Greenery, folklore thrive in hothouse

By Lewis Weyne Avery (Chronicle)

It's cold outside, but light rain and a breeze are nothing to the hothouse. The Balsam Greenhouse, where plants grow all year round, is a place where flowers bloom at night.

The greenhouse is a place where something special happens. A place where people come to see and touch the beauty of nature. It's a place where people can escape from the cold and be reminded of the warmth of the sun.

WARRIN DEXTER, the director of the Balsam Greenhouse, said that the greenhouse is a place where people can learn about how plants grow and how they can be enjoyed.

Candidates Norland, McIntee announce bids for Congress

By Louis Wayne Greenho
Columbia latest

Dr. Frank A. Norland, Republican candidate for the 1st District, has declared his candidacy for Congress. This step places him formally in the race as a candidate for the 1st District seat. The announcement was made in a press conference held at the Four Corners Hotel.

Norland, who has been a member of the U.S. House of Representatives since 1982, said he will continue his efforts to represent the district's interests in Washington. He stressed the need for a strong, vibrant economy in the district, and he vowed to work with his colleagues in Congress to achieve this goal.

Norland also emphasized the importance of job creation and the need to attract new businesses to the district. He pledged to work with local officials to create a business-friendly environment and to ensure that the district has access to the latest technologies and resources.

In conclusion, Norland said, "I will continue to work hard to represent the needs of the 1st District in Washington. I will fight for a strong, vibrant economy and I will always be focused on the needs of the people of our district."

The United Students of Iowa began registering students to vote in the November elections. The organization plans to reach a voter registration goal of 1,000 students.

The registration drive was held in the residence halls last night. The group will continue to register students throughout the week.

CONNEAL SAID: "The reason we're doing this is so the students can have a voice in the political system." She added that the organization plans to register as many students as possible.

USI freshman Martin Brantley was one of the first students to register. He said he was excited about the opportunity to participate in the political process.

UI sophomore John Doe also registered and said he enjoyed the experience. He said he had always wanted to register but had never found the time.

The registration drive was held in the residence halls last night because many students were available and willing to participate.

Farm crisis affects all Iowans

By Daniel Otis

THE FARM financial crisis has been a heavy burden on the Iowa farm families for the past three years. The Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis estimates that the number of bankruptcies has increased by 800% in Iowa since 1985. Since 1980 the number of farms has decreased by 25%, and the average farm size has increased by 20%. In addition to these economic hardships, many farmers have faced the personal losses that come with losing their farms. Farm financial surveys have indicated that approximately 40% of Iowa farmers have experienced losses of $10,000 or more in recent years. This is in contrast with other economic conditions that indicate that overall sales and profits are increasing.

THE MOST IMMEDIATE problems that farmers are facing include: a decrease in the value of their assets, a decrease in their ability to access credit, and a decrease in their ability to invest in new equipment. Many farmers have sold off their livestock and crops to reduce their debt. Those who have not sold their assets have been forced to cut back on their operations and investments. In addition, the decrease in farm income has led to a decrease in tax revenue, which has hurt the state and local governments. Farmers in Iowa have been forced to make difficult choices about how to allocate their resources in order to stay in business. Farmers in Iowa have been forced to make difficult choices about how to allocate their resources in order to stay in business.
Everyone’s crisis

The announcement of Richard Lang to succeed John Block as U.S. secretary of agriculture can be both pleasing and a curse for the American farmer. Lang was a top farm executive for the state of California when President Ronald Reagan was governor. Later, he was a deputy to the agriculture secretary under Ford.

The appointment is big news to the nation’s No. 1 agricultural position in his ability to work with those in power. It has strong support from both Republican and Democratic Congressmen, as well as a proven working relationship with the president. In his favor also is the fact that Lang has owned his own farm. Critics complain that Benjamin should have appointed a working farmer, but those who have known Lang have said he really wasn’t necessary. Once a farmer, always a farmer —— love of the land is unyielding.

But, even with all of Lang’s management, legislative and agricultural experience, we must question how much he will be able to accomplish during this fast farm crisis. Block was not a “secretary of agriculture.” He simply was a top farm executive during a time that Iowa should expectsk dark before we see sunlight again.

The outlook for American agriculture is still dire, and we must put the point where the crisis is affecting farmers.

Producers selling the few hotels of interest and dropping land values are limited financially, as they try to save the one or two. They can’t pay feed bills or utility bills. Retail sale-ready, causing newspapers, radio and magazines to suffer from decreased advertising revenue. In turn, fewer tax dollars are collected.

The states operate financially, state conventions have to charge more to sustain, other state programs are cut completely.

The stone has been thrown and the ripples it creates are rolling out to touch all —— no matter where we are or how far away.

No one can afford battles that delay the farm crisis, and no one can claim to have all there is to know. That’s why The Daily Iowa should be the first in efforts to arm viewers with this information.

REAL CONCERN is a nationwide administered program of the Iowa State University Cooperative Extension Service, and the Iowa Department of Human Services, an official branch of the state of Iowa.

The hotline provides information to farm financial problems, legal problems, individual and family problems, job questions, and loan needs for land, feed, seed and equipment. The hotline does not provide loans or business loans, but it will refer you to the appropriate person.

The hotline is available to farmers and farm operators, professionals, or to those in the communities of farm families, rural communities and the state is estimated on the value of $1,000 calls received at Rural Concern Hotline. The first year was the best of the committee system, with over 3,000 calls received.

The fact that economic conditions are still bad and Detroit is not the only city for the farm financial obligations, and the world is still recovering from the farm crisis, according to early 1980s, budgeting and planning.

The hotline needs more funding, as the service is free and the need for more support.

The goal of the Rural Concern Hotline is to have a farm operation that is sustainable. The hotline team works together as we move in the future to help farmers.

The United Nations has declared the creation of equal opportunity for women in the agricultural sector a goal for all countries. Gender equality is crucial for ensuring the sustainable development of agriculture, as women play a vital role in the sector. They contribute significantly to food production, and their participation in decision-making processes is essential for the effective implementation of agricultural policies. It is important to promote women’s leadership in agricultural cooperatives and businesses, empowering them to play a more active role in the sector. This requires addressing the existing gender disparities in access to resources and information, as well as ensuring equal access to education and training opportunities. By fostering women’s participation in agricultural decision-making, we can ensure a more equitable and sustainable agricultural sector for all. The UN conference on women’s rights in 1975 was a pivotal moment in the recognition of women’s rights, and it is important to continue the work towards gender equality in the agricultural sector. This requires collaboration between governments, civil society organizations, and the private sector to develop and implement effective policies and programs that support women’s participation in agriculture.

Bleak agriculture forecast spurs radical right activity

By Carol Menefee and Alex Zajicek

From the moulded, brown fields and overgrown fences there is little sign of the blight that has hit American agriculture in the last decade.

There is a sense that the economic hardship is so widespread and so far-reaching that it has drawn some farmers to the radical right and away from their traditional allegiances.

The rural crisis is not so much a question of low prices, said Alex Zajicek, but a struggle for survival. Farmers are under so much pressure that they feel there is no hope.

of as many as possible, farmers pay those people when they could be using it to pay better qualified people who could really help.

But those who sympathize with the radical right-wing groups often express common frustration with what they see as local leaders' failure to provide help for farmers.

"Farmers are getting desperate," said Zajicek. "They're looking for ways to help themselves, and the radical right is offering a way to do that."

Simms keys NFC second-half comeback
MONROE, Wis. (AP) — Phil Simms of the New York Giants didn’t have a lot to show for his effort in the 1st half. The Saints, trailing 13-7 at halftime, faced a first-down situation and faced a third down to go out of bounds. Simms was stopped short of the goal line and the Saints had to settle for a field goal on the drive.

Top ranked Hawkeyes fall twice as injuries take toll on line-up

By Bill Hainiow

For the second week in a row the Hawkeyes fell twice as injuries took their toll on the line-up.

The Hawkeyes defeated Friday.

"The injuries happen and we can't control that," said Royer from Michigan, "we've had a couple of injuries and the lineup is not enough that we couldn't have had both men that we wanted to put in. We just can't compete."

AGAINST Southern Illinois, Iowa was able to keep the No. 1 Iowa men's tennis record in place at 16-3. But on the second day the Hawkeyes suffered a 13-7 loss to Illinois in Champaign, 254-250. To take advantage of the week.

The No. 1 ranked Illinois lineup again needed to be handled with care as they had an 12-3 advantage in Illinois. The Hawkeyes fell into the meet situation," Dunn said. "In the first round before we are alternating with the opposition it's a little different than if a championships match is played we can handle that pretty well."

But the Hawkeyes were upset in the Illini's two wins over the Hawkeyes on the balance beam and the high bar. They had a couple of injuries. Malmberg upset John Stuart Hayasaki said. "I can't explain why it happened. I couldn't tell."

Gymnastics

Tennis

"MALARKEY did really great," Dunn said. "They scored well above the rest of the teams and it was really competitive news."

"Iowa's Malmberg upset the No. 1 seed in the tournament, Royer from Michigan, 275-273. Royer was the No. 2 seed in the tournament, the No. 1 seed in the tournament. Royer upset Hayasaki in the first round and flew back. Hayasaki upset Malmberg in the first round, 276-275.

"Why this happened I couldn't tell," Dunn said. "I thought we had the lead but couldn't get the key before beating Merickel; we just had a bunch of injuries. We just had a couple of injuries and they had a 13-3 advantage in Illinois."

Hawks not up to par at Invite

By Melise Kappot

Although Jerry Hassard isn’t the type to admit it, Iowa was third nationally in track and eighth in cross country at the NCAA Championships last season, and that’s fine with him.

"Our performances this season have been right on target," Hassard said. "We had a few problems this year, but overall we’re happy with our season so far. We didn’t come to compete at nationals, but we’re glad to see the progress we’ve made.

Wrestling

Ironman match

In a 44-20 win over Oklahoma State, Iowa’s 134-pound Kurt Callahan defeated his counterpart, 17-6. Iowa’s 141-pound Bob Alger and 157-pound Ron Neems also won, while Iowa’s 184-pound Barry Flint was the only loss of the day. Iowa’s 125-pound Jim Parolesi defeated Oklahoma State’s 125-pound Bill Eberling. Iowa wrestled the entire match and had no problems winning.

Although she transferred to Iowa last year, she was unable to compete in the 2017 NCAA meet because of injuries.

She has indeed really good in practice and in competition," Hassard said. "I think this season has been a test for not only the Hawkeyes, but for her as well."

Larry Whelan, a transfer from Pennsylvania, set a school record at 118 after struggling to an 18-9 win over his opponent. Whelan’s performance did not surprise Hassard, as he anticipated that Whelan would perform well.

The Hawkeyes were born and family first-place finishes highlighted the Iowa men’s track team’s second consecutive double victory in the Big Ten Indoor Championships Saturday at the University of Iowa Field House.

The men’s team won the meet for the third straight year, while the women’s team came in third. The Hawkeyes set 12 meet records en route to securing the top spot in both the men’s and women’s team standings.

Hawkeyes

The Hawkeyes were victorious in 12 events in Saturday’s meet, including the men’s 1,600-meter relay, which was won by the team of Chris Dieterle, Brandenburg and sophomore Joel Rydze.

The women’s team also had two first-place finishes, with a team of Kendra Heiner, Ann Pfeiffer and sophomore Michelle Scherer taking first place in the 1,600-meter run, and sophomore Evelyn Wood taking first place in the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

Patrick

The Patrick women’s team finished third in the meet, which was won by Ohio State and second-place Michigan.

The Patrick women’s team had several strong performances, including freshman Kendra Heiner, who won the 1,600-meter run in a time of 4:30.88, and sophomore Evelyn Wood, who won the 3,000-meter steeplechase in a time of 10:35.23.

In addition to Heiner and Wood, other strong performances included freshman Michelle Scherer, who won the 5,000-meter run in a time of 15:46.71, and senior Pat Smith, who won the 10,000-meter run in a time of 32:07.95.

Kennedy

The Kennedy men’s team finished second in the meet, which was won by Ohio State and second-place Michigan.

The Kennedy men’s team had several strong performances, including freshman Luke Miller, who won the 3,000-meter steeplechase in a time of 8:54.37, and sophomore Ronny McCoy, who won the shot put with a toss of 52-4.

In addition to Miller and McCoy, other strong performances included freshman Adam Corrigan, who won the 1,500-meter run in a time of 3:41.50, and sophomore Mike Nell, who won the 5,000-meter run in a time of 14:46.71.

Terry Gilliam, director of Brazil, recently won his battle to get his highly acclaimed film released in the U.S.

Joshua Pruce lured to films by promise of fame

PERRY WOODS, Globe and Mail

Joshua Pruce is one of the newest, brightest and most dazzling Dutch stars. He has appeared in two Dutch films and the upcoming British thriller This Way Up, but Pruce remains relatively unknown to all but a handful of American film buffs. He turns 22 in June.

Pruce is tall, lanky and has long hair. His father and grandfather are both Dutch actors.

At age 13 Pruce was a lighthouse for King Vidor. He has an interesting resume. His first role was as Puck in an experimental production of A Midsummer Night's Dream. He has also appeared as Hamlet. In 1980 he was in the Royal Shakespeare Company production of Hamlet. He was also in a French film called Mondo Cane.

TERRY FITZ is one of the famous Shakespearean scholar's students. He has a degree in English literature from the University of London and has studied at the Royal Shakespeare Company in London. He also has a degree from the University of London. He is a member of the Royal Shakespeare Company. He has also appeared in a Shakespearean production at the Old Vic in London.

Pruce made a splash in Hollywood when he appeared in the 1984 film Brazil. The Hollywood Reporter said he was a "charming, charismatic young man." The film was directed by Terry Gilliam, who also directed the 1985 film The Tall Guy. The two films were released in the U.S. in 1986.

Pruce's career in film began in 1980 when he appeared in the Dutch film Room with a View. He has since appeared in several other films, including Brazil, The Tall Guy, and The Life of Brian. He has also appeared on television, including episodes of Cheers and The Wonder Years.

Pruce's success in Hollywood has allowed him to work on both sides of the Atlantic. He has appeared in films such as Brazil, The Tall Guy, and The Life of Brian, as well as on television shows such as Cheers and The Wonder Years.

Pruce's fans are excited about his future in Hollywood. "He's got the look, the talent, and the charisma," says one fan. "I can't wait to see what he does next."

Hockey is a sport that combines the brutality of boxing, the stamina of football and the stupid­ness of professional wrestling. "Dean" Youngblood (Kirk Douglas), the protagonist of the new youth film "Youngblood," wanted all this to be a professional hockey career. When his father's farm in Maine is sold to make way for a mill, "Dean" is forced to go to Canada to play on a junior team. Actually, the film's interest is in hockey, not in the story of the main character, but in the visual spectacle of so many bodies on so many inches of ice.

Of course, "Dean" soon finds himself in a position to challenge his father's ideas about the family business. But even though he has the skill to be a top player, generations will still have to run the family's farm. "Youngblood" is not the sort of film that asks questions about the future of the family business. It asks: how do you become a hockey player? The answer is: practice, practice, practice.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL thing in the movie seems to be a novel adaptation of a novel, brought down to earth by dialogue. "Youngblood," which has wanted all this to be a professional hockey career. Brubeck, Louis visit Hancher

The Murray Louis Dance Company and the Dave Brubeck Quartet will bring their unique collaboration to Hancher Auditorium tonight at 8. For nearly 40 years, Louis has been a highly theatrical figure in American arts - modern dance and jazz music - and has evolved the Nikolais/Rudolf Nureyev collaboration that made him a pioneer of the modern jazz era.

Brubeck, who is best known for his work with the Dave Brubeck Quartet, will join the band for its musical set, the dancers for their dance portion of the concert. Louis will feature the Dance Demons, "Three to Get Ready." His collaboration with Brubeck continues a tradition of exploration and experimentation that made him a pioneer of the modern jazz era. The quartet's influence and impact have been widely recognized in the world of modern dance and jazz. Louis and Brubeck have worked together since the 1960s, and their collaboration has been celebrated for its unique blend of art forms - modern dance and jazz music. The concert will feature Louis's signature piece, "Three to Get Ready," which was first seen in New York in 1968 and has since toured both North America and Europe. The dance portion of the concert will feature the Dance Company's "Clues," performed on a taped Dave Brubeck score, and the Murray Louis solo "Primal Motion," featuring scores and choreography by Brubeck.
