Union space not allocated for KRUI

By Karen Burns
Special to The Daily Iowan

A two-year-long struggle to include a joint student communications facility in the renovated union ended Monday.

Design plans, in their final stage, did not include space for KRUI student radio station but space has been allocated to Student Video Producers, the other half of the duo requesting the joint communications facility.

Since plans for the proposed joint communications facility failed, KRUI offices and equipment will remain in the basement of South Quadrangle residence hall.

THROUGHOUT PRELIMINARY design sessions, KRUI spokespersons emphasized their desire to move to the Union so they could be near the "hub of activity" and share some expensive production equipment with their video counterparts.

For two years student government leaders, along with KRUI and SVP, have worked with UI administrators and architects to incorporate the facility, compromising on the plans to adapt to unforeseen economic and space constraints.

Representatives of student government and the student communications groups compromised on the total space allocation for the facility, and student government members made verbal and legislative commitments to help fund the facility. But at a meeting with the architects in mid-May, plans were approved by the Iowa Memorial Union Committee that did not include the facility.

FOLLOWING THAT MEETING, advocates of the joint communications facility said they had been told "no" before and would continue to explore the possibilities of the facility in the union.

As a result, 800 square feet of space with permanent walls have been allocated to SVP in the new student activities space. Temporary partitions divide offices of most other student organizations located in the activities center.

"I think we've done everything we could possibly do to get a joint communications facility and we had to compromise on just a better video production facility," UI Collegiate Associations Council President Jeff Devitt said.

SVP RESEARCH and development director Bob Campbell said it is "unfortunate" for SVP not to share space and equipment with KRUI but he is "grateful" for the space allotted to SVP.

Although the new space is only a "small increase," in total square feet compared to what the group currently occupies in the Union, Campbell said the group's space will not be divided in two differ-

City might build new offices

By David Roll
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Council Monday decided to consider the construction of new city offices east of the Civic Center, rather than moving into the old Elks building.

None of the council members showed interest in a third alternative, a new $1.4 million building on Iowa Avenue proposed by local developer Larry Svoboda.

A new building will cost about $1.9 million, $500,000 more than the Elks building at 325 E. Washington St.

The city was warned that it might lose its chance to move into the Elks building if it later discovers the new proposal is too expensive. Southgate Development Corp., which is remodeling the building, will allow other customers to reserve potential office space, said developer Harry Wolf.

"It's conceivable that six months from now, we could end up at ground zero again," said City Manager Neal Berlin at the council's informal meeting.

THE CITY WILL now conduct a six-month study, looking at the feasibility of the project and taking bids. A new building could not be completed for about 20 months, Berlin said.

That means city employees would have to wait at least eight months longer than originally planned to move out of cramped city offices.

But councilors saw several advantages to erecting a new building on city property.

"We would end up owning a brand new building as opposed to a 110-year-old building," said Councilor George Strait.

It was also important for the council to take a "long hard look" at building on city land before considering the Elks building or Svoboda's proposal, said Mayor John McDonald.

The public might find it more convenient to have all city offices in one spot, said Councilor Kate Dickson.

"THE CONVENIENCE of (the building) is really important," Dickson said. "I think it's very appealing having a building built to our own specifications."

A private developer would build the structure and sell it to the city over the course of 20 years under a lease-purchase agree-

30 hostages transferred from plane

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—Fearing a bloody rescue attempt, a Moslem militia leader ordered about 30 American hostages transferred from a hijacked TWA jetliner Monday to secret locations in the Lebanese capital.

In a surprise twist to the 4-day-old hijacking of Flight 847, Nabih Berri, Lebanon's justice minister and leader of the Shiite Moslem Amal militia, said he backed the hijackers' demand that Israel release 700 to 800 Shiite prisoners being held in Atlit prison near the port of Haifa.

"Amal is not an intermediary concerning the Atlit issue," Berri said at his home in Moslem-controlled west Beirut. "Amal has adopted the demands of the hijackers regarding Atlit.

"I HAVE PERSONALLY ordered their evacuation because we were afraid of an operation or a battle in which all of them would have been killed," Berri said explaining the hostages' removal from the plane. "I can say they are all out."

But the location of all the hostages was thrown into question later when the plane moved along the runway with pilot Capt. John Tetrake at the controls.

An airport official said Tetrake had asked for the aircraft to be refueled but the request was denied and shortly afterward the aircraft returned to its original position. However, reporters at the airport could not confirm having heard Tetrake's voice in any radio contacts.

THE OFFICIAL confirmed the captain and his two fellow crew members were on board, but said, "I don't know whether there are any passengers on board."

Berri said all the hostages were taken off the red-and-white jetliner, which had been parked at Beirut airport since early Sunday, before dawn and were "somewhere outside Beirut airport."

Amal leaders refused to confirm Berri's statements and said the hostages slept well on the plane and enjoyed tea and sandwiches for breakfast well after the hour the captives had been reported removed.

TWA OFFICIALS in New York said they believe the three-man crew of the hijacked plane was still aboard. Berri said some of the hijackers were still on the plane.

The State Department said it believed a total of 43 people were being held hostage, 42 of them American and one Greek. The Navy identified the passenger shot and killed Friday on the plane as Robert Stethem, 23, of Waldorf, Md., a Navy engineer.

It was believed that about 30 hostages were taken off the plane

Kulow sentenced to 50-year term

By Greg Miller
Staff Writer

Following 10 months of court battles, 33-year-old convicted murderer Ronald Lee Kulow was sentenced Monday to a maximum of 50 years in prison for the murder of his wife last August.

Kulow was also ordered by District Judge Harold J. Swalles in Johnson County District Court to pay Johnson County more than $18,450 in legal fees and court costs.

Bond for Kulow's appeal has been set at $15,000. Kulow was given credit for 304 days in jail he has already served in relation to his offense.

Kulow, who was charged Aug. 18, 1984, with first-degree murder, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder May 6 in a plea-bargaining agreement less than one week before his trial was scheduled to begin May 13.

Had Kulow been found guilty

S. Africa issues interim plan

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI)—President Pieter Botha, in ceremonies marked by clashes between protesters and police, signed a proclamation in the Namibian capital of Windhoek Monday installing a new administration in the disputed country.

Botha, whose government rules the mineral-rich nation in defiance of the United Nations and the World Court, told observers that progress toward independence was slow because of U.N. attitudes and the presence of 30,000 Cuban troops in neighboring Angola.

Soldiers and military hardware rumbled through the heavily guarded streets of Windhoek to mark the event.

BUT ABOUT 500 black demonstrators, claiming the proclamation is merely a ploy to entrench South African control, clashed with police. Witnesses said several people were injured, six requiring hospital treatment, when officers beat the protesters with truncheons and plastic whips.

South Africa captured the mineral-rich territory from Germany during World War I and has held it since then despite repeated condemnation by the United Nations and a finding by the International Court of Justice in June 1971 that its occupation was illegal.

A five-nation group including the United States has been named to bring about independence in Namibia under a U.N. plan providing for internationally supervised elections.

HOWEVER, SOUTH AFRICA has made independence conditional on the removal of Cuban troops from Angola, Namibia's northern neighbor, where they are helping the Marxist government resist a South African-backed insurrection.

Under the proclamation, South Africa retains responsibility for defense, foreign relations and negotiations on independence. The other functions are turned over to the new eight-man multi-racial cabinet.

Botha assured critics of the new government that its installation was a step along the road to internationally accepted independence and said South Africa would continue to seek ways of implementing the U.N.-sponsored peace plan.

But U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar declared the new administration installed in Namibia "null and void" and urged all states to deny it any recognition.

Argentina tightens money

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — A drastic price control program was launched Monday to curb runaway inflation and pave the way for circulation of a new Argentine monetary unit worth as much as 1,000 times more than the outgoing peso.

Banks, closed since Sunday, will reopen Wednesday with the new money, called the "austral," worth $1.25.

Taiwan rocked by scandal

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Eighty-seven people were indicted Monday on charges ranging from forgery of documents to embezzlement and breach of trust in a financial scandal that has rocked Taiwan's economy and tumbled a business empire.

All 87 indicted were officials of the Tenth Credit Cooperative and the Cathay Plastics Co.

Comparable worth rejected

WASHINGTON — The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Monday dismissed comparable worth but Gerald W. McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said the decision "stood logic on its head."

EEOC Chairman Clarence Thomas said, "We are convinced that Congress never authorized the government to take on wholesale restructuring of wages that were set by non-sex based decisions of employers — by collective bargaining or by the marketplace."

WASHINGTON — A deadlocked Supreme Court Monday gave a victory to a woman who objected on religious grounds to having her picture on her driver's license.

The justices were divided 4-4 on the issue, with Justice Lewis Powell not participating, and issued only a one-sentence order in the case over Nebraska's law requiring photographs on driver's licenses.

Packard to lead fraud study

WASHINGTON — President Reagan Monday denounced defense contracting practices and named David Packard to head a blue-ribbon study commission on how to reform Pentagon procurement practices.

Packard, a former deputy defense secretary and co-founder of Hewlett-Packard Co., a defense contractor that did more than $144 million in business last year, said, "I know as well as any person that these problems did not begin in your administration, Mr. President. I had to deal with the same problems when I was at the Pentagon 15 years ago."

Men indicted for espionage

NORFOLK, Va. — Federal grand juries on both coasts Monday indicted members of an accused family-friend spy ring on charges of espionage.

In Norfolk, a federal grand jury indicted Arthur Walker, 50, on seven counts of espionage. In San Francisco, Jerry Whitworth was indicted on a single count of conspiring to sell national secrets to the Soviets from 1976 to 1984.

ICLU halts Bible give-away

DES MOINES — The Iowa Civil Liberties Union has stopped Gideons International from handing out free Bibles to elementary school students, ICLU officials said Monday.

ICLU Executive Director Criss Farley said Gideons and the Adel-DeSoto school district have entered into a consent decree, settling a lawsuit filed by the ICLU.

Woman recants stabbing story

By Greg Miller
 Staff Writer

Penny Lynn Maxwell, 24, Fairfield, Iowa, pleaded guilty Monday in Johnson County District Court to giving false reports to law enforcement authorities after falsely reporting she was stabbed earlier this month.

Maxwell reported to Iowa City police June 7 that a curly-haired man grabbed her, took the contents from her wallet and then stabbed her in the abdomen with a screwdriver while she was making a pay-phone call at Sturgis Ferry Park, according to court records.

Maxwell admitted June 11 "that she had lied to the police" and "that she had stabbed herself," court records state.

An Ames man was sentenced Monday to serve 15 years in jail and fined more than $4,000 after being convicted of extortion.

David Allen Rowe, 23, was sentenced in Johnson County District Court by Judge Harold J. Swailes to serve concurrent sentences he received in Webster County on October 20, 1980, and Story County on June 20, 1983.

Rowe was charged with extortion January 6 for "strong arming" Keith Moore, Trailer 131 at Indian Look-out Trailer Court, "for thousands of dollars" in connection with a conspiracy to commit a drug transaction, according to court records.

The report said Rowe "went to Moore's trailer on more than one occasion demanding money from Mr. Moore."

The court recommended the Director of the Department of Corrections to "take into account the need" for Rowe to have a "complete psychiatric and psychological evaluation."

Bond on Rowe's appeal is set, at James R. Wade, 35, Oxford, Iowa, made an initial appearance Sunday on the charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated in Johnson County District Court.

Iowa City police observed Wade's vehicle early Saturday morning "weaving from shoulder to shoulder and over the center line," while westbound on Highway 6, almost striking the police vehicle, according to court records.

Wade also "failed all sobriety tests administered," court records state.

He was released on his own recognizance with the preliminary hearing scheduled for July 3.

Randy Wayne Fisher, 18, of 501 Second Ave., made an initial appearance Saturday on the charges of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated and possession of a schedule I controlled substance in Johnson County District Court.

Iowa City police observed Fisher's vehicle "traveling at a greater speed than the 25 mph limit" at the intersection of Washington and Gilbert streets early Saturday morning, court records said. He also "performed poorly on the field sobriety test," according to court records.

Officials discovered marijuana in the vehicle after it was impounded and searched, court records state.

He was released on his own recognizance. Fisher's preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 3.

Michael G. Yacullo, 23, of 918 N. Governor St., pleaded guilty Friday to driving while his license to drive was suspended in Johnson County District Court.

Police stopped Yacullo March 5 for speeding at 800 N. Dodge St., and discovered that Yacullo was operating a motor vehicle while under suspension after checking his vehicle, court records state.

He was fined $150 plus court costs.

Lee Sterner, 29, Tipton, Iowa, pleaded guilty Monday to fifth-degree theft in Johnson County Magistrate Court.

Sterner stole less than $20 worth of merchandise June 4. Court records fail to list the name of the store connected with the theft.

Police arrested Sterner because they "noticed a bulge under his pant leg," which concealed the merchandise, court records state.

David Allen McGovern, 29, of Hilltop Trailer Court, pleaded guilty Monday to public intoxication and interference with official acts in Johnson County Magistrate Court.

Police officers responded to a call Sunday morning to retrieve McGovern's car keys when they found him "intoxicated," court records state.

When an officer tried to "retrieve the keys, McGovern on numerous occasions obstructed the officer's investigation," according to court records.

Vincent Vogelsang, 22, Iowa City, pleaded guilty to fifth-degree theft Saturday in Johnson County Magistrate Court.

Vogelsang was observed Friday by an employee of an area liquor store "attempting to leave" with "one bottle of Arrow sloe gin... in his pants," court records state.

Vogelsang was fined $94.25.

UI medical students receive academic honors

Seven UI medical students have been honored by the College of Medicine's Department of Anatomy for academic excellence.

David W. Doerrfeld, a medical student from Davenport who is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the UI, received the W.R. Ingram Award.

James R. Dumerauf, Davenport, and William J. Yost, Des Moines, were recipients of the Henry J. Prentiss Award for their scholastic work in medical gross anatomy. Both Dumerauf and Yost are Phi Beta Kappa graduates. Dumerauf received his undergraduate degree from Drake University, and Yost is a graduate of Iowa State University.

June Bockenstedt, Dyersville, was honored for her outstanding work in dental histology coursework. Bockenstedt is a first-year student in the UI College of Dentistry.

William Hoover, Bettendorf, received the Award for Superior Achievement in Medical Histology. Hoover, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate from Augustana College, is a first-year medical student.

Clark M. Stanford received the Award for Superior Achievement in Dental Gross Anatomy. Stanford is a native of Northbrook, Ill.

Sue Schlafmann, Caledonia, Minn., received the John Hunter Award. She is a first-year graduate student in anatomy.

Iowa issued $40 million for education loan funds

The Federal Department of Education granted the state permission to issue $40 million in tax-exempt bonds for students loans, Iowa Congressman Tom Tauke announced last week.

Permission was secured after Iowa's congressional delegation and the Iowa Student Loan Liquidity Corporation successfully completed a rigid review process used by the Education Department to approve tax-exempt financing, Tauke said.

"The approval could mean a significant boost for Iowa's economy as investors across the nation pump money into the state for the bonds," Tauke said. "And the action certainly is good news for students, because it helps ensure a sufficient pool of money for loans."

The nonprofit Liquidity Corporation created by the legislature in 1979, buys student loans from Iowa financial institutions that wish to re-claim the capital for other purposes. The Liquidity Corporation has purchased more than $90 million in loans from Iowa lenders.

Paid volunteers needed

Faculty and students in the Department of Sociology need paid volunteers to participate in small groups research.

Volunteers earn money and learn about the social sciences at the same time. Participants are paid varying amounts depending on the research, but typically earn $3.50 for less than an hour's work.

The department will schedule participation times that are convenient for volunteers. Anyone interested in participating is invited to contact Tom or Becky Ford, W 30 Seashore Hall.

Gasohol notes seventh year of Iowa usage

June 15, 1985, marked the seventh anniversary of ethanol-blended fuels in Iowa. Ethanol fuels are those made of gasoline mixed with alcohol blended from corn.

Since 1978, the market for ethanol blended fuels has grown to 200 million bushels nationwide, which makes 500 million gallons of ethanol, which in turn makes 5 billion gallons of fuel. This now accounts for about 5 percent for the total gasoline market.

Houseparents hired for McDonald House

Houseparents for the Iowa City Ronald McDonald House have been hired and they're already busy preparing for the house's grand opening in mid-July.

Don and Delores Conley, 55- and 53-years-old respectively, moved to Iowa City from Anthon, Iowa. The Conleys will manage the Ronald McDonald House and will serve as live-in counselors for the families of hospitalized children who stay in the home.

The parents of five children, the Conleys have also cared for 21 foster children during the past 11 years.

As houseparents working with families of seriously ill children, the Conleys bring with them the experience of the loss of their son Lyndon, who died of a congenital heart condition at age 20.

THE CONLEYS WILL use their personal experience to assist families staying overnight at the 16-bedroom Ronald McDonald House. They will oversee the day-to-day operation of the house on behalf of the Children's Family Living Foundation, the non-profit organization that owns and manages the house.

This organization was formed in January 1982, and during the past three years the group has overseen fund-raising efforts for the construction and operation of this "home-away-from-home" for families of seriously ill children.

An estimated $200,000 is still needed to open the house debt-free and operate it during the first year, according to Cliff Eldredge, executive vice president for the Children's Family Living Foundation. He added ongoing fund-raising efforts will continue in order to hold down costs for families staying at the house, as well as to plan for future expansion.

Gas sellers irked by new law

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

Iowa gasoline retailers Monday were forced to start selling gas using whole cents only, a month after the state law was passed.

The law — which was enacted May 16 to eliminate selling gas using tenths of a cent in the price — was met with sluggish acceptance and mixed reaction among local gas retailers.

"I think it's very stupid," said Bob Bell of Bob Bell's Standard, 2315 Muscatine Ave. "$49.99 is going to sell more than $50... It's psychological. People are thinking $40 when it's really $50."

The extra tenths of a cent added to the price of gasoline was an effective sales gimmick, Bell said, "I'm not trying to get out of that." Bell lowered his gasoline price nine tenths of a cent Monday.

But Bob Finley, owner of Bob's University Shell, 1910 S. Gilbert St., said the new law is fair.

"I THINK IT'S fine — it's not near as misleading to people," he said.

Finley, who sells gasoline using whole cents, said the ban won't "make a whole lot of difference."

Jerry Hanson, owner of Jerry's Standard Service, Hwy. 6 West, Coralville, called the law "ridiculous" but changed his gas prices anyway.

"I just think it's a bunch of nonsense," Hanson said. "I think there are more important things to be concentrating (the Legislature's) time with."

The law is another instance of the state government "telling us what to do," Hanson said.

He said other commercial retailers use fractions in sales, such as "pop for 99 cents or a loaf of bread for 39 cents," and should also be made to comply with the law.

"Let's do the rest of it," he said. "It's the same difference to me."

REACTING TO CRITICISM of the law, Sen. C. Joseph Coleman, D. — Clare, said, "Hell, all (gas retailers) have to do is raise their price a tenth of a cent. Do we have a tenth of a cent coin?" he asked.

Coleman, who successfully pushed for the new law, said it won't cost consumers much even if retailers increase the cost by a tenth of a cent.

Motorists who travel 20,000 miles in a car that averages 20 miles per gallon would pay one additional dollar for gasoline, Coleman said.

But petroleum retailers are "making a hell of a fuss about it," he said.

Coleman said the new law will end a "gimmick to fool the people" and make gas retailers "a little more honest."

"I never thought (the pricing system) made a lot of sense," said Wayne Cleveland, 422 Brown St., who was buying gasoline at an area QuikTrip. "There's no such thing as nine tenths of a cent."

ALTHOUGH COLEMAN said most gas retailers will "probably get around to complying with the law," enforcement agencies will treat non-compliance as a misdemeanor punishable by a fine.

It is unfair that people "played up that (gas) dealers gain three or four or five million dollars" annually by adding cent fractions to their gas prices, but "nobody says that the state is going to add 3 cents per gallon sales tax," said Bill Kron, owner of Bill's I-80 DX, Hwy. 80 & 1.

The legislature passed the tax, which will go into effect July 1, to provide more state funds for road maintenance.

At least one local petroleum seller had not yet changed his gas prices by Monday afternoon.

Sandy McArtor, an employee at Discount Dan's Shell, 933 S. Clinton St., said "the only reason we're holding off is to see if other stations go up or down" in resetting gas prices.

The petroleum industry began selling gasoline with tenths of cents added in the 1930s after commercial retailers started to price goods with high fractions of dollars following World War I, Coleman said.

Coleman led an earlier unsuccessful attempt to stop the practice 15 years ago.

Hopkins says MCATS optional

By Kathy Hinson
Special to The Daily Iowan

In an effort to add "richness" to the undergraduate experience of pre-medicine students, Johns Hopkins University no longer requires applicants to take the Medical College Admissions Test and is urging other medical schools to drop the requirement also.

The UI, however, has no plans to drop the MCAT requirement. According to John Eckstein, dean of the UI College of Medicine, the program here is already receiving "a pretty balanced group of applicants."

Norman Anderson, dean of admissions at Johns Hopkins medical school, Baltimore, said that school's decision to drop the test is an effort to combat "pre-med syndrome." Anderson described the "syndrome" as a trend on the part of pre-med students to take heavy loads of science courses during their undergraduate schooling in order to prepare for the MCAT.

John Eckstein

A SURVEY OF MEDICAL students at Johns Hopkins revealed 35 percent to 40 percent were choosing their undergraduate major on the basis of which classes would provide the best MCAT preparation, rather than taking courses that interested them, Anderson said.

The same survey also showed many pre-med students were giving up sports, work and extracurricular activities during their undergraduate years in order to prepare for the test.

Anderson said concern over this "very narrow approach" to pre-med studies prompted Johns Hopkins to allow applicants to use other standardized tests, such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test and Graduate Record Examination, instead of the MCAT.

Anderson noted other medical schools will have to follow the example set by Johns Hopkins for the plan to work since students usually apply to several medical colleges and would have to take the MCAT for the other schools.

BUT, THE UI will not follow the lead of the prestigious Baltimore school, because, according to Eckstein, the UI faculty is "strongly oriented" toward providing a balanced liberal arts education.

The "vast majority" of pre-med students here don't load down with too many science courses at the expense of other opportunities, he said.

Greg Utesch, a senior in the UI zoology program who hopes to get into medical school, agrees. "I don't think I've consciously chosen classes" on the basis of MCAT preparation, he said. "I really have been able to do everything I want to do" in terms of taking humanities classes, participating in sports and working.

Eckstein said de-emphasizing MCAT scores may be a better solution than dropping them altogether. Jeff Anderson, a third-year UI medical student, said putting more weight on other measures for admission, such as grade point, might be more fair. "A grade point represents four years and a MCAT represents eight hours on one Saturday of your life," he noted.

Whatever solution is worked out, Norman Anderson said it should be done soon. "If we don't try to take away some of the extraneous pressures on students, medicine will really suffer in the future."

Branstad defends state's accounting system against charge of big deficits

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI)—Gov. Terry Branstad Monday defended his administration's accounting system against charges that it has allowed the state to create as much as a $240 million deficit.

State officials moved from a cash accounting system to a complex accrual system to deal with budget problems several years ago when Branstad was elected.

The new system allows the state to add revenues to its fund balances before it actually receives them, without deducting expenses until checks are actually issued.

THE SYSTEM also enables the state to defer expenditures from one fiscal year to the next and to show a balance in its books when it may not actually have cash on hand.

Officials with Moody's Rating Service of New York, which rates the credit worthiness of borrowers, refused to give Iowa its best rating two weeks ago when the state attempted to borrow $452 million.

MOODY'S OFFICIALS CLAIMED the state was not entitled to the top rating because the state's accounting system allowed it to run up deficits.

Branstad, at his regular news conference, said his administration "inherited" a very complex accounting system, but has managed to keep the state's budget in balance.

Terry Branstad

"It's a complex matter," Branstad said. "We have managed to control the financial condition of the state in spite of very difficult circumstances."

He conceded he would like to return to a more "fiscally conservative" accounting system, but he said he will not try to make the change by raising taxes.

"We can't tax ourselves to prosperity," Branstad said. "The way to do that is to hold down expenditures and not obligate ourselves in future years when we don't have the money."

BRANSTAD ALSO SAID he believes he will be safe during his travels to the Middle East

"The State Department has assured us it is safe for me and the other members of the delegation to travel (to the Middle East)," says Terry Branstad. "We feel very confident that we will be safe."

despite the crisis involving the American hostages who were traveling on TWA flight 847.

Branstad will lead a 35-member delegation of state and business executives on a 12-day trade mission to the Middle East and Western Europe. The mission, which he said represents a golden opportunity to spur Iowa trade overseas, is scheduled to leave Des Moines today.

Branstad said he is concerned about the wave of terrorist attacks in the region, but he said federal officials have guaranteed the Iowa delegation's safety.

"The State Department has assured us it is safe for me and the other members of the delegation to travel," Branstad said. "We feel very confident that we will be safe."

HE SAID THE DELEGATION will fly to the Middle East aboard the Israeli airline El Al, which he said is one of the most secure airlines in the world.

The party is scheduled to return from Rome June 29 aboard the Italian airline Alitalia.

He said the mission will mark the first visit to Israel by a trade delegation from the U.S. since last week's signing of a new trade agreement which allows U.S. products to be exported to Israel duty free.

"I think this is a golden opportunity for us to increase our trade in that part of the world," Branstad said. "Our goal is to increase trade and provide job opportunities for the people of Iowa."

He said in addition to his talks with Israeli business leaders, he will meet Thursday with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Perez.

AFTER SIX DAYS in Israel, the 35 member delegation is scheduled to travel to Egypt, West Germany and Italy.

Branstad said "it is very likely" the trade mission will conclude with a visit to Pope John Paul II June 28.

He said he plans to tell the pope about the important role church leaders have played in helping Iowa farmers cope with the agricultural crisis.

Having heart

On June 2, UI Hospitals became the first Iowa medical center to perform a heart transplant. More than 18 years after Dr. Christiaan Barnard transplanted the first human heart, UI Drs. Loren Hiratzka and Ronald Meng replaced the heart of Emerson Martin.

Currently, heart and liver transplants are considered experimental surgery for which state funds are not available. And Iowa is not one of the 12 states in which Blue Cross insurance is available for heart transplants.

Organ transplants are high tech, high risk medical procedures. The costs of the operations can run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. UI Hospitals officials estimate Martin's operation and recovery expenses could exceed $100,000.

Martin was fortunate to have family and friends involved in raising money for his transplant. Most people, however, don't have access to the fortunes needed to keep them alive. Between 50,000 and 75,000 Americans are in need of heart transplants, according to the American Council on Transplantation. Only 172 received new hearts in 1983.

With the advent of new anti-rejection drugs and the development of new surgical techniques, those who receive new hearts are able to lead longer fruitful lives. But why should those who have or are capable of raising money be the privileged few to enjoy a better life?

Those awaiting new hearts are burdened enough; family stress, the patient's condition and scarcity of organs should not be complicated by insufficient funds. The state should make funds available for heart transplants. It is not simply a matter of providing someone with a few more days of life but of providing a new life.

Worthy reform

The Reagan administration has called comparable worth the looniest idea to come down the pipe. But 24 states, including Iowa, disagree and are at various stages of developing and implementing comparable worth.

Opponents of reform argue that responsibility and initiative are not discrimination, but market forces — despite the fact that female-dominated job categories pay less than male-dominated job categories requiring similar or higher levels of education. If their claim is tested, however, the resulting data tends to refute their position.

In 1900 the category of clerical workers was dominated by men. For example, the U.S. Bureau of the Census recorded that more than three quarters of the approximately 743,500 clerks, copyists, stenographers and typewriters, were men.

The census data also reveals that the average annual earnings of clerical workers in manufacturing and steam railroads were slightly more than twice the average annual earnings of all other employees. For example, in 1900 in all industries excluding farm labor, the average annual wage was $490 — but clerical workers received an average of $1,011. That means that clerical work, dominated by men, was a relatively high-status, high-paying job.

By 1980, clerical workers were predominately female. There were, for example, 2.3 million full-time female secretaries and only 29,000 male secretaries. And their wages, relative to the rest of the labor force, had dropped sharply. The average annual earnings in the experienced civilian labor force was $25,943 for a male with four years of college and $13,833 for a female with four years of college.

But male secretaries with four years of college earned $25,098 — only about $850 below average; and female secretaries with four years of college earned only $11,234 — about $2,600 below average. Not only had wages dropped to slightly below average instead of as much as twice the average, but a huge wage differential existed between men and women secretaries with the same education. In fact, male secretaries with only an eighth grade education earned almost $4,000 more than female secretaries with five years of college.

It is not possible to draw exact comparisons: The category of clerical worker is not all that clearly defined in 1900 and it is possible that it included some of what would now be categorized as lower-level management. Job descriptions have changed over the years and the impact of unions must also be considered.

But the current wage disparity between men and women secretaries with the same education, with men earning more than twice that of women, suggests that sex discrimination, not market forces, is responsible for at least some of the wage disparity between jobs dominated by women and those dominated by men.

Iowa and the 23 other states working to implement comparable worth reform should be commended. Congress should ignore the objections of the Reagan administration and begin work on a bill to implement comparable worth at the national level.

Letter: On behavior

To the Editor:

On June 12, 62 people were arrested for, according to Police Chief Harvey Miller, behaving like "assholes." How does one impersonate an asshole?

I was not a protester at this demonstration but rather a curious non-biased observer. Miller called their accusations of brutality "bullshit." Well, I searched my vocabulary for a better word to describe the tactics used to remove the protesters; quite possibly one of these words might be more suitable: carnal, savage, cruel, or my all time favorite, uncouth.

It's high time to re-evaluate the procedures used in removing trespassing protesters. There has to be a more humane way for you to do your job without acting like a bunch of militant fucks.

FEIFFER®

DI seeks end to homophobia

Allowing gays and lesbians to speak out

Mary Tabor

We want none to incubate images of gays as "sick" or "abnormal."

Faggot, fairy, fruit, dyke... Just a few selections from the bitter vocabulary of fear shared by many outside the gay/lesbian community in Iowa City. This vocabulary of prejudice is oddly used today even though labels such as nigger and colored are shunned as clearly racist.

Iowa City hosts the largest gay and lesbian community in the state, numbering 5,000 to 10,000. Still, more often than not, their lifestyles are the focus of ridicule and misunderstanding.

Iowans tend to harbor many irrational fears, largely from lack of exposure to what causes those fears. Students pour into the UI from small towns, towns without ethnics, without blacks, without Jews, without militant feminists and without outspoken gay communities. If homosexuality is something you're not used to hearing about, sudden exposure to "gay pride" can deliver quite a culture shock.

This week The Daily Iowan will try to introduce the community of misunderstanding to the community of differing sexual preferences. In a three part series we plan to discuss the activism among gays and lesbians in Iowa City, the fallacies and chilling facts of the disease AIDS and finally the persistent presence of homophobia in the UI student body, in the general public, in the law and in the media.

THE SERIES WILL culminate with coverage of the Gay Pride Parade planned for Saturday in Iowa City.

Why redevote our newspaper's space to the cause of gay rights? We want to open minds, our own and others'. We want fewer people to identify with crazies like Dan White and more people to emulate heroes like Harvey Milk. Milk, the first openly gay government official in the United States, was murdered in 1978 by fellow San Francisco supervisor Dan White, the classic family man threatened by open homosexuality.

Moreover, we want fewer people to espouse the values of President Ronald Reagan's "Justice" Department — which is presently considering withdrawing a $625,000 grant to a domestic violence program because of the involvement of lesbians in the group. We want more people to share the values of equality regardless of "affectional or associational preference" incorporated into the UI Operations Manual last February. We want the whole community to share the pride of men and women who are able to walk hand-in-hand down the street enunciating their sexual preferences for all to hear. We want none to incubate images of gays as "sick" or "abnormal."

We want to listen to the stories of local gays and lesbians so we are able to stop perceiving them as merely gays and lesbians, and start greeting them as just people, neighbors friends, sisters and brothers.

NOTE THIS PASSAGE from Our Bodies, Ourselves: "Lesbianism is not a physical characteristic — unlike the quality of being black or being a woman. So most of us have the choice to be either invisible, by passing as straight, or to be open. If we decide to be openly gay we often become vulnerable to physical and psychological harassment."

We'd like to ease that vulnerability; we'd like to ease the fear. We'd like you to read our series on the local gay and lesbian community.

10 years since a tense morn

UI student recalls terror in Soweto

By Caroline Badimo

Digressions

My name is Caroline Badimo and I was raised in Soweto, a black township on the outskirts of Johannesburg, South Africa.

About 2 million blacks live in Soweto. The government allows this huge concentration of blacks to live adjacent to white urban centers because the South African economy needs poorly paid black labor to work in the textile, automobile and food processing plants that have sprung up in the area since World War II.

My father works as a bus driver. Our eight-member family lived in a three-room government-owned house.

In 1976, I was 19 years old and in Form 5 in a black high school (the equivalent of a senior in a U.S. high school). Black students were angered by the racist structure of apartheid that deprives blacks of their dignity and exploits their labor. We were also outraged by the inferior quality of black education. Student consciousness of government oppression was building.

THE FINAL STRAW for black students was the government's decision to make us learn Afrikaans, the language of racist control. Students throughout Soweto organized a massive demonstration against government education policies on June 16, 1976.

The atmosphere that morning was tense. There was fear in the air because there has never been a black demonstration in South Africa that wasn't met with police violence. But we were also excited that young people were finally about to make their grievances known to the government.

At about noon the streets of Soweto were filled with people holding placards, shouting at the top of their voices. I had never seen such a huge demonstration.

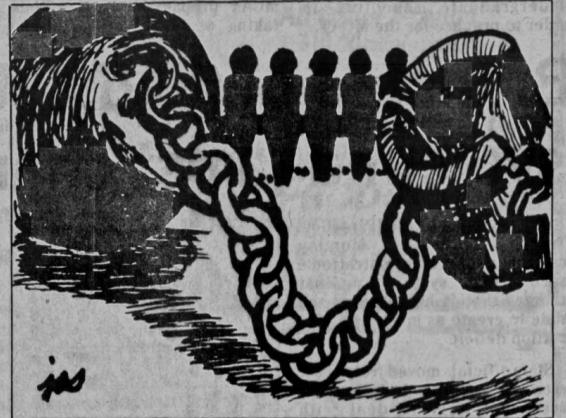

Then the police assault began. Without provocation, a white policeman began firing his rifle into a crowd of students who responded by hurling stones at the police. Chaos broke out.

We decided to resist this police violence. South African government offices, administration buildings and law courts — the cornerstones of racist authority — were burned to the ground. As word passed throughout Soweto that the police were shooting students, young blacks in other areas began to attack government property.

AFTER DESTROYING Soweto's government buildings, we tried to march on Johannesburg. Police reinforcements and South African army forces used tear gas, rubber bullets and live ammunition to crush us. At least 500 blacks were killed, at least 1,100 were wounded and 1,200 were arrested. Only two whites — helpless bystanders, not policemen — were killed in the disturbances.

The government then announced that Soweto's schools would be closed until further notice. We students knew that government repression would immediately follow.

In January 1977 Soweto's schools were reopened and we were told to make up the exams that had been postponed the year before. Those who didn't show up for school were identified on registration lists and branded as troublemakers. Arrest and permanent detention was imminent for many of us.

In March 1977, to avoid certain arrest, I fled to Tanzania where I joined the Pan African Congress, one of several black liberation organizations fighting to free our nation of its racist government. I have since lived in Uganda and Kenya.

Last year I arrived in the United States on scholarship from the African-American Institute and enrolled at the UI, where I am earning a degree in economics. I have not seen my family in eight years. If I returned to South Africa, I would be subject to immediate arrest.

SOMETHING MUST BE done to stop this situation and force the South African government to change. Americans can help by withdrawing their investments in South Africa. They could also help organize a complete inter-

The Daily Iowan/Jeffrey Sedam national economic and arms embargo against South Africa. If America and other western nations divest their ties to the apartheid system, maybe there can be peaceful change in South Africa. But given the legacy of Soweto, the depth of white racism, and the continuing violence against blacks, peaceful change in South Africa is almost certainly a pipe dream.

South African blacks can only gain freedom through their own efforts. Change will begin when Soweto's 2 million blacks begin to fight back. When representatives of liberation movements move into areas like Soweto, raise consciousness and begin to arm and give military training to the people, the apartheid system of government will confront a movement that cannot be easily beaten down.

All thinking people should remember the brutalities of Soweto and the daily brutalities under which every non-white South African lives.

Caroline Badimo, a native of South Africa, is a UI economics student.

Pinochet ends state of siege

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The military dictatorship of President Augusto Pinochet, apparently responding to pressure from the United States and the Roman Catholic Church, lifted a 7-month-old state of siege Monday and ended a prohibition on the press.

Chileans welcomed the relaxing of the state of siege, which was replaced by a state of emergency that allows Pinochet to continue controlling political news, enforce a nighttime curfew and arrest people for up to five days without due process.

The government, however, no longer has constitutional powers to exile opponents, close down print publications, tap telephones or open mail. Staff at six opposition publications that were closed down in November said they were working around the clock to get their first issues on the street this week.

A GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN said press censorship in the future will be carried out through the courts.

Analysts said the move was the result of direct pressure from the United States and the Roman Catholic Church.

Pinochet reinstated the state of siege last Nov. 6 for the first time since 1978 to crack down on widespread protests against his 11-year-old military dictatorship.

A total of 32,962 arrests were made in the first three months of the state of siege, including the mass round-up by army troops of male inhabitants of militant shanty towns ringing Santiago, according to figures provided by the Chilean Human Rights Commission.

Pinochet's regime claimed the step was warranted by a mounting wave of terrorist violence but opposition leaders said its main purpose was to silence the dissident press and dismantle a rising protest movement. Announcing the end of the state of siege Sunday night, Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia said there had been a marked decline in "terrorist" activity.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC lawyer Jorge Ovalle speculated the siege was lifted "because the military government urgently needs U.S. support on the economic front to help renegotiate the foreign debt.

"It was the condition set by the U.S. government to allow the World Bank to guarantee part of Chile's foreign debt," he said.

Police later found her dead in their 1024 E. Washington St. apartment.

"I knew I was going to hurt her" with the knife, Kulow testified May 6 to Swailes, according to court records. When asked by Swailes if he admitted killing his wife, Kulow replied yes, court records state.

The court received depositions May 2 from witnesses who evaluated Kulow's condition. County Attorney J. Patrick White then determined that second-degree murder was the most appropriate charge.

PSYCHOLOGIST FRANK S. Gersch evaluated that Kulow "functions in the mild range of mental retardation and that there is clear-cut evidence of brain damage," according to court records.

rent parts of the building as it is now.

Also, the group won't need to use its new office space as a studio, Campbell said, noting this will facilitate and increase the number of productions.

KRUI General Manager Bob Cable called the compromise "the second best thing."

Cable is also vice president of Student Broadcasters Incorporated - the governing board for SVP and KRUI. As vice president of the Board, he said he is "happy and thrilled" for SVP.

CABLE SAID a compromise with student government resulted in the video space and some "embellishments at KRUI, which it needs since we're in the basement of a 44-year-old dormitory."

Student Senate President Steve Grubbs said he will do what he can to improve the radio station's facilities.

"Obviously it's tough to make a commitment since there's a turnover every year in student senate and CAC but if I can do anything about it, the facility will definitely be upgraded over the next few years," Grubbs said.

Although the design phase for renovating the union is almost complete, architects from Busard Dicks Associates, LTD., Des Moines, will return in mid-July with the completed plans. The plans must now be approved by the UI administration before going to the state Board of Regents for approval to enter the next stage of renovation.

ment. The cost of the building would be lowered by using that method, McDonald said.

Some questions still exist about the financing of the project. The city might not be able to use industrial revenue bonds (IRBs) to finance a new building, Wolf said.

IRBs probably could not be used if the developer leases more than 35 percent of the office space to the city, he said. But Berlin said there had been a change in the law that would probably allow the city to use IRBs.

THE CITY COULD also lose its ability to use IRBs if the tax law changes.

In other action, the council decided to post warning signs by the fountain in City Plaza and abandon plans to eliminate the steps or surround it with a barrier.

The signs will cost about $75. "Whether (the sign) is flat or upright, I really don't care," said Councilor Bill Ambrisco, who originally proposed constructing a barrier to keep people from climbing on the fountain. "I think we've talked about the barrier long enough."

itself. I would like to warn the United States that the alert of the Islamic and national forces... proves that this country is not Grenada," Berri said in a reference to the U.S.-led invasion of the Caribbean island in 1983.

No immediate solution to the crisis was in sight as National Security Advisor Robert McFarlane said the United States "would not consider" asking Israel to free the prisoners.

"WE DON'T MAKE concessions," McFarlane told reporters. "We're not going to make others do so."

Israeli officials in Jerusalem said they would consider releasing the prisoners only if they received a formal U.S. request.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Berri was "the key" to ending the crisis and that he was responsible for the hostages. He called the hijackers' demands "impossible preconditions."

Greek diplomats said pop singer Demis Roussos and his American girlfriend, Pamela Smith, were also being held but it was not clear when they were taken.

'Secret Admirer' struggles with clichéd script, weak dialogue

By Merwyn Grote
Assistant Arts/entertainment Editor

THE FILM Secret Admirer is about the complications that ensue when an anonymous love letter goes astray. This is appropriate because not only does the movie go astray, but, like many real love letters, it makes many promises that it can't, and apparently doesn't even try, to keep.

On the last day of school, Michael Ryan (C. Thomas Howell) finds the aforementioned letter in his school locker. Almost immediately the audience figures out that the source of the message is Toni (Lori Laughlin), Michael's best friend and childhood companion. But Michael, always the wishful (and lustful) thinker, assumes the letter is from Deborah Anne Fimple (Kelly Preston), the stereotypical snobbish high school blonde bombshell. Michael enlists Toni's aid in wooing Deborah, and against her better judgement Toni helps out, even to the point of spicing up his return love letters and running interference to head off the jealous impulses of Steve (Scott McGinnis). Deborah's stereotypical dumb college jock boyfriend.

MEANWHILE, THE VARIOUS letters have been detoured along other routes so that through some fairly believable circumstances, Michael's dad (Cliff De Young) and Deborah's mom (Leigh Taylor-Young) are contemplating an affair of their own as their respective spouses (Dee Wallace Stone and Fred Ward) play around with the notion of indulging in a little adulterous revenge. With the various romances and infidelities running parallel courses on both the adult and teenage level, Secret Admirer provides a premise with promise.

But instead of letting the letters stay in motion to produce an infinite variety of misunderstandings, the film locks in on the concerns of the two sets of couples and dotes on their complicated but trite romantic shenanigans. What could snowball into endless complications, instead sticks with situations that could be just as adequately handled on "The Love Boat."

AND THE ADULTS are almost totally misused with a screenplay that simply lacks the inventiveness needed to make the characters as silly as the filmmakers apparently wanted them to be. Despite the actors' best efforts, only Ward's parody of a tough-guy cop gets any laughs.

As for the youthful love story — it has its charms, but it is repeatedly interrupted with attempts at slob humor. Michael is saddled with a group of Porky's rejects for friends, and the early minutes of the story are burdened with doses of Animal House hijinks that leave a lingering bad taste throughout the rest of the film.

And the film is regrettably foul-mouthed, probably the main reason for its R rating. Rule No. 12 in the "Grote Guide to Bad Films" is that the quality of a film is inversely proportional to its insistence on using profanity for a cheap laugh.

THE FILM DOES HAVE some fine qualities — Howell and especially Laughlin are very good; the rapport between them is funny and rings with authenticity. Preston, rehashing her teen temptress role from Mischief, plays her role broad enough so that, like Ward, her character is funny rather than insulting. Even McGinnis' hunky jock is allowed to display a totally unexpected sensitivity.

Because of its amusing premise and likable cast, Secret Admirer deserves to be better than it is. Someone along the way should have intercepted this screenplay and rewritten it, honing down the excess and fine tuning the basics. As is, Secret Admirer is a likeable mess, but not one that will garner many admirers, secret or otherwise.

Predictability mars 'D.A.R.Y.L.'

By Merwyn Grote
Assistant Arts/entertainment Editor

FILMS OF late have been largely populated by obnoxious Goonies, murderous Jasons, horny sawed-off brats, smart-aleck whiz kids and assorted Porky's pervers. It is therefore refreshing to find a kid in the movies that Walt Disney would be proud to welcome into the Mouseketeers.

Indeed, Daryl (Barret Oliver), the pint-sized protagonist of D.A.R.Y.L., is darn near perfect. Abandoned in the woods, stricken with amnesia and subsequently placed with foster parents, the 9-year-old adjusts to his predicament and new life with no hint of anxiety. Slowly he reveals that he is also something of a genius — a whiz at computer games, a master pianist and a crackerjack slugger in Little League. Indeed, he is so perfect he realizes that perfection itself is a defect and purposely messes up just so his new parents (Mary Beth Hurt and Michael McKean) will feel needed.

SOMEONE THIS GOOD can't be for real; and, in a way, he isn't. Although the audience is way ahead of the film, it is eventually revealed that Daryl is really D.A.R.Y.L., a Data Analyzing Robot Youth Lifeform. That is, he is a test-tube baby equipped with a computerized brain. Smuggled out of the laboratory by a friendly scientist, Daryl is on the lam from a bunch of would-be Dr. Frankenstein's who refer to him as "it" and regard him as little more than a piece of lab equipment.

About halfway through the film, the scientists catch up with Daryl and take him back to the lab for testing, and what starts out as a pleasant, if improbable domestic drama turns bizarrely into a high-tech sci-fi fantasy.

It seems Daryl is not only a robot of sorts, but an obsolete one at that. The D.A.R.Y.L. project was being sponsored by that all-purpose villain the Pentagon, who were hoping that Daryl would grow into a mindless, obedient killing-machine/soldier. But, unfortunately, Daryl developed the capacity for love, understanding and all those other bothersome human traits that get in the military's way. Instead of a cross between Rambo and the Terminator, they got a Ricky Schroder with microchips. The Pentagon wants D.A.R.Y.L. scrapped, so that a new murderous prototype can be developed.

D.A.R.Y.L. STRETCHES credibility to every conceivable extreme as the entire United States Army declares war on a runaway 9-year-old, who beats them at every turn. But even if one accepts all the wild plot twists of D.A.R.Y.L., there remains one insurmountable flaw — it makes no sense that the military would want Daryl dead. He poses no threat to the Pentagon or the nation and even though he is not what he was intended to be, he is a remarkable scientific success. And, on top of this, he is as cute as a button. Those big old generals are just being big old meanies to pick on a good kid like Daryl.

The most curious thing about D.A.R.Y.L. is that it works on the human level, but fails miserably as a special effects sci-fi film, which is just the opposite of what is usually the case. Oliver is a personable kid and plays Daryl without resorting to cloying, cutesy tactics, and Hurt and McKean (in an unusually straight performance) make nice parents. The interplay between the three actors makes the first half of the film pleasantly like an "Afterschool Special."

BUT WHEN THE FILM switches gears into sci-fi, it malfunctions totally. After the sci-fi element is introduced the action degenerates into predictable banality that even high-speed car chases can't spice up. Indeed, there is something seriously wrong with a film that features a 9-year-old flying a fighter jet, yet still manages to lack suspense, thrills or even laughs.

Kids will get a vicarious kick out of seeing one of their peers take on super-human proportions, but everyone else will see through the inanities and the plot holes. D.A.R.Y.L. is user-friendly, and I think quite sincere; but this is little compensation for its lack of inventiveness and lifeless direction. D.A.R.Y.L. is C.U.T.E. (Contrived, Unexpectedly Touching Entertainment), but ultimately B.L.A.H. (Blatantly Ludicrous Adolescent Hokum).

At the Bijou

Le Million (1931). Rene Clair's musical comedy is a bright and breezy affair involving a million dollar lottery ticket and a starving artist. Its charming, lighter-than-air quality is a result of stylish direction and innovative use of sound. A classic entertainment. In French. At 7 p.m.

Grand Hotel (1932). MGM raided its star roster to populate this glamorous, if somewhat trite, soap opera. Little more than an excuse to get Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore, Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone and Jean Harlow on the same marquee. A classic cliché. At 9 p.m.

Television

On the networks: "Here's Looking at You, Kid" (IPT-12 at 7 p.m.) is a 1979 documentary covering the recovery process of a 7-year-old who suffered third-degree burns over most of his body. On "Military and the News Media: A Question of Access," (IPT-12 at 8 p.m.) Alexander Haig and James Schlesinger discuss "the spirit of confrontation and mistrust" existing between the press and the armed services.

On cable: A sustained atmosphere of dreamlike surrealism and impending dread mark Something Wicked This Way Comes (HBO-4 at 1:30 & 9 p.m.), a finely realized adaptation of a Ray Bradbury fantasy novel. Produced by the Disney people, it is a stylish horror-fantasy about the effects of a traveling carnival on the citizens of a turn-of-the-century Midwestern town. Jason Robards heads a fine cast.

Banks has sights set on 60 foot triple jump

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Willie Banks said his world record triple jump at the U.S. Outdoor Track and Field Championships marked the greatest moment of his life. But the 29-year-old Californian has his sights set on even better moments.

"I think I can go for 60 feet now," Banks said after his record 58-11 1/2 triple jump Sunday. "I'm greedy."

The young man with a law degree from Santa Monica, who leaped into the air joyously and sprinted across the infield when officials confirmed his record jump, also has a goal of passing the bar exam in February — his fourth attempt.

Banks had to try twice to get into law school, and track and field is the same way," Banks said. "You have good days and bad days. I'm going to put full pressure on myself for that bar exam."

Banks' record performance Sunday bettered the previous world mark of 58-8 1/2 set by Brazilian Joao Oliveira in Mexico City in 1975. He also bettered his own 4-year-old U.S. record of 57-7 1/2.

Banks said he cried for 1 1/2 hours after a heart-breaking performance in the Olympics last year and had lost much of his inspiration until joining the Los Angeles Track Club and started having fun.

Bulls set sights on Vincent, Wennington

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bulls need a point guard and a center and are expected to solve those problems by selecting either Sam Vincent of Michigan State or Bill Wennington of St. John's in Tuesday's NBA collegiate draft.

General Manager Jerry Krause, who returned to his post with the Bulls this winter after Jerry Reinsdorf bought controlling interest in the team, has been silent about his plans for the draft, other than to agree that the team needs a big man and someone to play in the backcourt with shooting guard Michael Jordan.

"Most people have us drafting a center or a point guard," Krause said. "We hope to get a starter out of the draft. When you win 38 ball games, you have a lot of needs."

Rumors about the club's plans, especially now that Stan Albeck has been selected as the new coach to replace Kevin Loughery. One report has the Bulls trying to peddle forward David Greenwood and guard Quintin Dailey to the Los Angeles Clippers for center James Donaldson or the same duo to San Antonio for guards George Gervin and Johnny Moore.

Gomez withdraws from Wimbledon

LONDON (UPI) — Andres Gomez of Ecuador, who would have been the No. 5 seed, has withdrawn from next week's Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

The 25-year-old left-hander was sidelined for three months after injuring an arm last December and although he has returned to the circuit, doctors have advised him not to play five-set matches.

Gomez was a Wimbledon quarterfinalist last year when he was seeded sixth.

Israel's Shahar Perkiss also withdrew Monday because of injury, joining Argentinians Guillermo Vilas and Jose Luis Clerc, who dropped out last week.

In another development, Clare Evert, the 17-year-old sister of three-time Wimbledon singles champion Chris Evert-Lloyd, lost 6-1, 6-2 to Marie-Christine Calleja of France in the qualifying tournament at Roehampton.

Mets hand Cubs sixth loss

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ron Darling pitched a five-hitter and Gary Carter blasted his ninth home run Monday night, leading the New York Mets to 2-0 victory over the Cubs, Chicago's sixth straight loss.

The victory snapped the Mets' four-game losing streak. Darling, 6-1, hurled his third complete game and second shutout of the season, striking out seven and walking four. Darling is 5-0 in his last nine outings. The right-hander has not lost since May 1 when he dropped a 10-3 decision to the Houston Astros. He lowered his ERA to 2.09.

Rick Sutcliffe, 6-6, allowed five hits, struck out five and walked four over seven innings. New York took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Carter hit a 2-1 pitch over the left-field wall.

The Mets extended their lead to 2-0 in the fifth. With one out, Wally Backman singled and Danny Heep followed with a double to left. Catcher Jody Davis could not handle Chris Speier's one-hop relay throw as Backman slid safely at the plate.

Bush Wackers earn first win

By Laura Palmer
Special to the Daily Iowan

Intramurals

Monday night marked the first game for the Bush Wackers and Ladd's Leftovers in the UI intramural coed softball league.

The first inning proved to be the Bush Wackers' best, as they scored four runs in a 5-1 victory. Jim Baker started the streak with a single. Baker hit the ball right to the pitcher, who dropped the ball and then overthrew first base.

A dispute occurred in the same inning when Bush Wacker's Kerri Metzger grounded a ball to right field advancing Baker to second. The Leftovers complained that Baker was tagged despite the umpire's call that he was safe.

Next up to bat was Bush Wacker's Randy Sager who singled. Then Nancy Gagnon flew out, but with two outs Steve Polz knocked a two-run RBI, making the score 3-0.

POLZ EVENTUALLY scored the last run of the inning on a pitcher's error.

The Bush Wackers' impressive first inning was followed by a very disappointing second inning. Mike Jenn lead off by flying out. Mel Stopperlmoor then followed by striking out. Jim Baker hit the ball right into the hands of the Leftover's third basemen to end the inning.

The next, and last run by the Bush Wackers, was scored in the third inning. Two quick outs by Metzger and Sager started the inning for the Bush Wackers, but Gagnon started off the hitting with a double, putting some momentum back into the game.

It looked as though Polz was going to be out when he popped a fly to the pitcher, but while the pitcher and two other infielders looked into the sky, the ball hit the ground resulting in Gagnon crossing home and Polz being safe at first.

WITH THE SCORE, 5-0, Ladd's Leftovers finally scored their first and only run at the top of the sixth inning. The low scoring could be due to the lack of practice time by the team members, according to team member Mary Kay Klimesen.

Bush Wacker's coach and player Mike Jenn said he was pleased with the way his team played its first game. Jenn said, "It's good to see (his teammates) play solidly. You can have one shaky inning a game but it depends on (which team) is shakier."

The Bush Wacker's first game win can be attributed to the players instead of to practice time together. Jenn commented that they haven't practice at all as a team. "It's hard to get everyone together," he said. The win happened due to "good position players" according to Jenn.

Bulls hire Albeck as coach

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bulls finally got around to naming Stan Albeck as their new coach Monday, ending the search for Kevin Loughery's replacement.

There was no surprise in the announcement because it was reported last week that Albeck was the choice and had agreed to take the job. Final contract agreements had to be reached before the announcement could be made.

Albeck, 54, had one year left on his contract to coach the New Jersey Nets, and the Bulls have agreed to compensate the Nets with $100,000 for Albeck's services.

Although financial details of the contract were not released, Albeck said it was a multiyear contract and he will earn more than the $250,000 a year he was making with the Nets.

"ONE OF THE things that was a key to the decision was that twice before in the last few years I've recommended Stan for head coaching jobs," Bulls' Vice-President of Operation Jerry Krause said. "Once was at Cleveland and a couple years later, somebody asked me to recommend someone for the Bulls' job and I recommended Stan."

"He's a heck of a communicator and a heck of an X-and-O coach," Krause said. "The job he did in New Jersey was just phenomenal. I'm just tickled pink to have him."

Krause said Albeck was the only serious candidate. He said he did have preliminary talks with other candidates.

"I think the Chicago Bulls represent a fantastic opportunity for Stan Albeck," Albeck said. "The important thing is that there was a clear cut direction they wanted to pursue, and it's the first time in my head coaching experience I believed I could have an input into it."

ALBECK BECAME a candidate for the Bulls' coaching job as soon as Jerry Reinsdorf bought controlling interest in the club and put Krause in Rod Thorn's job as general manager. Krause and Reinsdorf immediately put Loughery on notice that he was being evaluated, then waited several weeks after the Bulls were eliminated from the playoffs to fire Loughery and begin the search for his replacement.

Albeck and Krause worked together with the Los Angeles Lakers in 1977 and 1978, with Albeck as assistant coach and Krause as director of player personnel. Both men are graduates of Bradley University.

Albeck becomes the eighth coach for the Bulls since the 1977-78 season. Ed Badger, Larry Costello, Scotty Robertson, Jerry Sloan, Thorn, Paul Westhead and Loughery preceded him.

Coleman is 1980's thief

NEW YORK (UPI) — Every so often a player comes along and causes people to turn around and take notice of him.

In the Roaring '20s, people jammed stadiums to watch Babe Ruth swat home runs. In 1976, Mark Fidrych packed them in as he entertained fans with his zany antics on the mound.

This season, people are running to the ball park to watch Vince Coleman run the bases.

Coleman, the exciting 23-year-old St. Louis rookie, has caught the fancy of baseball fans around the country with his daring base running. More important, he has breathed new life into the Cardinals.

Sunday, the speedy outfielder had stolen 42 bases in 54 attempts over 51 games. He also had scored 44 runs while batting .274.

As the leadoff hitter, Coleman has had a tremendous impact on the entire lineup. Coleman distracts pitchers so much when he gets on, it forces them to feed the batters behind him a steady diet of fastballs. Tom Herr (.362), the No. 3 hitter in the order, and Willie McGee (.345), who bats second, are the top two hitters in the National League. Meanwhile, Herr and cleanup hitter Jack Clark lead the National League in RBI with 52 and 50, respectively.

YOU COULD partly attribute the success of Herr, McGee and Clark to Coleman. Herr, who has already surpassed his previous season-high RBI total, started the year in the leadoff spot but was dropped to third by Manager Whitey Herzog after Coleman's arrival. That has paved the way for more RBI opportunities. Before Coleman came, Herr was averaging an RBI every two games. Now he's averaging nearly one a game.

Golf

Louie Mitrovich, from Cocoa Beach, Fla., finished second to Higgins with a drive of 281.10. Mitrovich, who took second in the National Junior College Golf Championships this spring while playing for the winning Brevard Junior College team, was trying his luck for the first time in a long drive contest. Mitrovich's 281 yard drive gave him the lead over Higgins for a short while, but he said the shot could have been better. "I hit that shot well," he said. "But I could have hit it farther. I sliced it a hair and if I had hooked it it would have turned out better. After posting his 290 yard effort, Higgins was able to sit back and watch the other players try to beat his mark. As the winds picked up, so did Higgins' confidence. "They aren't going to be able to hit it much farther than 290 yards with this wind," he said. The other qualifiers from the Iowa City section were Jeff Schrader, Clinton, Iowa, with 279.5 yards; Chris Doe, Iowa City, with 255.1 yards and Mike Brown, Iowa City, with 251.3 yards.

It's D-day for former Hawks

It is D-day — draft day, that is — for Iowa basketball players Greg Stokes and Michael Payne.

By late afternoon of the National Basketball Association's draft at the Felt Forum in New York, Stokes and Payne will know with which pro team their future lies.

According to Iowa Coach George Raveling, Stokes is expected to be selected higher in the draft than Payne. "It's my opinion, after talking to general managers and agents, Greg will probably go late in the first (round)," he said.

Draft

"It's possible he could go in the second round, but I think he'll go in the first," Raveling said. "Michael will probably go in the third. The word I got, Michael didn't play very well in Chicago (at the pre-draft camp from May 29-June 2)."

STOKES IS ALSO confident of being chosen in the first round. "I'm projected to go between 15th and 36th," he said.

As Iowa's all-time leading scorer, Stokes participated in three post-season all-star competitions to enhance his draft position. "I don't think they place much emphasis (on the camps), because they've seen me play during the season," the 6-foot-10 Hamilton, Ohio native said.

As with most people, Stokes has favorite teams — Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Boston — in that order, but, "Ideally, I would like to be drafted where I can contribute the most," he said.

To go with his favorite team, Stokes also has a game-style preference. "I'd like to play on a team that likes to run," he said. "I think that would be to my advantage. I can get up and down the court well."

But with whatever team selects him, Stokes sees his collegiate role as Iowa's center changing in the NBA. "I'd probably play forward," he said. "I'd like to be able to play small or power forward."

Higgins defends long-ball golf title

By Jeff Stratton
Assistant Sports Editor

A small group of big hitters with big dreams gathered at the Finkbine driving range Monday to compete in a qualifying round of Golf Digest's 1985 National Long Driving Contest.

In the contest, which is in its 11th year, the contestants paid $5 for the right to hit three balls. There was no limit on how many times a player hit as long as he was willing to pay the $5 entry fee.

Five qualifiers from the Iowa City competition will advance to the second round in the Quad Cities. The final round is scheduled for Aug. 19-20 at the Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio, in conjunction with the World Series of Golf.

ROGER HIGGINS, from Independence, Iowa, successfully defended the title he won last year at Finkbine. Last year, Higgins winning clout was 265 yards into a stiff breeze, and Monday Higgins smashed his winning drive 290-2, also against a strong wind, to win the contest.

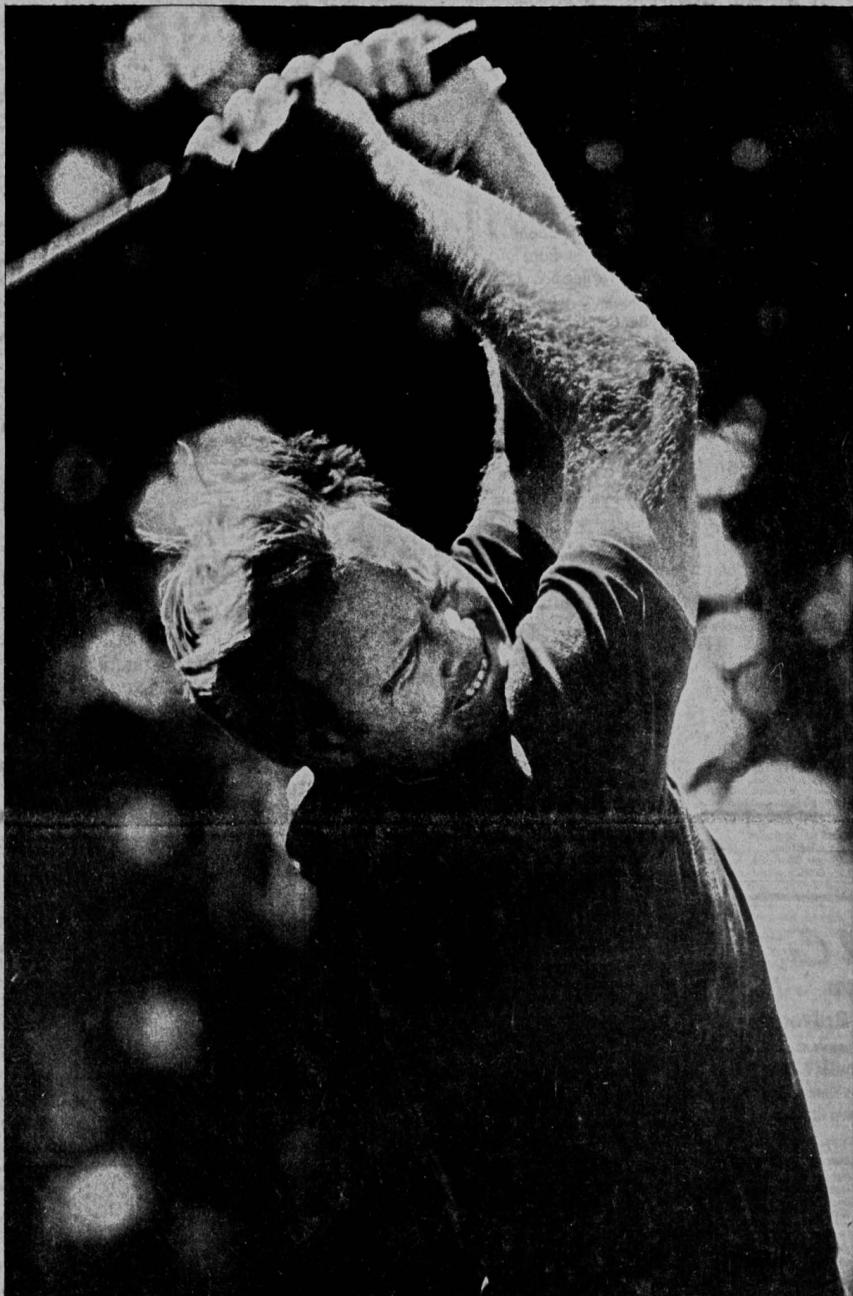

"It was worth the 75-mile drive down here from Independence," Higgins said. "The quality of the field was down from last year, but I think I had to hit it pretty good to hit it that far today."

Last year, Higgins only had to hit three balls to claim his victory, but this year he was forced to hit nine shots. His eighth shot of the day proved to be the winner.

HIGGINS HAS A method that he uses in the long drive contest, and it proved to be successful Monday. "The secret is to hit it in the area and wait and watch the other guys try to hit it past you," he said.

The method Higgins employed worked to perfection as the wind picked up later in the contest and nobody was able to come close to Higgins' 290-yard shot.

Mike Gatens follows through on a swing while competing in the 1985 National Long Driving Contest at the Finkbine Golf Course driving range Monday morning. Gatens did not place in the contest, which was won by Roger Higgins with a drive of 290 yards, two inches. Higgins won the event last year with a 265-yard drive and Monday's winning effort qualifies him for the second-round competition at the Quad Cities Open.

NBA teams shoot for the stars

NEW YORK (UPI) — Like a deliberate offense, the Indiana Pacers are taking all the time available to get off their best shot in the NBA Draft.

The Pacers, with the No. 2 pick, had not decided as of Monday whether to select 6-foot-9 Wayman Tisdale or 7-foot center Benoit Benjamin after the New York Knicks open today's proceedings at 2 p.m. by picking Patrick Ewing.

Pete Newell, Indiana's director of player personnel, said the club probably would not make up its mind until late Monday evening, possibly not until this morning.

"I just got out of the sweatshop (a meeting)," Newell said when contacted by telephone. "We've been talking about this since Friday. I'm sure we'll talk all the way through the late hours. We're getting somewhat closer. But I wouldn't be surprised if we go out and sleep on it."

TISDALE, THE ninth-leading scorer in NCAA history after three seasons with Oklahoma, looks to be a guaranteed NBA star. On the nation's highest scoring team this year, the left-hander averaged 25.2 points, mainly from the low post.

There are some questions concerning Benjamin, who, like Tisdale, left college after his junior year. The 250-pound Creighton center is the third-leading shot blocker in NCAA history and this year rejected shots with a Mark Eaton-like frequency.

Tisdale figures to give the Pacers or the Clippers — who have the No. 3 pick — a billboard attraction like Michael Jordan, but a franchise is rarely turned around by a power forward. That's reserved for centers.

So Indiana, which finished 22-60 with center Steve Stipanovich roaming the perimeter, knows a chance to acquire what could be a dominating pivotman doesn't happen every day.

Draft

"THIS COULD BE a once-in-a-lifetime thing," Newell said. "The way the draft lottery is set up, we don't know when we'll be in a position to get a center like him again."

Some feel Benjamin is not polished enough to play the pro game.

"I like him," Newell said. "There's not much to develop when you average 14 rebounds and 5½ blocked shots a game."

Benjamin was a guest of the Pacers almost two weeks ago though he did not partake in any on-court drills. Tisdale also was a guest of the club.

"I had a nice visit in Indiana," Tisdale said. "I'm excited and ready to get this thing over with. I'm tired of people asking me where I'm going."

TISDALE, JOINED by Ewing and Chris Mullin at a New York press conference, would not say whether he preferred Indiana or Los Angeles. But after much prodding, he did admit Indiana would not be much different than life with the Sooners.

"I grew up in Oklahoma with cows and chickens," he said. "Going to Indiana is like that. I'm used to doin' nothing. That would be great for me, not having to make much of an adjustment."

Completing the first round, barring trades, are Seattle, Atlanta, Sacramento, Golden State, Dallas, Cleveland, Phoenix, Chicago, Washington, Utah, San Antonio, Denver, Dallas, Dallas, Detroit, Houston, Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, the Lakers and Portland. New Jersey is the only club without a first-round pick.
