Gays: Even Iowa City suffers homophobia

By Mary Boone
 University Editor

Homophobia — the intense fear of intimate relationships among people of the same sex — is evident even in the progressive atmosphere of Iowa City, according to several local gays and lesbians.

"Society here isn't always really accepting of variance from the norm," said Joel Gray, moderator for the UI Gay People's Union. "It's those prejudices that make it really difficult for people to deal with their own sexuality and admit they're homosexual."

This is the last in a series of three articles examining the Iowa City gay and lesbian community.

In a clinical sense, homophobia is defined in four attitude levels: repulsion, pity, tolerance and acceptance.

Gray said, however, fear of homosexuality in the "real world" isn't always so easy to categorize.

"PEOPLE HAVE stereotypes and prejudices about everything from race to religion," he said. "Through education we can try to dispel the myths people hear about gays and lesbians, but homophobia is not something you can cure overnight."

Gene Baker, volunteer counselor at the National Federation of Parents & Friends of Gays in Washington, D.C., said homophobia is most often caused by "internalization of religious and societal doctrination and a lack of understanding."

"If people would just call someone and talk to them about homosexuality — if they'd just ask the questions they're afraid to ask — a bridge could begin to be built," Baker said.

Baker said Parents & Friends of Gays receives a large number of phone calls — about 2,000 in the past year — from individuals trapped in what he referred to as "mixed marriages."

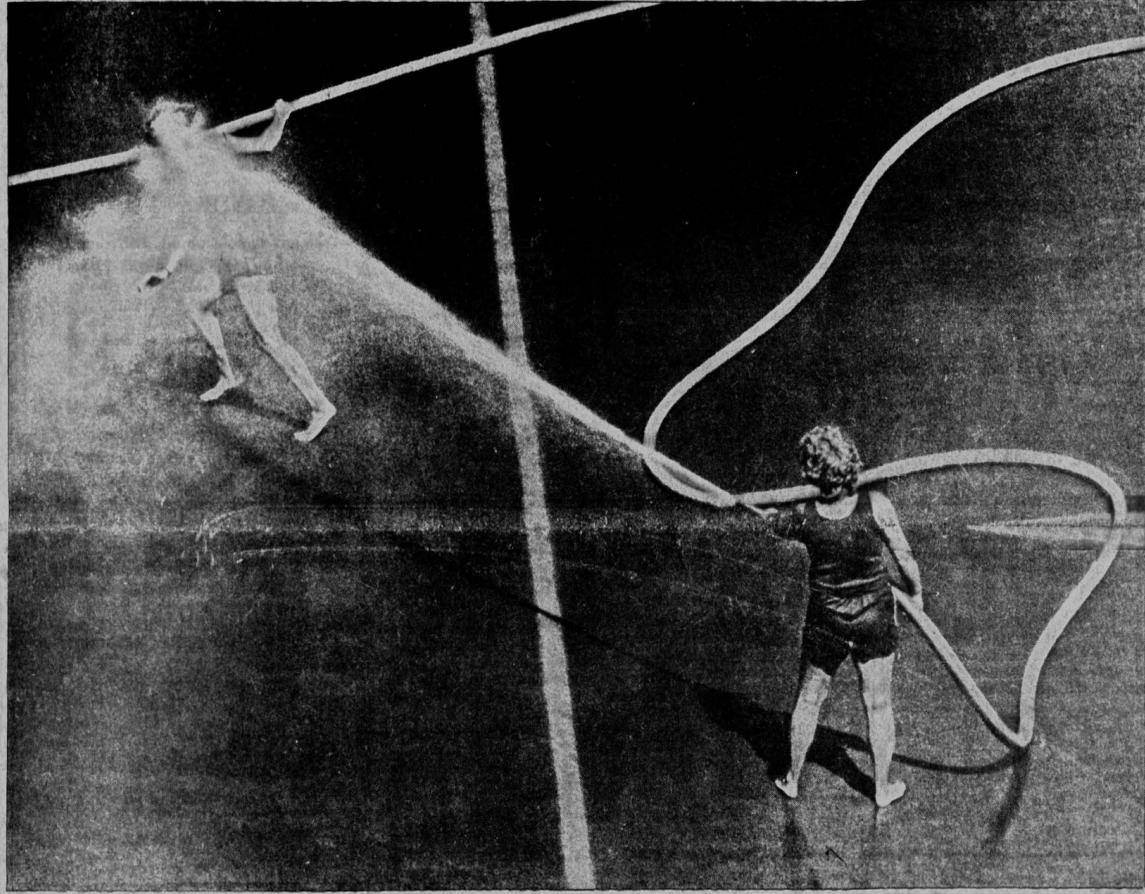

"THERE ARE SO MANY marriages out there right now where one of the partners is either gay or bisexual, you just couldn't believe it," he said. "Most often the homosexual gets married thinking he's heterosexual. Then he has a couple kids and later realizes he's not happy living behind the facade of heterosexuality."

He continued: "If gays and lesbians were more readily accepted by society, more of them would be able to cope with their true sexuality a lot earlier. Homophobia has caused us to deny truths for a long, long time, and that must stop."

Baker said homophobia is often the root of discrimination against gays and lesbians.

$2.5 billion allocated to 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, taking its pick from six "Star Wars" plans ranging from what President Ronald Reagan asked for to a deep cut, chose the plan in the middle Thursday and gave the controversial anti-missile program $2.5 billion.

By a vote of 256-150, members adopted the spending figure offered by the House Armed Services Committee over other suggestions, including the $2.95 billion the Senate has approved.

The difference between the House and Senate figures will be resolved in a conference committee once the House finishes work on its $292 billion defense authorization package.

Members were offered a choice among six programs, with price tags ranging from $954 million to the $3.7 billion Reagan requested when he sent his budget to Capitol Hill. The lowest figure, proposed by Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., was rejected on a 320-102 vote.

REP. LES ASPIN, D-WIS., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee who supported a $2.1 billion option, said members settled on the $2.5 billion figure because "it's a highly technical subject people do not yet feel comfortable with. They don't want to have nothing. They don't want to overspend."

The opposing positions were

voiced by Reps. Ed Markey, D-Mass., who wanted the money sharply cut back, and George Gekas, R-Pa., who wanted more spending.

"This is a program of moonbeams and stardust," said Markey. "We're going to build a roof over our heads but leave the windows and back doors wide open."

Gekas countered that the Strategic Defense Initiative "is the last, best hope of the globe for disarmament. We need the fastest possible concentration of

Abducted children found in Missouri

By Greg Miller
 Staff Writer

A couple responsible for abducting two Iowa City children are in custody in Missouri after being arrested Thursday afternoon for child stealing.

Joan M. Stockman, 31, and Norman Fowler, 31, addresses unknown, were taken into custody on child stealing warrants at 3:05 p.m. Thursday by the St. Charles County Sheriff's Department in Missouri, according to Iowa City police.

Bond for their release is set at $25,000 each. They are being held in St. Charles County jail.

The two children, a son aged 4 and a daughter 17 months, were also at the sheriff's department and are "in good health," the report states.

Both Stockman and Fowler were charged with child stealing, a class "C" felony, after allegedly driving away with the children from an Iowa City supermarket Wednesday.

THE CHILDREN'S MOTHER, Linda Longwell, 818 S. Summit St., was on her way Thursday to St. Charles County.

The children were taken from their mother Wednesday afternoon in the parking lot of the Hy-Vee Food Store, 501 Hollywood Blvd., after she and her "companion," Eric Frenier, were allegedly assaulted by her estranged husband, Larry Elvis Longwell, 31, St. Charles, Mo.

The two Longwells are undergoing divorce proceedings.

Linda Longwell and Frenier had just completed grocery shopping with the two children when the incident began, court records state.

"Upon returning to their car in the parking lot, a black Bronco appeared" and Larry Longwell, Stockman and Fowler exited the vehicle, court records state.

"Larry and his two assistants forcibly removed the children from Linda's custody and placed them in the

Hostages warn against rescue

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Five American hostages under guard by the Moslem captors told a news conference Thursday they were well but under strain and beseeched President Ronald Reagan not to attempt any rescue that would lead to "unwarranted deaths among innocent people."

As diplomatic efforts were pressed to end the seven-day-old drama, gunmen of the Shiite Moslem Amal militia headed by Nabih Berri produced five of the 40 American hostages at a news conference at Beirut airport.

Hostage Allyn B. Conwell spoke first and said he had been elected as group spokesman. Conwell said he could confirm that all 40 hostages were "well" but under stress.

"We're all under a tremendous amount of strain and tension and concern," he said, calling the hostages "pawns in this tense game of nerves."

CONWELL ALSO URGED Israel to release some 760 Lebanese Shiite prisoners being held at a prison outside the port of Haifa, as demanded by the hostages' captors.

As the hostages made their first appearance since the plane was hijacked, mourners gathered at Arlington National Cemetery outside Washington, D.C., for the funeral of Navy diver John Dean Stethem, slain by the hijackers last Saturday.

A possible solution to the crisis emerged when Berri, who is also Lebanon's justice minister, said he accepted a Swiss offer to host talks aimed at arranging a swap of the American captives for the Shiites in Israel.

Swiss Foreign Minister Pierre Aubert suggested that "Swiss territory be the place for ending the hijacking operation and the negotiations needed in this regard," Berri said.

THE CHRISTIAN-RUN Voice of Lebanon Radio reported some of the Americans were held at a barracks in northeast Lebanon by militant Moslem fundamentalists with close links to Iran.

The sources said the Hezbollah fundamentalist group held six Americans in the Sheikh Abdullah barracks in Baalbeck, 52 miles northeast of Beirut. Another six Americans were held by Amal in Beirut's staunchly Shiite southern suburbs, the sources said.

Col. Akef Haider, a member of the Amal's council, told reporters the Amal had no direct control over the gunmen who seized the plane carrying 153 people and who he said were still holding the Americans.

But Haider confirmed for the first time that six people with Jewish-sounding names were taken off the plane separately Saturday and said he was "sure" they were being treated no worse or better than the other hostages.

Body said to be Mengele's

SAOPAULO, Brazil — An international team of forensic experts Thursday completed their study of a skeleton, photographs, and hair and handwriting samples and said they would reveal today whether they believe the evidence shows Nazi fugitive Josef Mengele died in Brazil in 1979.

In Hamburg, West Germany, meanwhile, the Bild newspaper said West German forensic experts informed the government that the remains definitely are Mengele's.

45 troops slain by Contras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Contras said Thursday their forces killed 37 Nicaraguan troops while overrunning a garrison last Saturday.

An additional eight soldiers were killed Sunday when the U.S.-backed Contras attacked the town of Las Parcelas in Jinotega province, the rebels said in their clandestine Radio 15 de Septiembre.

Hondurans kill U.S. citizen

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Honduran troops shot and killed an unidentified U.S. citizen near the tense border with El Salvador, but no reason was immediately given for the action, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said Thursday.

The incident occurred Wednesday morning near the isolated village of Cayagonca, some 100 miles west of Tegucigalpa, close to the border with the Salvadoran province of Chalatenango, an area of intense rebel activity.

Khomeini: Not tired of war

TEHRAN, Iran — Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini made a rare public appearance Thursday and warned Iraq against resuming air and missile strikes on his country, saying Iran is "not tired of war."

Khomeini's brief speech was interrupted by the crowd chanting "Death to America, Death to the Soviet Union, Death to Israel" and "Oh God, allow Khomeini to live until the arrival of the Mahdi (savior)."

Iranians rebuke Khomeini

WASHINGTON — Sobbing Iranian children chanted "Down with Khomeini" in front of the White House Thursday in conjunction with worldwide demonstrations depicting torture and death chambers in Tehran.

Organizers planned rallies for the "Day of Martyrs and Political Prisoners" in 18 countries in memory of the 20 demonstrators slain and several hundred wounded in the Iranian capital June 20, 1981, by government troops.

Packwood doubts tax plan

WASHINGTON — The Republican head of the Senate Finance Committee charged Thursday that, contrary to White House claims, President Reagan's tax plan will raise taxes for much of the middle class.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said he believed the Treasury Department was already re-examining the proposal to determine whether changes should be made so that it would not harm middle-income taxpayers.

U. of Illinois won't divest

CHICAGO (UPI) — At least 16 University of Illinois students were arrested Thursday as they protested a vote by university trustees not to divest the school from companies doing business in South Africa.

Students rushed the trustees' table following a vote against a motion to divest the university from some $21 million in stocks and bonds. The board also rejected a motion prohibiting future investments in businesses with South African ties.

Elizabeth Anne Mays, Cedar Rapids, filed a complaint Tuesday against her doctor, Bruce C. Malm, 1012 Newton Road, Apt. 1, claiming he violated his Hippocratic Oath, in Johnson County District Court.

Malm, a UI resident in the medical program employed with Veteran's Administration Hospital, had been her doctor since January of 1984, court records state.

While being treated, Mays confided "certain private information concerning her mental and physical problems" to Malm, court records state.

Mays claimed that Malm "used confidential information to his advantage and/or encouraged an intimate personal relationship to develop" between the two, while she was under his care.

Malm allegedly was not "sincere in his intimate relationship with her" because he "maintained a personal intimate relationship with another woman" at the same time, Mays told the court.

The woman said she "has suffered, and will continue to suffer, severe emotional stress and mental anguish" because of Malm's actions, court records state.

Mays told the court "that punitive or exemplary damages should be imposed to deter others from such conduct."

Ramona J. Freed, 51, Coralville, made an initial appearance Thursday to the charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, in Johnson County District Court.

Coralville police observed Freed in her vehicle parked in the lot of Don's Bicycle Sales and Service, 1208 Fifth St., Coralville, "with her head back in a reclining position in her seat." The motor, lights and emergency brake were on, and the transmission was in neutral, court records state.

"She was not aware of where she was at the time" when officers awoke her, according to court records state.

The harder they fall

An 80-year-old cottonwood tree was cut down on Penfro Drive Wednesday after several months of disagreement between the owners and their neighbors.

The problems started when neighbors complained about the tree at the home of Margaret Leahy Bruns and Gerald L. Bruns, 48 Penfro Drive.

Neighbors said cotton from the tree clogged air conditioners and pool filters, and that dead limbs presented a danger to children in the neighborhood.

About 27 neighbors signed a petition to have the tree removed under the city "nuisance" ordinance. Another 49 area residents signed a petition to save the tree.

In May, the Iowa City Council extended the life of the tree by amending the city cottonwood ordinance to exempt existing trees.

But the county attorney later ordered the tree removed under a state law that forbids cottonwood trees.

A crowd gathered to watch as workmen with chain saws cut the tree down.

City officials awarded with 4 percent pay raise

Things are looking up for the Iowa City Manager and City Clerk as both are scheduled to receive a 4 percent raise next year.

City Manager Neal Berlin will be paid $2,121 more, bringing his salary to $56,618. City Clerk Marion Karr will be paid $25,834 next year.

The Iowa City Council voted to approve the pay raises at its formal meeting Tuesday night. The council also formally approved the hiring of Terrence Timmins as city attorney.

Branstad, Peres talk in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM — Gov. Terry Branstad and Prime Minister Shimon Peres agreed Thursday that Iowa and Israel should work together, especially in science and high technology education.

UI President James O. Freedman participated in the meeting with Peres, and will be exploring "possible relationships" between the researchers in Israel and at the UI, said Rudolph Schulz, UI dean of advanced studies.

Freedman probably didn't have "anything specific in mind" in terms of research, said Schulz.

This story was compiled from reports by David Roll and United Press International.

Rather, he would be looking for opportunities for joint research as he visits Israeli educational centers and industrial plants during the 10-day trip.

The 35-member delegation of Iowans is the first such group to visit the Jewish state since the United States and Israel signed a free-trade zone agreement.

"WE ARE INTERESTED in working together on joint research," Branstad told Peres during a half-hour meeting in the prime minister's office.

"We shall be delighted," Peres replied.

After the meeting, Branstad told reporters that he also is exploring joint work with Israel's Technion and Weizman Institute.

Members of the Iowa delegation planned to visit scientific and research institutions, such as Technion, industrial plants, and also meet with members of the Knesset and the Industry and Trade and Foreign ministries.

Branstad met with foreign minister Yitzhak Rabin Thursday.

The Israeli Ministry of Industry and Trade said the Iowans would focus on possibilities for cooperation in new agricultural technologies, robotics, plastics, medical engineering and advanced industries.

NO PLANS FOR joint research had ever been discussed at the UI, said Duane Spriestersbach, UI vice-president for educational development and research.

"The state of Iowa and Israel want to work together in the area of science and hi-tech education," Branstad said. "We recognize that the future of our state and the future of Israel are to a great degree dependent on the progress that we make in the area of education, especially science and technology, for the children of Israel and the children of the state of Iowa."

Peres, who took office last September in the national unity government, long has emphasized high-technology developments as a key to Israel's economic future.

Minors band to denounce sale of violent pornography

By Mary Boone
University Editor

Six Iowa City kids armed with placards, pamphlets and a "bloodied" inflatable sex doll took to the streets Thursday to battle the sale of "violent pornography."

Minors Against Violent Pornography christened their campaign — aimed primarily at Penthouse magazine — with a press conference outside Old Capitol Mall.

"Penthouse is the wrong textbook to teach anybody about sex," said Jonah Wright, 13. "We think sex education and birth control information should be available to children. We would like to discuss violent pornography in our classrooms."

Wright and his cohorts read statements about violent pornography to the press and answered questions fired at them by a throng of reporters: "Do you feel you're being exploited to come here and speak out?" "Who are you aiming this protest at?" "Did your parents tell you to do this?" "Who prepared your statements for you?"

THE KIDS, RANGING in age from 9 to 13, claimed they were taking the stand on their own.

"I wanted to do this and these other kids wanted to come here, too," said Darca Morgan, 13. "Penthouse is disgusting and it makes us sick and scared."

Morgan and her activist mother Melissa Farley led the group of children and supporters to several area stores that sell Penthouse, including B Dalton Bookseller, Old Capitol Center; Mott's Drug Store, 19 S. Dubuque St.; QuikTrip Store No. 539, 301 Market St.; John's Grocery Inc., 401 E. Market; and Randall's Mini-Priced Foods, Highway 6 West, Coralville.

Six of the $4 magazines were torn up on the five-store pilgrimage and, although Iowa City police were summoned to both B Dalton Bookseller and Randall's Mini-Priced Foods, no charges have been filed.

MORGAN SAID SHE was not frightened of the prospect of being arrested for destroying store-owned issues of the magazine. "We want to get arrested," she said. "We want to draw attention to what we're doing and we want people to understand how strongly we feel about this."

Farley, an Iowa City clinical psychologist, has been active in a series of midwest protests against Penthouse during the past eight months.

With activist Nikki Craft, of Oshkosh, Wis., Farley was instrumental in founding Citizens For Media Responsibility Without Law. Several of the children present at Thursday's protest previously participated in anti-pornography actions sponsored by other organizations.

MORGAN SAID THE group of minors — the first of its kind in the United States — is directing its rampage against Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione. Literature distributed by the children referred to Guccione as "rapist-in-chief" and recommended a boycott of companies that advertise in the magazine.

Minors Against Violent Pornography is also spearheading a boycott and weekly picket of area retailers who sell Penthouse.

"We encourage all local businesses to stop selling violent pornography," said Morgan. "We urge all people to stop doing business with stores that insist on selling Penthouse."

Morgan said the group requested all area merchants stop the sale of Penthouse, but only Pearson's Drug Store, Linn and Market streets, and L & M Mighty Shop, 504 E. Burlington St., complied.

WRIGHT EMPHASIZED the group disapproves of violent pornography, but is pro-nudity and pro-sexuality. He and the other children agreed they were glad they had been exposed to the pornography so they could take action against it.

If a friend showed Wright pictures from Penthouse, he said he would tell the person the material was "gross" and ask them what they were doing with it.

"We think children have the right to know what's going on," said Morgan. "We know what's going on and we think it's terrible... Kids should see why they're being raped and beaten up."

She continued, "We're not against nudity and sexuality. We like sex, but we don't like violent sex."

U.S. victimized again:

U.S. should have acted earlier

The hijacking of TWA flight 787 is a horrendous situation, and the American people should investigate how such a thing could happen. But limiting our scrutiny to the security controls at Athens International Airport is too shortsighted. The cause is much deeper and it lies with America's history in the Middle East. Americans should re-examine their country's role in Mideast politics.

The Lebanese rightly believe that without American military and financial support, the Israelis could not have afforded their invasion and occupation of Lebanon. In fact, the bill that supplies money to the Contras, which awaits President Reagan's signature, also provides money to help Israel pay off debts incurred by their protracted stay in Lebanon. Without the support of the United States to Israel, Lebanon would not be in the chaos that it is now.

The hijackers sole demand is the release of 766 people captured as the Israeli forces withdrew from southern Lebanon. By transferring these prisoners across the border onto Israeli soil, Israel violated provisions of the Geneva Conventions. For this action, the United Nations condemned Israel and the United States sent protests.

Though the Israelis planned to release the illegally held prisoners, the United States should have earlier used its political and military clout to hasten the process.

Now we are caught, we must not succumb to terrorist threats. But to help prevent such future Islamic terrorism, the United States should re-examine its complicity in Israel's military adventures.

Same time, next president

The current situation in Lebanon offers a reminder that a fit president must often act against his own emotional impulses — even when they are shared by a vast majority of the American people.

Crises like this one are so aggravating because:
• a handful of extremists is able to challenge our notions of America's world power and preeminence;
• our lack of understanding of the Mideast quagmire makes it difficult to fathom what issues are involved;
• drama-oriented media coverage creates a heightened sense of its importance in the international scheme.

As a result, otherwise rational Americans foam for dramatic and conclusive responses. A man carries a "Nuke Beirut" poster. Jaycees listening to President Reagan break into a "USA! USA!" cheer as though the hostage crisis were an Olympic contest for America to win. Columnist George Will suggests some form of military retaliation against Syria "since it could stop much of the Lebanon-based terrorism if it wanted." And columnist James Kilpatrick calls for the Israelis to randomly select one of their Shiite Moslem captives, execute him on videotape, and relay the footage to the hijackers with a message that 10 more executions will follow for the death of each American hostage harmed.

These ludicrous reactions are highly reminiscent of candidate Reagan's emotional outbursts against President Carter's handling of the hostage crisis in Iran. Fortunately, Reagan the president appears to have learned that frustrating and painstakingly slow diplomacy is preferable to the easy emotional solutions available to those not in authority to act.

A foot in the door

It comes as a natural instinct to journalists; someone tries to slam the door on an inquiring face and that persistent reporter sticks her or his foot in it.

Now almost two decades after the adoption of the Freedom of Information Act, national lawmakers are brewing up a stew of amendments to FOIA that would effectively slam the door in the face of those seeking valid data from government and big business.

The slurry of FOIA amendments would stretch out the time limits for compliance with the open information law and increase the cost of obtaining information.

Businesses would be allowed more confidentiality in their commercial activities and new exemptions would be placed on U.S. technical data, as well as Secret Service records. There would also be additional blocks to disclosure of law enforcement records and information that might violate personal privacy.

Reporters possess few enough legal protections. Any reductions in these constitute a grave threat to freedom of the press. Action on this legislation should be monitored closely by news gatherers and news consumers alike.

The unfortunate measure — S. 150 — is sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah and co-sponsored by Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.; Dennis Deconcini, D-Ariz.; Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala.; and Iowa's own Chuck Grassley.

The only member of the Constitution Subcommittee to vote against passing the bill on to the full Senate Judiciary Committee was Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill. Simon, a former newspaper publisher, has requested that Hatch hold further hearings on the bill. The Illinois senator fears that the bill is "too geared toward the benefit of government and away from the benefit of information requesters," according to a Simon staffer.

The old instinct must now come into play. As the door slams in reporters' faces, it's time to stick out those feet. Grassley and all supporters of restricting the FOIA should be urged to reconsider.

Coming of age in Iowa City

Who said that the living is easy in summertime? Easy for whom? Surely not for me. For what seems like the millionth summer in my life, I'm staying in Iowa City. Iowa City is probably preferable to Chester or Mediapolis of a summer, but that's about as far as it will get you.

It seems as if everyone I know is somewhere else. Somewhere exotic. Somewhere exciting. Somewhere fun.

Everyone, that is, but me. LeeAnn is in Copenhagen; Jeffrey in Göteborg; Doug, San Francisco; and Fannie, Chicago.

And yes, for yet another summer, it's me and the squirrels stuck in Iowa City. Yet even beyond being stuck, summertime is rarely easy. For me, and for just about everyone I know who remains here, summer means tight finances and an even tighter schedule of working to ease those finances. With too much work and too little free time, summer also means a bad case of tan envy.

SO WHAT'S ALL the Beach Boys blaring, sun worshipping, solstice celebrating, hullabaloo for? What is so great about summer, especially this summer in Iowa City?

Well, personally, I do have some things to celebrate. For one, I turn 24 tomorrow. I'm not telling this to get an extra Hallmark card or two. I hope I'm not telling

Natalie Pearson

That the natural thrives so well next to the unnatural concrete and glass that is creeping across this campus and city is truly a marvel.

because I'm an egomaniac. I don't think that I'm telling because it's a slow summer and there's nothing exciting to write about.

I am telling because time is a subject that I've thought a lot about lately. Twenty-four is a difficult age. It is undeniably grown up, a five-year separation from teenagerhood. When my mother was 24, it was 1942. She had three kids and was on her way to a fourth. When my grandmother was 24, it was 1909. She worked in an office in Chicago and married my grandfather that year.

For me it is 1985. Unlike Mom or Grandma, I have no kids and I'm not married. But just the same, things are changing. It is time to start saying goodbye to many familiar things. My circle of friends has been gradually diminishing over the last year. We've all taken our detours, but graduation eventually became inescapable. Some friends have already left. They are settling into Seattle or Atlanta or Marshalltown. Others are trying to decide where to head, still others are having a last fling before deciding.

I leave in August, and so this passing over to 24 seems especially wrought with meaning. It would be nice to be someplace exciting; in Sweden, Denmark or California, like my enviable friends. It would be nice to not have time to think about getting older and saying goodbyes.

BUT I'M NOT anywhere else, and I think about my goodbyes a lot. I realize that I'm not the first person to say goodbye to Iowa City. People are constantly moving in and out of this town. Few people keep the same address here for more than a year or two, fewer still consider themselves true Iowa Citizens. But this has been my home for most of the last six years and already it's becoming hard to think about all that is so unique, so comfortable about this place.

Of course, there is the university. Young people who come here have the world's limitations suspended for a few years in the UI's mini-world. They can have their own radio show, run a political campaign, write in a newspaper. It is a wonderful place to grow some experience and confidence. A place to become somebody. I appreciate the cushioned existence I've lived here, and will miss it.

There is also the city itself. Only after wandering around campus and downtown with some visiting Californians a few weeks ago did I realize how very tiny Iowa City is. But who could not appreciate the small town size and atmosphere with its big city art galleries, literary opportunities, theater and other cultural/political intellectual circles?

And of course there is always the river, the beautiful campus and the animals. In summer this campus always becomes a weird sort of wildlife refuge. On early morning walks you can see possum, ducks (large or small), squirrels (of the regular or ground variety), rabbits and assorted other animals roaming around as if they owned the place. That the natural thrives so well next to the unnatural concrete and glass that is creeping across this campus and city is truly a marvel.

I'm not sure why I've suddenly become so nostalgic. After all, I won't be leaving here until the end of summer. But with each friend who has already left, this city has seemed emptier. And even though today is the first and longest day of summer, I can't help but think of shorter days and summer's end.

Untold aspects of tax reform

Many, if not most, people around the country seem to be sweating bullets about President Reagan's tax simplification plan. Questions of whether the new tax system will be fair are often met with the terse reply, "If they were fair, they wouldn't be taxes." However, a careful examination of the current tax code, with its labyrinthine exemptions and draconian taxes, shows that there is no way it could be made less fair. After all, how many people can afford to even feed a draconian, let alone pay taxes on it, and how many middle-to-lower class neighborhoods are zoned for labyrinths? The following examples of some of the more egregious features of the tax system should prove my point.

• The "I didn't raise my son to be a person" tax. One of the unfairness of the small body of linguistic taxes is the one imposed on people who substitute the word "person" for the words "man" or "woman" in cases such as chairperson or fireperson. Some phrases can be especially costly, such as "person the lifeboats, persons and persons first." One small Midwestern newspaper went bankrupt after an editor deleted the word "girlfriend" from a story and substituted "gyno—American acquaintance." Some efforts to get around this tax, such as calling a chairperson a chair, can even be dangerous. There have been instances of such unfortunate individuals being continually shoved under tables, folded, varnished or, in one particularly grisly case, reupholstered. Under the Reagan plan, this tax would be abolished in most cases, but would carry the recommendation that "person" be abandoned for "thingamabob" or the alternate "thingamabarbara" if the subject prefers.

• The "you can't be too thin or too rich but there's no harm in trying" tax. This essentially protectionist tax, sometimes called the "if you can't pinch an inch, you have to write a check" surtax, was designed to protect textile manufacturers against the fitness craze by slapping a tax surcharge on overly slim people. With the number of obese people steadily declining, less and less fabric was being used in the manufacture of clothing, so the textile market began coming unraveled. The makers of lycra and spandex were particularly hard hit — after years during which profits had steadily crept up and plant capacity was stretched almost to the limit, the industry's foundations gave way, went bust, and haven't bottomed out yet. Needless to say, they were strapped. Under the Reagan plan, this unfair structure will be scrapped and a minimal exemption will be instituted giving a tax break to those who wear as much clothing as possible. This proposal has met with some resistance in the Sunbelt, but Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill can be expected to put his weight behind it.

• The "church mouse" exemption. One particularly galling aspect of the tax system, especially to the Reagan administration, is the number of people who, although poor, pay no taxes. It is a primary article of faith in Reaganomics that people are poor because God is punishing them. And if God thinks that's a good idea, who is the government to doubt them? If their hardship is God's will, shouldn't the Reagan administration, as good Christians, make things even harder for them? But since the administrations doesn't want to be cruel about it, the Reagan plan would allow penniless people who truly cannot contribute their fair share of taxes to donate blood on a weekly basis in lieu of payment. This would benefit society by relieving the shortage in the nation's blood banks and protect people against transfusions from those infected by the "gay plague," AIDS. When asked what would happen if someone was both poor and gay, a Treasury Department official stated, "Poor and gay? There's no such animal. Most of those people aren't even cheerful, let alone gay."

Perils of ambiguity

To the editor:
Trust in headlines is perilous. They simplify.

Caroline Dieterle doesn't know this. In her editorial, "The Silent Majority" (June 12), she cites a headline about "voluntary prayer" and builds an argument on it.

She doesn't even know that the current Supreme Court would consider most "moment of silence" laws unconstitutional. The problem with the law recently considered is one phrase: "or voluntary prayer." The Supreme Court feels the law encourages this activity, a clear violation of the separation of church and state, and inappropriate in our schools. A legislated moment for private meditation is another matter altogether.

I have three suggestions for Dieterle. First, buy a dictionary, and use it. Second, read everything you can find on any issue you want to address in print (no more analysis from headlines, please). Third, try to be succinct. There may be a good point in the morass that is that editorial. But I can't find it.

$250 million given to Jordan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate approved a $13.5 billion omnibus spending bill late Thursday, including $38 million for rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government and a last-minute addition of $250 million in economic aid for Jordan.

The fiscal 1985 money measure, which was approved on a voice vote, includes economic aid to Israel and Egypt, more money to combat the flow of drugs into the country and badly needed funds for many federal departments and agencies.

The House has approved $13.4 billion in extra spending for the year, but allotted $11 million less in "humanitarian" aid for Contra rebels than the Senate, and included no money for Jordan.

The differences must be worked out by House and Senate negotiators.

SEN. ROBERT KASTEN, R-WIS., called the economic assistance to Jordan for commodity import programs and project aid "a signal of our willingness to share their hardship."

But the bill said Congress will not consider military aid for Jordan until direct peace negotiations between Israel and Jordan begin.

Earlier, the Senate rejected creating a blue-ribbon commission to investigate spying in the United States by hostile countries.

Reagan had threatened to veto the supplemental appropriations bill unless it requires local governments to share the costs of the water projects.

The Senate and White House reached a partial compromise on the water projects by agreeing to cut off appropriations for 25 projects June 30, 1986, in the absence of an agreement that local governments will help pay for the projects.

The threat of a veto still hangs over the bill until similar cost sharing provisions are added to related legislation, Senate Republican leader Robert Dole said.

Nicaraguan embassy attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Terrorists striking in pre-dawn darkness Thursday set four fires that destroyed the lobby of the Nicaraguan Embassy. Diplomats blamed the attack on Reagan administration "rhetoric."

FBI and police sources said glass panels on the front doors of the aging brick building were smashed and burning strips of cloth apparently were tossed inside, setting off the fires.

Sarali Porta, the embassy's assistant press officer said, "There was probably a Molotov cocktail."

Porta added, "The FBI, the police department and the fire department are working on the investigation to find out what produced the fire. There was significant damage to the lobby area and two bathrooms."

Embassy personnel on duty at the time of the blaze escaped without injury. A firefighter suffered an eye injury battling the blaze.

THE SECRET SERVICE, which patrols diplomatic compounds in the nation's capital, said the flames erupted at about 4:48 a.m. and caused an estimated $50,000 damage.

Miriam Hooker, the embassy's chief press officer, described the fire as "an act of terrorism," and Porta said it "is a direct result of the high level of rhetoric of the Reagan administration against our government."

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We don't condone anybody trying to burn anybody else's embassy down although it happens to us from time to time."

"I don't know if it falls into the category of terrorism," Speakes said. "It's borderline terrorism."

Porta said no group or organization claimed responsibility for the attack.

Hooker said the embassy has been the target of numerous threats.

Homophobia

"IN A LOT OF cities gays are persecuted. They can't get credit, or housing, or jobs or life insurance. It's not because they're dishonest or they have a bad credit rating, but rather because they've made a different life choice," he said.

GPU member Liz Newbury said homosexuals in the Iowa City area are fortunate to be protected by both city and university ordinances that guarantee rights for gays.

"Iowa City isn't like the rest of Iowa," Newbury said. "In other Iowa towns, even in Cedar Rapids and Des Moines, it isn't uncommon to hear of employers who systematically fire openly-gay employees."

LEGAL PROTECTION is just one plus for Iowa City gays, according to Gray. He said the social climate in the city is also more appealing to the homosexual community.

Gray said although Iowa City has only one bar that claims to be a "gay bar," there are several other night spots where homosexuals "feel comfortable."

"It's not like we only have one place we can go and meet, and it's not like everyone at the 620 Club is gay," Gray said. "People who go to the 620 Club are open, though. If they weren't it would be just like every other bar in town."

Gray added that life for homosexuals is "easier in Iowa City than any of the small towns around here."

"I GO HOME TO Miles, Iowa and I have to try to act 'normal.' That can be very boring," Gray said. "My family accepts my homosexuality, but when I am around other 'straight' people I have to pretend all the time."

Baker said homosexuality is much more prevalent than most would imagine. He is "personally convinced that every family has a gay person in it... It may be your grandfather, or father, or sister or nephew, and you may not realize they're gay, but they're still there."

He continued: "Homosexuality isn't anything new, it's just something people are talking about more. Phil Donahue's talking about it and even the Moral Majority, although they don't condone it, is talking about it. We're out of the closet at last."

Bronco. Linda attempted to retrieve her two children from the Bronco and was struck on the top of her head," according to court records.

WITNESSES SAID Longwell allegedly struck his wife "with a police nightstick and that she slumped to her knees after being hit," court records state.

Longwell also "pointed a weapon at Frenier," identified by bystanders as a "long barreled handgun," court records state. Frenier told police "the gun made several puffs during the altercation," court records state.

An eyewitness noticed two men,

"one with a gun and one with a nightstick banging away" on Linda Longwell and Frenier. The eyewitness added "the man with the gun went chasing after the four year old boy and was keeping people away, brandishing the gun."

Longwell allegedly "struck Frenier with a police-style nightstick about the abdominal and arm area, causing abrasions and bruises," court records state.

The incident lasted about 10 minutes, according to the eyewitness.

Longwell "fled from the scene on foot and was discovered" by police "hiding in a nearby field," police records state.

LINDA LONGWELL required "medical assistance" and "received six stitches to the laceration and was given skull x-rays," court records state.

Longwell made an initial appearance Thursday to the charge of assault with intent to commit serious injury, in Johnson County District Court.

He also faced the charge of assault with bodily injury, for allegedly spraying "chemical mace at the face of Frenier," according to court records.

Total bond for Longwell's release on the two charges is set at $30,000.

Iowa City detectives said that Stockman and Fowler were not charged with kidnapping because the incident did not meet the criteria for kidnapping as defined by the Iowa Code.

Kidnapping must involve at least one of the following elements: the intent to hold a person for ransom; the intent to hold a person as a shield or hostage; the intent to inflict serious injury or subject that person to sexual abuse; the intent to secretly confine a person; or the intent to interfere with the performance of any government action.

Defense

effort on this. ... Damn the torpedoes. Full speed ahead on SDI."

HOUSE REPUBLICAN leader Robert Michel of Illinois, arguing for higher funding of the controversial program, told the House that Soviet leaders "are obsessed with SDI. There is no doubt in my mind that the Soviet hierarchy is convinced that SDI can work. It's the bone in their throat."

Reagan two years ago announced his SDI program that would combine existing research in various high technology areas that had been consuming about $900 million a year.

The program is intended to explore new ways to defend against attacking missiles with such highly technical devices as particle beams and lasers as well as more conventional things like high-speed projectiles to slam into a warhead and destroy it before it can detonate.

The five-year early research program, aimed at finding out if such weapons are possible, is expected to cost about $26 billion, and there are no firm estimates on the total cost of any system that might be deployed. Some estimates run to $1 trillion.

THE DECISION on whether to build and deploy a system would be up to a future president, and Reagan has suggested that to render missiles obsolete the United States might offer to share its findings with the Soviets.

Critics have argued that even if the system were to work, it likely would be unable to take out low-flying cruise missiles and low-trajectory submarine-launched missiles.

The long series of votes began with the rejection of Dellums' amendment. Next came one by Rep. Nick Mavroules, D-Mass., whose bid for a spending freeze at $1.4 billion failed 268-155.

Next, a drive by Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J., to get Reagan $3.7 billion failed 315-104. And a Democratic alternative — $2.1 billion concentrated on the key elements in the program but avoiding demonstration projects that might endanger the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty — failed 221-195.

Before the committee's $2.5 billion figure was adopted, a Republican-backed alternative of $2.9 billion was rejected 242-169.

U.S. blames Salvadoran left

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The U.S. Embassy said Thursday the "thugs with rifles" who carried out an attack on a row of crowded outdoor cafes that killed 13 people were leftist guerrillas who fired first at the four U.S. Marines who were slain.

Two American civilians also were among those killed in Wednesday night's attack carried out by gunmen in regular army uniform. Twelve people were wounded.

In Washington, Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that it appeared the gunmen fired first at the Marines, but it was not clear if they were the specific targets.

"No organization has claimed responsibility at this time," an embassy spokesman said, "but we assume that the perpetrators were either members or associates of the FMLN," the initials of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, a group of five rebel armies.

IN THE PAST, the guerrillas, who operate primarily in the countryside, have hit specific targets and have not shot indiscriminately into crowds of civilians. They ordinarily claim responsibility for their attacks, but often not for days after the incidents.

A government spokesman said that a state of emergency was immediately declared and air force helicopters flew over the area. Hundreds of soldiers were dispatched throughout the city to search for the gunmen but no arrests were made.

The U.S. Embassy issued a statement saying, "It was democracy that was attacked last night. The United States was among the victims. But the United States of America will not be intimidated by thugs with rifles."

In response to the attack, President Reagan ordered technical assistance and an accelerated delivery of military hardware to El Salvador.

REAGAN ALSO SAID he is prepared to use emergency powers to furnish El Salvador "with additional military assets" to fight the guerrillas.

Another embassy spokesman called the group a unit of leftist rebels "dressed up as members of the armed forces."

It was the first killing of U.S. military personnel in El Salvador since May 25, 1983, when the deputy commander of the U.S. military group, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Albert A. Schaufelberger, was shot by guerrillas.

Nepal shaken by six bombings

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Terrorism spread to the Himalayan kingdom of Nepal Thursday. At least six terrorist bombs shook the mountain nation killing six people and injuring 22.

Five bombs exploded in the capital of Katmandu, including two at the gates of the Royal Palace, one at the National Assembly, another at the Central Secretariat and a fifth in the lobby of a tourist hotel.

Authorities said a seventh person identified as a "terrorist" was killed in the Himalayan town of Pokhara Wednesday when explosives he was carrying were detonated by accident. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the bombings.

Home Minister Joh Mehar Shrestha said there had been some arrests in the bombings and "suspicious elements are being searched for." He gave no further details.

THE BLASTS CAME as opposition activists demonstrated outside the Central Secretariat to press for the right to form political parties, which have been banned in the Himalayan kingdom since 1960.

Shrestha told an emergency session of the National Assembly called by King Birendra that four people were killed and 16 others injured in blast in the lobby of the Hotel Anapurna, which is frequented by Western tourists.

Moments later, two blasts shattered a wall at the royal palace but no injuries were reported there. The palace itself is far from the gates and the 39-year-old king was never in danger.

Dambar Jung Gurnung, a legislator, was killed when a bomb exploded at the entrance of the National Assembly and a second official died later in a hospital, Shrestha said. The minister said three legislators were also injured.

Tripoli blast felled mothers, children

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rescue workers Thursday pulled bodies from tons of rubble along the seafloor of the northern port of Tripoli devastated by a car bomb that killed at least 75 people and wounded 120 others.

Many of those killed by the explosion that sliced through crowds celebrating the end of the Muslim fast of Ramadan on Wednesday were women and children, authorities said.

The explosion in front of a candy store in the seaside Al Mina neighborhood, shattered windows and hurled passing cars into the Mediterranean.

"This was an ugly crime and we must combat these insane forces," said Said Shaaban, leader of the Islamic Unification Movement, which controls the port area Tripoli, 42 miles north of Beirut.

SHAABAN BLAMED the United States and Israeli agents for the attack.

The force of some 330 pounds of TNT packed in a red Volvo sedan incinerated about 50 cars, some packed with families out for an evening drive, and wrecked the five-story building housing the candy shop, witnesses said.

Shrapnel tore into buildings and smashed windows for 100 yards around. A large crater was gouged into the seafloor road, which was scattered with burned-out and overturned cars.

More than 10 corpses were found on the beach Thursday, blown so far along the sandy shore that rescue teams had not considered searching the area earlier, police sources said.

OTHERS WERE DRAGGED from the piles of rubble and tangled metal that was removed from the scene.

Many of the corpses, which were wrapped in plastic body bags and dumped on a sidewalk as the search for casualties continued, were so badly mutilated they could not be recognized by local residents.

The incident was the bloodiest bombing in Lebanon since a similar booby-trapped car was detonated near a school in Christian east Beirut May 22, killing some 55 civilians and wounding more than 100.

The dead and wounded were evacuated from the northern port city and radio stations made fresh appeals for blood donations.

Jaycees will integrate with women's group

By Mary Beth Kaminski
Special to The Daily Iowan

Less than a year after the Jaycees opened one door to women, another one swung shut this week.

After admitting women to regular membership last August, the Jaycees decided Wednesday to abolish Jaycee Women groups.

Jaycees is a young people's organization now, rather than a young men's organization," said Barry Hurto, executive secretary of the Iowa Jaycees. "They (the leaders) saw no reason to continue with Jaycee Women."

The national Jaycees voted to accept women last August after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled their policy requiring members to be male was "an unfair discriminatory practice." The group also drew state and local attention in 1982, when it stripped the Cedar Rapids Jaycees of its charter for admitting women.

Now, with women included in its regular chapters, the Iowa Jaycees have decided Jaycee Women — auxiliary groups operating under the same structure as the Jaycees, but without national voting rights — must merge with existing chapters by July 1, or dissolve.

THE IOWA JAYCEES decided to abolish the Jaycee Women groups after the national leadership refused to fund the women's groups, Hurto said.

"Without support or sanction from the national group, it was impractical to continue Iowa Jaycee Women," he said.

Although many Iowa Jaycee Women groups have already dissolved, the proposal did not become mandatory until the U.S. Jaycee Women approved it Monday and the national Jaycees ratified it Wednesday.

The decision doesn't directly affect women in Iowa City, since the Iowa City Jaycee Women disbanded in 1983 due to "a lack of interest," according to Jaycee member Jack Young.

But in surrounding smaller communities, where interest still runs high, the decision struck close to home.

"IT'S BEEN KIND OF a blow," said JoDee Roof, former president of the now defunct North Liberty Jaycee Women. "We were never an independent group, and now they feel there's no need for an auxiliary group."

New Jaycee Women groups, such as the one in Swisher, have suffered the biggest blow, Roof said.

Sheila Callahan, president of the Swisher Jaycee Women, said the women there formed an auxiliary group in October because men in the regular Swisher chapter balked at admitting women.

CALLAHAN SAID the organization had just "really started getting under way" when it received instructions to dissolve. The group is now disbanding.

Local protesters pleased by Federal Building effort

By Natalie Pearson
Staff Writer

The organizers of several groups who oppose U.S. involvement in Central America spent the last week planning future activities to follow up last Wednesday's day of protest.

The handling of that day's events, which ended in the arrest of 62 protesters who occupied the offices of military recruiters in the Federal Building, have been discussed by both participants and observers.

Iowa City Caucus on Central America member and rally organizer Jesse Singerman stressed, "We are very pleased with how it all turned out. It was an effective action that generated a lot of support. We feel that we achieved all our objectives."

SHE ALSO SAID the caucus supports the actions of all protesters involved in last week's demonstration. They are, however, still assessing civil disobedience as a protest technique, and have not decided whether to use it in further actions.

Singerman said that caucus members have been meeting with lawyers to discuss the treatment of protesters who were arrested at the Federal Building. They are encouraging anyone who saw questionable action by the police during the protest to go to the police station and file a statement describing what they saw.

THE CAUCUS ALSO met Monday night to elect a new steering committee and to draft a set of rules to govern that body. Faced with what Singerman said was "a tremendous response since the vote in (U.S.) Congress" the Caucus is now deciding what actions to continue and which new ones to begin.

Fund-raising, lobbying and forming affinity groups within the Caucus are all activities on the agenda.

"Right now, we are involved in serious conversations about our direction. Everything is very spontaneous," Singerman said.

The group is particularly interested in drawing connections between the Iowa farm crisis and the situation in Central America in hopes that the two movements can begin to work more closely.

MEMBERS WERE recently involved with Oxfam America's "Tools for Peace and Justice" drive. The Oxfam caravan, which is gathering money, food, seeds and tools for needy Central Americans, passed through Iowa City Monday raising over $1,500 worth of goods. Other group-sponsored activities in the next several weeks include a benefit garage sale and a bowl-a-thon.

While plans for further large protests have not been made, the group hopes to move in "creative" directions with any future actions. According to Singerman, such creative moves would involve making objects that the movement could use. A day would be devoted, for example, to the creation of group sculpture, banners or play performances dealing with relevant themes.

"We are very pleased with how (the rally) turned out," says rally organizer Jesse Singerman. "It was an effective action that generated a lot of support. We feel that we achieved all our objectives."

NEW WAVE, a UI campus organization that worked closely with the caucus, has also taken time since the demonstration to plot future protest strategy. Joe Iosbaker, a New Wave activist, said beginning this fall, the group will focus its protests on the Central Intelligence Agency when they recruit on campus.

Group members feel, according to Iosbaker, that "the CIA's activities in Central America are illegal — they are an illegal organization. Just like the administration wouldn't allow the Ku Klux Klan to recruit on campus, they shouldn't allow the CIA."

Members are currently gathering information and looking into university policy dealing with recruiters. Iosbaker said their work will be part of a national campaign to stop college recruiting by the CIA.

New Wave will continue to work with other groups opposing U.S. involvement in Central America, but the CIA campaign will take "the lion's share" of the group's independent efforts.

PLANNING TO actively oppose both involvement in Central America and the system of apartheid in South Africa, New Wave members are planning to rally around the slogan "Embargo South Africa, not Nicaragua."

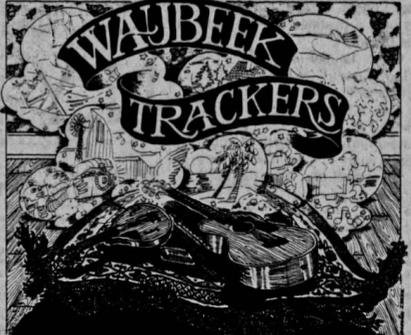

Members of another active group, Central America Solidarity Committee, have spent the last week "catching our breath" according to Tom Kiefer, a committee member. The group is working to "reorganize and assess" its plans for future actions.

The committee's next large "concrete action" said Kiefer, will be a public event to commemorate the Nicaraguan national day. That day is celebrated July 19 and marks the defeat of former Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza. Before then, and throughout the summer, there will be smaller events such as lectures by people familiar with Central American issues.

Education called political

By James Hintzen
Staff Writer

Education in the United States has become overly political, jeopardizing the welfare of children, said a speaker at the Professional Educators of Iowa's third annual convention last week.

Susan Staub, top executive of Concerned Educators Against Forced Unionism, addressed the convention and said education has become too political because unions and monopoly bargaining are taking attention away from the students, who should be the main focus of education.

The P.E.I., to fight the situation, broke "their ties with the N.E.A. and the N.E.A.'s affiliate organization Iowa State Education Association, feeling the focus on the welfare of children and the value of the right to choose has been lost," said a press release from the organization.

THE GROUP NOW CALLS itself a "new professional organization offering an alternative for educators who wish to restore a sense of dedication and purpose to the teaching profession," the release stated.

Samuel Blumenfeld, who also spoke at the conference, urged parents to seek the truth to restore the integrity of the profession, re-educate themselves and keep aware of what is happening in education. He also said there should be higher respect for the rights of parents.

The theme of the convention was Evaluating the Educational Scene, including a press conference, a panel discussion and the election of board members.

Movies on campus

Confidentially Yours (1983). In French. Francois Truffaut's cinematic swan song was, appropriately enough, another tribute to his hero, Alfred Hitchcock. An innocent man is accused of murder and his secretary sets out to solve the mystery. Fanny Ardant, Jean-Louis Trintignant and Philippe Laudenbach star. At the Bijou at 7 tonight, 9 p.m. Saturday and 7 p.m. Sunday.

Cal (1984). With turmoil everywhere he looks, a young Roman Catholic boy gets involved with Northern Ireland terrorists and is implicated in the killing of a Protestant policeman. This is further complicated by his subsequent love affair with the man's widow. John Lynch plays Cal and Helen Mirren plays the widow. At the Bijou at 7 p.m. Saturday and 9 p.m. Sunday.

The Gay Divorcee (1934). Fred and Ginger's first venture out on the dance floor is the prototype for several more such romps. Astaire looks great in tails and Rogers is as sparkling as ever — and of course, they dance and dance and dance ... At the Bijou at 9 tonight.

Movies in town

The Breakfast Club. The young cast gets gold stars for their exemplary behavior, but writer-director John Hughes has to stay after class for his overwrought screenplay. At the Astro.

D.A.R.Y.L. The story of a boy with a heart of gold and a mind of copper-microchip circuitry. It hums along nicely for a while, but eventually it shorts out. At the Campus 2.

Secret Admirer. Letters of lust get lost in delivery; and this film is destined for the dead letter office. At the Cinema I.

The Goonies. Cyndi Lauper is wrong. The Goonies 'R' Not Good Enough. At the Englert 2.

Rambo. What most critics call an embarrassment, Hollywood calls a box-office bonanza. At the Campus 3.

Cocoon. Old-timers find the fountain of youth somewhere in Florida as friendly aliens look for a camping ground. Sci-fi stuff from Ron (Splash) Howard. At the Englert 1.

Lifeforce. More aliens, only these guys aren't so friendly. Creepy stuff from Tobe Hooper, the man who gave us The Texas Chainsaw Massacre and Poltergeist. At the Campus 1.

Return to Oz. "Gosh, Toto, I don't think we're in Kansas anymore." That's right, Dorothy, you're in Disneyland. At the Cinema II.

Theater

Playing Doctor and Ladyhouse Blues. In the former, madcap misadventures, mix-ups and misunderstandings mar a medical meeting; the latter finds mother and daughters coping with changing social and personal matters in 1919 St. Louis. ## Irish turmoil sets mood for 'Cal'

By Mert Walker
Staff Writer

IRISH DIRECTOR Pat O'Connor filmed over 20 documentaries about Northern Ireland during his 12 years with Irish television before releasing his first feature film about the land last year. Cal, adapted by Bernard MacLaverty from the acclaimed novel, uses politically and socially tumultuous Ulster as the backdrop for a tragic love story between Cal, a Roman Catholic youth, and a slightly older Protestant widow.

The opening scene showing a policeman shot and murdered by a terrorist is repeated several times in partial flashbacks throughout the film and reveals that Cal had been recruited to drive the getaway car during the crime. Following scenes ironically cut to the slaughterhouse where Cal's father works (Cal didn't "have the stomach for it"), then to a poor Catholic housing project where Cal and his father are skeptical holdouts in the chill of a now-Protestant neighborhood. After being increasingly threatened by rioting and vandalism,

Films

Cal has been reluctantly cornered into driving for his terrorist friends in the IRA.

IN HIS UNEMPLOYED idleness, Cal notices Marcella working in the library. Through a series of narrative coincidences readily depicting the volatility of the religious and political climate — meeting at a public inspection gate, then in church — he soon becomes a friendly acquaintance of hers. On a contrived chance, Cal discovers the small mansion where Marcella lives with her dead husband's wealthy parents. He licks into a job in their employ just after he shockingly realizes that the man in Marcella's wedding picture is the murdered policeman. Who would imagine that Cal and Marcella are headed for love?

At well-balanced intervals, the story alternates the scenes of their eventual romantic union with the larger context of public prejudice and fear which defines the warring community. Ulster is portrayed as a complex, festering bastion glutted with "security risks" where helmeted men with machine guns guard entrances, flames billow from cars and tenement windows and thugs plant book bombs in toy stores and wait in the grim daylight for their next prey. The film refuses to choose sides, instead simply observing the stubbornness, pettiness and cruelty which can devour human beings embattled in a righteous cause.

WHILE THE STORYLINE is not unimaginable, neither is it especially "entertaining," with society constantly gnawing away at the emotional reprieve of the romance. The camera tends to isolate and enlarge the characters by associating them with socially or economically poignant objects or innuendos. For instance, field workers for the wealthy Protestants are seen eating and smoking around a big table, oblivious to the calendar behind them featuring a decadent pose of Prince Charles and Lady Di. And after Cal has chopped a load of wood, the rich female employer offers him a luxurious half glass of undiluted milk.

Despite the overall depressing content of Cal, it does feature excellent character performances. John Lynch, who plays Cal with gaunt sensitivity, gives a pathos which rivals Truffaut's Antoine Doinel. Helen Mirren, a combination in looks and personae of Jacqueline Bisset and Judy Davis, won Best Actress at the Cannes Festival for her part as Marcella. Numerous facial closeups undoubtedly enhance the realism of their paradoxical, doomed affair, as well as the tedious lives of those in both religious sects, particularly Cal's father and Marcella's in-laws.

For all the economic and religious turmoil this social conscience film measures, it offers no practical solutions. As such, it tries to mesh soap opera coincidence with contemporary documentary. But it does imprint on the viewer that, "Not to act is to act." As a Protestant preacher points out, "The Testament is the same when men are dead."

N.Y. curator lectures on videotape

By Nancy Doerner
Special to The Daily Iowan

BARBARA LONDON, curator for video at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City, will lecture on "Video: Past, Present, Future" tonight at 8 in the UI Museum of Art.

London, who has been with the Museum of Modern Art for 15 years, is an internationally known authority on the comparatively new field of video art. London herself eschews the term "video art," preferring to call it simply "video."

"You don't call it 'painting art,'" London observed in a recent telephone interview.

Many people today, however, associate the term video only with the likes of MTV. Yet video as an art form goes far beyond the mainstream offerings of commercial broadcasting.

LONDON ACKNOWLEDGED that for people who grew up with television, the monitor used in museum video exhibits is likely to be "a familiar piece of furniture." But that familiarity may be misleading. As London pointed out, video, unlike television, hopes to do more than entertain. "It's like poetry," London said. "It's going to challenge you."

Art

"The work that's done with the equipment has the same sort of range that one would find in painting or pottery," London said. By manipulating their cameras in wildly original ways, video artists prove that the medium can go far beyond the narrow range of subject matters and visual forms seen on commercial television or in motion pictures.

Perhaps the most strikingly original of these forms is known as an installation piece. Designed specifically for the space in which it will be exhibited, an installation piece often uses not one, but a whole series of monitors to create an array of visual impressions. The artist also may incorporate cameras into the site, so that the viewer's image is recorded and instantly becomes part of the work, making the viewer, in London's words, "almost a performer, an active participant."

LONDON, who has always been interested in contemporary art, got involved with video through her work at the Museum of Modern Art, which in 1968 became the first major museum to present an exhibit including video.

London feels that video has been a particularly good medium for accepting the work of women, largely because its emergence as an art form coincided with the rise of feminism in the 1960s. "Because it was new, it had an open history," she said of video's receptiveness toward women. "Whether it was done by a man or a woman, the work was treated all the same."

London's lecture tonight, which is part of the UI Museum of Art's ongoing series of talks on "Women, Art and Politics," will focus largely on the role of women as artists in the field of video.

HANS BREUER, UI professor of art and art history, as well as director of the lecture series, conceived of the series as a forum for analyzing "the impact of feminism in the '70s on the arts in general." Breder, who hopes to continue the series over a period of two or three years, noted that today even works by male artists often reflect feminist points of view.

Breder feels that video has been so receptive to women artists for reasons that extend beyond simply the advantageous coinciding of the field's emergence with the growing concern for women's rights. To Breder, the form of video seems ideally suited to the concerns of women.

"Part of the nature of video is that it allows you to deal with private activity. Video breaks down the barrier between what is public and what is private," Breder noted, adding that an interest in autobiographical work is common among female artists.

Tonight's lecture is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts, the UI Museum of Art and the Corroboree, a symposium of disciplines directed by Breder.

Rape charges against Brown dismissed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A judge Thursday dismissed charges that former football great Jim Brown beat up and raped a woman at his Hollywood Hills home last February.

Municipal Court Judge Candace Cooper dismissed one count each of rape, sexual assault and battery against Brown on a motion by prosecutors, who said they did not have enough evidence to prove the charges.

"I think it would be a travesty to ask the court to hold Mr. Brown to stand trial," prosecutor Dino Fulgoni said.

The judge dismissed the case at the end of a three-day preliminary hearing to determine whether Brown would stand trial.

Earlier Thursday, the woman who accused Brown of attacking her was called back to the stand in a defense effort to undermine her credibility, but she insisted she had remained consistent in her claim that the former football star beat her up and raped her.

Massimino will stay at Villanova

VILLANOVA, Pa. (UPI) — Villanova basketball Coach Rollie Massimino said Thursday he has decided not to accept an offer to become coach of the New Jersey Nets of the NBA.

Massimino, whose Wildcats won the NCAA basketball championship earlier this year, was considered the leading candidate to replace Stan Albeck, who left the Nets to become coach of the Chicago Bulls, but told his team this morning that he had decided to remain at Villanova.

"I felt at this time it was in the best interest of my family, Villanova University, our players and (longtime trainer) Jake Nevin to stay at Villanova University," Massimino said. "It was something very tiring and trying but this is what I felt I had to do."

A school spokesman said Massimino, who was honored at a fund-raising "roast" in Philadelphia on Wednesday night, made his decision to turn down the Nets' job between 3 a.m. and 5 a.m. Thursday.

New Jersey Nets president Bernie Mann offered the job to Massimino earlier this week and had expressed optimism he would accept it. The Nets had even called a news conference for this afternoon to announce his hiring.

Crosby officially severs ties with PGA

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Kathryn Crosby is confident the new Bing Crosby clambake will be both a step forward and a reawakening of the past.

The Bing Crosby National Championship Golf Tournament, she said Friday, will bring together both a host of jovial celebrities and top amateur golfers at Bermuda Run Country Club in North Carolina next June 2-8.

The tournament marks the official severing of ties between the Crosby family and one of the premier events on the PGA Tour.

"I feel it's a step forward," Crosby said in San Diego, site of the first Crosby clambake in 1937. "It's a step that must be taken. Pebble Beach never recaptured the feeling that was here in San Diego."

The Crosby family pulled out of the annual Pebble Beach tournament because Mrs. Crosby was unhappy with the way the PGA was operating it. She felt the tournament was becoming too geared to profit and had lost the coziness she felt her late husband, Bing, had cherished.

Bickerstaff named to Seattle post

SEATTLE (UPI) — Washington Bullet's assistant coach Bernie Bickerstaff said Thursday his appointment as head coach of the Seattle SuperSonics is "a perfect match" and will provide a fresh start for the former world championship club.

"This is a job I wanted," Bickerstaff said. "I've always been very fond of Seattle. Immediately, like right now, this becomes a new era for SuperSonics basketball."

The former University of San Diego coach said the Sonics can no longer identify with their past glory of being the world champions in 1979.

"We must find our own identity and our own comfort zone," he said.

Bickerstaff, who has served as assistant coach and head scout for the Bullets for the past 12 seasons, appeared at a SuperSonics news conference called to introduce the team's top draft choice, Xavier McDaniel.

Bickerstaff, 41, was signed to a multi-year contract, but terms of the agreement were not disclosed in accordance with SuperSonics policy.

Andrews doubtful for Falcon season

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former All-Pro running back William Andrews will probably not be able to participate in the Atlanta Falcons' preseason drills and is doubtful for the season because of nerve damage in his knee, doctors say.

Andrews missed all of the 1984 season after suffering a severe knee injury in a preseason practice session last August.

"I'm very encouraged about the progress I've been making but it's kind of up in the air for this season," said Andrews Wednesday.

Dr. Robert Gilbert said Andrews has shown improvement but admitted whether he will ever play football again remains "a hard question to answer."

'Fast' McGhee will run at junior meet

By Melissa Rapoport
Sports Editor

After competing in the intermediate hurdles for the first time in his career in mid-April, freshman Patrick McGhee has become one of the fastest freshmen hurdlers in the nation.

"A lot of people are capable of running as fast as Patrick," Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler said. "But right now, there's not a freshman that we know of that has run 50.22 seconds (in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles)."

With his 50.22 personal best set at the National Invitational Track and Field Championships in Indianapolis, Ind., May 4, McGhee will take his talents to Elmhurst, Ill., Saturday to compete in the intermediate hurdles and the 110 high hurdles at the Jr. Nationals meet.

"I'M LOOKING to make the Junior National team," McGhee said about the qualifying meet. "To make the Junior National team I'll have to place first or second. I'm also looking for a p.r. (personal record)."

Within the last month, McGhee has competed twice against the nation's elite. After participating in the NCAA meet, he competed at The Athlete Congress (TAC) meet last weekend in Indianapolis with such notables as World Class' Andre Phillips, Iowa State's Olympic silver-medalist Danny Harris.

The big-meet exposure certainly pays off. "I've run against some of the best runners in the country," McGhee said. "It has given me experience on what to do and not to do. It has given me a positive attitude going into Junior Nationals."

"At Junior Nationals, having run against all those good runners will give me a positive attitude," he said. "I won't be as nervous. At the big meets, it was my first time and everything was so new."

Regardless, both McGhee and Wheeler emphasized this meet would not be treated any more lightly than NCAAAs or TAC. "There's no insignificant meet," Wheeler said.

When asked if McGhee had a strong chance of winning his races, Wheeler said, "I try not to take that position," he said. "Winning is a very sensitive question. We always want to win. We can't be overconfident and don't underestimate the competition. You have to keep that attitude."

THE TESTING PROCEDURE involves the use of an instrument that can detect any suspected drugs taken years before. To insure accuracy, Berkey said definite specifications will be used for the tests.

"You also have two samples to test," Berkey said, "so if there is a positive, and someone wants to appeal the positive, they have another sample to test."

Berkey said the committee viewed the drug situation in college athletics as "very serious" and wanted to work to preserve the integrity of the sports.

A year-long NCAA study involving 2,000 college athletes nationally was released earlier in the spring.

IT SHOWED THAT 27 percent of the athletes interviewed smoked marijuana, 12 percent used cocaine, 8 percent used amphetamines, 11 percent used major pain killers, 3 percent used steroids and 1 percent used tranquilizers and barbiturates.

himself into a very competitive situation with the other guards at Iowa sometime in his freshman year whether that is in the fall or in January."

Armstrong will play point guard for the Michigan large-school team, which includes Michigan's Mr. Basketball Glen Rice and Iowa State recruit Maurice Poole.

The Iowa High School All-Stars will definitely be the underdog in both contests against the basketball-rich state of Michigan, but the Iowa stars may have an opportunity to play some good team basketball as they have been practicing three times a day in preparation for Saturday.

Michigan will have only practiced once as a team.

"I know we have a real good team. I don't know how good the Iowa players are but we should do fairly well," Armstrong said. "Our first time together as a group will be Thursday."

Tickets will be on sale for the contests at the arena on Saturday at a cost of $5.

NCAA working to clean up college athletics

Drug tests suggested for athletes

By Steve Sands
Special to the Daily Iowan

A special NCAA committee recommended Wednesday that players in key NCAA championships should be tested for drugs. The Special NCAA Committee for National Drug Testing Policy, meeting in New Orleans, will send the testing recommendation to an NCAA council studying the problem Aug. 14-16, according to Ruth Berkey, an NCAA liaison to the committee.

The council will create legislation from the recommendation and it will be brought to a vote at the 1986 NCAA convention. Iowa basketball Coach George Raveling was one of six members on the committee but was unable to answer questions because of NCAA regulations.

THE COMMITTEE recommended that visible sports be tested first. These include football, men's and women's basketball, men's and women's track and field, baseball and wrestling. After studying the results, a decision will be made whether to add more sports.

Legal and moral questions have been raised about the institution of a testing policy, such as an athlete's right to privacy and protection against self-incrimination. Berkey said these would be countered by having student athletes sign a statement recognizing that they would have to undergo tests if they reached the NCAA championships to be eligible for competition.

Cheating controls are urged

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Administrators from more than 500 universities Thursday debated how to inhibit cheating in college sports and better control athletic spending, with one official warning "if this doesn't work, the NCAA falls apart."

The NCAA representatives discussed proposals that would impose strict penalties on colleges and coaches for breaking rules and that would give university presidents more control over their schools' sports programs.

"The presidents really do want to face up to the fact they have to be more accountable," said University of Kentucky President Otis Singletary. "They want tougher punishments."

Each of the recommendations is expected to pass in Friday's voting, though some of them may be weakened by amendments.

But John Ryan, president of Indiana University and chairman of the NCAA's Presidents Commission, warned the purpose of the convention — called to boost the integrity of college sports — could be undercut by such amendments.

"WE CALLED the convention to adopt proposals that have teeth, that have effect," he said.

Ryan also said freshman eligibility, which is not to be debated at this week's special convention, will be considered at the NCAA's regular annual convention next January.

"It's a matter of very great concern across the country," he said. "If this doesn't work, the NCAA falls apart," he said.

Hawkeye recruits to play Saturday

By Brad Zimanek

Saturday afternoon highly-touted Iowa basketball recruits Roy Marble and B.J. Armstrong will get a taste of the Iowa 'home' crowd for the first time when they compete in the Iowa-Michigan High School All-Star game at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Marble will be playing in the small-school game, which is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m., while Armstrong will be playing in the large-school game at 4 p.m.

"It's going to be kind of fun and kind of exciting," Armstrong said. "I'll be playing in front of the home crowd now I guess."

"I think it will be great for B.J.," Nick Conti, Armstrong's coach from Brother Rice High School in Birmingham, Mich., said.

"I have very strong feelings about B.J. and his ability and how I think he's going to do at Iowa. I think those people are going to love him before it is all said and done over the next four years."

"IT IS DARN DIFFICULT not to get excited about watching him play and there are not a whole lot of high school players who I would pay money to go watch play, but he's one of them," Conti added.

Armstrong has been working on his game this summer and would like to step in and contribute for the Iowa team in his first season.

"I really don't know how I'm going to fit in at Iowa," Armstrong said. "I know they have three or four guards and it will be interesting I guess, but I would just like to step in and contribute anyway I can."

"I don't want to put the monkey on his back and I don't want to downgrade the players that are already at Iowa," Conti said, "but I really look for B.J. to move

Fun reigns at softball 'carnival'

By Melissa Rapoport

The Amana VIP celebrity softball game may not provide intense competition, but when Iowa coaches, athletes and celebrities of all kinds get together it will certainly prove to be one of most entertaining games ever played.

"It's kind of a carnival atmosphere," Iowa volleyball Coach Sandy Stewart, a three-year participant, said of the event, which will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Iowa Diamond. "One year, Goober, (George Lindsay of the Andy Griffith Show) rode up on a horse in full armor...and ended up wrestling Dan Gable in the field."

The game provides an outlet for coaches to be seen in a different light. "It gives the fans a chance to see the coaches in a different setting," Iowa basketball Coach George Raveling said. "It's a chance to let your hair down a little. We just try to ham it up."

THE GAME PITS a team of professional golfers, entertainment celebrities and Iowa coaches against a group of Iowa men and women athletes. In last year's bout, the Iowa all-stars defeated the celebrities, 14-4.

Making their fifth appearance in the 6-year old event, the Oak Ridge Boys lead off the Celebrity team. Their teammates include the comedy team of Bill Skiles and Pete Henderson, who have been named honorary co-captains, singer Roy Clark, Ernie 'Mr. Cub' Banks, Tom Watson, NBC baseball announcer Joe Garagiola and former Iowa and Kansas City Chiefs football star Ed Podolak.

Coaches playing on the Celebrity team include Raveling, Iowa State basketball Coach Johnny

THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA team will include Michelle Edwards, Kent Hill, Clarence Jones, Tracy Langhurst, Brad Lohaus, Chuck Long, Lisa Long, Al Lorenzen, Robert Smith and Larry Station, among others.

Tickets for the game will be sold at the gate on game day and at the Oak Ridge Boys concert Saturday night at the Five Seasons Center in Cedar Rapids for $3. Children under 12 will be admitted free when accompanied by an adult with a ticket.

All proceeds are donated to the women's athletics scholarship fund.
