Art faculty, students protest 'unsafe' studios

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

UI Art Department graduate students and faculty members who have studios in the former UI Music Building say they are tired of working and studying in a "firetrap" and they want the UI to do something about it.

But UI officials maintain a lack of available funds is preventing them from relocating the studios or repairing the existing facilities.

phen Schultz, who is head of the Art Department's graduate painting program, said department officials have urged the UI to rectify the unsafe conditions in the building for several years with no success, so some students have begun circulating petitions in hopes of by-passing regular administrative channels.

"THE THING we're concerned about is the lack of a fire escape," Schultz said. "The building really needs another way out.

"We've tried for several years to get the fire escape, but it's always been a matter of funding," Schultz said. "Hopefully, they (art students) can by-pass channels and get to someone who can make a responsible decision."

Since cans of paint, turpentine and old rags are stored throughout the building, it is more of a fire risk than many other UI facilities, Schultz said.

Even though art students take extra care with these combustible materials, many students say they feel unsafe on the upper floors, said graduate art student Tami Sisk.

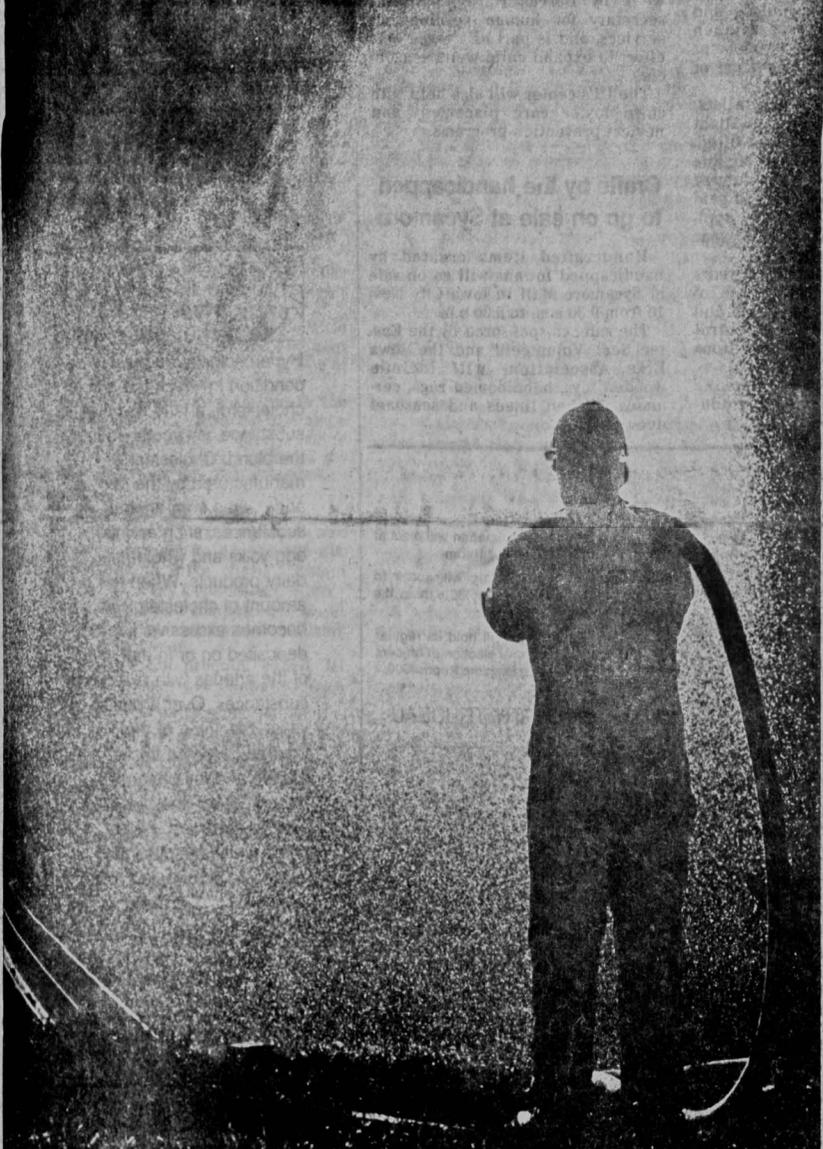

Sisk said many art students are afraid to voice their pleas, however, because they fear losing the use of the building.

"IN CASE WE don't get the budget increase, the fire department will come in and shut us down" because of the attention art students will attract with their petition, Sisk said. "The building just needs attention. We love it and just want to make it better."

Although UI Facilities and Planning Director Richard Gibson said the UI is implementing improvements on buildings which do not meet fire codes as funds become available, he acknowledged there are not any

Soviet spy claims abduction by CIA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vitaly Yurchenko, the KGB officer who was in charge of U.S. spying, said Monday he had been "forcefully abducted" and held and drugged by the CIA during three months of questioning, but escaped and made his way to the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C.

Appearing at a news conference at the embassy, Yurchenko said his ordeal included a dinner session with CIA Director William Casey, but that he was drugged at the time and hardly recognized the American official.

Yurchenko, who reportedly had defected and had been cooperating with the CIA, said he had been held in a Washington suburb until last Saturday when, "due to the momentary lapse of attention on the part of the person watching me, I was able to break out to freedom and come to the Soviet Embassy."

The State Department issued a statement that flatly denied that Yurchenko had been kidnapped, drugged and illegally questioned and said he would not be allowed to leave this country until the United States is assured that this is his genuine wish.

SEN. DAVID Durenburger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said he talked to Casey Monday afternoon and added, "I think the agency is as surprised as anyone else" by Yurchenko's story.

Durenburger said Casey assured him that none of the KGB officer's charges were true.

He said Casey will make sure that Yurchenko made the decision to return to the Soviet Embassy of his own free will and, "I suspect he will not leave this country until we're satisfied."

nothing but "live and keep silent in the U.S."

He closed the session by telling reporters, in English, "Don't worry, I am a normal person."

Although the State Department had said Oct. 11 that Yurchenko came to the United States voluntarily, he said he had been seized in Rome and brought unconscious to the United States.

Yurchenko said he was drugged while he was detained and interrogated and later told he had provided crucial information to his questioners.

"When I was conscious... they were telling me, 'You see, everyone thinks you are a traitor.' They showed me documents that were written in my hand."

"NEVERTHELESS, I did not believe them," Yurchenko declared. "They, I think, were hoping that eventually I will start to believe that I had indeed passed some information of a secret nature."

Yurchenko, who appears to be in his late 30s or early 40s, said he was taken to CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., just outside Washington, for a meeting and dinner with Casey. He said he was drugged before the meeting, but not as heavily as during interrogation sessions. He said they did not discuss sensitive intelligence matters.

He said he had only "vague recollections of the conversation; it was a general conversation... regarding summit, the kind of things that you generally read in the newspaper."

Yurchenko said because of the drugs he had difficulty recognizing the CIA chief and told reporters they should ask Casey for further details of the meeting.

Shultz, Soviets meet to set agenda for November summit

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met Monday for almost eight hours to pave the way for the superpower summit in Switzerland.

Shultz, accompanied by National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane and arms control adviser Paul Nitze, is the first secretary of state to visit Moscow since Cyrus Vance in October 1978. He is to meet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev on Tuesday.

The meeting began with pleasant exchanges, as Shultz and Shevardnadze, each flanked by 10 aides including several arms control specialists, sat down for the talks at the ornate mansion used as a guest house by the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

But the talks turned serious and continued through a working lunch for almost eight hours — longer than any of the previous sessions between the two foreign ministers.

would not discuss the details of the negotiations, but Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgway told reporters that the sides covered "all the items on the agenda."

Besides arms control, the agenda that Shultz brought with him to Moscow includes human rights, regional conflicts and bilateral issues.

While the two men talked, the government newspaper Izvestia published the text of an interview that President Ronald Reagan had with four Soviet journalists last week.

Radio Moscow, in its English-language broadcast, did not carry any quotes from the interview and brushed it off, calling it "fine words not matched by actions."

Shultz and his party arrived from Helsinki, Finland, and were met at the airport by Shevardnadze and his wife in what Shultz described as "an act of friendship."

SHULTZ SAID he and Shevardnadze had "candid and productive" talks on four previous occasions, and added this week's talks would be similar.

Shultz told reporters aboard his plane that he wanted the summit to be a full and thorough preparation for the Nov. 19-20 summit in Geneva, Switzerland, between Reagan and Gorbachev.

Although the Soviets want the summit to focus almost exclusively on arms control issues, Shultz said the Americans also want to discuss issues such as human rights and regional conflicts such as Afghanistan.

Shultz met for 45 minutes Sunday with Finnish President Mauno Koivisto. Ridgway said Shultz wanted to draw on Koivisto's experience in dealing with Soviet leaders since Finland, as a neutral nation, maintains friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

UI Hospitals to study effect of low-fat diet on breast cancer

By Earl Johnston III
Staff Writer

UI Hospitals will join seven other health institutions across the nation in a study of low-fat diets as a treatment for postmenopausal women who have suffered from breast cancer, officials announced Monday.

According to Peter Jochimsen, director of surgical oncology in the UI College of Medicine, the five-year study is designed to determine whether low-fat diets will reduce the recurrence of tumors in these women.

Approximately 120,000 postmenopausal women across the nation suffer from breast cancer, for which chemotherapy has served as the "traditional" post-operative treatment, Jochimsen said.

"For years we have looked at chemotherapy as an aid for women who have had mastectomies," Jochimsen said. "But as these studies have gone on... it has become increasingly clear that chemotherapy in postmenopausal women is not particularly beneficial."

JOCHIMSEN POINTED out that research has shown the survival rate of Japanese women who consume small amounts of fat to be much higher than that of American women who consume greater amounts.

He said the UI study, which received $137,000 in funding from the National Cancer Institute, will cut fat intake to simulate the Japanese diet.

"It's quite apparent that the issue relates to diet," Jochimsen said. "I don't think there's any question that the regimen (a low-fat diet) is going to be less

Bus crash in Sicily kills 15

CATANIA, Sicily — A bus traveling on a rain-slick highway near Catania skidded off a bridge and plunged 100 feet into a dry riverbed Monday, killing 15 people and seriously injuring six, police said.

Some victims remained trapped inside the vehicle for more than three hours, in part because no one immediately reported the crash along the deserted stretch of highway. Thirteen of the victims, including the driver, died instantly while two others died in a hospital and six were being treated for serious injuries, doctors said. The crash was the second multi-fatality bus accident in Italy in two weeks.

IRS identifies mishandling

PHILADELPHIA — Confidential Internal Revenue Service papers identify at least 56 cases in which IRS employees destroyed, lost or mishandled income tax returns or other important tax documents, the Philadelphia Inquirer reported Monday.

The newspaper said the incidents ranged from employees accidentally trashing unprocessed tax returns to the destruction of thousands of tax documents to improve individual performance records. The confidential papers were compiled by IRS Commissioner Roscoe Egger in response to published reports that IRS employees were routinely destroying tax returns.

Sailor's relatives stopped

RESERVE, La. — Three Ohio women who believe they are related to the Soviet seaman who jumped ship last month tried vainly Monday to get a letter to him aboard the Soviet grain ship moored in the Mississippi River.

They hired a crewboat that circled the Marshal Konev for about 30 minutes, but a man who appeared to be the captain of the grain ship waved them away. The women had hoped to send up a letter asking to see and meet with Miroslav Medvid on shore because they believe he wants political asylum.

Navy cutbacks announced

WASHINGTON — The Navy, worried about morale in the face of pilot shortages, plans to cut back operations beginning next year that could reduce the U.S. presence in the Indian Ocean and elsewhere, Navy officials said Monday.

The pullback could have a long-term impact on current naval strategy to maintain American ships in regions where there is a perceived threat by the Soviet Union to U.S. interests, the officials said. Although the primary focus of the cutback in operations is to boost flagging morale among sailors and their families caused by too much time away at sea, the officials said a secondary motive was to save money just when Congress has sliced heavily into the Pentagon budget.

Infant has liver transplant

ST. LOUIS — A 10-week-old girl has become the youngest person ever to undergo a liver transplant, Barnes Hospital said Monday.

The hospital identified the patient as Christine Holy, daughter of David and Veronica Holy of Fort Wayne, Ind. Christine weighed 8 pounds at the time of the operation, four short of the minimum usually required for such a procedure. The operation began at 8 a.m. Sunday and was completed 12 hours later. The girl was said to be in critical but stable condition in Barnes' intensive care unit.

Heart Answers

Hypercholesterolemia

Hypercholesterolemia is a condition in which too much cholesterol, a fatty wax-like substance, is circulating in the blood. Cholesterol is manufactured by the body, and comes from animal substances, such as meat, egg yolks and whole milk dairy products. When the amount of cholesterol becomes excessive, it is deposited on or in the lining of the arteries with other fatty substances. Over a period of years, the lining of the arteries becomes thicker and harder, and the channel through which the blood flows is narrowed. When an artery which supplies the heart with oxygenated blood closes off, a heart attack results.

City council contests draw marginal interest

By Tom Aylor
Staff Writer

An eight-year skid in the number of voters in Iowa City Council elections is expected to continue today, boosted by low-key issues and candidates, local elections experts predict.

"There hasn't been real spirited campaigning" by candidates for this election, said Tom Slockett, Johnson County auditor and commissioner of elections. "As a result, it hasn't been something people have been talking about."

Approximately 25 percent of Iowa City's voters have participated in the last two city elections, but less than 20 percent are expected to cast their ballots today, said Russell Ross, a UI political science professor and municipal government expert.

Similarly, a drastic reduction in the number of absentee ballots this year indicates a lower interest in today's election, Slockett said.

The absentee ballots are "usually a fairly indicative measure" of the number of voters that will turn out, Slockett said. There were only 69 absentee ballots cast shortly before the auditor's office closed Monday, as compared to 159 absentee ballots in 1983 and 167 ballots in 1981, he said.

Voter turnout in Iowa City has declined significantly in the past four municipal elections, Slockett said. In 1977 there were 11,027 residents who voted in the city election, but the number of voters consecutively dropped each election year until reaching a low of 8,298 in the last election.

The low interest can be attributed to the lack of candidates to fill the slate for the two at-large seats, Ross said. Kate Dickson, Karen Kubby and John McDonald are running for the two positions. Darrel Courtney and John Watson are also competing for the District B seat.

Despite the budgetary problems being faced by the council, Ross said these issues won't bring voters to the polls because "there are not too many people totally aware of them yet."

The precincts with the lowest voter participation can be found on campus because of the student population, Ross said.

Voter turnout in the precincts located at Quadrangle, Burge and Stanley residence halls have averaged only 8 percent in the last two city elections, according to Johnson County elections records.

Voter participation among the other precincts "depends upon the area and the neighborhood," Ross said.

Neighborhoods with new Iowa City residents will have a lower turnout, because new community members are less likely to vote, Ross said. Older neighborhoods, which often have long-term residents, are more involved in the politics of the city, he added.

The highest turnout in the last two city elections was at the City High School precinct. Almost half of the registered voters in this precinct cast their ballots in the last two elections, with 41 percent in 1981 and 43 percent in 1983.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. today. The three councilors elected will officially begin their duties in January.

UI computer sales policy under attack by retailers

By Lewis Wayne Greene
Staff Writer

While UI officials are making plans to expand their discount computer sales program this January, one Iowa computer retailer has vowed to continue his fight against this practice.

Richard Moore, who owns three retail computer firms across the state, called on the state Board of Regents to curtail computer sales at the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa last April.

Although that plea failed, Moore said last week he will once again fight the UI's expanding computer sales program next year.

Moore said he is thinking about organizing fellow computer retailers to lobby the Iowa Legislature and to make further presentations to the regents in opposition to university computer sales.

"THEY (UNIVERSITIES) are taking a major amount away from the dealers," Moore claimed.

Augie Kray, manager of Team Electronics outlet in the Sycamore Mall, echoed Moore's criticism of UI computer sales policy.

He said the UI's policy is unfair because the state taxes his computer sales and uses part of that money to support the UI, one of his competitors.

Describing his monetary loss due to the policy as "considerable," Kray complained a lot of UI faculty and staff members come to his store and use his staff's resources for information and then buy their computers from the UI.

The UI currently sells IBM and Apple Macintosh computers to faculty and staff members at 35 percent to 42 percent discounts, according to Mike Noth, assistant director of the UI Weeg Computing Center.

HE SAID THE UI sold computers to about 400 students on a lease-purchase plan during a pilot program last year.

Noth said since the program ended, UI students can no longer get computers from

"They (the regents universities) are taking a major amount (of computer sales) away from the dealers," says Richard Moore, computer retailer.

Weeg. But he added the center will expand its sales program to include students again in January.

Noth said prices are the major difference between private retailers and the UI program. He explained retailers will probably never be able to match the price the UI offers because the UI receives a discount from the manufacturers and sells its computers at cost.

Noth said although the UI doesn't normally offer retail goods for sale, the increasingly essential role of computers in higher education makes these sales an important part of the UI's mission.

WITH COMPUTER access becoming "as essential as having access to good books" in a college education, Noth said the computing center has sold 200 to 300 computers to faculty and staff members since October and sales should increase when students are again allowed to buy computers through the program.

UI Associate Vice President for Finance Casey Mahon also defended the UI's computer sales policy as a way of encouraging "computer literacy." She emphasized the UI does not sell computers for sale to the general public.

A report calling for special financing and software support programs for students buying computers from the UI has been sent to UI Vice President for Economic Development Duane Spriestersbach.

Calvin elevator repair will further 'disable' students

By Marianne Cherni
Staff Writer

Some UI students with disabilities will be unable to visit the UI Services for the Handicapped office for at least a week because the only elevator in the building needs repair, officials announced Monday.

James Howard, UI physical plant associate director, said the elevator in Calvin Hall has broken 10 times since July, including seven times last month, "because of a leak in the outside casing."

Since the repair of the elevator is not routine, Howard said the UI has contracted a private firm to do the job.

"THIS WILL CAUSE a real problem for those with mobility impairments who need to take (mid-term) tests," said Donna Chandler, coordinator of handicapped services at the UI. "We will have to meet them somewhere else."

She said the office, which serves between one and seven students daily, also provides a number of additional services including counseling and career information.

Denise Kintzle, president of Restrict Us Not, a student organization that represents the UI's handicapped population, said the elevator in Calvin Hall "has always been a great problem and hopefully this time something major will be done so it can be fixed permanently."

"THE INCONVENIENCE of having it broken for such a long time is greater than most people realize," Kintzle added. "It seems to me the logical thing to do would be to move the Services for the Handicapped to the first floor, which they (Handicapped Services officials) feel is needed too."

Kintzle also said handicapped students sometimes experience difficulties with other elevators around campus.

Elevators break "at the most inconvenient times, but they're usually fixed in one or two days," said Kintzle, citing an example when a non-functioning elevator forced her to miss a Calculus review session. "I would have much rather missed the test," she added.

Steve Henry, a UI senior who is disabled, said he misses about five classes a semester because of elevator breakdowns.

Henry said unless he has a test, he just doesn't attend the class. "What else can you do? You just leave. I'm not going to say 'Hey, can you carry me up the stairs?'"

Scope of the problem

In the past few years, the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment has had competent and professional student directors. At times, however, the actions and attitudes of S.C.O.P.E. leaders have been downright childish.

This has been evident in S.C.O.P.E.'s dealings with the local media: promised press passes nowhere to be found on the day of the show and numerous angry calls from commission leaders complaining about everything from the style in which reviews of shows have been written to the fact that S.C.O.P.E.'s name wasn't mentioned.

The S.C.O.P.E. directorship is too important a position for such inconsistent, inexperienced leadership. As the UI's concert-planning organization, S.C.O.P.E. is responsible for tens of thousands of dollars with every show it puts on. This is money that comes from the UI Student Senate, so if a big loss is experienced due to poor leadership, every student loses.

And S.C.O.P.E.'s unprofessional reputation has cost it shows. At Bruce Springsteen's Ames concert last November, an employee of the show's promoters said Springsteen would not come to Iowa City because the tour was a sure sell-out wherever it went, and the promoters did not want to put up with the demands of dealing with S.C.O.P.E.

Currently, the Office of Campus Programs and Student Activities assumes many responsibilities once assumed by S.C.O.P.E. It is time even more power is given to this administrative office. Under an agreement now in effect between S.C.O.P.E., the student senate and the student activities office, the office has the power to establish a full-time concert manager position. This appears to be a good way to implement such a transfer of power.

Admittedly, adding another full-time staff position when the UI's budget is facing cuts is a controversial proposition, but the increased revenues that could be received at least merits hiring someone on a trial basis.

S.C.O.P.E. would not have to be scrapped totally; it could still exist to help out on the day of performances and provide student input in scheduling groups. But some sort of change is required, for currently, dealing with S.C.O.P.E. leaves a bad taste in one's mouth.

Guru gaffe

Rich man's guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh was arrested last week on immigration charges; he's acting like anything but a "common" criminal.

The 53-year-old Indian guru has done nothing but complain since he entered the Charlotte, N.C. jail. His cot is too hard, he needs a throne because of his poor posture (his back is reportedly so bad he can only ride comfortably in a Rolls-Royce), and his dietary needs are not being met. Boo hoo.

Disciples of the bearded guru have allegedly participated in "suspected patterns of marriage fraud" and "entered into individual marriages for the purpose of securing immigration benefits or evading immigration laws." And we all know what happens when one messes around with immigration authorities...

The guru has made some pretty outrageous requests, and if the U.S. government grants them, it too will be acting in outrageous fashion. Rajneesh and his followers have allegedly broken the law and they should be treated as any other suspects — fairly.

The U.S. marshal would do well to remember: What's good for the goose is good for the guru.

Richey refutes guest opinion, calls for special salary report

By R. Wayne Richey

YOUR ISSUE OF Oct. 28 contained a guest opinion by Professor Kent Hermsmeyer on my role as executive secretary of the state Board of Regents ("Regents executive secretary is insensitive spokesman"). The column contained several misstatements. Hermsmeyer also demonstrated a fundamental lack of understanding regarding the regents' responsibilities for governance of the universities.

First, I was never on Gov. Robert Ray's staff as "special assistant for education" or any other position. I was appointed to the Board of Regents staff in 1966 by the Board of Regents and I serve at its pleasure. My appointment as executive secretary occurred while Harold Hughes was governor.

Second, rather than "advocating cuts in the operating budgets of the three universities," I recommended to the regents in October an increase of $46,336,000 or 14 percent in appropriations for next fiscal year.

Third, my recommendations for distribution of the lottery funds utilized the entire $10 million available. The statement by Hermsmeyer that I recommended all of it should be used on equipment and facilities is false. Of that $10 million, $7,344,000 was recommended for programs, $2,000,000 for matching funds for a materials testing facility, and $656,000 for instrumentation for biotechnology and microelectronics. The law requires that the projects relate to the economic development of the state.

THE BOARD OF Regents has a high degree of autonomy from the central state government. It is not subject to centralized state control over personnel, purchasing, architectural, engineering and other consulting services. The state does not exercise pre-audit expenditures of the regent institutions, nor are new or revised academic programs and plans subject to approval by the General Assembly, as is the case in many states. The list of freedoms from control by state government that we have is much longer. Even our appropriations are given in lump sum and are distributed in monthly installments to the institutions.

The delegation of authority by the state government is based on trust that the Board of Regents will exercise its responsibilities for governance and oversight of the institutions under its jurisdiction. If the board and its staff were mere rubber stamps and cheerleaders for whatever the universities request, there would be a sudden diminution in the autonomy of the Board of Regents and the universities. In other words, the regents must have effective review processes to be regarded as credible. My actions are geared to that end.

HERMSMEYER WAS QUITE critical on the issue of faculty salaries. I must attribute his statements to ignorance concerning my actions. I developed and recommended the plan for the extraordinary increase in tuition in 1984-85 with all the new income pledged to the faculty vitality fund. The plan was agreed to by all three university administrations and approved unanimously by the Board of Regents. The plan then received the full backing of Gov. Terry Branstad and the leaders of the Iowa Legislature; hence, the average increase of more than 11 percent in the year just ended. (Only the students complained.)

Even though faculty salaries have increased by 43 percent at the UI since 1980, I agree fully with Hermsmeyer's basic point concerning the need for higher salaries to make them competitive. However, there is just no hope for added state appropriations during the 1986 session. We are already $3 million short of being able to fund the 5.5 percent increase already mandated for fiscal year 1987.

Therefore, my recommendation to the regents is that we prepare a special report on the condition of faculty salaries for the governor and general assembly. Special hearings on the subject would be requested in early 1986 so that the board, the university presidents and faculty leaders could present a strong and convincing case on the deplorable condition of faculty salaries. This strong interinstitutional campaign would set the stage for addressing the issue of funding in the 1987 session of the legislature when there would be a better chance for the state to allocate additional money for this purpose.

Given the outlook for the state's economy and the current condition of the state treasury, however, the only practicable solution to our faculty salary problem may well be that someone will again have to propose an extraordinary increase in tuitions to be pledged for this purpose.

R. Wayne Richey is the executive secretary of the state Board of Regents.

Use your privilege: vote today

By Greg Philby
City Editor

EITHER Darrel Courtney or John Watson will represent District B on the Iowa City Council after today's elections.

Of Kate Dickson, Karen Kubby and John McDonald, two will hold council at-large positions.

So who cares? Sadly, less than one in every four people you pass on an Iowa City sidewalk will care. As "liberal," "college-educated" and "political" as Iowa City may seem when compared to the average conservative Iowa town, only an average of 25 percent of registered voters participate in city elections. A meager 7 percent of eligible voters bothered to cast a ballot in Courtney and Watson's District B victories this October.

IOWA CITY RESIDENTS usually gear up for the national Participation

From the Metro Desk

rates: 89 percent of the local registered voters participated in 1980. But during the next election — a city race in 1981 — only 25 percent showed up.

Kubby told The Daily Iowan earlier that Iowa Citizens seem to be "very aware of things going on at a national level," but fail to realize that local elections "have so much more direct effect on their daily lives."

It is a shame. It is easy to ignore how much one relies on something unless it is gone. If it were ruled today that Iowa City residents could no longer determine who becomes a councilor, an uproar would ensue. If parents were told they could no longer vote for the school administrators in charge of their children, many more than the 10 percent who bothered to vote this year would likely show up to complain.

BUT WITH THE insured luxury of voting, most people don't do it, whether because of laziness, apathy, lack of education or any number of excuses. People enjoy complaining about the inadequacies of President Ronald Reagan, about "the state" or "the school board" doing this and "the city council" doing that, but how many of these people actually voted? What kind of a democracy is it when the vast majority elects Nobody?

Part of the problem lies with politicians being able to keep the public interested in the political affairs and part lies with the public making an effort to understand them.

Iowa City is entering a crucial period. Funding cutbacks are looming as the city wrestles with a tight budget. City services are in jeopardy and it may take special pains to keep Iowa City Transit conveniently rolling. The controversial franchise fee must be resolved and decisions must be made concerning economic development and revolving loans.

The decisions these councilors will make are important and will have direct impact on every Iowa City resident — student and non-student alike. It will be noticed when one opens a heat or electricity bill, when one drinks Iowa City water, when one needs a ride downtown and when one can't find a place to park. The decision whether to vote will affect all of these.

The polls are open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. today, and Iowa City residents should make sure they take five minutes to fill out the ballot sheet. They should be embarrassed if they don't. It is our privilege — not our job — to vote, and we should be proud and concerned enough to carry it through.

Greg Philby is DI city editor. From the Metro Desk, featuring the views and reflections of the DI metro editors, appears every other Tuesday.

Response to endorsement

To the Editor:

As a resident and citizen of Iowa City, these are the reasons I am endorsing Kate Dickson. Rather than producing rhetoric, she produces results.

It is important to remember that in order to achieve something in government at any level, you not only have to have a voice, but you must have credibility and respect in order to be heard. Dickson does her homework and is respected in this community as a leader. She does not prefer to sit back and complain, but has rolled up her sleeves and worked with people at all levels in Iowa City.

Dickson was a leader when Iowa City needed vision for economic development. By pushing for tax abatement and an economic development plan, Dickson showed she could give more to economic development than simple lip service.

Dickson has shown that she cares about our natural resources. She has worked hard for open space in Iowa City. Ryserson's woods is one example of an area that will be enjoyed by future generations because Dickson worked to see that this area is preserved. She is working hard to ensure that other areas are maintained.

When the entire city council wanted to develop land too close to the airport, Dickson knew it was wrong. Instead of following, she voted against it. Later, the courts proved she was right.

This city needs leaders who show the commitment and caring that Dickson possesses. It also needs someone who will go to work and get the job done. Dickson is an activist and her feet are firmly planted on the ground. She is working for today's Iowa City, and is helping to build on tomorrow's Iowa City. We need that kind of leadership on city council.

Ed Zastrow, Jr.
2565 Bluff Wood Lane

To the Editor:

I was dismayed to read your editorial Monday morning ("Call for activists," DI, Nov. 4) and find out you have not endorsed Kate Dickson. Dickson is a leader in this community and has fought for issues that people care about.

Iowa City needs people on the city council who will not just "ask the appropriate questions." Exuberance is fine, but we need someone who also has answers. Dickson has taken stands on the city council and she has come up with answers.

Dickson was the main sponsor of the resolution to make Iowa City a nuclear free community. She did not just ask questions — she got the council to come up with a solution. Other communities in the country are following this example.

In tough times, you need someone who can do more than simply say they have "done their homework." You need someone who has passed the class. Kate Dickson has passed, and will continue to work hard for all of Iowa City.

Tillie Baker
30 S. Governor St.

To the Editor:

Kate Dickson has proven herself on numerous occasions a true representative of the people. Over the past four years, Dickson has listened to her constituents and responded.

Despite a long history of flooded basements, flooded yards and dangerous water accumulation in too small drainage backup ditches, East side residents along lower Ralston Creek were unable to get help with the inadequate sewer system in their area until Dickson was elected. She was willing to view the problem and was able to lead government to respond. This is but one example of Dickson's willingness to be accessible to the requests and input of the citizenry.

I urge you to vote today for the proven people's candidate, Kate Dickson.

Letters

World class

To the Editor:

At last, good news out of Iowa and the UI.

The past two Nobel Prizes for Literature have an Iowa City connection. In 1964 the Prize went to Jaroslav Seifert of Czechoslovakia. The only edition of his book of poems The Casting of Bells in English was published by Morty Sklar's The Spirit That Moves Us Press. It was typical that so unusual and original a book should appear in Iowa City, where Morty Sklar and his Press are an ornament to the famous literary community of this pleasant small place.

In 1985 the Nobel Prize for Literature went to Claude Simon, French novelist. Naturally, his recent novel The World About Us was translated by Professor Daniel Weissbort of the UI International Writing Program and the UI Translation Workshop. These two activities have been going on here for years (The UI International Writing Program is still the only one of its kind in the world), but it is rewarding to have them recognized at the level of the Nobel Prizes and to know that Iowa City and the UI have published and translated at a world level.

Murder mystery

To the Editor:

Do Jews control the press? The DI seems to think so. In Brian Lott's editorial "Terrorism at home," (DI, Oct. 28) he appeared mystified by the lack of coverage the press gave the murder of Alex Odeh of the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee, especially compared to the coverage it gave Leon Klinghoffer's killing aboard the Achille Lauro. Lott asks insinuatingly, "Did the mainstream press bow to Jewish pressure groups?"

As far as anti-Semitic slurs go, this is one of the most virulent. The belief in the existence of a mighty Jewish conspiracy has been the rationale for centuries of violence against Jews. Nowadays not only do many bankrupt farmers believe in a Jewish conspiracy, but apparently the DI does, too.

Exactly what "Jewish pressure groups" might have the power to force Time, Newsweek and the New York Times (all cited in the editorial) not to print a story? Alex Odeh's killing lacked the drama and long-term suspense that the Achille Lauro's hijacking and the slaying of a disabled American aboard it held for the American public. The press goes for excitement, plain and simple. The only mystery about this topic is why the DI sees fit to write and circulate anti-Semitic innuendo.

Soviets publish Reagan interview

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan, trying to assuage Kremlin anxieties, assured the Soviet people in a historic pre-summit interview published Monday that his Star Wars missile-defense system is not intended to threaten them with nuclear war.

"I can assure you now we are not going to try to monopolize this, if such a weapon is developed, for a first-strike capability," Reagan said in an interview Thursday with four Soviet journalists that was published Monday in Moscow.

In a forceful display of "public diplomacy" he hopes will take the edge off a propaganda blitz from Moscow, Reagan spoke in blunt terms about Soviet expansionism and sparred over arms control and foreign policy during the 42-minute interview.

But Reagan also added confusion to one of the central issues at the summit — his dedication to the development of a futuristic defense against nuclear missiles — that sent aides scrambling to clarify his words.

"WE WON'T PUT this weapon or this system in place — this defensive system — until we do away with our nuclear missiles, our offensive missiles," he said. "But we will make it available to other countries, including the Soviet Union, to do the same

The statement went a step beyond hopes Reagan held in the past that his "space shield" could render offensive missiles "obsolete" and lead to their elimination.

However, White House spokesman Larry Speakes insisted Reagan was setting terms only for sharing SDI technology, not for its deployment. In the absence of reductions in nuclear missiles, he said, deployment could proceed.

Another White House spokesman, Edward Djerejian, said Reagan was "not implying that we do away with all missiles" before SDI deployment and was merely emphasizing "the ultimate goal is the elimination of offensive nuclear weapons."

WITH THAT accomplished, Reagan said, the defensive shield would be needed "in case some madman gets his hands on some (nuclear weapons) and tries to blackmail other countries."

In separate prepared answers to written questions, Reagan, who last week countered the latest Soviet arms offer, said the United States seeks "a balanced, fair, verifiable agreement" on reductions in nuclear arsenals.

"The United States has no tricks up its sleeve and we have no desire to threaten the Soviet Union in any way," he said. "Frankly, if the Soviet Union would take a comparable attitude, we would be able to make very rapid progress toward an agreement."

Just 15 days away from the first superpower summit in six years, Reagan surveyed the landscape of U.S.-Soviet relations and expressed hope he and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev can "find ways that we can prove by deed — not just words, but by deeds — that there is no need for distrust between us."

BUT THE REAGAN answers, like the Soviet questions, also underlined sharp differences in the four areas on the U.S. agenda for the summit: arms control, regional conflicts, bilateral relations and human rights.

For example, Reagan asserted the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and support for insurgency in Cambodia, Africa and elsewhere have "created enormous tension in U.S.-Soviet relations over the years."

When one interviewer likened Afghanistan to the U.S. invasion of Grenada, Reagan retorted: "The Soviet troops have been in Afghanistan for six years now, fighting all the time. We did what we were asked to do — the request of the government of Grenada — and came home."

The Soviet news agency Tass accused Reagan of "unfounded accusations" and "evading answers." However, Tass also said his recognition "of the need for extensive Soviet-American dialogue is a positive sign."

THE WHITE HOUSE had no immediate comment on the Soviet reaction.

Release of the interview, the first in 24 years that an American president has granted to Soviet journalists, coincided with its publication in the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia. White House officials had been led to believe the interview would be carried Sunday.

Tass official Gennadiy Shishkin, one of the four journalists who took part, said the interview proved "we look at things differently."

French agents guilty of sabotage, manslaughter in Greenpeace trial

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (UPI) — Two French secret agents pleaded guilty Monday to reduced charges of manslaughter and sabotage in the fatal sinking of the Greenpeace protest ship Rainbow Warrior in Auckland harbor.

The surprise pleas by Maj. Alain Mafart and Capt. Dominique Prieur, both French intelligence agents, came before the start of a preliminary hearing in the case.

Prosecutors dropped murder charges against the pair, paving the way for the guilty pleas, minutes before the hearing was to begin under the strictest security ever mounted in a New Zealand courtroom.

Prosecutor David Morris told Judge Ronald Gilbert that authorities agreed to accept the pleas because they were unable to prove the two agents planted the mines that sank the protest ship.

GILBERT SET sentencing for Nov. 22 in the High Court. The defendants face maximum sentences of life in prison.

In Paris, the French government denied a deal was struck to return the two secret service agents from New Zealand in exchange for their guilty pleas in the case.

French government spokesman Bernard Poulet said there was no official government reaction to the pleas by the agents Monday. "We have no comment to make about whether there was any arrangement between the two governments or if the two people will be sent back."

But French television quoted an unnamed government spokesman as saying there was no deal in the case.

FRENCH NEWS REPORTS have said France and New Zealand were negotiating a diplomatic deal in which the agents would enter guilty pleas in exchange for their return to France. Top New Zealand and French officials met in New York last month during ceremonies for the United Nations' 40th anniversary.

The French government has admitted it sent the agents to New Zealand to sabotage the Rainbow Warrior in July.

The Rainbow Warrior was preparing to lead a protest voyage against French nuclear testing in the South Pacific when it was sunk by two mines attached to its hull while it was anchored in Auckland harbor July 10.

A photographer for the London-based environmental group was trapped aboard the vessel and drowned.

THE TWO FRENCH agents were arrested shortly after the sinking, but New Zealand authorities believe at least four other French agents were involved in the plot and have escaped to France.

The French government's admission of responsibility in the incident has led to the resignation of former Defense Minister Charles Hernu and the dismissal of the head of French intelligence, Adm. Pierre LaCoste.

New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange has called the mining "an act just short of war" and is considering suing the French government for millions of dollars in compensation.

Moderate Guatemalan claims win

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Moderate Vinicio Cerezo claimed victory Monday in Guatemala's presidential election and asked the second-place candidate to withdraw in the interest of national unity from a scheduled runoff.

The runner-up in Sunday's balloting, millionaire newspaper publisher Jorge Carpio who heads the center-right Union for a Democratic Center, did not immediately respond to Cerezo's request. But in a television interview, he pledged to compete in the runoff, scheduled for Dec. 8.

Under Guatemalan election law, a runoff between the top two finishers is required if none of the candidates garnered more than 50 percent of the vote.

ABOUT 70 PERCENT of Guatemala's 2.75 million registered voters turned out for the election, aimed at ending 31 years of military rule that began with a CIA-backed coup that toppled a democratically elected president in 1954.

With 39 percent of the votes tallied, Cerezo, a moderate Christian Democrat, had 260,348 votes, or 39 percent, the official Supreme Electoral Tribunal said. Carpio received 136,626 votes, or 21 percent of the total.

Jorge Serrano Elias, the center-right candidate of the Democratic Party of National Cooperation, was in third place, with 90,734 votes, or 14 percent; and Mario Sandoval Alarcon of the far right Movement for National Liberation held fourth place, with 45,357 votes, or 7 percent, the tribunal reported.

THE REMAINING votes were scattered among four other minor candidates.

Final results were expected Tuesday, but the candidates' vote percentages had not changed significantly since the first returns were released Sunday night.

Cerezo, 42, told reporters the results were a rejection of the far right parties and the military, which have dominated politics since the 1954 coup.

He pointed in particular to the poor, fourth-place showing of the Movement for National Liberation, which was formed by participants in the 1954 coup.

"THIS ELECTION was a great step for democracy in Guatemala," said Cerezo, who has survived two assassination attempts by suspected right-wing death squads. "It is significant that the parties of the right have wound up in fourth place, and the people of Guatemala have chosen the moderate left in search of new options."

Cerezo expressed confidence that the military would honor its promise to stay out of government after the new civilian president takes office Jan. 14.

Cerezo said his party would win between 40 and 50 seats in the 100-member National Congress, giving it effective control of the legislature. He called on Carpio to withdraw from the runoff in the interests of national unity, and said he would consider offering Carpio's party Cabinet posts in exchange.

"BECAUSE THERE were eight candidates in the race, we won what is relatively an absolute majority," he said. "Another vote would only be a formality."

Although Carpio did not immediately reply to the offer, he told a television interviewer he intended to compete in the runoff.

"We have a great chance to triumph. Our objective is to participate in the second round," Carpio said. "Political analysts said that we would have a great advantage among the undecided vote. We will continue with the second round with an optimistic spirit. What is certain is that we will go into the second round and not abandon the fight."

Wayward whale

Humphrey, a 45-ton humpback whale who took a wrong turn into the San Francisco Bay on Oct. 11 and wandered upstream into backwater shallows near Sacramento, is seen here as he moves closer to the Pacific Ocean Monday. The giant whale is responding to the tape recorded sounds of other whales which are being played on special underwater equipment. The tapes were played for Humphrey for the first time Sunday and the response was an incredible 58-mile dash toward the Ocean. But the leviathan stopped progress toward the sea late Sunday and turned into a north and easterly direction which took him beyond the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge. That's where he languished Sunday night and most of Monday morning, about eight miles from the ocean, until he began his latest unexplained movement toward the Pacific once again. Workers for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which is coordinating the rescue effort, were cautiously optimistic that this would be the whale's last day out of its natural habitat.

Stations set to scramble signal

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

Home satellite dish owners may see as much "snow" on their TV screens as on the ground early next year when several subscription television stations start scrambling their signals.

Cable programmers, such as Home Box Office, Cinemax, Showtime, The Movie Channel and MTV, will lower the boom on home satellite dish owners this winter by installing scrambling devices in their systems to obliterate audio and visual reception.

After a signal has been scrambled, the only way to regain the signal is to purchase a $400 descrambler — a small device that restructures the picture — from a local cable company or the manufacturer.

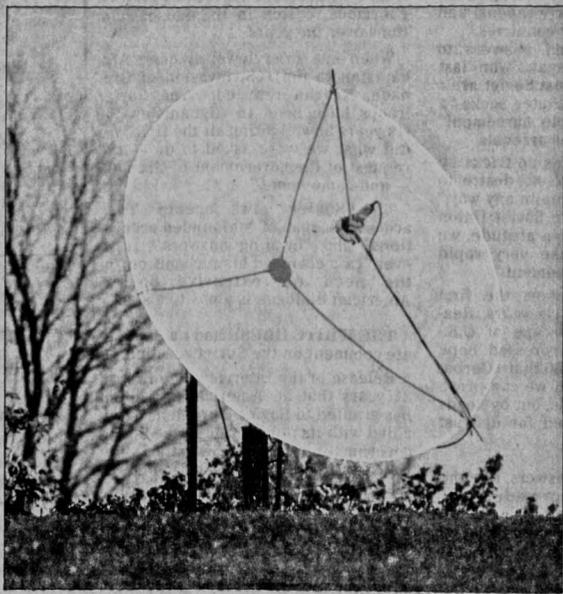

The purchaser then becomes subject to monthly charges for the service, said Bill Blough, general manager of the Iowa City branch of Heritage Cablevision, 546 Southgate Ave.

HERITAGE WILL contract with descrambler manufacturers to provide the devices to dish owners in this area, Blough said.

By supplying the descramblers through the cable company, Blough said, customers will be able to purchase groups of services instead of buying them "a la carte" — which could cost subscribers as much as $90 per month for the "Cadillac" services like HBO and SuperStation WTBS.

People who own the large bowl-shaped antennas currently receive the signals free, but satellite programming services have been complaining for the last five years that viewers shouldn't get something for nothing.

Most Iowa City residents who

subscribe to these channels receive them through Heritage and pay monthly fees. In outlying areas, however, the only way to get the services is to purchase an earth station or satellite dish.

"There's really no payback for us to go out there," Blough said.

PEOPLE WHO WANT cable TV and live in areas outside Iowa City limits would have to pay a portion of the $10,000- to $17,000-per-mile cost to have a cable strung out to their homes, Blough said.

Because there is no cable company in Oxford, a small community 20 miles west of Iowa City, residents must purchase a satellite dish if they want television programming other than what the networks provide.

The devices cost about $1,000 to $2,000, according to retailers.

William Harvey Jr., a dish owner from Oxford, said he probably won't continue receiving the stations if he must buy a descrambler plus pay monthly subscription fees.

Harvey said he spent two to three years saving money to purchase the dish, and gave little credence to rumors that satellite programmers were going to start scrambling signals.

"I HEARD SOME talk of it, but they've been talking about it for three, four, five years," he said.

"I can see them doing it in big metro areas that already have cable," but not in smaller communities where the chances of getting cable are "slim and none," he said.

According to Sharon Kutcher, an Oxford satellite dish owner, when her family bought a dish the possibility of programmers scrambling signals looked as remote as the regulation of video cassette recorders.

"We probably never would have bought it" otherwise, she said.

"I'm encouraging all my customers to just wait and see" before buying, said Harry Dolder, owner of Oxford TV & Appliance, a dish retailer.

"EVEN IF THEY do scramble, so what? There are still 100 other channels out there to watch," Dolder said.

He added that about 30 households of the nearly 200 in Oxford own dishes.

People are "thinking twice," however, before they buy the dishes, according to Dennis Boyd, owner of Boyd's Satellite TV Sales, Highway 218, North Liberty.

The scrambling threat is "going to affect sales," he said.

According to Clarence Hagen, owner of Hagen's Furniture and TV, 1214 S. Gilbert St., the cost of scrambling satellite signals may be prohibitive for some programmers and scrambling could cost advertisers want.

"Those that are scrambling are only kidding themselves," he said, adding "the largest percentage of channels" are advertiser supported.

State Senator Neighbour dies

John Neighbour

CHARITON, Iowa (UPI) — Services for Sen. John Neighbour, D-Chariton, who died Sunday of an apparent heart attack, will be held Wednesday at the Christian Church in Chariton, family members have announced.

Neighbour 66, was taken to Lucas County Memorial Hospital Sunday when he complained of chest pains after working outdoors. He died several hours later.

The first-term lawmaker had served eight years as a member of the Lucas County Board of Supervisors before his election to the Senate in 1984.

Neighbour, a farmer in rural Chariton, also held the post of Lucas County Democratic Chairman for nine years prior to his election to the legislature.

HIS LEGISLATIVE district included Lucas, Wayne, Monroe and portions of Clarke and Warren Counties.

Colleagues said Neighbour appeared to be in excellent health when he made his last public appearances at a Senate Democratic Caucus meeting and the Democrats' annual Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner in Des Moines Saturday.

"It was a real shocker, Senate Majority Leader C.W. 'Bill' Hutchins, D-Audubon, said. "I certainly didn't recognize him having any difficulties."

Hutchins said Neighbour will be remembered by his Senate colleagues as a conscientious lawmaker who represented his district well.

Gov. Terry Branstad has not set a date for a special election to fill Neighbour's seat, but it is expected the election will be held in late December.

IT WILL MARK the fourth special election since the last legislative session ended in May. Voters last September elected Waukee Democrat Jim Riordan to fill the unexpired Senate seat of Norman Rodgers, D-Adel, who resigned to take a position with the Iowa Development Commission.

Branstad has set Dec. 10 as the date for a special election in House District 57 in Muscatine and Scott Counties to fill the unexpired term of Rep. Janis Torrence, R-Muscatine. Torrence resigned her seat last month for health reasons.

Elementary schools to offer languages

By Jerry Duncan
Staff Writer

A new program being planned for Iowa City's elementary schools next academic year may have children chattering in tongues that seem foreign to their parents.

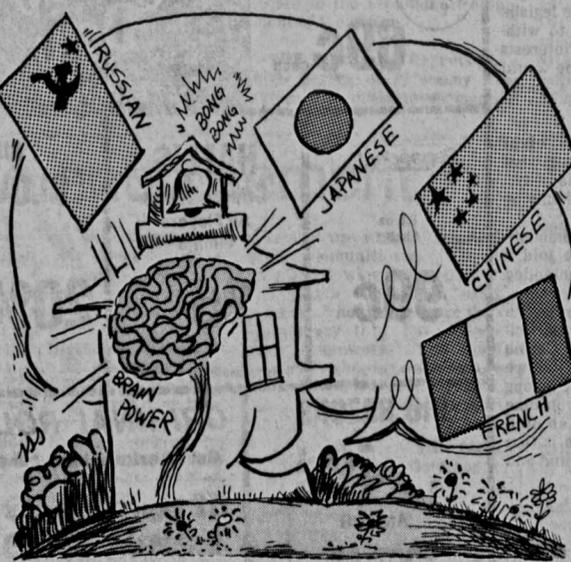

The elementary foreign language program, now in preliminary planning stages, will likely offer students instruction in such languages as Spanish, French and German, said Jan Harvey, director of elementary curriculum. Students may also be offered an Oriental language. The program will be funded with district School Improvement monies.

By making children proficient in a second language as early as possible, it will help "build in cultural understanding" and provide students with a language they can use, Harvey said. The United States is "one of the few countries where everybody doesn't take a second language," she added.

Studies indicate children ranging from 10 to 12 years of age — those in fourth through sixth grades — have learned the grammar of their native language well enough to tackle a second language, said Paul Hoekstra, foreign language consultant for the Iowa Department of Public Instruction.

IN ADDITION, these children "develop feelings of otherness" and are more willing to accept foreign influences than younger children, he said.

There is also ample evidence of a "critical period" for language acquisition in children, said Sue Rosner, UI professor of child psychology. The theory states children under the age of 13 acquire language more easily than older children.

The Daily Iowan/Jeffrey Sedam

Ayxa Calero, a UI teaching assistant in the UI Department of Spanish and Portuguese, said "the personality of kids" — their motivation to learn and their openness — allows them to pick up a language faster.

School children as young as 5 may benefit from instruction in a second language, Calero said.

SOME FOREIGN language instruction is already taking place in local schools.

Spanish and German classes are "rolling right along" at Helen Lemme Elementary School as part of a student volunteer program, said Lemme principal Ralph Delozier.

More than one-fourth of the student body participates in the classes, he said, which are taught before and after school by two people native to those languages.

Several other area schools also have these courses, Harvey said.

A major problem in holding elementary foreign language classes, however, is finding certified teachers to instruct them. Although 10 state institutions offer elementary certification for the instruction of foreign language, only 285 teachers in Iowa have been certified in the last five years, said Hoekstra.

QUALIFIED SECONDARY school teachers may visit the lower schools and teach foreign language as part of an "exploratory" exercise, but they are not authorized to instruct at the elementary schools on a regular basis, Hoekstra said.

"Those are the rules," he added.

The DPI is in the process of changing those rules but discussion won't begin until November, he said.

One solution would be the temporary certification of secondary language teachers by the DPI so they can teach in elementary schools, Harvey said.

Another project being considered is a cooperative arrangement between the UI, the Ford Foundation and the school district to train and certify foreign language teachers, she added.

Iowa high schools are "above average" in foreign language instruction with 30 percent of students enrolled in "traditional" second language courses, such as French, German, Spanish and Latin, Hoekstra said.

In addition, the DPI pays school districts $50 for every student enrolled in a course teaching a non-traditional language such as Russian, Japanese, Chinese and Arabic, he said.

Second language instruction in Iowa's public schools is optional for students, Hoekstra said, but added many colleges require foreign language as an "exit requirement."

City eyes money-saving options

By Gretchen Norman
Staff Writer

Iowa City's tight budget might get a little breathing room if it supports some $3 million money-saving resolutions prepared by the League of Iowa Municipalities.

The Iowa City Council Tuesday listened to such resolutions as self-insurance programs, repealing the current compensation system for job-related heart and lung diseases, and changing the Iowa law which requires 60 percent of voters approve general obligation bonds to a simple majority.

Roger Nowadzky, League legislative counsel, said cities may be headed toward worse financial conditions if Gov. Terry Branstad carries out his threat to freeze subsidies to local governments.

"We will have real problems, and this will be something we'll have to battle if he sticks with this philosophy," Nowadzky said. "Certain costs have no control."

MAYOR JOHN McDONALD said the governor's suggestion is a "slap in the face" to officials in towns and cities.

"The more I read, the more I get upset," said McDonald. "It's as if he's saying, 'You people aren't capable of handling the money, and we'll put restrictions on you.'"

The League proposals will be sent to the governor and the general assembly in January, hoping to give cities more financial stability.

Cities could save money by changing the worker's compensation procedure for heart and lung diseases, Nowadzky said.

City Manager Neal Berlin said the current policy "is a terrible piece of legislation and has been extremely costly. We've been stuck several times in the last few years."

THE CURRENT POLICY contends that city employees are "presumed" to have contracted the diseases on the job, without needing to show evidence that the disease and work were related. Nowadzky's resolution calls the presumption clause "an unfair provision" that should be repealed.

Nowadzky also introduced a resolution to limit or repeal state sales taxes charged to "fees paid to cities and counties for the privilege of participating in any athletic sports."

The tax, according to the resolution, limits the participation "of those who are unemployed or who otherwise can't afford" recreational activities, and detracts from the community's quality of life and the local economy.

"We understand as part-time officials it's difficult to get to know League functions," said Nowadzky. "We want you to get familiar with us and be comfortable with us."

Nowadzky plans to meet with city councils statewide to discuss the proposals.

Violations

immediate plans to correct the existing violations in the former Music Building.

"We certainly don't allow these conditions to exist for the fun of it," Gibson said. "We can't do the whole thing at once, and we're picking our priorities. We have a limited amount of money to spend on a widespread problem."

HE ADDED THAT some of the priority decisions are subjective and not every department will agree with the administration's decisions.

Gibson also stressed the state Fire Marshal has not set a deadline concerning when the violations in the former Music Building must be corrected.

The Collegiate Associations Council last night passed a resolution urging the UI to move the studios in the building to the soon-to-be empty College of Law building.

Gibson said the Art Department has been placed on a list with several other departments in hopes of acquiring the use of the College of Law building.

While pointing out plans have not been finalized for the building, Gibson and it may be left empty after the College of Law moves into its new facility in May because of the excessive cost of moving departments.

toxic than the chemotherapy that we've been giving here."

He said the hospital is seeking approximately 2,000 women to participate in the study. Women must be between 50 and 75 years old, have had breast cancer surgery within the past 60 days and have no malignant tumors.

UI RESEARCH nutritionist Karen Smith said the women who participate in the study will not be put on a specific diet but will have their current diets adjusted to maintain a fat intake of 15 percent to 35 percent less than a normal American's diet.

"We all know how easy it is to pick up a diet, follow it for a couple of weeks and then throw it away," Smith said. "But the study patients will learn a whole new process of eating."

Smith said UI researchers may take up to three months to formulate a diet for an individual subject.

Jochimsen called for women to participate in the study and predicted many of the participants will come from across the state.

"People are looking to be involved in their own health care. If women can participate in clinical tests, then they should," Jochimsen said.

Hawks sharp after loss to Buckeyes

After Iowa's worst game of the season, Coach Hayden Fry was very positive about his team's chances against a much improved Illinois ball club.

"That was the best Monday practice we've had all year," Fry said. "Everyone did an excellent job, and hopefully we'll be ready for Illinois by Saturday."

Fry also realized that it's now or never for his Hawkeyes. "Our backs are really against the wall," Fry said, "and with Illinois coming late in the season, things aren't getting any easier."

"Illinois has a very diversified attack. (Illinois quarterback Jack) Trudeau has been getting better all year, and any team that can hold Michigan to three points has got to have some kind of defense."

But it doesn't stop there for the Hawkeyes who's final three games all include teams still with a legitimate shot at bowl games.

"All three games are very important," Fry said. "I'm just glad we have two out of three of them at home."

Iowa men's, women's swim teams ranked

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — The University of Iowa men's and women's swimming teams both are ranked among the nation's top 20 teams in pre-season coaches' polls released Monday.

The Iowa men's team enters the 1985-86 dual meet season ranked No. 14 with 21 points. Stanford is top-rated with 79 points and Florida is second with 75.

The Iowa women's team will open the new season with a 19th-place national ranking. The Hawkeyes tied with Brown University with eight points each. Defending national champion Texas ranked No. 1 with 80 points, while Stanford and Florida tied for second with 74 points.

On The Line

Can our Iowa Hawkeyes bounce back after their resounding loss to Ohio State this weekend or will the Fighting Illini further dash the Rose Bowl hopes of the mighty black and gold?

There are a lot of questions to answer in this weeks On the Line contest, but there is an even bigger question to answer for a few overweight characters in the DI newsroom.

Just recently, our hero Steve Williams was jolted a severe blow on the tennis court for the second straight time. Now, while villain Steve Sands actually thinks he beat Williams due to his skill on the court, it was obvious to the thousands who witnessed the event that our hero simply ran out of gas late in the third set, and let Sands win.

However, what most people don't realize is that Williams isn't the only person out of shape on the DI staff (Oh no, not by a long shot). Our graphics king Jeff Sedam is in dire need of losing weight as is our beloved Sports Editor, Melissa Rapoport, affectionately known to her dinner mates as "greedy."

All three have been increasing their garment size to compensate for their newfound loves, food and booze. But fortunately, a solution has been found to restore our staff back to normal, and at the same time, bring our hero back down to the form which won him many a tennis championship in his younger days.

A "weight off" contest has been called for our trio of eating machines, and we hope everyone will come away a winner.

Unfortunately, there will only be one person lucky enough to win a trip to The Mill Restaurant, (located at 120 East Burlington) for a free keg of brew, so make sure you follow the rules of our humble little contest.

Circle the team you think will win and both if you think the teams will tie. Only five ballots are allowed per person, and make sure you include your name, address and phone number, otherwise one of our hungry little staff people might get ahead of it, and who knows what will happen then.

Entry deadline is noon Thursday at the Business Office.

Sailing Club brings home the 'hardware'

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

The UI Sailing Club has been "bringing home a lot of hardware," according to its coach, Bob Woodward. The club has left four out of five regattas with trophies this season.

Last weekend was no different as the Hawkeyes placed second in a field of 14 teams at the IIT (Illinois Institute of Technology) Regatta on Lake Michigan.

The club, with 94 points, was behind first-place Northwestern, who had the low score of 84.

Greg Christianson, according to Woodward, showed "marvelous improvement" as he missed winning B-division honors by two points. Christianson won three of the 11 races he competed in.

THE PREVIOUS weekend, the UI Sailing Club took first-place honors at the Steve Sophie Cup at Southern Illinois edging their opponents by one point.

Iowa's Bill Vickers won the A-division in that regatta.

The Hawkeyes will compete in the Area C Elimination at Green Bay, Wis., this weekend. The top three teams in each area elimination will compete in the Timme Angston Regatta, Nov. 29, 30 and Dec. 1.

Ice Hawks clipped

The Ice Hawks had a very unsuccessful weekend with both A and B teams losing its games.

Loras downed the B-team Friday night, 11-1. Iowa's only goal was scored by Tom Zeken.

The A-team came up scoreless to Drake Saturday, losing 18-0. On Sunday, the Hawkeyes again lost to Drake by a 14-2 score.

Iowa's two goals were made by Zeken and Mike Pugliese.

Since Iowa doesn't have a practice facility of its own, the players must travel to Dubuque to skate. According to Iowa's Jerry Tyblewicz, this has a definite effect on the player's performance on the ice.

"These players on other teams aren't better quality but practice three times a week. Iowa can't do that because they don't have a practice facility," Tyblewicz said.

The Ice Hawks will hold a club meeting, tonight at 6 p.m. in the Miller Room of the Union. All club members and interested persons should attend.

Water Polo club sinks

The Big Ten Water Polo Tournament wasn't the best tournament for Iowa. The club took sixth out of seven teams in last weekend's competition at Loyola in Chicago.

The tournament began for the Hawkeyes on Friday night against Northwestern. Without adequate warm-up time, Iowa fell to the Wildcats, 11-4, automatically placing them in the loser's bracket.

Saturday morning the Hawkeyes played a close match with Purdue and were able to beat the Boiler-makers, 9-8, in overtime.

THE GAME WAS evenly matched until the fourth quarter when Iowa was behind until Justin Kenney made three goals to tie up the score.

The Hawkeyes then found themselves down, 8-7, with 10 seconds left, but Iowa's Jim Chaney threw one in to tie the game, 8-8.

In the two overtime quarters, Bill Year scored to take and keep the lead giving Iowa the victory, 9-8.

Iowa then played Wisconsin in what started out as a close game ended in a 14-5 victory for the Badgers.

"We were burnt out from our dramatic game (against Purdue) and we just couldn't get anything going," Steve Davis said of the Wisconsin game.

Year agreed, "Our timing was totally off, by the time we recovered, we were too tired."

Bears expecting roughhousing for remainder of the NFL season

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — The Chicago Bears say they are expecting more "roughhouse" tactics from opposing teams the rest of the way in an attempt to intimidate the NFL's lone undefeated club. The Bears stayed unbeaten with a 16-10 victory at Green Bay Sunday that at times resembled more of a wrestling match than a football game.

try to intimidate the Bears. "I would think so," Wrightman said. "I think the teams will come in and try to intimidate us by doing the cheap shots." Hampton said he was disappointed Green Bay lowered themselves by getting involved in such a dirty game. "The way they played, they were only hurting themselves," Hampton said. "It's hard to believe they will squander their season on childish stuff like that. We're glad we're through with them this year."

last week of practice but blamed most of the offense for failing to come through on big plays. "I was unhappy with our execution on offense," Ditka said. "I'm happy with our play, I'm happy with our being 9-0. I just would like to see the execution improved." The Bears enter next Sunday's game with Detroit with some minor injuries. Tight end Emery Moorehead has an injured right knee, wide receiver Willie Gault has bruised ribs and McMahon continues to be "hurt" all over, according to Ditka. However, all will see action against the Lions, the only NFC Central team the Bears have yet to face this season.

"We may see a lot of cheap shots to try to get us out of our plan. If we are stupid enough to fall into it, we'll get beat," Hampton added.

"HE'S NOT dropping deep enough," Ditka said. "Some of his balls are sailing on him because he's throwing on his back foot." Ditka said McMahon had an excellence in exchange for room and board. General Store Music & Pub, Stone City, you think you're over-qualified, you're disqualified. Call Mitch at 462-2726.

Saberhagen wins Sport Magazine MVP award, sets sights on 1986

NEW YORK — Bret Saberhagen has already mapped out his challenge for next year. "Maybe next year, I can win 21 games, three games in the World Series and have twins," the 21-year-old Kansas City left-hander said Monday after accepting Sport Magazine's Most Valuable Player Award.

Slyke made the last out of the season, is crystal clear. "It has all sunk in for me, Saberhagen said Monday in the ballroom of a New York City hotel. "It's definitely hit me," he said. "I think the parade, that's when it hit me the most. We had a parade in Kansas City, 300,000 people came ... chanting 'We're No. 1, all these bright faces smiling, people staying out all night just to savor the feeling. Kansas City has made a name for itself."

magazine's award is not serving as the official MVP award, which Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's office took over. Saberhagen won that honor too — along with a Chevrolet to donate to charity. No matter what he drives to get there, Saberhagen will be returning to Royals Stadium soon to begin contract negotiations. His one-year pact — complete with incentives for winning the Cy Young Award — is up. Because Saberhagen is entering only his third year, free agency is not an option, but arbitration is.

And so has Bret Saberhagen, who makes no bones about his hopes that the Sport MVP is not the end of the accolades. The American League Cy Young Award will be announced next week. "I'm not really counting on it," said Saberhagen. "But I'm crossing my fingers, my toes, anything I can cross." How about car keys? Saberhagen, who already is leasing two cars, was given a Ford Aerostar in conjunction with the Sport MVP Award. This is the first year that the line pattern that Bills defensive back Derrick Burroughs broke up, more or less by looking up for the ball and bumping into Collinsworth. In recent years, Burroughs' play probably would have drawn a penalty, but under this year's softened pass interference rules, no flag was thrown. Collinsworth's only other chance came seconds before halftime, when he ran a crossing pattern but quarterback Boomer Esiason threw the ball out of his reach. "It was a weird day out there. It was tough to throw the ball downfield. You couldn't get anything on it," Collinsworth said. "The part I regret is I didn't find out until the last play of the game Cris broke his streak," Coach Sam Wyche said. "There was mention on Collinsworth caught passes in 19 straight games his rookie year (counting the playoffs), 10 in the strike-shortened year of 1982 (including one playoff game), 14 in 1983 (when he missed two games with a sprained ankle), 15 games last year (he missed one game) and eight straight this year. Surprisingly, in only two of those games did he catch only one pass. In the second Cleveland game last year, in which he suffered a first-quarter injury, and in the first Pittsburgh game this year did Collinsworth have just one reception.

Collinsworth's pass catching streak stopped at 66 consecutive games

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Weather conditions Sunday brought an end to Bengal wide receiver Cris Collinsworth's streak of catching a pass in 66 consecutive games, or every NFL game in which he has played. "I think (it's the first time) ever," Collinsworth said. "I don't think I ever got shut out in college." The Bengals abandoned the passing game once they got the lead in the game, which they eventually won, 23-17. A nearly-perpetual rain also played a major part in the Bengals' play selection. In the second half, Cincinnati ran the ball 31 times and threw only five passes, none to Collinsworth. On the day, only two passes were thrown his way.

USA suffers disappointing start at World Gymnastics competition

MONTREAL (UPI) — The United States' men gymnasts attributed jitters and a bad break Monday to a disappointing showing in the team compulsories at the World Gymnastics Championships. The U.S. team was forced to compete with only five men in three events after Daniel Hayden suffered a sprained ankle on the high bar. He was put in a cast and will be out for the rest of the weeklong competition. The U.S. team finished the afternoon session third behind China and Hungary, but was expected to drop in the rankings after the powerful Soviet, Japanese and East German squads competed Monday night. The U.S. squad finished with 281.85 points, compared with 283.05 for Hungary and 289.45 for China. "There was a lot of tension out there," U.S. team member Tim Daggett said. "When you have an injury like that, it's so difficult. In a sport like gymnastics, you need every man out there."

formed inconsistently but still was the best on the U.S. squad with a score of 57.70. He had individual event scores ranging from 9.55 on the pommel horse and rings to 9.75 on the floor exercises. "I was a little shaky at first," Daggett said. "But I felt like I got my senses together and performed well. I felt like I was in pretty good control and I was trying to help everybody out. I think we picked it up after a while." The U.S. squad, which lost four members to retirement after the 1984 Olympics, felt the pressure of defending the team gold it won at Los Angeles. "Everybody is out to beat the U.S. now," Daggett said. "Without that person (Hayden) in there, we can have no mistakes. It's a lot of pressure to put on young guys. Unfortunately, we didn't deal that well with it in some circumstances."

"Hayden getting injured was very bad because he is one of our better guys," Grossfeld said. "Our hopes for third place (in the team compulsories and optionals) diminished a lot because of it." Grossfeld said his team tried its best, but was "a little tense." He predicted a better effort Wednesday. "The guys have to get tough now and they know it," he said. "They're capable of that." Scott Johnson, who along with Daggett competed in the Los Angeles Games, said the U.S. squad lacked confidence. "I don't think our confidence was as high as it could have been," he said. "I have to keep a positive attitude because one of our team members is out. We have to pull together as a team. The show is not over yet." There are 363 athletes from 38 countries competing in the championships, which are held every two years. The women will compete Tuesday in the team compulsories.

Hawkeyes try to earn respect at UNI

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Now that the Iowa volleyball team's Big Ten championship hopes are all but dashed, the Hawkeyes will be looking to get a little respect back in the state as they take on Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls tonight at 7:30.

It's been a disappointing year for Coach Sandy Stewart and her Hawkeyes, who were picked as one of the favorites this year in the conference.

"Right now, we're trying to salvage our record a little bit,"

Stewart said of her 10-16 Hawkeyes. "I didn't expect this kind of year starting out, but we've had a lot of bad breaks all season."

INJURIES HAVE plagued Iowa all season. Co-captain Kathy Griesheim was out at the beginning of the year with a back injury, and it seemed to be contagious as Ellen Mullarkey and Cheryl Zemaitis suffered similar injuries that hampered Iowa in two crucial games against Minnesota and Wisconsin two weeks ago.

"Nobody really counts on injuries, but I guess it's something you have to live with," Stewart said. "We've just seemed to have more than most this year."

Another loss to the Hawkeyes was that of Kari Hamel who got hurt early in the season.

"Kari's loss hurt us quite a bit," Stewart said. "She's been practicing with the team all year, but we decided to redshirt her and save her for next season."

A LOSS OF A different kind came when the Hawkeyes lost top recruit Karla Hail to academics.

"Karla was a junior college all-American, and she would have been our starting middle hitter," Stewart said. "We just told her to concentrate on her grades, and hopefully she'll be back with us at the start of next season."

Meanwhile, Iowa will be looking to regroup against the 20-5 Northern Iowa Panthers who are having their best season since their arrival to Division I play four years ago.

"Our offense has been nationally-ranked all year," Panther Assistant Coach Jan Bitner said, "and we feel like we're getting better all the time."

"NORTHERN IOWA IS having a great year," Stewart said. "They're a scrappy club, and in the past we've tended to overlook them a bit."

The Panthers were definitely overlooked last year, as they beat Iowa 15-11, 15-7, 11-15 and 15-11.

"We had beaten them in straight sets twice earlier in the year," Stewart said, "and they just caught us off guard during our Big Ten schedule. Right now, we need all the wins we can get."

Cardinals' Herzog NL's top manager

NEW YORK (UPI) — Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals, who took a team predicted to finish far down in the standings and led it to the pennant, Monday was named National League Manager of the Year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Herzog, whose team won more games (101) during the regular season than any other, edged Cincinnati's Pete Rose by 1 point because sports writer Charley Feeney of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette omitted Rose on his ballot.

Twenty-four members of the BBWAA — two from each National League city — participated in the balloting and were asked to name three managers in order of preference. Points were awarded on a 5-3-1 basis and Herzog beat Rose 86-85.

Herzog received 11 first-place votes, 9 seconds and 4 thirds. Rose received 10 firsts, 11 seconds and 2 thirds.

TOM LASORDA, winner of the BBWAA's first Manager of the Year Award in 1983, finished third with 39 points, Dave Johnson of the New York Mets was fourth with 4 points and Bob Rodgers of the Montreal Expos was fifth with 2 points. Last year's winner, Jim Frey of the Chicago Cubs, did not get a single mention.

Feeney voted for Herzog, Lasorda and Rodgers. Had he named Rose even as his third choice, the first year Cincinnati skipper would have tied Herzog for the award.

Ironically, the BBWAA employed the point system for the first time last year to try to avoid ties. In the first year of the award, each writer was asked to vote for only one manager.

Most baseball writers did not give the Cardinals much chance of winning the National League

Walk-ons contribute at Iowa

By Julie Deardorff
Special to the Daily Iowan

Rob Houghtlin's field goal in the closing seconds of the Iowa-Michigan game did more than win the game for the Hawkeyes. It showed many people that walk-ons can become a major part of Iowa athletics.

Houghtlin, who broke all the kicking records at New Trier High School in Illinois, was named honorable mention all-State and decided to attend Miami (Ohio). He had some friends who were walk-ons at Iowa and after a semester decided to transfer to Iowa City to try out. Houghtlin was a walk-on for three full semesters before receiving a scholarship.

"It's definitely harder to prove yourself," he said. "You need more motivation to prove that you're good enough to play Big Ten. You're also at a disadvantage financially too."

BUT THE ABSENCE of money doesn't seem to bother many of the walk-ons. They try out because of their love of the sport.

"If you have your doubts about it," Houghtlin said, "then you shouldn't be playing the game. I've had lows, sure, but it's a question of support and confidence in yourself. That's the reason walk-ons walk on, they think they can do it.

Coaches also feel that most walk-ons possess unique qualities. "A walk-on is a special kind of person," said assistant basketball Coach Brian Hammel. "He's an unknown quantity, a real role player. He needs to be willing to make a commitment, to be loyal and to be a hard worker. A walk-on has to love the game and have a burning desire to play."

THE METHOD OF trying out varies for each sport, but generally the walk-ons are not distinguished from the scholarship

"It's definitely harder to prove yourself," former walk-on Rob Houghtlin says. "You need more motivation to prove that you're good enough to play Big Ten."

recipients. Everyone on the softball team, for instance, tries out at the same time.

"We do special drills in the beginning," said Coach Ginny Parrish, "so we can see them perform competitively. The reason we have everyone try out every year is that the young people are getting better and better, and it keeps the older players sharp. . . . Once the team is chosen we forget who's on money and who's not. The nine best people are on the field."

Stacy Diehl walked onto the volleyball team last year. A graduate of West High School in Iowa City, Diehl was injured during her senior year and was forced to sit out during most of the conference season.

"I'M NOT REALLY a typical walk on," she said. "My situation was different because I lived here and I knew people already playing. I probably would've walked on anyway, though. I knew I wanted to play Division I or II."

Diehl believes what coaches are looking for in a walk-on is a coachable athlete. "If you look coachable, they'll take you and work with you. It's harder to be a walk-on," she continued, "because there's sort of a head game you play with yourself."

"Sometimes in drills, you think, 'What am I doing here?' You know you're there because you want to be, and sometimes you wonder if you're contributing. You have to feel comfortable, and it takes a while. This year I feel comfortable."

Monica Sokolski was one of two walk-ons that made this year's softball team. As an all-conference selection, she received nothing formal regarding scholarships.

"I CAME TO IOWA intending to walk-on," she said. "I wanted to be close to home and play in

Penn State named No. 1; Iowa sixth

NEW YORK (UPI) — Penn State, a narrow winner in seven of its eight games this season, convincingly claimed college football's No. 1 ranking Monday in voting by the UPI Board of Coaches.

The Nittany Lions became the fourth No. 1 team this season by capturing 34 of 42 first-place votes and 600 points.

It was the first time Penn State was named No. 1 since its national championship season in 1982.

A 16-12 victory Saturday over Boston College kept Penn State undefeated and marked the seventh time this season it has won by less than seven points. That fact probably prevented the Nittany Lions from becoming a unanimous top choice and kept them off one coach's ballot entirely.

IOWA, A UNANIMOUS choice the past two weeks and No. 1 the last five, sank to No. 6 after a 22-13 loss to Ohio State. Auburn and Oklahoma were the other No. 1 teams this year.

Florida, a 14-10 winner over Auburn, raised its record to 7-0-1. The Gators, placed on NCAA probation for three years for 59 rule violations, are ineligible for UPI's Top 20. Southern Methodist, also on probation, is the other ineligible team.

Nebraska (5 first-place votes and 570 points) moved up one spot to No. 2 while Ohio State (1 and 505) jumped from seventh to No. 3. No. 4 Air Force earned two top votes and rose two spots. No. 5 Oklahoma advanced three positions.

MIAMI (FLA.) LEAPED from 12th to No. 7. No. 8 Baylor

2. Nebraska (5) (7-1)	570	3
3. Ohio State (1) (7-1)	505	4
4. Air Force (2) (9-0)	468	5
5. Oklahoma (5-1)	415	6
6. Iowa (7-1)	392	7
7. Miami (Fla.) (7-1)	374	8
8. Baylor (7-1)	270	9
9. Michigan (6-1)	266	10
10. Arkansas (7-1)	253	11
11. Oklahoma State (6-1)	238	12
12. UCLA (6-1)	179	13
13. Louisiana State (5-1)	128	14
14. Auburn (6-2)	123	15
15. Georgia (6-1-1)	56	16
16. Florida State (6-2)	51	17
17. Tennessee (4-1-2)	35	18
18. Brigham Young (7-2)	34	19
19. Texas A&M (6-2)	19	20
20. Alabama (6-2)	16	20

Others receiving votes: Arizona, Arizona State, Army, Bowling Green, Fresno State, Illinois, Maryland and Texas.

Note: By agreement with the American Football Coaches Association, teams on NCAA or conference probation are ineligible for the Top 20 and national championship consideration by the UPI Board of Coaches. The teams currently on probation are Florida and Southern Methodist.

climbed two rungs. Michigan, fourth last week, dropped to No. 9 after being tied by Illinois. No. 10 Arkansas inched up from 11th.

No. 11 Oklahoma State and No. 12 UCLA each increased two positions while No. 13 Louisiana State improved by three spots. With its loss to Florida, Auburn plummeted from No. 4 to 14th.

No. 15 Georgia rose two notches. No. 16 Florida State dropped from ninth while Tennessee advanced one spot to No. 17. Brigham Young fell from 16th to No. 18 while Texas A&M and Alabama remained 19th and 20th.

Strong sentenced to 12-year jail term

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Curtis Strong, a onetime clubhouse caterer convicted of selling cocaine to major league baseball players, was sentenced Monday to 12 years in prison.

Strong was convicted Sept. 20 after a 14-day federal trial that attracted national attention because of testimony by such stars as Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets, Lonnie Smith of the Kansas City Royals and Dave Parker of the Cincinnati Reds.

U.S. District Judge Gustave Diamond imposed the sentence on Strong, 39. The judge also added a special 12-year parole term.

"Strong is not being penalized for selling cocaine to baseball players," Diamond said. "He would be penalized the same if he sold cocaine to some poor unfortunate on the street who had to steal to pay for it."

Strong, 39, was once a caterer in the Philadelphia Phillies clubhouse.

The government based its case against Strong on the testimony of ballplayers who told about their drug use and how they bought cocaine from him. The defense portrayed Strong as scapegoat victimized by "tainted testimony" of "hero-criminal" ballplayers.

THE JURY deliberated nine hours before convicting Strong on 11 of 14 counts of selling cocaine.

Strong was one of seven men charged with selling drugs to ballplayers and the sixth to be sentenced.

Dale Shiffman, 33, of suburban Bethel Park, and Shelby Greer, 29, formerly of Pittsburgh, also were sentenced to 12 years.

Robert McCue, 39, of suburban Upper St. Clair, was given a 10-year term.

Keven Connolly, 27, and Thomas Balzer, 27, both of Pittsburgh, pleaded guilty to lesser charges and were sentenced to two years.

Jury selection in the trial of a seventh defendant, Jeffrey Mosco, 30, of Pittsburgh, was postponed pending an appeal.

Other players who testified in Strong's trial — all under grants of immunity from prosecution — were Enos Cabell of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Dale Berra of the New York Yankees, Jeff Leonard of the San Francisco Giants and John Milner, a former Pittsburgh Pirate.
