LASA rejects rise in tuition, calls for freeze

By Kent Schuelke
Staff Writer

Buoyed by the opposition to tuition increases two members of the state Board of Regents voiced last week, the UI Liberal Arts Student Association voted Tuesday night to call for a tuition freeze at Iowa's three state universities next year.

LASA is the first UI student group that has decided not to support a United Students of Iowa proposal calling for the regents to increase tuition across-the-board by 5 percent.

Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey has recommended the board raise tuition by 6.5 percent across-the-board next year.

Although executives from the UI Student Senate and the UI Collegiate Associations Council have voiced support for the USI proposal, neither group has formally voted on the issue.

LASA PRESIDENT Mike Reck,

who is a member of the CAC, said he was shocked to learn Monday that its executives were supporting USI when "we never voted for it."

"The position taken by the student senate, the USI and the executives of CAC is ridiculous" when two regents have already said they oppose any tuition increases, said Reck.

"I think other officers have to look at this (LASA'S bill) and take a position, and not follow blindly what USI has to say," said Reck. "It's time for students to show the student senate that students do not support tuition increases."

He said that UI students have "suffered exorbitant increases in tuition in the last couple years" and that it was time the state began properly funding education.

"We want to tell the state that it's time they started supporting their institutions, that's what 'state institution' means," said Reck.

USI Campus Director Mike Connell said Tuesday he continues to support his group's 5 percent proposed tuition hike.

"A freeze would be nice, but it would also be great if Russia and the U.S. were best friends. We've got to be pragmatic enough to understand that we are in a bad way," said Connell.

CAC President Jeff Devitt said while he would like to see a tuition freeze, he believes CAC should support USI's proposal because it is a more reasonable approach.

"I certainly stick by our recommendation for a 5 percent (increase) if there has to be one," said Devitt.

Noting that tuition rates have increased by about 50 percent since 1981, LASA member Gordon Fischer said, "I'd like to call for an absolute tuition freeze."

"They (students) are saying enough is enough; we need a

Russia, U.S. trade plans to cut arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan said Tuesday he is willing to accept any mutual reduction in the superpowers' nuclear arsenals as a step toward "total elimination" of them, but the Soviets have made no formal proposal for a cut.

Unofficial reports Tuesday indicated the Soviet Union is ready to propose a 40 percent cut in nuclear arms in exchange for an end to U.S. research on a controversial system designed to intercept Soviet missiles, popularly known as Star Wars. Reagan, however, said he has only heard that such an offer might be in the works.

Without addressing the Star Wars issue, Reagan added, "We're perfectly prepared to take whatever mutual reduction we can get."

WHITE HOUSE and congressional sources said Tuesday the Kremlin has floated a proposal linking Star Wars to a 40 percent overall cut in nuclear arsenals, with no more than 60 percent of the remaining forces concentrated in any of the three legs of the nuclear "triad" — bombers and submarine-launched or land-based missiles.

Reagan has repeatedly ruled out halting research on his Strategic Defense Initiative, the official name for his proposed missile defense system. The Soviets have portrayed the program as a bid by the United States for military superiority.

Speaking with reporters as he left Knoxville, Tenn., Reagan said some of his comments on arrival apparently had been misunderstood as rejecting a 40 percent cut as insufficient.

"When I made a remark that I wish it were more," Reagan said, "I was doing that in the context of the fact that both Mr. (Mikhail) See Arms, Page 8A

Schools get quality software

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

A committee that oversees purchases of computer software for area schools has made the Iowa City Community School District a leader in computer education.

"I would have to rank Iowa City at the top in terms of computer use from a district standpoint," said Bob van Deusen, instructional computing consultant for Iowa City and four larger school districts, including Linn-Mar, Cedar Rapids, Marion and College Community.

Iowa City's program is one of the best in the state because there is a software review committee that makes software selection "a formal process," said van Deusen, who demonstrates computers and software in 60 schools in eastern Iowa for use in classroom settings. Software commonly comes in the form of a

This is the second of a series examining the use of computers in Iowa City schools.

"floppy disc" — a plastic disk encoded with information that is inserted into a computer terminal.

In some other districts, selection may be made by instructors or principals in individual buildings.

BUT IN IOWA CITY, concurrent with the formation of the Micro-Computer Advisory Committee in the 1982-83 school year, an adjunct software review and selection committee was formed of media specialists, teachers and district administrative personnel.

"We have a real good situation in Iowa City," said Denise Rehmke, media specialist at South East Junior High.

The software committee outlines goals and objectives for acquiring software, Rehmke said, adding "when you work with goals and objectives you make better decisions."

Jean Donham, chairwoman of the Micro-Computer Advisory Committee, said "the majority of school districts in the country" don't have software selection committees. Many of those that have such committees "make mistakes," such as buying software "sight unseen" without considering its compatibility with existing curriculum.

CHOOSING HIGH QUALITY, compatible software has become a complicated process, Donham said. Much more of it is available than before and determining its quality is a very time-consuming process.

Many school districts "run into trouble" buying their computers before the software, said Dean Crocker, director of Statewide Computer Services.

Iowa ranks in the top two to three states in the nation in terms of density of micro-computers in districts, he said, but the "real hero" behind getting computer-assisted learning into the classroom is the district's decision to study how computers could enhance learning while looking at the existing curriculum, then selecting the appropriate software for those needs, Crocker said.

BEFORE A PROGRAM is used in Iowa City classrooms, content and relevance to curricular needs must be evaluated, Donham said. See Computers, Page 8A

All nuclear arms illegal in Iowa City

By Gretchen Norman
Staff Writer

Iowa City is officially nuclear weapons free.

The Iowa City Council passed the Nuclear Weapons Free Iowa City ordinance 5-1 Tuesday, making the city the first in the state to ban nuclear weapons by law.

The ordinance, which received its third and final council approval, "is very important, because this is a fraction of the movement to ban nuclear war," said Palmer Howard, a member of Physicians for Social Responsibility — who promoted the measure.

"Local citizens have more voice in their own community than in the state, the nation and the world," he said. "I commend the courage of the mayor and the city council. I hope the ordinance will be a sign for many others to follow."

JOE HANSEN, campaign manager for the Nuclear Weapons Free Iowa City group, also commended the council for taking a stand on the ordinance.

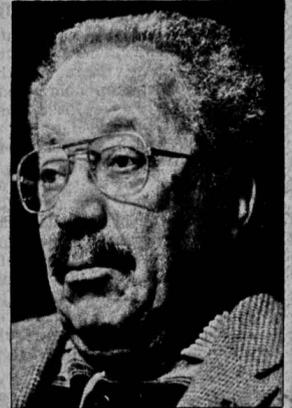

"I feel our city council, our elected officials, are doing a good job voting for the issues," he said. "I think upon adopting the measure, the community of Iowa City is adopting its priorities. It says to the community and to the world that we want to say no to the arms race and yes to addressing human needs."

The new ordinance prohibits "the development, production, deployment, launching, maintenance or storage of nuclear weapons" in Iowa City. Violators will be fined $500.

Councilor George Strait said the vote sends a "moral statement" to the community, and makes Iowa City the 101st city in the nation to pass such an ordinance.

"It's a fine symbolic gesture," said Strait.

Councilors have stated earlier that the ordinance is worded to vaguely to be enforceable, but was supported to send a message to others.

"I HOPE IT'S taken seriously and I hope it's contagious with other communities here in Iowa," said Councilor Kate Dickson. No other Iowa cities have passed a nuclear weapons free ordinance.

The only dissenting vote Tuesday was cast by Councilor Ernest Zuber, who has said the ordinance is unenforceable and is "something the entire public should be voting on." Councilor William Ambrisco, who was absent from the meeting, has also opposed the ordinance in the past.

Hansen said the group will continue to work on nuclear free issues, even though the measure is now law.

"The next thing is an educational campaign regarding the issue, so people know what it is," said Hansen. The group plans to begin an informational clearinghouse with leaflets and a speakers bureau, which will also help urge other Iowa cities to become nuclear free.

Freedman appoints first UI ombudsman

UI International Relations Professor Anthony Sinicropi was named the UI's first ombudsman by UI President James O. Freedman during Tuesday's Faculty Senate meeting.

Explaining that the UI ombudsman will primarily be responsible for counseling students and faculty members who have complaints and grievances, UI Faculty Senate President Richard Sjolund said, "Anthony has a grasp as to what this position could be and what it should be."

Freedman promised that Sinicropi will have "very substantial independence, which is essential" in his role as the official guardian of UI ethics.

Sinicropi was the top recommendation of the Ombudsman Search Committee, which was chaired by Sjolund.

Sinicropi, who has been teaching at the UI since 1963, said he appreciates the confidence Freedman and Sjolund have expressed in his abilities, adding, "I hope I fulfill their expectations."

Higher unemployment likely

PARIS — The number of people out of work in the West is likely to rise to more than 31 million next year, with Western European countries particularly hard hit, the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development said Tuesday.

In an annual report on employment trends, the group blamed the higher jobless figures on insufficient demand and inflexible labor markets. It said there would be above-average increases in employment in Belgium, France, Ireland and Portugal, while Japan will have a jobless total of only 4.9 million, a rate of 2.5 percent. In the United States, unemployment will remain steady at 13.3 million, or 7.25 percent of the workforce.

Sri Lankan police attacked

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — The government charged Tuesday separatist Tamils used napalm and pounded a police station with mortar shells and rocket-propelled grenades in a fierce attack that injured 11 security personnel. Three guerrillas were killed.

Lt. Gen. Cyril Ranatunge had said rebels first drove a truck to the front of a police station in northern Sri Lanka and blew up the vehicle, sparking a fire that spread into the building. Moments later, rebels began a heavy bombardment of the police station, he said. Government troops were dropped by helicopter a mile from the station and managed to force the rebels to retreat, a government official said.

Iraqis bombard oil terminal

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iraqi warplanes bombarded Iran's main oil terminal Tuesday, virtually closing the key facility and raising the threat of a major escalation in the Persian Gulf war, business and diplomatic sources said.

Iraq launched the raid in defiance of Iranian President Ali Khamenei's threat two days earlier to close the Strait of Hormuz if its oil exports were halted. Oil tankers must pass through the narrow strait on their way into the Persian Gulf, the site of vital oil terminals operated by Saudi Arabia and other nations including Kuwait, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates.

Reagan is Nobel nominee

OSLO, Norway — President Reagan, New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange and Holocaust author Elie Wiesel have been nominated for the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize, the awards committee said Tuesday.

Jakob Sverdrup, secretary of the Norwegian Nobel Committee, acknowledged that the three were among 60 individuals and 39 organizations nominated for the prestigious award. Sverdrup said he received Reagan's nomination among three letters delivered to him hours before the deadline. "We cannot say who nominated Reagan or for what reason," Sverdrup said. "That is kept secret under our rules." The winner will be announced in Oslo, Oct. 11.

Two escape in jail break

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa — Authorities were searching the area near the Mount Pleasant Correctional Facility for two men who escaped from the medium security prison unit by climbing a fence early Tuesday.

David Scurr, superintendent at the correctional facility, said the two inmates were reported missing between 3:30 a.m. and 4 a.m. and were believed to still be in the Mount Pleasant area. The escapees were identified as John Scisco, 20, Dakota City, and Dwayne Nelson, 19, Troupe, Texas. Scisco, described as 5-9 and weighing 141 pounds, was serving time for burglary and theft convictions and Nelson was sent to the medium-security facility for robbery and burglary convictions. Nelson is 5-8 and weighs 135 pounds.

UI graduate survives earthquake

By Julie Eisele

The panic ended this week for the family of an Iowa City native living near Mexico City, after they received word recently that their son is alive and well.

Iowa City police told the family Monday Terry Fitzgarrald and his wife, Lupita, are safe following two earthquakes that shook the area last week and killed about 4,100 people.

The police received a call from a ham radio operator in Havre de Grace, Md., who told officials he received a call from Fitzgarrald, asking him to tell his family he was safe. Fitzgarrald is a UI graduate and works as a freelance photographer.

"He has been doing his utmost to let us know they are safe," said his mother, Phyllis Fitzgarrald, Highway

The call was the fifth she and her husband Dean received since the weekend concerning the welfare of the couple.

Fitzgarrald said she has received two calls from the U.S. State Department — the first one Friday afternoon — as well as calls from two Americans who were in Mexico during the earthquake. The calls came from individuals in California and Chicago. Terry Fitzgarrald met both men at a Mexico City airport and requested they call his family, Fitzgarrald said.

"We are very grateful for all the phone calls we've had from all over the country," she said.

UI responds to decreased funds with hiring freeze, hope for future

By Wayne Greene
Staff Writer

UI administrators said last week's reversion of state support will mean more lean times on campus this year and vowed to seek funding increases for next year at Tuesday's UI Faculty Senate meeting.

UI President James O. Freedman said the $4.8 million reversion of state support will mean the UI's general operating budget will have $3 million less this year than last.

As a result of these cutbacks, UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis said it will be necessary for the UI to freeze hiring, delay building repairs and put off equipment acquisitions this year in order to make ends meet.

By implementing a hiring freeze, Ellis said the UI should be able to avoid any layoffs, although all UI employees will have to do more work to make up for vacant positions.

Ellis added, however, there would be exceptions to the freeze for vital positions and that it would not effect faculty recruiting efforts for the future.

THE HIRING FREEZE will prevent the UI from taking advantage of gains that could have been made this year, said UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington.

These lost opportunities "might not be there when the state comes back to it in the future," added Remington.

Looking toward the future, Freedman and Remington said their highest priority will be increasing lagging faculty salaries.

"I can't think of anything more important or more serious than getting a serious academic salary program on track," said Remington.

Remington also said the lack of sufficient faculty salary increases during the last four years "puts a chill on the university."

In addition, Freedman repeated a prediction he made last week that UI faculty salaries will "almost certainly" tumble to the bottom of the Big Ten this year.

BECAUSE OTHER states are increasing their faculty salaries, Freedman said arguing the necessity of raises in excess of next year's scheduled 5.5 percent increase is "an essential case to make."

Despite the bad news facing the UI this year, Freedman also referred to positive programs that continue at the UI, saying, "I don't want you to think everything is bad news."

Referring to a report released Monday by the UI Division of Sponsored Programs that showed UI researchers had a 44 percent success rate in receiving grants, as opposed to a 24 percent national average, Freedman said, "Some very, very good things are happening here because of our faculty."

Hospitals test for Legionnaires

By Earl Johnston III
Staff Writer

UI Hospitals officials continued tests on a south-wing ward of the general hospital Tuesday in an effort to detect the presence of bacteria that causes Legionnaire's disease.

The tests began after two kidney transplant patients were diagnosed late Saturday as suffering from the disease, a form of pneumonia marked by a rising fever, chills, abdominal pains and gastrointestinal difficulties.

Since the diagnoses, one patient has stabilized and the other has improved and will be released "soon," according to hospital officials.

Michael Massanari, UI associate epidemiologist and acting chairman of the UI Infection Control Committee, said the test results from the closed wing will not be available until next week "at which time we will determine what steps to take."

Massanari said the ward will remain vacant pending the test results. The patients who were in the ward were moved Saturday to the second floor of the Carver Pavillion, he added.

LEGIONNAIRE'S DISEASE first appeared at the UI Hospitals in 1981 when nearly a dozen cases were diagnosed. Following tests that indicated the hospital's water supply was contaminated with the bacteria that causes the disease, the amount of chlorine added to the water was increased to kill the bacteria.

"It's very hard to say if we will find the bacteria in the hospital" this time, said Massanari.

"If we talk probabilities, I don't think we'll find it," he said. "Then again, I wouldn't be the least bit surprised if we do."

Massanari speculated that the two patients, who were at UI Hospitals for checkups, had the disease when they were admitted and its symptoms "manifested themselves" during the patients' stay.

MASSANARI EXPLAINED the appearance of the disease did not surprise UI Hospitals officials because "this sort of thing occurs in many hospitals."

"We already have overriding protocols, controls and measures for problems such as this," said Massanari.

Legionnaire's disease made its initial appearance in 1976 at the Pennsylvania American Legion convention at the Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia. Thirty-four people died from the disease that year.

According to Russel Currier, head of the state health department's disease prevention division, seven cases of the disease have been reported in Iowa this year.

"The important thing to remember is that the disease doesn't occur in healthy individuals," said Massanari, adding that the disease is most commonly found in elderly chronic smokers, and patients with malignancies and other infections affecting the immune system.

Union renovation plans finalized

By Tina Peterson
Freelance Writer

Despite student opposition which has lasted for more than a year, members of the Union Renovation Committee Tuesday announced the design phase of the project is over and the focus is now on the transition from the old Union design to the new.

Construction will begin in March 1986, and is expected to be completed in two years, said UI Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones.

Although student fees will pay for the original $8.5 million estimate, Union revenues are expected to pay for the project's financing, which will reach $20 million when the renovation loan is paid off in 2006. Architects have not determined the final cost of the first floor lounge renovations.

ARCHITECTS FROM Bussard and Dikis Associates plan to restore the first floor lounge to a style reminiscent of a 1925 hotel lobby. The lobby will house a meeting room and a reception room.

Other finalized plans include an addition to the building to connect the Union's old and new wings and a new main entrance built where the east patio is now located. The recreation center will move to the section which now houses the arts and crafts center. Extra pool tables from the smaller recreation center will be transferred to the Field House.

The Bijou will feature two theaters, one situated in the present location on the third floor and the other located on the first floor. The IMU Bookstore will double in size to include room for up to 16 checkout lanes and an entry designed for better traffic flow.

STUDENTS ARE objecting to the construction of the Best Seller Bookstore, designed for the sale of materials written and published at the UI, and to the lounge renovations.

According to Mike Skinner, student liaison to the renovation committee, the new bookstore will become a "Hawkshop" in five years. The new bookstore will be located on the first floor above the IMU Bookstore.

"It's a lot of money for such little improvement," said Skinner. "We've made a lot of gains on increasing student activities space, but those gains are always overshadowed by the big compromises we've had to make."

Student Sen. Craig Perrin objected to what he called a "$20 million dollar screw."

"The real winner of the Union renovation project is the food service, the union administration and the bookstore," Perrin added.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS decided the Union Station, IMU Bookstore, Career Placement, Conference and Institutes, Iowa House, Bijou and the Wheelroom will remain in operation during construction. The IMU Bookstore will not have an indoor entrance during construction. The Wheelroom will temporarily move to an upper floor, and the Conference and Institutes offices will occupy 16 rooms in the Iowa House.

Committee members, however, still need to work out additional details including where student organization offices will be located. According to Lisa Palmer, chair of the committee, "There's no place for student organizations to go during the transition."

Originally, a number of the facilities were to be transferred into the old College of Law building, but that plan was rejected by several organizations.

The committee has still not finalized renovation plans for the internal aspects of the student activities area.

'Handicap' day proves difficult

By Marianne Cherni
Staff Writer

UI President James O. Freedman carried out his duties with his right hand bandaged Tuesday morning while UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard tried to get around on crutches, and other UI faculty members and administrators used earplugs, wheelchairs and carried canes.

No, these officials were not the victims of some horrible accident. Rather, they were attempting to briefly experience the challenges students with handicaps must contend with every day.

"For a great many people, perhaps a majority, disabilities represent misfortune which will happen to someone else" said Hubbard, in a statement delivered at a luncheon where UI officials shared their morning trials and tribulations.

The activity was organized by Restrict Us Not, the group representing the UI's disabled student population, as part of this week's "Awareness Days" event.

HUBBARD, ALONG with most of the other UI officials who participated in the four-hour disability experiment, said the range of activities he could perform was limited by his "handicap." Others admitted "cheating" by not continuously wearing or using their handicap.

"One is tempted to carry a stick and say I'm here too," said UI Cambus Coordinator Mike Lankford in explaining the frustration he experienced being in a wheelchair and being ignored.

Explaining he had to take out his earplugs to receive a long distance phone call, UI Mechanical Engineering Professor Jen-Ching Chen said he learned how difficult it was not to have hearing.

"I think the experience makes you more aware of ones who can not hear well," he said.

UI DEAN OF STUDENT Services Phillip Jones participated in Tuesday's activity by simulating a learning disability.

As a youngster, Jones said, he didn't learn to read until he was 13 years old.

"This enabled me to think back on some of the things one does when they can't read," said Jones. "You try to avoid using things that will put you in an embarrassing situation."

Jones cited listening to a radio instead of reading newspapers, asking people what time it was instead of wearing a watch, and doing reading ahead of time or not at all as ways that people with learning disabilities compensate.

"There may be a number of people who are illiterate not because they can't learn, but because their learning disabilities have not been diagnosed," concluded Jones.

R.U.N. MEMBERS said they were pleased UI officials tried to put themselves in the place of a handicapped person. But many had mixed emotions about the authenticity of the experiment.

R.U.N. President Denise Kintzle said she saw the "cheating" as "a way out for them (UI officials) who were not able to deal with being disabled."

Danny Burns, vice president of R.U.N., said, "I wish that some of them had been willing to assume a disability that put severe limitations on them."

UI junior Chris Relf said, "You just can't get psychologically pissed off in four hours."

R.U.N. member Harland Pomeroy agreed with Relf, saying, "They didn't have to go to the point where you want to cry."

Lighting concerns student group

By Regina McDuffie
Staff Writer

Students in Society, a committee of the UI Liberal Arts Student Association, is planning to pick up the slack in a "forgotten" city lighting project.

"It's something we feel strongly about, and there still is a great need for more lighting in Iowa City," LASA President Michael Reck said.

Barton Aikens, chairman of Students in Society, said: "It's a question of acting versus saying we're going to act. We're just concerned that the (UI) Student Senate's forgotten about it and that the (Iowa) City Council's shelved the project."

Student concern for more lighting began in the senate last year near senate election time. The goal was primarily to help prevent rape in "dangerous" areas.

Dale Helling, Iowa City assistant manager, said about five lights were installed as a result of last year's discussion, and said the city will also install lights on "Burlington Street, down close to the bridge."

"IT'S UP TO the council as to whether they want to expand on the Northside Lighting Project," he said, but from a staff level, "there isn't really anything going on" with the project.

Staci Rhines, chairwoman of the senate's City Relations Committee, said the senate worked all last year and only got five lights from their efforts.

"We're not going to try to regurgitate the lighting process," Rhines said. "If we want to bring it up again, we'll have to change the ordinance."

The ordinance requires lights at 300-foot intervals.

"They're treading water on the issue, so Students in Society is taking the initiative," Aikens said. "I don't want to sell the senate short if they're doing something, but I don't think that City Relations has particularly moved on the issue."

"WE INTEND to go on and do this," Reck said. "If the senate wants to do it with us, that's fine. If not, we're going to go ahead and do it anyway."

But Molly Gillogly, 127 E. Fairchild St., who helped implement the project with former senator Mike Skinner last year, said "It's not a student senate project anymore as far as I'm concerned."

Skinner and Gillogly, both former members of the senate Phoenix party, said their party received criticism from the Students First party "because it was around election time" when the project was started, Gillogly said.

Gillogly said the Phoenix party lost the elections, however, and the project will be carried on.

"We started it and we're going to keep working on it," she said. "Being a community member, it's important to me."

Give yourself credit: stagger bill payment

By Teresa Aylor
Staff Writer

If you play your cards right, you can survive a financial crisis and maintain a good credit rating when hit by bills you can't pay.

"Worrying about unpaid bills is agonizing," writes Emily Card, author of a book published this year titled Staying Solvent. "It happens to the national economy, so why shouldn't it happen to individuals from time to time?"

Card prioritized a list of creditors to be repaid first to avoid being reported to credit bureaus. The schedule also includes creditors who are slow at reporting customer records and those who make no reports at all.

But "all will eventually appear if you don't pay, so these tactics are for short-term use only," Card said.

BILLS THAT SHOULD be paid immediately include Sears, Visa, MasterCard and Diners Club, because these creditors issue reports to credit bureaus monthly, she said.

Medium priority creditors include large- and medium-sized department stores, airlines and institutions providing automobile loans.

There are also several creditors who will never report a customer's payment status unless they go to collection or court, she said, including American Express, dentists, lawyers, doctors, electric bills, rent, telephone bills, oil cards and mortgages.

"Customer privacy is of the utmost importance to American Express," said Sarah Mullen, manager of public affairs for American Express, which is why the company does not report customer records to credit bureaus, she said.

HOWEVER, AMERICAN Express will start to "disclose serious cases of delinquency" at the end of this year, Mullen said. This decision was made due to the growing size of the corporation and a sense of responsibility to disclose customers with extremely poor records to other creditors, she said.

Most creditors are reporting data on their customers to credit bureaus monthly, said Andrew Kahr, president of First Deposit Corporation, a financial institution authorized to issue Visa cards. And most people are "better off because we have gone to the expense to provide credit bureaus with this information," he said, because most of the information is positive.

"A big issue" in determining how quickly the creditors are able to release these statements is whether the information is compiled electronically or by hand, Card said. Creditors who rely on manual processing of customer reports tend to take longer and are therefore more lenient, she said.

FOR EXAMPLE, if a person pays a bill a few days past deadline, it is immediately processed as a 30-day late payment by a computer, Card said. But manually sorting bills often allows situations such as this to slide by, she said.

Every creditor has a different practice in reporting customer payments, so people should visit their credit bureau to see how often each creditor submits reports, Card said.

A person can come in any time to view their credit records at a cost of $10, said David Wooldrik, manager of the Iowa City Credit Bureau. But if he or she has received a collection notice from the bureau or is denied credit from an institution, the service is free.

Midas muffler shop blown up

DAVIE, Fla. (UPI) — Propane gas leaking from an underground tank exploded and demolished a muffler shop "like a great big bomb" Tuesday, killing four people, injuring 20 others and damaging several nearby buildings.

"I thought the world was coming to an end," said Russell Vining, whose truck was rocked violently by the blast as he passed the Midas Muffler Shop on University Drive.

"I was right in the middle of it. There was debris everywhere," Vining said. "It sounded like a great big bomb."

Rushing to the shop, where only a ripped American flag was left fluttering atop a 40-foot pole, Vining said he and another bystander saw several men in the rubble.

"We found one guy dead and one guy breathing," he said. Rescue teams, fearing another blast from the gas leaking from a buried 250-gallon propane tank behind the muffler shop, searched cautiously for other possible victims, but found none.

FIRE CHIEF Michael Donati said the four victims were men who were in or near the Midas Muffler Shop when it exploded at 6:35 a.m., Iowa time, when only a few employees of the shop and businesses in the Davie Shopping Center across the street had reported for work.

Seven of the injured were treated and released at hospitals and one underwent surgery for head injuries at Hollywood Memorial Hospital and was in unstable condition.

"We were very fortunate simply because if it just had occurred a little later a lot of the other businesses would have opened and the casualties would have been much higher," said Police Lt. Tim Hill.

Donati said propane gas leaking from the underground tank caused the explosion. He said the gas was used for torches to cut metal for mufflers.

"The gas leaked into the building and built up inside," he said. "We don't know what caused the ignition. Somebody could have turned on a light switch, lit a cigarette or started up a car inside. We just don't know at this point."

THE EXPLOSION shattered windows in the Publix Supermarket and a travel agency across the street, blew parts of a restaurant roof into a parking lot, and rocked vehicles on the street.

Larry Parzinot, an attendant at an Amoco service station a block away, described the blast as "powerful and loud."

"I was just sitting inside and the next thing I knew I was lying on the floor," he said.

"It's a very lucky thing, for University Drive this time of morning is very busy," said Steve Simon, commander of Broward County Emergency Medical Services. "An hour later and you might have had God knows how many injuries."

Star Wars may spur first strike

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan's drive to develop a futuristic missile defense system could spur the arms race or even encourage the superpowers to adopt a "first strike" strategy, a congressional study warned Tuesday.

The report on Reagan's multibillion-dollar Strategic Defense Initiative — popularly known as Star Wars — was prepared by the Office of Technology Assessment, which studies complex issues for Congress, at the request of the House Armed Services Committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House panel, noted the report says it will be virtually impossible to construct an impenetrable Star Wars system, which would use space and land based high-tech weapons to knock down enemy missiles.

The study also points out a danger if the system succeeds, Aspin said.

REAGAN HAS VOWED, if the Star Wars research is successful, to share it with the Soviet Union in order to make nuclear weapons obsolete. But the report says such a move, however laudable, could increase the risk of a nuclear war.

Reagan has advocated SDI as an "umbrella" to shield the nation from attack and described it as a system that is aimed at weapons, not people. The problem is that blunting an enemy attack, even partially, could provide an offensive edge by assuring survival of more of the nation's nuclear arsenal. Most U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons are aimed at the other side's weapons.

"Here's the rub that the OTA (Office of Technology Assessment) study points out," Aspin said. "If we both have SDI and the Soviets attack first, our land-based forces will emerge, though in reduced numbers. Those reduced numbers will then have to penetrate the Soviet SDI.

"But in reduced numbers, it's not by any means certain that we have a credible threat — their SDI would have made our surviving deterrent no longer credible."

"THE IRONY here is that we could end up in the most destabilizing of situations imaginable — one in which the superpower that seeks to strike first has the best chance of surviving," Aspin said. "That is exactly the scenario we have been trying desperately to avoid."

As for Reagan's high hopes for the defensive nature of the system, the study said, "Assured survival of the U.S. population appears impossible to achieve if the Soviets are determined to deny it to us."

The study said that in the absence of a new arms control treaty, and with development of new defensive systems as Stars

Wars research proceeds, the arms race could escalate and the search for an arms accord could become more complicated.

"There is great uncertainty about the strategic situation that would arise if ballistic missile defense deployment took place without agreement between the United States and Soviet Union to reduce offensive forces as defensive forces grew."

THE STAR WARS issue has emerged as the chief stumbling point in attempts to negotiate an arms reduction treaty and is likely to be a major topic at the November summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Soviets argue Star Wars is an American bid to gain military superiority and the Kremlin has insisted the project be scrapped. Reagan has consistently rejected suggestions the research effort be a bargaining chip in arms negotiations.

Virginia plane crash leaves no survivors

WEYERS CAVE, Va. (UPI) — Rescue teams Tuesday scaled 2500 feet of Hall Mountain and recovered the bodies of 14 people who were killed when a commuter plane crashed into the mountain during poor weather.

Among those killed in Monday's crash of Henson Airlines Flight 317 were three top executives of Beiersdorf Inc., a South Norwalk, Conn., toiletries firm, along with a parent of a company official in West Germany.

Rescue workers spent hours making the steep climb to retrieve the bodies.

"It was a pretty gruesome sight," said David Wharton of the Virginia Department of Emergency Services, one of 25 rescuers to arrive at the crash site about 1:45 a.m. "It looked like a dump on the side of the mountain."

Twelve passengers and two crew members were killed when the plane, enroute from Baltimore to Harrisonburg, Va., disintegrated on impact, scattering debris over a 400-yard area just below the peak of the mountain in the George Washington National Forest.

FREELANCE PHOTOGRAPHER Tommy Thompson, among the first on the scene, said, "You could smell the stench of the burned area — mostly the fuel."

Thompson said a melted wing was draped over a tree knocked down by the impact and that bodies were thrown "as far as 30 feet."

Airline officials released a list of the passengers and said most were businessmen from the north.

"It's absolutely devastating," said Don Brenner of Beiersdorf. "These are three key people. This was a relatively small company and we were very close."

The pilot initially reported a malfunction in the plane's locator, which establishes position in relation to the runway through bouncing electronic signals. But Patricia Goldman of the National Transportation Safety Board said tests immediately after the crash showed the locator was working properly.

Three Mile Island re-opening halted

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William Brennan blocked Tuesday the scheduled restart of Three Mile Island's Unit 1 nuclear reactor, which has been idle since its twin was wrecked in the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident six years ago.

In a request filed early Tuesday, the anti-nuclear group TMI Alert Inc., asked Brennan to continue an order issued by the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals until the Supreme Court has a chance to review the case. The lower court's order was to have expired at 3 p.m.

The justice agreed and set a Friday noon deadline for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and TMI's operator, GPU Nuclear Corp., to file arguments challenging TMI Alert's request.

The group said residents near the plant face "irreparable psychological damage and risk irreparable physical harm" without additional court hearings to make sure the reactor is safe to operate.

Brennan said the stay would remain in effect until the full court decides whether to hear TMI Alert's appeal. His order, issued in Washington, gave no indication when the ruling will come.

ERIC EPSTEIN, a spokesman for TMI Alert, said: "We're very pleased with the court's decision. We hope this is an indication that the full court will hear the case. But while we're happy, we're realistic. We know the legal struggle is far from over."

Douglas Bedell, a spokesman for GPU Nuclear, said the company was "disappointed" by Brennan's action. "We continue to expect that we will receive permission for restart shortly, based on the merits of the case," he said.

Greenpeace scandal climbs French ladder

PARIS (UPI) — Ousted Defense Minister Charles Hernu, who resigned saying senior officers lied to him about their involvement in the bombing of a Greenpeace ship in New Zealand, gave a spoken order to "neutralize" the boat, the Le Monde newspaper said Tuesday.

Prime Minister Laurent Fabius Sunday admitted for the first time that agents of the General Directorate for External Security, or DGSE, the French secret service, bombed the ship and covered up its actions from an official inquiry. A photographer died in the blast.

IN ITS TUESDAY edition, the respected Paris newspaper Le Monde asked rhetorically, "Who issued the order to neutralize Greenpeace's flagship, sunk by French agents July 10 in the port of Auckland?"

"There was no written order (to neutralize the ship)," the newspaper said. "The order was given at a political level by Hernu himself. The spoken order did not necessarily imply the interpretation given to it by the DGSE."

The former defense minister was questioned about the story by journalists in Villeurbaine, where he is mayor.

"It would have been stupid to neutralize (the ship) in a foreign port," Hernu said. "Sinking the Rainbow Warrior was a scandalous, deplorable and disproportionate act."

The government at first denied French news reports that the secret service sank the ship, which was in New Zealand to lead a protest against French nuclear testing at the Mururoa atoll.

But daily news stories about French involvement in the sabotage triggered a political crisis and eroded France's international image.

LE MONDE LAST week reported for the first time the existence of a "third team" of French combat divers who it said mined the ship in New Zealand and escaped undetected.

Hernu denied that report, but then resigned Friday, saying key officers had lied to him about secret service actions in New Zealand. Adm. Pierre Lacoste, chief of the secret service, was fired when he refused to answer Hernu's written questions.

Two black men die in S. African riots

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police closed black townships around Cape Town Tuesday to non-residents and journalists and said black mobs killed two black men who they apparently considered government collaborators.

A 20-year-old black bus conductor was burned alive when his vehicle was attacked by a mob in Cape Town's Guguletu township, a police spokesman in Pretoria said.

In Zwide, a township near Port Elizabeth, a 62-year-old black municipal worker "was axed to death" by a large crowd of blacks, he said. More than 30 black men were arrested after the killing.

ABOUT 230 OF the more than 700 blacks who died in the past 12 months of violence in South Africa were killed by other blacks, according to police figures. Most were killed for being government "collaborators" or "stooges."

The reports of the slayings came as police sealed black townships around Cape Town in a massive "crime prevention operation" amid allegations that black police officers had beaten and robbed residents.

At least 14 people lodged complaints with police about unprovoked police beatings in Cape Town's Guguletu township late Monday.

They charged that a squad of about 20 Zulu-speaking black policemen toured the township with about five white officers, bursting into homes, beating people on the streets and, in at least one case, looting a shop.

Police said in a routine report Tuesday that a man was shot and killed Monday night in a tussle with police searching his home at Veeplaas, near the southern coastal city of Port Elizabeth.

GUGULETU RESIDENT Dora Grootboom, who is six months pregnant, told reporters she was attacked by two black officers Monday night.

Another resident, Bhulwana Handuna, 35, said police looted his store and beat him and his girlfriend.

Mexican death toll rises to 4,160

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The official death toll from Mexico's earthquakes rose to more than 4,000 Tuesday but rescue workers found survivors who had been buried alive for five days, including another newborn baby in a hospital incubator.

The government issued a new confirmed death figure of 4,160, but officials expect the toll to go higher. U.S. Ambassador John Gavin estimated last weekend that up to 10,000 people were killed.

Rescue workers continued to search for thousands of people believed trapped in the rubble of buildings that collapsed during the two major quakes, the first of which struck Thursday and the second on Friday night.

The extent of the devastation was just becoming clear.

Insurance companies making a preliminary assessment of the losses caused by the quakes said 7,000 buildings were destroyed or damaged in Mexico City, according to the respected El Universal newspaper.

THE NEWSPAPER said an estimated 1 million people were left unemployed and an estimated 350,000 were temporarily or permanently without housing.

Volunteer rescue workers probing the ruins of the 12-story Hospital Juarez found a newborn baby alive in an incubator.

The baby was identified as the son of Ines Cruz Soriano, whose whereabouts were unknown. The baby appeared to have been only one or two days old when the hospital crumbled on top of him, doctors estimated. The incubator apparently saved the child's life.

Two infants and a doctor were pulled alive from the same hospital Monday and another baby was rescued Monday from the Gynecological-Obstetrical Hospital in the government's Medical Center complex.

A man and his wife were pulled alive from the rubble of their 13-story apartment building late Monday night. The apartment complex collapsed with 2,000 people in it. Some 300 have so far been listed as survivors.

DESPITE OBJECTIONS from some volunteer rescue workers, authorities said they would wind down around-the-clock searches for survivors at some sites.

"Last night we heard a baby crying," said one worker. "But it doesn't cry anymore."

Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez flew to Mexico City Tuesday aboard an Air Force plane carrying 12 tons of medicine for earthquake victims.

In New York, the 159-nation U.N. General Assembly unanimously adopted a resolution calling on all countries to "contribute generously" to the relief and reconstruction effort in Mexico.

The League of Red Cross Societies in Geneva said 20 Western nations have contributed nearly $2.6 million in cash and supplies to the Red Cross for victims of Mexico's earthquakes.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Pete Martinez said: "Travel within Mexico by air, rail and highway is unrestricted and buses and the subway system in Mexico City are operating near normal. Distribution of water to affected areas remains a problem."

We teach adventure in a class we call learning to fly. But you'll call it fun.

Because when it comes right down to it, fun is what flying is all about. Flying can make more fun possible for you, too. With rental aircraft widely available at affordable rates, you can go to more places where the fun is, more often.

Think of the great getaways you could plan to escape the pressures of making the grade. Think about how much mileage you could get out of a pilot's license in that career you're planning.

Now think about coming to see us. And start an adventure that will last a lifetime.

Fee plea

More than 350,000 people use the UI Cambus service each month. According to Cambus Coordinator Mike Lankford, the system's 1985 budget is about $804,000; close to $463,000 will come from mandatory student fees and $120,000 from parking revenues. Cambus also plans to receive $16,000 from optional fees and contributions.

While there are perennial complaints regarding the mandatory allotment of student fees to Cambus, late and/or overcrowded buses, and frustration from students who live in areas not served by Cambus, on the whole the UI should be happy to have the system.

Even those not able to ride Cambus benefit from it indirectly. As one of the few non-fee, student-operated bus systems in the country, Cambus helps relieve traffic congestion in campus and downtown areas. By offering parking in peripheral areas such as the Hancher and Carver commuter lots, the UI can maintain a more pedestrian-oriented atmosphere on campus. Bad as the streets are now, imagine what the situation would be like if all these commuters tried to find on-campus parking.

The Pentacrest route running from UI Hospitals to the downtown area is heavily used, especially by staff members. Nearly 24,000 people a month ride this bus alone.

Last year Cambus expected to receive $28,000 in optional fee revenue. According to Lankford, the actual amount received was $13,600, a shortfall reflected in the projections for this year's budget.

In light of the services and jobs Cambus offers, students should think twice the next time they have the opportunity to donate $2 (a simple check-off on optional student fee cards) to help support Cambus. This is even more pertinent for UI staff members and the general public who do not directly contribute to Cambus, yet who often constitute a sizable proportion of its ridership.

In lieu of a "students-only" policy or riders' fee, the UI and Iowa City communities should do what they can to increase their direct support for this service. Cambus' benefits extend beyond the student population. These other groups should demonstrate their appreciation and put their money where their seats are.

Groupthink

UI President James O. Freedman has taught a course at the UI dealing with the relationships between individuals and institutions; he should know this relationship is not always benign.

Therefore, the president's recent announcement that he has appointed a committee to consider whether it is appropriate for the UI to take official positions on moral and political issues suggests an inherent threat.

Virtually by definition, a university is a place for the free exchange of ideas. Persons exposed to this freedom can form private judgments and act upon them by trying to organize popular opinion. But the university itself must never take an official moral position, because group majority opinion is always a threat to individual or minority opinion, and is, therefore, a potential enemy of free speech and thought.

In our zeal to initiate social change, such as the defeat of apartheid in South Africa, we must not make the mistake of signing away the basis of our own freedom to learn and decide: academic freedom.

Furthermore, money buys power. The UI has already developed ties with private enterprise in efforts to improve the UI's financial condition — First Capitol Development, Inc., and the UI's for-profit Computer Aided Design Systems, Inc., are examples.

During the past five years, the amount of U.S. Department of Defense funds funneled into the UI has doubled, reaching nearly $3.4 million.

If we are blind enough to buy the idea that the UI can take official moral positions, the day may all too soon dawn when the UI's moral strings will be pulled by the Secretary of Defense or the Chamber of Commerce.

Wake up, ye philosophers and dreaming idealists.

Protest alive in D.C., dead at UI

EVEN BEFORE President Reagan signed Executive Order 12532 imposing limited economic sanctions against the Republic of South Africa, Democrats on Capitol Hill were being criticized for using apartheid as a partisan political issue.

Regardless of whatever intrinsic political benefits the critics see the congressmen as reaping, congressional supporters of stricter measures against the apartheid regime are demonstrating a greater level of moral concern than those who have protected the president from stricter legislative action.

Less than three weeks after he said he "basically opposed the idea of punitive sanctions," Reagan adopted most of the measures contained in legislation that had overwhelmingly passed the House and was poised similarly in the Senate. In announcing the signing of the executive order Reagan said: "America's view of apartheid is simple and straightforward: We believe it is wrong. We condemn it. And we are united in hoping for the day when apartheid will be no more."

BUT REAGAN'S APPARENT change of heart is likely not just that. The most significant element of both the House and Senate versions of sanction bills was omitted by Reagan — the clause that threatened to impose stricter measures in one year if significant progress was not made toward abolishing the state's racial separation laws. Secretary of State George Shultz described that element as the bills' main defect. But South African Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu wondered: "Why does he exclude the time limit? Does he think we have forever?"

Although Reagan was forced to modify his policy of "constructive engagement" to what he termed "active constructive engagement," he was successful in staving off stricter measures against his South African allies. Were it not for those in Congress who continue to demand still tougher measures, the president and the Senate leadership might have succeeded in quieting concern over apartheid.

IT MAY BE that a few congressmen don't have their hearts in the right place on the apartheid issue. There can be no question that party politics are aplay on Capitol Hill. But there is at least a continued effort, which is more than can be said for those who demonstrated so earnestly in Iowa City last spring.

Recall the daily demonstrations on the Pentacrest, the dozen or so people who fasted, the crowds of people who maintained all-night vigils outside "Biko Hall." Where are they now? Did they have their hearts in the right place or were their motivations more political than humanitarian — oriented more toward beating the UI administration than working to bring about change in South Africa?

"You don't win races with giant strides. You win by taking tiny, sturdy steps," protester Tess Catalano said in May. But what steps have the coalition taken since spring to maintain, if nothing else, an awareness on campus of the atrocities in racist South Africa?

WHILE THOSE ON Capitol Hill, save the Senate leadership, have not been satisfied with forcing the president to impose limited economic sanctions, the UI coalition was satisfied with forcing the UI to divest 90 percent of its $2 million interest in firms doing business in South Africa.

The coalition apparently aimed not to continue sponsoring a campaign of public awareness and lobbying, but to instead win but a solitary battle with the UI administration. Perhaps the Iowa Coalition Against Apartheid would have garnered wider support and heightened public awareness by staging an Anti-ApartAid benefit concert.

Practicing sin

To the Editor:
 Caroline Dieterle's editorial "Fear and loathing," DI, Sept. 10 concerning the "Christian" labeling of AIDS as a just punishment for homosexual behavior seems rather extreme in its indictment of Christianity as an opponent of "science and the open mind."

It may be allowed that so-called fundamentalists have been lured away from Christ's message of mercy by the easier prey of the practice of visible sins, such as homosexuality. Such people would do well to hear once again the words: "Let the one who is without sin cast the first stone."

But Ms. Dieterle should have avoided such a universal condemnation of Christians; they are entirely human and just as prone to blindness and bigotry as she is. Nowhere in the Bible is the tendency toward homosexuality

(or any other sin) condemned. The practice of sin has been condemned since Eve and Adam were cast out of the Garden of Eden. Christians are defined by a belief that Christ died in order that they might not suffer the unspeakable result of this condemnation. It is very unfortunate that this same assurance has allowed the pride in some Christians to launch unbridled persecutions throughout history.

Although I am neither bisexual nor homosexual, I am a practicing sinner. I'm not one bit better than those who suffer from AIDS for whatever reason. Consequently, I can only support those people plagued by such an illness and I can await a scientific cure for this disease with the same eagerness as Ms. Dieterle. Many Christians share this same attitude, which does not fight science or act with a closed mind. I hope that Ms. Dieterle's new awareness of this will result in a more balanced outlook.

Alternative lifestyle

To the Editor:

Excuse my intruding into such an intellectual climate as Caroline Dieterle describes in her editorial about AIDS entitled "Fear and loathing" (DI, Sept. 16). However, I would like to offer an alternative belief and lifestyle to that which Caroline proposes.

True Christianity is not afraid of genuine, sincere criticism. On the other hand, it doesn't criticize true scientific research and compassion exercised on behalf of those who have contacted some terrible disease, whether that contact has been earned or not.

I can't help but think of two statements made by a not-too-shabbily-trained individual by the name of Paul. He wrote these to Christians living in Corinth, a Greek city which had a lifestyle such as Caroline advocates. "God has chosen the foolish things of the world to shame the wise..." and "...do you not know that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived; neither fornicators nor idolaters nor adulterers nor effeminate nor homosexuals..." Fortunately, these Corinthians turned from their sin and turned to Christ and found a better way.

We at Grace Baptist Church of Coralville believe the same and invite students to search the Scriptures and to reason and dispute even as the Corinthians had to do with Paul before they came to their change of mind and lifestyle. God still loves all of us in spite of our sins, but today still expects us to turn to him for forgiveness in Christ and to live new lives.

PR and patients

To the Editor:

In the case of the AIDS victims treated by UI Hospitals, the statistics sought by the author of the editorial "Unacceptable approach" (DI, Sept. 10) have nothing to do with public relations. Due to the importance of medical technology to any hospital, it is painfully obvious why UI Hospitals would highly publicize an event like the state's first heart transplant. An AIDS victim dying, on the other hand, is certainly anti-climactic.

The tendency to refuse contact with AIDS victims by hospital staff is not totally uncommon. Thus it is once again clear why doctors are treating this disease like any other blood disorder. AIDS is an emotionally draining disease for victims and their families. Out of human dignity and courtesy it is imperative that these patients be treated as normally as possible.

That officials do not let non-family members visit AIDS patients is not an indication of abnormal restriction for all serious illnesses.

Withholding information from the public about AIDS cases due to the belief "most Iowans don't want to know" or "ignoring the problem in hopes questions surrounding it will fade away" is as close to the truth as Pluto.

Iowa City is certainly a progressive community. However, New York isn't exactly what you'd call stagnant and several schools protested the enrollment of a 7-year-old AIDS victim. Promoting public awareness has nothing to do with the number of victims who die, the doctors who treat them or how many there are at the hospital. It is simply in the interest of community well-being that some statistics are left for the victim's family to deal with privately.

Senate: no non-registrant aid

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

Following a heated debate, the UI Student Senate voted down a bill Tuesday night which would have used $5,000 in student fees to provide financial aid for students who have not confirmed their draft registration status.

The Solomon Amendment, a law which requires students to verify they have registered for the draft before receiving financial aid, "is a law that was upheld in the Supreme Court," said Senate Treasurer Mike Ketchmark.

"When you decide not to obey the law, it's civil disobedience, and you must pay the consequences," he said.

Sen. Craig Perrin, the bill's sponsor, said regardless of the Supreme Court's decision, "the Solomon Amendment is unconstitutional."

"WE'RE NOT DEALING with the failure to register, we're dealing with enforcement," Perrin said. "You're punished without even having gone to court. There is no due process of law."

But Sen. Brian Weiler disagreed, saying, "What Craig wants to do is reward people who commit civil disobedience. Civil disobedience always has a price."

Sen. Kristin Ahlbrecht, calling the bill a "big waste of money," said she had students call her and encourage her not to vote for its passage.

Sen. Mark Carr, one of only four senate members to vote for the bill, said, "The Solomon Amendment uses financial aid as a weapon. I don't feel that's right."

Ketchmark said after the meeting there is no reason financial aid should be made available for such a small number of students. He added, "We already have scholarship funds set up now which do not disqualify non-registrants."

There was also some question at the senate meeting as to whether the UI administration would allow student fees to be used as financial aid for non-registrants.

SENATE EXECUTIVE Associate Tracy Davis said, "It looks like if we do pass it, it's not going to pass the (UI administration)."

He said UI officials are already drawing up a negative response to a similar financial aid fund finalized by the UI Collegiate Associations Council last night.

Ketchmark agreed with Davis, saying, "It appears to the (senate) executives ... that the administration is going to say 'no' to this for legal reasons."

UI administrators, however, denied Tuesday they have made any decision on the status of the CAC legislation.

Although UI Vice President of Student Services Philip Hubbard has voiced concern about the legality of using student fees for financial aid, he said Tuesday a final decision on the issue will not be made until later this week.

Arms

Gorbachev (the Soviet leader) and myself have said that we would both like to see the missiles done away with entirely.

"I WAS NOT turning down any offer. We have received no offer, either here or our negotiators in Geneva."

"Our goal," Reagan said, "if we can make it, would be total elimination. But we're perfectly prepared to take whatever mutual reduction we can get with the idea of eventually getting there."

In his early comments, Reagan said he expected the proposal to come up during his meeting Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

If Shevardnadze does so, the president said, "I'll forward it to Geneva," where U.S.—Soviet arms talks are under way.

In a speech before the United Nations Tuesday, Shevardnadze called for "Star Peace" instead of "Star Wars" and said the Soviets had made detailed arms control proposals in Geneva.

Responding to that, Reagan said, "There has been no negotiating position presented by the Soviets."

A senior administration official who made the trip to Tennessee said, "Our basic reaction to all of this is that we continue to urge the Soviets to present their proposals at the negotiating table or in private diplomatic channels, where they can be given serious consideration."

Computers

ham said. "You don't want to have students to have to wait" for the program to react, she added.

As more software is becoming available, more low-quality software is also on the market, said David Cronin, superintendent of schools.

One reason the software selection committee was formed was to "minimize the risk of purchasing low-quality software," Cronin said, adding that a list of approved software compiled by the committee is updated regularly. The College Community School District, which serves Cedar Rapids' south side and several small communities further south, recorded 75 classroom computers last spring, said Assistant Superintendent Robert Bostwick.

That district recently formed a task force to assess the need for a more centralized method of reviewing software, he added.

BOSTWICK SAID Iowa City's committee may be used as a model for the College Community district. "I think Iowa City has a real unique situation down there ... I feel they're much more advanced in planning for the selection of software.

"I'm very envious of how well it works for them," he said. "It's an excellent system and I congratulate them."

As of June 30, Cedar Rapids schools had 290 Apple computers plus a variety of other models for a total of 340 terminals, said Richard Schulz, assistant superintendent of educational services. Iowa City, a smaller district, currently has more than 200 terminals.

In July, an administrative committee was formed to review purchase orders for computer hardware. Computer acquisition in Cedar Rapids allows individual schools to choose computer hardware and software subject to the approval of the committee, Schulz said.

Another committee which will review compatible software is now in the planning stages, he added.

Thursday's article will examine the impact of classroom computers on a child's education.

tuition freeze," he added.

FISCHER, who is treasurer of University Democrats, hinted that his group and other student organizations may soon "jump on the bandwagon and support a tuition freeze."

But LASA member John Feyen, who authored a bill calling for the group to support a 2.5 percent tuition increase that was defeated, said, "It's going to turn off a lot of receptive people if we appear to be saying, 'gimme, gimme, gimme.'" He added, "I feel it would be better to show that we're (students) willing to do our part in this tight economy."

Board discusses drug testing, ticket policy

Picture ID to be required at Iowa games

By Steve Sands
Staff Writer

Students will have to show a pictured identification card, in addition to the regular student I.D., when getting into a Iowa basketball game this year.

In the past, only a student I.D. was required, but Associate Director of Athletics Larry Bruner said the pictured I.D. will prevent students from selling their tickets to non-students, a violation of university policy.

A student cannot buy future basketball tickets if the violation is detected.

A student can let other students use their basketball tickets, but will violate university policy if they let a student use their I.D. to accompany a ticket.

THE PENALTY IS loss of ticket use for two games.

Student tickets for basketball will go on sale Oct. 1 at Carver Hawkeye Arena until Oct. 9. Tickets can then be picked up starting Nov. 4.

Tickets for the Amana-Hawkeye Classic are $30 per seat and are not included on the season ticket.

Bruner said he didn't know if the problem of students selling their tickets to non-students was major, but said it existed.

"We've seen ads in the paper for tickets and they say student tickets," Bruner said.

He also cited a case where a person was caught after buying 100 student basketball tickets and then selling them.

Bruner described the person as a former student, but refused to release the name because he said the student had not violated any state laws, just university policy.

Bruner said he didn't know whether the new policy will extend to football tickets next year.

Drug screening a possibility for UI athletes

By Steve Sands
Staff Writer

After seven of the Big Ten schools already have implemented drug testing policy for athletes, a UI administrator Tuesday presented the Board in Control of Athletics a paper laying down principles of a possible UI drug screening program for athletes.

Associate Vice-President of Finance Casey Mahon wrote in the paper that the UI may "prohibit use by student-athletes of substances which enhance performance and thereby distort the competitive balance and pose a danger to the student or others."

Mahon, chair of the UI Health Services Advisory Committee, which has been studying the issue, said a majority of the committee supports her paper.

The drug screening of performance-enhancing drugs during the athletic season "can lawfully be undertaken..." Mahon wrote.

THE ADVISORY committee has not developed specific sanctions for athletes testing positive.

In the paper, Mahon cited the growing support for testing athletes for drugs by the NCAA and the Big Ten.

"These developments call for a careful examination of a drug education program for student-athletes at the University," she wrote, "including an examination of the issue of drug-testing or screening."

Iowa joins Northwestern and Wisconsin as the only Big Ten schools without some type of drug testing for athletes.

The committee suggested that drug testing be limited to performance-enhancing drugs because broader testing programs, which include recreational drugs, carry greater "constitutional infirmity."

In addition, Mahon wrote, "Such programs tend to 'single out' student athletes from the rest of the student population, carry heavier financial costs, and are not narrowly tailored to protect

Iowa pulled their biggest win of the young season, upsetting defending Big Ten champion Northwestern 15-10, 15-10, 7-15 and 15-12 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Tuesday night.

For fourth-year Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart, this was her first win against the Wildcats and Northwestern Coach Jerry Angle.

"This was a good win for us," Stewart said, "but every win in the Big Ten is big."

Co-captains Kathy Griesheim and Linda Gensing paced the Hawkeye attack. Griesheim led Iowa with a good setting performance and also came through late in the fourth game with three straight points on her serve, including a service ace. She had four aces on the night.

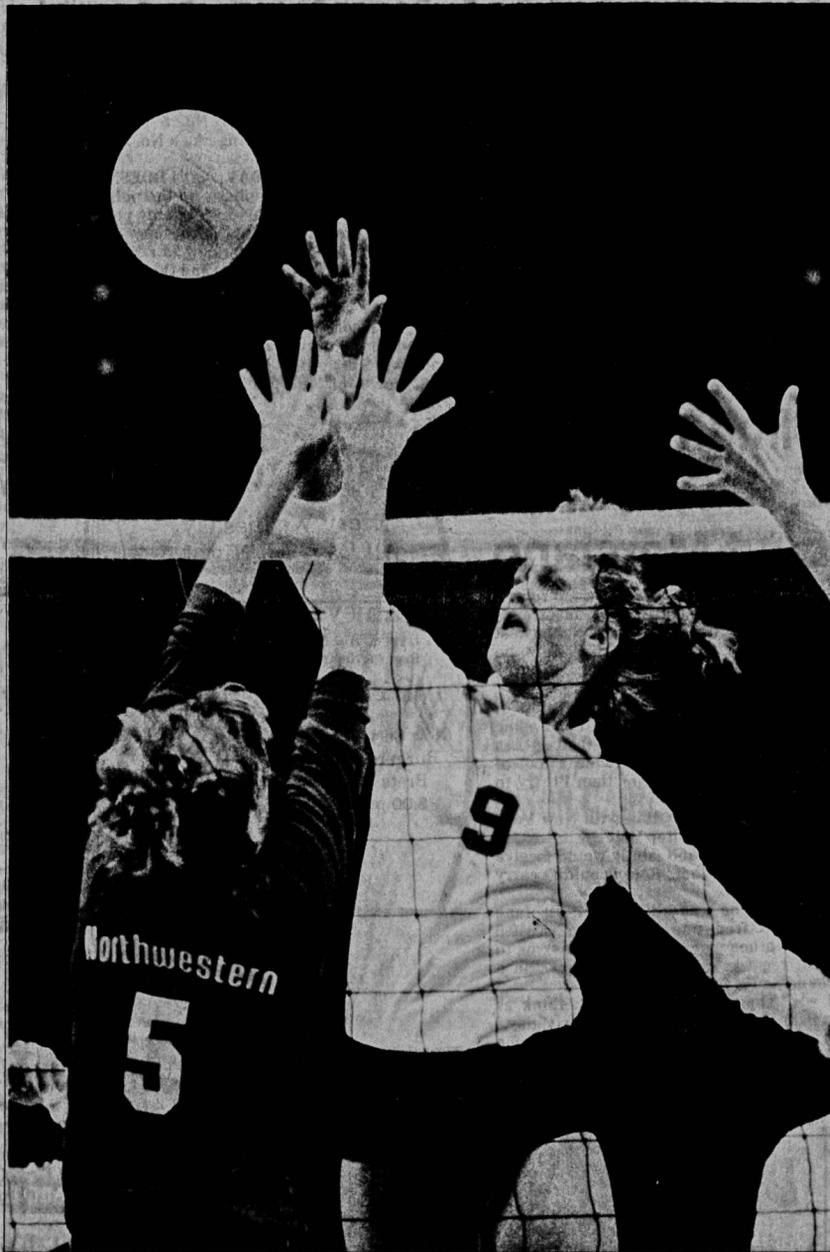

"GRIESHEIM REALLY performed well," Angle said. "She had our blockers jumping at the air most of the night with her setting."

Gensing also had a strong performance for the Hawkeyes. She had a game-high total of 18 kills and added 15 digs as well. Her biggest contribution of the match came in the fourth game when she brought her team back from a 3-0 deficit with a couple of big kills and timely blocking.

"Linda had a solid match," Stewart said. "She was very unselfish with the ball, and she made some big hits late in the match."

"I was also real pleased with the performances of Cheryl (Zemaitis) and Toni (Zehr)," Stewart said.

Cyclones to provide stern test

By Jeff Stratton
Assistant Sports Editor

Iowa and Iowa State will hook up in a battle for state supremacy Saturday in Ames, but Iowa Coach Hayden Fry looks at the game primarily as an opportunity to ready his Hawkeyes for Big Ten play.

Fry said he believes the undefeated Cyclones will provide Iowa with its sternest challenge of the young season and this will prepare his team for the rigors of conference play.

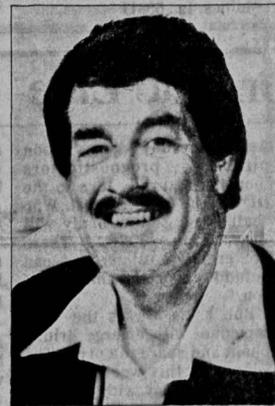

"I anticipate this will be a close game and we really need that," Fry said. "We will be challenged in situations we haven't been yet."

"It will prepare us for Big Ten play," he continued. "It is important not only to be challenged, but to be successful in those situations to give our guys confidence. We need to get a lot of areas checked out, and if anyone can do that, it's Iowa State."

ONE REASON Fry expects Iowa State to challenge his team is the Cyclones 4-3 defensive alignment. Iowa State plays a gambling-type defense, one that can make the big play, but could also be vulnerable to Iowa's potent offense.

"It is a different scheme in alignment and they make it a lot different because they play a man-to-man coverage, which means they play a very aggressive type of defense," Fry said. "It is the type of defense that is capable of giving us bad plays. On the other hand, if we execute properly we can also have some big plays."

Iowa State middle linebacker Jeff Braswell spearheads the Cyclone defense, and Fry said Braswell is one of the best players the Hawkeyes will face this season. Fry said he expects to see an improved Iowa State team over the first two years of Cyclone Coach Jim Criner's reign at Iowa State. Iowa has easily handled Iowa State in Criner's first two seasons, including a 59-21 rout in Iowa City last season.

Hayden Fry

"IOWA STATE appears to be much better personnel-wise," Fry said.

Fry doesn't downplay the value of winning the intrastate battle Saturday as the victor will gain an edge in in-state recruiting. "I've always felt that before you could have an outstanding program you have to dominate in state recruiting," he said.

Ueberroth appeals to players for voluntary testing program

NEW YORK (UPI)—A personal appeal from Commissioner Peter Ueberroth Tuesday for all baseball players to agree to voluntary drug testing threatened to inject further poison to the sport's growing problems.

Ueberroth, stating that the reputation of baseball was at stake, said at a morning news conference he had sent a personal letter to all major-league players, asking each to agree to be tested three times a season. The alternative, he claimed, would be inestimable harm to everyone associated with the game and inevitable legislation by Congress.

"There's a cloud hanging over baseball, and it's a cloud called drugs," Ueberroth said. Minutes later, after discussing his program, he added, "If we fail, and most experts are predicting we will fail with the voluntary program, we would probably have started a decade of baseball Peter Ueberroth being synonymous with drugs."

HOWEVER, UEBERROTH'S unilateral action was met with

"distress and sadness" by the players' union, and Donald Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, said it was "very possibly, if not probably, a violation of law."

Fehr intimated that Ueberroth misled him during a morning phone conversation, and that he had no knowledge of what the Commissioner was doing until the letters already had been delivered to some players. Without going into the merits of the program, Fehr declared Ueberroth did not have the legal right to bypass the union and make his appeal directly to the players.

The first teams to receive the letters were the Chicago Cubs and Montreal Expos, who met in an afternoon game at Chicago.

The start of the game was delayed 15 minutes while the players discussed the situation.

While Cubs general manager Dallas Green Tuesday said he

Former trustee admits guilt in TCU slush fund inquiry

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI)—NCAA investigators, who usually work for months obtaining evidence in a recruiting violation case, arrived at the Texas Christian University campus Tuesday to find the evidence waiting for them.

At the top of the stack was an admission by former board of trustee member Dick Lowe that he had given money to TCU football recruits and his accusation that former Coach F.A. Dry knew about it.

In a frank admission of guilt, Lowe wrote a letter to TCU chancellor William Tucker Monday in which he resigned from the board and gave his version of a meeting which he said initiated a system of illegal recruiting.

"There are three groups at fault," Lowe said in the letter. "The coaches that instigated the wrongful recruiting, the alumni who helped recruiting the players and furnished the money, along with the players who were looking for the best deal they could get."

"DON'T EVER THINK that if illegal recruiting is going on that the coaches don't know about it. They are right in the middle of it. Don't ever believe that if a player is bought that he doesn't know exactly what he is doing."

The recruiting scandal at TCU broke last week when, following a lecture from Coach Jim Wacker about the evils of illicit recruiting, a player confessed that he and five teammates had been receiving money since they had been recruited.

All came to TCU when Dry was coach and all were immediately dismissed by Wacker.

One of the six players was star running back Kenneth Davis, who in 1984 led TCU to a turnaround season and an 8-3 record.

"It's over, said and done," Davis said. "Coach Wacker took his action. Let life go on. He (Wacker) doesn't believe in double standards."

Dry, now the offensive line coach at Baylor University, has denied any knowledge of payments made to recruits.

Lowe, a Fort Worth businessman who for years was the chief financial backer of the TCU athletic program, insisted otherwise.

"I have participated in breaking NCAA rules," Lowe said. "That was a stupid mistake born out of almost total frustration. I feel it is important for you to know what has happened. Not to know would be like putting your head in the sand."

Hawks preparing for Iowa State game

The Iowa football team leads the nation again this season in total defense. This pleases Coach Hayden Fry.

"It's the second week at number one, you can't beat that," Fry said.

Monday the team used the indoor practice field because of the rain. Tuesday they moved to Kinnick Stadium "since the grass was too wet and muddy" Fry said.

"It was nice weather so I didn't want to be indoors. I'd rather be on grass."

"Tuesday was a hard workout. It was hard and long and the players worked hard," Fry said.

The workout, after another win for the Hawks was, "super great," according to Fry.

Ex-jock Summerall rolls along

J. B. Glass

Pat Summerall, football announcer extraordinaire, as well as an expert in calling drives and punts, along with serves and volleys, will remain with CBS for at least five more years.

By 1990 when Summerall's new five-year, $1 million a year pact has expired he will have spent 28 years at CBS.

Not bad for an ex-athlete.

Summerall was one of the first ex-jocks to make the switch from the field to the broadcast booth. Frank Gifford, who left CBS in 1971 to take over Monday Night Football duties, preceded him by a few years.

Summerall became involved in broadcasting by pure luck.

As the story goes, Summerall was traded from the NFL's Chicago Cardinals to the New York Giants. In New York he roomed with quarterback Charley Conerly. One day, while Conerly was supposedly showering, the phone rang.

On the line was a producer for a weekly radio show who was supposed to find out if Conerly wanted to become a regular on the radio show. But the producer was impressed with Summerall's voice over the phone and asked if he might like to audition. The rest is, as they say, history.

Summerall prides himself on letting the pictures tell the story. His quiet style accents broadcasting partner John Madden's unique way of mixing insightful strategy with laughable comments. Summerall ties up Madden's loose ends as the two make for the best football announcing tandem in the universe.

The Iowa Television Network, the people who bring Hawkeye basketball into your living room, are in the process of finding a replacement for color commentator Sharm Scheuerman who recently made a move to Colorado. Guess who has interviewed for the position? That's right, Mark Gannon, Todd Berkenpas and Steve Carfino. Can these ex-Iowa athletes make the switch from the court to the microphone?

CBS basketball analyst Billy Packer said last week that eight teams will be the caliber of last year's edition of the Georgetown Hoyas. His picks in no particular order, Michigan, Georgia Tech, Illinois, Syracuse, North Carolina, Duke, LSU and Louisville. Hey Billy, what about Iowa?

Predictions of the Week: HBO commentator Larry Merchant on the Larry Holmes-Michael Spinks fight, "This is a gimme. Holmes is going to win." Not to be outdone Marv Albert: Holmes in two rounds. In case you were hibernating, Spinks, in a 15-round unanimous decision, defeated Holmes to win the heavyweight title.

Heading into week three of the NFL, all three networks had more viewers. NBC games rose five percent, ABC eight percent and CBS climbed 18 percent. Also, as far as pregame shows are concerned, NBC's NFL '85 still trailed CBS's NFL Today. But the NBC production is coming on strong. For week three, NFL Today featured Brent Musburger's live interview with Spinks, Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder's feature on Joe Theismann and a hookup with TCU Coach Jim Wacker, who recently suspended six players. NFL '85 countered with, Bob Costas' report on the Billy Martin-Ed Whitton altercation and a multitude of prognostications from Larry King, which have all materialized.

Al Michaels and Lee Grosscup, along with Al Trautwig, will provide the play-by-play and commentary for Iowa's battle at Iowa State Saturday for ABC. Kickoff for the split-national telecast begins at 2:30 p.m. For the Iowa-Michigan State tilt, Ara Parseghian and Musburger will do the game for CBS. It is also a split-national telecast and it begins at 1:30 p.m.

Hawks 3rd in field hockey poll

By Jill Hokinson Staff Writer

For a second year, Old Dominion tops the first regular season field hockey poll. Iowa is ranked third behind Big Ten rival Northwestern.

The Lady Monarchs are continuing where they left off last season when they won the NCAA title. Old Dominion has rolled up a 4-0 mark this season to hang onto the No. 1 ranking.

After finishing second in the

country last year, the Hawkeyes were ranked No. 2 behind Old Dominion in the preseason poll. A 1-0 loss to Connecticut and a 1-1 tie against New Hampshire, however, dropped Iowa to No. 3.

Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said she wasn't surprised the Hawkeyes dropped a notch in the poll. "I'm just as glad," she said. "I think we probably ought to be around No. 5 or 6. We're not playing like a No. 2 or 3 team."

DAVIDSON DOESN'T put much emphasis on the polls during the season. "The only poll that really counts is the one when they do the ranking (for the NCAA tournament) and the one at the end of the season after the tournament," she said.

Northwestern, which is off to a fast start this season with a 7-0 record, moved up to the No. 2 position.

Rounding out the top 10 are No. 4 Massachusetts (3-), No. 5 North Carolina-Chapel Hill (4-1), No. 6 New Hampshire (2-1-1), No. 7 Ursinus (4-0), No. 8 Temple (2-1), No. 9 Rutgers (4-1) and No. 10 Lockhaven (3-1).

Penn State is ranked No. 11. The Lions are followed by Boston College at No. 12, No. 13 Boston University, No. 14 Lehigh and No. 15 Maryland.

At the bottom are No. 16 Purdue, No. 17 Cal State-Chico, No. 18 Westchester, No. 19 Delaware and No. 20 Northeastern.

On The Line

As Wednesday dawns upon pigskin prognosticators thoughts naturally turn to the DI On The Line contest. Who shall I pick? How badly will Iowa whip Iowa State? These are great questions that can befuddle even the sharpest of you.

But, as is always the case, someone will emerge triumphant and snare the prize. The winner of this week's contest will walk away with a keg of beer from The Fieldhouse, located at 111 E. College. The Fieldhouse specializes in good times for all, and also offers the finest burger baskets in these here parts. You can partake of a burger basket at the Fieldhouse for only $1.50 Monday through Saturday from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Before we ramble on to this week's picks, we have a few simple rules for you to follow. First circle the teams you think will emerge winners. If you think the game will end in a tie, circle both teams.

The last game listed is the tiebreaker. Circle the tiebreaker and also predict the winning score. If you do not circle the winner of any of the contests, or omit the score of the tiebreaker, DI Photography Editor Byron Hetzler will eat it.

You must also include your name and phone number on the ballot and only five ballots per person will be accepted.

Also, to enter you must be 19 and able to prove it. On the Monday following the weekend's action the winner will be announced and arrangements for the prize will be made at that time.

- Maryland at Michigan
- Western Michigan at Michigan State

Holmes regrets slurs he made about Marciano

EASTON, Pa. (UPI)—Dethroned heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, in despair after losing his crown to Michael Spinks last Saturday, apologized Monday for slurs he made toward the late heavyweight king Rocky Marciano.

"I tore down one of the greatest fighters of all time," Holmes said of a disparaging remark made after he lost the fight in Las Vegas. "I lost the fight and made a fool of myself. What can I say other than I'll try to make up for it."

Holmes, in a conversation with New York Daily News boxing writer Michael Katz, said he hoped the Marciano family would forgive him of his remark that "Rocky couldn't carry my jockstrap."

Marciano, who was killed in an airplane accident, retired undefeated after a 49-0 record as a heavyweight. Holmes, seeking to tie that record, was beaten by Spinks on a 15-round decision.

"I wish that there was no such think as post-fight interviews until the next day," Holmes told Katz. "Until you have a chance to think about what you want to say."

America's teams drop in 1985

SEPTEMBER 1982: The Atlanta Braves surprise everyone by winning the National League Western Division and ending decades of southern frustration.

SEPTEMBER, 1984: The Chicago Cubs end a 40-year drought by winning the National League's Eastern Division, only to blow a 2-0 Championship Series lead.

SEPTEMBER, 1985: Both teams are hopelessly mired in the bottom half of their respective divisions, well below .500.

Hope ran high in Atlanta going into each of the last three seasons, just as Wrigley Field partisans were sure 1985 was the year they would win the one extra game that would bring a World Series to the friendly confines. Both have failed to live up to expectations. Why?

This year injuries to key players, indeed, entire pitching staffs, have told a great part of the story. But perhaps both of America's Cable TV Teams have already performed to their collective bests, not to grace the top of the standings again for a long time.

The Braves, under Joe Torre, hung on in the top three over the last three years, but that wasn't enough for owner Ted Turner. Turner fired Torre before the start of the 1985 season, replacing him with long-time company man Eddie Haas. When the Braves failed to get on track for more than a day or two this year, Haas was out. Not even a full season with Bob "Brittle Bones" Horner helped Atlanta's highly-paid, but rarely effective, pitching staff.

AT LEAST THIS slide gives cable viewers a chance to hear a bored Skip Caray give his view of the world, from who's hot in music (Oh, yeah, Bruce Somebody") to the New Coke/Old Coke dispute ("New slogan for them: Coke is What?"). And when they're behind by a half-dozen, as is common, there's the old, "If you fans promise to patronize our sponsors and come back to watch our late movie, you have our permission to turn this off and go out to walk the dog."

Skip's dad, Harry Caray, has felt much the same thing this year in Chicago. Too many of Steve Stone's cigars must be affecting the Cubs' play. Either that or the baseball gods refused to back a team whose announcer is both a Bud Man AND a Cub Fan.

Granted, Jim Frey had everyone's sympathy when all five of his starting pitchers were on the disabled list. But the Cubs refused to score runs early on, even when 1984 Cy Young winner Rick Sutcliffe only gave up a couple and the rest of the staff was sound.

It's not really surprising. Last year's "daily double" of Bob Dernier and Ryne Sandberg would be hard pressed to repeat 1984. The Cubs also spent a good deal of the year with a Hall of Fame infielder — shortstop Larry Bowa and third baseman Ron Cey. (Read "Hall of Fame" as "Now too old to play.") Even Keith "Zonk" Moreland is playing third base now in a last-ditch effort to find something that might work for 1986.)

HOPE SPRINGS eternal at the start of every baseball season. And the fever is even stronger after a taste of success. But the record would indicate that dynasties are hard to come by,

and repeating as a champ is nearly impossible.

Remember the 1982 World Series? St. Louis won it over Milwaukee, before each team plunged to the cellar (the Redbirds finally did rebound this year). 1983 teams? Baltimore and Philadelphia. 1984? Detroit and San Diego. Where are they now? Check the bottom of the ladder.

And watch the bottom of the standings next year...that's where Kansas City and St. Louis will wind up after this year's all-Missouri World Series.

What makes a championship team a success? A unique blend of players, who all come through at the right times, remain injury-free and possess a great deal of luck. And the area's most popular "cable teams" are good examples...they each put it all together for a year or so, but that was it. Maybe the players all just hit their peaks at the same time before fading away.

In any case, standing pat with what you have means only one thing: your times have come...and gone. Sorry, America's teams.

Jury told witnesses unreliable

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The prosecution told the jury hearing in baseball's second cocaine trial Tuesday that it did not have to condone the "shameful" and "criminal" activities of its two ballplayer-witnesses in order to believe their testimony against accused dealer Robert "Rav" McCue.

But defense attorney John Nickoloff argued that the cocaine use and clandestine buys to which New York Yankees infielder Dale Berra and retired outfielder John Milner testified under grants of immunity from prosecution makes them unreliable and unbelievable witnesses.

"Would you let the safety of your family rest on the testimony of Dale Berra? Would you put your life savings with someone like Dale Berra or John Milner?" Nickoloff asked the jury of 10 women and two men in his closing argument.

Berra and Milner, both ex-Pittsburgh Pirates and both admitted former cocaine users, represent the totality of the government's case against McCue, 38, of Upper St. Clair, Pa., fired comptroller of the local Easter Seals Society and parttime disc jockey at a Pittsburgh lounge popular with athletes and sports fans.

BERRA TESTIFIED to participating in four of the 13 drug sales McCue is charged with making between June 1983 and January 1985 and Milner to the other nine.

An undercover FBI agent, James Benedetto, testified under defense questioning earlier Tuesday that he twice tried and failed to make cocaine buys from McCue with the help of confessed baseball cocaine dealer Kevin Connolly.

After the counsels' closing arguments, Chief Judge Maurice Cohill instructed the jury on points of law and told the panel it could pick a foreman and go home for the day. Cohill told the jury to return to begin its deliberations at 8 a.m. Iowa time Wednesday.

Assistant U.S. Attorney A. Elliot McLean told the jury in his summation that "I'm not for any moment suggesting you should have any sympathy for Mr. Berra and Mr. Milner."

"What they did was shameful," McLean added. "What they did was criminal. Their acts tainted the name of baseball. That is something they'll have to carry around the rest of their lives."

BUT THE PLAYERS' crimes are not the jury's concern, McLean said. He asked the jury to decide simply "whether or not Mr. McCue sold cocaine to John Milner and Dale Berra on the dates charged in the indictment."

Milner and Berra also testified during baseball's first cocaine trial, which ended last Friday in the conviction of Philadelphia caterer Curtis Strong on 11 of 14 counts of selling the drug to major leaguers in Pittsburgh between 1980 and 1983.

The seven players who testified against Strong portrayed him as a traveling cocaine salesman who conducted business in National League cities around the United States.

In contrast, Milner portrayed McCue as a small-time dealer with an inferior product. Milner said he never bought more than a half-gram, for $40, at a time from McCue.

Berra said he bought one gram at a time, from McCue.

Lafleur pondering a return to hockey

MONTREAL (UPI) — Retired hockey superstar Guy Lafleur said Tuesday he has quit the Montreal Canadiens' public relations department and may now try to return to the ice as a player.

"I've got ants in my pants," said Lafleur, who resigned from the Canadiens in a contract dispute. "I'm going to speak with Lise (his wife). I'm seriously going to study the possibility of returning to play. I'm not hiding the fact that I'm interested."

Lafleur said he hoped Canadiens' general manager Serge Savard and Canadiens' president Ronald Corey would try to make a trade for him should he request one.

Lafleur joined the Canadiens' public relations department and became a much sought-after banquet speaker.

But Lafleur has recently expressed displeasure at a new, 10-year contract offer made by Corey to take effect when the current agreement expires. The proposed deal calls for $85,000 (Canadian) per year, a new car annually and expenses.

Lafleur drew Corey's ire when he told Le Journal de Montreal in the weekend interview that the Canadiens were trying to give him an office clerk's salary and that he might go to work in public relations for the Canadiens' arch-rival, the Quebec Nordiques.

Minnesota prepares for Sooners without the help of game films

CHICAGO (UPI) — Minnesota's Lou Holtz faces enough of an uphill climb in Saturday's game against No. 2 Oklahoma, but the Gopher coach claims he is preparing for a "ghost". Holtz said Tuesday he was unable to get any game films from Oklahoma and was prevented from scouting the Sooners.

Holtz isn't charging any improprieties on the part of the Sooners, but admitted some unusual behind-the-scenes maneuvering hurt his club's preparation for Oklahoma.

"It's like preparing for a ghost," Holtz said.

The base of the problem was Oklahoma's decision to delay its season-opening game against Southern Methodist University, originally slated for Sept. 14, and move the SMU game to Dec. 7.

Oklahoma officials explained this was done for television but also to give the young Sooners more experience before playing a top 20 team.

AS A RESULT, Oklahoma opens the season later than in many years at Minnesota.

"We are in a very difficult situation. We had planned not to scout their spring game because we thought we could scout the SMU game before ours," Holtz explained. "Then, in the middle of the summer, they switched the game." Holtz said he attempted to get film from the Sooners but Oklahoma claimed Minnesota wasn't on their mailing list. Minnesota claimed they requested films and none were made available.

"I don't know anything about Oklahoma," Holtz said. "That may be a positive thing because our players won't see any thing last year's Oklahoma team did."

Holtz said he asked around to other Big Eight schools for films but was turned down.

"They said they owed their loyalty to the Big Eight," Holtz said.

HOLTZ INSISTED the Sooners were not doing anything intentional or illegal.

"They didn't do it intentionally," Holtz said. "But our players will not be knowing what they are getting in to."

Minnesota has played two winning games but remains a prohibitive underdog against a team many consider to have the best talent in the nation.

"I'm not looking for a crutch, mind you," Holtz said. "We have no idea what they do and that just doesn't sound quite right."

Holtz said the first few minutes of the game will be critical for his club against the heavily-favored Gophers. "Oklahoma is capable of routing anyone they play. If that happens and they jump on top of us, then we have a chance to get down as a squad," Holtz said. "And if that happens, it would be very difficult to get back up."

Minnesota has been routed in the past by Big Eight foes, having been whipped by Nebraska in recent years.

Chicago's Gault hearing boobbirds for the first time in football career LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — Willie Gault has had to get used to something new in his third NFL season that he hasn't encountered before in his football career.

Booing. Gault, the speedster who was the Bears' No. 1 draft choice three years ago, drew the wrath of Bears' fans earlier this year for dropping an apparent touchdown pass against New England.

He also had more than his share of criticism last year for his alleged ineffectiveness in running routes and blocking.

But the booing is something new to the former Tennessee hurdler, something that hurts.

"I am a sensitive person. I grew up around a close knit family," Gault said. "I want people to like me. But I can't rely on man to supply me with what I need."

GAULT SAID HE was never booed in his college career, so the experience is something new. But he doesn't blame the fans and he insists he has benefited from the jeering.

"Chicago has great fans. They should understand that players are trying their best out there. You get a little more from positive re-enforcement than with negative re-enforcement."

Gault said he was aware of the criticism of his route running and blocking last year.

"The coaches didn't say anything about it. Everytime I turned around I read about it in the paper," Gault said. "But that served as an incentive for me to work harder."

As a result, he has improved the aspects of his game that most people don't see.

"I THINK THE last couple of games I have done my job," Gault said.

Gault is still doing his job catching passes. He scoffs at suggestions he hasn't lived up to his capabilities and has the statistics to prove it.

"I led all rookie receivers in the NFL my first year and led the team in every conceivable receiving category last year," Gault said. "I don't understand when someone says that I'm not living up to my potential."

Against Minnesota, he had the best day of his career.

Gault, who lost his fight to be on the U.S. Olympic team last year, caught six passes for 146 yards and one TD. He caught a 70-yard touchdown bomb from quarterback Jim McMahon that triggered the Bears' comeback win.

"I BELIEVE WILLIE is emerging to be one of the great wide receivers in football," said Bears' head coach Mike Ditka. "He puts fear in defenses."

Ditka said Gault's emergence is essential for the Bears' offense.

"We are going to pass it more until the defenses play us legitimately," Ditka said. "They can't just defense us against the run anymore."

Gault came into the league with the reputation of being one of the fastest players to ever enter the NFL. A former hurdler and sprinter at Tennessee, he drew a lot of double coverage.

Expos' Dawson pounds Cubs

Montreal's Andre Dawson hits his second three-run homer during the Expo's 12-run fifth inning of their 17-15 win over Chicago Tuesday.

CHICAGO (UPI) — A launching pad would have been more appropriate than a ballpark.

In a game featuring three homers and eight RBI by Montreal's Andre Dawson, the Expos outlasted the Chicago Cubs 17-15 Tuesday. Dawson hit a pair of three-run homers during a 12-run fifth inning.

Chicago, which trailed 15-2 at one point, scored three times in the seventh, four in the eighth and five in the ninth and had the tying run at the plate.

"It was unbelievable, simply unbelievable," said Cubs' manager Jim Frey. "The wind wasn't blowing out that hard and people were hitting it in the dark."

MONTREAL WAS out hit 20-17 but had five of the eight homers in the game, giving the Expos 10 in two games and 21 at Wrigley Field. Dawson has six homers in four games and tied a couple of records with his outburst.

"I guess we needed every one of them," said Dawson, who has 21 homers this year. "You just never know in this ballpark."

Dawson hit a two-run homer in the second and added a three-run shot off Ray Fontenot, 6-10, in the fifth. Dawson unloaded his second three-run shot off reliever Jon Perlman. He had a single in the seventh to finish 4-for-6.

"I wasn't thinking homer the rest of the times," Dawson said. "We had guys in scoring position and I wanted to drive them in."

Dawson became the first major-leaguer to hit two homers in the same inning twice. He did it against Atlanta in 1978.

The six RBI in one inning tied a major league mark while the eight RBI tied a club mark held by Chris Speier in 1982. The 12-runs tied a National League record for most runs in a fifth inning.

Tim Wallach also had a two-run homer in the club-record 12-run fifth. Sal Butera had four RBI and a two-run homer in the eighth.

Winner Bryn Smith, 17-5, departed after giving up three runs in six innings. After the Cubs rocked two relievers, Jeff Reardon got the final out for his 36th save.

"I was up in the clubhouse watching the game and someone yelled to me in the ninth to warm up," Reardon said. "The last thing I thought would happen would be I'd get a save."

Frey pulled several starters after trailing 15-3 after six.

"Our shock troops really did the job," Frey said. "I knew in the big inning that I might have let the kid in too long but you keep thinking he'd get the final out."

Jody Davis hit a two-run homer in the fourth and Billy Hatcher, who had three hits and two RBI, hit a solo homer during the three-run seventh. Gary Matthews pinch-hit a three-run homer during the four-run eighth and Ron Cey pinch-hit a two-run single and Leon Durham a two-run double during the five-run ninth.

Hawkeyes

have taken a break from practice this week to rest their weary legs, according to Fry. The water-logged footballs in last Saturday's rout over Northern Illinois may have worn the kickers legs out.

"We are not letting Houghtlin or Kostrubala kick until Thursday," Fry said.

FRY SAID he has decided to redshirt junior defensive line-man Joe Schuster, but there is a chance defensive ends Richard Pryor and Bruce Gear could see action against Iowa State.

"Pryor and Gear have not been cleared for Saturday," Fry said, "but we hope to have them ready."

Volleyball

The first game started out very close as both teams exchanged leads in the early going. Iowa then jumped to a 9-5 lead on Gensing's serving, but Northwestern came right back behind the solid serving of Gwen Niedbalski. They later tied the game at 10-10 on a tip by Jill Wagner.

capped off with a big serve by Lana Kuiper to win game one.

"Neither team played well in the first game," Stewart said. "We both made a lot of mistakes."

The second game went much the same way as Iowa got a late surge to pull ahead in the game. The Hawkeyes then went out much the same way as in the first game on a big serve from Zehr and a powerful kill by Griesheim.

After dropping the third game, the Hawkeyes came roaring back in the fourth game, taking an early lead and holding it until the end. Gensing and Griesheim took control late in the game. Griesheim's service ace followed by Gensing's big kills proved too much for the Wildcats, as they dropped their fourth match of the season.

"We just weren't ready to play volleyball tonight," Angle said. "They always seemed to have two or three blockers in front of us all the time, which really unnerved our team."

"This is the kind of win that will give us momentum through the rest of the season," Stewart said. "I just hope we can improve from here."

Drugs

the athlete during competition."

MAHON SUGGESTS in the paper that testing be performed by physicians or a certified trainer, with analysis done in UI laboratory facilities when possible.

The NCAA has developed a list of performance-enhancing drugs, including anabolic steroids, but Mahon said the cost of testing for anabolic steroids is high.

The paper proposes that the advisory committee review the list and pay careful attention to screening for anabolic steroids "economically and efficiently."

Mahon noted in the paper that reporting a student's medical records, which would include drug test results, are generally protected from public or media disclosure.

"It should be noted, however, that in the face of a subpoena from a prosecutor, or a grand jury," Mahon wrote, "a coach could not decline to provide information about the results of drug-testing of a given athlete."

"The question of whether the physician or trainer must answer is less clear."

Mahon suggests in the paper that the team physician be notified, the head coach, and the chair of the advisory committee. Others that may be notified include the chair of the athletic board and the athletic director.

UI Athletic Director Bump Elliott said he wanted each institution to develop its own drug testing program.

Ueberroth

avored voluntary drug testing, the club's player representative, Keith Moreland, agreed with Fehr's premise that baseball should proceed through "proper channels."

"I'm not trying to make it sound like we're totally against things," Moreland said. "What we are for is to go through proper procedures and work something out."

Players who tested positive would be allowed to continue playing while their situation received personalized attention.

Ueberroth said he had determined at this time not to take any action against the active players who admitted to drug use in testimony during a trial at Pittsburgh that resulted last week in the conviction of caterer Curtis Strong on 11 counts of cocaine trafficking charges.

1985-86 STUDENT BASKETBALL TICKET POLICY

- A student may purchase one season ticket at the student price.
- Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchased or applied for basketball tickets at the University of Iowa with no loss in priority for student exchange programs off campus or bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.
- Student tickets will be on sale at the Athletic Department commencing September 30 and closing October 9, 1985. These tickets will then become available for pick-up beginning November 4, 1985. The student I.D. card must be presented at the time of pick-up so that the student name and number can be stamped on the student ticket.
- A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than eight, provided he/she has the additional student credentials, but each individual student must pick up his/her own ticket and sign for it.
- Each I.D. must correspond to the check being used to pay for the ticket.

- A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by I.D. card with current registration validation and a pictured I.D. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or any other University of Iowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student ticket policy. Anyone who sells a ticket to a non-student will forfeit all future student ticket privileges. The penalty for a violation of the university policy on I.D. and tickets will be the loss of the use of the ticket for two games.
- Amana Hawkeye Classic tickets will be available to students at $30.00 per seat for the tournament. This is a special event and is, therefore, not on the season ticket.

Music scene reflections: A little bit about nothing

AFTER LAST week's column, above which my own name was plastered in 48-point bold (no, I didn't write the headline), I decided I'd be best off to lay low this week and avoid any unnecessary venting of the ego. Therefore allow me to just touch briefly on a number of subjects; if I may, I'll borrow an expression from Des Moines Register sports writer Maury White and simply call this "A Little Bit About a Lot of Things":

• First of all, have you noticed some of the right-wing turns that formerly venerated members of America's liberal establishment have taken lately? For example, Spiderman, America's original counter-cultural superhero, has recently been coming off like Dirty Harry. Last week, in an interview with the voluptuous J.S. Saxon of the Daily Bugle, "Dirty Spidey" said, "Crime isn't a game! Once you catch a killer, you don't turn him loose to kill again just 'cause someone broke a rule! To satisfy the law, we can always penalize the cop who goofed, but we've gotta lock up the felon, to protect society!"

As someone who himself is often wrongly pursued by the police, I think the web-slinger should be a little more cautious before he goes spouting off in favor of violating civil rights. But, hey, he really hasn't been quite the same since he started narrating his comic strip himself.

• Then there's that radical activist-turned-exercise instructor Jane Fonda. In a recent interview with Ladies' Home Journal, she too, took a conservative turn, coming out in favor of censorship. Pornography in particular has gotten Fonda's goat. "There has to be a concerted effort by everyone who's involved in forming our culture — filmmakers, lawmakers and magazine publishers — to lower the temperature and stop this obsession with sex," she said. Kind of ironic words coming from a woman whose books, records and videotapes have had millions of Americans thrusting their pelvises and spreading their legs in an effort to improve their sex appeal.

• Oh, but I forgot, pro-censorship is the liberal position these days, isn't it? I guess that makes the Parents Music Resource Center, the group trying to get records rated, a left-wing organization. Oh, I know, they don't want to "censor" records, they merely want to put warning labels on them. But how long will it be before they take a tip from the anti-porn protestors and begin waiting into Record Bars to smash up Prince records? And if you don't think this is going to lead to censorship of records because of the political views they express, think again; it already has. One of the songs the Parents Music Resource Center wants to have rated because it is "too violent" is Twisted Sister's "We're Not Gonna Take It," a song that, to my ears, is no more violent than "The Iowa Fight Song" (and you don't hear of Morgan Jones getting any complaints about the Hawkeye Marching Band playing that). I would guess it is actually the song's anti-authority, anarchist sentiments that have irked the would-be censors.

• As for the local right-wing, new information has been gathered on why the Campus

Jack Fickel of the band Jellyroll performs at the Crisis Concert in the Union on Sunday.

Allen Hogg

Review likes KRUI so much. I was speaking to Devin Hill, the Campus Review's graphics man and music critic, at the Crisis Concert in the Union this Sunday. Hill claims he isn't that interested in politics, and his musical tastes don't have anything to do with the political viewpoints of his paper. Oh well, I thought the theory I presented last week was pretty good anyway.

• And, speaking of the Crisis Concert, it seemed to go pretty well. I'm afraid upcoming midterms forced me to miss part of the show, but all reports are that it went off without a hitch. There has been no official word on how many tickets were sold or how much money raised, but at least 200 people were in attendance. While that is not quite what was hoped for, it's at least a decent figure.

I was quite embarrassed, however, to be identified as the "creator" of the Crisis Concert on KCRG-TV's "Eyewitness News." While the idea of the show came from a column I wrote this summer, the real work was done by Judi Cobb and the people on the Union Board and the musicians themselves. They deserve any credit for the show's success.

• Finally, a note on matters at The Daily Iowan. As of this morning, I am officially a staff writer and no longer arts/entertainment editor. I decided I better do it now before the public storms into the office and crucifies me for printing Merwyn Grote's review of Nineteen Eighty-Four. Taking over the a/helm will be Lisa Norton, a graduate student in journalism and a former DI arts/entertainment staff writer. Here's wishing Lisa the best of luck.

Allen Hogg is a DI staff writer. His column on arts/entertainment appears every Wednesday.

Tape of alleged confession rejected in Belushi hearing

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A taped interview in which Cathy Evelyn Smith allegedly confessed that she killed comedian John Belushi was made in a party-like atmosphere and is "unreliable," a judge said at the defendant's preliminary hearing Monday. Municipal Court Judge James Nelson ruled he would not admit as evidence a widely-publicized statement in which Smith claimed to have administered the "coup de grace" that killed Belushi. The judge said the statements that could be used as evidence to determine whether Smith should stand trial on second-degree murder in Belushi's drug overdose death were:

- The defendant's admission that she maintained control of all the hypodermic needles.
- The defendant's statement that she was with the deceased up to at least 7:45 a.m. of the day of his death.
- That all heroin used by or administered to the deceased was hers, not his.

Entertainment Today

At the Bijou

Beauty and the Beast (1946). A haunting, dream-like, almost mystical telling of the famed fairy tale that is a classic of the French cinema. Director Jean Cocteau conjures up images that are as fanciful as the most enchanting Disney animation, but with the starkness of life action. Rightfully considered a masterpiece. At 7 p.m.

• The Philadelphia Story (1940). A smart and sophisticated romp with Kate Hepburn, Cary Grant and Jimmy Stewart playing three sides of the proverbial triangle. Its class act made under the sure touch of director George Cukor. At 9 p.m.

Television

On the networks: The gunsmoke has cleared on the bang-up Moldavia wedding, so "Dynasty" (ABC at 8 p.m.) begins a new season with the Carrington clan taking a head count of the survivors and, no doubt, contemplating about how to get blood stains out of designer originals. Meanwhile, Peter O'Toole joins the Burton clan (Liz and Dick, of course) in Under Milk Wood (IPT-12 at 8 p.m.), a promising, if obscure 1971 adaptation of Dylan Thomas' 1953 radio play. And leaving the Ewing clan must have had ill effects on Patrick Duffy because he pops up on "Hotel" (ABC at 9 p.m.) with multiple personalities. And for the record, "The Insiders" (ABC at 7 p.m.) debuts and "St. Elsewhere" (NBC at 9 p.m.) returns.

• On cable: Alan Alda made an intriguing screenwriting debut with The Seduction of Joe Tynan (HBO-4 at 11:40 p.m.), an ambitious but glib political drama that loses its good intentions in heavy-handed pretensions. Still, Alda, Meryl Streep, Barbara Harris and Melvyn Douglas give some good performances that they almost make the rather pointless material work.

Theater

Home Stretch, Craig Childers' bittersweet look at life and love in an old folks home, and Narcissism, Tobacco and Robinson Caruso, the Drawing Legion's trilogy of idiosyncratic playettes with music, will be presented at 8 p.m., in Studio A and Studio B, respectively, of the Theatre Building.

Music

The University Symphony Orchestra will begin its 1985-86 season with a concert in Hancher Auditorium at 8 p.m. James Dixon will conduct with pianist Kenneth Amada as guest soloist. Works by Beethoven, Haydn and Debussy are on the program.

• Country singer Jeannie C. Riley, of "Harper Valley P.T.A." fame, will be appearing in the West High Gym at 8 p.m.

Art

A discussion on early French film by Roger Hagdorn, a UI graduate student in French, and the showing of the classic French short, Ballet Mechanique, will be presented at 12:30 p.m. in the Museum of Art as part of its "Nourishing the Lunchtime Connoisseur" program. The presentation is in conjunction with the "Jean Metzinger in Retrospect" exhibition currently at the museum.

• The exhibition "Dolls You Wouldn't Want to Play With," a look at the nature and history of dolls, is closing today. It's the last chance to see the exhibit sponsored by the Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Council in the Arts Center, lower level of the Jefferson Building, 129 Washington St.

Nightlife

The Elvis Brothers won't be cruel as they get the crowd all shook up tonight at the Crow's Nest.

Speakers to take on aging and maturing

University Theatres and the UI Arts Outreach program will offer pre-performance lectures entitled "Growing Up, Growing Older" before the final two performances of Home Stretch Saturday and Sunday in the Theatre Building's 2nd Act Cafe. The first lecture, at 7 p.m. Saturday, will feature Jay Semel, project development director for the UI office of Educational Development and Research, and Kitty Buckwalter, a faculty member in the UI School of Nursing.

Semel has researched grants for projects on aging through the UI School of Social Work, while Buckwalter specializes in geriatrics and the care of the older adult.

Janice Wood Wetzel, director of the UI School of Social Work, will speak at 2 p.m. Sunday, before the 3 p.m. matinee performance of Home Stretch.

The pre-performance lectures are open to all audience members.

Ames to host Duck's Breath

By Michelle Tibodeau
Staff Writer

THEY'RE JUST five renaissance guys," Steve Baker said of Duck's Breath Mystery Theater, the comedy troupe he manages.

And, sure enough, like well-rounded renaissance men, the members of Duck's Breath, have hit just about every medium possible for a group of comedians. The group, which originated in Iowa City in 1975, will return this Friday to its home state to perform at 8 p.m. in C.Y. Stephens Auditorium in Ames.

The Ames show will be the group's only Iowa performance this fall. This marks a change for Duck's Breath, which has returned to Iowa City every year since leaving, with a percentage of the profits going to a $25,000 UI theater scholarship.

Why isn't the group coming to Iowa City? Things just didn't work out. The night following the Ames performance, they will be in Los Angeles doing a show. This past weekend was the dedication of the University Theatre addition, making it impossible to set up a performance schedule with the Theatre Department and they couldn't have come the weekend before because they were in New Mexico.

HOWEVER, DUCK'S BREATH members don't want the Iowa City community to feel abandoned. Baker said they are planning to come back in the spring, maybe for Riverfest. They're just too busy right now.

The Iowa State performance will include a lot of new material, since the group is in the process of discarding some of its old touring show. The first half will be mainly solo acts, with the second half composed of group sketches.

"We don't tour much anymore," Merle Kessler, a member of the troupe, said. "We try to avoid it Duck's Breath, an Iowa City-born comedy troupe, will be coming to Ames this weekend.

TV science test to take at home with your official No. 2 test-taking pencil.

Screenplays are also a part of the group's repertoire. "Zarda! Cow From Hell!" is the first screenplay Duck's Breath wrote. It's about a cow who walks into a nuclear reactor, grows huge and terrorizes the people of a small town, called Howdy, Iowa. They refer to it as the best movie never made.

Their present project is a low budget movie called "Pizza Dreams." This week they find out if the money will come through for their teen-oriented film, which Baker describes as, "Eraserhead meets The Breakfast Club."

MERLE KESSLER is the first Duck's Breath member to have a book published. It's called I Gotta Go, The Commentary of Ian Shoales and will be out in November. The book, a collection of Ian Shoales pieces, contains old and new material from "All Things Considered," his spots on "Nightline" and a few longer pieces written especially for the book.

Although Duck's Breath isn't famous yet, they are becoming well-known through their radio programs. Baker said Duck's Breath is drawing large crowds, even in places where they've never been before. In fact, people have begun asking how they derived a stage show from a radio act.

"It's funny to see the way audiences react when seeing the show for the first time after becoming accustomed to listening to the radio program. People are shocked and surprised at the costumes and grotesque facial expressions," Baker said.

Baker feels the group is on its way to fame. Besides media coverage from The Christian Science Monitor and The New York Times, Baker says, "We're getting turned down by better and better people all the time."

now, at least I do. We do radio and television."

Duck's Breath is well-known for its frequent appearances on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered" and "Morning Edition." They've also released some cassettes, including "Homemade Radio," "I Gotta Go! (Ian Shoales)" and "Ask Dr.

Science."

ONE OF DUCK'S BREATH characters, Ian Shoales, appears on ABC's "Nightline" as a social critic. He commentates on a variety of subjects, from last year's Miss America scandal to apartheid and the right-wing thought process.

The group also has finished a half-hour comedy special to air locally in San Francisco. It's called "The Dr. Science Official National Science Test" and is a

Violinist to perform at Hancher

Violin soloist Mark Peskanov, protegee of Isaac Stern, will perform works by Beethoven, Prokofiev, Staus and de Sarasate at 8 p.m. Thursday in Hancher Auditorium.

Peskanov's program, with piano accompaniment of Rita Sloan, will feature Sonata No. 1 in D Major, Op. 12, no. 1 by Ludwig Van Beethoven; Sonata in A Major, by Cesar Franck; duo in A Major by Franz Schubert; "Zapateado" and "Introduction and Tarantella," Op. 43, by Pablo de Sarasate.

A native of Odessa, U.S.S.R., Peskanov emigrated to the United States and has been a soloist with the Buffalo Philharmonic, Denver Symphony, London Philharmonic, the National Symphony in Washington D.C. and the New Orleans Philharmonic, among others.

A teenager when his family emigrated, he entered the Juilliard Pre-College division and received his B.A. from Juilliard in 1979. In 1976 he won Juilliard's annual violin competition.

THROUGH THE AMERICAN-ISREALI Cultural Foundation, Peskanov had the opportunity to play for Isaac Stern, who has since become Peskanov's major guide and advisor. In March 1978 he appeared both on tour and in Cincinnati with the Cincinnati Symphony under the direction of Sixten Ehrling.

Following Peskanov's New York City recital debut last year, Tim Page of the New York Times said of his performance: "Mr. Peskanov has it all — technique, temperament and taste. Word of mouth should insure that he never again plays to an empty seat in New York."

Peskanov's recital is part of the Hancher Auditorium Concert Series. Tickets for his Sept. 26 concert are priced $9 and $7 for the general public, $7 and $5 for UI students, and $4.50 and $3.50 for young people 18 and under when accompanied by an adult.
