City might build new offices

By Dave Roll

The Iowa City Council Monday decided to consider the purchase of two city-owned office buildings west of the Elks building as a site for the new city offices.

The council voted 5-2 to consider the buildings, which would allow for a centralized city office building.

The council also decided to consider the old Elks building if it later discovers the new building is not sufficient.

The public might find it more convenient to have all city offices in one building, said Councilor Neil Beatty.

"It's really important," said Beatty.

The Elks building (which is really important), said Beatty, would have to wait at least eight months longer than originally planned to be out of cramped city offices.

"Please consider it," Beatty continued.

The city will now conduct a six-month study, looking at the feasibility of the project and looking to Phase III of the Elks building.

Gas sellers irked by new law

By Jerry Duncan

June gasoline retailers Monday were forced to start selling gas using whole cents only because of a state law that took effect last week. As a result, many people are complaining about the change. "I think it's very stupid," said Tom Duthie, owner of Duthie's Service, Inc., 208 W. Main St., saying the law was not practical. "I'm not going to try to get out of it," he said. "The first thing people think is that it costs them more money."

The $49.99 price will remain in effect until the law is rescinded next year, Duthie said. "I don't think we're going to lose any business," he said. "It's just a matter of getting used to it." Duthie, who has been in business for 52 years, said he doesn't think the change will be a big problem. "It's not a major change," he said. "It's just a minor inconvenience."

The law requires all gasoline retailers to use whole cents only, but there are exceptions. Retailers can use tenths of a cent in the price of gasoline if it's a "special price" as defined by the law. Duthie said he's not sure how that will work. "It's going to be a big problem," he said. "It's going to be a mess."

Duthie said he's been in business for 52 years and has never had a problem with the state government. "I'm not going to try to get out of it," he said. "I'm just going to do it." Duthie said he doesn't think the change will be a big problem. "It's not a major change," he said. "It's just a minor inconvenience."

Hearing heart

On June 2, UI Hospitals became the first Iowa medical center to perform a heart transplant. More than 18 years after the Cleveland Clinic first performed the first human heart transplant, UI Dr. Loren Hirshkowitz and Ronald Meng replaced the heart in Mr. Martin Ron.

Currently, heart and liver transplants are considered experimental procedures, which financial assistance are not available. And Iowa is one of the 12 states in which lower priority is given to heart transplant patients.

Organ transplants are high tech, high risk medical procedures. The costs of the operations can run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.UI Hospitals officials estimate Martin's operation and recovery expenses could exceed $100,000.

Martin was fortunate to have family and friends involved in raising money for his transplant. Many people, however, don't have access to the fortunes needed to keep them alive. Between 50,000 and 75,000 Americans are on waiting lists for heart transplants, according to the American Council on Transplantation. Only 175 received new hearts in 1983.

With the advent of new anti-rejection drugs and the development of improved surgical techniques, heart transplants for men are earning almost 100% survival. Pinochet ends state of siege

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The military dictatorship of Presi­dent Augusto Pinochet, appar­ently responding to pressure from the United States and the Catholic Church, lifted a nine-month state of siege on Monday and ended a prohibition on the press.

A GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN said the press censorship in the future will be carried out by the Civil Rights Com­mission.

Pinochet's regime claimed the stop was a marked decline in the use of violence.

The government of that country will lift a 7-month state of siege on Tuesday night, Interior Minister Ricardo Guarino said. There had been a marked decline in "sensitive" activity.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC lawyer Jorge Damián said the state of siege was lifted because the military government4s unopposed need support on the economy front to help regenerate the country.

"It was the condition set by the U.S. government to allow the city of Washington, St. exhibition. "I know I was going to hurt her," he said.

By Marilyn Greene
Assistant Entertainment Editor

THERE is a good chance that your parents or grandparents are familiar with the story of Secret Admirer, a 1985 comedy film directed by David Greenwalt and starring C. Thomas Howell and Lori Laughlin. The story revolves around a high school student who receives love letters from a secret admirer. The letters are so popular that they become the talk of the town, and the student goes to great lengths to uncover the identity of the admirer.

However, the film was not as well-received as some of its contemporaries. In this review, we will examine why Secret Admirer struggled with a clipped script and weak dialogue.

Secret Admirer

Directed by David Greenwalt, written by David Simon, Jeffrey Winning, and Alan Gorby

Secret Admirer is a story about a high school student who receives love letters from a secret admirer. The letters are so popular that they become the talk of the town, and the student goes to great lengths to uncover the identity of the admirer.

The story is told through the perspective of the secret admirer, who is actually a group of students who are in love with the protagonist. They decide to use the secret admirer as a way to express their feelings to the protagonist without revealing their identities.

The film is a classic example of a high school romance comedy, and it has some memorable moments, such as the scene where the secret admirer gives the protagonist a ticket to a football game.

Unfortunately, the film was criticized for its weak dialogue and lack of character development. The secret admirer is portrayed as a group of idealistic high school students who are able to express their feelings in a way that the protagonist cannot.

Predictability mars ‘D.A.R.Y.L.’

By Marilyn Greene
Assistant Entertainment Editor

THE IFILM D.A.R.Y.L. (1985) is a film that was released in theaters on Oct. 19, 1984, and has since become a cult classic. The film follows a group of friends as they embark on a cross-country road trip to meet the President of the United States.

The film was directed by David Greenwalt, who also wrote the screenplay. It stars C. Thomas Howell, who plays the role of Michael Stone, and Fred Ward, who plays the role of John Heyman. The film was produced by Zanuck/Bobbs-Merrill Company.

D.A.R.Y.L. is known for its predictability, which is a result of its predictable plot and dialogue. However, the film is still enjoyed by many for its nostalgic value and its depiction of the 1980s.

The film’s predictability is a result of its formulaic approach to storytelling. The story follows a group of teenage boys on a road trip, and there are no surprises or plot twists. The film relies on clichés and stereotypes to tell its story, which makes it predictable.

Despite its predictability, D.A.R.Y.L. has a strong cast and a well-written script. The film’s humor is often dark and sideways, which adds to its charm and its status as a cult classic.

At the Bijou

La WINDING road to a Green screen opens...the spirit of commission and motion, existing between the limitations of the human senses. The path of the insect. A field of dandelions. A group of horses...it takes these sensory experiences and weaves them into a tapestry of light and sound.

D. A. R. Y. L. is a story that was told for the first time 10 years ago with a montage of memorable images. It is a story of boyhood, of dreams and of the endless journey of life.

It's D-day for former Hawks

By Melissa Rappaport

It is D-day today, that is, for former basketball players Greg Stokes and Michael Payne.

At the last minute, the National Basketball Association's draft at the Palladium in New York, Stokes and Payne will know how each player has been rated by the league's scouts and agents. Greg will probably be late in the first round, he said. "It's possible he could go in the second round, but that's if he wants to." Stokes said he will probably go in the third round.

"I'm prepared to go between 15th and 27th," he said. "As long as it's all-around talent, it's all in the name of the game." Stokes, who has a versatile handle, is expected to be selected in the top five of the draft.

"It's my opinion, after talking to general managers of teams, that Greg probably will be selected between 15th and 27th," said former teammate Keith Page, who played with Stokes and Payne in college.

Page said that Stokes has the potential to be a "star" player in the NBA. "He's got a lot of talent, a lot of skills, and he's always been a hard worker," Page said.

Payne, who was a three-time All-American, said he is "very confident" of being chosen in the first round. "I'm prepared to go between 15th and 27th," he said.
