Berlin to leave city manager position

By Earl Johnston III

Iowa City Manager Neal Berlin is expected to announce his resignation today as the city's chief administrator in order to take a better-paying position in Arvada,

According to Arvada officials, Berlin, 49, spent the weekend in the Denver suburb where he signed a contract with the city that will boost his salary from $56.617 to about $71.000.

Although Berlin could not be interviewed seven candidates to city revenues generated from Arvada Mayor Robert Frie said the city staff of 420 employees anticipates a bright future under Berlin's direction.

We wanted someone who could handle the existing staff," Frie said. "It's difficult to come into an organization of that size. The thing that persuaded me to go with Mr. Berlin was his ability to deal with people and not just manage them," Frie added.

Arvada, a Denver suburb of about 87,000, boasts a $40 million budget which, officials say, has had a 3 percent growth rate in the past few years. This stands in contrast to Iowa City's $31 million operating budget for the coming fiscal year - a budget which is marked by little if any growth above inflation.

measures aimed at spurring economic development in Iowa City.

One of those measures was the establishment of the First Capi-

Iowa City officials have indicated they plan to take immediate steps to replace Berlin. They also say they are sorry to see the city's chief administrator step

- Challenger's right-side booster rocket apparently ruptured at or near a seam where two solid fuel segments are joined, possibly causing the space shuttle's main fuel tank to explode, NASA's acting administrator said Sun-

Tracking photos showed an increasingly intense flame spewing from the lower portion of the rocket during the final 15 seconds leading up to the explosion that destroyed the shuttle and killed its crew of seven Tuesday.

"We haven't yet finished the analysis and measurement on the film to identify the exact point at which the plume appeared," said William Graham on CBS's "Face the Nation.'

"It didn't necessarily happen along a seam. It did appear to happen at least near a seam."

Graham indicated investigators believe the trouble was an engineering problem that could be remedied fairly quickly.

NASA'S BOARD OF investigation met at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., Sunday to review records and data analysis that may hold clues to exactly what caused the explosion. Marshall is the NASA center responsible for the ship's boosters, its external fuel tank and the three main engines.

possibilities," Graham said, when asked how the flame could have penetrated the half-inch thick steel rocket casing.

Graham said if commander Francis "Dick" Scobee had had some warning of impending disaster, he might have been able to jettison the boosters and the fuel tank and attempt a gliding return to the launch site.

But the astronauts did not have instrument readings of booster rocket performance and Graham said control center personnel "detected nothing anomalous" in the data being monitored.

Graham said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" that engineers do not know if the flame from the rocket burned

"I DON'T THINK it would be productive for me or NASA to speculate," he said. "We're going to release the factual information as soon as we can, when we've pulled it all together and cross checked it and understand

Sources said investigators also are considering the possibility that the flame may have heated the tank, and its normally supercold liquid hydrogen, to the point where a pressure buildup caused it to rupture. Independent videotape analysis of the flight sequence showed a mass of what appears to be hydrogen at the base of the tank just before it blew up in an immense ball of fire, killing Scobee, Michael. Smith, Judith Resnik, Ellison Onizuka, Ronald McNair, Gregory Jarvis and teacher Christa McAuliffe.

The suspect area on the booster rocket is just above a steel ring which holds the base of the rocket to the external tank.

> "It's one link in the chain," said Gil Moore, spokesman for the Morton-Thiokol Wasatch Division which built the booster. "But we don't know whether it's the beginning link of the chain, or the middle or the end."

Graham, noting 24 pairs of boosters have flown successfully, said engineers considered the rockets some of the sturdiest parts of the entire shuttle system, and "primary structure not susceptible to

Haitian forces kill fifty-five

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - Security forces have killed at least 55 people in two days of protests against Presidentfor-life Jean-Claude Duvalier, doctors said Sunday, contradicting government reports that only 16 had died.

Doctors at Port-au-Prince General Hospital, defying government orders to remain silent, said the bodies of at least 55 people killed by security forces had been brought to the hospital since rioting erupted in the capital Friday.

The report by the hospital sources could not be independently confirmed, and a government spokesman refused to comment on the higher figures, saying that he knew only of the deaths already reported.

Razors found in hot dogs

AUSTIN, Minn. - Consumers reported finding bits of razor blades in two packages of Hormel hot dogs, and authorities investigated Sunday whether the tampering is linked to a bitter meatpackers strike against the company.

Police in West St. Paul released a statement saying they asked grocers to check their stock after the razor blade pieces were found. Two packages were bought at two grocery stores in the city last Thursday and no one was hurt, police said.

Consumers reported the tainted products Friday and Saturday, and the state Agriculture Department began investigating the tampering but had not yet linked it to the five-month strike against Geo. A. Hormel & Co.'s Austin plant, police said.

Botha proposes reforms

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) - President Pieter Botha abandoned his take-it-or-leave-it political style for a media campaign Sunday to woo support for "institutionalized power sharing" between South Africa's ruling whites and black majority.

"My government and I are committed to power sharing," Botha said in an unprecedented two-page newspaper adver-tisement drafted for him by a commercial agency.

The media blitz began Friday night, when Botha appeared on black radio and television to explain his plans to reform apartheid and appeal to blacks to join him in negotiating the structures "everyone desires."

Pope meets Indian leaders

NEW DELHI, India - Pope John Paul II met Sunday with religious leaders of India, appealing for a common struggle against poverty, and celebrated a mass for 20,000 worshippers marred by the blast of a firecracker that scorched the carpet near the pontiff.

No one was injured in the blast on the second day of the pope's tour of the nation ravaged by sectarian violence, and John Paul appeared unruffled by the small explosion.

John Paul, on his first extended visit to a predominantly non-Christian country, later met with leaders of India's main religions - Hinduism, Islam and Sikhism - for an exchange of religious viewpoints.

Boy dies from dog attack

DALLAS - A 6-year-old East Texas boy bitten 100 times by a pack of frenzied dogs died Sunday at a Dallas hospital after struggling for 12 days to recover from the mauling.

Stephen Mark Fiengo Jr. died at Parkland Memorial Hospital, where he had been in critical condition after being attacked by nine wild dogs, said Mary Layman, a hospital spokeswoman.

Layman said the boy died from complications resulting from the bites, probably from infection, although the Dallas County Medical Examiner has yet to determine an official cause of death. The nine pit bull terriers bit him on the chest, legs, back and arms near a rural Gregg County pond where he was play-

Local man held after knife attack

By Julie Eisele and B. Gordon Special to The Daily Iowan

Violence erupted Saturday afternoon near the Union when an Iowa City man allegedly attacked a woman with a knife outside the River Room Cafeteria, then entered the building and threatened her again.

John Robert Caldwell, 44, no address listed, was being held Sunday at the Johnson County Jail in lieu of $3,450 bond. He is charged with going armed with intent and carrying a concealed weapon, according to jail officials.

The victim, also a local resident, was treated at UI Hospitals for knife wounds and later released. The two are apparently acquainted. Jail authorities said Sunday that no assault charge had been filed in addition to the other charges.

Authorities were notified by Campus Information Desk personnel after bystanders alerted them to the incident. Witnesses reported Caldwell attacked the woman with a knife outside the Union and that the two later entered the building "calmly and stoically." The woman was seen bleeding from the neck and mouth.

THE COUPLE entered the television viewing area where one witness said Caldwell began to push the woman around. University Box Office employees also notified Campus Security officers after the incident began and a crowd gathered.

According to the same witness, who declined to be identified, Caldwell pushed the woman onto a couch then sat down and pulled her toward him, taking out a knife

DES MOINES - Lawmakers are predicting that preliminary work on Gov. Terry Branstad's proposed reorganization of state government will be completed this week and the bulky package of legislation may make its way to the floor of the Iowa Senate for debate within a few days.

Senate Majority Leader C.W. "Bill" Hutchins, D-Audobon, told lawmakers Thursday that the Senate State Government Committee is almost ready to draft the final bills on Branstad's sweeping plans.

Following consideration in the Senate, which may take up to two weeks, the Iowa House of Representatives will begin debating Branstad's proposal

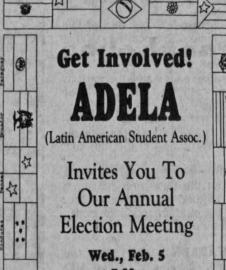

Legislators say that thus far there have been few changes in the major components of Branstad's plan which calls for the reduction or merging of about 89 state agencies, boards and commissions and the subsequent elimination of 900 state employees.

BUT REP. JEAN LLOYD-JONES, an Iowa City Democrat who is chairwoman of the House State Government Committee, said she expects Branstad's proposals will generate substantial controversy before they could be enacted.

resulted in minor damages.

Lloyd-Jones said one issue lawmakers are concerned about is whether Branstad is attempting to gain more control over state government by streamlining its structure. She explained that with fewer agencies and boards, the governor's appointments to these positions become even more important.

Other lawmakers say the special interest groups in the state, which would be negatively affected by the reorganization of state government, will most likely begin an intense lobbying effort when legislatures begin debating these proposals on the floor of the two chambers.

Candidates Norland, McIntee announce bids for Congress

By Scott Hauser Special to the Daily Iowan

Chargi that Iowa's faltering economy has been ignored by policy makers on the federal level, two state representatives innounced Friday they will run for the state's third congressional seat.

John McIntee, R-Waterloo, and Lowell Norland, D-Kensett, held separate press conferences at the Iowa City airport to announce their competing bids for Rep. Cooper Evans' seat. Evans announced last week he would not seek a fourth term.

Both candidates said Iowa's ailing economy has been caused, in part, by high budget and trade deficits. The candidates also called for stronger federal programs aimed at strengthening the state's economy.

"Iowa's delegation must work as advocates of Iowa in Washington," McIntee said. "It's obvious lowa's very concerned we're not getting our fair share, in terms of assistance, from Washington.'

MCINTEE, WHO has served as a state representative since 1982, said the the state's ability to compete in the world's economy is one of the biggest challenges facing lawmakers.

"Agriculture alone can't drive our economy," he said. "We have to be mindful of other opportuni-ties, particularly in the global marketplace, where we can compete. That's going to be one of the focuses of my campaign.

McIntee stressed two of his priorities as congressional representative would be continuing work on a farm bill and battling proposed cuts on farm programs mandated by the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction bill.

But while Norland agreed that Iowa is being slighted by federal policy makers, he said that selecting a democrat for Congress would "send a significant message" to Washington.

"IOWA HAS become a significantly less vibrant economy than the folks of the rest of the nation," he said.

"This (his campaign) gives voters of the third district a chance to show their displeasure with the way things are, to communicate to Washington that there's got to be something better for Iowa.' Norland pointed out that, if elected, he would be the first democrat to hold the third district congresssional seat in 52

Norland, who has served as a representative since 1972 and house majority leader since 1983, said the Iowa legislature is doing all it can to improve the outlook of Iowa's economy

Pointing to the creation of the lottery last year and the establishment of the state's job creating plan three years ago, Norland said Iowa has one of the most improved business climates in

Display of pro-life billboard postponed for legal reasons

By Lewis Wayne Greene

A Dubuque advertising firm opted Friday to delay unveiling a pro-life billboard accusing the National Organization for Women and several local NOW organizers of supporting 'killing pre-born babies" and "homosexual

"We just wanted to look at the various aspects again, obviously the legal aspects," said Ste-phen Hardie, president of Frank Hardie Advertising Inc. of Dubuque.

The billboard may appear later this week in an altered form, he said, adding that the final decision will be made today.

THE BILLBOARD designed by Voices for Life, Inc. was scheduled to state, in part, Voice your outrage, NOW supports killing pre-born babies, Homosexual parenting.

Sandra Kirkbride, founder and president of the pro-life organization, wanted to print the names of NOW national president Eleanor Smeal, NOW state president Sarah Wohlrabe and three other NOW organizers in Iowa on the

But the billboard's scheduled appearance in Dubuque was postponed when complaints and threats of lawsuits hit Hardie's advertising

Kirkbride vowed Saturday that the billboard vould go up and she would manage to connect NOW organizers' names to it.

If Hardie decides not to print the names of the NOW organizers on the billboard, Kirkbride said she plans to hold a rally at the sign and wear a placard with the names printed on it.

SHE REPEATED her belief that NOW's goal is to kill unborn babies and promote lesbianism and said she would not be stopped in her crusade against abortion.

'If we cower back in trepidation of a few threats of lawsuits, then our country is in greater danger than I had feared," she said. Wohlrabe said she was still very angry about the incident. "I'm still very outraged over this whole thing," Wohlrabe said.

While she would be "sheltered" from the effects of the billboard because she doesn't live in Dubuque, Wohlrabe said she was concerned about the possible effects it might have on the other organizers in Dubuque.

"All three of the women who were named have small children. That's like open season on harassing their families," she said.

VIRGINIA LINS, one of the Dubuque NOW organizers whose name was scheduled to appear on the ad, said there was a tremendous response from the Dubuque community against the billboard when press reports of it came out

She said she wasn't afraid the ads would lead to violence against her, but added, "There is always a threat of violence especially when you're working with a fringe element like the right-to-lifers.

Kirkbride diusputed the NOW organizers' contention that the billboard was incitement to

"I feel very strongly that we in no way promote r condone any type of violent activity or illegal acts against abortion clinics," she said. "There's something terribly wrong and schizophrenic in our society and until responsible men and women take responsibility and lay the ax to the taproot, we are in a deep moral trouble," Kirkbride said.

But Wohlrabe said the response of the Dubuque community to the proposed billboard reflects the stature of the NOW organizers in the area. "These women were very, very wellrespected members of the community.

Dancing UI students battle MS

By Marianne Cherni

UI students rocked the floor of the Union Wheelroom Saturday night - joining forces with 140 other campuses, MTV and many other sponsors across the nation to raise money for the fight against Multiple Sclerosis.

The scenario was the Hard Rock Cafe, Iowa City, Iowa. The participants were facsimiles of wellknown rock stars - Tina Turner, Billy Idol, El DeBarge, Adam Ant, Madonna, and David Byrne of the Talking Heads - lip syncing and dancing for votes, at a dollar each - to see who was the UI senior Patricia Huebner, an organizer of the event, said, "MS is a young person's disease, which is what makes it so tragic.

"IT STRIKES people between the ages of 18 and 35 mostly when people are just starting careers or families. The cause and the cure are not known," Huebner said.

She added "symptoms include dizziness, blurred vision, numbness of joints and fatigue. Some people start collapsing.'

UI senior Gilda "Tina Turner" Lara, dressed in a black leather

"I've been dressing up strangely for the four years I've been at the university. I knew the cause and thought it would be a worthwhile occasion," says UI junior Jon

UI JUNIOR Randy "David Byrne" Armentrout said he chose the eccentric Byrne of the group, the Talking Heads, because "I act like him all the time.

Byrne, backed up by two dancers, Patty Pritchard and Carolyn Geddis, did a complex dance routine, which he said he took from the movie Stop Making

"He had the moves - great variety," said UI freshman Mike Toebes after Armentrout's performance of "Psycho Killer."

UI graduate student Sue Stork was clapping enthusiastically and dancing in her seat after DeBarge's performance, "He's great! He's got my vote!," she

"I liked Madonna. I think she danced well; she did a good job, and she lives on my floor," said UI freshman Ann Pomeroy.

"NO WAY," UI sophomore, Kelly Scott chimed in, "(I liked) David Byrne. It struck me as original when everything else was so cliche."

The votes, at a dollar a piece, collected $500 for the UI's Bust MS campaign, which is in a race with other universities to see who can raise the most money. The winning campus will be recipient of a MTV concert next fall.

The winning lip sync contestant who collects the most votes this month will go on to a regional competition and then the nationals - which will be held on MTV.

USI registers voters in UI residence halls

The United Students of Iowa began registering UI students to vote last week so they will have a stronger voice in politics, a USI spokesman said Friday.

USI set up voter registration booths in UI residence halls last week. The group will be registering students in the Greek system this week.

"The reason we're doing this is to give the student voice more muscle," Mike Connell, a UI spokesman for the statewide student lobbying organization, said.

He said adding registered voters in a particular age group will have an influence on legislation affecting the group.

A major reason the drive was held in the residence halls was there are just reaching the legal voting age of 18, Connell said.

UI freshman Judy Heires, who was registered by USI, said, "I just wanted to be able to speak my piece. I wanted to have a voice." She said she plans to attend precinct caucuses next CONNELL SAID the reason for the drive was to get more students to vote and to let students register again if they had made address changes.

UI sophomore Scott Roeder, who changed his voter registration address during the USI drive last week, said he made the change so that he can participate in the Johnson County Democratic listen to us," Stumbo said.

Party Chairman Ron Bohlken said he would like to see more students become involved in the political system.

There is some apathy," Bohlken said. "I think a lot of them (students) aren't aware of the UI freshman Lora Brandes, who is not a registered voter, said she hasn't had any reason to register. "I just haven't had anything to vote on yet," she said Sunday. But Bohlken said becoming a registered voter is particularly important this month because of because many students living the local precinct caucuses next

> Connell hopes 750 to 1,000 students will register to vote in the USI drive

Having more student voters will benefit UI students because legislators will pay more attention to a stronger voting group, Connell

"In order to give students more voice, we have to have students standing behind us," he said.

USI member Circe Stumbo said, "We have the problem that students aren't a viable voting block." She said student voting power is becoming important with proposed education budget cuts before the Iowa Legislature and the U.S. Congress.

Supports, diversification could lessen crisis

"U.S. agriculture is in the midst of a radical restructuring. Some sectors are robust and developing. Some are sick and dying. None are what they used to be. The Farm Belt, for a quarter of a century the world's breadbasket, now has stiff competition from Argentina and other farmers.

"The unforeseen length and severity of the current farm recession, which began in 1980, have accelerated the trend to consolidate dramatically, forcing basic and sweeping changes on the farm," the newspaper reported.

reported that "bad crops, high interest rates and plunging land values are bankrupting the farm belt. Now, the folks who put food on America's tables can't feed themselves."

I POINT THESE things out to emphasize that agriculture has seen "stormy weather." What we need now is a rainbow. As the Iowa Secretary of Agriculture, I want to talk about some developing rainbows in Iowa and the

There are some positive indicators on the farm economy. Land prices are now more closely related to productivity, farmers are more careful in taking on capital debt, and new opportunities now exist for entry into rent land at cheaper prices.

Also, the September 1985 preliminary Economic Research Service report shows realized net farm income in 1984 was increased to $14,910 per farm in Iowa compared to $10,565 in 1982 and $16,930 in 1983, the Payment In Kind program year.

We also had a bountiful 1985 harvest: Iowa corn, 125 bushels an acre, 1.67 billion bushels. Eighty-four percent of that corn was eligible for Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization Service supports that amount to about $3 per bushel. Corn supports for 1986 will be pegged near that same price.

There are also some things we can do on a regional and state basis to help agriculture: such as to develop a National Unified Program that would benefit the Corn Belt and support the Meat Export Center at Iowa State University. THREE YEARS AGO, the U.S. exported about $1 billion annually in meat products. Now, our from Mt. Ayr, Iowa, it was buy used machinery and buy or million. Researchers at the Meat hard hit Farm bill long on promises regain and expand this market by researching and increasing the sale of value-added products worldwide

Trade shows sponsored by National Association of the State also have our support. The first one was held in New Orleans in 1983; the second one was held in Kansas City, Mo. in 1985 and the next one will be held in 1987. The purpose of the shows is to bring foreign buyers to the United States to see and buy American food products.

The Mid-America International Agri-Trade Council, an organization of 12 midwest states which have banded together through the State Departments of Agriculture to promote overseas trade, deserves our support too.

Development of the ethanol industry must also be encouraged. U.S. corn growers have established a goal of one billion bushels of corn being processed into ethanol in 1990. This industry began in 1978. Now, it has grown so that the nation uses 200

The production of ethanol last year added approximately $135 million to the value Departments of Agriculture must of the Iowa corn crop and has created 800 jobs.

We can support the fructose industry. Eighteen of the top 20 drinks in the United States now use fructose corn syrup as a sweetener. This market utilizes more than 350 million bushels of corn and adds 20 cents a bushel to the price of corn.

IN ADDITION, we can support special programs being developed by the state such as diversified agriculture. Over the next five years, there is a potential to generate $60 million in state agricultrue revenue through diversified agriculture. This money would be realized, in part, by a 10 percent decrease in 15 fruit and garden items that are now imported for consumption in Iowa, but could be Iowa-grown products.

Also, we should encourage development of new industries such as horse and dog breeding. It is estimated that the horse breeding program in Iowa witially provide from $500,000 from the breakage paid to breeders. The total economic impact projected by 1987 is $12 million. More than 350 new jobs have already been created.

We can support programs such as Rural Concern and ASSIST. ASSIST is a statewide management advisory program conducted by ISU which has helped 3,000 farm families get a better handle on their finances and make long-range plans for survival. Both these programs are limited by funding problems.

I am an optimist and I firmly believe that sometime down the road, within the framework of hard work, flexible farm programs, developing markets, favorable weather patterns and growing world population, things will get better.

Robert H. Lounsberry is Iowa Secretary

Farmers must enter market 'arm -in- arm' of the 1985 Farm Guest Bill, continued Farmers Home Administration foreclosures and the recent cutback in loan rates to the limit for all major crops in 1986, the most crucial hour in agriculture may be upon American farm families.

As more farm families are driven from the land by FmHA foreclosures and farm prices, it should be obvious to the American producer that the government and free market system are not going to bail him out. There is absolutely nothing in the Farm Bill that offers producers an opportunity for increased farm income nor is there any future in America's present marketing system. Farmers' and ranchers' choices now seem clear. First, they can either remain with the antiquated marketing system available to them; secondly, they can wait for government relief which is not forthcoming; or last, they can unite through a collective bargaining system and demand a fair price from the marketplace.

The American farmer must challenge the transition in rural America. He must be willing to accept the challenge and willing to fight back. We, as agricultural producers, must walk through the marketplace and the halls of Congress arm-in-arm to affect changes in agriculture's antiquated marketing system and to demand needed farm legislation in a unified voice.

IN 1986, we are beginning to mers in the state, lowering farm see these changes occur in agriculture. For the first time in incomes and purchasing power history, farm organizations are beginning to unify their legislative and marketing efforts. In a historic first cooperative agreement, the National Farmers

Organization and Minnesota Farmers Union joined their livestock marketing efforts in Minnesota on Feb. 1. More farm organization unity will no doubt occur in 1986 as farmers and ranchers recognize each farm organization's speciality and the strength that comes with greater agricultural numbers.

In addition, an effort and progressive movement dealing with the basic issues at hand has begun. It will succeed because of the awareness of not only those in agriculture but because of those on the outside now who are recognizing the danger of absentee ownership of land and migrant farm labor.

Rural Americans - through organized marketing and greater unity - have served notice on America that they are not going to sit and wring their hands about this farm crisis wondering what they are going to do; that they are not going to stand in line for a dole and a handout; that they are proud and capable people to deal with the issue at hand. They have served notice on America that the cheap food policy is over.

Producers will no longer go to the marketplace alone or spend their time demonstrating on the courthouse steps to affect higher farm prices and the only answer lies with volume unified bargaining through a collective bargaining system, such as the National Farmers Organization provides for producers.

HE STATE IS suffering from the worst economic crisis since the Depression. One-third of Iowa farm families are teetering on the edge of bankruptcy, another third can barely manage their debts.

Yet five Iowans are campaigning to oversee the state's largest and most stricken industry.

After 14 years in office, Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Robert Lounsberry announced he won't seek another term. The decision was no surprise in light of his ethnic slur against the Japanese which was widely publicized last

Two Republicans and three Democrats have already expressed an interest in replacing Lounsberry. The GOP challengers are Thatcher Johnson of Madrid, Iowa and Mark Leonard from Holstein, Iowa. The Democrats seeking the nomination are Ralph Kremer of rural Aurora, Iowa; Gary Lamb of rural Chelsea, Iowa; and Theresa Sullivan of rural Dunlap, IowaAnalysis

ALL THE CANDIDATES revel in the challenge of restoring stability to agriculture in Iowa. But Leonard, 29, a pure-breed cattleman from Western Iowa. puts his motivation for running in more human terms: "I'm tired of seeing my neighbors move

Farm crisis affects all lowans

Leonard is not alone in feeling the crisis on a personal level. Sullivan's family has been forced into bankruptcy on their rural Dunlap acreage. "I can really relate to people that are hurting," she said.

As a mother of 16 children. Sullivan said she's very concerned about the future of family farms. "I'm very much afraid of corporate farming.

Four of the five contenders are farmers. Johnson is Iowa's deputy secretary of agriculture under Lounsberry.

Johnson has held this cabinet post since 1973, and said his management position doesn't leave him out of touch with farmers all my life. In my business I built aluminum farm buildings and on rainy days dozens of farmers would crowd in my office and discuss their

But the distinction between working farmers and bureaucrats doesn't seem to be the top concern. The major ideological rift in the farm community is whether the prices should be determined strictly by market supply and demand or whether government intervention is necessary.

REPUBLICANS JOHNSON and Leonard applauded the new federal farm bill's shift back to a market orientation, and pointed to expanding export markets as the ticket to helping farmers. Lamb, however, cursed that shift saying, "Exports alone won't solve the problem. We must manage production and structure the price to bring profitability back to agriculture." Sullivan agreed supply management is the cor-working farmers. "I've dealt with of liberal farm activists like Dixon Terry of Greenfield, Iowa, and said he has been waging a "grassroots battle for farmers" for nearly a decade. Lamb challenged Lynn Cutler in the Democratic primary for the 3rd Congressional District in 1982.

On the campaign trail these challengers are often asked, "Isn't the farm crisis largely the fault of farmers themselves, farmers who borrowed beyond their means to repay?"

None of the candidates will lay such blame

"Very little of this crisis is the farmers' own fault," said Ralph Kremer, a four-term supervisor from Buchanan County.

Leonard said: "I know people who never made a mistake who are in trouble now. Most of the bad farmers have been gone for a long time."

Sullivan said, "It is time to stop laying blame and work together to solve the farm problem."

The agriculture-post hopefuls split, and not down party lines, on the importance of diversifying Iowa's crops. Johnson and Lamb has picked up the support Kremer both foresee great potential" in growing more fruits and can only take so much," she and vegetables. Both cited statis- said. tics that show Iowa importing 95 percent of its fruits and vegetables. Becoming self-sufficient in these crops should be a state goal, they said.

On the other hand, Democrats Lamb and Sullivan and Republican Leonard all hesitate to push for diversification.

"If we think we can solve agriculture's problems by growing a couple acres of strawberries we're living in a fantasy world," said Lamb, who acts as a farm liaison for Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa.

Leonard - a beef ambassador for the Iowa Cattlemen's Association - said Iowa is the "absolute best in the world" when it comes to the production of corn, soy-beans, pork and beef. "We should utilize what we do best."

THE RISING THREAT of violence in rural Iowa worries all five candidates.

Sullivan said her family belongs to support groups to ease the frustration of the financial crisis. "After all, we're human beings

If radical groups that advocate taking up arms to save their land indeed infest the state, Leonard said the state secretary of agriculture has little recourse to bring peace. "There's nothing we could do short of wearing flak jackets.'

But he added the set tary is someone who should a pel the present helplessness haunting rural Iowa and "see the world as a place of opportunity."

The candidates' assessments of the farm crisis vary greatly. Johnson expressed the highest level of optimism. "I think we might lose a few more farms, but it seems like we're leveling out and can start crawling out of the

Kremer also said, "Hopefully we're near the bottom and things will get better soon."

Leonard takes a more pessimistic stance. "We could, by spring, have the worst season ever, for losing farms. And if we continue on the same course we'll lose

Everyone's crisis

The nomination of Richard Lyng to succeed John Block as U.S. Secretary of Agriculture can be seen as both a blessing and a curse for the American farmer.

Lyng was director of agriculture for the state of California when President Ronald Reagan was governor. Later, he was a deputy in the Agriculture Department under

The greatest qualification he brings to the nation's No. 1 agricultural position is his ability to work with those in power. He has strong support from both Republicans and Democrats in Congress, as well as a proven working relationship with the president.

In his favor also is the fact that Lyng has earned his living as a farmer. Critics complain that Reagan should have appointed a working farmer, but those who have farmed know that really wasn't necessary. Once a farmer, always a farmer - love of the land is undying.

But, even with all of Lyng's managerial, legislative and agricultural experience, we must question how much he will be able to accomplish during this dire farm crisis. Block was not a "bad" secretary of agriculture. He simply served in that position during a bad time. Lyng should expect skies to darken before we see sunlight again.

The outlook for American agriculture is dim now, and we're far past the point where the crisis is affecting only

Farmers suffering the blows of high interest rates and dropping land values are limited financially, so they buy fewer groceries and clothes. They can't pay feed bills or utility bills. Retail sales drop, causing newspapers, radio and TV to suffer from decreased advertising revenue. In turn, fewer tax dollars are collected. The state is pinched financially. State universities have to charge more tuition; other state programs are cut completely.

The stone has been thrown and the ripples it creates are reaching out to touch us all - no matter who we are or where we come from.

No one can afford to ignore the farm crisis, and no one can claim to know all there is to know. That's why The Daily Iowan has allotted three pages in today's edition of the paper to the discussion of agriculture. We have included guest opinions sent to us by state and national agricultural leaders as well as an analysis of the heated race for the post of Iowa Secretary of Agriculture.

We hope you will read this section, as well as news articles you see in the DI and other newspapers. Ignorance of this subject is certainly not bliss.

The real crime

During a protest last October UI junior Bruce Nestor and several other CIA Off Campus coalition members were involved in a shoving match with UI Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones and Campus Security officials.

Last Tuesday the UI held Nestor's hearing and a ruling on the matter is due today. Regardless of the UI's disciplinary decision, Nestor and other coalition members are guilty of a crime greater than violating the UI Code of Student Life. In addition to the shoving match, UI junior Ann Roan poured red paint on the steps of Jessup Hall. The future of the entire progressive student movement at the UI was set back 10 years by these acts of violence and vandalism. In June 1984, Mickey Kelley, Progressive Student Network member at the University of Minnesota, appeared at the UI and spoke of the upturn in progressive student activism. He laid down one of his group's goals: "There is a task of winning over the vast majority of middle

In nationwide student anti-apartheid protests, Kelley said, the involvement of the politically moderate students was "one of the big successes." This is where the CIA Off Campus protests failed.

The majority of the UI student body considered those protests unworthy of support — only a dozen people demonstrated - and it's safe to say most students were turned off by the protesters' actions.

Turning off the moderates — that is CIA Off Campus members' greatest crime.

Silent screen

Movie theaters are great. What better place to catch up on the latest gossip from people you have never met? Where else can you receive a free vibrating massage as the person behind you shakes your seat with his foot? Want to test your hearing by trying to catch the sound from the speakers? Then go to a movie theater.

Oh ... you say you just want a reasonably quiet environment in which to view a film on a properly proportioned screen with a well-regulated soundtrack, surrounded by people who respect the fact that you're more interested in the movie than in them? Then don't go to a movie theater.

URAL CONCERN is a hotline administered by Iowa State University Cooperative Extension Service in consultation with the Iowa Department of Human Service and the United Way of

The hotline provides information, referrals and counseling for: farm financial problems, legal problems, individual and family problems, job questions, and basic needs for food, fuel, shelter and medical help. It is a confidential 24-hour service.

The impact of the farm crisis on families, rural communities and the state is evident in the more than 9,000 calls received at Rural Concern during our first year of operation. What we are hearing is thousands of people who are experiencing a lack of ability to meet their farm financial obligations and the stress that results from this.

The fact that economic conditions have drastically changed does not stop the daily needs for the families affected by those conditions. The added emotional stress that comes from not being able to meet these obligations compounds their situation, and makes it harder to make rational decisions and seek the needed solutions. The coping skills such as hard work, perseverance and self reliance that have worked well for farm people in the past are not working now.

IOWA IS NOT the only state facing these hardships. We have had 10 states and two Canadian provinces inquire about setting up rural hotlines in their areas. What, then, does this mean to those of you are not directly involved with agriculture? It means more demand for human services and less tax revenue to pay for those services. It means we must find places for those displaced from the agricultural economy in other segments of the economy. It means we must make sacrifices whenever we see that others are going without. It means we must care. The challenge calls for compassionate responses to our rural neighbors and creative problem solving by our leaders. The past year saw many churches, educators, mental health, legal and medical professionals donating service and adapting programs to meet the needs. Many of these groups are looking for volunteers who will help them administer aid to farm crisis victims.

The Rural Concern Hotline is a comprehensive effort by both private and public resources to work together as we move through these painful times.

HE UNDERLYING conditions of high interest unfavorable exchange rates and low commodity prices have under niably lowered farm income and There has also been an erosion of farmland value in Iowa. This has led to reduced borrowing power and a need to provide more collateral for current farm debt.

These factors have brought a downturn in Iowa's farm economy causing a need to restructure debt, reduce farm size and operations, or require farmers to withdraw from farming. Any of the needs mentioned above involve legal ramifications. After talking to several thousand farmers, three areas of particular concern - taxation, foreclosure and bankruptcy - have come to

Few people realize that a transfer of real estate by sale, foreclosure or deed-back to a lender are taxed similarly. This means that substantial capital gains are incurred, often leading to tens of thousands of dollars in taxes even though a farmer no longer has a means to generate income. To make matters worse, bankruptcy often does not absolve the debtor-farmer of the tax burden, leaving him or her destitute.

Some people believe the farmer is solely at fault but it appears the downturn in the economy is the villian. Linear projection of land values and income levels based on 1970s figures led many farmers to invest in the farm business. Disasterous consequences ensued as the 1980s brought dramatic economic downturn.

Further, bankruptcy has become commonplace in the agricultural sector. Iowa bankruptcy court records indicate that few farm bankruptcies were filed in the early 1980s, but by 1985 they numbered in the thousands. The bankruptcy law provides for a "fresh start" by allowing citizens to be released from indebtedness in return for forfeiting all their

From the roadside, frozen fields and snow covered farm houses project an image of tranquility. But that peace is being shattered by hate and bigotry as desperate farmers turn to radical right-wing groups for answers to their economic plight.

Extremist organizations such as the Posse Comitatus and the Populist Party have been linked to propaganda claiming there is an "international Jewish conspiracy" behind troubles in the farm belt.

These groups and others like them have enlisted 2,000 to 5,000 hard-core activists, and as many as 14,000 to 15,000 sympathizers across the Great Plains, according to Danny Levitas of Prairiefire, a Des Moines-based

Whatever the exact figures, experts estimate the numbers joining the radical right are growing. "It's definitely on the increase," said Joan Blundell, a Spencer, Iowa, crisis counselor. "Farmers in financial trouble sometimes see their problems as a result of a conspiracy."

"IN A CRISIS without sense, finding a scapegoat to put to blame on has always been human nature," Blundell said. "That's what many farmers are doing now in believing in an international Jewish conspiracy that has no basis in fact.'

As the membership rosters of radical right groups grow, more farmers are becoming involved. "They're not always easy to identify," Levitas said. "They're dressed in seedcorn caps and polyester suits.'

Some farmers perceive joining a radical right group as a last, desperate response to a national agricultural climate in which one farm fails every six minutes.

Iowa's agricultural outlook is just as gloomy. One-third of all Iowa farmers are facing foreclosure and 70 cents or more of every dollar they're worth is owed to a bank.

Forty-two percent of Iowa farmers were thought to be "sliding towards insolvency" last winter, according to a poll in Farm Journal, and forecasts for this year appear

The failing farm economy is providing fertile soil for radical right organizations who are recruiting desperate farmers and busi-

Recruitment tactics include offers to help farmers preserve their land and their way of life. Often too broke to afford a lawyer, farmers are taken in by the false hopes and bogus legal advice offered, for a price, by

"THESE PEOPLE are making easy money their expertise to the grasping at last straws," said Phyllis Hughes, lay minister of the Archdiocese of Dubuque and a lawyer in Manchester, Iowa, who works extensively with farmers facing legal problems.

Steve Wondra, a lawyer with Legal Services of Iowa, says the legal devices used to help farmers stave off foreclosure by radical right groups, such as common law liens, land patents and conversion to "constitutional money," are almost invariably thrown out of

"Basically these do two things for the farmer," Wondra said. "Farmers mask their financial problems and lose ground on solid legal action that needs to be taken advantage

But those who sympathize with the radical right-wing groups often espouse common law practices as the solution to the plight of debt-ridden farmers. "Lawyers in Iowa tell defendants that there is no common law in Iowa," said Joe Zajicek, an Iowa City resident and area coordinator for Basic Freedoms, Inc., which was identified by Levitas as a radical right organization. "Common law is something the U.S. Constitution is based ZAJICEK, WHO has been involved in several legal disputes in Johnson County involving common law practices, said his group's purpose is to "educate citizens who have a desire to find out what their rights

"If a group knows anything, the government has ways to shut them up and keep them from saying anything," said Zajicek, who denies his group is involved in the anti-Semitism often linked with right-wing

Though few groups admit to bigotry or racism, one Iowa farmer says he is willing to tell what is "basically the truth" about who controls the nation's economy

'Most Americans aren't ready for the truth," said Delos Edwards of Albania, Iowa. "Eighty-five to 90 percent of Americans would say I'm a kook.

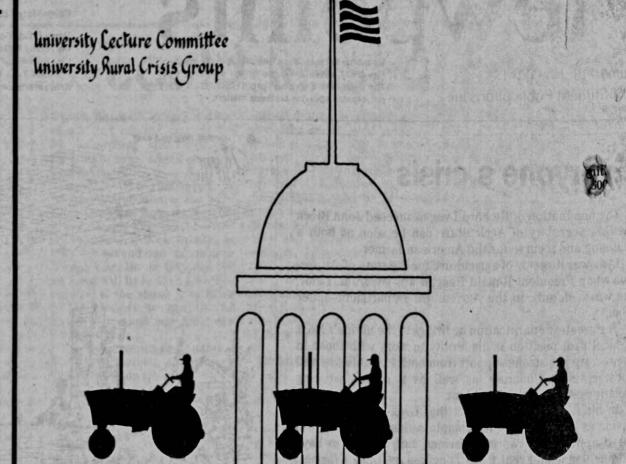

Edwards described a world power structure that works its way through many levels of government, including the Tri-lateral Commission, the Council of Foreign Relations and a network of international bankers. "There is an element on the face of the earth, whether Satanic or Jew, out to destroy all of Christianity," said Edwards.

But while many farmers are attracted to the quick-fix rhetoric and easy answers of the radical right, the majority realize hate mongering and shaky legal advice are not the solution.

David Dumont, a Wellman, Iowa, farmer facing financial difficulties, says he is "really, really concerned with the radical

"Hatred and bitterness devastate you with a foreclosure," Dumont said. "You need to blame someone. Soon you're saying, 'Damn Jews, damn Negroes,' and that's not right.

Iowa's 86-75 win over Ohio State Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena and its 79-69 defeat of Indiana Thursday combined to become "the best back-to-back performance we've had so far this year," Coach George Raveling said.

After several weekends of strong Thursday night games, followed by shaky Saturday games, Raveling said the Hawkeyes finally put together the necessary ingredients to win both weekend games convincingly.

"We talked about it before the game," Raveling said. "I told them I thought they're at their best when a few things are evident. One, when we're emotional; both ends of the court, and three, when we're running with the

The Iowa men's swimming team kept one streak alive Saturday. but had to give up another against the Indiana Hoosiers in the Field House pool.

Simms keys NFC second-half comeback

HONOLULU (UPI) - Phil Simms of the New York Giants passed for three second-half touchdowns, the last a 15-yarder to Tampa Bay's Jimmie Giles with 2 minutes 47 seconds left Sunday, to carry the NFC to a comeback 28-24 victory over the AFC in the Pro Bowl.

Simms, pressed into full service after Super Bowl hero Jim McMahon aggravated a knee injury, hooked up with Washington's Art Monk in the third period and then with Doug Cosbie at the start of the final period to set the stage for the finale.

The NFC trailed 24-7 at the half, primarily on a weak performance by McMahon, whose pass interception and fumble led to 10 AFC points within a span of 1:13 in the

Norman, Douglas lift Illinois past Purdue

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) - Ken Norman scored 23 points and Bruce Douglas hit 11-of-12 second-half free throws Sunday to lift Illinois to an 80-68 Big Ten victory over No. 20 Purdue. Illinois improved to 14-6 and 5-4 in the Big Ten and Purdue

Douglas scored all his 11 points from the line and all in the second half to break open the close game. The Illini, trailing 34-31 at halftime, took the lead for good, 54-53, with 7:34 to play when Douglas sank a pair of free throws. He gave Illinois a 69-61 lead with two minutes left when he sank four straight

Football coach possible suicide victim

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) - Holy Cross football Coach Rick Carter was found dead in his home Sunday morning and authorities said he had committed suicide. He was 42.

Police said Carter's body was found about 7:15 a.m. Iowa time by his 21-year-old son, Nicholas, in the family home in West Boylston, about 5 miles north of the Holy Cross campus in Police Chief Robert Barton declined to speculate on the cause of death, saying the case "is under investigation.

But Worcester County District Attorney John Conte said

Carter had taken his own life. Carter, who came to Holy Cross in 1981, after coaching at Earlham College and Hanover College in Indiana and the University of Dayton, had compiled a career record of 137-58-7. He led Dayton to a Division III national championship in 1980 with a 14-0 record.

In five seasons with the Crusaders, Carter had a 35-19-2 mark. Holy Cross was 4-6-1 last year.

Knight: Minnesota forfeit is unfair

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) - Indiana Coach Bobby Knight says it's unfair Minnesota was forced to forfeit a basketball game due to its recent troubles and that university officials should pay closer attention to their athletic departments.

"In my opinion, the presidents are very much responsible for the state of athletics today," Knight said Saturday. "They haven't paid much attention and allowed them to get out of

"The presidents don't take definitive stands on what they expect from an athletic program, what they expect from coaches," he said. "And you have situations like schools being placed on probation only to have those schools complain about unfair treatment.

What you need is for a president to get sincerely into it and say 'this is the way we're going to run it' and 'this is what we're not going to tolerate."

Tobin selected as Ryan's replacement

CHICAGO (UPI) — vince Tobin's selection as Buddy replacement as defensive coordinator for the Chicago Bears was preordained. The Bears announced Saturday that Tobin, who had signed on Tuesday to be defensive coordinator for the New Orleans Saints, would replace Ryan. Ryan, who designed the famed "46" defense that carried the Bears through the Super Bowl, accepted the job as coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Although Bears' Coach Mike Ditka said he would take up to three weeks to decide on Ryan's replacement, he actually had decided more than one year ago. "I talked to him a year ago and was going to hire him when I thought Buddy was going to leave then," Ditka said.

Tobin, 42, is the younger brother of Bill Tobin, the Bears' director of player personnel.

Nineteen of 30 Cowboys polled by The Dallas Morning News said they would submit to drug tests despite opposition from the National Football League Players Association, the paper reported Sunday.

But team president Tex Schramm, Coach Tom Landry and the players said that does not mean the team has a drug problem.

"There are guys on our team who use illegal substances, maybe 10 out of 50," said one unidentified Cowboy. "But do they have a problem? I don't think so. Everybody shows up for work on time, and they get the job done. In every other business, that is the criteria - getting to work."

Hawkeyes dropped by Big Ten's best

Staff Writer

Ohio State, the top team in the Big Ten, was too much for second-place Iowa to handle in women's basketball action Sunday afternoon at St. John's Arena in Columbus, Ohio.

The Buckeyes defeated the Hawkeyes, 70-54, to extend their conference winning streak to 34 consecutive games. They are 9-0 for this season. With the loss, Iowa fell to 7-2 in the Big Ten and 13-5 overall.

Iowa's last lead in the game was 8-4, following a basket by Lisa Becker with just under 17 minutes left to play in the first half. But the Buckeyes took advantage of Iowa turnovers and poor free-throw shooting to take a 35-27 lead into the locker room.

THE HAWKEYES made only one of three free throws in the first half, while the Buckeyes sank seven of 10.

Ohio State extended its lead in the second half, scoring five unanswered baskets midway through to lead 58-44. Lisa Cline added a basket from outside to give the Buckeyes their biggest margin of the game, 60-46.

The Buckeyes' guards provided the scoring punch in the game, tallying 37 points. Toni Roesch scored a career-high 20 and Cline added 17. Forward Tracey Hall put in 14 and grabbed nine rebounds.

Lisa Becker led the Hawkeyes in scoring with 13 points. Lisa Long had 12 and Lisa Kennedy 10. Long and Kennedy also pulled down nine rebounds each.

State Sunday, the Hawkeyes battled Indiana at Assembly Hall in Bloomington, Ind., and squeezed out a 47-46 win.

The Hoosiers led at halftime, 25-24. Iowa finally opened up the game by outscoring Indiana, 8-1, in the final five minutes. Long sank a 10-foot jumper with 49 seconds remaining to put Iowa ahead, 47-39.

Indiana's Lisa Cunningham kept the Hoosiers in the game until the very end. Cunningham, who finished with 15 points, scored on a three-point play and added a basket to cut the lead to one, With two seconds remaining on the clock, Iowa's Michelle Edwards and Indiana's Kemya Willis scrambled for a loose ball, resulting in a jump ball under the Hoosiers' basket. Pam Williams grabbed the tip for Iowa and held onto the ball as time

Kennedy, who fouled out of the game with three minutes, 51 seconds left, led the Hawkeyes in scoring with 18 points. Becker added 10. Karna Abram paced the Hoosiers with 17 points.

The Hawkeyes, now at the mid point of the Big Ten season, host Minnesota Friday, Feb. 7, at 7:30 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Last season, the Hawkeyes defeated Minnesota in Minneapolis, 66-58, and 60-38 at Carve-Hawkeye Arena. In the game at Iowa City, Kennedy led Iowa in scoring and rebounding with 11 points and 13 rebounds.

Top ranked Hawkeyes fall twice as injuries take toll on line-up

Firs was the parallel bars and then it was the horizontal bar which caused the No. 1 Iowa men's gymnastics to lose two road dual meets last

The Hawkeyes were defeated Friday night by seventh-ranked Southern Illinois in Carbondale, 276.50-274.75, and on Saturday by Illinois in Champaign, 275.15-273.70.

"Why this happened I couldn't tell you exactly," Iowa Coach Tom Dunn said. "We've had a couple of injuries which weakens our line-up slightly, but not enough that we couldn't have won both meets had we performed a little better. We just didn't compete AGAINST Southern Illinois, Iowa was ahead after the first four events by a score of 184.15-182.30. But on the parallel bars the Salukis' outscored the Hawkeyes, 46.90-44.45, to take control of the meet.

The next day against Illinois Iowa again seemed to be headed for a victory as they led by 1.3 points heading into the final event, the horizontal bar. The Fighting Illini then came up with their best event performance of the day, outscoring the Hawkeyes, 47.15-44.40, to run

"We didn't perform well. We had just about every man miss on those events, the parallel bars on Friday and the high bar on Saturday," Dunn

DUNN BELIEVES Iowa has not been able to handle the pressure of dual meets very well.

"I would say this team really hasn't proven itself in a pressure, dualmeet situation," Dunn said. "In the dual-meet format when we are alternating with the opposition it's a little different than a championship situation and we have not proven we can handle that yet."

Dunn was suprised that Illinois' score of 275.15 was nearly nine points better than its previous season best of 266.55 against Michigan

"Illinois surprised me a little bit because they had not scored into the 270's up to that point," Dunn said. They basically got their whole team healthy and performed well."

ILLINOIS COACH Yoshi Hayasaki

"MALMBERG did really great,"

ning performance, but he still believes the Hawkeyes are the team to beat in the Big Ten.

We are building up scores every dual meet and for the first time we had a full line-up," Hayasaki said. "I know Iowa has had difficulty competing away, losing to Southern Illinois and losing two of its top allarounders in Stuart Breitenstine and (Tom) Auer (Breitenstine injured a toe versus the Salukis and was unable to compete against Illinois). We kept the pressure on Iowa and performed as well as we possibly Hayasaki added, "I think Iowa is going to put it together. I think they are having a few injury problems right now and there is no question of the talent Iowa has and if they get healthy they can still win the Big Ten. I feel they have the most talent of all the Big Ten teams."

DAN BACHMAN still managed to perform well for the Hawkeyes, winning the all-around title in both meets but he had problems on the horizontal bar versus both the Salukis and the Illini.

"Dan had an excellent five events on both days and missed the horizontal bar badly on both days and that was disappointing," Dunn said.

Iowa gymnast Mindy Taylor springs off the vault won the event with a score of 8.75 helping Iowa in Sunday's meet with Illinois-Chicago. Taylor win the meet, 170.6-160.6.

'Injured' lowa beats Flames

By Laura Palmer Staff Writer

Recording its second dual meet win, the Iowa women's gymnastic team defeated Illinois-Chicago, 170.6-160.6, Sunday in the Field House.

Iowa was without four starters in its line-up - Joni Goldwasser, Kirsten Worcester, Stephanie Smith and Wendy Hussar.

Hussar sustained a knee injury while competing in the floor exercise competition at a triangular meet with Illinois and Indiana State Saturday.

"It is questionable if Wendy will return this season. Kirsten and Joni will hopefully be returning soon," Iowa Coach Diane Chapela

"It can be challenging to have back-to-back meets, but it was great to see this team gear themselves up for this meet," Chapela said.

IOWA SWEPT the all-around competition. Freshman Mindy Taylor took first place with 35.5 points, Jennifer DuBois placed second (35.4), and Chris Neuman earned third place

Taylor and DuBois were the highlights of this meet, according to the Iowa coach. The duo were one, two on four of five events in the competition.

Iowa also swept the vault and balance beam

On the vault, Taylor recorded an 8.75 for a first-place finish. Neuman and Kim Bishop trailed with duplicate scores of 8.6. Topping the beam competition was DuBois, scoring a 9.1. Taylor was second with 8.6 and then Neuman with an 8.55.

Hawks not up to par at Invite

By Melissa Rapoport Sports Editor

Although Jerry Hassard condoned the improvements of five athletes, lowa track coach's high expectations were dullened by his team's performance at the Missouri Invitational in Columbus, Mo. Saturday.

Our performances this week were not all I expected them to be," Hassard said. "We had a few good marks but I thought our athletes were capable of excelling at this level of competition.

"I'm sure our team, as a whole, did not come ready to compete at Missouri and that surprised me," he added.

LISA MOATS, A transfer from Northeast Missouri, set a school record in the long jump to highlight the meet for the Hawkeyes. Her jump of 19 feet, four inches, which earned her second place, broke junior Davera Taylor's record of 19-11/2 set in 1984. She also finished second in the triple jump with a 37.4 and a half leap.

The record did not surprise Moats. Although she transfered to Iowa last year, she was unable to compete for the Hawkeyes in accordance with NCAA regulations. This, however, did not outdo her record-setting jump. Moats said. "They have made a tributing in that area."

Sprinter Senta Hawkins was the only first-place winner, earning top honors in the 440-yard dash (57.78 seconds). Freshman Alicia Simpson placed second in a time of 58.16.

"Alicia got out very quickly and led the race most of the way," Hassard said. "She faltered slightly in the final straightaway and Senta caught her.

"I was happy to see her go out strong at the beginning - that's how that race is supposed to be run. She's just not conditioned enough to get through to the end. It was a good race for both of them.'

Three additional athletes recorded season bests. Jenny Spangler placed third in the two mile with a 10:15.97 time, while Janeth Salazar finished that race fifth (10:46.6). In the high jump Tracey Claussen tied her 5-6 career best for third place.

In regrouping Hassard said he will improve the relays. "I will SINCE THE Recreation Building be emphasizing relay development," he said. "I'm really not satisfied with the relay performances. We haven't run a quality mile or two mile in four years. I think it's high time to start con-

Gilliam went public with his feud last spring, charging in several interviews that Brazil would affer if submitted to the cuts heing demanded by Sheinberg, the head of Brazil's U.S. distribuor, Universal Pictures. Gilliam ventually agreed to a few trims, out Sheinberg wasn't satisfied. According to a report in a recent issue of Time, Sheinberg wanted more cuts as well as a softer ending. Gilliam refused and so Brazil's fate in the U.S. was uncertain - until December 85, when the organization of os Angeles Film Critics cited Arazil for Best Picture of 1985, est Direction (by Gilliam) and

Film

York and Los Angeles for one week each, thereby qualifying if for Academy Award consideration. Now Brazil is scheduled to open just in time for the announcement of Oscar nominaends with a whimper. Between the explosive act of terrorism that opens the film and the withering defeat of the hero that closes the film is a simple clerical error that gradually escalates into a threat to society. What the petty bureaucrat (played by Jonathan Pryce) wants is to dream about love, and he's helped by a renegade repairman (Robert De Niro), but he meets his match in a toadying torturer (Michael Palin). The loss he eventually suffers is greater than his life. It's what makes his life worth living — his dreams.

The setting of Brazil is "Somewhere in the 20th Century." The place is a police state where the propaganda is, in equal parts, Stalinist Russia and Eisenhower's America. The time is both post-industrial, with a city of super-skyscrapers surrounded by a smoldering countryside, and pre-apocalyptic.

This setting allows Gilliam to elaborate upon several of the motifs he's explored in his animation for Monty Python's Flying Circus and in his direction of Time Bandits. For instance, his fascination with the insides of both people and buildings finds a literal equivalent here in a running surreal joke featuring outsize, wheezing ducts. Gilliam also returns to such favorite ideas as cages suspended in the air, people taking flight, and into monstrous creatures and structures. Gilliam pits these arresting images against a sound-track of sirens, screams, the gasping of the ducts, and a popular song ("Brazil"), all of which creep in and out of one another until they're often the same.

THIS LAVISH attention to layers is more common in literature. where a single sensibility propels and perfects the work over a long period of time. Yet Brazil is distinctly cinematic, almost overdosing on visual and aural ingenuity. Its details - of plot, of set design, of word play - interconnect with dizzying precision. They ricochet off one another within individual scenes, and they rebound across the movie, always hitting the targets of their

So complete and complex is the movie's structure that the loss of even 11 minutes seems extreme. It would have been absurd to alter the end of this paranoid fantasy into anything upbeat.

Brazil offers no alternatives, no solutions, no relief, no hope. Its humor is black - bitter laughs born of anger. Sid Sheinberg knows this is bad business, just as Terry Guilliam knows this is good satire. To be effective, satire must be strong. Any compromise would weaken the central joke in Brazil:

Life is funny as hell.

Hockey is a sport that combines the brutality of boxing, the violence of football and the stupidity of professional wrestling.

Dean Youngblood (Rob Lowe), the protagonist of the new youth film Youngblood, has wanted all his life to be a professional hockey player, even if that means leaving his family's farm to move to Canada to play on a minor league team. Actually, the film's interest in hockey is only superficial; its main preoccupation being the cataloguing of as many cliches as possible.

For instance, Dean sees sports as his only ticket out of the nowhere future the family business has to offer. Even after he makes the team, Youngblood must prove himself because he is the smallest man on the team. And even though he has the skill to be a great player, greatness will allude him until he gains that killer instinct. We also get the traditional male bonding between Dean and an older teammate, the seduction by the older woman, the grudge match with a rival player (named Racki) and the young-love subplot involving the coach's daughter.

THE ONLY ORIGINAL thing in this entire movie is a scene where Dean's teammates strip him, hold him down and shave off his pubic hair.

When Dean's buddy (Patrick Swayze), is injured on the ice by Dean's arch rival, a disillusioned Youngblood realizes the utter foolishness of the the sport and quits. He returns to the family farm and his older brother, a has-been hockey player, shames him into returning to the game. So after the routine getting-intoshape montage, Dean returns, just in time for the final allimportant match, which just happens to be against Racki's team.

And wouldn't you know it, Dean not only scores the big final winning goal (in slow motion, naturally) but gets to beat the stuffings out of Racki as well.

Youngblood is as banal as it is senseless, but it does have one intriguing paradox: no matter how badly he gets beaten on the ice, Lowe still manages to be one of the prettiest people on screen.

Brubeck, Louis visit Hancher

Dance Company and the Dave Brubeck Quartet will bring their unique collaboration to Hancher Auditorium tonight at 8.

Their show unites two distinctively American art forms modern dance and jazz music in an event that is partly dance, partly jazz and partly a combination of the two.

The Dance Company and the Quartet take their separate turns on the stage before combining forces in "Four Brubeck Pieces" and closing out the show with Paul Desmond's classic "Take Five.

The Louis/Brubeck collaboration was first seen in New York in February 1984, and has since toured both North America and Europe.

The dance portion of the concert will feature the Dance Company's "Glances," performed to a taped Dave Brubeck score, and the Murray Louis solo "Frail Demons," featuring score and design by Alwin Nikolais.

AFTER THE QUARTET — fea-turing Bill Smith on clarinet, Chris Brubeck on bass and Randy Jones on drums - presents its musical set, the dancers will join the band for "Four Brubeck Pieces" — "Take Five,"
"Unsquare Dance," "Koto Song,"

and "Three to Get Ready." Murray Louis began his career as principal dancer with Alwin Nikolais' Henry Street Playhouse Dance Company; he then moved on to the Nikolais Dance Theatre. After 20 years in the Nikolais company, Louis began to turn his attention to his own company and his own playful

The Murray Louis Dance Company join the Dave Brubeck quartet in a unique and wild collaboration.

Nikolais and Louis share much in their approach to movement, having evolved the Nikolasis/ Louis Technique together, but while Nikolais emphasizes highly theatrical lighting and costume design, Louis is more interested in the human side of dance. His choreography often takes a whimsical view of the quirky side of human nature.

LOUIS HAS choreographed over 80 works, including works diminished.

Pianist Brubeck's use of unorthodox time signatures and daring harmonic experimentation first captivated audiences almost 40 years ago. Since he was featured on the cover of Time magazine in 1954, his place in jazz has never

His collaboration with Murray Louis continues a tradition of exploration and experimentation that made him a pioneer of the college circuit in the 1950s and one of the first jazz artists to improvise with a symphony orchestra. His trend-setting "Time Out" recorded with the legendary Brubeck quartet, featuring saxophonist Paul Desmond, became the first gold record in modern jazz.
