Shamir defends terrorists

By Greg Wyrig Daily Iowan

Shamir has defended the Palestinian terrorists who killed four Americans in Los Angeles last Wednesday, saying "The terrorists are heroes in their own way." He said the diplomats are being "hypocritical and dishonest" by not acknowledging the reasons for the terrorist acts.

The terrorist attack was the first of three that took place in Los Angeles on Wednesday, the second one of which was a bombing of a U.S. embassy annex. The third attack was a shooting at a Jewish community center.

Karami revives Israeli raid

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Prime Minister Bashir al-Assad of Syria said the Druze rebels had launched two raids into Israeli-occupied territory on Thursday and Friday, killing at least 12 people and wounding 20.

"The first raid took place in the village of Jisr al-Shuf in the Galilee, and the second raid was in the village of Al-Buraq in the Golan Heights," Assad said.

A three-vehicle traffic accident in Coralville on Tuesday morning left two seriously injured.

A woman identified as Virginia Lee Mathias, 23, of Coralville, was taken to the hospital after the accident, which occurred in the 1900 block of 16th Avenue SE.

The accident involved a 1984 Toyota Corolla driven by Mathias, a 1985 Ford F-Special Series pickup driven by Christopher K. Gass, 33, of Coralville, and a 1983 Ford F-150 pickup driven by William P. Lane, 51, of Coralville.

The accident occurred at about 6:30 a.m. when Mathias' car hit the rear of Gass' car, causing it to hit Lane's car.

Mathias was taken to the hospital with a pelvic fracture and other injuries, and Gass was taken to the hospital with a broken leg and other injuries.

Lane was treated at the hospital and released.

Camofonies of war

By John A. Williams Daily Iowan

The University of Iowa English Department will hold a symposium on "Camofonies of War" on Tuesday, July 23, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Carver Business Building.

The symposium will feature discussions of literature, film, and art that depict the experience of war.

The event is sponsored by the UI English Department and the UI Center for Peace and Social Justice.

Correction

In the story "A dance of well-wishers," the name of the person being honored was misspelled. The correct name is Margaret J. Bishop, not Margaret J. Bishoff.

City will absorb 4 cent pool tax in response to public complaints

By Dave Holt

The city has decided to pay the extra 4 cents for a pool tax so local taxpayers don’t have to.

The seven percent sales tax, which went into effect July 1, caused headaches for some residents who had been raising the prices of their goods.

So, the city has decided to pay the extra four cents to the state, meaning that city residents will not have to pay it.

The move was made to comply with a new law that requires all cities to pay the pool tax.

"We want to make sure our residents are not costed out," said Mayor Mark Armour. "This will help to keep our pool prices affordable for everyone."
Stifling discussion

It's ironic that those attempting to combat the threat of controversial ideas often use tactics that have handily stymied those utilized by the evil forces they denounce. Yet the spoils of war this time — liberal tactics designed to stifle free expression — is now invading the classrooms.

Judith Monroe, founder and president of Accuracy in Media, Inc., a group that seeks to uncover the alleged liberal bias of the media, has formed a new think-tank-organization called Accuracy in Academia. The conservative group will audit college classes and confront faculty members who feed students "disinformation and misinformation."

"It's a pay-off for people who hate stultification of innocent kids who don't know anything, and feed them a bunch of garbage," Monroe said. "Obviously, not all the kids are able to fight back."

Whether most professors espouse left-of-center — or, as they brusquely term it, "liberal" — the students in some classes don't get the chance to learn things.

Frequent with liberal ideas, it doesn't appear to be having to fight students can't retaliate is full of Curt, who feed students "disinformation and misinformation."

He will audit college classes and confront faculty members stifle discussion that depict "violent pornography."

"This is the group that elected the president and the country is tired, political gifts, it seems, can have done better. This, in the man or the times or, as is possible to do the same thing, after all."

Organized consumer efforts aimed at a company's profits could have done better. This, in the fiscal reality has thrown in the towel to Ronald Reagan."

A good man, a good jazz band leader Dan Yoder, recently returned from his duties as manager of a music major within the School of Music at Pennsylvania State University.

"I was happy to be in my home state," said Yoder, "but I'm anxious to be back in Iowa City and teaching." He added, "I've been here for a long time, and I know the area well."

When asked about his return, Yoder replied, "It's better than it was when I left. We have a new administration, and things are running smoothly."

The program, which had been struggling in recent years, is now thriving under Yoder's leadership. "We have a new vision for the future," he said. "We're focusing on developing a strong jazz program that will attract students and build a solid foundation."}

Social Security deal criticized

ican senators who voted to curb federal spending, rejected a House plan to increase Social Security benefits.

Thursday, failed to support a $5 billion increase in Social Security benefits.

The House plan, which was defeated by a vote of 298-130, would have increased benefits for all recipients by 1 percent immediately and by 1 percent a year for the next three years.

The Senate bill, which was approved by a vote of 56-44, would have increased benefits for all recipients by 2 percent immediately and by 2 percent a year for the next three years.

A spokesman for the Social Security Administration said the House plan would have cost taxpayers $5 billion, while the Senate bill would have cost taxpayers $10 billion.

The House plan was opposed by Republican senators who argued that it would increase the deficit and that it would not be effective in reducing the number of recipients who are living below the poverty line.

The Senate plan was supported by Democratic senators who argued that it would be more effective in reducing the number of recipients who are living below the poverty line and that it would be more popular with voters.

The House plan was also opposed by some moderate Republican senators who argued that it would be too expensive and that it would not be effective in reducing the number of recipients who are living below the poverty line.

The elections held in Bolivia in June 1980 provided one of the most electric scenes in the history of Latin American politics. Nine candidates, including President Luis Gonzalo Maradón, ran in the presidential elections, with the opposition candidate, Fernando Colla, emerging as the leading opposition leader. The election itself was marred by reports of irregularities and violence, and the results were disputed by some observers. The winner was Hernán Siles Zuazo, who was sworn in as president in August 1980.

The Isthmus of Tehuantepec

The Isthmus of Tehuantepec is a narrow strip of land that connects Mexico and Central America. It is a region of political, economic, and cultural significance, with a long history of conflict and cooperation between Mexico and Guatemala. The region is known for its rich biodiversity, including a variety of plant and animal species, and is home to several indigenous communities. The Isthmus has been a focal point of geopolitical and economic interests for decades, and its development has been shaped by a complex interplay of national and international forces.

Band boasters plays of all ages

By Nancy Donner

T HE IOWA CITY Community Theatre has assembled a summer season of Damned... Damned... Damned! with a cast of more than 20 characters. The play, which opened Friday, is a black comedy that follows the lives of three people who are arrested for the murder of a fourth.

The show, directed by Steve Simon, is the last of three productions that make up the summer season of Damned... Damned... Damned! The other two productions are The Amell... Side By Side and The Crow... Next. Landslide.

Music

Leon Redbone plays a variety of music, including folk, country, jazz, and blues. He is known for his laid-back onstage presence and his ability to entertain audiences with his stories.

BUT THE Band is also concerned with creating a community that supports itself. In the past, the band has performed at senior citizen centers, and on an 8 p.m. slot, they plan to play for the Iowa City Community Band. The band is a community of musicians who come together to share their love of music.

The Iowa City Community Band, under the direction of John Lee Hooker, will conduct with the Iowa City Community Band at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, July 12.

The band's repertoire includes works by John Lee Hooker, Bob Dylan, and other contemporary artists. The band members are all volunteers and are committed to providing quality music for the community.

In addition to performing at the Iowa City Community Band, the band also performs at various community events, such as the Iowa City Jazz Festival and the Iowa City Blues Festival. The band's goal is to bring together a community of musicians who share a passion for music.
