GOP leadership was still "about five" votes shy of a majority in favor.

Byrd, clearly enjoying the moment when Dole appeared unable to get his troops in line, said, "I regret that we won't be able to have this showdown tonight. I kind of like these OK Corral shootouts."

As Byrd made his offer, Dole rushed out of the chamber, saying he needed a "few minutes to see if it's a good deal." Vice President George Bush came to the Senate to break a tie vote, if necessary.

Earlier in the day, Republicans attempted to turn momentum from Reagan's Wednesday night speech calling for national austerity into a quick vote on the plan that eliminates, slashes or reforms dozens of popular federal programs to cut $52 billion from the nearly $230 billion annual deficit.

DEMOCRATS INITIALLY refused to go along, and Dole was forced to begin a series of tangled parliamentary moves toward a preliminary vote.

Because the vote was only preliminary, it still could be amended later under the rules.

Robert Dole

"Let's have a vote," Byrd said, reversing his earlier delaying tactics. "It does not end the ballgame by any means."

Earlier, Byrd said Democrats would "not be rushed into an early vote. Democrats oppose the budget for substantive reasons and we feel we should take the time to discuss what bothers us about the Reagan budget, cuts in Social Security, in research and education."

SENATE BUDGET Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the debate "won't be easy. Nothing of this magnitude is ever easy."

Domenici said he would fight those who would try to add expenditures to the budget for favored programs. "I will ask the question of myself and of others, if we didn't have that program, would we start it, (while facing) $230 billion deficits? If the answer is 'no' it seems to me we've got to do something about it."

Dole, who was hoping Reagan's speech would provide enough impetus to approve the package, said early in the day he was "fairly close" to having enough votes in the Senate, which the GOP controls 53-47. Private meetings were held with both Republicans and conservative Democrats to try to attract them to the package.

Freeway planning fosters better city, county relations

By Greg Philby, Staff Writer

Freeway 218 is helping pave the way for better relations between the city and the county.

The new freeway, which runs southeast from the intersection of Interstates 80 and 380 along the western part of Iowa City, has been in the planning stages for a decade, but will be reality this summer.

The work in preparing the freeway included city, county and state officials, with much of the later planning is the final article in a five-part series examining commercial development in the Iowa City area.

including the state and city. But area officials said the project is an example of how the city and county can work together.

Jud TePaske, Johnson County planning director, said some of the interaction between the city and the county on the project involved annexation of land around interchanges and west of the freeway.

"There was at one point a strong feeling to annex out on the west side," TePaske said. The city "had fears, which were unfounded fears, that the county would be detrimental" to the area if the county had control of the property.

"What they are acknowledging is that the county too is responsible for managing those types of affairs," TePaske said. "They don't need to leap out to protect themselves."

"There certainly is a lot more cooperation, but it's not working 100 percent," said Johnson County Supervisor Harold Donnelly.

IT'S NOT A SECRET that it is common for local judiciaries to feel "competitive and even antagonistic" towards each other, TePaske said. "Now I think we are at a very good point."

"Cooperation is definitely improved and it is fairly good right now," said Karin Franklin, senior planner of the Iowa City Department of Planning and Programming.

Part of the improvement has been connected with the Freeway 218 project.

The freeway, in its early planning stage, "did pose serious questions about land development," TePaske said. "So it did prompt a meeting of the minds and, out of necessity, the city and county came together."

Mayor John McDonald said the freeway "did help, but it has been a combination of things. There is an excellent spirit of cooperation that exists at the moment and hopefully it will continue."

"I don't think 218 has been a factor that has led to cooperation between the city and the county necessarily," Franklin said. "I think there is better cooperation now because of the 28E agreement regarding land use on the fringe of Iowa City."

THE AGREEMENT gave rise to the Urban Fringe Committee in 1979 and was also a part of the county's comprehensive plan, TePaske said, which is also in effect in Tiffin and ready to be enacted in Hills. The committee discusses rural development near the city limits and the effects it may have on

Gallipoli anniversary hallowed

SYDNEY, Australia — Thousands of Australian and New Zealander veterans attended a dawn religious service and marched through Sydney Thursday to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the start of the maneuvers on Gallipoli.

The ceremonies commemorated the landing of the Australian-New Zealand Army Corps forces on the Turkish coast at Gallipoli, since renamed Gelibolu. The allies suffered more than 100,000 casualties, including more than 33,000 dead, and the Turkish defenders also suffered heavy losses.

Italy marks Mussolini's fall

ROME — Italy celebrated the 40th anniversary of its liberation from dictator Benito Mussolini's Fascist regime Thursday with a national holiday and ceremonies in all major cities.

"Liberty was the password of the Resistance," said Prime Minister Bettino Craxi in a speech at a Milan ceremony. "Liberty is the word of redemption, the word of every man who wants to build the future with his own hands."

Allies celebrate Elbe meeting

TORGAU, East Germany — U.S. and Soviet World War II veterans met in 40th anniversary ceremonies Thursday on the Elbe River where their climactic linkup in 1945 heralded the end of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

U.S. and Soviet flags waved over the site, memorial wreaths were laid down and a band played a Chopin march and the anthems of the United States, the Soviet Union and East Germany.

Reagan honors volunteers

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan honored teenage volunteers Thursday and used the occasion to criticize bureaucrats and "lots of Ph.D.s with important titles" for suffocating the spirit of volunteerism during the 1960s and 1970s.

In a Rose Garden ceremony with 150 members of volunteer organizations such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and 4-H Club, Reagan gave Presidential Private Sector Initiative citations to seven young people and honored the others with words of praise.

Heart recipient Burcham dies

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Artificial heart patient Jack Burcham died after blood collecting in his chest squeezed a remnant of his natural heart and stopped the flow into his mechanical heart, doctors said Thursday.

Blood backed up into Burcham's lungs and when his blood pressure dropped to zero; the Jarvik-7 heart was turned off at 8:48 p.m. Iowa time Wednesday, 10 days after it was implanted.

Apartheid protestors arrested

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Police Thursday arrested 27 University of Florida students who chained shut the front door of an administration building during a protest of the school's investments in apartheid South Africa.

About 150 people were protesting for the second day on the front steps of Tigert Hall when some students pushed past university police and bolted together the building's double front doors with a lock and chain.

In a story called "Reagan policy angers committee," (April 25), it was incorrectly reported that UI Central American Solidarity Committee members said the group would support a proposal to provide $14 million in "non-lethal" aid to be distributed in Nicaragua through the Agency for International Development. Actually, the CASC will not support any aid to the anti-Nicaraguan rebels. Also, it was incorrectly reported that 6,000 people nationwide have signed the Pledges of Resistance. Actually, 60,000 people have signed it. The DI regrets the errors.

Lawrence John Conner, 70, of Lot 1, Knollwood Trailer Court, made an initial appearance Thursday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of committing a lascivious act with a child.

On June 15 at a Coralville business, Conner allegedly persuaded a 10-year-old to fondle him, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the charge has been set for May 13. Conner was released on his own recognizance.

Steven Craig Randall, 22, of 820 E. Burlington St. Apt. 2, made an initial appearance Thursday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

On Thursday on Muscatine Avenue, police observed Randall's vehicle weaving and crossing into the opposite lane, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the OWI charge has been set for May 9. Randall was released on his own recognizance.

Mark Robert White, of 645 Westwinds Drive, pleaded guilty Thursday in Johnson

Courts

County Magistrate Court to a charge of assault. He was fined $100 plus court costs.

On Feb. 23 on Iowa Avenue, White struck another man in the face with a glass, court records state.

Michael Terrance O'Brien Jr., 18, of Bourbonnais, Ill., made an initial appearance Thursday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of second-degree burglary.

O'Brien was charged in connection with a burglary that occurred April 22 in Oxford, Iowa, after he was allegedly found in possession of items reported stolen from a residence, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the charge has been set for May 3. O'Brien remains in the Johnson County Jail under $10,000 bond.

Bret Frederick Hann, 20, of 514 S. Capitol St. Apt. 1, pleaded guilty Thursday in Johnson County Magistrate Court to a charge of keeping a disorderly house. He was fined $25 plus court costs.

Hann was charged April 13, after police received two complaints of a loud party at his residence and found a large group in the back yard creating a considerable amount of noise, court records state.

A hearing on pending motions in the Ronald Lee Kulow case was set Thursday in Johnson County District Court for May 8 at 9 a.m.

Kulow, 33, has been charged with first-degree murder in the death of his wife last August at their apartment, 1024 E. Washington St.

John Brian McKillip, 22, of North Liberty, made an initial appearance Thursday in Johnson County District Court on a charge of driving with a suspended license.

On Thursday at the intersection of Highway 218 and Interstate 80, McKillip was involved in a single-vehicle accident. A check of his license showed it to be suspended for habitual violations until McKillip files a statement of financial responsibility, court records state.

A preliminary hearing on the charge has been set for May 9. McKillip, who was also cited with failing to maintain control of his vehicle, was released to the custody of the Department of Corrections.

Ham hopes spring trip to Europe will bridge gap between students

By Mary Boone
Staff Writer

UI senior Cecilia Ham will be visiting West Germany and Czechoslovakia next month — a goodwill trip she hopes will lessen the gap between U.S. students and their counterparts overseas.

The 21-year-old literature, science and the arts major was one of two U.S. students chosen to travel to Europe at the invitation of the West German Student Association.

Ham, an executive member of the United States Student Association board of directors, and USSA President Greg Moore will be representing that group on the European tour slated for May 3-12.

"I'm really excited to have been selected to represent USSA on the trip," Ham said, noting her itinerary is being set by the West German student group and details of the tour have not yet been completed.

HAM IS CERTAIN, however, that she and Moore will be visiting the same West German military cemetery at Bitburg that President Ronald Reagan is scheduled to tour early next month. The two will also be attending the International Union of Students congressional session in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

"Neither USSA or the West German Student Association are members of the International Union of Students, so we'll be attending the session as observers," Ham said.

She added: "In the past there's been a lot of anti-American rhetoric discussed by this group. Just about every other student association in the world belongs to the International Union of Students, so we're in-interested in seeing if it's worth USSA's time to join."

Ham, who will be running for the USSA vice-presidency in July, also considers her upcoming trip as a "goodwill mission ... a means of ending the rumors and bringing us all closer together."

"WE ALL COME from countries with politically different governments. But the purpose behind student associations is to represent students — that can be a common ground if we will let it," she said.

The West German Student Association is also trying to arrange a "point-counterpoint" session between the U.S. and Soviet Union student association representatives on the issue of arms control. However, these plans have not yet been finalized.

Ham, who has never traveled overseas, said her instructors have been especially understanding of her need to miss classes — she'll be returning just in time for finals week.

"Add this trip to the fact that I've been gone to Washington, D.C., four times this year and you can tell I've missed a lot of classes," she said, admitting her extensive travel this semester may affect her grades.

"I'VE ALWAYS, in theory, been a strong advocate of students having the opportunity to learn about other cultures from direct contact with other cultures," she said. "It seems to me that a gathering of students from all over the world is one of the best opportunities to learn from that I can imagine. I may have missed out on class discussions, which are in themselves important, but I've learned a lot this year through hands-on experience."

In addition to applying for a passport and other usual pre-trip preparations, Ham said she's been busy brushing up on international news. Although interpreters will be provided, Ham has also been studying German flashcards from the UI language laboratory to familiarize herself with the language.

"Because of classes I've taken and lobbying experience I had with USSA, I don't feel like I'm going into this thing cold. I'm not exactly sure what to expect," she said. "I'm just going with an open mind and I'll do my best to enjoy the opportunity."

Dorsey Ellis cited for 'creativity'

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Numerous reversions of state funds during the past several years have made the allocation of resources among the UI academic units a discouraging, often controversial task.

But many UI officials, including UI President James O. Freedman, say UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis' abundant creativity and imagination have played an important role in minimizing the effect these reversions have had on the UI's educational quality.

Freedman said Ellis, a tenured professor at the UI College of Law who became the UI's chief financial executive in January 1984, displayed "enormous creativity" in stretching the UI's $167 million operating budget last year, despite a 2.8 percent reduction built into this budget by Gov. Terry Branstad. "He has just done a superb job," added the UI president.

UI LAW PROFESSOR Randall Bezanon, who was a student in one of Ellis' law classes several years ago before serving as his predecessor in the central administration, joined Freedman in praising his former mentor's ingenuity.

"Dan has a great deal of imagination, and the need for imaginative approaches to problems is at a premium right now," said Bezanon.

While his colleagues commend the job he has done, Ellis described his first year as a vice president as "a pretty difficult year."

"I DIDN'T HAVE a lot of spare time" during the first year as vice president, he said, adding, "But I did learn an awful lot." Shortly after Ellis took over as vice president for finance, it became apparent the "hiring slowdown" Bezanon had put into effect was not saving enough money and that a freeze would have to be implemented.

A few months later, continuing budget constraints forced Ellis to ask the deans of the UI colleges to plan for a 5 percent budget reduction during the next academic year.

THE LOUD CRIES of protest that this request brought from UI faculty members and students appear to still trouble Ellis.

"There was an awful lot of unnecessary pessimism created in that process," said Ellis. "I wish I would have been able to communicate in a more effective way to the departments and colleges why it was necessary to cut by 5 percent."

Ellis also said the difficulties experienced by a private computer software firm the UI had created compounded the problems facing him during the first several months of 1984.

After the state Board of Regents became concerned about possible conflict of interest problems concerning the company, Computer Aided Design Software, Inc., Ellis became chairman of its board of directors.

OFFICIALS HAVE CONFIRMED CADSI nearly went bankrupt in July, but the company eventually succeeded in finding outside financing funding in early August — thanks to an agreement Ellis negotiated with officials from Computervision, Inc. "I've stubbed my toes on all sorts of things," said Ellis. "But I don't think I have made any major permanent errors that weren't corrected."

Although the newest of the UI's four vice presidents has become one of the more influential members of the UI administration, Ellis said he was seriously considering leaving the UI before Freedman took over as president in April 1982.

In 1981 Ellis spent a year at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., as a visiting professor and a member of Emory's newly established law and economic studies center.

Ellis said he was attracted to Emory because its administrators were "trying to build up the university in general and the law school in particular."

He explained the regents' decision to appoint Freedman as UI president was an important factor in luring him back to Iowa.

"I didn't think the university would be able to talk him (Freedman) into coming," said Ellis, adding he originally became acquainted with Freedman 15 years ago when the UI president spent several months on campus as a visiting law professor.

HE SAID THE REALIZATION that "Emory is not nearly the university Iowa is, and it never will be," also influenced his decision to return to the UI College of Law in 1982.

His return to the UI coincided with Bezanon's announcement indicating he would step down as vice president and return to teaching. Ironically, Ellis was a member of the first UI Faculty Senate committee charged with recommending a successor for Bezanon.

Ellis maintains, however, that he had no desire to replace Bezanon at the time. "I was very happy in the law school," he said. "That period was one of the most productive periods of my life as a scholar."

But after the search committee spent more than a year unsuccessfully trying to find a suitable replacement for Bezanon, Ellis said "some of my colleagues from the law faculty suggested I think about the job."

HE SAID BEZANON was one of these colleagues who avidly encouraged him to consider applying for the post. "Randy's enthusiasm to find someone to fill the position may have been due to his desire to get out," joked Ellis.

Nearly 100 apply for Iowa City attorney

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

A committee of local citizens helping the Iowa City Council select a new city attorney from the 97 applications submitted by Thursday's deadline will probably make its recommendation to the council May 10.

"The committee has always said it would recommend a small number to the council," Human Relations Director Anne Carroll said Thursday. She said the names of the three to five top candidates, as judged by the City Attorney Review and Selection Advisory Committee, will be forwarded to the council to make a final decision.

The seven-member committee, which includes former Mayor Mary Neuhauser and former City Attorney John Hayek, was appointed by the council to find a successor to City Attorney Robert Jansen. Last fall, Jansen announced his resignation effective Dec. 31, 1984, but he agreed to stay on until the council finds a replacement.

THE COUNCIL IS searching for a full-time city attorney to be paid a minimum annual salary of $45,000 to $50,000. The city has previously hired a part-time city attorney paid on an hourly basis, who also operated a private practice in Iowa City.

The city paid $49,400 last year for the legal services of Jansen and Hayek, who provided consultation on the city's downtown urban renewal project.

Thursday was the final day applicants for the position could submit resumes to the city. The original deadline was April 15, but that was extended 10 days due to a publication error in the Iowa Bar Association Newsletter.

Carroll said about 97 applications had been received by Thursday, and the 10-day extension only produced one or two additional ones.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS have already interviewed 10 applicants and will continue to conduct additional interviews prior to their recommendation to the council. Applicants are interviewed on their knowledge of planning and zoning legalities, civil rights law, urban development law, labor law, public financing, administrative law and public transportation policy.

The city has received applications from individuals in various legal backgrounds, including private attorneys, city attorneys and county attorneys in states from Texas to Pennsylvania.

Among the Iowa applicants are Richard Boyle, assistant city attorney in Iowa City, Ames City Attorney John Klaus, Delaware County Attorney Robert Glaser and Buchanan County Attorney Allan Vander Hart.

The city spent approximately $686 to advertise the city attorney position in newspapers and bar association publications nationwide.

S. Africans charged for treason

DURBAN, South Africa (UPI) — Sixteen black people were charged Thursday with treason — an offense punishable by death — in a 588-page indictment that set the stage for South Africa's biggest political trial in 20 years.

Hours after the defendants appeared in a court in Durban, about 275 miles southeast of Johannesburg, a black man was killed in a busy industrial area of the city when a bomb he was carrying exploded in his arms.

Police refused to speculate on the bomb's probable target but witnesses said the man was walking opposite a Dunlop tire factory when the device exploded.

Earlier, 16 members of the United Democratic Front — a coalition of more than 600 black political, social, religious, labor and sports groups — appeared in court and were served with copies of the indictment charging them with treason.

Among the accused are UDF co-presidents Archie Gumede and Albertina Sisulu, wife of ANC executive board member Walter Sisulu, who is imprisoned with Nelson Mandela.

The trial is expected to be the biggest political trial since Mandela, president of the outlawed African National Congress, was sentenced to life imprisonment for treason in 1964.

MANDELA HAS recently rejected the government's offer to release him in exchange for his promise to forsake his political commitments.

The 16 members of the UDF, South Africa's leading dissident organization, were accused of plotting to topple the white minority government by creating chaos.

The indictment, which covers a five-year period dating back to 1980, charges that the UDF, which claims more than 1.5 million members, is "committed to revolutionary change in South Africa."

The indictment accuses the movement of "collaborating with outside influences ... to promote revolution, unrest and strife."

The defendants are scheduled to go on trial May 20 in the Pietermaritzburg Supreme Court.

Court sources said the prosecution is expected to call 160 witnesses.

Eight of the 16 have been in jail awaiting trial since December 1984. The others were arrested in raids early this year. All were being held without bond.

Their lawyer asked a magistrate to grant bail Thursday and the request was taken under advisement. The prosecution urged that the request for bail be denied.

Third World nations decry racism

BANDUNG, Indonesia (UPI) — Third World delegates representing two-thirds of the world's population adopted a declaration Thursday denouncing Israel and South Africa as "racist" and calling for nuclear disarmament.

An 11-page draft declaration issued at the close of the 30th anniversary commemoration of the Asia-Africa Conference glossed over potentially divisive Third World issues, while branding Israel and South Africa as international pariahs.

The more than 80 nations taking part in the commemoration "expressed their indignation and condemned the racist brutal practices of Israel against the Arab population in the occupied territories of Palestine, South Lebanon and Golan."

"They remained fully convinced that there can be no just and lasting solution to the Middle East conflict until Israel totally and unconditionally withdraws from all Palestinian and Arab lands ...," the declaration reads.

"... there can be no just and lasting solution to the Middle East conflict until Israel ... unconditionally withdraws from all Palestinian and Arab lands ..." reads the assembly's declaration.

apartheid remains one of the most urgent tasks before the international community," the declaration said.

Diplomats at Bandung's Merdeka (Freedom) Hall said Israel, South Africa and nuclear proliferation represented "safe" issues on which the delegates could agree, while there was little hope of consensus on issues like Cambodia, Afghanistan and the Iran-Iraq war.

The declaration strongly urged all "nuclear weapon states" to "cease all nuclear weapons tests and the production of nuclear weapons" and welcomed negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union that would ban nuclear and space weapons.

CHINA AND INDIA, both of whom have nuclear arsenals, were reported to have initially insisted that the declaration single out the superpowers as representing the nuclear threat to the world.

Indonesian President Suharto, who diplomats said was the driving force behind building the Bandung meeting into a major Third World forum, is a strong advocate of nuclear disarmament.

At a press conference at the close of the two-day commemoration, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumaatmadja admitted that bilateral disputes had at times disrupted the "Bandung spirit" of Afro-Asian solidarity.

The United Nations estimates that just over 3 billion of the world's 4.6 billion people live in Africa and Asia.

Mobs clash over India's new caste policies

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Rival mobs angered over government caste policies clashed with swords and stones Thursday and hurled acid at each other in the western state of Gujarat. Police said 10 people died and at least 25 others were wounded.

The latest deaths raised to 68 the number of people killed in the last three months in Gujarat state, the Press Trust of India domestic news agency reported.

Officials feared the death toll could climb much higher because 24 people were reported missing following Hindu-Moslem clashes Monday in a labor camp near the Gujarat state capital of Ahmedabad. Those battles left some 5,000 homeless.

The bloodshed in Gujarat, birthplace of India's independence leader Mohandas K. "Mahatma" Gandhi, began nearly three months ago.

The riots were sparked by protests against new government policies that dramatically increase the quotas of lower-caste Hindus, known as "untouchables," and tribal people in state-run colleges and the civil service.

The fighting has pitted upper-caste Hindus against lower caste Hindus, Hindus against Moslems, and rioters against police.

THE PRESS TRUST said police fired into a crowd of 3,000 people, some of them wielding swords, in the Sardar-nagar suburb of Ahmedabad, capital of Gujarat state, 500 miles southwest of New Delhi.

A police contingent had gone to the Sardarnagar area to investigate a complaint that a mob armed with swords and other weapons was threatening other people in the community.

Both groups attacked the police contingent, injuring an inspector. Police then opened fire, killing two people, the Press Trust said.

Police shot and killed two other people in the town of Kadi in the northern district of Mehsana while dispersing stone-throwing mobs and arsonists, the news agency said.

A village leader in the same district was killed by a crowd of 200 people who came from a neighboring village, the Press Trust said.

Five people were stabbed to death in clashes in Ahmedabad and 25 others were injured — 20 in stabbings and five in attacks with acid, the news agency said.

Opposition parties have demanded dismissal of the Gujarat state government headed by Chief Minister Madhvasinh Solanki, a leader of Rajiv Gandhi's Congress (I) Party who took office following state elections in March.

But Gandhi pledged to party leaders in New Delhi Thursday that the state government "is not to be disturbed."

Drug trafficker accused of killing two in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Witnesses say a narcotics trafficker accused in the murder of a U.S. drug agent "tortured and killed" two other Americans who wandered into a restaurant where he was eating, U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said Thursday.

Gavin's disclosure came as President Miguel de la Madrid announced a reorganization of the nation's police forces in response to criticism, primarily from the United States, of corruption by Mexican narcotics agents in their probe of the slaying of the U.S. drug investigator.

The two missing Americans, John Walker of Minneapolis, Minn., and Alberto Radelat of Fort Worth, Tex., disappeared Jan. 30 or Jan. 31 in the city of Guadalajara, 300 miles northwest of Mexico City. Gavin said three employees at La Langosta restaurant in Guadalajara have told authorities the pair walked in, and the ambassador theorized that Rafael Caro Quintero mistook them for narcotics agents.

Members of Walker's family have said he was writing a mystery novel about Mexican drug traffickers and was living in Guadalajara, considered a center of the illegal narcotics trade in Mexico, while he researched the book.

Peace Institute in Iowa gets go-ahead

By Susan Stoga
Staff Writer

The Iowa steering committee for the establishment of a peace institute in Iowa has decided to proceed with plans to locate the institute in Iowa regardless of whether it is funded by the federal government.

The committee's decision was announced this week after President Ronald Reagan delayed naming a national board to research a location for the institute. The naming of the board was postponed until Congress could debate several amendments to the bill establishing a national Peace Institute.

Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, chairwoman of the Iowa committee, said plans to construct the Iowa Institute of Peace are underway despite the halt on national plans.

"We are going to proceed with plans to establish an Iowa institute of peace because we think Iowa is a perfect place for one," Lloyd-Jones said. "Our plans are not stalled just because the federal government won't appoint a national board."

"We're going to have one here... we don't know if it is a national, a state or an extension of the national institute," she said. "I don't want people to think that we have given up all hope or halted all plans for a national institute."

The steering committee is currently working on budget and planning proposals for an Iowa Peace Institute.

LLOYD-JONES SAID the establishment of an Iowa institute would not rule out the possibility of locating a national peace institute in Iowa.

Area legislators will appear in a forum co-sponsored by the Johnson County League of Women Voters and the Council of Elders this Saturday at 9:30 a.m.

Standards raised in popular programs

By Robert Mann
Special to The Daily Iowan

Many businesses are using computers to do and store much of their work. Computers, and therefore people who work with computers, are in heavy demand.

News bombards the average citizen from many sources each day. There are news, sports and weather channels. There are not only heavy demands for these types of communicators, but also for public relations and advertising employees.

What do these situations have in common? They both have helped to force two degree areas in the UI College of Liberal Arts to lower the rapidly increasing enrollment numbers they have experienced in the past few years. One degree area, the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, decided to limit the number of students it would accept; while the other area, Computer Science, simply made admission to its program more difficult.

KENNETH STARCK, director of the journalism school, explained the main reason behind the school's enrollment cap by saying it "makes no sense" to allow the student population to triple while the number of faculty members remains about the same. The limit was instituted a year ago.

Linda Smith, administrative assistant for the School of Journalism, said the department tries to keep only about 250 students on as majors in any given semester, which means about 125 students are accepted as majors each year.

"We simply could not handle the number of students coming in," says Department of Computer Science program assistant Pam Betzel.

Students must apply to the school to receive major status, and can do so only after completing two pre-major classes and earning at least 55 semester hours by the end of the semester they apply, according to a journalism school pamphlet.

Overall grade point average is the most important consideration in a student's application, the pamphlet says, although such factors as scholastic improvement, performance in the pre-major classes and a written statement from the student are also taken into account.

"A GOAL (of the admissions policy) was to reduce enrollment, and in that aspect it's been a success," Starck said, "but it's hard to know exactly what to look for" yet in terms of overall success.

The Department of Computer Science, a

The forum, which is the last in a series of meetings the league has sponsored this legislative session, will be held at the Iowa City-Johnson County Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St.

Naomi Novik, league president, said the forum is open to the public and interested citizens are encouraged to attend.

"The legislators will be giving their summary of the session and then will answer any questions," Novik said.

The House Wednesday approved legislation permitting private stores in smaller Iowa towns to sell liquor on consignment.

The bill gives the Iowa Beer and Liquor Control Department authority to make arrangements for consignment sales with private retail outlets.

Passed on a voice vote, the measure now travels to the Senate for approval.

Iowans delinquent in paying taxes will now be able to pay their debts without possible prosecution or penalty, according to a measure approved by the Iowa House Wednesday.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, sponsor of the bill, said the amnesty measure gives people who are delinquent in their payments two months to "clear their consciences and pay the state." Penalties, however, will be increased if residents still owe money after the amnesty period.

Doderer said the state hopes to bring in approximately $5 million under the amnesty legislation.

The measure will now be considered by the Senate.

The Iowa Senate Wednesday overwhelmingly approved legislation making it easier to rehabilitate buildings in the state.

The Senate voted 47-0 to establish court procedures to allow qualified persons to assume responsibility for abandoned homes they wish to rehabilitate.

Under the proposal, a city or interested individual must file through district court to have a building condemned.

Before the building can be legally considered a nuisance, the building's owner would first be given a chance to make improvements. Next in line would be individuals who have invested in the property.

If neither of the parties are interested in the building, the court can name any interested party as a receiver for the property. To be considered as a receiver, an individual would have to present an acceptable financial and construction plan for renovation of the building.

Arthur Fleck, a professor of computer science and chair of that department, said the quality of students in the program has improved since tougher admission requirements were imposed. "I think it's been quite successful," he said. "It hasn't given us complete control" over the department's program; but it wasn't designed to do so, he said.

The number of majors in both areas is similar, with computer science having 236 majors enrolled for fall 1985. The GPA, however, are different. The lowest GPA accepted by the journalism school for the fall 1985 semester was 2.76, while last semester it was even higher at 2.8.

PAT WESTFALL, advisor and instructor at the School of Journalism, defended the minimum GPA, saying, "Screening some students out now may be better in the long run, (because) journalism isn't an easy skill."

Representatives from both departments say improving the quality of their programs was also a consideration when they changed their admission requirements.

"We... wanted students to be better prepared for the computer science major so they could decide 'Is that for me?'" Betzel said.

"One of the goals of the application process is to eliminate some of the weaker students," Westfall said, "and I think the students understand this."

Bitburg plans provoke 'mourning'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan met with his Cabinet and top aides over lunch Thursday to review plans for his European economic summit trip as Jewish leaders called for a "day of mourning" to mark his visit to a German war cemetery.

With the White House insisting that Reagan will tour the Bitburg cemetery, Charles Wick — director of the U.S. Information Agency and a member of Reagan's "kitchen cabinet" — joined those urging the president to abandon the plan.

Almost 200 members of Congress signed a letter to Chancellor Kohl saying the planned visit "had the unintended effect of reopening painful wounds here" and urged Kohl to reconsider the invitation to Reagan.

Meanwhile in Bonn, the West German Parliament rejected a motion to cancel Reagan's visit to the military cemetery, and a popular magazine, Quick, blamed opposition to the trip on "the influence of Jews" in the United States.

THE GREENS, an anti-military opposition party, sought to drop the Bitburg cemetery from the itinerary of Reagan's visit because soldiers buried there include 47 members of Adolf Hitler's Waffen SS. The motion, however, was defeated 422-24.

Kohl has warned that American-German relations will be harmed if the cemetery visit is canceled.

The Quick picture magazine, one of the more popular magazines in West Germany, said the Jewish influence is "supported by the power of the big media."

In Washington, Ed Leavy, director of the regional office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, called the Quick magazine story the kind of "straight-out anti-Semitism" that led to the Holocaust.

Leavy said, "we're saddened to see any media in Germany returning in any way to what we saw 40 years ago when the media turned their hatred against the Jews and led to the murders of 6 million people."

"There's no question in my mind that when you see someone talking about Jewish-owned media or Jewish influence, that is the kind of thing that... created the whole atmosphere that allowed the Nazis to do what they did to the Jewish people," Leavy said.

ACCOMPANYING the Quick article is a picture of Reagan shaking hands with Rabbi Marc Tannenbaum. It is captioned: "Power and voices of the Jews."

Tannenbaum, director of international relations for the New York-based American Jewish Committee, characterized the magazine's comments as "classic anti-Semitism and scape goating of the Jews."

"It appears that many of the German people have learned really nothing from the Nazi Holocaust and what is most tragic is that those who have not learned from it are subject to the possibility of repeating that history," Tannenbaum said in a telephone interview.

The Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung blamed opposition to the Bitburg visit on "blind fanaticism" and added: "Such distortions, like those currently being heard from an American senator, can be overcome by arguments but those who distort won't listen to reason."

THE NEWSPAPER apparently referred to Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, an outspoken critic of the Bitburg visit. A spokesman for Metzenbaum said the real issue "is the blind fanaticism of Germany under the Hitler regime. And the SS people who are buried at Bitburg are the most fanatical of the blind fanatics of that time."

Leaders of Conservative Judaism, the largest branch of Judaism in the United States, said Thursday they will observe May 5 as "a day of mourning, prayer and fasting" if Reagan goes through with the Bitburg visit.

In a telegram to 1,200 rabbis and 850 synagogue presidents, leaders of the United Synagogue of America and the Rabbinical Assembly, urged the movement's 1.2 million adherents to use the day for special religious services and public protests.

Aid

them to put pressure on the Nicaraguan government.

"Because Speaker (Thomas) O'Neill, senators (John) Kerry (D-Mass.) and (Tom) Harkin (D-Iowa), and Congressman Michael Barnes (D-Md.) were the key players in this communist victory, we call on them publicly to put pressure on the Sandinistas to come to the negotiating table," they said.

Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto said Congress had "said 'no' to banditry of the state and said 'yes' to the authentic democrats who want peace and reject the bullying by those who believe that their military and economic superiority give them the right to act like owners and men of the world."

Honduras

problem for us," O'Connor said.

Lt. Col. Larry Livingston, commanding officer of the 750-member Marine landing team that came ashore Tuesday from a nine-ship Navy fleet, said the landing had come off with "no real problems we didn't anticipate."

One problem was a continuing shortage of helicopters. Last week, the new Blackhawk UH-60 helicopter used by the 101st Airborne Division was grounded for safety reasons.

LOCAL SCHOOL BUSES were rented to fill the gap by ferrying paratroopers into a supposedly guerrilla-infested jungle inland.

The combat phase of the operation, a mopping up of Victoria Liberation Front guerrillas, is scheduled to end Saturday after three days of simulated combat in the hilly terrain.

While U.S. officials took pains to depict the maneuvers as a joint effort between the two governments, its planning and execution was clearly dominated by U.S. forces.

For example, Honduras contributed only two naval vessels, which were assigned the task of keeping sailing and fishing craft out of the way of the U.S. fleet.

This impoverished country of 4.2 million people did provide the terrain and U.S. military units were careful to minimize the impact of the exercise on the civilian population.

This dispatch is the last planned filing by the five member print media members of the 10-member media pool that left Washington Sunday morning to cover the military exercise. This dispatch was transmitted through Defense Department communications facilities from aboard the USS Nassau with the understanding that there be no censorship.

available for changing the law."

In addition to the fine and probation sentence, McManus ordered Martin to attend two naturalization ceremonies this fall and next spring. He explained these ceremonies are for "immigrants to the United States who... very deliberately came to this country seeking its benefits and obligations as well."

MARTIN WILL ACT as an observer at the ceremonies, which include a "pretty significant" oath that pledges, among other things, to defend the Constitution and laws of the United States and bear arms for the Armed Forces. "Sometimes I think it's a shame that all native Iowans don't have to take that oath," McManus said.

UI Law Professor Peter Shane, who spoke for Martin in the pre-sentence hearing, said he believes the sentence was "unduly harsh."

But he said, "I think Judge McManus was trying conscientiously to balance his own strong feelings about the offense with Rusty's strong background and character."

Martin's character did come under fire from Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Teig, however. "Mr. Shane said the defendant has never displayed dishonor or an unpatriotic attitude. I don't know if that's true."

TEIG, WHO DECLARE himself a conscientious objector during the Vietnam War, went on to criticize Martin for an appearance on national television, where Martin compared his shuffle through the U.S. court system to a Soviet Union "show trial" designed to frighten people.

Martin maintained Thursday that he was selectively prosecuted because he was a vocal opponent of draft registration. "My crime was not refusing to register, it was refusing to be silent. Patriotism means obedience in Russia. Here in America, we have duty to think for ourselves," he stated in a press release distributed by the eight UI students who traveled to Cedar Rapids to support him.

THE STUDENTS said they will consider fundraising efforts to help Martin pay back the $10,000 loan he was forced to take from his parents. In addition, Iowa Peace Network Coordinator Peggy Huppert said helping the non-registrant raise the fine money "could sound like something we might want to do."

Huppert agreed with Shane that Martin's sentence was "harsh," which is "indicative of the government's mood" regarding draft enforcement.

She said the government is beginning a trend of "getting serious about prosecuting men who are not registering — I'm sure we're going to see more of it... They're tightening the screws."

Cooperation

Iowa City.

City officials also cited the sale of Elm Grove Park to the county April 9 as another factor leading to better cooperation between the two. The county plans to construct a county office building on that ground.

Some other factors leading to a better working relationship between the city and the county include the joint construction of Scott Boulevard and conducting meetings twice a year to discuss relations, which were started by former Mayor Mary Neuhauser.

City and county officials have also worked together on the zoning problems at the Iowa City Municipal Airport and the conflict with the Federal Aviation Administration. "In the long run, we are all working with the same dollars," McDonald said. "A lot of times we can come up with substantial savings."

"The whole point of this is that communication is much better than non-communication and only getting to each other after the fight has started," TePaske said.

A 'DI' apology

Regrettably, from time to time The Daily Iowan publishes work that was plagiarized from another source. Usually we are alerted to such incidents by astute readers. Regrettably, we must now acknowledge that a Digressions column by DI staff writer J.B. Glass was "more than casually indebted" to articles by California State University at Los Angeles Athletic Director Dennis J. Keihn, to use the words of a DI reader in a letter that appears on this page. Glass's column was published April 17.

Based on a comparison of Glass's and Keihn's work, we are satisfied that plagiarism occurred. No explanation of intentions or motivations can excuse it, as there can be no justification for such an occurrence. It is categorically wrong and we apologize both to our readers and to Mr. Keihn.

Moreover, we thank the reader who pointed the incident out to us. The DI serves an informed, well-read and critical audience, and this fact imposes the highest of standards upon us. We hope this serves constantly to make the DI a better newspaper.

Showing some guts

The U.S. House of Representatives finally showed some guts. It bucked President Reagan and sided with the majority of Americans in voting not to send any aid to the Nicaraguan contras. The Senate, and Iowa's Charles Grassley, voted with the president.

What the president should do now is call Nicaragua's bluff, if that is what it is. The Sandinista government has sent an offer that includes restoring press freedom and civil rights and negotiating with the United States. The administration says it does not believe the Nicaraguan government and it has so far refused serious, direct, long-term negotiation, preferring instead to try to pressure the Sandinistas to "say uncle," to quote Reagan himself.

But good faith efforts to negotiate and a call on the Sandinistas to make good on their offer can only produce good results. If the offer is legitimate, then the whole hemisphere will be better off. Better relations, more democracy and an end to any real or imagined threat from Nicaragua would be the result.

If the offer is only a ploy and the administration makes a good faith effort, then its hand is strengthened when it comes back again in the fall to ask for more aid to the contras.

Too little, too late

On April 15, South Africa withdrew its troops from southern Angola and repositioned them in Namibia. Three days later, South African President Pieter Botha declared that his government would allow Namibians a limited amount of self rule.

This move is too little, too late. The history of South Africa's involvement with Namibia, or South West Africa, as it is often called in the west, is nearly as sordid as the history of its apartheid.

South African interest in the German colony of South West Africa began in the late 19th century. South West Africa had, and continues to have, the only diamond reserves that challenge South Africa's monopoly on the gem. In the 1880s, after the DeBeers Consolidated Mine consortium was able to unite all the mining interests in South Africa, it cut a deal with the Germans who owned mines in South West Africa to bring the diamond trade into a single cartel.

The revenue generated by the early diamond trade allowed South Africa to develop its gold mines, which in turn provided the economic base for South Africa to become the wealthiest country in Africa. The need for cheap labor, to give South Africa a competitive edge in the international gold markets, also provided the impetus for the system that has resulted in contemporary apartheid in South Africa.

After World War I, the League of Nations at Versailles gave South West Africa, which was a colony of the losing Germans, to South Africa, which was in the British Commonwealth. The South Africans were to govern the South West Africans until the latter were able to take over for themselves. The International Court of Justice in 1950 ruled that the South Africans were taking too long to forsake control. That ruling was overturned on technical grounds, but was reaffirmed in 1966 and in 1971.

In 1974, the U.N. General Assembly voted to deprive South Africa of its seat at the United Nations not for its policy of apartheid, but for continued hegemony over Namibia.

In 1977, Canada, France, West Germany, Great Britain and the United States, who together account for more than 85 percent of South Africa's foreign trade, united into what was called the "contact group" to organize the orderly withdrawal of South Africa from Namibia. In 1978 this contact group, along with Angola, Botswana, Mozambique and Zambia in the U.N. Security Council, passed Resolution 435, calling for the orderly transfer of autonomy to the Namibians.

South Africa has continued to maintain that South West Africa should be used as a buffer zone between it and Angola. So it continues to ignore Resolution 435 and continues to keep its military poised in Namibia.

And South Africa continues to control Namibia's diamond trade, which accounted for more than a third of Namibia's domestic revenue. Protesters should add Namibia to apartheid in their demands of South Africa for human rights. Seventy years is too long for an orderly transfer of power to the indiginous population.

Are two brains better than none?

DEAR MR. TAKE IT FROM ME: Boy, am I ever confused! I thought the Department of Education was there to help facilitate people's, and especially handicapped and disadvantaged people's, education.

But Eileen Gardner, who recently spent a fun-filled week as a DOE official, has written, "... (the handicapped) falsely assume that the lottery of life has penalized them at random. This is not so. Nothing comes to an individual that he has not, at some point, summoned. Each of us is responsible for his own situation."

She also implied that an outward handicap is the reflection of an inward moral failing or spiritual inadequacy. Is this true? Also, if defects can be summoned, can advantages be summoned as well? I'd like to summon beauty and wealth. As things stand now, I can't even successfully summon my dog.

Signed, Boy, Am I Ever Confused!

Dear Boy:
 No, spiritual and moral shortcomings

Michael Humes

ings do not lead to physical or mental handicaps. They are, however, valued qualifications for employment at the Department of Education. If you have any, I'd send them a resume right pronto. Your familiarity with dogs should be an advantage, too, since most dogs are morally and spiritually superior to most DOE officials.

Dear Mr. Take It From Me:

I am disturbed by all the attention lavished on the Hagler-Hearns fight. This event earned millions of dollars for the fighters, the promoters and various merchandisers, was extensively promoted in every form of media and ended only after one fighter was knocked loopy and the other had a gash the size of an arroyo over his eye.

To my mind, this has all the entertainment value of a train derailment.

Why hasn't Congress banned this brutal "sport"?

Signed, Bruises Easily.

Dear Bruises:

If Bernhard Goetz is a hero, why not Marvin Hagler? Hagler doesn't beat up people just because they're acting in what he interprets to be a threatening manner, he beats them up because they want to inflict a brain injury on him. And he hasn't killed anybody.

And Congress might have a little trouble explaining why they banned boxing after funding the construction of MX missiles, which do a bit more than give people a bloody nose and a poor memory. It would be a lot cheaper to just hire Hagler to go over and punch out the Politburo's lights.

Dear Mr. Take It From Me:

I read somewhere that the stegosaurus, a large vegetarian ornithiscian dinosaur of the Upper Jurassic epoch native to Colorado and Wyoming and best known for the remarkable armor plates along its spine and the spikes on its tail, had two brains. One, located in the lumbar region, controlled the actions of the hind quarters, while the other, located in the skull where brains are supposed to be, controlled the front quarters.

Is this true? Does this effect appear anywhere in nature today?

Signed, Nothing Better To Do.

Dear Nothing:

Yes, the stegosaurus had two brains, which acted in tandem to move the beast randomly about the landscape, devise the theory of supply-side economics and appear as guest hosts of "The 700 Club," which, although all were mindless tasks, still stretched their limited intellectual resources.

The only comparable modern phenomenon is Ronald Reagan, who also has two brains — one to perform intellectual functions and one to operate his mouth. To my knowledge, the president does not have plates on his back or spikes on his tail, nor do his two brains have much to do with each other.

It's how you play the game

To the editor:

I am writing to express my outrage about an act of plagiarism committed by J.B. Glass of the Daily Iowan staff. His Digressions column of April 17, titled "UI student athletes: Balancing sports and the three R's," is more than casually indebted to an essay written by Dennis J. Keihn in The Chronicle of Higher Education April 10 titled, "Balancing academics and athletics: It's not an impossible task."

Some readers may find the appearance of the term "balancing" in both titles merely coincidental, and certainly the growing conflict between athletic programs and academic responsibilities has been debated in several circles during the past month. But anyone familiar with Keihn's essay will recognize that Glass takes virtually all of his ideas from the Keihn piece, and no reader can dismiss several striking similarities between specific phrases in the two articles as mere coincidence.

One example:

Keihn wrote: "Coaching is another area of concern. If the major criterion for successful coaching continues to be a favorable won-loss record, that record needs to be redefined and expanded to include graduation of athletes in the 'won' column. Any student athlete who does not graduate within a reasonable time — say five years — should be counted as a loss."

Glass wrote: "Coaching is another area of concern. If the major criterion for successful coaching is the won-loss record, maybe that record must be redefined. For example, each athlete who does not graduate in five years could be counted as a loss against her or his coach's record."

Glass does quote Keihn midway through his column, but the two sentences attributed to the source don't begin to portray how much of Keihn's essay has found its way into Glass's column. Not surprisingly, Glass does not mention the source of Keihn's comments, because an accurate citation of the Chronicle would send DI readers to the source of virtually all of Glass's assertions.

This type of plagiarism is a type of stealing, but there are other factors here that disturb me. Glass enters that column as a piece of individual expression. Unfortunately, the ideas — and a good bit of the language — were copyrighted by Dennis Keihn, and for Glass to pass such remarks off as his own work is an insult to DI readers and an affront to the academic community.

Of course, Glass might claim that the ideas in Keihn's essay are not owned by anybody — they are shared by several writers who have thought about the relationship between athletics and academics. Certainly. But for Glass to move so sloppily from Keihn's articulation of those ideas to his own remarks represents a serious misunderstanding of how to incorporate sources into his writing.

Perhaps Glass honestly believes that the cursory mention of Keihn's name in the 13th paragraph is sufficient, but this defense suggests that DI staff writers are severely lacking in basic reportorial skills, as well as the conceptual framework necessary to accurately and responsibly document one's sources — a technique basic to the apprenticeship of journalism.

Some might consider these comments exaggerated — the ravings of a fastidious English teacher who wants to see quotation marks in the right place. Hardly. What is most disturbing about this incident is the discrepancy between Glass's words and actions.

After reading his column, one might conclude that he valued academic integrity for athletes. The last time I checked, academic integrity was the responsibility of all students participating in extra-curricular activities. One would hope that the standards of honesty that Glass dictates for athletes would also apply in the field of journalism.

Plagiarism in writing is aptly analogous to cheating in sports, and in both arenas the effect is the same: Those who bend the rules for the sake of transient success ultimately sacrifice their own integrity and authority and expose themselves as shams who can't be trusted, let alone applauded.

When athletes or athletic administrators violate the standards of academic excellence to produce a winning team, the entire business of sport becomes suspect and cheapened. When a reporter borrows so casually and dishonestly from another writer's language and thoughts, the whole enterprise of writing and reporting looks shabby and insignificant.

Writing, like winning, is never easy, and the race in both fields is rarely won by the swift of tongue or foot. It is won by those who apply meticulous standards; by those who are painfully attentive to detail; more often than we think, it is won by those who are willing to sacrifice trophies and by-lines for the sake of their own integrity and the integrity of their craft.

Take back the support

To the editor:

I am disgusted that so-called "supportive" men are being allowed to attend the Take Back the Night rally May 4.

How do we decide who is "supportive"? One way is to notice which men actually attend the rally. Truly supportive men have enough knowledge of sexism to know that they are unwelcome at an event that is supposed to empower women. Women must empower each other.

I have an idea of which "supportive" men will attend Take Back the Night. They will be the "progressive" men. I have seen more than a few of these "supportive" men support, promote, defend and even commit violence against women — women they perceive to be a threat to their politically correct reputations. But of course the obvious misogyny of these violent men is whitewashed with terms for their victims such as "counter-revolutionary," "negative," "power-hungry," "manipulative," and my favorite, from the movie Born In Flames, "mal-content."

Men have proven over and over again their inability to change each other, or, except for a very few, even themselves. Men are not defenders of women, but are perpetrators (or at best tolerators) of violence against women.

Perhaps instead of attending the rally, men could get together and educate themselves about sexism. They could form study groups. Of course they probably won't get their names and pictures in The Daily Iowan for that, but the sacrifice must begin somewhere.

Men who feel that this sort of consciousness-raising is too advanced could simply stage a Take Back Your Brain rally. They could zip up their pants, retrieve their heads from their asses and pretend to be human beings. This of course does not have near the date potential, for straight men, that a rally with women has.

We never noticed

To the editor:

Have you ever noticed all the fabulous realities around campus? For instance, the only path that has been trampled into the Pentacrest lawn is the one between the signs that say, "Only you can make a path."

Or there are always two Cambuses going the opposite direction of the one you want but none going your way. And when your bus finally does come the driver pulls about 20 to 25 feet past you. Or, although the interdom bus stops in front of every dorm, someone always has to ring the bell to make sure the driver knows they're getting off.

Or some support group is always trying to force your acceptance by telling you that if you do something, which you do every day anyway, then you support them. Or all the people that look both ways before crossing a one-way street.

Or the people who complain about the dorm food but day after day can be found waiting in line to eat the stuff. Or all the people who go to the library to catch up on their sleep. Or the ...

House Republicans express anger over Indiana election re-count loss

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republicans, angry about losing an election re-count in Indiana, kept the chamber from its business Thursday with hours of parliamentary quibbling that led members to vote for adjournment in frustration.

Republicans asked for frequent roll calls and raised parliamentary points, such as whether one of their own colleagues had permission to quote from the Congressional Record.

Finally, Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash, brought cheers when he called for adjournment, saying, "At least for the moment, I think the business of the House has ended for this day and this week."

Republicans had threatened to disrupt the House because they felt cheated by the outcome of a re-count that led to the seating of one-term Democrat Frank McCloskey. The GOP wants to force a special election.

A House-run re-count, the first in 24 years, said McCloskey beat Republican Rick McIntyre by four votes, 116,645 to 116,641.

Indiana election officials twice said McIntyre won.

Republicans condemned the re-count as a constitutional violation and said a special election is the only fair way to settle the dispute.

HOUSE DEMOCRATIC LEADER Jim Wright, D-Texas, said a vote will be called next Tuesday on the GOP request for a special election in the 8th House District in southern Indiana. It would be followed by a vote next Wednesday on giving the seat to McCloskey.

The GOP stalled the start of legislative business for two and a quarter hours with requests for roll calls, a string of speeches and time-consuming parliamentary questions. The tactics were approved at a closed-door caucus.

Earlier, most of the 182 GOP congressmen joined in singing "We Shall Overcome" on the Capitol steps to demonstrate their ire over the re-count.

McIntyre, who lost the race according to the House, stood with his colleagues on the steps for a photograph, which placed him next to a sign reading "This Entrance Closed."

During the singing of "We Shall Overcome," a visiting high school choir burst into an impromptu chorus of the national anthem.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., mocked the song protest in a speech on the House floor.

"I was delighted to see you on the Capitol steps, singing 'We Shall Overcome,'" Mitchell said. "Of course, you didn't know the words."

Reagan, Chun to discuss security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan will meet with South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan to reaffirm America's security commitments in the face of new military maneuvers by North Korea, a senior U.S. official said Thursday.

Chun, after a stop in California, traveled to Washington for a round of talks with Secretary of State George Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and with the president on Friday.

Chun was welcomed by more than 1,000 Korean-Americans — as well as dozens of protesters he apparently never saw — when he arrived in Los Angeles Wednesday under tight security by U.S. and Korean Secret Service agents.

Demonstrators were kept about a quarter-mile from the Korean Airlines cargo terminal where Chun's 747 stopped.

The protesters accused Chun of failing to restore democracy in Korea following the assassination of President Park Chung Hee in 1979.

ONE DEMONSTRATOR, wearing a Reagan mask, patted the head of a dummy soldier. A sign around his neck read, "Welcome, my beloved puppet."

Chun said that South Korea is concerned about growing military threats from North Korea, as shown by alleged troop activities and buildups near the 151-mile Demilitarized Zone between the two countries.

The U.S. official praised the Chun regime for "quite significant" political progress with the release of political prisoners, the easing of restrictions on opposition leader Kim Dae Jung and last month's elections in which a new party emerged.

The Reagan-Chun meeting will be the third between the two presidents. Chun visited Washington in February 1981. Reagan went to Seoul in November 1983.

"The visit provides the president (Reagan) an opportunity to reaffirm our commitment to the security of the Korean peninsula," the official said.

"THE PURPOSE OF the visit as we see it is to reinforce the very positive developments we've seen in human rights, economics, North-South discussions and South Korea's growing role in the international economy," the official said.

Teenagers suspected of computer threats

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two teenagers were arrested in a computer extortion scheme in which a suspect known as the "Modem Maniac" terrorized another computer buff with electronic death threats and money demands, police said Thursday.

"We can still make your life unfit for living," the hacker, or hackers, who at various times used the names Modem Maniac, Lord Dragon and Bon Bon Man, stated in a message sent to the home computer of John Sands.

The teenagers were later released to the custody of their parents.

THE EXTORTIONISTS' message instructed Sands, 43, that unless he paid them $350, "then believe me you will spend more than $350 repairing broken windows, broken bones, crashed homes."

Sands began receiving the transmitted threats in March and they continued until last week when the juvenile suspects were confronted by police, Sands told UPI.

Sands operates a free computer "bulletin board" service for other computer enthusiasts who exchange computer industry information. The service's 500 subscribers can access it using their own computers and a telephone.

Wisconsin series a big test for Hawks' Luedtke

By J.B. Glass
Staff Writer

When starting Iowa catcher, and leading hitter, Jeff Gurtcheff came wheeling around third base in the second game of a doubleheader against Illinois last Saturday, his back-up, Brian Luedtke, was at the end of the bench.

"It was a weird feeling at first," Luedtke said. "I watched him come in and all I saw were both his ankles go underneath him."

"He looked like he landed on his knees," the freshman added. "And

Baseball

then he rolled over and he was holding his ankle. I couldn't really tell if it was broken and then he just looked into the trainer and said, 'Condo (trainer Steve Condon), I broke my ankle.'"

Down went Gurtcheff, who paced the 29-14 Hawkeyes (2-2 and tied for second in the Big Ten's Western Division) with a .444 batting average, 13 home runs and 60 runs batted in. "The next thing you know is that I have to take his place — it was really kind of overwhelming," Luedtke added.

LUEDTKE, WHO hails from Triangle, Va. and who was chosen by the Milwaukee Brewers in the 20th round last year, has become Coach Duane Banks' choice.

"We had a team meeting after the game," the 6-foot-1, 175 pounder said,

"and all Coach said was, 'well it was a tough loss but Luedtke can do the job,' and that's what I am going to do."

Luedtke, who is hitting at a .288 clip, 15-for-52, will handle Hawkeye hurlers again this weekend when Iowa travels to Madison, Wis., to meet the Badgers in a four-game series.

"That's not an easy thing for a team to overcome," Wisconsin Coach Steve Land said. "In some cases there is a letdown, but in more cases than not, the other players respond and probably play better then if he were in the lineup."

WISCONSIN, 3-5 in Big Ten play, fifth in the Western Division, has played like a water faucet this season — both hot and cold, according to Land. "I wish I knew," Land said about his team's streaky hitting. "Iowa's been scoring a lot of runs and we've had trouble scoring runs until lately. I look forward to it being a real good series."

While the Badgers' hitting has been on and off, their pitching has been coming on.

"Our pitching has improved since we started the Big Ten," Land said. "I think that has to do with the fact that the pitchers have had an ample amount of time to figure out what it's all about again."

Like the Wisconsin hurlers, Luedtke, who said this is a learning year for him, would like to get some more innings in behind and at the plate.

"I CAN'T TRY to be Jeff Gurtcheff or anything like that," he said. "I just have to go in and play the best I can."

If confidence was a problem at first, it is not anymore, as Luedtke said he has received his share of pats on the back from his teammates and Gurtcheff. "I went up to him (in bet- See Baseball, page 4B

Crucial stretch ahead for Iowa

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

Time is getting short. You don't have to remind Iowa softball Coach Ginny Parrish and her squad that the season is two weeks from an end, unless they rally to win Iowa's first conference crown.

Parrish and her troops know the only way they can extend their season is to win the Big Ten Championship and move on to NCAA play. If Iowa has any postseason visions floating around in its heads, winning three, or even sweeping a four-game series with second-place Michigan is a must.

The Hawkeyes will meet the

Softball

Wolverines in a pair of doubleheaders today and tomorrow in Ann Arbor, Mich.

"WE KNOW WE'RE not out of it," Iowa third baseman Carol Bruggeman said. "The pressure is there but we know Michigan can be beaten."

The Wolverines are holding down third place in the conference with a 7-3 record, percentage points behind Indiana and Northwestern, both tied at .64. Iowa is still in the hunt at 7-7, but the Hawkeyes know they hold their destiny in their own hands.

The Hawkeyes would need a sweep in Michigan and a sweep next Tuesday at Northwestern to have any chance of pulling back into the race. "We know the next six games are crucial," Parrish said. "I really don't know what to expect from Michigan. All I know is that they took three of four from Northwestern, so they must be pretty good."

IOWA WAS HINDERED by a lack of clutch hitting in last Tuesday's pair of 1-0 losses to Northwestern. Iowa pitcher Ann Coughenour believes the hitting woes are nothing a few well-timed hits wouldn't cure. "We all know we're capable of hitting the ball much better than we have been," the Hawkeye right-hander said. "I'm part of the hitting staff too and I haven't been getting the job done either."

Where the Hawkeyes have been getting the job done is on the mound. In the latest Big Ten statistics, released prior to last Tuesday's twinbill with Northwestern, the Hawkeye pitching staff of Coughenour, Reynolds and Tracy Langhurst was leading the league as a staff.

The trio's combined earned run average is a sparkling 0.90. Individually, Coughenour is second in ERA at 0.57, just a shade behind Northwestern all-American Lisa Ishika at 0.56. Reynolds is third in the league at 0.68.

THE SURPRISING statistic was the fact that Iowa had jumped into the lead in team batting with a .234 average in conference games. Leading the way for Iowa is left-fielder Mary Wisniewski at .365, good for third in the conference. Lisa Nicola is 10th at .286 while Marty Pump is 25th with a .222 average.

Bruggeman is well-aware the Hawkeyes need to hit to defeat Michigan. "I think we have to back up our pitchers a little better with our bats," the Charter Oak, Iowa native said. "If I can get on in the lead-off spot, maybe that can get the rest of the hitters going."

The Wolverines are expected to throw their one-two punch of Vicki Morrow and Michelle Bolster at the Hawkeyes this weekend while Parrish will probably counter with Coughenour and Reynolds, saving Langhurst for relief duties, if needed.

Hawkeyes out to meet goal at own invite

By Brad Zimanez
Staff Writer

One of the goals of the Iowa women's golf team at the start of the season was to win its own tournament. Now the opportunity has arrived as this morning the Hawkeyes will play 36 holes of the 54 hole Iowa Invitational tournament at the Finbine Golf Course.

The Hawkeyes will be competing for the title with Minnesota, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Illinois. Minnesota will be the toughest competition for Iowa. The Gophers defeated Iowa by four strokes at the Lady Seahawk Invitational in Wilmington, N.C., two weeks ago.

"IT'S VERY DEFINITELY been a goal for us (to win the Iowa Invitational)," Iowa Coach Diane Thomason said. "Minnesota will be tough and that's who we are picking as the competition. Wisconsin has a good player who will be a contender for medalist honors, but the competition will definitely be Minnesota."

"Our expectation is to win," Mary Baecke, an Iowa women's golfer from East Moline, Ill., said.

"There's going to be some good teams there but we beat them all before, so we think we can win this one. Minnesota and Nebraska might be in there close again, but everyone is psyched and ready to go for this tournament," she added.

Iowa defeated Nebraska earlier this year at the Rayburn Classic in Texas and Wisconsin two weeks ago in North Carolina.

"WE BEAT NEBRASKA on the spring trip and they are kind of down this year, I would say," Thomason said. "Illinois and Wisconsin are both teams we have beaten in the past."

The Hawkeyes have had a good two weeks of practice since their second-place performance and are looking forward to today's competition.

"Things have been going really well in practice, unbelievably well," Thomason said. "We've had some really good scores. This weekend during qualifying we shot 306 which is our record low at Finkbine."

"Practice has been going great,"

Mary Baecke

Baecke said. "We're just playing the course a lot because we haven't had a chance to play the course a lot lately since we've been gone. We're trying to get used to the course again and everybody has been playing really well the last week."

ONE OF THE goals of Thomason at this weekend's meet is to crown a medalist from Iowa and she thinks any one of five her players can take that honor.

"Bake (Mary Baecke) and Julie (Edgar) were the lowest qualifiers, but Lynn (Tauke) is also shooting pretty decent scores," Thomason said. "I feel Julie, Lynn and Mary Baecke have been more consistent with their scores and under 80 consistently and that is where they should be."

"It's been a goal to win the tournament but we would like to have a medalist," the veteran Iowa coach added. "We should have somebody who could win it. I think anyone of our players could win it, to be really honest, that shows how much depth we have as anyone of five of our top six players could do it."

MINNESOTA'S Julie Hennessy might have a little bit to say about winning the medalist honors as she finished second at the Lady Seahawk while Iowa's best finisher was Amy Bubon, who finished in a tie for sixth with Allison Groat of James Madison and Jackie Cannizzo of UNC-Wilmington.

"Our practices have been going really well and we have shot some low numbers," Hennessy said. "I've done fairly well this year and I am improving. At North Carolina I shot rounds of 81-73-77 and that placed second."

Minnesota has been without the help of Coach Anne Zahn who had a baby last week. The team is being coached by Nancy Harris in Zahn's absence. Hennessy doesn't think this will bother the Gopher team and she is confident that they will beat the Hawkeyes for the second time this year.

"I do think we will beat Iowa again," Hennessy said.

If Iowa doesn't beat Minnesota this weekend they will have another chance to beat the Gophers, along with the Buckeyes and the Hoosiers at the Big Ten Championship that will be held May 3 and 4 at Bloomington, Ind.

"Indiana is going to be tough as always along with Ohio State, but we think the way we are playing right now we can finish in the top three or four," Baecke said.

"Last year we were fourth and we think that we could have been third if we got to finish that last round. Our goal is to finish in the top three."

On Friday the golf action starts at 9:30 a.m. and continues until the 36 holes are finished.

Scrimmage brings end to spring drills

By Melissa Rapoport
Assistant Sports Editor

Saturday's intrasquad football scrimmage at Kinnick Stadium will mark the end of this year's spring season — a month loaded with progress.

"It was the most low-key spring training I've ever been associated with," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said in his opening statement in Wednesday's press conference. "We're very pleased with the progress we've made with the young guys and we really haven't had any major surprises."

With the seniors graduating, the 1:05 p.m. match-up will put quite a few new faces on display. "Offensively, we have replaced Jon Hayes (at tight end)," the Hawkeye coach said. "It looks like Mike Flagg and Craig Clark have a real good battle going on at that position."

"I HAD TO replace Owen Gill (at fullback) and Fred Bush right now looks like he'll be the No. 1 fullback... It looks like Tom Humphrey will be taking Bill Glass' place at left guard."

One offensive question still remains. Will running back Ronnie Harmon, who is currently rehabilitating a leg injury, be healthy for fall?

Fry said Harmon is "ahead of schedule" through jumping rope and running the stairs in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Regardless, he will remain questionable until mid-July.

"There's no way we can put a value on a guy like Ronnie Harmon," Fry said. "It's imperative we get him back."

UNTIL HARMON'S anticipated return to the squad, Rick Bayless will own the top spot. "Rick Bayless is No. 1," the Iowa coach said. "Kevin Harmon and Grant Goodman both made progress this spring in their ability at running back... But I think, basically, the offensive line is in tact now," he added.

With the solid offense comes some holes in the defense. "Really, the question marks are still on the defensive side of the ball," Fry said. "We still don't know who will replace (defensive tackle) George Little. It looks like it will be a freshman.

"Tim Anderson from Webster City (Iowa) will play defensive tackle in the spring game," he added. "Bruce Gear and Richard Pryor will be the No. 1 defensive ends."

IF THIS YEAR'S "low key" spring produced any surprises, it would be kicker Rob Houghtlin. With the graduation of Tom Nichol and with Gary Kostrubala participating in the Drake Relays Saturday, kicking duties will belong to walk-ons Tony Krueger and Houghtlin.

"I'm very impressed with him," Fry said about Houghtlin, who transferred from Miami (Ohio). "He's showed a lot of poise. He's had an impressive spring. He's a very refreshing kid. I like him because when I tell him something he listens."

To add to Fry's spring success, Iowa suffered no additional injuries. Three Hawkeye defenders, including all-American linebacker Larry Station, missed spring drills. Station, who is nursing a knee injury, was joined on the sidelines by cornerback Ken Sims and tackle Jon Vrieze.

Four track recruits ink tenders with Iowa

Iowa women's track Coach Jerry Hassard has been enjoying a successful season on the track and with the signing of four more recruits, it appears his luck is continuing in the recruiting wars.

Michelle Giampapa of Chicago, Ill., Rachelle Roberts of Columbus, Ind., Kristen Watters of Galesburg, Ill., and Wendy Bare of Eldridge have signed national letters of intent to run for the Hawkeyes next year.

Giampapa, a senior at Lane Tech High School, has finished among the top 20 at the Illinois State cross country championships and as high as sixth in distance races at the state track meet.

Roberts, a senior at Columbus East High School, is a two-time state 800-meter champion, and holds school and conference records in that event. During this year's indoor season she recorded a best of five minutes, five seconds in the 1600.

Watters, a senior at Galesburg High School, has finished in the top seven at the Illinois State Cross Country Championships the past three seasons, including a fifth-place finish as a sophomore. Watters was the conference champ for three years in cross-country. She lettered in cross-country four years and captained her squad as a junior and senior.

Bare is the defending Iowa State cross country champion. She also holds records in track at North Scott and was conference champion in the 3000 as a junior. Bare earned all-state honors in cross country her sophomore year.

Miler Corrigan signs with Wheeler's Hawks

Sean Corrigan, one of the top three middle distance runners in Illinois, according to Iowa assistant track coach Larry Wiczorek, signed a national letter of intent with Iowa Wednesday night.

The Hoffman Estates, Ill., native has run under four minutes, 20 seconds for the mile. "He's a real outstanding runner," Wiczorek said. "He'll help us a lot."

Parrish signs Coughenour to softball letter

It looks like Iowa softball Coach Ginny Parrish knows a good family when she sees it. Parrish signed Cara Coughenour of Kingsley to a national letter of intent to play for the Hawkeyes next season.

Coughenour's sister, Ann, is a mainstay on the Hawkeye pitching staff this season and the two will play together next season.

The younger Coughenour, a senior at Kingsley-Pierson High School, has lettered softball all four of her prep years. She was named to the Maple Valley Conference and all-state second teams after her junior and senior seasons.

Although basically a pitcher in high school, Parrish said she may use Coughenour in other positions at Iowa.

Butzer decides to play golf for Thomason

Amy Butzer, a native of Sioux Falls, S.D., has signed a national letter of intent to play for the Hawkeyes next year.

Butzer led her squad to the South Dakota state championship last year and is a three-time all-state and all-conference selection in golf.

Stewart takes early lead at Houston

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (UPI) — Payne Stewart birdied seven holes for a six-under-par 66 Thursday and the first-round lead of the $500,000 Houston Open.

Payne jumped to a quick start, making the turn with a four-under 32 on the 7,042-yard course. On the back nine, he was seven-under going to the final hole. But he finished with a 34 to take a one-stroke lead over four golfers.

Calvin Peete, Mike Nicolette, David Frost and Keith Fergus were at 67 while Ken Brown and Buddy Garner were at 68.

Of the 156 players who started the tournament, 55 finished below par on the new Tournament Players Course at The Woodlands.

Defending champion Corey Pavin shot a 74 while Bernhard Langer, winner of two straight tournaments, finished at 70.

Langer, who has won the Masters and Sea Pines Heritage Classic over the past two weeks, is trying to become the first golfer since Gary Player in 1978 to win three tournaments in a row. Ironically, Player's third victory that year came at the Houston Open.

Hawks use big bats to rout St. Ambrose

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

In a tune-up for Iowa's weekend trip to Wisconsin, Coach Duane Banks' Hawkeyes delivered a 17-1 pounding to an outmanned St. Ambrose team in Thursday afternoon college baseball action at John O'Donnell Stadium in Davenport.

Iowa (30-14) aired out its pitching staff, using seven men over nine innings and holding St. Ambrose (10-14-1) to only four hits. Rod McConnell (1-0) got the win for Iowa after relieving starter Mark Denking in the second.

Offensively, the Hawkeyes battered two Bees pitchers for 20 hits, including home runs by Rick Jennings and John Knapp.

In all, the Hawkeyes produced seven extra base hits, two in the first inning as they burst out to a 5-0 lead and never looked back.

CRAIG CONTI opened the game for Iowa with a bunt single off St. Ambrose pitcher Russ Courter, setting up the first two Iowa runs. Jennings followed Conti with the game's first home run blast, collecting two RBI.

After Rob Eddie walked, Vance McKinnon ripped an RBI triple to run the score to 3-0. Knapp then walked, putting runners at the corners for Iowa.

Both Knapp and McKinnon scored with the help of a throwing error after Gary Ellis reached first on a fielder's choice.

Courter managed to shut Iowa out for the next two innings while St. Ambrose collected its only run in the bottom of the third.

Kim Antle walked to open the inning, and after two outs, Randy Manning rapped a double for the Bees, scoring

THE HAWKEYES responded in the top of the fourth with seven runs to bury the Bees and Courter, who took the loss after being relieved midway through the inning by Paul Neff.

Mike McLaughlin opened the inning with a single, followed by a double from Conti which moved McLaughlin to third.

Jennings then grabbed another RBI with a single, scoring McLaughlin and advancing Conti to third. Rob Eddie punched out a single to score Conti. McKinnon then doubled to bring in Jennings and Eddie to make the score 9-1.

Knapp followed with a home run, scoring two more runs to move the Iowa lead to 11-1. Gary Ellis later scored in the inning to up the score to 12-1.

The Hawkeyes picked up one run in both the fifth and sixth innings, and added three runs in the seventh to end the scoring.

Iowa, currently 2-2 and in third place in the Big Ten's Western Division, now heads to Madison, Wis., for a pair of doubleheaders with the Wisconsin Badgers over the weekend.

Iowa holds 4-shot lead at Drake Invitational

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

Chuck Zwiener's Iowa golf team holds a four stroke lead over Bradley after Thursday's opening 36 holes at the Drake Relays Invitational Golf Tournament in Des Moines, but the Hawkeye coach says his team "can't back off" yet.

"We play 18 more tomorrow morning," Zwiener said, "and we have to keep playing aggressively and continue to try increasing that lead. We can't back off."

As a team, the Hawkeyes shot a 618 on the 18-hole Des Moines Golf and Country Club to lead Bradley at 622 and Central College of Pella, which is in or near third place.

The Central team score after the second round was unavailable according to Drake Coach Jack Wallace, whose team is in 16th place with a 664 score.

"THEY (CENTRAL) were third after the first round but I'm not exactly sure if they're still in third or not," Wallace said.

Also near the top in the team standings is Kansas at 626, West Texas State at 627 and Iowa State at 629.

Wallace said Iowa's lead did not surprise him, and added that he had expected the Hawkeyes and Bradley to be near the top.

"Bradley beat (Iowa) at one tournament earlier in the year, but I'm not surprised Iowa is beating them," Wallace said.

"But it's still very close and we've got to play again tomorrow."

Wallace said Iowa seemed comfortable on the course, which they had played in a dual meet with the Bulldogs earlier in the year.

Golf

"WE PLAYED IOWA here earlier this year and they really played that course well," Wallace said. "I'm not at all surprised to see Iowa leading a tournament on this course."

The Iowa Coach also felt his team was suited to the course, which is similar to the Finkbine Golf Course in Iowa City, where the Iowa team plays.

Zwiener was unsure of the individual standings Thursday night, but said Greg Tebbutt, who led Iowa with rounds of 74 and 72, was probably leading or tied for the lead.

"I think Greg is probably leading the tournament although I'm not absolutely sure," Zwiener said. "I don't think anyone is that close to him, but if he isn't ahead of the field then he's at least tied for the lead."

GUY BOROS WAS NEXT behind Tebbutt for Iowa with a 74-77 score. Trent Dossat (79-82), Steve Reilly (79-81) and Bob Collsmith (88-77) rounded out Iowa's scoring.

Zwiener said that the unfavorable weather conditions forced higher than usual scores on the course, particularly as the day wore on and the temperature dropped.

"With the wind blowing and the rain coming down off and on, it was kind of tough out there today," Zwiener said. "I think the scores went up a little later on when it got a little colder."

"Really, I think we were better off when it was raining, because that's when it was the warmest. When it quit raining it got colder."

Salt Lake City may bid on the Olympics

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Salt Lake City hopes to follow Calgary's lead in hosting a Winter Olympic Games that will turn a profit and provide long-term facilities for athletes.

Dave Adams, the State Community and Economic Development Department director, told a meeting of Salt Lake Visitor and Convention Bureau sponsors Thursday the city could host the 1992 or 1996 Winter Olympics and make anywhere from $7 million to $40 million in profits.

Adams admitted, however, the projections of the city's Olympic Organizing Committee are dependent on raising more than $500 million from selling broadcast and corporate sponsorship rights to the games and that the city might face a deficit.

BUT HE SAID the city and surrounding host sites of a Winter Games could pump more than $1 billion into Utah's economy through construction jobs and increased tourism.

Adams said Salt Lake City's bid is "patterned after Calgary's," which earned the Canadian city the right to host the 1988 Winter Olympics.

But, John Pickett, vice president of the Calgary Games Operations, told the meeting his city plans to raise about $800 million in Canadian dollars, about $600 million in U.S. dollars, to pay for the 1988 games.

And Pickett said government agencies are putting up about 40 percent of the money. Salt Lake City has no guarantee of such local and federal government funding.

PICKETT SAID THE Canadian government will pay about 25 percent of the cost of the games and the province of Alberta about 15 percent.

He also said Canada needed a national winter sports facility for its athletes who participate in international competitions.

Hawks to face top Big Ten foes

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

Two of the Big Ten's top tennis teams will stop in Iowa City this weekend to take on the Iowa men's team.

Minnesota, which is the defending conference champion, and Wisconsin, which finished third in the league last year, will play the Hawkeyes in the last weekend of Big Ten action.

Iowa takes on the Gophers today at 2:30 p.m. and will then meet Wisconsin Saturday at 1:30 p.m. Both meets will be played at the Kinnick Stadium courts or moved to the Recreation Building if the weather is bad.

Victories are crucial to all three teams this weekend. Wins will help the teams draw better seeds for the Big Ten Tournament the next two weekends.

"IT'S IMPORTANT for seeding to win two matches this weekend," said Wisconsin Coach Pat Klingelhoets, whose team will also take on Northwestern this weekend.

"It'll really hurt us a lot in seeding if we lose a match," Klingelhoets said. "It would push our seed down to five, six or seven. If we win, we'll be seeded No. 2."

Tennis

Iowa Coach Steve Houghton believes his team will also need to take both matches this weekend to get a good draw for the Big Ten meet. But the Hawkeyes have been struggling this season and will have to play their best tennis in both meets to win, he added.

"If everyone plays well at every position we could win," the Iowa coach said.

THE DOUBLES TEAMS have stood out for the Hawkeyes most of the season. Houghton says his doubles teams are very competitive with Minnesota and Wisconsin's doubles teams and should do well.

In the singles matches, the Hawkeyes will have to turn in strong performances to be competitive with their opponents, he added.

"I'm looking for the guys to play real well against what will be good competition," Houghton said.

The Badgers are 4-3 in the Big Ten and 12-10 overall. Klingelhoets says his team has the potential to be one of the top two teams in the conference, but they haven't shown it yet this season.

"We're not doing as well as we should," he said. "We've had some losses that shouldn't be there."

"I don't think everyone's put it together yet," he added.

WISCONSIN HAS received steady performances from the bottom half of its singles line-up this season. Joel Gbedey at No. 4 has a record of 13-5 for the season and teammate Tim Madden at No. 5 has a 17-5 record.

"We're pretty solid at four, five and six," Klingelhoets said. "But we should be solid at the top. If we play up to our potential, we're solid all the way through."

The defending Big Ten champ, Minnesota, brings a strong program to Iowa City Friday. The Gophers are a solid tennis team up and down the line-up, Houghton said.

"For the last two to three years they have probably had the best program in the Big Ten," Houghton said.

The Gophers have scored some impressive victories in the Big Ten this season to prove they are the top team.

Minnesota defeated Illinois, which is always a strong dual meet team, last weekend, 9-0. The Illini had finished second behind Minnesota in the conference last season.

The Gophers also handed Wisconsin a 5-4 defeat. The meet went down to the final match and was decided in the tie breaker of the third set.

Last season the Hawkeyes lost to both Minnesota and Wisconsin. Iowa dropped a close 5-4 meet against the Badgers and were beaten 7-2 by the Gophers.

McLain draws 23-year prison term

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Unswayed by Denny McLain's plea he would "pay for my conviction the rest of my life," a U.S. District Court judge Thursday sentenced baseball's last 30-game winner to 23 years in federal prison.

McLain, 41, the last major leaguer in a half-century to win 30 games in one season, was sentenced to concurrent eight-year prison terms for his conviction on racketeering, conspiracy and extortion charges. Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich then concluded the emotional 65-minute sentencing procedure by levying a 15-year jail term for McLain's guilt in a charge of cocaine possession. That sentence will begin after the penalty for the first three counts has been completed.

"I'LL PAY FOR my convictions the rest of my life," said McLain during an eight-minute summation before Kovachevich passed sentence. "I've gone through a lot of shame and disgrace and no sentence can equal the humiliation of being handcuffed in front of television cameras. I've had an awful lot of time to reflect during the last 40 days and I realize I've exercised an awful lot of bad judgment. But I've also been a loving husband and father."

While McLain spoke, his wife, Sharon, and two daughters sobbed openly in the back of the packed courtroom. McLain, who also has two sons, was escorted to a lock-up room within the courthouse to spend some time with his family.

"The conscience of the community, through the jury, has come to believe

Chronology of Denny McLain's life

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — A chronology of the life of former baseball star Denny McLain, sentenced Thursday to federal prison for 23 years:

April 8, 1963 — The Detroit Tigers draft McLain for $8,000.

1962 — McLain signs with the White Sox after a 38-7 record at Chicago's Mt. Carmel High School.

Oct. 9, 1968 — After losing Games 1 and 4 of the World Series to Bob Gibson and the St. Louis Cardinals, McLain returns to win Game 6. Detroit goes on to capture the Series in seven games and McLain is named the AL MVP and Cy Young Award winner.

Oct. 21, 1969 — McLain and Mike Cuellar of the Baltimore Orioles are named co-winners of the Cy Young Award.

Feb. 19, 1970 — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspends McLain for half the season for bookmaking activities during the 1967 season.

Aug. 28, 1970 — McLain douses two Detroit sportswriters with water.

Sept. 9, 1970 — Kuhn suspends McLain for the remainder of the season after the pitcher is caught carrying a gun on a road trip in August.

Oct. 11, 1970 — McLain is reinstated and traded to the Washington Senators with Don Wert, Elliott Maddox and Norm McRae for Aurelio Rodriguez, Ed Brinkman, Joe Coleman and Jim Hanan. The trade is allowed after McLain goes through a thorough psychiatric examination.

March 4, 1972 — McLain is traded from the Texas Rangers to the Oakland A's for Don Stanhouse and Jim Panther.

June 28, 1972 — Oakland sends McLain to the Atlanta Braves for Orlando Cepeda.

March 26, 1973 — McLain is waived by Atlanta.

April 23, 1973 — McLain signs a minor-league contract with the Iowa Oaks of the American Association.

Sept. 9, 1975 — McLain is named general manager of the Memphis Blues, a Triple-A affiliate of the Montreal Expos.

July 2, 1977 — McLain files a personal bankruptcy petition in Memphis, Tenn., listing $1 million in debts and $500 in assets.

Aug. 16, 1982 — McLain is presented with replicas of his 1969 Most Valuable Player Award and his 1968 and '69 Cy Young Awards in an emotional ceremony at Tiger Stadium. The originals were destroyed in a fire.

March 26, 1985 — McLain is found guilty of loan sharking, extortion, book making and cocaine possession.

April 25, 1985 — Sentenced to 23 years in federal prison.

in your guilt beyond a reasonable doubt," Kovachevich said. "Your involvement with drugs is of considerable note to this court and with regard to the drug conviction, this court is going to deal harshly."

WHILE KOVACHEVICH passed sentence, McLain was allowed to remain seated because he said he was suffering from the flu. McLain sat impassively, his head bowed, standing only to read his prepared statement.

Last Friday, Kovachevich was persuaded by McLain's attorney, Arnold

D. Levine, to postpone the sentencing procedure until 10:30 a.m., Iowa time, Thursday. Federal prosecutor Ernst Mueller was asking for a 35-year prison term while Levine argued for probation.

"Denny was devastated by the length of the sentence," Levine said, "but he has a very positive attitude about our chances on appeal. We expect to have him out (on appeal) in 10 months."

McLain, who won 31 games for the Detroit Tigers in 1968, faced a maximum sentence of 75 years following his March 16 conviction. He was denied the day after the guilty verdict and Levine said an appeal would be filed Thursday afternoon, with hopes McLain would be free on bond pending the appeal.

"I THINK JUSTICE was done," Mueller said. "Particularly concerning the drug charge, I think the judge was sending a message."

A jury of nine women and three men deliberated three days before finding McLain guilty on four counts. Co-defendants Seymour Sher and Frank Cocchiaro were also convicted on charges of loan sharking, bookmaking and extortion. Last week, Sher, 59, was sentenced to a 20-year prison term and ordered to reimburse a victim $10,000. Cocchiaro, 66, who has been behind bars since 1982 serving a 10-year sentence for mail fraud, received a concurrent sentence of 20 years.

Following McLain's sentencing, Larry Knott, a key government witness who pleaded guilty to cocaine possession, was given an eight-year suspended sentence, with five years of probation to begin after completion of five years behind bars.

McLAIN, WHO was also ordered to forfeit $8,900 to a federal victims fund, has spent the last five weeks in Seminole County Jail in Sanford, Fla., but the site of his future incarceration is undetermined. Parole officials indicated McLain would have to serve approximately one-third of his sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

McEnroe: No. 1 is rough spot

ATLANTA (UPI) — John McEnroe knows how those old-time gunslingers felt when strangers rode into town to challenge the fastest gun.

"When you're No. 1 everybody's gunning for you," said McEnroe, wiping the sweat from his brow after brushing aside opponent Brian Teacher, 6-3, 6-3 in an opening-round match Wednesday in the WCT's Atlanta stop.

"Even Brian. Despite the many times I've played him, and beat him, it's still tough. There's a lot of challenges to remain No. 1. It's a lot easier to become number one than stay there. Every tournament, every night, you have to fight through."

McEnroe, 26, has been the top tennis player in the world for more than five years now. And while staying there doesn't get any easier, he does feel more comfortable wearing the crown than he did a few years ago.

"IT'S A SCARY thing to go out there and put yourself on the line night after night," he said. "But I'm more comfortable with being No. 1 than I was in '81, or even '83, because I feel I'm a much better player."

"I feel I improved more last year (when he won more than $2 million) than I ever had before. People push you, but I like being pushed."

McEnroe doesn't feel a top tennis player can pace himself on the WCT tour as much as some athletes can in other sports.

"With us, every week it's a win or lose proposition," he said. "In other sports, you build up to a playoff, a Super Bowl or what have you. For us, the 20 or so tournaments we play are all pretty much the same."

THAT'S ONE OF McEnroe's complaints about the WCT tour. He thinks being forced to play in at least 14 regular events, in addition to the big international ones that the better players always point for, is too heavy a load.

"I'd like to see less tournaments," McEnroe said. "Then people would have a chance to see more of the top players. I'd like to see more bigger tournaments — like Wimbledon and the U.S. Open — that could stand on their own."

In his own case, McEnroe, forced to make up two tournaments he missed last year because of a suspension and later an injury, and anxious to keep a commitment to play in Japan, has had little time off lately and looked wan after his match with Teacher.

"I DON'T FEEL that bad," McEnroe said. "It's just it was a long trip (from Japan) and I'm still recuperating."

McEnroe admits he does little to stay in shape besides the tennis itself.

"I used to do things like play basketball, but the possibility of twisting an ankle or something isn't worth the risk," McEnroe said. "I could be in better shape. A couple of times that has hurt me."

"But I get in and out of shape pretty fast. That is, I used to. It takes me longer now than it did a few years ago. Even at 26, I can't afford to take too long off."

After this week, McEnroe sets his sights on next month's French Open.

"That's a tournament I want very badly," he said. "I have some work that needs to be done to get myself ready. I realized after my (quarter-finals) loss in '83 how much I wanted to win the French Open."

"THAT'S WHAT MADE last year's loss (when Ivan Lendl beat him 3-6, 2-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-5) so disappointing."

But McEnroe hasn't had many disappointments since dropping out of Stanford after his freshman year, having already won the NCAA championship, and turning pro in 1978.

He was ranked No. 4 in the world that year, No. 3 in 1979, No. 2 in 1980 — and No. 1 ever since while winning more than $7.5 million in "official" money in the past seven years.

"The money, itself, isn't the big thing anymore," he said. "But winning sure beats the hell out of losing. A lot of guys play better against me because I'm No. 1. Being No. 1 is a dream of everyone. I never thought it would become a reality. I think I will appreciate it more when I look back on it, when some tennis star in the future is being compared to me in my prime."

"I like to think I've raised the level of tennis in the United States. Tennis appears to be in a bit of a lull right now. Even if it levels out, it will still be a good sport, but I would like to see it take off again."

McEnroe didn't play the first round of the Davis Cup this year against Japan, citing the attitude of sponsors who chided him for his behavior in the United States' loss to Sweden in the 1984 final. "I haven't ruled out playing anymore Davis Cup," he said. "It's just that I'm tired of all the abuse I've taken and I just wanted to get away from it for a while. I'll be back."

believes the lack of injuries highlighted spring drills.

"The greatest thing about spring is that we haven't had any major surgery," Fry said. "That's one of the first times in my coaching career ... We've only had two scrimmages all spring and they were controlled scrimmages. It's been an enjoyable spring, except for the weather changing back and forth."

As in the past, Saturday's scrimmage is free. But, unlike the past, drinking rules will be enforced. According to UI security officials monitors will be stationed at the entrance gates to prevent coolers and other visible alcoholic beverage containers from being carried into the stadium.

Fans driving to the spring game will be directed to ramps and hard-surfaced lots in the vicinity of the stadium. Although there will be no charge for parking in UI lots, the usual hourly fees at the two hospital ramps will be charged to fans. No parking will be permitted on unsurfaced areas near the stadium.

Football

"WE HAVE GUYS like Larry Station, Ken Sims and Jon Vrieze miss most of spring training, but other than that, from a personnel standpoint, we're in very good shape."

Injuries may have been reduced by the fact that all players, except quarterbacks, running backs and wide receivers, wore knee braces during practice. But whatever the reason, Fry between games Sunday) and he talked about (Illinois') hitters and he was telling me where to catch the pitchers."

Iowa will see Wisconsin's best pitchers, as right-hander Tom Buck (1-3) and left-hander Tim Haines, 3-3, 1-1 in the Big Ten with a 0.69 ERA in Big Ten action, will be on the hill. Land said Sunday's pitchers have yet to be determined.

The Hawkeyes will counter with their best as Chuck Georgantas and Mike Darby, 1-0 in league action, along with others will see time. "Chuck throws a lot of breaking pitches and stuff," Luedtke said. "and Mike throws hard stuff; it will take me a while to get use to it."

Iowa continues to lead the league with a .342 batting average. As far as pitching is concerned the Hawkeyes are 10th with a 11.89 team earned run average. Wisconsin ranks 10th in batting (.239) and fifth in pitching (5.40 ERA).

Softball

Coughenour, who has never faced Michigan before, said she won't change her pitching pattern this weekend. "In a way it's nice and in a way it's difficult facing a team for the first time," the Kingsley, Iowa native said. "I'll talk to Diane and Tracy a little about them but basically I just have to go out and pitch my game."

"I have no worries about the defense behind me," Coughenour added. "I just hope we can score a few runs."

So do the rest of the Hawkeye players and coaches.

Jackson shows interest in part-ownership of A's

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Reggie Jackson has told Oakland A's owners he is interested in becoming a minority shareholder in the club once his playing career is over, the San Francisco Examiner reported Thursday.

The California Angels' outfielder, who helped the A's win three straight World Championships in the 1970s, told the Examiner, "I can't get involved directly now because I'm still playing, but my attorney has some people who would be willing to buy in. We could come up with $10 million."

Jackson was reacting to newspaper reports that said A's owners are talking about selling the team to a group in Tampa, Fla.

The Walter J. Haas family, which owns the A's, reportedly has lost between $26 million and $28 million since purchasing the club from Charlie Finley for $12.7 million in 1980.

"I'D HATE TO see them sell it," Jackson said. "The A's owners are awfully fine people, community people. They're also smart people, coming from the corporate world. You can afford to lose three to four million a year maybe, but you can't lose eight or nine."

Wally Haas admitted he talked with Jackson around the batting cage in Oakland when the Angels played the A's last weekend.

"He mentioned to me he was interested in being a minority partner," Haas said. "It was a very low-key conversation. I think he is serious in wanting to get involved in a front office and sharing his knowledge with everybody."

"I'm glad someone of his stature is interested in the team and the community. But nothing could happen until he is out of baseball."

DeBartolo to maintain teams despite past financial losses

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) — Edward DeBartolo Sr., saying he had better things to do with his money than lose it, Thursday announced he would keep his sports teams in Pittsburgh for now because the city is willing to grant him financial incentives.

However, DeBartolo set July 15 as the deadline to sell 10,000 season tickets each for his NHL Penguins and Major Indoor Soccer League Spirit, which have lost a total of $25.5 million for the Youngstown developer.

After July 15, he said, "we would have to at that time re-evaluate our position and possibly examine other alternatives."

He did not go into detail on those alternatives, but a number of other cities have approached the DeBartolo Corp. about buying the teams.

DeBartolo HAS BEEN unhappy in the past with Pittsburgh's 10 percent amusement tax, its 20 percent parking tax — both of which he wants eliminated — and a lawsuit filed by the city after he folded his USFL franchise last year.

He received word from Mayor Richard Caligiuri Thursday that the lawsuit had been dropped.

"The call I got from the mayor this morning deserves some real consideration," DeBartolo said in his first news conference in four years. "He made a specific promise to do everything he can ... to eliminate the rents we talked about, the taxes we talked about."

"He's (Caligiuri) going to do everything in his power to see that the amusement tax is eliminated," Allegheny County commissioner Tom Foerster said.

"SPECIFICS? I can't answer that. It is feasible — it's happening in other cities. A way has to be found to eliminate it or we're going to lose our sports teams."

DeBartolo, whose son Edward Jr. owns the San Francisco 49ers, has operated the Penguins since 1977 with losses of $19 million, and the Spirit since 1981 with losses of $6.5 million. He also runs the 16,000-seat Pittsburgh Civic Arena, where both teams play, and has lost $500,000 since 1981.

"Our company, our family can well afford the losses, but we have other things to do with our money," DeBartolo said. "It's up to Pittsburgh to see that our losses are reduced and we have made certain demands and we expect them to be fulfilled."

Clark turns in 8-under-par 64 to lead LPGA's S & H Classic

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Judy Clark fired the lowest round on the 1985 LPGA tour Thursday, dropping in nine birdies en route to an 8-under-par 64 and a two-stroke lead after the opening round of the $175,000 S&H Golf Classic.

Clark, seeking her first tour victory since joining the circuit in 1978, began auspiciously at the 10th tee with a bogey-5 but made the turn in 33 after birdies at 11, 16, 17 and 18. Her fourth consecutive birdie, at the par-four No. 1, dropped her to four under par and she birdied No. 5 by sinking a 10-foot putt. Birdies on her final three holes (7-8-9) gave Clark the lowest 18 on the tour in 1985.

AMY BENZ FIRED a six-under 66 for second place while Janet Coles, Marta Figueras-Dotti, Rosie Jones and Dale Eggeing stood at 67. Defending champion Vicki Ferguson got off to a shaky start with a 77 and Alice Miller, No. 1 on the money list this season, shot a two-under 70. All-time money leader JoAnne Carner shot a sizzling 32 over the front nine but came back in 37 to tie a large group at 69.

"Once I birdied four in a row, I felt like I could birdie everything on the front nine," said Clark, who finished third three weeks ago in the Dinah Shore tournament. "My previous career low round was a 66 and I started thinking about that on the course."

"The course is in excellent condition; the fairways are great and the greens are a good speed. I changed putters coming into this week and it has seemed to work. I feel I've improved a little more each year and the only difference between my game and the top 10 is one shot per round."

are entered here. The S&H is sandwiched between last week's Las Vegas, Nev., event and next week's tournament in Hilton Head, S.C., and many players take the week off to bring their cars over for the LPGA swing up the East coast.

One entrant who didn't have that consideration was Eggeing, a native of Tampa who expects a gallery full of family and friends by the weekend.

"The only reason they're not here today is, with the way my year has been going, they're probably waiting to see if I make the cut," said Eggeing, who had three birdies going out and three coming back to overcome a bogey at No. 14.

"THE COURSE IS playing great, the greens are fantastic and that's why the scores are so low," she said. "It feels awfully good being in contention ... it's been a while. I have to learn to make it a regular habit. I'm not surprised by Judy Clark's round. I think she's one of the best players out here and I'm very surprised she hasn't won yet on the tour."

The par-72, 6,013-yard course at the Pasadena Yacht and Country Club played very easy Thursday as 32 players in the field of 110 broke par in front of a gallery of 5,315. Temperatures were in the upper 80s and the breeze was minimal.

Benz, of nearby Clearwater, had a consistent 33-33 and is also in pursuit of her initial tour triumph.

"I had a very solid round of golf today — six birdies, no bogeys," said Benz. "This golf course has been real good to me. The greens are holding really well ... it's just like throwing darts out there. If the weather stays like this, I'd say it'll take about a 16-under to win it."

Highlanders invited to Florida

The UI Scottish Highlanders, who were unable to perform at President Ronald Reagan's Inaugural Parade this January because of cold weather, have been invited to parade at Walt Disney World in Florida on Memorial Day.

All of the bands who went to Washington in January have been invited to join in the Florida event.

Arrangements have been completed for accommodations, meals and other expenses in Orlando for all of the bands. Transportation has been arranged at a minimal cost through Greyhound Bus Lines or various local carriers in many cities. In the case of Iowa City and some other areas, however, transportation support is still being sought from bus or airline companies willing to cooperate in the effort to make the total cost as low as possible.

In announcing the event, Michael Eisner, chairman of the board of Walt Disney Productions, said, "The White House tells us the event has the President's enthusiastic support, and we are very optimistic about the chances of President Reagan being here.

"Cast members of Walt Disney World knew how disappointed the band members were when they were unable to perform in Washington," Eisner added. "We have been working with band-leaders around the country and with various corporations to celebrate the inaugural in this most appropriate setting."

The parade May 27 will pass the structure which houses the American Adventure in the Epcot Center's World Showcase. Mickey Mouse in his Uncle Sam costume will lead the parade. The unique event is being made possible by the cooperation of Walt Disney World and other companies including Days Inn, Greyhound Lines and Burger King. Other Orlando area hospitality industry firms will also contribute to the effort.

Band members and chaperones will stay in the four Days Inns nearest Walt Disney World and will travel on cooperating carriers' buses and planes. They will arrive May 25 and depart following the parade on May 27.

Plans are also underway for the bands to have a huge River Country party and possibly a dinner and dance at Orange County's new Civic Center in addition to enjoying the Magic Kingdom and Epcot Center during the two-day event.

Bands with a total of more than 2,000 members already have said they hope to take part in the gala weekend. Many other special activities are being arranged in addition to the parade around the World Showcase Lagoon in the Epcot Center on Memorial Day.

The event is the first in a summer-long "Salute to America" in the Epcot Center. It includes an All-American College Jazz Festival in early June and nightly concerts throughout the summer by the All-American College Orchestra with the Radio City Music Hall Rockettes from New York City.

Special red, white and blue decorations will be added to the President's Inaugural Band Parade on Memorial Day. Reagan first visited Epcot Center in 1983, when he spoke to a gathering of high school science students.

Arts Council announces literary competition

Cash awards totaling $3,000 are available to Iowa writers in the second annual Iowa Arts Council Literary Awards Competition, sponsored by the Iowa Arts Council, a state agency.

Open to Iowa residents of any age, the competition carries a July 31, 1985 entry deadline. Writers may submit one entry in each of two categories, poetry and fiction. First prize is $1,000 and second prize is $500. Awards will be made in September.

Entries in the poetry division may be a single poem or group of poems, with a minimum of 50 lines and a maximum of 150 lines. None of the poems may have been previously published.

In the fiction category, entries may be a single short story or group of short stories or an excerpt from a novel with a minimum of 10 and maximum of 50 double-spaced, typewritten pages. None of the fiction may have been previously published.

Entries must be accompanied by the following information: legal name, address and day telephone number; title of each work and the category in which it is entered; a statement that the work is original and has been written by the contestant; and a statement that the manuscript has not been published. The name of the author must not appear on the manuscript. Entries must be typewritten in black on 8 and one-half inch by 11 inch paper. Fiction entries must be double-spaced; poetry entries may be single-spaced. Clean carbon or photo copies are permissible.

Entries will be screened by two in-state judges, and final selections made by two out-of-state judges. Authors of winning entries retain all copyright and related rights to their material. The Iowa Arts Council reserves the right to limited, non-commercial use of the winning entries.

Complete entry information and forms are available by contacting the Iowa Arts Council, State Capitol Building, Des Moines, Iowa, 50319; (515) 281-4451.

The awards program was instituted by the Iowa Arts Council to recognize and call national attention to the talented writers of Iowa.

Movies in town

The Purple Rose of Cairo. "The Purple Rose of Cairo emerges as one of the warmest and sweetest romances made in many years. Yet as nicely as the film works on this level, the film succeeds just as well as an intellectual exercise." (M. Grote, Apr. 22.) At the Astro.

Lost in America. "(Albert) Brooks, the star, director and co-screenwriter (with Monica Johnson) of Lost in America, is forging a career from these self-centered self-aware and just plain selfish characters." (R. Panek, Apr. 19.) At the Englert 2.

Mask. "One can quibble about small things in the film ... but all in all, Mask is a fine film, sincerely made and acted with warmth and appeal." (M. Grote, Apr. 2.) At the Campus 1.

Ladyhawke. "It is to Ladyhawke's credit that it comes up with a new complication to further romantic turmoil." (M. Grote, Apr. 12.) At the Englert 1.

The Breakfast Club. "What starts out to be a warm and funny little film full of insightful details about how kids act and interact, turns into a pretentious, somewhat hollow, psycho-drama." (M. Grote, Feb. 25.) At the Cinema II.

Moving Violations. "Moving Violations is constructed of substandard parts, emits toxic pollutants and is obviously unsafe at any speed." (M. Grote, Apr. 22.) At the Cinema I.

Return of the Jedi. The Star Wars gang returns in this re-release. At the Campus 3.

Stick. Burt Reynolds stars in and directs this film about an ex-convict who is given one last chance to go straight. At the Campus 2.

Art

Opening at the UI Museum of Art this Saturday is "African Textiles and Dress." On Sunday at 2 p.m. at the museum, UI Geography Professor Michael McNulty will speak on "The Impact of Urbanization on Rural Life."

In conjunction with the exhibition "Narcissilly & Goldilocks" by Anne Goehenor and Tom Karson, Joyce Renwick and Barbara Asch-Camillo will present a fiction reading at 3 p.m. Sunday at Fast Space Art Gallery, 401 S. Gilbert (2nd Floor).

Feminist folksinger to perform at UI

By Mert Walker
Special to the Daily Iowan

FROM THE STEADY swell of "women's music" has emerged a Canadian feminist singer-songwriter atypical of her American contemporaries. Now in her second year of national touring, Ferron will be appearing in Macbride Auditorium at 8 p.m. Saturday in a benefit concert for the Iowa City Free Medical Clinic. She has released two independently produced LPs, Testimony and Shadows on a Dime, whose popularity is elevating her beyond the casual rank of an acquired taste.

Ferron's downbeat talking-blues style of "folk poetry," inevitably compared to Bob Dylan or Joni Mitchell, is shaped by her acoustic guitar playing and alto voice. Her nostalgic, yet often anti-romantic songs are both bittersweet appraisals of life and impassioned pleas for emotional freedom and survival against alienation. Her haunting, evocative lyrics most often grapple with the fragile realities of ruptured love relationships.

The oldest of seven children, 32-year-old Ferron was raised in a working class environment in a semi-rural suburb of Vancouver, British Columbia. Inspired by radio entertainers Kitty Wells, Hank Williams and the Carter Family, Ferron borrowed her mother's guitar and taught herself to play music to her own lyrics at the age of 14. In her first real performance, at a women's benefit concert in Vancouver in 1975, she adopted her stage name, which is French for "iron and rust." The name came from a friend's dream set in medieval times in which the singer appeared with the name Ferron.

In 1977 AND 1978, she recorded and printed

Music

1,000 copies of Ferron and Ferron Backed Up on her own label, Lucy Records, which she distributed from her basement. Both albums are now out-of-print collector's items.

Ferron's 1980 album, Testimony, features songs brimming with metaphor and imagery. Most address the difficulty of loneliness or lost love, while stressing hope for positive realizations about these departures. An example of this is found in "Ain't Life a Brook":

And of course I mind

(Ferron's) nostalgic, yet often anti-romantic songs are both bittersweet appraisals of life and impassioned pleas for emotional freedom and survival against alienation. Her haunting, evocative lyrics most often grapple with the fragile realities of ruptured love relationships.

Especially when I'm Thinking from my heart
But life don't clickety clack
Down a straight-line track
It comes together and it comes apart ...

... I sold the furniture
I put away the photographs
Went to dinner one last time
Had myself a bottle of wine
And a couple of laughs
For wasn't it fine

Other concert tour favorites include "Bellybowl," a scornful observation of the temptations of classism and greed, and the title track from Testimony, which applauds the powerful spirituality of women.

RELEASED LAST YEAR, Shadows on a Dime lyrically refined many of these same themes with more memorable tunes. While Ferron's nearly atonal delivery tends to make her songs sound somewhat the same, this album does contain several distinct and lingering melodies.

"Snowin' in Brooklyn," for example, acknowledges that while "Sweet love has its chemistry/Sometimes it don't take," pointing out that "It's everyone's secret and muttered refrain/That for all our trouble/We be lonely again." And the minor notes of the sad phrase endings of the album's title track compel the listener to hear the nostalgic lyrics echoing the rages of poverty, aging and oppression and the need for compassion and belonging.

But of all the songs from both albums, "It Won't Take Long" pleads most directly and urgently for social action. An upbeat, prophetic anthem hailing individual efforts for world peace, the lyrics scold the socially neglectful and lazy, the fearful, the doubters of freedom:

Because grief will come in measures, only grief alone will know
And you'll see it on your family, on your own face it will grow
And they'll try to keep you hungry, then they'll tell you to eat snow
You know pride can be a moving thing if we learn the strength of 'No!'

In her Saturday concert, her first ever in Iowa City, Ferron will undoubtedly expand her repertoire to include new songs, possibly including some she might perform this summer at the Michigan Women's Music Festival.

Tickets for the Ferron concert are $8 in advance at Plains Woman Book Store, Prairie Lights Book Store and BJ Records or $9 at the door.

Minneapolis group to appear Sunday

By Allen Hogg
Arts/entertainment Editor

JUST WHEN IT seemed the Minneapolis music scene had produced every kind of band imaginable, along comes another to make a person start imagining all over again.

Appearing this Sunday at the Crow's Nest will be Tetes Noires, a Minneapolis group made up of six women that has been sending rock writers to new creative heights when it comes to thinking up labels — "the new-wave Andrews Sisters," "an all-women's acoustic punk band" and "a folk version of the B-52s" are three of the most colorful.

Actually the best term to describe the band would probably be "eclectic." Female-harmony music in the style of the Roches is the base, but from there, the group moves through all sorts of genres.

THE GROUP'S SONG list includes an original anti-Reagan stinger called "The Hawk," an optimistic, doo-wap protest song entitled "Peace, Piece By Piece;" "Kids in France," featuring the lyrics "I wish I was a kid in France/Cause then I'd get to wear their underpants;" "Playground Ditties," a chorus of schoolyard chants; a rain medley ("Singin' in the Rain," "Here Comes the Rain Again"); hard-core versions of girl-group oldies; an a cappella version of Billy Idol's "White Wedding" (originally performed in wedding dresses); and tunes about prostitution, sex clubs and bingo.

Tetes Noires was formed in 1983 for a performance art project of singer, principal songwriter, arranger, occasional violinist and former Miss South Dakota Jennifer Holt. She gathered together folk-singing sisters Camille Kayon-Gage and Renee Kayon, Farfisa organ player Angela Frucci, hard-core guitarist Polly Alexander and rock 'n' roll bass player Cynthia Bartelli.

The band, which uses only an occasional drum machine for percussion, quickly made a name for itself on the Minneapolis music scene and released a self-titled EP on Rapunzel Records. American Dream is also on Rapunzel, and was released last December.

'Harvester' celebrates divinity of the downtrodden

By Ken McCullough
Special to The Daily Iowan

Harvesters. Poems by Chuck Miller, cover drawings by Stuart Mead. Coffee House Press.

CHUCK MILLER shows what injustice is with uncommon authenticity. Harvesters, his fifth collection of poetry, is a handsome chapbook containing just 13 poems, a format which displays the depth and substance of Miller's work to great advantage.

In these poems, Miller aligns himself with the downtrodden, dispossessed and forgotten. In the preface to James Agee's Let Us Now Praise Famous Men, Agee says he will make readers recognize and acknowledge the divinity of the indigent people of whom he writes, whether they want to or not. Miller is less self-conscious, less self-righteous than Agee in this, for the simple reason that he is a participant rather than a witness. Agee could walk away and did, while Miller stays. He calls himself "a poet beneath contempt writing for those others beneath contempt."

Miller's social consciousness is informed by his reading of Depression prose writers, particularly Midwesterners Jack Conroy, Meridel LeSeur, Josephine Herbst and Ruth Suckow, and lesser-known writers from other parts of the country such as Boris Israel, Tom Kromer and Grace Lumpkin. His primary stylistic influences have been the French novelist Celine, Scandinavians Harry Martinson, early Knut Hamsun and the underground writer Sandemose. Miller says he admires their "intelligence, integrity, and honesty" and the fact that they "write out of their own direct experience."

MILLER ALSO OWES a debt to Jack Kerouac, not as a stylist, but as one who wrote from the heart, with no adulteration. Kerouac's exuberance and compassion are sometimes naive, while Miller's is tempered with the pathos of one who has confronted reality at ground-zero and survives. Miller attributes the turn in his perspective to a 19-month stretch he served in the Indiana penitentiary.

At a time when much of what is au courant in poetry falls either into the category of elegant appropriation from literary sources or spellbinding secular homilies, Miller's work is unique. It is not a throwback to the heart-on-sleeve polemics of the '60s; there is a natural balance between heart and head in these poems.

The work has intelligence and grace, but Miller doesn't discuss, as others do, the bouquet of a particular Cabernet, or what he thought about while listening to a symphony by Sibelius or standing in front of a Velazquez in the Prado. His work cuts below surfaces to the basics. For example, while picking blueberries with migrant harvesters in Maine, Miller glimpsed the shadow of something that resembled a primitive hunters-and-gatherers society. He found himself in a community that made more sense to him than what he was used to: Here people came together to share work, and had a primal connection with the earth. He also found that these people, doing work others regarded as lowest of the low, had a vitality and sense of humor lacking elsewhere. Miller's title poem, "Harvesters," includes these experiences.

MANY OF THE POEMS concern political matters, whether here in the United States or in Russia, Poland, China, El Salvador. Another theme woven concurrently through these poems is transience. These themes converge most poignantly in "when you live in your car..." The poem is set in a relatively uninhabited area of northern Ontario, where Miller and a traveling companion come across a monument dedicated to member of a local Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union slain while on strike. This is one of several poems in the book which combines adept cinematic shifts of focus with the narrative richness of a Russian novel. Here is the second stanza, which helps establish the mood of the poem:

not having a roof, a ceiling for thoughts and starting things going while she sleeps you sit on the hood of the car and your mind slowly opens to the extent of the sky

Its striations, great masses of low clouds sounds and shapes seem more distinct the singing of the highway in the distance someone drops a tool, it clangs on the concrete a delicate hammering with its high pitched chink-chinking a crow comes over the roof with a disconsolate cry piercing and full of curses you scare each other when he first sees you and flies limping off with a few choice words

These are courageous poems and Miller a woefully underrated poet. It may take you only half an hour to read the poems in Harvesters, but they will resonate in your conscience for a long time.

Harvesters is the eighth chapbook in a series produced by Allan Kornblum's Coffee House Press in West Branch. Over the past ten years, Kornblum has created a vital small press operation on a shoestring, printing some trade volumes while continuing to champion poets such as Miller. Kornblum's efforts were recently recognized by the National Endowment for the Arts with an award to the press of $25,000.

Harvesters costs $7.50 and is available at Prairie Lights Bookstore, the Union Bookstore and Iowa Book and Supply.

Poetry, prose, art presented in 'Rag'

By Kelly McNertney
Staff Writer

THE RAG IS OUT!" advertise posters around campus. "The Rag" is The Iowa Rag, the first edition of a UI undergraduate creative arts magazine that its editors hope will become a tradition. The 56-page paperback showcases undergraduate work in poetry, short fiction and photography, all of it selected anonymously from submissions by a 10-member editorial board.

If nothing else, the resulting collection represents a variety of viewpoints and approaches, and it pushes at the edges of all the media used. It would, however, be a dangerous assertion to say that the magazine is somehow a representation of the "standard" of creative output by the undergraduate student body.

The book should perhaps be understood instead as a forum for expression and publishing opportunity for students who may not be full-time participants in literary arts industries, and an opportunity for the rest of the student body to have a look at some art which they would not otherwise see.

THE SPACE in The Iowa Rag is evenly divided between poetry, short fiction and photography or photographed art. A short piece by Brian Pinkerton called "Homeward Avenue" was awarded the "Best of Issue" honor by the editors; I, however, would have reserved the honor for some of the poetry selections, many of which display a surprisingly sophisticated understanding of that medium. A memorable example is Robyn Smith's "Art Therapy Session No. 12":

A fifty-six year old Woman peels yellow
Depression from her Face and Smears it on
A five by eight drawing card ...
... Her life,
Glued to an arthritic
Music box, turns
Darkly inside a Stagnant mirror reflecting Tears as thick blue Lines on Penny paper ...

The photography and artwork in the book also deserve mention for being above the expected standards for this kind of publication. Subjects range from modern images of science, to organic life, humans and worlds of fantasy, and the moods created are equally diverse. It is refreshing to see some attempts at extending the boundaries of photography, especially that boundary called realism.

Editor Quentin Pitluk predicts that the publication will indeed become a tradition; submissions for next year's "Rag" will be accepted beginning next fall in the English Department Office, the Art Building Room W134 and the "Rag" mailbox in the Union Student Activities Center. This year's edition is being sold for $2 at most local bookstores, and, for a limited time, in the lobby of the English-Philosophy Building.

Christianne Balk takes Whitman poetry award

A former writer for The Daily Iowan who received her master's degrees from the UI has won the 1985 Walt Whitman Award of The Academy of American Poets. Christianne Balk won the award for her first book of poems, Bindweed, to be published by Macmillan Publishing Company. The distinguished poet Anthony Hecht selected Balk's manuscript in an open competition from more than 900 entries.

The Academy of American Poets has awarded Balk a $1,000 prize and will purchase 1,500 copies of the prize-winning book for distribution among its members. Balk will also be scheduled to read her poems in the Academy's annual reading series at the Donnell Library Center in New York City.

Anthony Hecht, a Chancellor of the Academy and Pulitzer Prize-winner for The Hard Hours in 1967, gave the following citation for Bindweed:

"GRIEF AND LOSS have rarely been given more poignant utterance than in this brilliant volume by Christianne Balk, which unites dream, imagination, nightmare and fantasy with an authority that incontrovertibly persuades because it is grounded in a dense physical reality. These poems are almost all modes of elegy, in which beauty is astonishingly salvaged from anguish, and they resonate with perceptible absence, like those paintings of vacant houses by Edward Hopper."

Balk was born in Johnson City, New York in 1952 and grew up in Woodstock, Ithaca and Voorheesville, New York. She attended Grinnell College in Grinnell, Iowa, where she majored in science but took writing courses as well, winning undergraduate fiction and poetry prizes. She graduated with honors in biology in 1974, then returned to school in 1977, earning her master's degree in essay writing at the UI in 1979. She has written for the DI and the Iowa City Press-Citizen, and co-edited Pavement, a literary magazine.

BALK IS ALSO a veteran of many writing workshops, including those at the University of British Columbia, the Bread Loaf Writers Conference, and the UI Writer's Workshop, where she received her M.F.A. in poetry in 1984. She is presently teaching English at the University of Alaska.

The Walt Whitman Award is open to any American citizen who has not yet published a book of poems in a standard edition. Poets interested in the 1986 award should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Walt Whitman Award, The Academy of American Poets, 177 East 87th St., New York, NY 10128.

The Academy of American Poets is a non-profit organization devoted to stimulating interest in American poetry. In addition to the Walt Whitman Award, the Academy sponsors a biannual $10,000 Fellowship for distinguished poetic achievement, the Lamont Poetry Selection for a second book of poetry and the Landon Translation Award. It also sponsors prizes at 135 American colleges and universities, and offers a series of readings and talks in New York City.

RiverAffordable: Good, clean, inexpensive fun for everyone.

Whether you're a corporate executive, an outdoors person or a struggling UI student, Riverfest 1985 promises to provide more affordable fun in one weekend than most celebrations offer in a month.

"We've really worked hard this year to plan events that are free so more people will attend Riverfest," said Lee Schott, Riverfest director. "Riverfest includes dozens of activities for university students, adults, community members, area school students and kids of all ages, and we hope everyone will attend some part of the week-long celebration."

As the UI's official celebration of spring, Riverfest offers many outdoor activities ranging from brown bag lunches and sports tournaments to carnival rides and dance workshops.

Plan to soak up the sun today as you listen to Tom Nothnagel play classical guitar along the riverbank behind the Union from noon to 1 p.m. The Scottish Highlanders will provide entertainment in the Union Main Lounge from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

CROQUET ENTHUSIASTS will work their way through the wickets Friday afternoon, from 3 to 6 p.m., when Riverfest hosts its first-ever croquet tournament. Other athletic events slated for today include coed tennis tournament on the Kinnick courts; UI

The Riverfest Spectacular Sundaes — 60 child's swimming pool and covered with becoming one of the festival's most talked men's and women's intercollegiate tennis matches against Minnesota and Purdue; aerobics workshop on the Union Field; Ultimate Frisbee and raquetball tournaments at the UI Field House.

Midwestern cyclists ready for bike race

By Dawn Ummel
 Chief Reporter

For most people, once is enough when it comes to riding a bicycle up the Jefferson Street hill or racing down Washington Street toward the UI Main Library at speeds exceeding 35 mph.

On Sunday, top racers in the Eighth Annual Old Capitol Criterium will tackle each hill 30 times, shoot around sharp turns on downtown Iowa City streets and battle possible rain showers, high winds and blistering heat.

"The criterium tests many abilities," said Gary Henry, an Iowa City racer and past participant in the criterium. "It's a difficult race with the (Washington Street) hill — it's weird if it's wet or if there are less-experienced riders."

Tagged as one of the most prestigious Midwest bike races, the criterium attracts up to 250 racers and more than 5,000 spectators. Racers licensed by the United States Cycling Federation compete in 11 events for more than $2,000 in cash prizes.

The criterium draws racers from Minnesota to Kansas. "Racers from the greater Midwest can travel farther because the winnings pay for their transportation," Henry said.

LOCAL RACERS, as young as 4 years old, can also participate in races for citizens. Riders sport everything from Big Wheels to tricycles in the citizen categories. In addition, a stationary contest tests how long competitors can balance their bikes.

The criterium has been around Iowa City since 1977, when Bicyclists of Iowa City created the event that took place in August its first year and offered $1,525 in cash prizes. The annual event hasn't been free of complications, however — local road construction in previous years has moved the race to the Hancher Auditorium parking lot and rain last year forced the cancellation or consolidation of some events. Rain also dampened the 1983 criterium.

Even with bad roads and bad weather, local residents and riders have continued to support the race.

"There are a lot of enthusiasts around Iowa City," Henry said. "People know what bike racing is."

"It's organized well," said Mark Parman, an Iowa City racer who placed fourth in last year's most prestigious race, the USFC Senior Men's I and II race.

Parman said the only drawback, for local racers especially, is the timing of the criterium, usually in late April or early May. Racers who have trained in warmer weather in Texas or Arizona generally have the advantage over Iowa City racers just getting their bikes on the roads.

"We've really worked hard this year to plan events that are free so more people will attend Riverfest," said Lee Schott, Riverfest director. "Riverfest includes dozens of activities for university students, adults, community members, area school students and kids of all ages, and we hope everyone will attend some part of the week-long celebration."

As the UI's official celebration of spring, Riverfest offers many outdoor activities ranging from brown bag lunches and sports tournaments to carnival rides and dance workshops.

Plan to soak up the sun today as you listen to Tom Nothnagel play classical guitar along the riverbank behind the Union from noon to 1 p.m. The Scottish Highlanders will provide entertainment in the Union Main Lounge from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

CROQUET ENTHUSIASTS will work their way through the wickets Friday afternoon, from 3 to 6 p.m., when Riverfest hosts its first-ever croquet tournament. Other athletic events slated for today include coed tennis tournament on the Kinnick courts; UI men's and women's intercollegiate tennis matches against Minnesota and Purdue; aerobics workshop on the Union Field; Ultimate Frisbee and racquetball tournaments at the UI Field House.

Friday Riverfest events will be highlighted by "That's Rivertainment," beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Union Ballroom. One dollar will buy your admission to a showcase of entertainment including magic acts, music, winners of the Greek Follies and a step show performance by Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.

Saturday's Riverfest events will get off and running with the sixth annual RiverRun. The event will begin at 8 a.m., with registrations accepted until 15 minutes before the mile, 5K and 10K races start.

The day's activities will be as vast as they are varied, including sports tournaments, tours, demonstrations, a car show, mural painting, an art expo, and lots of music.

If your tastebuds need some tingling, a Saturday afternoon at Riverfest may be the answer. UI student groups will sell gourmet delights ranging from fried won ton and jasmine tea to cookies and hot dogs in the Union Field food tent from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. For those who have less adventurous palates, Riverfest committee members will be selling $2.50 dinners complete with a brat sandwich, chips and a beer or soda.

It's ice cream you scream for? Riverfest's Spectacular Sundae is for you. Oodles of ice cream — approximately 60 gallons — will be heaped into a child's swimming pool and smothered with chocolate and butterscotch toppings. One dollar buys you a bowl, a spoon and all the ice cream you can eat.

Riverfest will wind down Sunday with the Old Capitol Criterium, Scrooge's Warehouse of handcrafted items along the banks of the Iowa River and finals of several sports tournaments.

Midwestern cyclists ready for bike race

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

For most people, once is enough when it comes to riding a bicycle up the Jefferson Street hill or racing down Washington Street toward the UI Main Library at speeds exceeding 35 mph.

On Sunday, top racers in the Eighth Annual Old Capitol Criterium will tackle each hill 30 times, shoot around sharp turns on downtown Iowa City streets and battle possible rain showers, high winds and blistering heat.

"The criterium tests many abilities," said Gary Henry, an Iowa City racer and past participant in the criterium. "It's a difficult race with the (Washington Street) hill — it's weird if it's wet or if there are less-experienced riders."

Tagged as one of the most prestigious Midwest bike races, the criterium attracts up to 250 racers and more than 5,000 spectators. Racers licensed by the United States Cycling Federation compete in 11 events for more than $2,000 in cash prizes.

The criterium draws racers from Minnesota to Kansas. "Racers from the greater Midwest can travel farther because the winnings pay for their transportation," Henry said.

LOCAL RACERS, as young as 4 years old, can also participate in races for citizens. Riders sport everything from Big Wheels to tricycles in the citizen categories. In addition, a stationary contest tests how long competitors can balance their bikes.

The criterium has been around Iowa City since 1977, when Bicyclists of Iowa City created the event that took place in August its first year and offered $1,525 in cash prizes. The annual event hasn't been free of complications, however — local road construction in previous years has moved the race to the Hancher Auditorium parking lot and rain last year forced the cancellation or consolidation of some events. Rain also dampened the 1983 criterium.

Even with bad roads and bad weather, local residents and riders have continued to support the race.

"There are a lot of enthusiasts around Iowa City," Henry said. "People know what bike racing is."

"It's organized well," said Mark Parman, an Iowa City racer who placed fourth in last year's most prestigious race, the USFC Senior Men's I and II race.

Parman said the only drawback, for local racers especially, is the timing of the criterium, usually in late April or early May. Racers who have trained in warmer weather in Texas or Arizona generally have the advantage over Iowa City racers just getting their bikes on the roads.

Riverfest

Event turns dream into tradition

By Tom Petersen
Special to The Daily Iowan

As the Riverfest director in 1979, Bill Ratzler had big plans for the spring festival.

In a 1979 interview with The Daily Iowan, Ratzler said, "We want Riverfest to become a part of the UI schedule like Parents Weekend or Homecoming. We feel that if we can generate enough interest this year, then Riverfest can become a tradition."

Now in its seventh year, most Riverfest alumni agree the organization has become a major tradition at the UI.

"We started off small," said former Dean of Academic Affairs Ray Muston, an early Riverfest supporter among UI administrators. "The dream was that someday this would grow to an event which would involve the entire campus and kids of all ages. It's quite pleasing to see the dream has come true," he said.

Jeff Romine, a member of the 1979 Riverfest executive committee, said Riverfest was a product of general renewal in campus activities following campus turmoil of the 1970s.

"WHEN I CAME to school here in 1975 some of the people I knew had gone through the student strikes," Romine said. "The image everyone had of the University of Iowa was based on the pictures of students smoking pot on the steps of the Capitol. The feeling across the state was that this was a party school."

"Homecoming was just coming off a period when it wasn't in favor. The Hawkeye yearbook had just been back on campus for one or two years, KRUI radio went back on the air... Riverfest was just one of the outgrowths of that period," he said.

Muston remembered Riverfest 1979 as a "cold, overcast day" and said about 15 booths were set up along the river.

"Some were encouraged, some were discouraged," Muston said, "but the aftermath was that if we keep with it, it will grow over time."

Romine said the Thursday, Friday and Saturday event was a "more easy-going, two weeks before finals, let's take a break and enjoy Iowa City," event, but admitted, "We had visions of gradeur."

However, Romine said, "We couldn't have imagined a 30-page booklet describing Riverfest events. Our printing budget at the time was about $200 to $300." (1985 Riverfest Director Lee Schott said this year's brochure cost about $2,100 and additional advertising costs reached $1,700).

SHELDON SCHUUR, director of Riverfest 1980 and 1981, and Kim Callanan, director of Riverfest 1982, agreed the concept of Riverfest hasn't changed as much as the number of people involved.

"We ran a real shoe-string operation in terms of staff involvement," said Callanan. "That's been the most impressive show of growth for the committee."

Current Riverfest adviser, Tom Fesenmeyer, program assistant in the UI Office of Campus Programs and Activities, also pointed to committee changes as indications of Riverfest's growth.

"Some people from the very beginning might feel it is over-produced at this point. Originally... the executive committee was in on all the planning. The executive committee (now) has to depend even more on the sub-committees," Fesenmeyer said. "The director has gone from being real 'hands-on' to being much more of an administrator."

"It (Riverfest) has grown along with the tradition that has been established. The knowledge of what Riverfest is has passed down through the (greek) houses and dorms over the years," he said.

Fesenmeyer also cited the advanced preparation for inclement weather as a major change in Riverfest planning.

"THE FIRST YEAR we made our rain contingency plans during that week, when someone said, 'Hey, we should be thinking about these things.' The second year we were able to work those plans into the brochure ahead of time," he said.

"The weather is the name of the game," Callanan said. "We live, eat and breathe weather reports for days."

All former directors mentioned the strong ties they feel to the organization, and the pride they feel when they hear Riverfest mentioned.

"Once you've been involved you know what the committee is going through. You want them to succeed. They put a lot of work into it," said 1983 Riverfest Director Dave Diers.

Schuur described the pride he felt when he saw Riverfest mentioned in an advertising supplement the Iowa Development Commission recently placed in the Chicago Tribune.

"That was our goal," Schuur said. "To have the event become known throughout the state of Iowa."

Fleshtones featured Saturday

By Allen Hogg
Arts/entertainment Editor

An appearance by the New York City band the Fleshtones will highlight this year's Riverfest Concert. The free concert, which has been planned this year by the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment, is scheduled to begin at noon Saturday on the Union Field. In case of rain, it will be held in the Union Main Lounge, as was the case last year.

The Fleshtones has been booked to replace another East Coast band, the Reducers, who had to cancel its appearance due to scheduling problems. The Fleshtones will be headlining a show that will also feature three local bands, the Cause, Letters from the Circus and the Shy, and two groups from Athens, Ga., Doo Blan Tant and the Squalls.

Music will also be heard Saturday on Riverfest's acoustic stage, which will be set up in the Art Building Alcove. John Jacobs, Susan Werner, Laura Hudson and Cam Waters are scheduled to perform their folk and bluegrass music at this location beginning at noon. In case of rain, the acoustic stage will be moved to the Union Wheelroom.

THE FLESHTONES was formed in 1975 in New York City by lead vocalist and organist Peter Zarella, drummer-turned-guitarist Keith Streng and bass player Marek Pakulski. The group started hitting the Manhattan club scene in 1976 and soon developed a reputation as "the kings of garage rock."

After adding Bill Milhizer to the line-up in 1980, the group began its recording career on the New York label Red Star Records. It recorded a single, "American Beat," and had two cuts on the anthology 2 x 5, but the label folded before the group's first recorded album, Blast Off!, could be released.

The band members did not remain unsigned for long, however, as they were soon discovered by Police manager Miles Copeland, who signed them to his company, I.R.S. Records. After making saxophonist and long-time sideman Gordon Spaeth a full-time member of the group, the Fleshtones released Roman Gods, its first album on its new label, in 1982. This album was then followed by the 1983 release, Hexbreaker.

The Fleshtones resist the "garage band" label it has been given, preferring to call their sound "super rock." Zarella told Rolling Stone magazine that "super rock" consists of "taking the best, most exciting elements of rock 'n' roll and exaggerating and amplifying them beyond proportion, with no apology whatsoever."

THE GROUP'S MUSIC is, however, reminiscent of the "acid-punk" music of the mid-1960s, with fuzztone guitars, honking sax sounds and cheesy organ chords, all combined into what sounds like a loose and somewhat sloppy jam session. The band is particularly known for its live shows, which are said to be characterized by reckless abandon on stage.

This weekend will also feature a number of notable popular music events in the area which are not connected with Riverfest. Tonight at 8, S.C.O.P.E., the Black Student Union and L. Arnold Productions will present a concert by Dreamboy and S.O.S. in the Main Lounge of the Union. At 8 p.m. Saturday, Ferron, a singer-songwriter from Canada, will perform in Macbride Auditorium. Also on Saturday night, the heavy metal group Autograph will perform at Veterans Memorial Coliseum in Cedar Rapids. And on Sunday, Tetes Noires, a Minneapolis group described by Billboard as "an all-women's acoustic punk band," will perform with the local trio the Stouthearted at the Crow's Nest.

UI, area cyclists gear up for Old Capitol Criterium

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

Lowell Kellogg looks like an ordinary UI student, a freshman from Burlington who is working toward a degree in either geology or geography.

But you won't find him in the library Sunday, cramming for a chemistry exam the next day. Instead, Kellogg will be speeding his bike around the Pentacrest, defending his title in the Eighth Annual Old Capitol Criterium.

Kellogg, 19, won last year's top race in the criterium, the United States Cycling Federation Senior Men's I and II competition. In his sixth year of racing, he is pegged as one of the racers to watch at the 1985 criterium.

"I'm psyched for it," Kellogg said last week. Racing in the criterium is like a homecoming for Kellogg, whose first competitive race was the Iowa City event six years ago, when he participated in the intermediate category.

In 1982, he won the USCF Junior race. He joined the ranks of the senior racers last year.

THE CRITERIUM'S Senior I and II race, featuring top national racers from the Midwest, covers 30 laps over a 1.2-km course up and down hills and around tight corners in downtown Iowa City.

Kellogg has been training for the race by riding 40 to 80 miles each afternoon, a two- to four-hour trip.

He schedules his classes in the mornings, which means a 7:30 course four mornings a week, trains in the afternoon and studies at night.

Kellogg, who will race in France this summer, spent spring break in Texas, riding on the Tour of Texas race that draws riders who compete on an international level.

Another Iowa City racer, Mark Parman, is trading his cross-country skis for two bike tires Sunday.

"Cross-country skiing is a means of staying in shape," said Parman, a 22-year-old UI graduate student who also runs when he's not peddling over Iowa roads.

"I GUESS I'M like Eric Heiden," he said. "If he can skate and cycle I guess I can ski and cycle."

Parman finished fourth in last year's Senior I and II race. "I got behind right away and ended up chasing Lowell Kellogg all the time," he said.

Parman, who's working toward his advanced degree in literary studies, juggles 15 hours of classwork and 350 miles of biking a week. The former high school football and baseball player said he began cycling after shuffling through a magazine on bike racing.

"I liked the speed aspect," Parman said.

Other Iowa cyclists competing for criterium titles this year include Mike Van Mantgem and Chris Munday of Iowa City, and Jacque Bradley of Davenport.

Van Mantgem, who rode in the Tour of Texas and at the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Camp, finished second to Kellogg in the 1984 Senior I and II race. Munday is a former Iowa Juniors Road Race champion and a previous criterium competitor.

Bradley is another familiar face among criterium winners. The 20-year-old national champion, who has been racing since she was 8 years old, has taken home several titles from the USCF Senior Women's race.

"I GUESS I'M like Eric Heiden," he said. "If he can skate and cycle I guess I can ski and cycle." Parman finished fourth in last year's Senior I and II race. "I got behind right away and ended up chasing Lowell Kellogg all the time," he said.

Parman, who's working toward his advanced degree in literary studies, juggles 15 hours of classwork and 350 miles of biking a week. The former high school football and baseball player said he began cycling after shuffling through a magazine on bike racing.

"I liked the speed aspect," Parman said. Other Iowa cyclists competing for criterium titles this year include Mike Van Mantgem and Chris Munday of Iowa City, and Jaque Bradley of Davenport. Van Mantgem, who rode in the Tour of Texas and at the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Camp, finished second to Kellogg in the 1984 Senior I and II race. Munday is a former Iowa Juniors Road Race champion and a previous criterium competitor.

Bradley is another familiar face among criterium winners. The 20-year-old national champion, who has been racing since she was 8 years old, has taken home several titles from the USCF Senior Women's race.

Criterion

Race sparks biking enthusiasm

By Greg Philby
Staff Writer

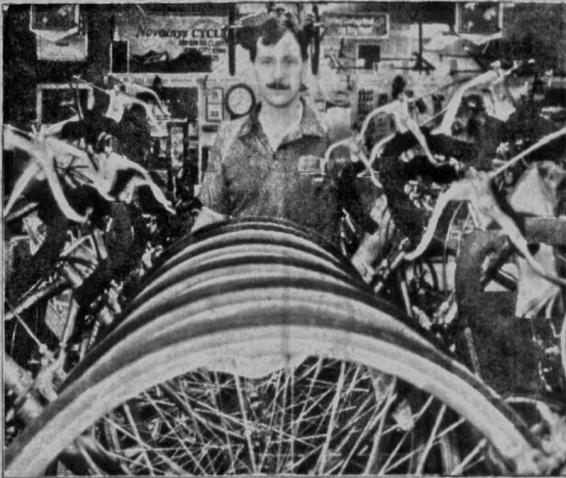

The Iowa City bike business may not boom because of the Old Capitol Criterion April 28, but area bicycle retailers say the upcoming race does much to enthuse people about the sport of biking.

"The Criterion does have an effect, but probably more indirect than direct," said Marty Novotny, co-owner and manager of Novotny's Cycle Center, 224 S. Clinton St.

"It makes the racing aspect or performance aspect a known alternative to other forms of exercise," said Gary Henry, service manager of World of Bikes, 723 S. Gilbert St. and past Criterion participant. "We have a lot of people asking about the race and a lot of people last year were getting enthused also from the (American bicyclists) in the Olympics."

NICK HOEFER, owner and manager of Ordinary Bike Shop 215 N. Linn St., said although there is a noticeable increase in bicycling enthusiasm immediately before and after the Old Capitol Criterion, "the biggest effect is long-term ... The Old Capitol Criterion is a nine-month endeavor for the people that run it and I tend to think the effects are the same as that too."

Hoefer said the criterium raises public awareness of bicycling and the event is well known, giving Iowa City a reputation for having good bicyclists. The Old Capitol Criterion attracts out-of-state cyclists as well as promoting bicycling in Iowa City, with many national competitors coming from this area.

Marty Novotny, co-owner and manager of Novotny's Cycle Center in Iowa City, says the Old Capitol Criterion helps increase both interest in biking and the desire for speed. He says consumers are moving away from commuter style bicycles and are picking up "sport or recreation-oriented" bikes instead.

But the bicycle specialists said actual sales and repairs do not change a whole lot, even with a couple of hundred bikers coming to the city.

"The racing done in that criterium is very, very high caliber," Hoefer said. "You don't do it at the drop of a hat."

MANY OF the bikers competing in the criterium are not local racers, and most of the participants "know what racing is all about and are self-sufficient," bringing their own repair equipment and parts, and knowing how to fix their bicycles, Novotny said.

Bike shop cash registers may be ringing in a few additional sales, such as at the World of Bikes where Henry said employees are building wheels for some participants of the criterium, but the change is not significant.

INSTEAD, THE criterium has "enthused" bicyclists about the sport, and has been associated with a new trend in bicycling - the desire for speed.

Consumers are moving away from "commuter" style bicycles, Novotny said, and picking up "sport or recreation-oriented" bikes.

"A lot of people want some good training biking," Henry said. "People expect more out of their bikes and more out of training." He added, it is becoming "more fashionable" to ride bicycles for exercise and work up a sweat, instead of just riding for leisure.

Hoefer said bicyclists now are more concerned about riding for "competition, and less on loading up with bags and taking off for a couple weeks."

The era of fitness, which the retailers agreed has involved all age groups, has attracted many people to bicycling.

"And it probably also gets a boost because it is less destructive than running," Hoefer said.

JIVEH, Lebanon (UPI) — Druze Moslem militiamen supported by tanks smashed through a Maronite Christian enclave near Sidon Sunday as their Moslem "People's Army" allies looted Maronite Christian villages in southern Lebanon. At least 10 deaths were reported.

In Beirut, Maronite and Moslem militiamen fought for 11 hours with mortars and rocket-propelled grenades along the "Green Line" dividing the capital. Beirut radio reported at least 20 casualties.

The battles prompted a plea from Pope John Paul II, who said the fighting in Lebanon was "an urgent invitation to all those who have the power to put an end to the spiral of vendetta violence."

Wisconsin series a big test for Hawks' Luedtke

By B. Glass
Staff Writer

When starting Iowa catcher, and leading hitter, Jeff Gurtcheff came around third base in the second game of a doubleheader against Illinois last Saturday, his back-up, Brian Luedtke, was at the end of the bench.

"It was a weird feeling at first," Luedtke said. "I watched him come in and all I saw were both his ankles go underneath him."

"He looked like he landed on his knees," the freshman added. "And then he rolled over and he was holding his ankle. I couldn't really tell if it was broken and then he just looked into the trainer and said, 'Condo (trainer Steve Condon), I broke my ankle.'"

Baseball

Down went Gurtcheff, who paced the 29-14 Hawkeyes (2-2 and tied for second in the Big Ten's Western Division) with a .444 batting average, 13 home runs and 60 runs batted in. "The next thing you know is that I have to take his place — it was really kind of overwhelming," Luedtke added.

LUEDTKE, WHO hails from Triangle, Va. and who was chosen by the Milwaukee Brewers in the 20th round last year, has become Coach Duane Banks' choice.

"We had a team meeting after the game," the 6-foot-1, 175 pounder said,

"and all Coach said was, 'well it was a tough loss but Luedtke can do the job,' and that's what I am going to do."

Luedtke, who is hitting at a .288 clip, 15-for-52, will handle Hawkeye hurlers again this weekend when Iowa travels to Madison, Wis., to meet the Badgers in a four-game series.

"That's not an easy thing for a team to overcome," Wisconsin Coach Steve Land said. "In some cases there is a letdown, but in more cases than not, the other players respond and probably play better than if he were in the lineup."

WISCONSIN, 3-5 in Big Ten play, fifth in the Western Division, has played like a water faucet this season — both hot and cold, according to Land. "I wish I knew," Land said about his team's streaky hitting. "Iowa's been scoring a lot of runs and we've had trouble scoring runs until lately. I look forward to it being a real good series."

While the Badgers' hitting has been on and off, their pitching has been coming on.

"Our pitching has improved since we started the Big Ten," Land said. "I think that has to do with the fact that the pitchers have had an ample amount of time to figure out what it's all about again."

Like the Wisconsin hurlers, Luedtke, who said this is a learning year for him, would like to get some more innings in behind and at the plate.

"I CAN'T TRY to be Jeff Gurtcheff or anything like that," he said. "I just have to go in and play the best I can."

If confidence was a problem at first, it is not anymore, as Luedtke said he has received his share of pats on the back from his teammates and Gurtcheff. "I went up to him (in bet- See Baseball, page 4B

Crucial stretch ahead for Iowa

By Mike Condon
Sports Editor

Time is getting short. You don't have to remind Iowa softball Coach Ginny Parrish and her squad that the season is two weeks from an end, unless they rally to win Iowa's first conference crown.

Parrish and her troops know the only way they can extend their season is to win the Big Ten Championship and move on to NCAA play. If Iowa has any postseason visions floating around in its heads, winning three, or even sweeping a four-game series with second-place Michigan is a must.

The Hawkeyes will meet the

Softball

Wolverines in a pair of doubleheaders today and tomorrow in Ann Arbor, Mich.

"WE KNOW WE'RE not out of it," Iowa third baseman Carol Bruggeman said. "The pressure is there but we know Michigan can be beaten."

The Wolverines are holding down third place in the conference with a 7-3 record, percentage points behind Indiana and Northwestern, both tied at .04. Iowa is still in the hunt at 7-7, but the Hawkeyes know they hold their destiny in their own hands.

The Hawkeyes would need a sweep in Michigan and a sweep next Tuesday at Northwestern to have any chance of pulling back into the race. "We know the next six games are crucial," Parrish said. "I really don't know what to expect from Michigan. All I know is that they took three of four from Northwestern, so they must be pretty good."

IOWA WAS HINDERED by a lack of clutch hitting in last Tuesday's pair of 1-1 losses to Northwestern. Iowa pitcher Ann Coughenour believes the hitting woes are nothing a few well-timed hits wouldn't cure. "We all know we're capable of hitting the ball much better than we have been," the Hawkeye right-hander said. "I'm part of the hitting staff too and I haven't been getting the job done either."

Where the Hawkeyes have been getting the job done is on the mound. In the latest Big Ten statistics, released prior to last Tuesday's twinbill with Northwestern, the Hawkeye pitching staff of Coughenour, Reynolds and Tracy Langhurst was leading the league as a staff.

The trio's combined earned run average is a sparkling 0.90. Individually, Coughenour is second in ERA at 0.57, just a shade behind Northwestern all-American Lisa Reynolds at 0.56. Reynolds is third in ERA at 0.68.

THE SURPRISING statistic was the fact that Iowa had jumped into the lead in team batting with a .234 average in conference games. Leading the way for Iowa is left-fielder Mary Wisniewski at .300, good for third in the conference. Lisa Nicola is 10th at .286 while Marty Pump is 25th with a .222 average.

Bruggeman is well-aware the Hawkeyes need to hit to defeat Michigan. "I think we have to back up our pitchers a little better with our bats," the Charter Oak, Iowa native said. "If I can get on in the lead-off spot, maybe that can get the rest of the hitters going."

The Wolverines are expected to throw their one-two punch of Vicki Morrow and Michelle Bolster at the Hawkeyes this weekend while Parrish will probably counter with Coughenour and Reynolds, saving Langhurst for relief duties, if needed.

Hawkeyes out to meet goal at own invite

By Brad Zimaneck
Staff Writer

One of the goals of the Iowa women's golf team at the start of the season was to win its own tournament. Now the opportunity has arrived as this morning the Hawkeyes will play 36 holes of the 54 hole Iowa Invitational tournament at the Finbine Golf Course.

The Hawkeyes will be competing for the title with Minnesota, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Illinois. Minnesota will be the toughest competition for Iowa. The Gophers defeated Iowa by four strokes at the Lady Seahawk Invitational in Wilmington, N.C., two weeks ago.

"IT'S VERY DEFINITELY been a goal for us (to win the Iowa Invitational)," Iowa Coach Diane Thomason said. "Minnesota will be tough and that's who we are picking as the competition. Wisconsin has a good player who will be a contender for medalist honors, but the competition will definitely be Minnesota."

"Our expectation is to win," Mary Baecke, an Iowa women's golfer from East Moline, Ill., said.

"There's going to be some good teams there but we beat them all before, so we think we can win this one. Minnesota and Nebraska might be in there close again, but everyone is psyched and ready to go for this tournament," she added.

Iowa defeated Nebraska earlier this year at the Rayburn Classic in Texas and Wisconsin two weeks ago in North Carolina.

"WE BEAT NEBRASKA on the spring trip and they are kind of down this year, I would say," Thomason said. "Illinois and Wisconsin are both teams we have beaten in the past."

The Hawkeyes have had a good two weeks of practice since their second-place performance and are looking forward to today's competition.

"Things have been going really well in practice, unbelievably well," Thomason said. "We've had some really good scores. This weekend during qualifying we shot 306 which is our record low at Finbine."

"Practice has been going great,"

Mary Baecke

Baecke said. "We're just playing the course a lot because we haven't had a chance to play the course a lot lately since we've been gone. We're trying to get used to the course again and everybody has been playing really well the last week."

ONE OF THE goals of Thomason at this weekend's meet is to crown a

Scrimmage brings end to spring drills

By Melissa Rapoport

Saturday's intrasquad football scrimmage at Kinnick Stadium will mark the end of this year's spring season — a month loaded with progress.

"It was the most low-key spring training I've ever been associated with," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said in his opening statement in Wednesday's press conference. "We're very pleased with the progress we've made with the young guys and we really haven't had any major surprises."

With the seniors graduating, the 1:05 p.m. match-up will put quite a few new faces on display. "Offensively, we have replaced Jon Hayes (at tight end)," the Hawkeye coach said. "It looks like Mike Flagg and Craig Clark have a real good battle going on at that position."

"I HAD TO replace Owen Gill (at fullback) and Fred Bush right now looks like he'll be the No. 1 fullback... It looks like Tom Humphrey will be taking Bill Glass' place at left guard."

One offensive question still remains. Will running back Ronnie Harmon, who is currently rehabilitating a leg injury, be healthy for fall?

Fry said Harmon is "ahead of schedule" through jumping rope and running the stairs in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Regardless, he will remain questionable until mid-July.

"There's no way we can put a value on a guy like Ronnie Harmon," Fry said. "It's imperative we get him back."

UNTIL HARMON'S anticipated return to the squad, Rick Bayless will own the top spot. "Rick Bayless is No. 1," the Iowa coach said. "Kevin Harmon and Grant Goodman both made progress this spring in their ability at running back... But I think, basically, the offensive line is in tact now," he added.

With the solid offense comes some holes in the defense. "Really, the question marks are still on the defensive side of the ball," Fry said. "We still don't know who will replace (defensive tackle) George Little. It looks like it will be a freshman.

"Tim Anderson from Webster City (Iowa) will play defensive tackle in the spring game," he added. "Bruce Gear and Richard Pryor will be the No. 1 defensive ends."

IF THIS YEAR'S "low key" spring produced any surprises, it would be kicker Rob Houghtlin. With the graduation of Tom Nichol and with Gary Kostrubala participating in the Drake Relays Saturday, kicking duties will belong to walk-ons Tony Krueger and Houghtlin.

"I'm very impressed with him," Fry said about Houghtlin, who transferred from Miami (Ohio). "He's showed a lot of poise. He's had an impressive spring. He's a very refreshing kid. I like him because when I tell him something he listens."

To add to Fry's spring success, Iowa suffered no additional injuries. Three Hawkeye defenders, including all-American linebacker Larry Station, missed spring drills. Station, who is nursing a knee injury, was joined on the sidelines by cornerback Ken Sims and tackle Jon Vrieze.

medalist from Iowa and she thinks any one of five her players can take that honor.

"Bake (Mary Baecke) and Julie (Edgar) were the lowest qualifiers, but Lynn (Tauke) is also shooting pretty decent scores," Thomason said. "I feel Julie, Lynn and Mary Baecke have been more consistent with their scores and under 80 consistently and that is where they should be."

"It's been a goal to win the tournament but we would like to have a medalist," the veteran Iowa coach added. "We should have somebody who could win it. I think anyone of our players could win it, to be really honest, that shows how much depth we have as anyone of five of our top six players could do it."

MINNESOTA'S Julie Hennessy might have a little bit to say about winning the medalist honors as she finished second at the Lady Seahawk while Iowa's best finisher was Amy Bubon, who finished in a tie for sixth with Allison Groat of James Madison and Jackie Cannizzo of UNC-Wilmington.

"Our practices have been going really well and we have shot some low numbers," Hennessy said. "I've done fairly well this year and I am improving. At North Carolina I shot rounds of 81-73-77 and that placed second."

Minnesota has been without the help of Coach Anne Zahn who had a baby last week. The team is being coached by Nancy Harris in Zahn's absence. Hennessy doesn't think this will bother the Gopher team and she is confident that they will be beat the Hawkeyes for the second time this year.

"I do think we will beat Iowa again," Hennessy said.

If Iowa doesn't beat Minnesota this weekend they will have another chance to beat the Gophers, along with the Buckeyes and the Hoosiers at the Big Ten Championship that will be held May 3 and 4 at Bloomington, Ind.

"Indiana is going to be tough as always along with Ohio State, but we think the way we are playing right now we can finish in the top three or four," Baecke said.

"Last year we were fourth and we think that we could have been third if we got to finish that last round. Our goal is to finish in the top three."

On Friday the golf action starts at 9:30 a.m. and continues until the 36 holes are finished.
