A group of farmers begins a trek across the midwest Thursday enroute to the Farm Aid Concert being held in Champaign, Ill., Sunday. Country singer Willie Nelson and Illinois Governor James Thompson initiated plans for the concert which is being held to draw attention to the plight of American farmers. Distribution of proceeds from the concert will be determined following the concert by the musicians involved and farmers — "not politicians." Nelson says the relationship between farmers and entertainers is a "natural one... Both love their jobs and, if fact, seem born to them."

Goodwill Industries executive launches council campaign

By Gretchen Norman
 Staff Writer

Concerned about local underemployment of the poor and disadvantaged, local businessman John Watson became the second person to announce a bid for the Iowa City Council in less than a week.

Watson, 43, 403 Elmridge Ave., announced his candidacy Thursday afternoon for the District B seat — two days after contender Jill Smith officially filed her papers.

Watson, who serves as executive director of Goodwill Industries of Southeast Iowa, said his involvement in human services will make him a good councilor. He has spent nearly seven years working for Goodwill, a non-profit organization providing vocational training, employment and job placement services for disabled persons.

"In my vocation, I'm close to poor and disadvantaged people," said Watson, who also was chairman of the Iowa City Human Rights Commission and a member for two years. "I'm interested in finding ways of creating better jobs for those underemployed and unemployed."

ALTHOUGH THE Johnson County unemployment rate has traditionally been one of the lowest in the state, "no studies have been done on underemployment," he said. "I think we need responsible and stable employ-

Earthquake devastates Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A killer earthquake ripped through central Mexico Thursday, devastating parts of the capital, toppling luxury hotels, skyscrapers and hospitals, igniting hundreds of fires and taking a heavy toll on life.

Channel 13, a Mexico City television station, said there were at least 250 confirmed deaths and thousands of injured. In other reports, army and Red Cross officials said they recovered 64 bodies in Mexico City, and at least 50 others were reported killed in outlying cities and towns.

The death toll was expected to rise as rescuers dug bodies from the rubble.

The quake, measuring 7.8 on the open-ended Richter scale, was centered on land, a few miles from the Pacific coast between the mouth of the Rio Balsas river and the town of Arteaga. It struck during Mexico City's rush hour when millions were on the streets going to work or school.

Bodies of the victims were pulled from at least seven major downtown hotels, which were completely destroyed.

"Holy Mary, my daughter's in there! I can't leave! Holy Mary!" screamed a woman rescued from one of the hotels.

REPORTERS FLYING INTO Mexico City said that from the air the city looked as if it had been hit by incendiary bombs.

The Principado Hotel on the Plaza de la Revolucion said 140 tourists and businessmen were in its 80 double rooms at the time of the quake and only 39 got out alive. Three people were confirmed dead and the other 98 were missing and presumed dead.

At the luxurious 230-room Hotel Regis, rescue workers clawed the rubble looking for victims despite fires raging in the ruins. Firefighters said they could hear the voices of trapped victims but could not reach them. They appealed for lamps, batteries and jacks.

The 12-story Hospital Benito Juarez also collapsed and rescue workers at the scene said they expected few survivors.

Preliminary reports said 45 major multi-story office buildings completely collapsed in the capital, while 75 others, including a parliament building, were so extensively damaged they would have to be torn down.

One of the seven hospitals set up to receive the injured reported treating 500 people. Another, the Traumatology, received 300.

MOST OF THE DEAD were believed to be in Mexico City, a city of 18 million people, the second biggest in the world. It was believed the damage was concentrated over some 18 square miles of the city, particularly the capital's old town and its business section, the Paseo de la Reforma.

Walking through the ruins was like a scene from World War II. Fires raged in the streets fueled by natural gas from broken pipelines.

In one apartment complex, every floor had collapsed, and reporters saw a human arm dangling from the wreckage. In another case, a man whose leg was pinned beneath debris cried for help, and paramedics could not remove him.

The streets were filled with the sounds of running alarm bells from offices and stores. Hundreds of troops were sent to the center of the city to prevent looting.

Health authorities broadcast urgent appeals for bandages, medicine, bedsheets and cars to serve as ambulances. Mexico City's major radio taxi service offered free rides to anyone willing to go to hospitals to donate blood.

Buckley discusses nuclear arms, farms

By Earl Johnston III
 Staff Writer

With signs of his recent health problems clearly evident, noted conservative author and editor William F. Buckley, Jr., delivered a lengthy commentary on current events at the Union Thursday evening.

Buckley, who was hospitalized last week in Detroit after complaining of chest pains, received $9,000 from the UI Lecture Committee for his appearance.

Although most of his 45-minute speech consisted of anecdotes underscored by humorous barbs directed toward the Democratic Party, Buckley presented the near-capacity audience of around 1,000 with several "propositions" near the end of his remarks that he deemed worthy of consideration.

DISCUSSING the relationship of the United States and the Soviet Union, Buckley told the audience that immense nuclear arsenals of the two super powers — which now amount to more than 800 million times the destructive power of the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima — are meaningless.

"What is meaningful is how many deliverable bombs could we drop over the Soviet Union if they had a first strike that would, as we all know, wipe out all of our land-based missiles," said Buckley. "That is an important question to ask."

In a concert featuring frequent costume changes and a mixture of old and new material, Turner entertained a near capacity crowd at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Thursday night.

As a video screen above the stage projected her image, Turner and her six-man back-up band performed a one-hour-plus set and encore.

Beginning in a laced-up white tank top and tight white pants, Turner began the concert by performing "Show Some Respect" and "I Might Have Been Queen," two numbers from their Private Dancer LP.

She then sang "River Deep — Mountain High," and "Nutbush City Limits," two songs she recorded when teamed with former husband Ike Turner.

After leaving the stage and allowing her band to take the spotlight on "Better Be Good to Me," Turner returned wearing a short, feathery dress, fishnet stockings and high heels to perform "Private Dancer."

She then took off the feathers, revealing a costume similar to the one she wore in Mad Max: Beyond the Thunderdome as the video screen showed clips from the movie.

Turner then performed and sang her hit single "What's Love Got to Do With It."

Opening the show for Turner was British rocker John Parr.

Kelly Glynn, 20, from the Quad Cities, was especially excited with the appearance of Parr, who replaced ex-Eagle Glenn Fry, the originally scheduled opening act.

Other fans, however, expressed disappointment in Fry's absence. "I'm very irritated that Glenn Fry isn't going to be here," said Tom Butterfield, a UI senior.

UI junior Brad Enrith expressed a lot of interest in seeing "Tina's legs."

Bill Schwartzel, a hair stylist at Hair Performers in Cedar Rapids, said he was able to get tickets Thursday afternoon, but had to stand in line 11 hours to get them.

Schwartzel said Turner "is a classy chick... She's the Rolls Royce of Rock and Roll."

But Schwartzel, sporting a mohawk, added, "I'm really here to see who has the funkier hairdo, her or me."

U.S. may violate treaty

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan's "Star Wars" missile-defense system could force the United States to change — or violate — the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, a senior White House official said Thursday.

"The United States doesn't abrogate treaties lightly," the official said, but he emphasized that if U.S. security needs cannot be met within those constraints, "then you've got to go another way." The 1972 ABM Treaty places restrictions on both the United States and the Soviet Union in the area of testing and development of anti-missile systems.

TMI nuclear reactor has OK

PHILADELPHIA — A federal appeals court Thursday cleared the way for the long-delayed restart of the undamaged reactor at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, shut down six years ago after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident. An anti-nuclear group said it would appeal the decision to the Supreme Court.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had been asked by opponents to hold additional hearings on the reactivation of TMI's Unit 1 reactor, ordered last May by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, but the 12-judge court refused the request and lifted a stay blocking the restart, effective 3 p.m. next Wednesday.

FAA to increase workforce

WASHINGTON — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said Thursday the government is hiring more air traffic controllers and inspectors to meet a projected increase in air travel — not because of a recent wave of fatal crashes.

Dole said the Federal Aviation Administration will add about 480 air traffic controllers to the existing work force of about 14,000 during the current fiscal year with an additional 480 controllers expected to be hired the next fiscal year. Dole also said she has approved the hiring of 500 more federal safety inspectors.

Tough trade plan approved

WASHINGTON — House Democrats adopted a sweeping resolution Thursday to toughen U.S. trade policy and a House panel approved a bill that would cut clothing and textile imports from Asia.

The House Democratic Caucus overwhelmingly adopted a statement of principles, including measures to promote U.S. exports and stiffen trade laws, designed to address the estimated $150 billion trade imbalance this year. Separately, the Ways and Means trade subcommittee adopted a bill that would cut clothing and textile imports from Thailand, Korea, China and Taiwan by nearly one-third.

Bolivian labor unrest flares

LA PAZ, Bolivia — President Victor Paz Estenssoro imposed a state of siege Thursday, sending tanks and soldiers into the streets, and police arrested 500 labor leaders in a bid to crush a crippling nationwide strike.

Paz Estenssoro declared the state of siege shortly after the Bolivian Workers Confederation rejected a preliminary government offer to begin talks on ending the 15-day general strike.

Geneva arms talks resume

GENEVA, Switzerland — U.S. and Soviet negotiators shook hands and sat down at the bargaining table Thursday in a new round of arms control talks that have taken on greater significance in light of November's superpower summit.

The U.S. delegation, led by chief negotiator Max Kampelman, hosted Thursday's two-hour session of the talks. There was no apparent progress in two earlier rounds of bargaining this year on the designated issues: space weapons, strategic nuclear arms and intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Fall enrollment decreases from 1984 high

By Marianne Cherni
Staff Writer

UI officials announced Thursday that fall's enrollment figures are down slightly from last year's record number.

According to UI Office of Academic Affairs records, there are 29,651 students currently enrolled at the UI, compared to an enrollment of 29,712 last fall.

"This is consistent with projections that our enrollment has peaked and will continue to level off," said UI Registrar Jerald W. Dallam.

These records also indicate 3,728 freshmen are enrolled at the UI this fall, a 4 percent rise from last year. The 3,134 transfer students enrolled this fall also represents an increase of 8 percent from last fall.

The increase in freshmen and transfer students was not expected, said UI Coordinator for Institutional Data Elizabeth Stroud.

STROUD ALSO SAID she received a phone call from a University of Illinois official who expressed surprise at the number of additional transfer students at that institution.

"There must be an increase of people going on to college," said Stroud. "There are fewer graduating from high school and yet we got an increase" in freshmen and transfer student enrollments.

Enrollment in the UI College of Liberal Arts has decreased by 173 students since last fall but the UI College of Business Administration had its enrollment increase by 240 students.

UI officials attributed this shift to a new procedure for transferring students from the College of Liberal Arts to the College of Business Administration.

The UI College of Law and the UI College of Pharmacy have experienced modest enrollment increases from last fall of 9 students and 33 students respectively.

Each of the UI's other five colleges, however, are reporting enrollment decreases ranging from 5 students in the UI College of Engineering to 102 students in the UI College of Nursing.

Regina elementary center will help cut overcrowding

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

A new $1.5 million elementary education center will be built adjoining Regina High School to alleviate overcrowding at the Catholic elementary school, community and religious leaders said at a Thursday press conference.

As of Thursday, $565,000 or 40 percent of the funds needed for the project had been raised through donations, said Frank Boyd, a partner of Boyd and Rummelhart Plumbing and Heating Co., who is serving as campaign chairman of the Regina Education Center Campaign.

The project was approved in April by the Iowa City Catholic Board of Education, but ground breaking will not occur until 80 percent of the funds have been raised, said the Rev. Joseph Denning, Roman Catholic Vicar of Iowa City.

More than 4,000 Iowa City Catholic households will be contacted Oct. 20 in a major fund drive that religious leaders hope will push donations over the 80 percent mark.

ONE RELIGIOUS LEADER said he is confident the funds will be raised because "we have something to sell. We have something to offer our young people and the parents of our young people," said the Rev. Henry Greiner of St. Mary's Catholic Church. "I don't know any more ecumenical community" than Iowa City, he added.

Enrollment has almost doubled at Regina Elementary School during the last three years — increasing from 165 to 255 students — causing extensive overcrowding problems, said Sister Jean Marie Brady, Regina Elementary School Principal. The school, now located at 229 E. Court St., is rented from St. Patrick's church.

Classes are now being held in the school's cafeteria and faculty and music rooms to cope with the overcrowding, Brady said.

"BASEMENT AREAS and former storerooms are used for classes. Even the stage is used as a classroom," Brady said, adding the increasing commercialization and traffic in the area are creating conditions "which do not lend themselves to a good learning environment."

Feasibility studies have shown renovation of the school would be impractical and costly, Boyd said.

The new structure will provide 31,000 square feet of new and remodeled space and will include 14 classrooms for kindergarten through sixth grade students, a media center and a multi-purpose room, which will include a gymnasium and a stage, and can also serve as a cafeteria, he said.

"The center will also allow religious education programs to function out of one building rather than the three locations it presently uses," said Thomas Summy, president of Stephens Clothing, who is serving as business and professional section co-chairman of the funding campaign.

The new school will accommodate approximately 350 students.

Freedman pleads for faculty salary raises

By Kent Schuelke
Staff Writer

CEDAR FALLS — UI President James O. Freedman predicted Thursday that the UI's faculty and staff will have the lowest salaries in the Big Ten next year unless the state rewards them with sizable pay increases.

"Our faculty are now going to be last in the Big Ten at precisely the time when the need to award faculty is the greatest," said Freedman during a speech at Thursday's state Board of Regents meeting.

The Iowa Legislature approved a 2 percent salary increase for regents faculty and professional and scientific staff members last spring. But at the UI, where pay raises are awarded on a merit system, one-third of the faculty received the entire increase.

ACCORDING TO Freedman, salaries for UI professors and assistant professors currently rank seventh in the Big Ten, with UI associate professors faring one notch higher.

But the UI president warned the regents these salary rankings will plummet to the bottom of the Big Ten without pay increases larger than the 5.5 percent hike already scheduled for next year.

"We need a figure above 5.5 percent," said Freedman during his speech to the board, adding the UI will have difficulty retaining its faculty without sizable increases in state funding for salaries.

During an interview following the meeting, Freedman said although Iowa is in the depths of an economic depression, he thinks there's a chance the legislature will grant the additional raises.

"Sure there is (a chance)," said Freedman. "Because otherwise we will remain at the bottom of the Big Ten."

BUT REGENT Percy Harris said no matter how necessary it might be, a raise above the promised 5.5 percent is unlikely.

"I don't think there's a chance," said Harris. "The money is just not there. I'm very discouraged about the economy in Iowa, and I don't think the farm situation is going to get any better."

Iowa State University President W. Robert Parks said that after the $14 million reversion of regents funding that Gov. Terry Branstad announced Wednesday, it was absurd to be discussing the possibility of increased state support for higher education.

"It's kind of funny to talk about what I want for next year when I hold a document that says there will be a reversion of appropriations for this year," said Parks.

University of Northern Iowa President Constantine Curris said UNI will be crippled by the cuts Branstad has ordered in state spending.

"There will be program cuts at the University of Northern Iowa and there will be people visiting the unemployment line at the University of Northern Iowa," Curris said.

Universal wins bid for UI phone system

By Kent Schuelke
Staff Writer

CEDAR FALLS — The state Board of Regents approved a $15 million contract Thursday that will authorize Universal Communications Systems to install a new telecommunications system at the UI, despite objections by two competing firms.

UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis said the Virginia firm's $14.9 million bid was the lowest received by the UI and that the company's maintenance costs were also the least expensive.

But officials from American Telephone and Telegraph Information Systems and Northwestern Bell both told the regents that the UI had selected Universal Communications Systems unfairly.

AT&T attorney Serge Garrison said that AT&T did everything that the UI had required in their rules for submitting a bid.

HE CHARGED, however, that UI officials violated the state's Public Information Act by not allowing AT&T officials to examine the bids they received.

But Julia Mears, administrative assistant to UI President James O. Freedman, told the board the UI has complied with the law. She said UI officials allow companies to examine bids before a decision is announced in construction proposals, but not in the bidding process for a purchase order.

Garrison claimed AT&T made improvements to their original bid before submitting to the UI a second time, but Ellis said AT&T's second bid was still higher than the bid entered by Universal Communications Systems.

Board office records state that Telecommunications International conducted a study of the companies that applied for the UI project, analyzing each firm's technical, operational and financial aspects, and recommended the contract be awarded to Universal Communications Systems.

AT&T Division Manager Richard Niles said that the UI squelched their complaints because they didn't want to be inconvenienced with starting the bid process over.

But Ellis said that AT&T and Northwestern Bell officials didn't want to accept the fact that the regents had found a product they liked better.

Toxic sites identified in city

By Suzanne McBride
Staff Writer

The toxic waste sites will remain in Iowa City if the Superfund bill to clean up hazardous wastes does not make it to the House floor by Sept. 30.

The Iowa City Sanitary Landfill, the Iowa City Sanitary Landfill-West and property of the Iowa Illinois Gas and Electric Co. have been named potentially dangerous toxic waste sites by the National Campaign Against Toxic Hazards.

But the sites are not dangerous enough to officially be placed on the National Priorities List. If the Superfund bill passes, these areas will be looked at much sooner, said Marc Gottschalk, coordinator of the Iowa Citizen Action Network Toxics Program.

"In the past five years of the Superfund program's existence, only six sites of the nation's most dangerous toxic waste dumps have been cleaned," he said. "That is only 5 percent of the sites nationally. None of the Iowa City sites were even looked at because of this poor organization and management, mostly on the part of the EPA."

THE IOWA CITY sites are three of 20,000 other places still waiting to be investigated by officials, in addition to 812 sites listed as "extremely dangerous" on the national priority list. The priority list is expected to grow to 2,000 to 4,000 sites within a few years, said Gottschalk.

"If the bill became a law, for Iowa City that would mean that those three local sites would be looked at more quickly," said Gottschalk. "If they were indeed identified as dangerous toxic sites, then they could be cleaned up as soon as possible, if the Superfund bill was in effect."

A different form of the Super-

"None of the Iowa City sites were even looked at because of this poor organization and management, mostly on the part of the EPA," says Marc Gottschalk of the Iowa Citizen Action Network Toxics Program.

fund bill considered in the House last year "was great, but this year is simply a disaster due to the many different provisions," said Gottschalk. "The only good thing about this year's bill is that it provides more funding than last year's."

THE PROPOSED BILL would allocate $10.1 billion to the Superfund program, more than twice the amount of the current $5 billion given to the program for use during the past five years.

Controversy over how much the bill should be and who should pay the money has slowed the process, said Gottschalk.

Iowa's representatives are generally in favor of the current Superfund legislation, with Rep.

Cooper Evans, R-3rd District and Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin both supporting it. Republican Sen. Charles Grassley is undecided.

"Evans has always been in favor of the long-time concept of Superfund," said Evans' spokesman Terry Mickelson. "He voted for the bill a year ago when it was approved overwhelmingly, but now he feels that there have been many changes in the bill."

ALTHOUGH EVANS is not as happy with this year's version, he "will very likely vote for some sort of Superfund bill," said Mickelson.

The Senate, which is further along in the legislative process than the House, passed its version of the Superfund bill out of committee in July. The $7.5 billion bill is "on the floor right now and will be voted on any time now," said Gottschalk.

"Harkin is with us 100 percent, but Grassley is a question mark," said Gottschalk. "Last year, Grassley was not supportive of the bill, and interestingly enough we have since learned that he is eighth out of the hundred senators in terms of how much money he received from chemical companies. Right now the figure is $137,075."

SENATORS Harkin and Grassley were unavailable for comment.

In a letter to the editor published in The Daily Iowan, (Sept. 18), Robert L. Schulz, executive director of the Iowa Petroleum Council, wrote that without the "five-year reauthorization, the EPA would be unable to make long-term plans and might be forced to limit the program to clean up activities currently underway."

Schulz also said the EPA did not manage the funds well during the past five years.

"They (EPA) have indicated that they can spend no more than $5 billion," said Schulz. "We have gone along with that and feel that $5 billion is enough."

However, Schulz and other petroleum industry officials would like to "spread the costs" of supporting the allotment.

"During the past five years two industries — the petroleum and chemical industries — have been unjustly shouldering all the Superfund money," said Schulz. "We would like to see the petroleum industry paying one-third of the money, the chemistry industry paying for another third and a manufacturing excise tax paying the last third."

Controversial immigration bill has Senate OK, now moves to House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Thursday for a long-stalled immigration reform bill to stem the flood of illegal aliens across U.S. borders but which allows 350,000 foreign farm workers to harvest perishable crops.

The controversial bill, versions of which have died in the last two Congresses, now goes to the House, where the guest worker provision is likely to come under heavy fire and may jeopardize the bill's chance of passage.

The Senate passed the bill, 69-30, after an unrelated Social Security amendment by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., that was holding up action was sent to two committees with instructions to come back with a separate bill.

Immediately after the vote, Raul

Yzaguirre, president of the Hispanic National Council of La Raza, called the legislation "potentially the most damaging bill since Congress passed racial quotas in the 1920s."

"The Senate has caved in under the economic pressures of a select group of very wealthy, very powerful growers who have used this bill to forward their own narrow interests," Yzaguirre said.

THE LANDMARK legislation seeks to keep illegal aliens from crossing U.S. borders by making it unlawful to hire them, but would allow the entry of 350,000 foreign workers to help harvest highly perishable crops, mostly in the West.

It also would make millions of illegal aliens now living in the United States eligible for legal status if they entered before Jan. 1, 1980.

The large foreign worker program was added to the bill over the objections of Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., sponsor of the bill. It was contained in an amendment by Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., and was approved 51-44.

Simpson said later he thought the vote would be closer because of the addition of the controversial new farm worker program, which he called "quite an extraordinary program" that might lead to problems in the House.

"One of the difficult points will be how far you go with a temporary agricultural worker program," he said.

Weir: Renew efforts for hostages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration, responding to freed hostage Benjamin Weir's plea that the U.S. renew negotiation efforts, Thursday rejected demands from Moslem kidnapers for the release of six other American captives in Lebanon.

For his part, President Ronald Reagan insisted the United States is "continuing to do everything we can" to win the release of the six men, who along with Weir have been abducted in Beirut in separate incidents over the past 18 months.

White House spokesman Edward Djerejian, in a statement echoed at the State Department, announced, "Our policy with regard to making deals with terrorists is well known and has not changed."

"We, of course, are always willing to negotiate to protect the safety of American citizens," he said. "But to give in to the demands of terrorists would only encourage future acts of terrorism and could lead to the taking of additional hostages."

Insisting "quiet diplomacy" is the best course to seek release of the six hostages — a goal he called "the highest priority of this administration" — Djerejian said, "We will review Reverend Weir's suggestions and continue to do everything possible, consistent with United States policy."

HOWEVER, Djerejian said the United States will not pressure Kuwait to free 17 Lebanese and Iraqis convicted of bombings in that country — the key demand of the extremist Moslems who held Weir captive for nearly 500 days.

A senior administration official said the refusal was a direct response to demands conveyed through Weir. He said the United States did not negotiate Weir's release, but believes he was freed by his abductors in order to carry their message to Reagan.

The official said the United States has "credible evidence" the six other hostages are alive and stressed efforts continue through five unidentified "avenues" for their release. The United States is not in direct contact with the kidnapers, he said.

WEIR, 61, a Presbyterian minister, was released over the weekend after 16 months of captivity. In a nationally-televised news conference Thursday, Weir called on Reagan to undertake "new efforts" and explore "new and creative options" in dealing with the Shiite Moslems believed to hold the six.

"The opportunity for negotiation should be seized while there is still an opportunity," Weir said.

Opportunity lost

Des Moines businessman John Ruan is spouting sour grapes. In "an open letter to the citizens of Iowa" Ruan whined about the state failing to take advantage of a prime economic possibility — namely his World Trade Center brain child.

Indeed the state is confronting what Ruan calls "an opportunity lost," but the loss has nothing to do with a vague and mammoth trade center to clutter downtown Des Moines. Rather, the loss looms in the already established but gradually crumbling regents universities.

Ruan writes: "State government spends millions each year on the maintenance and construction of buildings for our educational system. Yet a far greater sum goes for instructors and programs. And who can argue that the buildings themselves have little value compared to what goes on inside them?"

He goes on, "Our investment in education becomes hard to justify if they are no jobs available here for the young people we educate."

But first the young people must be educated, and this can't continue to happen if the state doesn't pump adequate resources into the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The solution is obvious. The Iowa Legislature should take the $30 million appropriated for the almost defunct trade center and remedy the cuts to higher education, plus pad the funds allotted for the state universities.

When Ruan reasons that "luring industry to Iowa becomes futile if our homegrown enterprises die on the vine for lack of support and competitive advantage," he could as well be referring to the meccas already provided by the state universities instead of his own pet project.

John Ruan is a rich man who didn't get his own way this time. His good intentions for the state of Iowa would be well fulfilled if funnelled through the regents system.

Policy problem

The Rev. Benjamin Weir, released after more than a year of captivity in Lebanon, held a press conference Thursday that reopened the issue of U.S. policy in the Middle East.

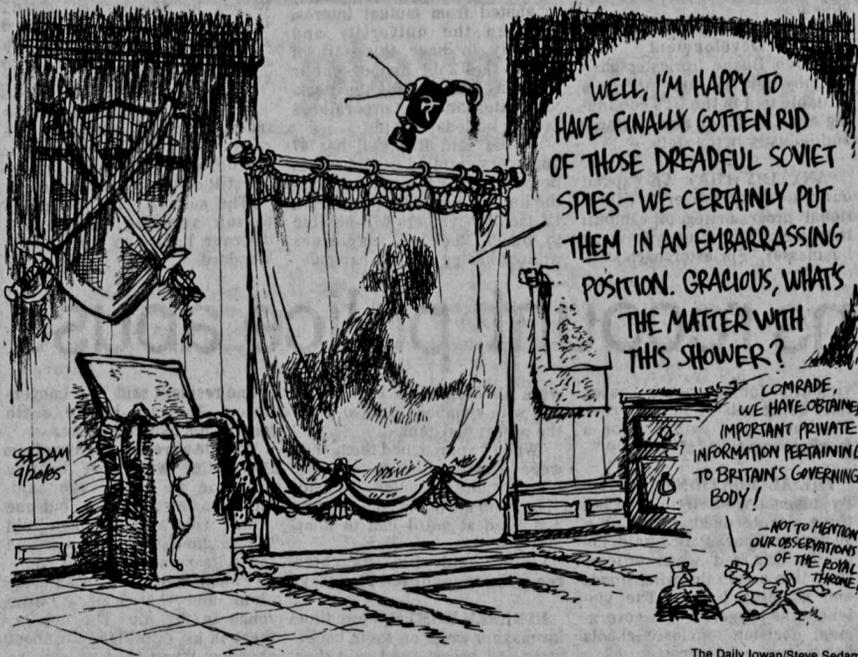

The immediate problem for the Reagan administration is, of course, that the terrorists have demanded the release of convicted terrorists imprisoned in Kuwait, threatening to kidnap — and execute — more Americans if the United States doesn't meet their demands. Equally a problem is that the demand was made on national TV and thus may have focused public opinion and media attention on another hostage crisis.

As the concentrated furor and administration paralysis caused by the last hostage crisis testifies, the Reagan administration undoubtedly hopes the latest flurry can be contained to a few days, that Weir and the families of the remaining six hostages will sink back into oblivion after they are interviewed. If the terrorists are savvy and serious — and it appears they are both — they will make sure the issue does not fade. The administration will then be forced to deal with it.

But the hostages are only an immediate problem. If the issue fades again after Weir is no longer news or if a deal is made and the hostages are released, that will only eliminate one tiny symptom. The real problem is that the administration has no clear Middle East policy that it has consistently and persistently pursued. It has only reacted, without thought and without long-term plan.

The results have been disastrous: the American embassy in Beirut bombed twice, hundreds of Marines slaughtered while they slept, and an ignominious retreat. The real problem to be addressed is the creation of and devotion to a rational policy.

Farm Aid value will go beyond the dollars, awareness raised

"Got to get back to the land, and set my soul free..."
 — Crosby, Stills and Nash, "Woodstock."

THIS SUMMER I argued with my father over whether Americans would respond to a domestic crisis as we had the Ethiopian famine. My contention was that in our "land of opportunity" it would generally be viewed that those who weren't successful had only themselves to blame. I surmised, then, that no media event could raise the support that had been amassed for the "helpless" in Africa.

My father was much more generous, saying my cynicism was ill-founded and if a domestic crisis would occur, the American public's support for a fund-raising effort would be overwhelming. His assertions were timely, for such a crisis has culminated in Farm Aid.

Farm Aid is this Sunday's fund-raising concert for U.S. farmers, which features Willie Nelson (the project's spokesman) and some of his country music cousins. The 14-hour show is to be held in Champaign, Ill., a symbolically central location for an effort with a goal of revitalizing the workers of America's heartland.

FARM AID FOLLOWS in the furrows of the Band Aid, "We Are the World" and Live Aid successes, but plows from a more attractive angle. It adopts its predecessors' style, bringing together prominent performers and celebrating this union with a mix of musical showmanship and Good Samaritanism. Unlike the other projects, Farm Aid stays down-to-earth about its purpose: Nelson's inquisitive chats with farmers nationwide builds sincerity and adds local flavor to the cause, even though he admits Farm Aid will not solve their problems.

Farm Aid's success in meeting its goal of raising $70 million is predictable, for two reasons. The first deals with the way the fund-

The Aid projects ignore details: they offer entertainment, for which our money filters past the performers and goes to the cause. Aid events are apolitical, non-religious and unspecific, but are jubilantly pro-entertainment and pro-human.

Digressions

raiser is advertised. How many of us have quickly turned off Sally Struthers on late night TV as she pleaded for our minimum wage to save a starving child? The Aid projects ignore details: they offer entertainment, for which our money filters past the performers and goes to the cause. Aid events are apolitical, non-religious and unspecific, but are jubilantly pro-entertainment and pro-human.

Second, Farm Aid's inevitable success deals with the down-home quest to save America's roots. The project's representatives are country music stars, who usually sing about country people. And, in our technological age, both have come to embody the land itself. So while we donate our dollars, in a sense we laud both the farmer and the performer, and personally renew our dedication to the good earth.

ONE NEGATIVE side-effect of the Aid projects is the "over-and-done-with" feeling they tend to evoke. The media blitz endorses the specific event, but then is its worst enemy. After the event has passed, there is a sense that the crisis has been rectified. It's like Band Aid; once we bought the album, our part was done. Yet the problem's roots lie much deeper.

The most effective and positive results of Aid presentations, however, are not only the monetary support but the level of awareness obtained over its coverage. Band Aid made us not only consider the Ethiopian famine, but its political causes (which, I believe, has had an effect on critical thought about politics in South Africa).

In a similar way, Harry Chapin's musical pleas on the Capitol steps in Washington during the '70s sparked Jimmy Carter to create the Presidential Commission on World Hunger in 1978. Perhaps Farm Aid will pressure Congress to seriously re-examine the complicated plight of today's farmers.

Farm Aid can be labelled a Woodstock for the Age of Reagan, where well-mannered representatives constructively engage in raising money for a cause. These concerts have enormously popular elements, which intensify the harvest of donations. In solving long-term problems, "Band Aid" may be too appropriate a term. Yet, although they don't solve the whole problem, in a cause-oriented America these jingoistic Aid concerts have started a positive philanthropic trend that will endure into the next decade.

Hey, scum: I'd like to tell you ...

AH, SO MUCH to do and so little time to do it! So many things left undone, unsaid, on the bus or in my other jeans! Life is consumed by little humdrum duties that deny one the time to do that which is profound and uplifting (or mindless and sordid but feels really good).

One is left only with a feeling of wistfulness — I feel more wist

than you could shake a stick at — and must be satisfied with fading dreams that can be preserved only in writing. I'd like to share a few of these with you, because this paragraph is depressing the hell out of me, and why should I let you off easy?

I'd like to tell the person or persons unknown, unthinking, and uncivilized who stole a quilt that was on display at UI Hospitals exactly what I think of them to their face, faces or snouts. I'd have to tell them personally because if I write it, the DI won't print it (It would be something like, "You suck," only more descriptive.) The mother and son who designed and made the quilt took months to create it, but it took you only minutes, I imagine, to steal it. Congratulations — you're scum, but at least you're quick scum. I hope your own mother finds out you do sleazy things like this, and I imagine she will. News travels fast in a kennel.

I'd like to throw a blanket — a scratchy one — over the guys who have been running around town as naked, although not quite as intelligent, as jaybirds. Their possible motivations puzzle me; the only two I can think of are pretty stupid, so they must apply.

First, they're hot. Iowa in the summer being what it is, I can sympathize with that. So buy a fan. Or, second, they think they're clever. Personally, I've always found it difficult to be clever and naked at the same time. Maybe they and the slime who stole that quilt should get together and exchange tactics. One could steal things in public and they could both get naked in private. That way, they'd both get everything they deserve.

I'd like to sneak up on somebody who contends South Africa is "reforming" apartheid and reform a pie on his or her face. That vile racist regime is "reforming" apartheid like this country "reformed" slavery by instituting segregation. The whites there used to treat the blacks a little worse than cattle, but now they're treating them a little worse than dogs, and they get their little feelings hurt when their progressive intentions are misunderstood. If you don't buy your dog a leash or keep it tied up, that means you don't really love it, right?

I'd like to ask people who think AIDS is God's vengeance on gays if crib death is God's vengeance on babies.

Readers are no fans of Hawk fans' conduct

To the Editor:

Saturday, Sept. 14, 1985, will go down for me as a gray day in the history of Hawkeye football, because of our fans. Not all the fans mind you — not even a majority — but a large number nonetheless. For the first time, I felt ashamed to be an Iowa fan.

It's no surprise to any football fan in the nation that Iowa has developed a class program. Hayden Fry has come to Iowa and has made us winners once again. Unfortunately, our fan development is still in its infancy. Many fans come to the game with the mistaken notion that they need to provide additional entertainment.

Take for instance the juvenile action of keeping the football away from the ballboys after each and every extra point. Once or twice this could be considered amusing, but after that it's a distraction. I'm sure the ballboys don't find it amusing and I'm certain that the athletic department isn't laughing either. The end result is obvious — nets will be purchased for behind each goal post and raised after each touchdown to keep the balls from flying into the crowd. Guess who will pay for those nets and the personnel to operate them — you'll find the answer on each ticket next fall where it says "Price of Admission."

Another distraction to me, as a fan, is the "wave". I admit that the first few times you see it, it is an amazing sight. But do we have to do it forever? At the very least the wave should never be in progress while the ball is in play or when Iowa has the ball. It is distracting to the teams playing and to the fans trying to watch the game.

Last, and perhaps most disturbing, are the vulgar cheers that have become commonplace recently. It used to be they were reserved for those times when the officials made what was perceived by the fans as a bad call. But lately, and last Saturday in particular, it seemed large sections of the stands would chant profanities for no apparent reason. I know how I felt and I can only surmise how Hayden and his team must have felt. They do everything they can to present a class act each Saturday afternoon and what do they find in the stands but a bunch of real "bush leaguers" trying to upstage them.

So what is our plan of action? It seems to me the ball is now in the hands of true Hawkeye fans. A few years ago when we were plagued by the senseless destruction of goal posts, it was the fans, not the security force, who put an end to it. If we are to be standing at the next Iowa home game let's make it to cheer on our Hawk-eyes or to put an end to these senseless juvenile distractions. Let's give our football team a chance to be as proud of us as we are of them.

To the Editor:

On Saturday, Sept. 14, my family and I attended the UI and Drake University football game. It was once again an enjoyable afternoon of football and frolics. However, I left the stadium somewhat annoyed by the new cheer of the student sections. The one I am referring to is the west and north stands shouting "fuck you, fuck you" at each other. The old "tastes great, less filling" was quaint. Why it degenerated into obscenities is beyond my comprehension. Mr. Elliot, Mr. Fry and the rest of the athletic staff have put together a class program. It is an embarrassment to the UI community as a whole and to the alumni and friends of the UI if this deviant activity continues. It was an embarrassment to me to try to explain these actions to my children, ages 6 and 8. I would hope that in the future the students of the great UI would reflect the class of the athletic department and cheer in a boisterous but not obscene manner.

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the majority of the UI students attending the Iowa-Drake game! They may have established a new low for crowd behavior. Not satisfied with watching the game, a few turned to the idiotic activity of throwing beer cans and tossing co-eds headlong into bleachers or other fans. They really outdid themselves when they managed to shout obscenities in unison and with sufficient volume so even fans listening on radio could readily evaluate the limited intellect of at least five or six thousand students attending the UI. They were able to prove their education has advanced them from "dog and cat" to four letter expletives.

I have always been proud of the enthusiastic support the Iowa fans have given the Hawks, but I must admit that for several hours last Saturday, I did not want to be identified as a Hawk fan. It seems the prerequisite to having an enjoyable afternoon at an Iowa game is to drink to the point of idiocy and then resort to all kind of inane, offensive and unthinking behavior.

I am less than optimistic that those students engaging in these junior high antics have the ability to realize how this behavior reflects upon themselves, the UI and the football team. But, who knows? Perhaps before the next game, they may read and know more than what they've found on restroom walls.

UI classes become 'worldly'

By Lewis Wayne Greene
Staff Writer

The UI will begin beaming classes throughout the state, the nation and possibly the world this spring when its new satellite connection facility is completed.

UI Associate Dean of Academic Affairs Fredrick Woodard said the new $565,000 facility located on the UI Oakdale Campus will be a valuable asset to the UI and the state. "It will allow us to transmit to sites anywhere in the continental United States and beyond," Woodard said.

From a special classroom in the Lindquist Center, UI classes will be relayed to the Oakdale transmitting station and from there to the world, Woodard said. Businesses from as near as Cedar Rapids and as far as Indonesia and Taiwan have already expressed an interest in using the UI "satellite uplink" to continue their employees' educations after college, Woodard added.

UI Vice President for Educational Development and Research Duane Spriestersbach said the new facilities will be a valuable tool in the UI's continuing effort to foster new business and industry in the state.

"ANYTIME THAT WE expand our options for delivering educational programming off-campus, that is clearly a plus with many businesses," Spriestersbach said.

A spokesman for one area business said he believes the UI uplink will help recruit new industries to Iowa, as well as assisting established firms to recruit the most qualified personnel.

"It (the UI uplink) really emanated from mutual interest between the university and industry to have this sort of thing," said Toby Hoopes, public relations manager for the Rockwell International Corporation's facility in Cedar Rapids.

Hoopes said Rockwell has 47 engineers enrolled in UI courses being taught at their plant. When the uplink facility is operational, UI faculty members will be able to teach Rockwell employees without having to leave campus.

WOODARD SAID THE uplink facility will literally move the classroom to wherever the students are, providing teachers and students with the ability to interact despite vast distances.

The fees businesses will have to pay for the service haven't been worked out yet, Woodard said, but they will include normal tuition plus a user fee to cover the UI's operation costs.

Although Woodard said the facility "certainly seems to be a really exciting opportunity for the university," he added there are still details to be worked out.

"The more I learn (about the uplink system), the more I discover I have to learn," said Woodard.

S. Africans recount police abuse

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — White opposition lawmakers Thursday heard a litany of horror stories about shootings and beatings by police in Cape Town's mixed-race suburbs during recent racial unrest.

The lawmakers toured the Valhalla Park and Elsie's River suburbs, interviewing people about alleged police brutality during clashes on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Later, a senior police official arrived to investigate the allegations. Gen. Dirk Genis met for 45 minutes with Colin Eglin, a white opposition member of Parliament.

In a statement, Eglin said he had heard "detailed accounts of ordinary people, men, women and children, being (whipped) viciously for no other reason than being outside in the street. We have seen evidence of a jackboot mentality at its worst."

THE ALLEGATIONS of brutality stemmed from rioting that left three people dead, including a 10-year-old boy. Police said the deaths occurred when officers fired into a mob throwing stones and gasoline bombs. The violence was triggered by a government decision to close schools because of racial unrest.

Daniel Stone told the lawmakers police shot his daughter, Emily January, 28, in the abdomen, then kicked her as she lay bleeding on the ground.

"I begged them to let me get near to her," Stone said. "There were about 30 policemen. The blacks were all dressed in khaki overalls with sjamboks (whips) while the whites had guns.

"When I approached them, they were kicking her as she lay bleeding on the ground," he said. "They told me not to come nearer and fired at me. I had to jump over a wall."

Stone said his daughter remained hospitalized Thursday.

ELDERLY WOMEN showed the lawmakers welts on their backs, arms and breasts and said they were beaten for no reason.

Martin Fernandez said he and his pregnant daughter, Tessa, were attacked with whips by five officers when they left their home. He said police beat his daughter about the arms and back when she tried to help him.

One resident said Ivan Langenhoven, 21, was shot to death outside his mother's home.

"People were running away from the police who were beating everyone in sight," she said. "Ivan was also running, but one armed colored policeman told him to stand still. He did so and the policeman lowered his gun. "Then a white policeman came along and shot Ivan at close range in the hip. The boy lay there in his own blood for about an hour. When help arrived, he was already dead," she said.

Another resident, John Bagley, said he saw police laugh as they beat a young woman in the road outside his home. "I have never seen such brutality in my life," Bagley said. "I don't call them police, I call them thugs."

THE FOUR-MINUTE earthquake was felt as far away as ment with good, stable wages and benefits."

Watson said technical corporations are "fine, but high-tech alone is not enough. My position is not to put all the eggs in a high-tech basket. A lot of people in Iowa City don't hold educational degrees for high-tech positions. If we attract these types of businesses, we're ignoring the needs of the poor in Iowa City."

Watson currently serves as chairman of the Johnson County Mental Health/Mental Retardation Advisory Board, and has spent four years on the board.

"I have a broad range of experience in private industry and human services," he said. "I've been involved with the government on both the federal and state levels, working with grants and that sort of thing."

HE SAID IMPROVED cooperation and coordination between the city, county, state and United Way will ensure that poor, elderly, disabled and disadvantaged citizens "will have adequate assistance with basic needs and opportunity for full participation in our community."

Federal cutbacks in transit services will create funding problems for next year's council, Watson said, and the city "must try to maintain the current level of services and the current level of fares in spite of reduction of federal funds."

He suggested coordinating Iowa City Transit services with Coralville, other Johnson County communities and the UI.

Watson, who has lived in Iowa City for 13 years, said the city should adopt measures of ensuring the "efficiency and effectiveness" of protection services.

"FIRE AND POLICE services are the most basic and vital of city services," said Watson. He said the departments will require continued evaluation to meet community needs.

Buckley

Turning his attention toward the resumption of nuclear arms reduction talks in Geneva, Buckley said, "We cannot assume that in approaching the bargaining table, that the two negotiating bodies have the same interests in common... because we don't."

"We have some interests in common, but not the ones that occupy the front pages," added Buckley.

The National Review editor also stressed that U.S. negotiators must be careful not to make concessions to the Soviets at the bargaining table.

"I have lived forty years as a free man in a free country and I acknowledge my debt to our ability to sustain a credible nuclear Watson said the upkeep of public works also needs council attention.

"We must search for more cost-efficient methods to finance and provide for the growth and replacement of our streets, sewers, water and solid waste systems and facilities," said Watson.

Watson's campaign strategy includes talking to people, organizations and civic groups and handing out leaflets.

"I don't have organizations backing me and don't know if I will ask," said Watson. "I'm running as an individual representing the district and the city."

Watson said his professional, educational and civic experience gives him "a broad perspective on our community and its problems."

HIS CITY INVOLVEMENT also includes working on the Iowa City Ad Hoc Committee — Human Rights Ordinance, the Economic Development Committee and the Small Business Council. He is currently chairman of the Human Resources Committee and a member of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce.

Watson was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and graduated in 1963 from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., with a B.A. degree in romance languages. In 1972 he received an M.B.A. degree from the University of Virginia.

His wife Susanne works for both the Episcopal Chaplain at the UI and at St. Francis' Church. They have four children, including Carrie, a freshman at the UI; John, Jr., a student at Kirkwood Community College High School; Matthew, a second-grader at Hoover Elementary School and Andrew, who is in kindergarten at Hoover.

If necessary, the primary for council elections will be held Oct. 15. The general election will be held Nov. 5. The deadline for filing for a council position is Sept. 26.

arsenal to guarantee us that peace and that freedom," said Buckley.

DURING A BRIEF press conference before his speech, Buckley said the financial predicament many farmers find themselves in today is a "result of the unrealistic market growth they banked on earlier in this decade."

"The government does have to be held responsible for a lot of this," said Buckley, who admitted he is not an expert on agricultural issues. "But we must remember that the government has, in the past, spent hopelessly to better conditions for the farmer."

Hawk defense plays vital role in win

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

Seventh-rated Massachusetts became the Iowa field hockey team's first victim Thursday of its Eastern road trip against three top 20 teams.

The No. 2 Hawkeyes used key saves and good defensive play against the Minutemen's penalty corner to gain the 2-0 victory.

The Iowa defense, which is young this season, was led by defensive backs Deb Robertson and Patti Wanner and sweeper Kim Herrmann, Iowa Coach

Field Hockey

Judith Davidson said. "Deb did a super job of marking," Davidson said. "Patti came up with a lot of key interceptions and Kim did very well at sweeper."

DAVIDSON WENT WITH sophomore Karen Napolitano at goalie for the game. Napolitano posted the shutout with three saves in each half. The Iowa coach said Napolitano did a good job of defending the goal. Davidson added either Napolitano or Joan Behrends could have handled the goalie position for the Hawkeyes.

The two teams battled each other evenly in the first half. Iowa took eight shots on goal and Massachusetts made six attempts. Neither team was able to score in the half.

In the second half, Iowa took the lead off of a penalty corner at the 11 minute, 15 second mark. Marcia Pankratz stopped the ball on the penalty corner and passed it right to RosAnna Salcido. Salcido blasted the ball past Massachusetts' goalie to score.

SALCIDO AND Pankratz then teamed up to score Iowa's second goal with 4:30 left in the game. Salcido took a break away ball down the right side of the field. The sophomore passed off to Pankratz, who lifted the ball past the goalie. With the goal, Iowa went ahead 2-0.

Davidson said Iowa's second goal took pressure off the Hawkeyes. "At anytime, we felt Massachusetts could still score," she said.

The Hawkeyes took seven shots on goal in the second half, compared to the eight shots attempted by Massachusetts.

Davidson said the Hawkeyes played well against Massachusetts, but must keep improving for their next two games. Iowa will face No. 3 New Hampshire, a team the Hawkeyes know little about, Saturday. Sunday Iowa tangles with No. 8 Connecticut.

Decision upcoming in trial of Strong

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Federal jurors were asked Thursday to decide whether Philadelphia caterer Curtis Strong was a traveling cocaine peddler for ballplayers or a scapegoat for millionaire athletes who are "destroying the spinal cord of America."

U.S. District Court Judge Gustave Diamond instructed the jury on the charges against Strong after prosecution and defense summations in the 13-day-old trial. Strong faces 14 counts of selling cocaine to baseball players in Pittsburgh between 1980 and 1984.

The nine women and three men began deliberations at 1:50 p.m. If convicted, Strong, 39, could receive a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and a $25,000 fine on each guilty verdict returned against him.

No matter what verdict jurors reach, the trial has brought a litany of devastating disclosures about drug use in the national pastime and many of its brightest talents have been implicated.

U.S. ATTORNEY J. Alan Johnson portrayed Strong, 39, as a callous dealer unconcerned about the effects of cocaine on his baseball customers.

A few minutes later, defense attorney Adam Renfro portrayed his client, a boyhood friend, as a poor, defenseless victim of big government and rich "hero-criminal" ballplayers hiding their own crimes under grants of immunity from prosecution.

The foundation of the government's case was the testimony of seven current and former ballplayers who, under immunity from prosecution, named Strong as their cocaine supplier.

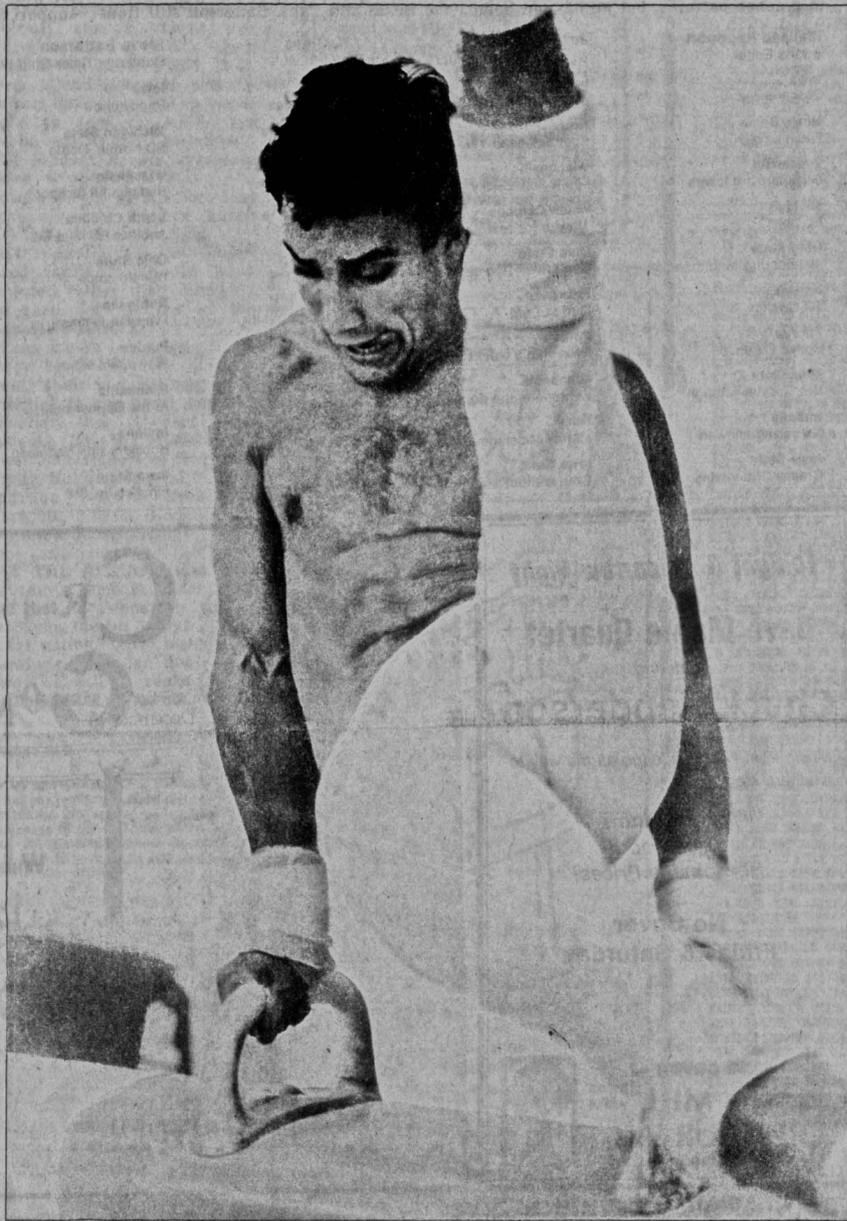

"They are far from pillars of the community," said Johnson of his famous witnesses. "They have a lot to be ashamed of."

"But who, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, was the source of those drugs? One source, I suggest to you, was Curtis Strong, the defendant in this case."

RENFROE ARGUED that the government had presented neither direct evidence nor circumstantial evidence of his client's alleged drug sales, relying instead on what he insisted was tainted testimony of cocaine users.

"He (Strong) has been responsible in everybody's mind for trying to destroy the spinal cord of America. He supposedly spoiled Chevrolet, baseball and apple pie. Get him in jail. Get rid of him."

"But is he the one responsible?" See Drugs, Page 5B

Athletic trainer accepts Arizona spot

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

Iowa athletic trainer Steve Condon has accepted a position as head basketball trainer for the Arizona Wildcats where he will join ex-Iowa Coach Lute Olson in Tucson, Ariz., beginning Oct. 1.

Condon has been on the training staff at Iowa for over four years and is presently supervisor of the department's west wing in the Recreation Building where he works with the track, baseball and softball programs.

In his first years with the department, Condon worked with the football and the basketball teams. He said, however, the chance to work with Olson and get back into basketball prompted his accepting the Arizona offer.

"I wanted to get back into basketball or football," Condon said, adding that, "the opportunity to work with Lute and his staff is something I'm really looking forward to. I know he's going to be a great person to work for."

ALTHOUGH CONDON is getting back into basketball he will not serve that sport exclusively and said he expects to possibly help with football and some spring sports when the cage season ends.

Condon was not connected with the basketball program during Olson's stint in Iowa City, but he said he did consider Olson a friend.

"I didn't know (Olson) real well," Condon said. "I'd see him occasionally and we were friends, but we didn't spend a lot of time together. We had a real nice talk while I was (in Tucson) for an interview."

Condon said he is not directly familiar with Olson's team, but has followed the program's two-year resurrection from the depths of the Pacific Ten Conference.

"I don't know a whole lot about (the basketball program) other than what Lute has been able to do in a short time," Condon said. "I know they've got an outstanding track program and their baseball (program) is one of the best in the country."

CONDON BECAME a candidate for the job when Iowa's head basketball trainer John Streif backed out. Olson telephoned Streif "to see if he would be interested or if anyone else would be," Condon said. Streif was not interested, but referred Olson to Condon.

"They called me to come down for an interview," Condon said. Shortly after he returned to Iowa City he was offered the job.

The decision to join the Wildcat staff did not come easily for Condon, who was brought up in Iowa City.

"It was a decision I had mixed emotions about," he said. "The opportunity to come (to Iowa)

Songs pulled after obscenities chant

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

In the wake of obscenity complaints following last Saturday's Iowa-Drake football game, the UI Marching Band director has now pulled two of the bands more popular songs from its play list.

The director of the UI Marching Band, Morgan Jones, said the songs "In Heaven There Is No Beer" and "Cocaine" have been scrapped for now.

"I've just had too much public pressure," he said. "I've received six letters or phone calls on 'Cocaine,' which he said is a lot considering there is usually little direct feedback on the band's choice of songs.

"I have strong feelings the thing (complaints) with 'Cocaine' came up because of the other chants," he said, referring to the obscene chants by some students at last Saturday's game.

HE SAID HE understands some people are offended by the songs, and although they may be taking their anger at the obscenities from last Saturday out on the band, he said he is in a position where public opinion matters greatly.

While "Cocaine" is gone for good, Jones said the beer song may come back in "three or four games."

"I understand why some people object to the songs," said Assistant Marching Band Director

David Woodley. But these songs seemed to be a good way to get "thirty to forty thousand people involved."

Students "relate to 'Cocaine,'" Woodley said. "Not because of what it stands for, but because they can all yell 'cocaine' at the end."

Jones said the reason these songs became popular with the students in the beginning was because they are songs which the crowd enjoyed, and could participate with.

The beer song "is just an old tune that everybody knows," he said. "It was started by the Alumni Band" over six years ago.

"People put too much into it," junior trumpet player Greg Burger said. "It's just there for the enjoyment of students."

He said he's going to miss playing those songs. "They're really fun to play, and the crowd seems to enjoy them a lot."

Browns acquire receiver Jefferson

BEREA, Ohio (UPI) — The Cleveland Browns, trying to fill a desperate need at wide receiver, Thursday acquired veteran John Jefferson from Green Bay.

Jefferson, who ended a holdout Wednesday when he finally agreed to terms, is expected to join the Browns in time for Friday's workout at Baldwin-Wallace College.

In return, the Packers received an undisclosed 1987 draft choice and the rights to tackle Tom Robison, who plays for New Jersey in the U.S. Football League.

Browns spokesman Kevin Byrne said Jefferson would undergo a physical at the Cleveland Clinic prior to coming to practice. Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer said it was "very unlikely" that Jefferson would play in Dallas this Sunday, but said the eight-year receiver from Arizona State would "immediately begin studying our plays."

Jefferson, San Diego's first-round pick in 1978, was dealt after three seasons to Green Bay in 1981 for wide receiver Aundra Thompson and three draft picks.

Jefferson did not match the statistics he had with the Chargers, where he caught 199 passes for 3,431 yards and 36 touchdowns in three years.

In four years with the Packers, Jefferson snared 149 passes, 2,240 yards and 11 TD's.

Becker handles Curren in rematch

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — In a rematch of this year's Wimbledon finalists, Boris Becker defeated Kevin Curren 6-7 (8-6), 7-6 (7-2), 6-3 Wednesday to claim the Tulsa Tennis Challenge.

The hard-serving Curren, playing with a sprained left ankle, allowed only two points off his serve in the first set.

In the tiebreaker Becker, who became the newest tennis sensation this summer when he beat Curren at Wimbledon, took a 4-1 edge and then led 6-3. Curren held serve to trail 6-5, and Becker double-faulted twice and Curren unleashed an ace for the win.

The second set also went to a tiebreaker. With Becker leading 3-0, Curren scored two quick points but Becker clinched the triumph with two service breaks on the final points.

The turn came in the fourth game of the third set as Becker took a 3-1 lead. The 17-year-old West German fired two service aces after a deuce for the win.

Curren nearly broke Becker in the seventh game, holding three break points, but Becker countered with two strong passing shots to save the game. Becker held serve into the ninth game for the 6-3 win.

Top runners set for Michigan Avenue run

CHICAGO (UPI) — Runners John Walker, Steve Scott and Jim Spivey will lead the men's race in the Michigan Avenue Mile but promoters said Thursday Olympic gold medalist Maricica Puica of Romania may be forced to withdraw from the women's race.

Puica, 1984 Olympic gold medalist in the 3,000 meters, was called home suddenly Thursday by the Romanian Athletic Federation, leaving her status in Sunday's race uncertain.

"She's listed as probable," said promoter Dave McGuigan. "The Romanian government pushed to have her here and we had confirmation in writing."

Puica, who was supposed to be the star of the women's field in the Michigan Mile, has beaten Mary Decker-Slaney in six of their last eight meetings. She was the winner of the Olympic 3,000-meter race which featured the famed Decker-Zola Budd collision.

Hawks stumble in first round

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Iowa started things off on the wrong foot at the Aztec Classic in San Diego Thursday night, losing to California-Berkeley 17-15, 15-11, and 15-9.

"It was a great match," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said. "Every game was close right down to the end."

Back in the line-up for the Hawkeyes was star setter Kathy Griesheim, but even that wasn't enough to offset a very strong Golden Bear attack. "They are a really tough team," Stewart said. "They kept the ball in play very well and didn't make a lot of mistakes."

"It's always tough to get used to a new setter in the line-up," Stewart said. "One of the biggest problems is the rest of the team doesn't know how to react to the different style of passing."

CALIFORNIA-BERKLEY jumped to early leads in both of the first two games, but Iowa was able to fight back in both instances. In the first game, senior co-captain Linda Gensing was serving for the match at 15-14, but she committed a service error that proved to be the difference in the game.

A similar situation happened in the second game. This time, however, the Hawkeyes weren't able to get completely back in the contest.

"I thought we had a good chance of winning both games," Stewart said, "but they just kept coming up with big plays that made the difference."

On The Line

Hold on to your hats everybody, he is back. Former DI Sports Editor Steve Batterson has kindly consented to take some time off from his job as Staff Writer for the Quad-City Times to serve as guest picker for the DI On The Line contest.

Batterson, who ruled the sports pages of the DI with an iron hand for so many years (How long was it Steve?) has now moved on to greener pastures, but he has not been totally forgotten. He may have forgotten us, though. Batterson is now hobnobbing with the movers and shakers of the sports world. Why just recently Batterson lunched with one Harry Caray, semi-famed announcer for the once and future great (Ha Ha) Chicago Cubs. Who paid for that lunch anyway, Steve?

But in between trips to Chicago to cover the Bears and Cubs, Batterson still finds time to stay on top of the happenings in the world of college football. Seriously, though, none of us can remember if Batterson ever won the intra-staff contest. We doubt it though.

We would like to thank Mama's, located at 5 South Dubuque, for providing the prize for this week's contest. Without their support this contest wouldn't be possible.

New 'barbaric' fans spoil Hawk games

A new type of Hawkeye fan emerged at last Saturday's Iowa-Drake football game.

The new type wasn't content to simply watch the fourth-rated Hawkeyes rout the Bulldogs, 58-0. It almost call the alternative forms of entertainment barbaric, fully-equipped with drunken brawls, obscene name-calling, the throwing of ketchup-soaked hot dogs, cups of pop, and wine flasks, while transforming the football into a "hot potato" and tossing it around the stadium, while spitting on a ball shagger as he pryed the football loose from a spectator, and finally, turning the ever-popular Lite Beer "less filling - great taste" chant into a chant of vulgar obscenities.

Even after attending Iowa football games for a number of years, I must admit I have never seen a more humiliating display of juvenility.

UNFORTUNATELY, the 66,135 spectators in Kinnick Stadium were not the only ones subjected to the crude behavior of these fans.

WMT Radio, which not only reaches the State of Iowa but surrounding states as well, broadcast the game live on their AM station. The vulgar third-quarter chant was clearly audible on the air.

After realizing what was being said, WMT sports commentators Ron Gonder and Mike Reilly were forced to turn down the crowd microphone and stumbled to explain what was happening. Reilly finally resigned and summed-up the activity as an "example of a higher education."

Sadly enough, Reilly should have said elementary education. If I believed activities of that type were examples of a higher education at Iowa, I would immediately cancel my registration.

THE FACT IS, the extraneous activities that occurred at last week's game do not belong in Iowa football. They serve no purpose other than to degrade the integrity of the UI.

Iowa has not always had a winning football program. In fact, between 1961 and 1981 the Hawkeyes failed to finish a season with a winning record. Yet, during this 20-year period, the average attendance at each of Iowa's home games was around 40,000 people.

The traditional fan attended

games to watch the action and support the Hawkeyes in hopes of seeing them finish the season with just one more win than loss.

Now, after four consecutive winning seasons and four bowl berths, the Hawkeyes are winners. Could it be that some Iowa football fans have gotten so accustomed to winning that they must find other means of entertainment during the games?

IT SEEMS FOR SOME, Iowa football games have become more of a social event than an athletic contest. A Hawkeye football season ticket has become a status symbol — like a ticket to the Queen's Ball. Thus, fewer attend games to actually support their team, but rather to make an appearance — to see and be seen by other socialites.

UI Student Senate President Steve Grubbs attributes the crowd's antics to the fact that some students became bored with the action on the field.

If this was the case, the uninterested students should have departed rather than disrupted the game for the rest of the supportive patrons.

Fans are an important part of every intercollegiate athletic event. Their positive support is essential to the team and the university they represent. The students, above all, should be the finest ambassadors of their university. Building a solid athletic tradition takes a number of years, but to break it down takes only a few disruptive fans.

AT THE BEGINNING of last Saturday's game the announcer said that Iowa fans are "known for having the No. 1 football fans in the nation." After last week's showing, I wonder how much lower we will be ranked when the new ratings come out.

Holmes looks ahead to life void of boxing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — As much as he once ached to be champion, Larry Holmes now yearns to be an ex-boxer.

Holmes can't wait to score the two victories he needs to surpass Rocky Marciano's best-ever heavyweight record of 49-0.

He can make it 49-0 by defeating light heavyweight champ Michael Spinks Saturday night. If successful, he wants to fight again by the end of the year and then relax.

"I've been doing this (fighting) for 18 years," said Holmes, 35, the International Boxing Federation heavyweight champ. "I've neglected my wife (Diane) for 10 years; I'm going to chase her for the next 10 years.

"I want to sit at ringside and commentate. I want to watch these young fighters; it would give me just as much pleasure to sit back with a beer in my hand and say 'I used to do that.'"

Holmes still trains hard and disciplines himself sternly, although it's obvious he's tiring of the whole routine. His workouts were closed to the public this week for the first time in his career.

"I JUST WANTED to keep people out," he explained. "People are always making me stand outside, talking to them, taking pictures with them, asking for autographs.

"Then I get hit and they say, 'Ooh, Larry got hit.' Then I hit somebody, they say 'Ooh, Larry hurt that guy.'"

"I'm me, and I'm going to be me to the day I die. I don't have to pretend to be anybody else. You may think I'm arrogant and yes, I'm arrogant."

Spinks, 27-0, has been anything but arrogant in preparing for Holmes. He's actually been shy, especially when the subject of weight is brought up.

Spinks has refused to divulge his weight, saying that he hasn't been on a scale in a month and he weighed 190 then.

The mystery will be resolved at the weigh-in Friday at 2 p.m.

"I've been working to feel comfortable and not worry about how much I weigh," he said.

SPINKS, who is trying to become the first light heavyweight champion to capture the heavyweight title, won't even flatly predict a victory Saturday night, claiming he doesn't like to talk up his fights. He says his attitude will change once he enters the ring.

"It's a thing I have about boxing," he said. "I wholeheartedly love the sport, but it's what people think of guys in the sport that kills me.

"I consider myself a boxer, not a fighter. I do my thing in the ring. I'll do what I have to do. In terms I use, it's 'kill or be killed.'"

Spinks will probably give away between 25 and 40 pounds against Holmes. He hopes being six years younger will compensate for being lighter, but Holmes says there's no way.

"I haven't taken him lightly at all," Holmes said. "I've trained every day, did my homework, disciplined myself. I'm 35 and people say I'm old but when I fight it's like I'm 21."

Two other fights are on Saturday night's card at the 11,192-seat outdoor arena at the Riviera Hotel.

Cyclones need sharp passing

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Iowa State Coach Jim Criner says the Cyclones' passing attack will have to be sharp Saturday against a physical Vanderbilt team that he says deserves more credit than it's getting.

Vanderbilt enters Saturday's 1:30 p.m. (CDT) game with a 1-1-0 record. The Commodores defeated Tennessee-Chattanooga, 7-0, in their opener and lost to Kansas, 42-16, last Saturday.

"Vanderbilt is a better team than that (Kansas) score and they're very physical up front," Criner said.

"We've got to do a good job of throwing the ball against them otherwise we end up playing right into their hands," he said.

Criner's squad won its opener last week against Utah State, 10-3. The Cyclones are a 2 point favorite Saturday. The only other time Vanderbilt and Iowa State have met was in 1983, when Vandy won 29-26.

"We made enough mistakes for a season," says Iowa State Coach Jim Criner in reference to last Saturday's Utah State game. "The key thing for us is that we eliminate the problems that plagued us last weekend and we become a much, much better football team."

VANDERBILT'S STARTING quarterback Mark Wracher has been lost for the season because of a broken hip, but Criner said that won't make much of a difference in Saturday's game.

Freshman Tim Richardson will assume the signal-calling duties for the visitors. He completed five of 13 passes for 68 yards in the loss to Kansas while his backup, freshman John Gromos, hit on five of six passes for 56 yards.

"I was impressed with the poise both of those youngsters showed in the Kansas game," Criner said. "Both of them moved the ball when they were in the game. They did a good job."

Carl Woods, who has 88 yards in 26 attempts, is Vanderbilt's top running back. Everette Crawford, a sophomore, has 75 yards in 13 carries while tight end Jim Popp leads the team in receptions with 15 for 110 yards.

CRINER SAID the elimination of mistakes is the key for Iowa State against the Commodores. Iowa State lost four fumbles and was intercepted twice against Utah State last week.

"We made enough mistakes for a season," he said. "The key thing for us is that we eliminate the problems that plagued us last weekend and we become a much, much better football team."

"If our players can go out and play with the same aggression and play very, very hard, but eliminate those mistakes, that's the key for us this weekend," he said.

Andrew Jackson and Brian Reffner will be the only new faces in the Iowa State lineup Saturday. Jackson, a junior college transfer, will replace senior Al Watson at tailback and Reffner, also a JC transfer, gets the nod over Rick Frank as Iowa State's punter.

JACKSON PICKED UP 25 yards in 17 attempts in the Cyclones' season-opening victory over Utah State, thereby earning a shot at the starting tailback position. Watson was held to no net yards in seven carries and didn't play in the second half. Jackson also contributed to Iowa State's passing game with four receptions for 30 yards.

Hawkeyes

left end Richard Pryor and right end Bruce Gear, who was injured during the first defensive series last Saturday, will be healthy for Saturday's contest. "We're going to take a positive attitude and say they're going to play Saturday," Fry said.

On the offensive side of the ball, however, Fry has a different sort of predicament. One he terms as "a real good problem to have."

Senior Fred Bush and sophomore David Hudson are both vying for the starting fullback position. "We have Fred and Hudson on the same line (on the depth chart) as No. 1, but because of experience, Fred will start," Fry said.

There is a similar situation at quarterback. With Chuck Long starting, Fry believes he has one of the best back-up quarterbacks in the country in Mark Vlasic. Fry would like to give Jay Hess and Chuck Hartlieb more playing time, but the Hawkeye coach keeps Long's statistics in mind.

"I'd love to give them (Hess and Hartlieb) an opportunity to play," Fry said. "The pecking order won't change until one of those two beat out Mark. He's a strong second quarterback."

"I'm walking a tightrope in regards to Chuck's statistics," he continued. "I can't curtail him so he's not among the leaders in the nation. I keep close tabs with the press box during games (about Long's statistics), but at the same time, I have to give full priority to the game."

was a great one for me. We have an excellent program here and to be able to come back to a job like that in my home town with all my friends and family was a good thing. "EVERYBODY HERE in the department is close. It's a real family atmosphere and I'm going to miss that."

Condon, who is married and has two daughters, is a graduate of Northwest Missouri State where he played football and basketball.

He received his masters degree from Iowa in 1978, and then worked for three years at West Point military academy before returning to Iowa City.

Drugs

Is he the one destroying the spinal cord of America?

"No, ladies and gentlemen, it is the ballplayers, the managers, the owners who have all this money, who want to use him as a scapegoat so they can wash it (drug use) under the rug. Get rid of him. Put him in jail, and let's go play ball."

Renfro ripped apart the character of each ballplayer witness and mocked Cincinnati Reds star Dave Parker. "What manner of man is this, with his $2,000 alligator shoes, his $25,000 watch, his diamonds and gold on each hand..."

STRONG WAS THE first of seven defendants accused of selling drugs to ballplayers in Pittsburgh to stand trial. Testimony in the trial of a second defendant, Robert McCue, 38, of Upper St. Clair, Pa., began Thursday in another courtroom.

Dale Berra, former Pittsburgh Pirate who now plays for the Yankees, was the first witness called to the stand. Berra earlier testified in the Strong trial.

Berra testified Thursday he made four cocaine purchases in 1984 from defendant Robert McCue as testimony opened in the second of baseball's cocaine-trafficking trials.

Berra, the former Pirate whose testimony figured prominently in the trial of Curtis Strong, the first drug defendant, detailed his purchases in Pittsburgh on April 16, May 4 and Sept. 27.

Berra explained that he recalled the May 4th date "because it was my wife's (then his girlfriend) birthday. Our game at home with the Dodgers was rained out. We went to the bar at about 6 o'clock and she was a little upset because I didn't buy her a present."

He said he made several other purchases from McCue, 38, a Penn State graduate and a former employee of the Easter Seals Society, but did not know the dates. McCue is charged with 13 counts of selling cocaine to ballplayers.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY John E.

Nickloff said in his opening statement to the jury of 10 women and two men that the FBI twice attempted and failed to entrap McCue.

Nickloff said convicted drug dealer Kevin Connolly was directed by the FBI to approach McCue but did not succeed in making a purchase.

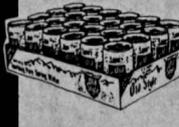

During a recess, Nickloff added that the FBI did not record this attempt. "They don't report the negatives," he stated.

Assistant U.S. Attorney A. Elliot McLean said former Pirate John Milner would also be called to testify against McCue. Milner, now retired, also testified against Strong.

'Once Upon A Time In America': epic exposé of loyalty of rivals

By Jeff Hamilton
Staff Writer

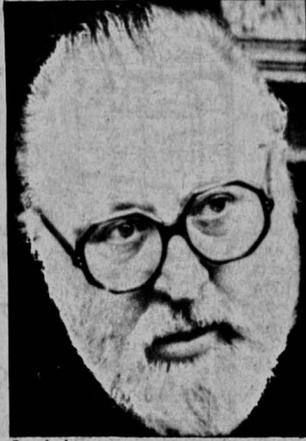

THE RESURRECTED, uncut, three-hour-and-forty-minute version of Sergio Leone's Once Upon A Time In America opens in an opium den in Chinatown, New York. David "Noodles" Aronson, one of four friends heading a Jewish Mafia gang, is getting high there because it's like prison — it allows him to forget about time. High, he hears a phone ring, and he reaches again for the pipe, hoping the dope which brought on the sound will make it stop. But someone is coming. The phone is picked up, Noodles hits off the pipe, but the phone keeps ringing.

Noodles escapes from the men coming to kill him, but on the way back to Moe's place, where the gang headquarters, Noodles sees all three of his friends dead on the street, burned in an explosion they caused escaping the police. Moe — their boyhood friend and the holder of a key that opens a Grand Central Station locker in which the gang's savings is stashed — has been badly beaten. He tells Noodles where the key is, but when Noodles gets to the locker, the money is gone. Noodles boards a train to Buffalo.

THE STORY FLASHES forward 30 years, to Noodles arriving back in New York, in 1968, at the age of 63. He stays with Moe, his return unexplained until he goes into Moe's bathroom, stands on the toilet rim, removes a chipped piece of paneling from the wall, and gazes with a kind of penetrating wonder into the tavern warehouse — where a young girl with long dark hair is dancing: Leone has flashed back forty odd years, and the young Noodles is staring at the girl.

Throughout Once Upon A Time In America, memories, expressed both in dialogue and visual composition, bump into one another. Full of flash forwards and flashbacks as serenely startling as a gift, America seems like the work of a director who has so mastered narrative form that he now has only to play with it to learn something new — for discovery to happen.

Like all Leone's English language films, Once Upon A Time In America's materials are those of pop myth, those of — now, given our sophistication with them — comedy. Its epic structure is putatively the history of social reform in the early days of industrial capitalism, told in terms of a love triangle and specifically, the relationship between two boyhood friends who become rivals.

But like most romantics, Leone's political vision is fatuous, and it's male bonding that interests him. (Movies love this story: It's provided the basis for Oshima's The Ceremony, Bertolucci's 1900, Beatty's Reds, the Star Wars trilogy and countless others.) Their loyalty toward each other is tested by the physical (the woman) and finally transcends the political.

We may think there is no way to play this now but as comedy, and indeed, Leone's other American epics have both loved and satirized American myths. But maybe because Leone got the actors he wanted, or maybe because he just got caught up in the formal possibilities, Once Upon A Time In America plays right on the edge of comedy, rarely spilling over. In The Good, the Bad and the Ugly, form itself was the joke; Leone heightened his own narrative intrusions so we could laugh with delight at his mastery. In this movie he lets the emotions intuit for him, and he almost never slips.

Particularly in the early scenes, which depict the formation of the gang, the shot compositions are so beautifully right, and the camera movements so romantic you may gasp; and Leone sweeps us along through what's mostly exposition. When Robert De Niro, as Noodles, and James Woods, as Max, become adult rivals, we become as nostalgic as they are about their childhood.

It is, however, a pleasure to see De Niro back again (after several per-versely empty performances) in a role with some subtlety and tension. His weight gain is good for him, I think; he may never be as menacing as he was in Mean Streets and Taxi Driver, but he's all there now. And James Woods' technical proficiency as Max matches De Niro's more intuitive approach nicely; we understand that loyalty is all that exists between these two.

More problematic is Elizabeth McGovern as Ann, the woman between them. Her performance as an old woman is ludicrous (Leone makes her up like he knows it), and the movie's whole conception of her is wildly contradictory and ultimately sexist. After giving her a character in the first section, the movie-makers abandon it, and ask her to pay off on plot expectations that are more formal than convincing. (It doesn't help McGovern that the actress who plays her as a child is spectacularly more beautiful than she is, and a more interesting actress, too.) But Leone regains his footing for the closing flashback, which is enigmatic in a doped-up, satisfying way.

Two years ago I saw Once Upon A Time In America in its shorter form, and the job the Ladd Company did of cutting the film can only be described as brutal. They cut 90 minutes and edited the narrative chronologically, completely eviscerating Leone's form, which is his art. So if you saw the cut version, give this, Leone's version, a try. But don't miss it anyway.

Celebrity fund-raiser helps AIDS sufferers

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Stricken by fear of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome epidemic and grief for its victims, including Rock Hudson, Hollywood responded Thursday night with a star-packed outpouring of compassion and financial support.

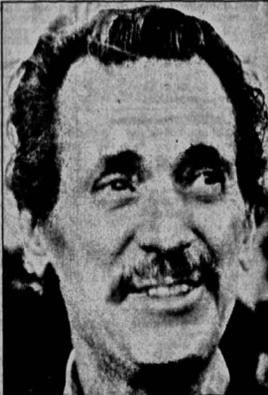

A stream of superstars answering a call from Elizabeth Taylor, a close friend of Hudson's who took up the cause following the dramatic announcement that he was suffering from the dreaded disease, signed on to participate in a gala fund-raising dinner and show called "Celebration of Life."

More than 2,700 tickets were sold for $250 and $500, with auctions and other fund-raising activities expected to raise much more money and collect more than $1 million total for AIDS Project Los Angeles, which provides support to AIDS sufferers.

THE PROGRAM INCLUDED statements from President Ronald Reagan and Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, an award to former first lady Betty Ford, remarks by Linda Evans, Shirley MacLaine and Burt Reynolds, a pledge pitch by Marlo Thomas and Phil Donahue, and entertainment by an all-star line-up including Rod Stewart, Cyndi Lauper, Sammy Davis Jr., Carol Burnett and Diahann Carroll.

The emotional highlight was planned for the end of the evening, when Burt Lancaster was to read a message from Hudson.

"I regret the circumstances of which you are all aware that prevent me from being with you tonight," the actor said in the statement released Wednesday. "But please be sure that I am with you in thought and spirit." Hudson, who is resting at home following several weeks of hospitalization, said he had been told his AIDS disclosure had helped make the evening a sell-out, has focused attention on the disease and led to more research, funding and understanding.

"I AM NOT HAPPY that I am sick," the actor said. "I am not happy that I have AIDS. But if that is helping others, I can at least know that my own misfortune has had some positive worth," Hudson said.

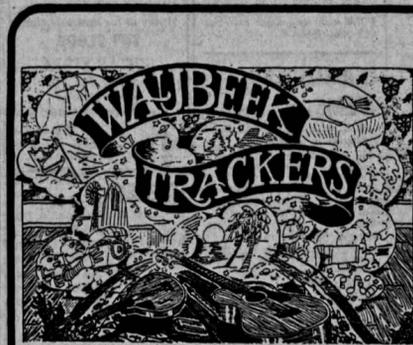

The benefit came days after the Screen Actors Guild, suggesting the fear of AIDS may cause job discrimination against homosexual performers, requested a meeting with representatives of movie and television producers to discuss the issue.

Mime and clown artist Bob Berky plays Hancher

Mime and clown Bob Berky, who's been described as Charlie Chaplin, Marcel Marceau, Danny Kaye, Red Skelton and Robin Williams all rolled into one, will perform at 3 p.m. Sept. 29 in Hancher Auditorium as the first event in Hancher's 1985-86 "Sunday at 3 Series."

A 1983 Obie Award winner for his Off-Broadway show, Foolsfire, Berky gained national attention for his performance at President Reagan's inaugural and his two specials for the Public Broadcasting Service. His performances in Canada, Hong Kong, Australia, Mexico and Europe, where he won the coveted "Fringe First" award, have helped establish him as a mime with an international reputation, and prompted London's Daily Telegraph to call him "one of the great mimes in the world today."

AS A SOLO MIME and clown artist, Berky has been performing since 1976. His act combines mime, clowning, juggling and stand-up comedy, and incorporates a considerable amount of audience participation.

"It's important that we laugh, and not superficially," Berky said, drawing on his extensive research on the psychological and social functions of humor. "Laughter needs to come from a very deep place. What I'm looking for is the kind of laughter that moves the whole person."

Berky began his career by studying French horn at the Eastman School of Music, but, as a favor to a friend, he joined a mime production. He found the experience so rewarding that he changed his career direction. He studied with the American Mime Theatre and Tony Montanaro, a contemporary of Marceau. He is also a founding member of the Celebration Mime Theatre, which has toured the United States and Canada.

WHEN BERKY LEFT the Celebration company to work as a soloist, his research in humor led to the development of a very personal and singular concept of clowning, which became an increasingly prominent part of his performances. This non-traditional approach to mime has led some commentators to herald him as the founder of a distinctly American style of mime.

Berky's ability to entertain and charm audiences has been traced to his unusual talent for audience participation. His ability to cultivate an intimate audience rapport and to evoke sympathy by getting to the heart of everyday situations, creates a link of affection between Berky and his audience. "The mark of a truly great clown is his ability to be both loved and laughed at," the Washington Post observed. "Bob Berky displayed that ability to perfection."

TICKETS FOR the Sept. 29 performance of Bob Berky are priced $8, $6 and $4 for the general public; $6, $4 and $2 for UI students; and $4, $3 and $2 for people 18 and under when accompanied by an adult.

Tickets to Bob Berky can also be purchased at a substantial discount as part of Hancher's "Sunday at 3" Series. Subsequent events in the series are "The Nutcracker" performed by the Des Moines Ballet, Dec. 1; The Flying Karamazov Brothers, Feb. 2; and the Mantovani Orchestra, May 4.

For individual or series tickets, contact the Hancher box office. Hancher box office is open 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1-3 p.m. Sunday.

Theatre's premiere goes well

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

THE AUDIENCE sits on risers spread along both lengths of the floor-level stage. The set is simple: A commons area is represented by a beige carpet, a table and chairs, and a nurse's station painted the same shade of institutional antiseptic green as the chairs; on each side, extending slightly into the concave center of the risers, is a hospital bed and dresser representing a patient's room.

The theater goes black. The lights return to reveal the nursing home's elderly patients seated and doing... nothing, except for one patient whose contrasting motion rivets audience attention. Using a walker, she struggles slowly and painfully forward. There is a terrible feeling of proximity — not only in the nearness of audience and performer, but in the déjà vu of having witnessed this moment with some frail relative, stranger or friend. We know both the urge to help and the fear that such help can never be enough.

SEVERAL SUCH powerfully affecting moments are provided by Home Stretch, the premiere performance in University Theatres' brand new, technologically up-to-date Theatre A, whose inaugural use was distinguished by a remarkable absence of noticeable technical glitches. The play itself, by Playwrights Workshop member Craig Childress, is less evenly efficient; it wobbles back and forth from the genuine to the contrived, from the tragic to the maudlin, from verbal wit to bathroom scrawl.

The play is at its best in developing the romance of aging opposites Clinton and Glenda, the former a gruff, coarse, cynical gambler; the latter demure, dignified, respectable. That their first confrontations will result in love is, as comedies go, inevitable. But their initial tentative courtship is endearingly human, and the ensuing love affair is wisely stripped of any condescension to the elderly.

Instead Childress is condescending in his depiction of the middle-aged, who are treated as uniformly inconsiderate, puritanical stuffed shirts. Clinton's son Louis excuses his failures to visit by pleading the pressures of his pet supply business. The nurse summons Glenda's daughter and Louis to whine that their parents are "consorting," which sends both children into a tizzy. Their subsequent behavior, including references to "dirty old men," "restraining walls," "dogs in heat" and "castration," generates audience laughter, but at the expense of all credibility. The scene concludes with the nurse, who has summoned the conference, suggesting a solution that she could have implemented without the children's input or awareness.

THE BEST COMIC moments in the play arose as much from character as from situation. One such scene occurs when Clinton tries to justify his gambling to the cautious Glenda. He launches into a "life is a gamble" speech, complete with an illustration about risking money on the chance a store-bought cantaloupe won't be rotten inside — to which she replies, "That's why I buy my cantaloupe already sliced."

The weaker moments provide situation comedy at the level to which it might descend if unmonitored by network censors. Adult humor is fine — a scene involving a randy nurse's aide, her more restrained jock boyfriend, and the proper use of a diaphragm is terrific. But the convention of having the very old or very young casually toss off obscenities as a major source of humor is getting more tiresome every time the pattern repeats, and the scatological humor also included in Home Stretch seems infinitely more juvenile than adult.

THE CAST IS strong, led by the buoyant performances of married guest stars Charles Kebbe and Sally Gracie; their onstage chemistry serves as a catalyst for developing audience pleasure. Tammy Jo Kreiter is splendid as the libidinous, giggling and gum-cracking nurse's aide. Guest star Norris Shimabuku, Jeanne Osborn and Michael Lawson are all adept as nursing home residents, with Lawson creating a particularly strong impression as the silent, almost complete invalid Arnie.

One of the disadvantages of the nursing home setting is that the sense of boredom and inactivity necessary to establish an accurate mood work against the sense of movement and crisis necessary to sustain a play. Director Wallace Chappell manages to achieve a reasonable balance between these two extremes.

If the play is not an instant classic, it is nevertheless a considerable accomplishment for a young writer still developing his craft — and for a veteran stage couple who have been practicing their craft for decades.

Remaining performances of Home Stretch will be Sept. 19-20 and 25-28 at 8 p.m. and Sept. 22 and 29 at 3 p.m.

RULE BOOK

New rules noticeable for fans

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

COLLEGE FOOTBALL is always evolving. Players are getting bigger and stronger, competition is getting stiffer and rules are always being changed and interpreted in different ways.

Scrutinizing college football rules is a 365-day job for the NCAA rules committee. Each year the committee cranks out 30 to 40 different rules for the upcoming season. Some affect the concept of the game, while others are merely administrative changes.

For this season, the NCAA committee made over 40 new rules. A lot of the changes are trivial and won't be noticeable in a game, said Gene Calhoun, the Big Ten supervisor of officials. For example, NFL logos can't be used in any way by college teams.

The most important rule change this season concerns blocking. Players are now allowed to use their hands in an outstretched position when blocking. The palms must be opened to prevent holding.

"WE ALLOW players to have their arms fully extended when blocking as long as they are within the frame of the players' bodies," Calhoun said.

Before, there was one type of blocking for passing plays and another type for running plays. But players were using open hands to block on both types of plays, Calhoun said, so the new rule legitimizes what was already being done on the field.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry also believes the blocking rule is the most important of the new rules. Fry expects the new rule to cut down on the number of injuries in a game. "The more players using their hands in blocking, the less likely they are to injure their shoulders and heads," he said.

Most of the changes that are made from year to year deal with players' safety. "Ninety percent of the changes in the last five to 10 years have been directed toward making the game safer for the participants," Calhoun said. "But like any other sport there are still risks involved. You can't take all the risk out of football."

FRY EXPECTS even more changes will be made in the game that involve safety.

In the past a team would receive a 15-yard penalty if a player hit an opponent when he was out of bounds. This season, the team committing the foul will be assessed a 15-yard penalty and a first down for the other team.

Also, if a player grabs or pulls an opponent's face mask, the penalty is now a first down for the offensive team.

These rules were changed to make the penalties stiffer to deter players from breaking them, Calhoun said.

"When a foul happens that involves a player's safety, the team that did the fouling is going to get the worst penalty in the book," Calhoun said.

OTHER RULE changes for this season will be noticeable to football fans.

When the football is kicked into the end zone on a free kick, the ball won't be brought out to the 35 yard line anymore. Instead the ball will be placed on the 20 yard line, as it was in seasons preceding the 1984 season.

Calhoun said bringing the ball out to the 35 yard line was a one-year experiment which failed. "The (1984) rule put a penalty on the guy who is a real good kicker," he added.

The NCAA rules committee had considered moving the kickoff back to the 35 yard line instead. But the NCAA committee likes to maintain a few differences between it and professional football, Calhoun said.

Football fans can scream and holler as much as they want this season, but it won't have an adverse affect on the quarterback.

If an official stops the clock because of crowd noise, there will be no 25-second clock used when the ball is next put into play, Calhoun said. "The team will have as much time as it needs to get the play off."

Fans also shouldn't be surprised to see the kicking team advancing the ball if the ball bounces back behind the line of scrimmage this season. "Last year, if the kicking team touched the ball (after it bounced back behind the line of scrimmage), the ball was dead," Calhoun said.

Hawks in the 'cards' for fans

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

IN THE GOOD old days it would take both a Hank Aaron and a Lou Brock baseball card to get someone to trade his Mickey Mantle card.

Now, it would probably take all three of those cards to get some loyal Hawkeye fan to trade in his Chuck Long or Ronnie Harmon bubble gum card.

Iowa football bubble gum cards are one of the latest novelties sold by the Hawk Shop to football fans.

The bubble gum cards, which picture Iowa football fan's favorite Hawkeyes on them, were sold for the first time last season. The cards were so popular that the Hawk Shop has ordered them again this season.

Unlike baseball cards, which come 10 to a package and include a piece of pink bubble gum, there are 60 cards in each Iowa football package, but no gum. The package of cards would be too expensive if gum was included, Dickie Van Meter, merchandising and licensing director for the Hawk Shop, said.

FOR $4 AN Iowa fan gets the entire set of Hawkeye bubble gum cards. The package includes pictures of the top players on the football team, the coaches, Kinnick Stadium, the Iowa cheerleaders or Herky the Hawk.

Last season the cards were sold in four different sets instead of one package. The Hawk Shop decided to sell them all together because "everyone ended up buying all the packs," Van Meter said.

The Iowa bubble gum cards were the brainchild of weight training Coach Bill Derrich and were designed to promote the players on the football team.

"They were designed as trading cards and they're like the popular baseball cards with biographical and statistical information on the back of each card," Van Meter said.

There are only a limited number of the football cards sold each year. Van Meter expects the cards will be worth something some day. "Anything that's printed as a limited edition could become a collector's item."

THE HAWK SHOP'S intention when they printed the football bubble gum cards was for people to buy the cards and then trade them. "But people decided they want all of them to keep," Van Meter said.

Getting a picture of each player on the football team would be awfully expensive for Iowa fans. Van Meter sees the bubble gum cards as an inexpensive alternative.

In addition, football fans get pictures of a lot of players on the team instead of just the standouts on the team. The Hawk Shop does sell posters with players on them, but there are only posters of Long, Harmon and Larry Station.

The football bubble gum cards can only be bought at the Hawk Shop, located at Carver Hawkeye Arena or at the stands the Hawk Shop sets up outside Kinnick Stadium on game days.

The Hawk Shop sold approximately 100 sets of the football cards during the Drake game. Connie King, merchandising assistant, said she expects more will be sold at the next home games.

"They're pretty popular, but it takes a while for everyone to catch on that we got them," King said. "I imagine by the next few games that we will sell more and more."

OFF THE FIELD

UI fans flood tailgating space

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

TAILGATING BEFORE an Iowa game has become almost as much of a tradition as the football contest itself.

Fans flood the available fields and parking lots outside Kinnick stadium to drink, eat, and get into the football spirit.

"Life should be a continuous tailgate. Wake up, cook-out, drink beer, socialize—what could be better?" Iowa student John Crowley said.

Some tailgaters came out early before Iowa's opener against Drake to get a jump on the rest of the crowd. They found a better place to park, cooler weather, and ended up getting a little drunker than the rest.

"We came out at eight this morning. Last year we came out at seven every game. You gotta get up when its cold and wake yourself up," Todd Niggeling said.

THE 8 A.M. TAILGATERS were among the first to descend upon the Field House Field Saturday morning. Two hours later, when the rest of crowd started showing up, the field became a sea of cars, coolers, and grills.

"We came out here around eight. There were only two rows of cars. Around ten everyone started showing up," Iowa sophomore Greg Socha said.

Niggeling and Socha were among the veteran tailgaters on the Field House Field, but there were also the rookies.

"This is my first tailgater. I only went to one game last year. It's not too bad but I'm not awake yet," senior Mike Dunitz said.

The Field House Field is the partying spot for only part of the tailgaters. Everywhere a person turns, they run into people tailgating. Even up to the gates of Kinnick Stadium, hamburgers are grilling and beer is being poured.

THERE WERE out-of-town fans who found a spot so close to the stadium and so obvious that other tailgaters miss it.

"We park in this same spot near the stadium every year. No one has figured out this spot yet," Jerry McCoy of Bettendorf said. "We enjoy the atmosphere out here before the game."

Carol Morgan, also of Bettendorf, has the obvious reason for tailgating, "To get drunker," she said.

Some partying football fans don't show up near Kinnick until closer to kick-off time. They prefer walking around, socializing and not having to worry about finding a place to park.

For instance, Sharon Roberts of Iowa City, and her sister Sandra, decided to party with friends at their home Saturday, then go out to the stadium, walk around, and see friends.

"It's fun to walk around and see what other people are doing," Sharon Roberts said. "I saw a lot of people I knew and ended up partying with them."

Ron Crawford of Campus Security noticed tailgaters near Kinnick a little earlier than the rest. "People started tailgating a little after 7 a.m. It's been pretty calm, normal compared to other years with no problems. It's a typical Iowa Saturday."

Griffin powers Husky defense

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

MAKING A NAME for his school is senior linebacker Tim Griffin's main concern as he heads into action Saturday against the heavily-favored Iowa Hawkeyes.

Griffin, at least, has made a name for himself at Northern Illinois. He has been a starter ever since he walked on from Aurora West High School in Aurora, Ill. Griffin, who was red-shirted his first year, is now a fifth-year senior and is heading into his last year of organized football.

"This is it for me as far as football goes," Griffin said. "It's been a real good experience for me and I just hope I leave football on a winning note."

Making a name for himself was very important to Griffin. He had to battle a broken leg his senior year at Aurora. "I got hurt my first game of the season," Griffin said. "After that I spent the rest of the year just getting ready to try out for the Northern Illinois squad."

"I TALKED WITH the coaches, and they encouraged me to walk on," Griffin said. "I did have some similar offers from Missouri and Colorado, but I wanted to stay closer to home if I could."

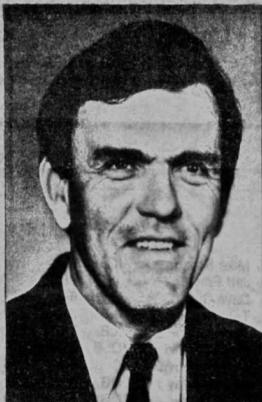

"He's done real well for us," Northern Illinois Coach Jerry Pettibone said of his tri-captain. "He plays hard every down and really uses his head on the field. It's good to have a player like him on your team because he's a leader. The rest of the team really looks to him for guidance on and off the field."

"I just try to play every game to win," Griffin said. "That's the type of attitude our whole team has. We don't care who we are playing, we just want to play as good as we possibly can."

Griffin was a three-sport athlete in high school, playing baseball and wrestling as well as football.

Jerry Pettibone

"I'm really excited about playing this weekend," says Tim Griffin, an inside linebacker for Northern Illinois. "A game like this really builds up a program. We like to play as many big schools as we can to build respect of our team as well as our conference on a national basis."

HOWEVER, HE WAS forced to give up his other two sports with his injury, deciding to concentrate solely on football. "I was just an average baseball player and wrestler," Griffin said. "After the injury, I knew I had to work on rehabilitating myself in order to have any kind of chance to play football again."

For Griffin, playing a team like Iowa is a definite plus. "I'm really excited about playing this weekend," Griffin said. "A game like this really builds up a program. We like to play as many big schools as we can to build respect of our team as well as our conference on a national basis." Northern Illinois is coming off a defeat by another Big Ten school, losing to Wisconsin, 38-17. They will be playing a third Big Ten team the week following in Northwestern, which is just what Griffin and the rest of the team want.

"The exposure is really good for us," Griffin said, "and if we win it's a real plus."

GRIFFIN IS CURRENTLY leading his squad in tackles with 316, tallying 27 in the last two games. In 1983 and 1984, he ranked 10th and 11th in the Mid-American Conference with 116 and 129 tackles respectively. He also won the Defensive Hitter of the Year award for 1984.

Griffin is much stronger and quicker than his five foot, nine inch 203-pound frame would lead one to believe. He can bench press 315 and runs a 4.8 second 40-yard dash.

"One thing I like about him, is he plays a lot bigger than his size," Sports Information Director Mike Korcek said. "He's obviously no Larry Station, but he's a real competitor and has been good for our team."

Although he does have some personal goals, Griffin's primary interests are team-oriented. "Of course I'd like to be all-American," Griffin said, "but what I'd really like is another shot at the California Bowl."

OTHER THAN THE Rose Bowl, the California Bowl is the only other bowl game where the winners of certain conferences automatically attend. In this particular bowl, the winner of the Mid-American Conference plays the winner of the Pacific Coast Conference. Griffin's last appearance ended with a 20-13 win over Cal-State Fullerton.

"We have too much experience not to be in the race for the conference championship," Griffin said. "Off hand I know that there are five returning five-year men, not to mention the number of four-year seniors. I really think we're in for a good year."

"It's been great for me here at Northern Illinois," Griffin said. "I know I'll miss it, but it's really been fun watching our program improve over the years. Coach Pettibone is only in his first year but he has some great credentials and I think he'll really be able to up-grade the program. He was voted the number one recruiter in the nation by Sports Illustrated."

"I know Northern Illinois will continue to get better," Griffin said. "I'm just glad I got the chance to play football again."

NIU challenges top programs

By Brad Zimanek
Staff Writer

IN THE PAST few years Northern Illinois has taken major steps to upgrade its football program. To accomplish this, they have set up present and future non-conference schedules that compare favorably with any other colleges nationwide.

This year the Huskies play three Big Ten teams, in Wisconsin, Iowa and Northwestern on the road, and a few years down the line Northern Illinois will try to continue contests with the Big Ten schools, but will also add schools from the Big Eight, the Southeastern Conference, major independents and one of the national academies.

"There are several advantages. The guarantees you receive for additional revenues, the opportunities to be able to play additional universities with that stature, interest as far as TV revenues..." Jerry Ippoliti, an associate athletic director at Northern Illinois said.

"We have had a great deal more coverage now from Chicago media because of the schedules that we are playing now. We have more interest from television cable companies and live networks and, of course, that helps our recruiting."

NEXT YEAR NORTHERN Illinois again has Wisconsin on its schedule, but the Huskies also play West Virginia and the Miami Hurricanes, who were the national champions two years ago. In 1987 Northern Illinois has a contest with Miami at Soldier's Field in Chicago.

Other schools that Northern Illinois has scheduled for future dates are Tulsa, Kansas State, Florida, Florida State and one of the academy schools.

"Hopefully there will be some more interaction with Big Ten teams," Jerry Pettibone, the Northern Illinois Coach said. "I think it's good for us because of the location of our campus here (DeKalb, Ill., 60 miles west of downtown Chicago). We are in Big Ten territory and it's a natural thing for Northern Illinois to play Big Ten opponents."

"If you look at our overall schedule we have Big Eight opponents, Big Ten, major independents, Southeast (Southeastern Conference) Missouri Valley and the academies," Ippoliti said. "That's the direction we're going and we're going to continue to do so."

NORTHERN ILLINOIS' scheduling concerns started in 1983

when former Coach Bill Mallory guided the Huskies to a 10-2 record and a 20-13 California Bowl victory over Cal-State Fullerton.

In posting that 10-2 record, Northern Illinois took the Mid-American Athletic Conference title and scored an upset victory, 37-34, over Kansas in its season opener.

"The schedule was in the makings the time that I was in there. My last year we had Kansas and Wisconsin and then Northwestern and Wisconsin coming on the schedule," Mallory, now the Indiana Coach said.

"There had been some talk about playing Iowa but I wasn't exactly crazy about playing all three. That was not my idea at that time and I can't say that I was for that, but the people there felt that was the direction that they wanted to go. I feel to play teams of that sort is good and that was the way to go with that program because we had come along pretty well with it."

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS that can result in scheduling such a strong non-conference schedule is that the Huskies may be beaten up by the time the Mid-American Athletic Conference schedule gets underway.

That could cost Northern Illinois because its best opportunity to go to a bowl game is by winning the conference title and going up against the Pacific Coast Athletic Association Champion in the California Bowl.

"The Mid-American doesn't get the exposure that I feel it deserves because it certainly plays quality football. I thought (the schedule) got us ready, but you have to hope you come out of a too-tough, non-conference schedule without any injury problems," Mallory said.

"The difference is certainly the depth (between the Mid-American and other conferences) and I didn't want to over-schedule either. I felt one or two (tough non-conference games) were good but I wasn't very excited about scheduling three."

Pettibone believes the tough early-season schedule teaches his team how to play early so that they will be ready for the conference match-ups.

"When you can play well against teams like Iowa, Northwestern and Wisconsin, your players gain a lot of confidence. When you can play well against that top-flight competition, you can gain the confidence that you need to play well against other people," Pettibone said.

former Coach Bill Mallory led the Huskies to a 10-2 record and a 20-13 California victory over Cal-State Fullerton.

During that 10-2 record, Illinois took the Mid-American Athletic Conference and scored an upset victory over Kansas in its season.

The schedule was in the making at the time that I was in there. Last year we had Kansas and Wisconsin and then Northwest-Wisconsin coming on the scene," Mallory, now the Coach said.

"I had been some talk about Iowa but I wasn't exactly about playing all three. It is not my idea at that time. I can't say that I was for that, but people there felt that was the action that they wanted to see. I'd like to play teams of that good and that was the way I thought that program because it came along pretty well."

OF THE PROBLEMS that result in scheduling such a non-conference schedule, the Huskies may be up by the time the Mid-American Athletic Conference gets underway.

That could cost Northern Illinois because its best opportunity to go to a bowl game is by winning the conference title and going up against the Pacific Coast Athletic Association Champion in the California Bowl.

"The Mid-American doesn't get the exposure that I feel it deserves because it certainly plays quality football. I thought (the schedule) got us ready, but you have to hope you come out of a too-tough, non-conference schedule without any injury problems," Mallory said.

"The difference is certainly the depth (between the Mid-American and other conferences) and I didn't want to over-schedule either. I felt one or two (tough non-conference games) were good but I wasn't very excited about scheduling three."

Pettibone believes the tough early-season schedule teaches his team how to play early so that they will be ready for the conference match-ups.

"When you can play well against teams like Iowa, Northwestern and Wisconsin, your players gain a lot of confidence. When you can play well against that top-flight competition, you can gain the confidence that you need to play well against other people," Pettibone said.

Incumbent Dickson

By Gretchen Norman
Staff Writer

Incumbent Iowa City Councilor Kate Dickson announced today her intention to run for a second four-year term, citing human services and economic development as key issues.

Dickson, 64, 1215 Ashley Drive, said her past achievements as an at-large councilor and her personal enjoyment of serving on the council prompted her to campaign for another term.

"I think I have accomplished the tasks I set out to do in my first term, and I believe the people of Iowa City agree with me," said Dickson. "It has been a personally rewarding experience and I hope to continue to do good work for the people of Iowa City."

"By now I have experience and I'm aware of the issues rearing ahead," said Dickson. "I think my past record shows the public agrees with the way I voted in the past."

DICKSON SAID across-the-board cuts from the federal government have caused financial hardships on human service programs. She said the per-revenue sharing funds the city received have decreased while costs have increased.

"The cuts come as a heavy blow," she said. "We must think of ways to increase revenue and tighten the budget. We must put our money where it counts."

Dickson added the council will continue to finance human service programs currently receiving

Implant study

By Earl Johnston III
Staff Writer

The UI College of Medicine this month received a $2.6 million federal grant to continue its research with cochlear electrode hearing implants — devices that allow deaf people to hear certain sounds.

The five-year grant, awarded by the National Institute of Neurological Communicative Disorders and Stroke of the National Institutes of Health, will allow UI researchers to compare different types of implants in use today.

"The University of Iowa is the only place a center has been established for the comparison of these devices," said Bruce Gantz, associate professor of otolaryngology and principal investigator of the UI research.

"IT'S DIFFICULT to know what is going on with all of the implants," said Gantz. "I explained there are nine different types of implants available but no criteria to determine which type of device is best for a particular patient."

"There have been no comprehensive studies because that regard people have been riding their own horse," said Brian McCabe, professor and head of the UI otolaryngology department.

Gantz said the UI department
