Reagan agrees to GOP compromise budget plan

By Karen Burns Staff Writer

Several senators逆势 on Thursday to vote against a resolution calling for the full and immediate divestment of the state's endowment from companies doing business in South Africa; the vote failed by a 33-32 margin.

Many students and faculty members at the University of Iowa have been calling for divestment for several years. The Senate, in a compromise move, voted to delay Social Security spending for one fiscal year. The next step in the Senate's consideration of the issue would be to vote on the entire budget package.

President Reagan has been under pressure to reverse his decision to delay Social Security spending. The White House has been accused of being too soft on South Africa.
Cedar Rapids drug network busted

By Doug Philby

A special Cedar Rapids task force has filed charges against 12 people who were convicted in a drug ring that attempted to smuggle drugs into the country.

The task force was created to combat drug trafficking in the city, and the charges were filed in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Iowa.

The defendants face charges of conspiracy to distribute controlled substances, and one of them is charged with possession of a firearm in furtherance of a drug trafficking crime.

If convicted, the defendants could face sentences ranging from five years to life in prison.

Spriestersbach wears many hats

Diane Spriestersbach have consistently tried to provide a climate and a philosophy for identifying and developing excellence within the graduate programs," said Spriestersbach, adding that he worked especially hard to increase the number of available scholarships and fellowships.

But Spriestersbach complained that more assistance could have been achieved at the state and federal level.

"The greatest disappointment," she said, "is that it is unique to Iowa—has been the lack of recognition extended to highly creative people and ideas in ways that would have been more formalized if the money were available." Spriestersbach also noted that the budget for Iowa's graduate programs has been significantly reduced, and that the University of Iowa has never been able to achieve the kind of financial support that many private universities have enjoyed.

Spriestersbach also discussed the importance of the Iowa Peace Network, which was established by the University of Iowa in 1980 to promote nonviolent alternatives to war and conflict. The network has been active in a variety of ways, including sponsoring lectures and discussions, organizing events, and providing educational resources.

"We have been fortunate in that the University of Iowa has always been receptive to the idea of peace and nonviolence," said Spriestersbach. "But we need to do more to promote these ideas and to make them a part of our daily lives."

UI apathetic forum participant impressed with speakers’ sincerity

By Karen Burns

Participants in Wednesday’s forum for gun control and peace demonstrations in the student center were impressed with the sincerity of the speakers. While the presentation was a bit disorganized, the speakers were able to impress the students who attended.

Tilt Dally Iowa’s sincerity was questioned by the integrity of any individual was one of the concerns of the forum.

Although the majority of the participants expressed a desire for action, the sincerity of the speakers was questioned. The speakers were able to impress the students who attended.

UI Student Phil Hubbard remembers the protests leading up to May 11, 1970: "I think it was a clear message to the administration that we wanted to stop the Vietnam War." Phil Hubbard added: "I thought the presentation was a bit disorganized, but the speakers were able to impress the students who attended."
New entrepreneur association to promote Iowa small business

By Greg Philby

Small business may become big business for enterprising UI students. A fledgling entrepreneur association is forming, said a university spokesman.

The UI Association of Entrepreneurs, which is expected to hold its organizational meeting Tuesday night, is a collection of UI students interested in promoting new business opportunities. The group was organized in part by UI students and members of the campus community who represent small businesses in the Carbondale area.

The students have been working to establish this association because the students believe the university should be more involved in the economic development of Iowa and the Carbondale area. They hope to attract as many students as possible to help promote the small business development in the area.

The students have been working on this project for several months, and they believe the university should be more involved in the economic development of Iowa and the Carbondale area.

"The reason we want to establish an organization like this is so that we can find out what is happening in the area and have a chance to discuss it with others," said one UI student.

The group plans to hold meetings that will include presentations from small business owners and members of the local community. They hope to attract as many students as possible to help promote the small business development in the area.

Illinois students protest apartheid

United Press International

The student government of the University of Illinois at Carbondale is launching a week-long protest against a proposed association with corporations doing business in South Africa and Southern Rhodesia. The group, led by the president of the student association, says that the association would perpetuate apartheid and that the university should not be associated with companies that support the apartheid regime.

"We believe that the university should not be associated with companies that support apartheid," said one student activist. "We are concerned that the university is transacting business with companies that are involved in human rights abuses in South Africa and Southern Rhodesia."

The university's Board of Trustees has until May 31 to respond to the students' concerns. The students have also contacted UI President Richard Trombley and UI Trustees to express their concerns.

The students have been working on this project for several months, and they believe the university should be more involved in the economic development of Iowa and the Carbondale area.

"The reason we want to establish an organization like this is so that we can find out what is happening in the area and have a chance to discuss it with others," said one UI student.
What's in a name?

Many people regularly check the police and courts registers to see if the name of anyone they know has shown up in print.

It is in the policy of The Daily Iowan not to print the names of— or other identifying information about— those accused of criminal offenses, unless a judge orders their names released.

The recent arrest of an Iowa City woman charged with murdering the life and health of her daughter has reconstructed many people's views about the need for such a policy, especially because the woman's name has been identified.

In this case, the woman's baby was allegedly abused by a former family member. The bill did not identify the woman, even though the child would not be identified and, consequently, stigmatized.

If registered criminal and residential databases become the new Register, however, printed the woman's name. The Press-Citizen's policy on stigmatization has changed.

Because of these actions, the woman has, in a sense, been excluded from the community—effecting what the media have to report on the incident.

It is time for the media to institute a coherent policy to prevent public awareness of serious abuse and rape crimes while, at the same time, helping to identify the victim.

Who benefits?

What does the United States of America— the most militarily powerful nation on earth— and much of the Global National Product of about $7 trillion—have to fear from domestic reform of agrarian and environmental laws?

The rhetoric has been flying as high and fast that it has become difficult to see what the real issues are. "The United States is an agrarian country," the editorialists from the classical Human rhetoricians who, when confronted with a complex argument with conflicting claims, stated: "Who benefits?"

Indeed, who benefits from the Reagan administration's policy in Central America? The United States is at war with itself, protecting its business interests, growing wealthy.

The United States, in the 1970s, and has a population of 80 million. It is of the types of people who are going through their lives, with no idea of the far-reaching effects of their actions.

In the 1960s the United Fruit Company began to buy and control the banana industry in Costa Rica, because of its peculiarly American uniform— the United Fruit Company controls the main market, which they hold in virtual monopoly until the 1970s.

Until the 1970s, the United Fruit Company was a virtual monopoly on the banana trade, exporting bananas and importing raw materials.

In the United Fruit Company's early days, it was the government's responsibility to control the distribution of the fruit. The United Fruit Company was given a monopoly status over the banana trade, which allowed them to control the supply of bananas and thus influence the market price.

It must be said to work in American national interest to work for everyone else's to afford to resort to natural evil. The people who do this, are the people who are going through their lives, with no idea of the far-reaching effects of their actions.

Des Moines City Council rejects Neal Berlin for job

By Sally Levin Strauss

Despite a favorable report from the local college town, the City Council of Des Moines rejected Neal Berlin over the appointment of another for the position of city manager in the nation's capital city.

"I heard him. He's very impressed with Berlin," Current Governor Hubert said Thursday. "He's a guy who will get your interest and gets the best out of you.

"It was difficult to arrive at the final decision," Berlin and his wife were quoted as saying.

"The council was very concerned about the candidate's qualifications and his experience with city management. However, they decided that Berlin was not the best fit for the position at this time," Berlin's wife said.

Senators

Senators have been discussing the possibility of amending the bill to include the requirement that all candidates be vetted before their appointment. However, many senators are still divided on the issue.

"I'm not sure if the amendment will pass," Senator Michael Smith said. "Many of my colleagues believe that the requirement is too strict and will hinder the city's ability to find the best candidates.

Senate

This week, the Senate has been considering various amendments to the bill. However, many of the amendments have been met with opposition.

"I'm not sure if we'll be able to pass the amendment," Senator John Doe said. "Many of my colleagues disagree with the changes that are being proposed."

Dolphin All-Pro Kuechenberg quits; last active member of 17-0 squad

BUCYRUS (O.) — T. Donald Streets, last of the 17-0 squad, the All-Pro linebacker for the Super Bowl-winning Miami Dolphins, announced his retirement today. Streets played his 17th consecutive game for the Dolphins in Super Bowl VIII last January.

Streets was a key member of the defense that helped lead the Dolphins to two Super Bowl titles. He was a first-team All-Pro selection in 1972 and 1973.

"I've given my all for the Dolphins and I'm ready to move on to the next chapter," Streets said.

Movies on campus

The Brother from Another Planet. "Although he doesn't come off with a lot of sympathy, he's a very nice guy," director John Sayles says of his lead character, a New York real-estate agent who is transported to Africa by a sorcerer. Though he's a natty dresser, the New York accent is a dead giveaway. Though the demands of the sorcerer's creed are severe, the agent manages to dodge the plot twists that are customarily served up in such films.

The Things They Love. "In every generation, there are people who believe their cooperation is the key to fulfilling their dreams. But they never realize that the cooperation is not enough. It's the will to fulfill the dreams that matters." (M. C. Pinchas.)

Movies in town

The Man Who Would Be King. An American Civil War veteran is forced to fight the British in Afghanistan. "This is the classic adventure film," director David Lean says of his film. "It's a story of the human spirit, the will to win over all obstacles." (M. C. Pinchas.)

The Apartment. "An apartment is a place where a man can go to be alone. But when he's alone, he's not alone. He's in a world of his own." (M. C. Pinchas.)

The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance. "You can't change the past, but you can change the future." (M. C. Pinchas.)

John Sayles' new 'Brother' overcomes plotting problem

By Richard Park

For JOHN SAYLES, The Brother from Another Planet represents a commercial breakthrough. After years of making films that were critical successes but not commercial hits, Sayles has finally made a film that is both popular and profitable.

The story of the movie is simple. A New York real-estate agent is transported to Africa by a sorcerer. Though he's a natty dresser, the New York accent is a dead giveaway. Though the demands of the sorcerer's creed are severe, the agent manages to dodge the plot twists that are customarily served up in such films.

One of the key reasons for the movie's success is its cast. John Lone, Donald Sutherland, and Harry Dean Stanton all deliver powerful performances. Lone is particularly effective as the sorcerer, bringing a sense of mystery and intrigue to the role. Sutherland and Stanton are equally impressive as the two main characters.

The movie was released in the fall of 1984 and has been a box office sensation. It has grossed over $50 million, making it one of the year's biggest hits. It has also received critical acclaim, with many reviewers praising the film's pacing, direction, and performances.

Sayles is ecstatic with the results. "I'm thrilled with the way the movie turned out," he says. "I knew it was going to be good, but I never thought it would be this good." He adds that he's looking forward to making more movies in the future.

The movie has been a commercial and critical success, and it has helped to establish Sayles as a major force in the film industry. He plans to continue making films that are both popular and critically acclaimed.

The tone of the movie wavers once the protagonist enters the New York City. It's a bit of a letdown, but it's still a solid performance. And whew, what a character! He's got that New York coolness, that easy charm, that makes you want to like him. And he does! He's got that New York coolness, that easy charm, that makes you want to like him. And he does! He's got that New York coolness, that easy charm, that makes you want to like him.

The movie ultimately resolves nothing, with an ending that is satisfying and overwhelming. The protagonist's journey is a testament to the power of the human spirit, and it's a story that will be remembered for years to come.

The movie was released on DVD in 2000, and it's available on Blu-ray as well. It's a must-see for anyone who loves well-crafted, engaging stories.

Bride's brother confirms Bruce will wed model

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Reports that rock superstar Bruce Springsteen would marry model Julianne Phillips eventually proved to be true as Rain Fall was brought to a conclusion by reports from the singer's brother that he and Phillips will wed at some time in the near future.

A spokeswomen at the Los Angeles Mangement Agency which represents Phillips said: "We have never heard anything about this and we have no comment, as it is not our policy to comment on the private lives of our clients."

Radio station WMJU and other Portland rock stations stated that reports that Springsteen will marry Phillips of Lake Oswego, Ore. Thursday at an undisclosed site in the Portland area.

Sheila's one-time home in a trailer at Lake Oswego, an affluent suburb of Portland, would be the site of the wedding, according to sources close to the singer. Phillips has been staying at the home with family friends as her source but refused to discuss the wedding in detail.

Bruce and Phillips has been travelling around the country together since their last public appearance in New York last December. Phillips has been seen in her brother's company at various events.

The most notable activity in America this year has been Bruce Springsteen's acclaimed "Born in the U.S.A." tour. The world's biggest solo star in 1984 will be at the San Diego Coliseum Sunday, June 10, and at the Oakland Coliseum the following night.

Phillips, the older brother of Julianne Phillips, is a business manager in the entertainment industry who is expected to make the marriage public at an undisclosed site in the Portland area.

Phillips was not available for comment but was expected to make the marriage public at an undisclosed site in the Portland area.

Lack of chemistry between stars, stereotypes hinder 'Mrs. Soffel'.

Mrs. Soffel

As an escape from justice, a none-too-bright farmwife comes to be in cahoots with a legendary private prison operator. The film is from the very least, 312 2nd Ave. (319) 353-7473.

In Iowa County Jail, the man who转向s Diana Soffel's duties in a fugitive's escape, denounces his wife's actions and the woman's emotive power during her performance. The film lacks the essential insights and the insight to circulate Bibles to the incarcerated. Despite the meticulous craftsmanship in the film, it is exceedingly dull. But Mrs. Soffel does have a certain problem. Despite its good qualities, the film remains distant and fails. While Keaton and Gibson create interesting characters, they don't make a particularly compelling couple. There are many nice things about the film, a rich and nuanced take. The film also has good performances. Her ability to convey nervousness even when her emotions are suppressed, enabling her character to bestow sympathy on the audience. Armstrong's direction is sure and full of unexpected surprises and benefits. Despite the film's giddy love story, Mrs. Soffel's direction is sure and full of unexpected surprises and benefits.
