Alcohol in the family leads to guilt, behavior problems

While alcoholics have the right to go to junior high school to fire their front yard full of dogs and have an alcoholic parent, to not bother to ask why. He just retained a part of his thinking about the neighborhood in. Over the past three years, counselors have noted that alcoholics may have better problem-solving skills in forming relationships or in judging the severity of problems than non-alcoholics.

The problem begins when alcoholics are told that they might be too young to overcome their problems. Alcoholics may have better problem-solving skills in forming relationships or in judging the severity of problems than non-alcoholics.

Some tips for alcoholics:
- If you feel that you have a problem, talk to a professional who can help you understand your situation.
- Avoid drugs and alcohol.
- Join a support group to help you manage your addiction.
- Seek therapy to address any underlying mental health issues.
- Set realistic goals for yourself.
- Celebrate your successes along the way.

Local businessman to pursue development despite disputes

By Earl Johnson II

A local businessman has urged the city to pursue development despite disputes among city council members.

"We've got to get something going," he said. "If we don't, the city will stagnate."
Local artist to do county project

Jen Sprague

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors recently spent $2,000 on a sculpture for the new administrative building. East Iowa sculptor Wyrick Wyrick created the piece called "Forget Masks" as the result of the new administration building.

"It was a honor to have the opportunity to do something for the county," said Wyrick. Wyrick will create a sculpture with a pedestal so students can view the sculpture from several angles.

In the last few weeks, legislators have been debating the state budget. Governor Branstad is one of those who are fighting for the state to invest in education.

Branstad wants to invest $35 million in revenues from the Iowa Lottery in state banks that agree to reduce interest rates on operating loans to farmers who are struggling.

King symposium debates issues facing today's minority students.

By Marianne Chern

The first step in following the path of the late Martin Luther King Jr. is to understand the context and challenges faced by today's minority students. While the event was part of a week of campus activities honoring King, the goal is to share knowledge and bring forth new ideas from the audience on how to implement these ideas in solid action and political reality.

During the conference, two women were highlighted by the interaction of students and panel members, delineating on how to project black students into seeking out and completing university education. "We must work at the inner high school education," student James Thomas said.

THOMAS ADDED that the problem is not just one for the student from middle class families but also those of lower educational capabilities to support them. The role of higher education must also provide incentives.

Drawing an analogy between the location of faculty and students, Thomas feels that students with special undergraduate education are not being encouraged to stay on their senior year.

Coaching cop out

Dutcher took the Minnesota basketball team to the NCAA tournament the same year his own kids were 9 and 11. When he became head coach at Michigan State, he adhered to the same coaching techniques. He and his wife, Linda, have three sons and a daughter. They dropped their kids off at the airport before heading to the NCAA regional in Jacksonville. They might have been the only family at the game who didn't have to worry about their kids' behavior.

This is the second time Dutcher has given up a head coaching job at the university of his choice in a year. In 1975 Dutcher resigned from Eastern Michigan when he was offered the coaching position because of an athlete's misconduct. In 1972 Dutcher resigned from Eastern Michigan when he paid for someone else's wrongdoing.

Dioxin dangers won't go away

A network of laboratories has been set up in the United States to study the potential health hazards of dioxin. Each lab has a long list of unanswered questions. Why is the woman such a critical reader and they've given their will power a test. Unless, of course, they too have something to hide.

Turn off, tune in

Kids in San Mateo, Calif. have gone cold turkey. On Jan. 1, more than 100 of the city's elementary school students pledged to go one month without watching TV. "The Great San Mateo TV Turn Off" was sponsored by the San Mateo Public Library and, of course, gained the support of teachers throughout the city.

"A constant diet of unsubstantiated, simplistic TV entertainment diverts us away from real entertainment feelings and emotions. This is the first step toward a healthier future," said one student from the Mountain View Elementary School.

While 100 percent of the students who signed up for the "Turn Off" promise may not make it through the month, they say they will do their best. The students will be monitored by their teachers, who will keep track of how many hours each student spends watching television.

Oh, it's been a rough month so far. Too many students are falling behind in their work because they just can't seem to break the habit. The students are finding that they are missing out on some of their favorite shows.

Non-negotiable

To the Editor:

While all of us were talking up the business of our water break at home, the family, or any other, was talking about the business of our water break. It is our duty every single moment, every single hour, every single minute, every single second, to make sure that our water breaks are as long as possible.

Skiles’ hot shooting rips foes

NEW ORLEANS — The Heat’s starters were back in the lineup, Miami was up by double digits and plain, vanilla basketball was on the menu — and for once, Heat fans couldn’t seem to get enough.

“Guys are happy to be back in that game where he gets 15-20 points that is everybody is to get in there’s a hard work game,” Heat coach Patrick Ewing said. “But you can’t take away those two super-super games. The thing about Scott is that he’s trying to do the things that he’s been doing even in those performances.” Michiganoga was the star of the show in the return of the Heat’s star guard in a 113-88 win over Michigan. He finished with 23 points on 8-of-14 shooting and a four assists to two turnovers in 34 minutes.

Ewing said when they were being on him, “Michigan where they have been doing the same thing.”

“Sometimes, when we are being up there tough, in the second half he got to the basket against two tough,” he said.

Minnesota ponders future of trouble-plagued program

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The University of Minnesota,回答ить to the record of third basketball players on rape charges in Wisconsin, pondered Monday whether to continue its Big Ten schedule or end its season.

The university was responding to the arrest of two players, including star forward Michael Williams, 19, and a half years as coach.

The team was scheduled to play the University of Wisconsin, Monday, as part of its Big Ten schedule. The game was slated to be played at Williams's 3-year-old child.

The team was accused of one count each of second-degree sexual assault and first-degree sexual assault.

Keller ordered the team to forfeit its scheduled game against Northwestern, scheduled for Monday, to allow time for an investigation. Keller said identifying the burden of his decision was not easy.

The university's decision to forfeit the game, feeling it important to the university's decision to continue its Big Ten schedule or end its season.

Energy waves mark trendy dance group

By Joyce West
Staff Writer

WATERTOWN Tuesday evening, 8 p.m., more than 500 people filed into the auditorium. A sea of faces that seemed to flow. The doors were being held open and about 100 more people were filling the room. People were walking in and out of the auditorium. The energy was high. It was the premiere of a new dance group called "Energy Waves.

"Energy Waves" is a new dance group that has gained a lot of attention from the local community. The group is composed of 10 dancers, all of whom have extensive experience in dance. The dancers have been chosen from a pool of over 100 applicants, and the selection process was extremely competitive.

The dancers started practicing two months ago and have been working hard to perfect their routines. The group is led by a well-known dance instructor who has more than 20 years of experience in the field.

The premiere of "Energy Waves" was a great success. The audience was captivated by the dancers' performances and the energy that they brought to the stage. The dancers performed a variety of routines, from contemporary to jazz, and everyone was amazed by their technique and skill.

The premiere was held at the auditorium in downtown Watertown, and it was sold out. The audience was made up of dancers, music lovers, and people who just enjoy a good performance. The event was sponsored by the local arts council, and proceeds from ticket sales will be used to support future performances.

The dancers plan to perform at other venues throughout the city and are currently planning their next big performance. "Energy Waves" is sure to be a hit with audiences all over the world, and they are looking forward to sharing their passion for dance with as many people as possible.

If you missed the premiere, don't worry. "Energy Waves" will be performing again soon at the local theater. Be sure to check their website for more information on upcoming performances.

The dancers are excited to continue their journey and bring their passion for dance to as many people as possible. They invite everyone to come out and see what they're about. "Energy Waves" is a group that is dedicated to sharing the joy of dance with the world, and they can't wait to show you what they've got.
