Sex abuse no longer far-away problem

By Bart Jansen
Staff Writer

June used to study fourth-grade math, science and social studies like the rest of her classmates. "She's usually very happy-go-lucky," her mother said. "I think she really enjoys school."

But the then 9-year-old was photographed after school by her teacher, who put her in various poses.

The child may have smiled for the camera, not realizing why the photographs were being taken. She knew something was wrong, but couldn't identify it. She eventually told her mother.

June's name is fictitious, but

This is the first in a five-part series examining the consequences of the sexual abuse of children.

"Once they've said something, you must take action. You can't devalue what the child has said... I feel like my daughter did exactly the right thing" by telling me about it.

THE CHILD is one of at least eight local elementary students who said they were sexually exploited by a teacher well-liked by many of his students.

"My daughter came to me when he tried to take pictures of her," June's mother said. "She said she wasn't comfortable (with the teacher) and we supported her in that."

June told her mother the teacher took pictures of children on the playground and of individual students after school.

"We told her not to stay after school ever," the child's mother added. "I know she was terrified of him, (but) I didn't feel like I could make an accusation."

Complaints were not pursued at that time because the parents were unfamiliar with the school's principal and because the teacher had taken ill.

"IF I COULD have done what I wanted to do, I would have taken her out of the class," she said. Both mother and daughter had a bad feeling about the instructor, but couldn't pinpoint the problem.

Mayberry disavows initial accounts

By Bart Jansen
Staff Writer

Saying he was a "nervous wreck" during part of a police interrogation leading to his arrest, accused murderer James L. Mayberry testified Friday to try to suppress statements made to those officials.

Mayberry, 24, took the stand in his own defense at a preliminary suppression hearing in Johnson County District Court. The hearing comes because the defense filed a motion for suppression of "all statements or admissions allegedly made to law enforcement officials by defendant Mayberry," court records state.

Mayberry faces a first-degree murder charge for the July 2 killing of Julia Wise, 20, in her Hilltop Trailer home. His trial is set for Oct. 7.

Iowa City police and Iowa Department of Criminal Investigations (DCI) officials interrogated Mayberry on July 6 and July 10 about the murder and charged him with the crime at the end of the second interview.

THE DEFENSE CONTENTS Mayberry did not willingly cooperate with officials, but did so out of fear of being arrested. Mayberry had been read his Miranda rights, but had not been charged with the crime at the time of questioning.

Mayberry said he became a "nervous wreck" when DCI Special Agent Kenneth Sandy used a "hostile, accusing voice" which became "fairly loud" at times during the questioning.

All four law enforcement officials who interrogated Mayberry testified Thursday he had lied to them by repeatedly "changing his story."

When defense attorney Janice Becker asked Mayberry why he answered investigators' questions, he replied that he felt obligated to talk to them.

Merchants call for end to apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Almost 100 leading businessmen, contending "there is a better way," published newspaper advertisements Sunday to demand peace talks with South African black leaders and the abolition of apartheid.

The calls came on the eve of a major policy address scheduled by President Pieter Botha and as police reported a black man was burned to death and another was seriously injured in an attack by a mob of young blacks in Durban's Umlazi township Sunday.

On Saturday, six people died in fierce clashes between moderate Zulu tribesmen and radical black youths near Durban.

A group of 91 business leaders, including mining magnate Harry Oppenheimer, signed full-page advertisements in Afrikaans- and English-language newspapers Sunday, demanding an end to the white-minority government's policy of apartheid, or racial segregation.

"WE BELIEVE there is a better way for South Africa and we support equal opportunity," respect for the individual, freedom of enterprise and freedom of movement," said the businessmen, including top executives of foreign companies including Eastman Kodak, General Motors and the BMW auto company.

"We believe the reform process should be accelerated by: abolishing statutory race discrimination wherever it exists, negotiating with acknowledged black leaders about power sharing, granting full South African citizenship to all our peoples, restoring and entrenching the rule of law," the ads stated.

Among the signers were businessmen who flew to Lusaka, Zambia, earlier this month for talks with exiled African National Congress guerrillas opposed to white rule.

LEADING AFRIKANER businessman Anton Rupert delivered a similar message in a rare interview with opposition English-language newspapers and with the pro-government Rapport Afrikaans newspaper.

King warns against oppression 'legacy'

Activists have the power to instigate political change in society if they understand "the legacy" of oppression, said noted black leader Mel King during a speech in Van Allen Hall Friday night.

King, a professor of urban studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a former mayoral candidate in Boston, told his audience of about 200 UI students and faculty that their attendance demonstrated their commitment to political activism.

"I want to commend you. You are an inspiration," said King. "Groups such as this play an extremely important role in changing some of the policies in this country."

King turned to the past in order to explain "the legacy" which he defined as a historical perpetuation of political policies that protect the status of the ruling elite.

"If (the legacy) is the lineage of those who made the lofty statements in this country about human worth and dignity, who put together a constitutional document" that was discriminatory from the outset, said King.

THERE WERE NO women, no

blacks, no people who did not own land in the room when the U.S. Constitution was written — only wealthy white landowners, he added.

"Those policies... (were made) on the basis of maintaining their control and power and to make sure that the access to the resources and the decision-making process would be by them, and that they would set up a system where they would perpetuate that."

King stressed that "if you understand the 'legacy' and take hold and increase your numbers, as has been happening over the past several months, then I'm convinced that we will be back on course in terms of dealing with the issues of racism here in these United States and in South Africa."

He emphasized that the ongoing crisis in South Africa is intertwined with "the legacy" of all past and present struggles of oppressed people, mentioning a number of examples ranging from religious battles in the Middle East to slavery in the United States.

Weston warns of nuclear peril

By Suzanne McBride
Staff Writer

Although President Ronald Reagan is optimistic about possible arms reductions following recent talks with the Soviet foreign minister, a local nuclear arms expert remains concerned.

Soviet Eduard Shevardnadze this weekend proposed a joint 50 percent reduction in U.S. and U.S.S.R. strategic nuclear arsenals and a halt in Reagan's Star Wars defense plans. Reagan rejected the Star Wars proposal but said there is hope agreement can be reached on reducing nuclear arsenals.

But Burns Weston, the UI Bessie Dutton Murray law professor, told a group of more than 40 people at Mercy Hospital Sunday night that a more traditional method of defense should be used.

"We cannot accept the peril of nuclear weapons" for global defense, Weston said. "Therefore, we have to look for other ways (to provide defense)... The sooner we start thinking about these things, the sooner we'll be able to find alternative methods."

THE CURRENT NUCLEAR deterrence system has several "inherent contradictions built on a series of false assumptions," he said, including the belief there can be a limited war between the U.S. and U.S.S.R., that a victory in a nuclear war is possible and that nuclear deterrence can work forever.

Weston compared the nuclear deterrence situation to a joke about a "man falling off a skyscraper."

"When he's going by the 30th story, someone calls out, 'how are you doing?' The man replies 'okay so far,'" said Weston. "This is similar to the mentality that we're doing fine so far."

The Reagan administration has said an agreement depends on how Soviets respond to U.S. counterproposals.

Weston, however, said, "No one else is going to do anything about it but you... It ultimately depends upon us."

"I find it astonishing that human society will 'rally to the flag' in order to save a person from committing suicide, but in terms of global suicide, very few are concerned about saving the world," said Weston.

Weapons losses disclosed

NEW YORK — The Pentagon loses or misplaces $1 billion worth of weapons each year and millions of dollars worth of the arms end up on the black market, the New York Times reported Sunday.

Officials from the Defense Department, other Federal agencies and members of Congress told the Times that theft from military bases, ships and warehouses is the principal source of the black market's supply of advanced American-made weapons intended for military use. Land mines, plastic explosives, missiles, bazookas, grenade launchers and artillery have reached the black market, often becoming available for sale to hostile governments or terrorists, the newspaper said.

Soviets may end stalemate

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz, while insisting the United States will not give up its "Star Wars" program, said Sunday a Soviet proposal to cut superpower nuclear arsenals may end the arms talks stalemate.

Shultz was questioned on NBC's "Meet the Press" about an unconfirmed Soviet plan that would cut nuclear stockpiles by 50 percent. The issue of President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative project to create a shield against nuclear weapons has been a major stumbling block in U.S.-Soviet negotiations, but Shultz said a shift in Moscow's stance may open "a way of getting around the preconditions."

UI study examines abuse

IOWA CITY — Certain characteristics in a woman's family background and personal history can increase her risk of being physically abused by her husband, a UI researcher says.

Victims of spouse abuse typically married early and were raised in families in which child abuse or spouse abuse had occurred, said C. Susan de Blois, who has been working on the seven-year-old study. The 111 women involved in the survey had little or no formal education beyond high school, and had held primarily low-skill, short-term jobs. In addition, many of them had given birth to their first child either before or shortly after marriage. Such characteristics do not "set-up" a woman for abuse, but do seem to indicate which women are more likely to be victims of spouse abuse, she said.

Earthquake figures updated

MEXICO CITY — The official death toll in Mexico's two killer earthquakes climbed to 5,223 with 1,500 missing and an estimated 40,000 injured Sunday and U.S. Embassy officials said they believed 24 missing Americans died in hotels that collapsed.

Julio A. Millan, a leader of the Industrial Chamber of Commerce, estimated earthquake damages at $5 billion and said the losses would require foreign financing in addition to domestic savings to rebuild Mexico City. Millan also said he believed Mexico would have to work out new terms on its $98 billion foreign debt, the second highest in the developing world.

Gorbachev visit denounced

PARIS — Thousands of demonstrators protesting this week's visit to France by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev marched through the streets of the capital Sunday demanding freedom for imprisoned Soviet Jews.

The two-hour protest by an estimated 30,000 people, attended by parliamentarians, show business personalities and relatives of detained Soviet citizens, occurred three days before Gorbachev was due to arrive for a four-day visit. The demonstrators shouted anti-Soviet slogans, carried banners and released thousands of blue balloons with the inscription "Freedom for Soviet Jews." All demonstrations during the Soviet leader's visit have been banned by French authorities.

Woman abducted for four hours

By Julie Eisele
Staff Writer

A local woman was abducted for four hours late Saturday after a man forced her into a car while she was using an automatic teller machine at an Iowa City bank.

The woman was released after she was "forced to ride with him in his vehicle," she told Iowa City police.

The woman told police the unknown man had been following her for a week.

Police reports indicate she was forced into the man's car near an automatic teller machine at First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., before midnight Saturday.

Police records did not state whether the woman was harmed. Police detectives were not available to provide further details Sunday.

The incident remains under investigation.

Report: The manager of Seville Apartments, 900 W. Benton St., reported to Iowa City police Friday evening a man was seen masturbating on the front steps of an apartment complex. The man was described as a white male standing 5 feet, 8 inches tall, "chubby," with brown curly hair.

Report: Lisa Yessenow, 1904 Delwood Drive, reported an attempted burglary in progress at the rear of her home early Sunday. Police located no suspect.

Report: John Dietzman, 308 S. Gilbert St., Apt. 1120, told Iowa City police Saturday he chased a man from his front door who was tampering with the lock about 2 a.m. The man was described as a black male with a beard, weighing about 150 pounds and wearing a red jacket.

Courts

By Bart Jansen
Staff Writer

The City of Iowa City has filed suit in Johnson County District Court for a temporary injunction against a local businessman performing any additional construction on two of his properties.

Stanley Max Yocum, owner of properties at Showers Estate, No. 63, and 520 Kimball Road, is allegedly improving the properties without the necessary building permits, according to the suit.

The suit states Yocum continued to construct an addition onto the structure at Showers Estate after the Department of Housing and Inspection Services denied a building permit for the project.

The building permit was denied because the addition didn't comply with city zoning requirements, according to the suit.

The suit also alleges that Yocum is performing plumbing work at 520 Kimball Road, which first requires a city plumbing permit.

Richard Frantz, senior building inspector for Iowa City, gave a stop-work order for the repairs, which was allegedly defied by Yocum, who continued "to perform plumbing work and by covering and/or concealing certain plumbing pipes in said structure," according to the suit.

Iowa City is asking the court to order a temporary injunction against the repairs, or that the necessary permits be acquired to complete the construction. A valid certificate of occupancy is needed for the structure at 520 Kimball Road.

William Mearl Kofron, 34, North Liberty, made an initial appearance Friday in Johnson County District Court on the charge of electronic and mechanical eavesdropping.

Coralville police were contacted by a female resident on Eastview Drive about a tape recorder hooked up to her telephone, court records state. Police waited until Kofron returned Thursday evening to retrieve the recorder and arrested him, according to court records.

Kofron waived his right to a preliminary hearing and awaits arraignment.

Bus service offers a safer way home

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

UI students who stay out late on the weekends will soon be offered a free "safe ride" home anywhere in the Iowa City area. "We have a program set up called 'Safe Ride,'" said UI Student Senate Treasurer Mike Ketchmark. "It will provide a safe form of transportation for University of Iowa students to anywhere in Iowa City or Coralville after Cambus stops running." Don Schutt, the hall coordinator for Daum Residence Hall, said he has been working with the senate for about a month on the project, which he called an "extension of Cambus service." "The goal is to make sure people are getting home okay," said Schutt. "The bus will take the riders to their doorsteps." "We're not saying it's for one thing or another," Ketchmark said, but he said he suspects people who fear assaults walking home from the library or who don't want to drive home after drinking will want to take advantage of the service. The safe transportation will have a trial weekend on Oct. 25 and 26. On that weekend a bus will leave from the Pentacrest area every 15 minutes between 11:00 p.m. and 2:30 a.m.

SEN. STACI RHINE, who is the chair of the senate's City Relations Committee, said her committee will be supplying most of the volunteer drivers. Rhine also said the trial weekend will give the organizers an idea of the number of riders who will use the service and the cost of providing it. Schutt said if the bus service works well enough it may become available on more weekends and possibly during finals week.

To insure order on the bus, Ketchmark said there will be "another rider to protect other passengers and the driver." The cost of renting the buses will be paid by the UI Student Senate, with some additional aid coming from private sources, Ketchmark said. Rhine estimated the cost of the service, which will use three vans for two nights, will be less than $350.

Joe Isobaker tells a crowd of protesters outside Jessup Hall Friday the tide is turning against investments in apartheid South Africa.

Protesters vocal at anti-apartheid rally

By Earl Johnston III
Staff Writer

Approximately 40 people attended a rally organized by the Iowa Coalition Against Apartheid in front of Jessup Hall Friday night before a speech by black leader Mel King.

Although the small gathering was in stark contrast to last spring's anti-apartheid demonstrations during which 136 protesters were arrested, the vocal protesters at Friday's rally sang and chanted anti-capitalist songs before marching down Iowa Avenue for King's speech.

Coalition member Joe Isobaker told the people at the rally that all across the country the tide is beginning to turn against American investments in South Africa.

He said that within the past year dozens of institutions, including the UI, have divested some, if not all, of their finances in South Africa.

"It's true that this spring was definitely a high point for us," said Isobaker, referring to the large UI protests that marked the final weeks of classes in the spring. "Granted, it was our act, and it's a hard act to follow."

FOLLOWING LAST SPRING'S protests, UI President James O. Freedman formed a special committee that later recommended the UI divest more than $2 million of its stockholdings in firms conducting business in South Africa.

Isobaker said the coalition plans this semester to participate in a national day of student action against apartheid sponsored by the United Nations and host a national speaking tour of representatives from South Africa and Nicaragua.

"But we also feel the need for the anti-apartheid movement to address racism in the United States," said Isobaker, adding that the coalition has been working over the summer to establish a "dialogue" with minority groups on campus.

"We played ball with the university last spring, and we won. There's no point in starting up another game," said Sen. Craig Perrin, head of the UI Student Senate for Free South Africa Committee.

PERRIN POINTED out that the UI has divested all but four of its stocks amounting to approximately $200,000 in South Africa.

In addition, Perrin said that Reagan's recently proposed economic sanctions on South Africa have cut off the coalition's "avenues to effect change on the national level." He said that such sanctions are aimed only at "duping" the American public and at "quelling protests at home."

Coalition member Mike Ascroft agreed with Perrin in a press conference earlier by saying that "to say what the president has suggested... is effective is perpetuating a big lie."

"Reagan has deflected our attention from South Africa, and what he has done means virtually nothing," added Ascroft.

"It's apparent that the only time we get any attention is when we're a screaming hoard," said Perrin. "But we should view last spring's activities as a step in the process of dismantling the entire system of apartheid and not as a solitary event."

Plane with skydivers nose dives

JENKINSBURG, Ga. (UPI)—A small plane packed with skydivers preparing for a formation jump stalled shortly after takeoff Sunday and nose dived into a rural road, killing all 17 people aboard.

The single-engine Cessna 208 Caravan, owned by the Westwind Parachute Club, stalled three minutes after takeoff from the club's private airport 45 miles south of Atlanta and crashed at about 12:15 p.m., police said.

The plane was regularly used for parachute jumps, but officials questioned whether it had the capacity to carry the 16 club members who crammed aboard along with the pilot.

"That's questionable," Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker said. "If the aircraft were stripped down completely with no seats in it, then maybe. But that's certainly going to be part of the investigation."

BARKER SAID the plane, owned by Air Carrier Express Services of Atlanta, climbed to an altitude of 1,000 feet before witnesses saw it stall. A second plane spotted the wreckage.

"They saw the crash sight and they came back, picked up experienced jumpers and then went back out," said Chuck Garwood, a senior jumper with the club.

Parachutists aboard the second plane jumped to the crash spot but found all aboard the Cessna dead, Garwood said.

The Cessna was capable of carrying the 16 skydivers and the club used one plane to save money, he said.

"That aircraft has the capabilities for 16," said Garwood. "It's more cost-effective."

Garwood said the club members who remained at the airfield hours after the crash were shocked.

"PUT YOURSELF in our place, where 17 of your friends have died and you'll understand what the mood is here," Garwood said.

The parachute club's members travel throughout the East Coast to perform, Garwood said. He said the club has about 50 regular members who travel to the airfield several times a week to practice formation jumps.

The plane hit with such impact rescuers had to use metal-cutting devices to remove the victims' bodies from the plane, police spokeswoman Kay Jones said.

The bodies were taken to the National Guard Armory in Jackson, where a temporary morgue was set up, Jones said, and authorities began trying to reach relatives of the victims.

National Transportation Safety Board Chairman Jim Burnett was on his way from Washington to Jenkinsburg to coordinate the investigation into the cause of the crash, an NTSB spokesman said.

Delaware oil spill is worst ever

CLAYMONT, Del. (UPI)—A supertanker ran aground in the Delaware River, gashed a hole in its side and spilled 435,000 gallons of crude oil that stretched Sunday "like a piece of licorice," threatening water supplies and wildlife preserves.

Delaware Gov. Michael Castle called it the worst oil spill ever on the river.

The 800-foot Sunoco Grand Eagle, loaded with 22 million gallons of crude, left a 15-mile-long trail of thick oil from Philadelphia to Wilmington after running aground in shallow water at Cherry Island near the Delaware Memorial Bridge about 11:30 p.m. Saturday, Coast Guard spokesman Mike Kelly said.

The Panamanian-registered ship freed itself and steamed ahead to its destination, a Sunoco refinery in Marcus Hook, Pa., spilling the crude oil from its damaged hull as it moved.

CASTLE CRITICIZED the tanker pilot for continuing to the refinery after the accident, saying it caused a five-hour delay in alerting Delaware officials of the spill.

"As far as I'm concerned, it shouldn't have taken more than five minutes," Castle told a news conference. "Any delay in a situation like that is very difficult because it delays our efforts to contain the spill."

While cleanup efforts were under way, authorities feared the slick would spread farther south into the Delaware Bay.

"It's stretching out and thinning like a piece of licorice when someone pulls it," Coast Guard spokesman Robert Mitchell said.

THE SUPERTANKER'S OWNER, International Ship Finance of Panama, pledged to pay for the cleanup, Mitchell said.

The DelBay, an oil recovery ship owned by a cooperative of eight petroleum companies, began skimming the muck from the river.

"The slick will flow with the tide. The unknown factor is just how much the DelBay can scoop up and how fast it can do it," said Jack Wilson, Delaware's secretary of Natural Resources and Environmental Control.

The slick threatened waterfowl and sensitive marshes in southeast Pennsylvania and northern Delaware, including the Bombay Hook Wildlife Refuge, the largest on the East Coast for migrating Canada Geese.

Hostages of Islamic Jihad may hold news conference

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—A caller claiming to represent the terrorist group Islamic Jihad said Sunday a group of Americans held hostage in Lebanon will hold a news conference to deliver "messages" to the Reagan administration.

In telephone calls to two Western news agencies in Beirut, the caller did not say how many captives would appear, nor did he give a time or location for the news conference.

Islamic Jihad, held responsible for a series of bombings and kidnappings in the Middle East, has claimed direct responsibility for the abductions of six Americans and two Frenchmen among the 14 Westerners held captive in Lebanon.

"As for the hostages in our hands, they will hold a news conference to address messages to the American administration, public opinion, humanitarian personalities and the hostages' families," the caller said to one agency.

SPEAKING TO the other agency, the anonymous Arabic-speaking man said only that a group of hostages would appear.

Families of the hostages reacted cautiously to the announcement.

"Everything right now for the families is waiting with bated breath to see the news conference and to see what they have to say," said Peggy Say, sister of Terry Anderson, Beirut bureau manager for the Associated Press, who was kidnapped in March.

Secretary of State George Shultz, asked about the hostage situation on NBC television, said he knew "only what I've heard reported. Of course, we welcome seeing them, if they are to appear alive. We welcome any release, but we want all of the hostages back."

Shultz reiterated American opposition to negotiating with the kidnappers, who are demanding the release of 17 associates jailed in Kuwait for bombings.

"WE DON'T THINK it's wise... All that does is invite other people to take hostages," he said.

Say was critical of Shultz's comments, saying she hoped they were only "for public consumption."

"If it's not, I would think it would be more than a little stupid on the administration's part," she said. "The latest demand from the captors is that they would settle for the release of two of the Kuwait prisoners."

"I don't think they're going to back down any more than that and I think if the administration is willing to give up possibly 14 lives on that kind of a principle, I think that borders on stupidity," she said.

A seventh American hostage, Presbyterian minister Benjamin Weir, was released Sept. 14 from 16 months in captivity after similar telephone messages to Western news agencies. Sunday's caller said Weir was freed "to give the American government an opportunity, which has been set."

Weir's release was the first public indication that Islamic Jihad had set a deadline for the release of the 17 "comrades" imprisoned in Kuwait.

"WE ALSO CONFIRM to the families of the hostages, American public opinion and world public opinion that as regards what happens after this period, the American government will assume full responsibility for the lives of the hostages," he said.

"We are waiting for this opportunity to expire, after which our attitude will be decisive," the caller said.

The caller said Weir's release displayed Islamic Jihad's "humanitarian" attitude and declared that the group would support any "humanitarian initiative (undertaken) by any personality" in connection with the hostages.

Terry Waite, an assistant to England's Archbishop of Canterbury, Tuesday asked for a meeting with the captors, saying he helped win freedom for Weir through a "trusted intermediary."

The Reagan administration said it would not pressure Kuwait to free the men, who were jailed for a series of bombings in Kuwait against U.S., French and Kuwaiti targets in December 1983.

The Kuwaiti government also insisted it would not bow to demands from Islamic Jihad.

But King also stressed that change in society starts at the individual level.

"We have to each think of our behavior and the ways that each of us supports racism," said King. "How do we behave when people make anti-Semitic, derogatory or sexist statements which devalue and dehumanize people? We must speak out so those around us can be clear where we stand." Calling for each member of the audience to take the fury of protest "from the streets to the suites," King reminded his audience that they should all be devoted to ending the legacy of oppression everywhere on the globe.

"There is one struggle, one fight and we have to put it together or none of these struggles will ever be successful," said King.

King's address was sponsored by several UI student and faculty groups including the Student Senate, Collegiate Associations Council and Liberal Arts Student Association.

Mayberry

"I REMEMBER an officer saying I could be brought in for questioning against my will," Mayberry said. He added he didn't know much about the law and considered a subpoena "about the same as a warrant" for arrest.

"I felt I had an obligation to answer the officer's questions," Mayberry said. "I wanted to go back to work and I didn't want to answer any more questions."

Iowa City Police Detective Gerald Knock, who was present during the second interrogation, testified Friday that Mayberry had not said he wanted to stop answering questions.

Mayberry also testified that during the second interrogation, DCI Special Agent Richard C. Benson held him against his will.

"Benson said, 'No, you can't (leave). You need to answer more questions,'" Mayberry said.

"I would disagree with that," Knock said. He said Mayberry wasn't told he couldn't leave until after he was arrested.

WHEN MAYBERRY declined to answer further questions during the second interrogation, he was arrested and charged with murder.

In other testimony, Mayberry said Sandy offered to make a "deal" and lessen the charges against him.

"They said if I would be truthful, they would see if they could make a deal," Mayberry said. Sandy "told me they could work out a deal with me to get the charges lowered."

Sandy was called to the stand for the second time Friday and denied having ever used the word "deal."

If Johnson County District Court Judge L. Vern Robinson sustains the defense motion to suppress Mayberry's statements, they will not be allowed as evidence in the murder trial. Robinson will also decide whether to allow as evidence reports made by officers from notes taken during the interrogations.

Robinson's decision will come sometime before the trial begins.

Abuse

The teacher, who is no longer employed in the Iowa City School District, was arrested a year later for taking suggestive pictures of his students. He pleaded guilty to one of three counts of wanton neglect of a minor, and was sentenced to two years probation and ordered to receive counseling.

Other parents discovered their children were also victims after the teacher was arrested.

"I don't know how many pictures he actually took," a second mother said. "I know of at least one occasion."

In the majority of child sexual offenses, the perpetrator is someone the victims know and even like.

DAVID SCHOR, chairman of the UI Hospitals subcommittee on child abuse and neglect, estimates between 80 and 95 percent of child sexual abuse involves a family member or another adult well-known to the family.

"The vast majority of child sexual abuse is within the family," Schor said.

Because the child knows the perpetrator, the child may feel at fault when the person is prosecuted. When classmates said the teacher had done something wrong, one victim defended him out of friendship.

"I think it made her cling more strongly to him," the second mother said.

Neither of these two families was contacted by Iowa City police during the investigation.

POLICE DET. Tom Widmer, who filed the charges against the instructor, said the large quantity of materials found during the search of the teacher's home led officials to interview only the girls who were photographed the most.

"I went on identifying the girls that I had volume on," Widmer said. "I discreetly contacted some of the people who could contact the children."

Widmer said he interviewed six girls involved and pressed charges only in the cases within the three-year statute of limitations.

Some of the victims' parents not contacted by Widmer attempted to offer assistance in the criminal investigation.

"I went to the principal and he assured me that they didn't need anybody else" to press charges, June's mother said. "I felt badly that I hadn't gone forward the year before."

AFTER THE arrest was made, some parents were upset with the lack of support offered by school administrators in answering questions raised by parents and children.

"They had no professional guidance for the kids with questions," the second mother said. "We were very dissatisfied with the school district providing no immediate support for staff or parents."

She was concerned whether the family had sufficiently "dealt with it without leaving a lasting scar on our child's psyche," she said. "We had no support for parents to answer kids' questions and tell them they did nothing wrong."

Because parents were unfamiliar with how to deal with this problem, "we wanted some information available at this happened," June's mother said. She added she has read six books on the subject on her own to better understand how to deal with the problem.

AN IMPORTANT aspect of helping the child through these experiences lies in the parents believing their child. If the child is not believed when she discloses the incident, she may be tormented by the event psychologically throughout her life.

Schor states the keys to responding to a child's admission are believing and supporting the child. Schor suggested parents who suspect their children have been abused should contact the Department of Human Services or the police.

The parents did not believe their children will suffer lasting effects from the experiences, but the thought that it happened here brought the far-away problem of child sexual abuse into their own neighborhood.

"I don't think she'll ever forget it," the second mother said.

Tuesday's article will examine the scope of child sexual abuse and the psychological effects of the crime.

STATE TREASURER

Michael K. Fitzgerald

GREAT IOWA TREASURE HUNT

Since May, 1985 more than $1.2 million in abandoned money belonging to more than 9,951 people has been reported to the office of the Treasurer of State. Over 131 people are missing owners of more than $1,000. All of the names listed in this ad are reported as losing more than $25.00. Nearly all of these funds are still held by the companies who reported them. The abandoned money could be forgotten savings or checking accounts, utility refunds or deposits, uncashed insurance benefit checks or lost stocks. The Treasurer also receives abandoned safe deposit box contents. If you are named in this ad or are the heir to one of these people, then fill out the coupon below and send it to the Treasurer's Office and we will direct you to the company holding your abandoned money. If the rightful owner does not claim the money within 60 days, then the money will be turned over to the Treasurer's Office, where it can be claimed at any time.

The step forward, many more needed

Ever so rarely that moment comes along. An award is given out that is painfully appropriate. The first May Brodbeck Professorship being bestowed upon Linda Kerber looks as such a golden moment.

To truly understand the significance of this selection, one must harken back to May Brodbeck's tenure at the UI. She served as vice president for academic affairs from 1974 to 1982. In this role she "sustained the faculty ... their ability to do work and live in an intellectually vibrant atmosphere," Kerber said.

According to UI College of Liberal Arts Dean Gerhard Loewenberg, Brodbeck initiated "development assignments," a means for faculty to take a semester off to refresh their competence as scholars.

A pleasant irony lies in the fact that a faculty chair named for Brodbeck will continue to sustain the highest quality teaching and research.

A second irony emerges from the parallel lives led by Brodbeck and Kerber.

Kerber joined the UI history faculty in 1971 after teaching at Stanford and San Jose State universities. She has published three books and has risen to national prominence as a historian concentrating on women's history.

Two years ago at a memorial service for Brodbeck, Linda Kerber pointed to four qualities embodied by May Brodbeck: imagination, persistence, discretion and feminism.

Asked whether Kerber sees any of these qualities in herself she admits, "I'm very comfortable with my femininity, and I think that May was too." Indeed, both Kerber and Brodbeck were instrumental in nurturing the UI Women's Studies Program.

As for the other qualities, Kerber modestly says, "These are qualities one tries to embody — an important agenda. But can anyone say they are characteristically imaginative, persistent or discreet?"

Yet the glory in this academic award is tarnished by the fact that without more such rewards the faculty at the UI will wither and die. Asked whether the UI is behind other universities in the number of endowed chairs, Loewenberg remarked, "decidedly so."

Kerber and other top-notch professors must dodge offers from prestigious Eastern and Western universities to stay at the UI — and the incentives to stay are too often missing.

The UI Office of Academic Affairs estimates the UI has about 35 to 40 endowed chairs, and of these Loewenberg said only two are reserved exclusively for liberal arts faculty members.

UI President James O. Freedman is trying to increase these numbers through his endowment drive and also through requests for state funding directed at named faculty chairs.

It is critical that his efforts pan out. Quality UI faculty must be retained.

As Kerber said of Brodbeck: "She understood that scholars don't just live alone in the world; they have obligations. By naming a chair for her we understand that scholarship comes clothed in a concern for context."

False hopes

There he goes again.

President Reagan, in his weekly radio address Saturday, expressed his belief that the United States and the Soviet Union can make real progress toward arms control during the upcoming Geneva talks. He told the world of his hopes for talks "free of preconditions and other obstacles to progress."

Ironical words from the man who has placed the "Star Wars" defense system off-limits in any arms reduction talks between the two superpowers. In light of the fact that the space-based defense system is perhaps the major worry of the Soviets, Reagan's "hopes" for progress in arms control seem patently false.

Tuition hike will hurt students, won't help educational quality

By Jeffrey Cox

IS A 5 to 6 percent tuition increase "moderate"? Iowa's leaders apparently believe students can live with it. But exactly how "moderate" is that level of increase? Moderate compared to what?

It does not look so moderate when compared to the level of personal disposable income in Iowa. Since 1981, when the state Board of Regents began the practice of yearly tuition increases, personal after-tax income in Iowa has hardly risen at all. Yet the regents during that period have raised in-state undergraduate tuition from $950 per year to $1,304 per year, a 37 percent increase. If the proposed increases are instituted, the increase since 1981 will be 46 percent. These represent real increases over the ability of Iowans to pay.

The regents are making a fundamental change in the character of the UI as a public institution accessible to all Iowans. They are making this change with the warm support of the Iowa Legislature, which only provided a 1 percent increase to the UI's operating budget this year and is now asking for more than that back.

BUT DOESN'T everyone have to make sacrifices? Shouldn't students be willing to pay their share? Perhaps so. But who is being asked to make the sacrifices?

The tax changes introduced by the Reagan administration and the Iowa state legislature, along with the recession, have redistributed income away from working people and poor people to investors and corporations. There is every reason to believe students from blue-collar households and medium-sized farm families are finding the costs of higher education more and more difficult to bear. It is naive to believe that real increases in the costs of attending college do not prevent some of those students from attending college at all.

Guest Opinion

They are the ones who are being asked to make the greatest sacrifice, a sacrifice of the skills necessary to survive in our new supply-side paradise of 7 to 11 percent unemployment rates. They are the ones who have no one to speak up on their behalf before the regents.

FEDERAL FINANCIAL AID has increased little if at all under the Reagan administration. It is unlikely to increase and may be cut during the next three years. The amount of money available to individuals from the Pell grants for very low-income students has not kept up with the education costs.

The means-testing of federal Guaranteed Student Loans has drastically reduced the number of undergraduates receiving some form of financial aid. Fifty eight percent of undergraduates received some form of financial aid in 1981-82; only 38 percent in 1984-85.

The effects of this serious backward trend in educational opportunity have been disguised by the surge in enrollment. While working class families have faced large increases in the real costs of higher education, the UI has been profiting from the difficulties of private schools by enrolling large numbers of middle-class students, many from out of state, who would have enrolled at more expensive schools at better times.

SINCE THE STATE provides a relatively small percentage of the financial aid distributed by the UI, the only thing the state can do to maintain the UI's accessibility is to keep tuition low. Low tuition is preferable to means-tested financial aid anyway, since it is well known that the mysteries, complexities, and often the embarrassment of means-testing are themselves a deterrent for precisely those students who are most in need of an education. Our increasing resort to means-tested programs itself damages the accessibility of the UI.

The regents should pursue Regent Percy Harris's suggestion of a tuition freeze, followed by an appeal to the state legislature to make up the difference. If the regents are unwilling to ask for a tuition freeze, students should appeal directly to the legislature to impose one. Iowa students already pay the 12th highest average tuition in the nation, while state appropriations per student rank 22nd.

If our legislators can find $20 million to repeal the state sales tax on industrial machinery and equipment, and $30 million to fund the World Trade Center, they can find $7 million to maintain the accessibility of our public institutions. If they want affluent students to share the sacrifices, they should ask the parents of those students to pay a modest increase in the state income tax, which is now legally evaded by many wealthy Iowans.

IF THEY ARE unable or unwilling to do that, students and faculty and administrators should be willing to make sacrifices in order to keep our universities open and accessible. We can live with a tuition freeze without any fundamental or permanent damage to education quality.

Our basic funding problem comes from the legislature's unwillingness to consider any means of raising new revenue from anyone but the poor, and until we can persuade them to change their minds on that issue, educational quality will be in serious danger. The relatively small amount brought in by tuition increases will exclude students from the UI without solving our financial crisis.

Jeffrey Cox is an associate professor in the UI History Department.

Taking a stand on racism in business

"We have to each think of our behavior and the ways that each of us supports racism. How do we behave when people make anti-Semitic, derogatory or sexist statements which devalue and dehumanize people? We must speak out so those around us can be clear where we stand." — Mel King, anti-apartheid activist.

A COUPLE weekends ago the UI Sailing Club held a regatta at Lake Macbride. A perfectly innocent afternoon, if you disregard who sponsored the event — Adolph Coors Brewing Co. of Golden, Colo.

Remember the fervor when "the taste of the Rockies" came to the tall corn state back in the late 1970s? In those days Coors beer was so popular the brewery rationed rather than promoted its stock. But in intervening years

Caveat Emptor

Coors' tattered record on civil rights has caught up with its profits ledger.

Labor unions have been sponsoring a boycott of Coors for the past eight years with ebbing and rising commitments from minority organizations.

THE ORIGINAL RUB is based on discriminatory hiring and promoting practices directed by Coors against minorities and women. According to the AFL-CIO, Coors continues to force all of its workers to submit to lie detector tests, search and seizure tactics, forced physical examinations and forfeited seniority rights.

Organized labor launched a strike against Coors in 1977, with the arguments revolving around the lie detector tests and forced loyalty oaths, as well as race and sex discrimination in hiring. The two factions never resolved their differences.

The discriminatory actions were elaborated upon when the company's chief executive disclosed his discriminatory attitude. Last year brewery chairman William Coors had the audacity to tell a banquet room full of blacks, "One of the best things slave traders did was to drag your ancestors over here in chains." If this wasn't bad enough, he continued to explain that "blacks lack the intellectual capacity to succeed."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People lashed out with a short-lived boycott, which was broken by Coors' vague promises of concessions. Coors made a similar and equally insincere settlement with Latino organizations — buckling under not because of a renewed love of equality but because of the almighty dollar. Minorities constitute nearly 20 percent of Coors' market.

THIS SUMMER The New York Times described Coors' new philanthropic bent as "a burst of social and civic programs ... unparalleled in the corporate world."

Company statistics confirm that $625 million will be spent over the next five years on minority-oriented publicity stunts.

In light of the situation, I urge boycott of the following products: Coors, Coors Light, Herman Joseph's, Killian's Irish Red, Golden Lager and the new wine cooler Colorado Chiller.

In addition, if supposedly enlightened institutions such as the UI continue to tolerate a racist corporation sponsoring recreational events, there is little hope for the power of consumers in demanding ethical behavior from their suppliers.

Anti-Israel agenda

To the Editor:

The tragic fact that many Palestinians still live in refugee camps due directly to their usefulness as a political weapon against Israel. Katie Halbach's Sept. 19 letter ignores the role that Arab leadership has played in preventing amicable resettlement for the refugees.

Palestine Liberation Organization officials have unabashedly admitted that they are interested in creating a separate West Bank state only as a first step toward eventually creating a Palestinian state in all of Israel, and they refuse to rescind those parts of their Covenant calling for the destruction of Israel. A senior member of the PLO Executive Council has said "The founding of a Palestinian state is a new goal in the continuing battle against Israel."

Given their agenda, is it any great wonder that Israel has not wanted to negotiate with the PLO?

For their part, most Arab governments spurn any suggestion of refugee integration as a clever device to "solve" the Palestinian problem. They insist that they remain refugees, living in camps, as a means of unifying opposition to Israel.

Halbach complains "The American media labels Palestinians 'terrorists.'" Does she have a more accurate term for those Palestinians who bomb and massacre civilians and then proudly claim credit? She objects to U.S. financial support for Israel. Would it be better to have the Soviet-backed countries in the Middle East wipe out the one democracy in that region? Unlike PLO attacks, for which the perpetrators receive praise in the Arab world, the terrible events in Sabra and Shatila three years ago were immediately denounced by Israeli leadership and those responsible were prosecuted. The democratic values that Israel society upholds were clear when a full 400,000 people showed up to protest the Palestinian deaths.

Resettlement of the refugees will only come about through direct negotiations between Israel and Palestinians who are willing to coexist with Israel rather than determined to destroy it.

AIDS myths, realities

To the Editor:

In defense of Caroline Dieterle, nothing "seems rather extreme" in its indictment of Christianity ("Practicing sin," DI, Sept. 25) when one looks at 2,000 years of "brotherly" carnage against non-believers and believers in the name of the "true and living Christ." Especially when one realizes that tens of thousands of the witches and their companions who were burned at the stake were in fact guilty of nothing more than being lesbians and gay men. If the Jewish people are justified in never forgetting the atrocities of Nazi Germany, are gays and lesbians any less justified in their distrust of anyone espousing a belief system that has historically and systematically sought their extinction?

As for Mary Minette's rationale for not giving AIDS patients treatment different from any other blood-related disease because of the fear on the part of medical personnel, her whole argument collapses completely when one asks why intelligent, trained professional hospital personnel would react in such a manner in the first place unless UI Hospitals and Clinics has been remiss in providing adequate education and training for its staff in the care of AIDS patients.

Most gay men know what the myths and the realities of the disease are. We have held our brothers who are suffering from AIDS until their last breath, regardless of the danger or lack thereof. Yet UI Hospitals drags its feet in developing rational and humane policies regarding AIDS patients. It infuriates me to think that I would not be allowed the comfort of my chosen companion(s) if I were stricken with AIDS and being treated at UI Hospitals, simply because he or they were not family as defined by some antiquated definition of the word.

Some very outdated policies and procedures are in urgent need of revision before the interests of the gay Iowa City community's well-being are met. Minette's perspective of a progressive Iowa City community along with its health care services is obviously one viewed from a privileged position of the majority.

Legionnaire's disease spreads

By Earl Johnston III
Staff Writer

UI Hospitals officials this weekend reported the third case of Legionnaire's disease at the hospitals within the past week.

However, this time officials say the patient was admitted to the hospital last week with symptoms of the disease — which include a high fever, chills and abdominal pains.

"The patient came in with the illness," said Michael Massanari, UI associate epidemiologist and acting chair of the UI Infection Control Committee.

"This is the time of year for the disease, so we weren't very surprised to see it," said Massanari, pointing out the bacteria responsible for causing Legionnaire's disease can be found "literally all over outside."

The diagnosis comes as hospital officials continue to try and determine if two kidney transplant patients reportedly suffering from the disease early last week contracted it inside the hospitals.

Since the initial diagnoses of the disease last week, one of the patients has been released and the other continues to improve, according to Massanari.

THE TWO EARLIER diagnoses caused officials to evacuate ten transplant patients from the fifth-floor south wing of the General Hospital. This action was taken to conduct tests on the hospitals' plumbing system in an effort to detect the bacteria responsible for causing the disease.

That ward will remain vacant until those test results are known later this week, according to Doug Williamson, hospital spokesman and special assistant to its director.

The ten transplant patients were moved from the fifth floor to the second floor of the Carver Pavilion where their water supply is being closely monitored.

Massanari said the condition of the latest Legionnaire's disease patient is also improving.

Legionnaire's disease last appeared at the UI in 1981, when nearly a dozen patients at the hospitals were diagnosed as suffering from the disease.

Homecoming royalty crowned on Sunday

By Carol Monaghan
Freelance Writer

UI tradition reigned Sunday afternoon when a new Homecoming king and queen were crowned in the Union Ballroom.

UI seniors Jim McGarrahan and Joanna Castonguay, were named 1985 king and queen by Iowa City Mayor John McDonald, who presented them both with keys to the city.

McGarrahan, 23, is an English and classics major from Marion, Iowa. Castonguay, 20, of Newton, Iowa, is a majoring in accounting. McGarrahan plans to attend graduate school and pursue a teaching career after graduation, and Castonguay plans to attend law school, a few years after graduation.

In addition to appearing at most of this week's homecoming functions, Castonguay said she would like to have "a more active role than queens and kings of past years."

"I would like to represent the university in a variety of functions throughout the year," said Castonguay.

MCGARRAHAN HAS appeared on the Dean's List every semester and was elected to Mortar Board Senior Honor Society as a sophomore. He has held offices in Order of Omega, the Interfraternity Council and Acacia fraternity. McGarrahan has also been involved in the UI Writer's Workshop, ROTC and has worked as a professional musician.

Castonguay, vice-president of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, is also a member of Beta Gamma Sigma, a business honorary society. Other activities include involvement in the the UI Honors program and Mortar Board. Castonguay has also been active as a Red Cross volunteer.

The king and queen were selected from over 30 applications by a committee of five faculty and staff members. Kristi Banyas, executive secretary of the Homecoming Council said the final pick was made after narrowing the selection to five other candidates.

Seniors Jim McGarrahan and Joanna Castonguay were installed as the 1985 UI Homecoming king and queen Sunday afternoon.

'Questionable call' helps Northwestern

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

A questionable call led to a 1-0 defeat for the Iowa field hockey team against Northwestern Sunday.

A referee said the Hawkeye players were obstructing the ball in their own striking circle and awarded Northwestern a penalty stroke in the second overtime period of the game.

Goalie Karen Napolitano and defensive back Deb Robertson had both fallen on the ground when the call was made. The Iowa players were penalized for obstructing the ball. But according to the Iowa players the ball was clearly visible, Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said.

"It was a questionable call."

Davidson said. "There was a mix-up in front of the goal. Both Karen and Deb were down on the ground and they called a penalty stroke against us."

Katy Oleykiwski took the shot for the Wildcats and knocked the ball in the net past Napolitano with 5 minutes, 20 seconds remaining in the game.

"KAREN MADE a really good effort to save the ball," the Iowa coach said. "She touched it, but it went underneath her."

The victory now puts Northwestern in the driver's seat in the conference race. The Hawkeyes will have to take the next game against the Wildcats to have a piece of the Big Ten title.

Iowa's defense turned in another good performance in the game. "Defense is the backbone of the team," the Iowa coach said. "The deep defense really did a nice job."

Kim Herrmann steered the defense in the game. The senior had several key interceptions and cleared the ball well, Davidson said.

Iowa didn't play well in the first half but made up for it by dominating the second half and the overtime periods.

"WE DIDN'T PLAY strongly in the first half," Davidson said. "We had the right passes, but they weren't hard enough."

The Hawkeyes moved the ball well in the second half. Iowa's problem came on offense when

Iowa flood washes out Cyclones

By Jeff Stratton
Assistant Sports Editor

AMES — Iowa's offensive machine turned as vicious as the weather in the second quarter of Saturday's stomping of Iowa State, rolling up 34 points en route to a 57-3 victory.

The only thing that could keep up with the points Iowa scored in the second quarter was the number of fans leaving Cyclone Stadium in droves early to avoid the cold and rain.

Before the contest with Iowa State, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said he was expecting a close game. Following the Iowa victory Fry said, "Okay, I was wrong."

With top-rated Auburn falling to Tennessee, 38-20, and second-ranked Oklahoma edging Minnesota, 13-7, the Hawkeyes could move in to the top spot in this week's UPI poll.

Fry, however, is not excited about the prospect. "Don't make us No. 1," he said, "it might be the kiss of death. I'm happy where we are."

ATTENDANCE AT the game was 53,202, but by halftime only 25,000 faithful fans remained. Early in the fourth quarter attendance had dwindled to 5,000.

Iowa didn't do much wrong in the contest, while Iowa State made mistake after mistake and watched the No. 3 rated Hawkeyes capitalize on Cyclone errors.

"It was a great day," Fry said. "The defense played super. We played for turnovers and got them. I'm extremely happy to be 3-0 going into Big Ten play."

Iowa State Coach Jim Criner said he had his team ready to play, but that mistakes and missed opportunities killed any chance Iowa State had. "I thought we had a good game plan," he said.

Football

"We failed on our early opportunities and lost our confidence. The mistakes by our kicking game really hurt us. It was tough to get back in the game."

CYCLONE MISCUES led directly to 31 Hawkeye points in the second quarter.

Iowa kicker Rob Houghtlin opened the game by slipping on the kickoff, but the Hawkeyes recovered in Iowa State territory. Iowa couldn't do anything offensively on its first possession and punted to the Cyclones.

Fry said Iowa opened the game with the wrong type of shoes to play in the wet conditions, but changed shoes after the first possession.

Iowa State put together an impressive drive as Cyclone quarterback Alex Espinoza marched his club down the field. The Cyclone drive stalled at Iowa's nine-yard line, however, when Iowa State's Danny Gantt dropped a pass in the end zone.

Cyclone kicker Rick Frank missed a 26-yard field goal attempt and from that point the game was no contest.

FOLLOWING FRANK'S missed kick, Iowa marched 80 yards in 12 plays and scored on fullback Fred Bush's four-yard plunge with 4 minutes, 11 seconds to play in the first quarter, giving Iowa the lead, 7-0.

In the second quarter, Houghtlin kicked a 47-yard field goal with 14:05 to play, making the score 10-0 Iowa.

With 10:41 to play in the first half, Iowa State had the ball on its 30 yard line with a fourth

Helverson was a 'Long' threat

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

Against Northern Illinois, it was the Bill Hoppel-Chuck Long show. But at the Iowa State game Saturday in Ames the Hawkeyes unveiled the Scott Helverson-Long show.

Helverson, a senior from Des Moines, replaced Hoppel as the Hawkeyes' top receiver in the game. The wide receiver caught eight passes for 154 yards, two of those were for touchdowns in the second half.

Football

It was not surprising to either Helverson or Coach Hayden Fry that Iowa State doubled up on Hoppel because of the outstanding game he had against the Huskies. "If one receiver has a great game, it's only obvious the next team is going to take that away from him," he said. "We knew they were going to double up on Hoppel."

The Cyclones used a "combination coverage" on Hoppel, which left Helverson wide open. According to Long, this was a smart game plan for Iowa State to use, except "the other guys were open."

"THESE TEAMS try to double up on one of our guys," Long said. "But we have four good receivers. They're really dangerous. Teams just can't key in on one guy."

With several good receivers on the Iowa team, Helverson said it's very likely that teams will shut down one receiver, and leave another wide open in a game. He added it's also possible the Iowa receivers will switch off from week to week catching the most passes because of double teaming.

"From week to week it could be any one receiver getting double coverage," he said. "But it would really be hard to single coverage any one person."

The Cyclones double teaming Hoppel left Helverson "the most

Iowa State turns back Hawks

By Melissa Rapoport
Sports Editor

The Iowa volleyball team is no longer the No. 1 squad in the state after suffering its most disappointing loss of a 5-9 season.

Iowa State, 10-3 on the season, knocked the Hawkeyes from the top Saturday night in Ames. Iowa won the first game of the four-game match, 16-14, but dropped the next three, 19-17, 16-14 and 15-7.

The match, billed as a tremendous in-state rivalry, proved to be more on the minds of the Cyclones. "We really didn't play with that killer instinct," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said, "and they (Iowa State) played with 100 percent intensity."

After winning the first game by only two points, the second game, Stewart said, gave the Cyclones the psychological edge to win the match. "The second game was crucial," the Iowa coach said. "It was the turning point in the match."

"WE WERE AHEAD 17-16 for four rotations," she continued. "We had two service errors at game point, we hit the ball out of bounds — they were mental errors."

The Hawkeyes, in fact, lost in all facets of the game, perhaps most notably in service statistics. "We had problems with serving," Stewart said. "We had 26 service errors."

To complicate matters, Iowa's attack was not productive. "The hitters were not dynamic either," Stewart said. "They were intimidated by Iowa State's defense and their block Linda Gensing, whom we rely on, out of 29 attempts had 11 errors and nine kills. That put her in negative (statistics)."

Leading the Hawkeyes in kills were Ellen Mullarkey, 13; Lana Kuiper, 12; and Toni Zehr, 10.

Iowa State demonstrated a sterling defense, making Iowa's defense look inferior and frustrating Iowa's hitters. "They beat us basically on defense," Stewart said. "... They had 108 digs to our 79. They kept everything in play. Our defense wasn't that strong. Our defensive positioning was poor."

"IOWA STATE has a junior setter (Kathy Keating) who has never set before. She had 11 kills on tipping and dumping the ball out of 19 attempts ... She's only 5-foot-5 and our hitters were hitting right into her block. You go around the block. Here's 5-11 girls hitting into a 5-5 block."

Despite the Hawkeyes' inconsistencies, setter Kathy Griesheim didn't fall victim to the mental or technical lapses. "Kathy Griesheim had a career-high record of seven service errors," Stewart said. "Kathy set a nice game. She kept mixing up the plays, but she became a little frustrated because the hitters weren't doing anything with the ball."

To remedy Iowa's lack of "killer instinct," Stewart said practice this week will consist of attaining "more aggressive behavior (because) we tend to be more passive."

The Hawkeyes return to action this weekend when they travel to Big Ten opponents Illinois and Purdue.

Iowa's Cheryl Zemaitis, left, attempts to block a shot by Iowa State's Kathy Keating during Saturday's match. Iowa State won 14-16, 19-17, 16-14, 15-7.

Gault sparks bears with kickoff return

CHICAGO (UPI) — Willie Gault returned a kickoff 99 yards for a touchdown and Jim McMahon threw two touchdown passes in a 31-point second quarter Sunday, powering the Chicago Bears to a 45-10 rout over the Washington Redskins.

The Bears improved to 4-0 for their best start since their last NFL championship season in 1963. Washington, suffering its worst loss since it lost 53-0 to the New York Giants in November 1961, slumped to 1-3.

The 31-point quarter was the biggest in Chicago history as they racked up four TDs in a span of 5:14 in the quarter.

McMahon was 13-for-19 for 160 yards and three TDs. He also ran for a touchdown.

Trailing 10-0, Gault returned the kickoff for a Soldier Field-record 99 yards. Chicago then took advantage of a 1-yard punt by Joe Theismann, subbing for punter Jeff Hayes, and got TD passes from McMahon of 15 yards to Dennis McKinnon and 10-yards to Emery Moorehead. Hayes suffered a bruised thigh on Gault's return.

Brooks stops Cardinal's surge

MONTREAL (UPI) — Hubie Brooks' two-run triple keyed a three-run seventh inning Sunday, rallying the Montreal Expos to a 7-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The victory enabled Montreal to take two of three weekend games from first place St. Louis.

On The Line

More difficult than determining last week's winner of the Daily Iowan's On The Line contest was finding out who won the Whittier-Humboldt State game. We thought it would be simple — call either Whittier, the home of the Poets, or Humboldt State, home of the Lumberjacks.

Well, we did both. First a phone call to Whittier's sports information office and the woman who answered the phone said, "I'm sorry, I don't know who won," and proceeded to rattle off Whittier Coach Hugh Mendez' home phone number. Seriously.

So, we gave ol' Hugh a call. His lovely wife answered the phone. After telling us her husband wasn't home, we asked her if she knew who won the game. She said, "No, I don't know who won and my husband's not home." Seriously.

Twenty minutes had gone by in the search of the lost college football game. Our next step was to call Humboldt State. No go. We let it ring over 20 times and no one was home.

Being the superb investigative reporters that we are, we decided to call a newspaper near Arcata, Calif., home of the Lumberjacks. A very nice gent at the Santa Rosa Press Democrat gave us the information we so desperately longed for.

Evidently the Poets edged the burly Lumberjacks, 29-28. The Lumberjacks would have won but when they found out City Editor Greg Philby resides in Humboldt, Iowa, they turned the ball over nine times — five fumbles, four interceptions. Seriously.

Once we established this wealth of information, we tallied the 500 plus ballots and found our winner. It's none other than Al Stroh. Congratulations, Al, you're our winner of a keg of brew from the Fieldhouse, that swingin' bar at 111 E. College St.

Our own prognosticators couldn't muster up a perfect ballot between the three of them. After posting a perfect ballot last week, however, Sports Editor Melissa Rapoport tallied a 9-1 mark, bringing her record to 27-3. Two total games behind Rapoport is Assistant Sports Editor Jeff Stratton, who came off the weekend with a 8-2 score. Staff Writer J.B. Glass is still in dire need of Glass Aid. Missing three games again this week, Glass' record stands at 22-8, five games behind Rapoport.

Besides the Whittier-Humboldt State game, the other match-ups and their scores are as follows: Indiana 36, Missouri 17; Michigan 20, Maryland 0; Michigan State 7, Western Michigan 3; Oklahoma 13, Minnesota 7; Northwestern 38, Northern Illinois 16; Ohio State 48, Washington State 32; Purdue 35, Notre Dame 17; Wisconsin 41, Wyoming 17 and Miami (Fla.) 45, Boston College 10.

ISU captures own Invitational

By Brad Zimanek
Staff Writer

Not to be shunted by the Iowa State football team's performance against the Hawkeyes Saturday, the Cyclone's women's cross country team won the Iowa State Invitational in Ames.

Iowa State finished with 23 points and was followed by Iowa with 41, Minnesota with 98, Wisconsin-LaCrosse with 114, Nebraska-Omaha with 120 and Northern Iowa with 154.

Bonnie Sons of Iowa State won the 5,000-meter race in a time of 17 minutes, 10 seconds. Iowa's Janeth Salazar finished second behind Sons in 17:33.

"She (Salazar) ran a dynamic race. She's a threat whenever she's close to the front like that," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said. "She's like Nan (former Iowa all-American, Nan Doak); when she first came here she just sort of felt her way around. If she continues improving you can look for her to be a threat at Big Ten's, maybe not to win it but she is certainly not afraid to run with those top people."

SALAZAR GAINED second place by edging out Iowa State's Tami Colby and Jill Slettedahl and Minnesota's Jody Eder, who finished fourth at last year's Big Ten Championships.

Laura Haggerty finished second for Iowa as she earned sixth place overall in a time of 17:50.

The Iowa women's golf team continued its steadily-improving play last weekend at the Michigan State Invitational in East Lansing, Mich., with a runnerup finish behind the host Spartans.

The Hawkeyes continue to fare well against their Big Ten opposition, defeating Illinois and Michigan at the tournament. Last weekend Illinois edged Iowa at the Lady Northern Invitational.

Michigan State won its own invitational with 921 strokes, followed by Iowa with 936 strokes and Illinois in third with a total of 939 shots.

Following Illinois were: Western Kentucky, Bowling Green, Michigan, Illinois State, Ferris State and DePauw.

Rugby Club takes fourth straight in Sunday afternoon downpour

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

AMES — Playing in pouring rain, the Iowa men's rugby club raised its winning streak four games, defeating Iowa State Sunday, 4-0.

"This was our first competitive test," Iowa's Hiram Melendez said. "We came out of it real well."

Iowa's only try was made in the middle of the first half by Barry White. A missed conversion kick followed, keeping the score at 4-0 for the remainder of the game.

"We took advantage of options early and scored early in the first half," Iowa's David Earl Mattingly said.

"Good, tough forward play. Weather kept the game in the forward pack most of the time," Melendez said.

This was a kicking game, switching the ball from one end of the field to the other most of the game.

"A lot of ball control (during the game), kicking for placement instead of for offensive advantage," Melendez said.

"The backs played a good defensive game," Melendez said. "Overall forward play is to be commended."

A rivalry is to be expected between Iowa and Iowa State. There seemed to be more tension than for most rugby games during this contest.

"Both teams out there were in an intense rivalry," Mattingly said.

Overall the Hawkeyes seemed pleased with their performance in the game. "It was everything I expected," Melendez said.

Mattingly agreed. "Our strategy payed off. We let them wear themselves out."

Minnesota issues warning to foes with impressive outing Saturday

(UPI) — The Big Ten Conference went on another rampage against non-conference foes this weekend, posting an 8-1 mark, but that one loss probably gave the rest of the country their biggest surprise.

The league improved its mark against non-league teams on the season to 24-6, the most wins since the 26 victories posted in 1960. The 24-6 slate was also a marked improvement over last year's 12-15 which included a 1-5 mark in bowl games.

Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Ohio State and Wisconsin all remained undefeated with victories. Michigan State, Northwestern and Purdue all also won.

But it was the Minnesota 13-7 loss to No. 2 Oklahoma that may have been the biggest surprise. The Gophers had the ball with a chance to win in the final minute before the Sooners held out for the triumph.

There were other positive highlights:

- Indiana, 0-11 one year ago, jumped to 3-0 with a 36-17 rout at Missouri.
- Iowa bombarded Iowa State, 57-3, on the road.
- Northwestern won back-to-back games for the first time in 10 years by beating Northern Illinois, 38-16.

Big Ten Roundup

- Michigan kept opponents without a touchdown again with a 20-0 rout of Maryland.
- Purdue turned back Notre Dame for the second straight year, easily handling the Irish, 35-17.

Elsewhere, Ohio State walloped Washington State, 48-32. Wisconsin outlasted Wyoming, 41-17, and Michigan State rallied to beat Western Michigan, 7-3.

Big Ten play begins next week with Ohio State at Illinois, Northwestern at Indiana, Michigan State at Iowa, Wisconsin at Michigan and Purdue at Minnesota.

Minnesota fell to 2-1 by losing to Oklahoma but gained a moral victory by containing the high-powered Sooners at the Metrodome. Rickey Foggie hit Kevin Starks on a 12-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter but Foggie could not bring the Gophers to a potential winning touchdown in the final minute.

"We're a beat up football team," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "We lost both our (offensive) tackles and we lost our best running game. It was a tough, physical game."

INDIANA, WHICH ended its 16-game losing streak earlier this season, zoomed to 3-0 with its win over Missouri on the road.

"I don't care about rankings. We're just trying to get ready for conference play," said Indiana Coach Bill Mallory.

Steve Bradley threw three touchdown passes and scored one himself to lead the Hoosiers to the victory. Ken Allen caught 10 passes for 183 yards for the Hoosiers.

Northwestern went above .500 for the first time since 1973 with its handling of Northern Illinois. Sophomore quarterback Mike Greenfield threw for a school record 446 yards — 367 in the first half.

"It's just a great feeling to come into the locker room on two successive weeks and know that you've played real hard," said Wildcat Coach Dennis Green. "We were passing to set up the run. We just kept having the passes open."

Purdue's Jim Everett also had a good day, completing 27 of 49 passes for 368 yards and three touchdowns against Notre Dame.

American Players Theatre brings 'Comedy of Errors' to Iowa City

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

IN THEORY, it was a great weekend to get out of town, the highlight being the football game with Northern Illinois.

Northern Illinois? My wife and I headed north, amused by the opposing stream of cars bound for the overcast skies of Iowa City, but by the time we reached equally rainy Dubuque, my mood had grown gloomy. The reason behind this trip was a desire to see the American Players Theatre perform in its own outdoor theater.

As we neared APT's headquarters outside Spring Green, Wis., my wife consoled me by commenting on the pleasures of the scenery and the rain out prospect of touring such local indoor attractions as the House-on-the-Rock or a building designed by area native Frank Lloyd Wright.

Then providence smiled and the rain stopped moments before we reached our destination. Two hours later providence would unsmile again, raining out the second half of the production, but even half of this Julius Caesar was well worth the drive.

APT'S FACILITY is well suited for spectator enjoyment. The seating spreads down a hillside in a semi-circle, creating a miniature facsimile of the massive natural amphitheatres favored by the Greeks in the age of Aeschylus and Sophocles. The stage, though, is a modernized version of the thrust style used in the age of Shakespeare. The combination ensures that every one of 700 seats provides an unobstructed view of the action and that the acoustics are excellent for an outdoor facility.

APT makes full use of its facility. During Antony's funeral oration over Caesar's body, his "friends, Romans and countrymen" were scattered through the audience, making a few actors seem like a mob and providing an audience illusion that we were at the funeral itself, rather than at its rendering.

PREVIOUSLY I have found Julius Caesar a great read, but a college production in Napoleonic garb, the BBC version, and a film version with Charlton Heston, Jason Robards and John Gielgud had been so uninviting that I had begun to doubt the play's merits for performance. APT removes all doubts — and does so without cutting a line or resorting to any gimmickry. The acting was tight, the delivery crisp, the performance gripping and suspenseful. How could there be suspense when we knew what was to come? Yet several audience members gasped and covered their eyes, so real was the moment of assassination.

After the official rain-out was announced, the audience queued up to receive its raincheck. I visited (indoors) with Theodore Swetz, just out of costume from playing the conspirator Casca. Swetz' jovial appearance and disposition seemed more fitting for another current role, Sir John Falstaff in The Merry Wives of Windsor. The versatile Swetz is also co-director of Comedy of Errors, soon to tour to Hancher Auditorium.

SWETZ HAS BEEN with APT since its founding six years ago. He remembers playing once to an audience of 17. Since then APT has received a Tony Award nomination for regional theater, and is now averaging 88 percent of capacity. Nevertheless, financial troubles still plague the company. Corporate donors have not been forthcoming. It is the small givers, the audience members who recognize something worth preserving when they see it, whose donations are keeping APT afloat.

The obstacles, said Swetz, are "unbelievable." Touring efforts have been plagued by requests that plays be cut down to movie length. "They don't cut symphonies, they don't cut operas, but plays, sure, let's just rip them up," Swetz laments.

BUT APT, A COMPANY formed to do the classics, refuses: "We don't cut a word, and we don't update anything," Swetz brags. Rather than using modernized editions of Shakespeare, the company uses the text found in the 1623 Folio that was compiled by two actors in Shakespeare's company. And rather than staging Shakespearean works at random, APT is staging the plays roughly in the order of composition, because "we're trying to grow into the major works the way Shakespeare grew into the major works."

The Comedy of Errors is considered to be the first of Shakespeare's comedies. It is also one of the funniest, revolving around two sets of master-and-servant twins separated by shipwreck; when one set arrives at the home city of the other, mistaken identities lead to a series of hilarious blunders. Because Shakespeare used a Roman comedy as the primary source for his play, APT uses comic masks and padding in the tradition of Roman drama to add to the comic mood.

"TRADITION" IS AN important word at APT. Swetz describes watching the first performance of one APT comedy: "I remember standing in the wings... and all of a sudden 500 people laughed, a big hearty laugh, and I thought 'My God, 400 years ago that happened. Today it's happened; and I'll bet 400 years from now it's going to happen.' That's worth preserving, that's worth the commitment."

And it's worth seeing. Seating remains at Hancher in all price ranges for Comedy of Errors. Theater fans still without tickets would be well advised not to miss an opportunity to see an outstanding company performing an ageless comedy.

Hart croons and the young girls swoon at recent Iowa City show

By Allen Hogg
Staff Writer

COREY-MANIA was in full force as the young girls descended on Hancher Auditorium Friday night. The Corey Hart concert, which was presented by Jam Productions and the Student Commission on Programing and Entertainment, gave them ample opportunity to do what young girls do best: scream continuously for hours at a time.

A hint of what the evening was to be like came outside the auditorium before the show as fathers lined up to drop off daughters with braces on their teeth. The hints were confirmed during the performance of the opening-act, Candy, a four-piece Los Angeles group whose power-pop sound seems to be a direct descendant of the Bay City Rollers' by way of the Knack.

With Kyle, a lead singer who raises his eyebrows like Paul McCartney; Gilby, a guitarist whose hair and riffs make him come across as a watered-down Eddie Van Halen; and Jonathan, a bass player who looks as much like Prince as a white man can, Candy seems destined to become a favorite of pre-teen girls. And if the band members seemed somewhat nervous at the wild reaction they received Friday night — with missed cues and inappropriate introductions — it only added to their charm.

HART, BY CONTRAST, knew how to play the teen-idol role perfectly. Looking a little like Richard Gere with spiked hair, he wiggled his butt, gave the crowds lots of "thumbs-up" signs and sang with maximum melodrama as the girls rushed down the aisles and reached across the rim of the stage, each desperately hoping that he would shake her hand. During his first performance of "Never Surrender," one even jumped on stage and ran up to give her man a hug. Roadies came in from the wings to escort her off, but Hart waved them away, then sang to her as she clutched his arm, crying.

To Hart's credit, there were a number of indications that he has the ability to rise above the teen idol status. He did a cover of "My Girl" that cut Hall and Oates' recently-released rendition of the same tune to pieces, and did some mean twisting with a girl from the crowd during a version of "Jailhouse Rock."

HE ALSO PROVED himself to have a political conscience with the reggae-tinged "Sunny Places, Shady People," a tune protesting the South African situation; and he is to be commended for explaining the song's content in its introduction.

Even if Hart has all the teen-idol moves down pat, he still comes across as being sincerely touched by the adulation of the audience. At one point, he told the crowd, "If anyone ever tells you performers don't appreciate their fans, don't you believe them." And, after finishing "Never Surrender," Hart returned on stage by himself, had the house lights turned up, and sang the song again with the crowd in what truly seemed to be an unplanned encore.

Of course, in the end, Hart may not prove to be anything more than the teen idols of the past — another Shaun Cassidy, or Leif Garrett, or Andy Gibb — destined to have his four hits then quickly fade away. But don't try telling that to the girls who were at Hancher Friday night. They think Corey Hart is special among teen idols, because he is theirs. And, of course, they are right.

their attack broke down in the striking circle. The Hawkeyes also didn't have enough players in the striking circle during the game. Because of this, Davidson said she will be making some adjustments in Iowa's attack for next weekend.

"We need to get the midfield players to play more on the attack," she said. "Too many people were behind the ball instead of being ahead of the ball."

Iowa took 15 shots on goal during the game — two in the first half, eight in the second half and five in the overtime periods. Northwestern smacked the ball at Iowa's goal a total of nine times — four in the first half, once in the second half and four in the overtime periods.

The Hawkeyes were awarded eight penalty corners in the game and gave up only five penalty corners to the Wildcats. In the last 55 minutes of play, Iowa allowed Northwestern only one corner. "That's phenomenal, great playing," Davidson said.

Hawkeyes

down and one yard to go situation. Criner elected to go for the first down, but Cyclone tailback Al Watson was stopped by Iowa's Jay Norvell and Iowa took over.

"That was a bad decision, we shouldn't have gone for it," Criner said.

Five plays later Ronnie Harmon scored from two yards out with 8:55 to play in the half and following Houghtlin's kick Iowa led, 17-0.

wide open I've been all year. They were so soft in the back field and we took advantage of it."

HELVerson SAID it was his moves, more than speed that enabled him to catch eight passes. "We also run pretty good routes," he said.

The defense Iowa State used was ing two touchdowns. Harmon also caught five passes for 56 yards on the day.

The elusive Harmon danced and dazzled his way to a 23-yard touchdown run with 6:59 to play in the half and with Houghtlin's extra point Iowa led 24-0.

Following Harmon's second touchdown, Fry gathered his team on the sidelines and told them, "Ronnie's back."

Iowa added 17 points in the final 2:48 of the first half on a 41-yard field goal by Houghtlin, a three-yard touchdown pass from Chuck Long to tight end Mike Flagg and a nine-yard touchdown pass from Long to wide receiver Robert Smith, to make the score at half-time 41-0, in favor of the Hawkeyes.

THE HAWKEYES added 17 points in the third quarter starting with a 46-yard touchdown pass from Long to Scott Helverson, who caught eight passes for 154 yards and two touchdowns on the day, with 13:19 to play in the third quarter to give Iowa a 47-0 lead after Houghtlin missed his only attempt of the day.

Houghtlin nailed a 27-yard field goal at the 9:37 mark to make the score 50-0 in favor of Iowa.

Iowa ended its scoring with 2:33 to play in the third quarter on a 25-yard touchdown pass from backup quarterback Mark Vlasic to Helverson to make the score 56-0. Marv Cook added the extra point, making the score 57-0, Iowa.

Houghtlin ended the day with 14 points to set an Iowa record by a kicker.

Iowa State's Frank booted a field goal with 5:21 to play in the game for the Cyclones only points to end the scoring.

Iowa opens Big Ten play Saturday against Michigan State at Kinnick Stadium.

also not new to Helverson. "The coverage was pretty much the same as what Texas used. We're pretty used to this defense," he said.

The wide receiver came one reception short of tying Happel's record for the most receptions in a game. But tying a record or even breaking a record isn't important to the 6-foot-2, 195-pound senior. "Records to us are nothing. We just go out and try to catch every pass," he said. "When you're out there you don't notice the records too much."

This Saturday Iowa opens its Big Ten season with a home game against Michigan State. It wouldn't surprise Helverson if he is the receiver the Spartans shut down in the game.

Even if he doesn't get his hands on many passes, Helverson said he and the rest of the team will be out for revenge against the Spartans, who kept Iowa from going to the Rose Bowl last year.

Helverson added, "Michigan State will be a great test for us. They've got an outstanding defense."
