State wine sales fall short of expectations

By Brian Lott
 Staff Writer

Although wine sales in Iowa City continue to rise, the sales of wine in most privately-owned stores across the state are falling drastically short of projections made by lawmakers a year ago.

Following the passage of a measure allowing the sale of wine in grocery and convenience stores — lawmakers had predicted statewide consumption to increase 125 percent.

But those sales have reached only 40 percent of anticipated revenues, according to Judy Seib, a spokeswoman for the Iowa Beer and Liquor Control Department.

This is the first in a series examining wine consumption in Iowa.

"We haven't really met our projections," Seib said. "The revenues have been $3.7 million less than lawmakers were counting on."

BUT WHILE these revenues have fallen short of projections, managers of most locally-owned grocery and convenience stores report a moderate increase in sales.

Bill Alberhasky, manager of John's Grocery, says his wine sales meet the estimates from last summer. "It seems each month, our sales get better and better," he said.

According to Gary Weaver, assistant manager at the Dodge St. Hy-Vee, wine sales in that grocery store have also met expectations. "We sold the most the first month, but now it has dropped back down," he said.

The owners of Claret and Friends, 323 Market St., say they have also recorded sizeable profits as a private wine seller.

"We have greatly exceeded expectations," said John Gillespie, owner of Iowa's first exclusive wine shop. "I'd say we've gone over the estimates set last summer by 35 percent."

DESPITE Iowa City's success, however, private sales across the state continue to decline. One reason is that fewer than 1,000 retailers have purchased licenses from the state to sell wine. "A lot of stores don't want to pay, or just can't afford the $500 license," Seib said.

She also stressed that an increase in the number of wine stores across the state does not necessarily mean more wine is being consumed.

She said the result is that the state is collecting fewer revenues from taxing private sales than it did when it held a monopoly on wine sales — a system that stunted both state and local tax expectations.

IN ADDITION, the revenues from wine sales in state-owned liquor stores continue to drop.

Paul Kaefering, manager of the Iowa City liquor store, 1922 Keokuk St., says his wine sales are down about 30 percent since the bill was passed.

"We've made up some of that by the 'back door,' which is wholesaling to other wine shops (in surrounding communities)," he said.

The Iowa City store is the second largest in the state in sales, selling around $3.75 million in liquor annually.

Some lobby groups have suggested that wine should be taken out of the stores completely in order to facilitate private sales.

"A lot of the wine lobbyists complain that unfair state competition limits wine sales in stores," Seib said. "They've suggested that we permanently remove wine from the liquor stores, but I don't think that will happen."

East-West spy swap may be imminent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz declined comment Monday on reports that Anatoly Shcharansky would be released in an East-West spy swap but said the plight of Soviet dissidents is of "tremendous importance" to the administration.

The West German newspaper Bild, quoting "Moscow Kremlin circles," first reported agreement had been reached on the largest East-West spy swap since World War II.

The New York Times quoted Reagan administration officials as saying the agreement calls for Shcharansky and three or four Western intelligence operatives held by the Russians to be released in Berlin Feb. 11 in return for the freeing of an equal number of Eastern bloc agents jailed in the West.

State-owned Israel radio and television reported Monday night the Reagan administration told Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir that Shcharansky would be included in an impending exchange. The broadcasts stressed no formal announcement had been made either by the Israeli government or the White House.

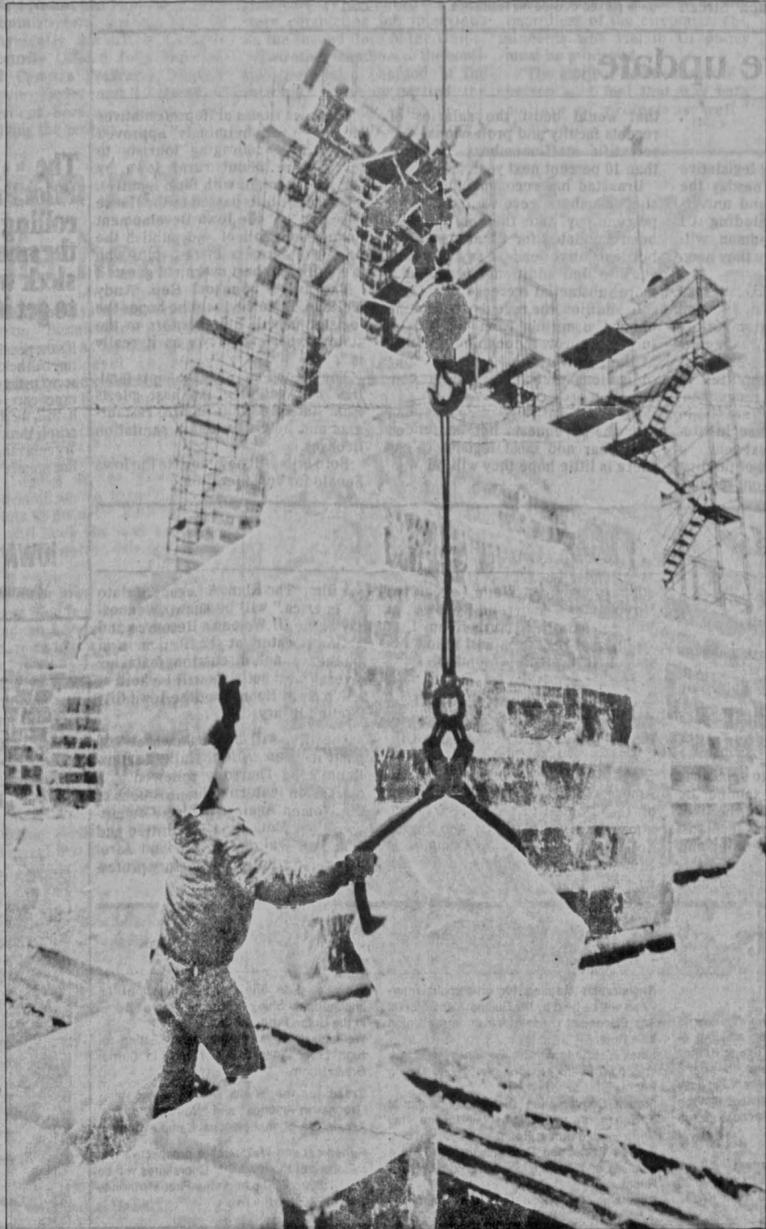

WHILE A SOURCE in New York's Jewish community said the swap "could be any day now," White House and State Department spokesmen declined to confirm the reports.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said whether Shcharansky would be released in a spy swap was a "hypothetical question" and declined further comment.

Shultz, interviewed on ABC's "Good Morning America," said he had "no comment to make at all" on the reports.

But he added: "There is no subject that we have worked on harder or that makes more difference to people in the West — not just in the United States —

Blast probe to influence shuttle trips

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan appointed an independent commission Monday to investigate the shuttle disaster and NASA sources said the agency's own probe is taking a close look at the possibility of improper booster rocket assembly.

All but one of the 11 segments of the Challenger rocket casing that ruptured and shot out a jet of flame 15 seconds before Challenger exploded had been used before without incident, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

But in Houston, sources said investigators were checking the theory that a tiny gap between the lower two segments of fuel in the right-hand booster may have let 6,000 degree gases burn through the rocket's steel seam.

Sources said such a gap might have been caused during assembly by damage to the rocket casing or to the fuel, which has the consistency of hard rubber, or by misalignment of the rocket segments.

THE PRESIDENT, acting on the day Challenger would have returned to Earth, gave the commission headed by former secretary of state William P. Rogers and Apollo astronaut Neil Armstrong 120 days to report its findings.

The four months allotted to the 12-member commission all but ruled out the possibility that shuttles could be flying again before late summer at the earliest.

NASA acting administrator William Graham, appearing at a White House news conference, said once the panel reports to Reagan, NASA will have to correct the problem to make sure it could not happen again.

Student Senate calls judicial court ineffective

By Phil Thomas
 Staff Writer

The UI Student Judicial Court — which has not heard a case in more than two years — should be reformed, UI Student Senate officials said Monday.

"They don't have any authority," Senate President Steve Grubbs said. The purpose of the court is to settle disputes between student organizations, but it has been dormant for more than two years, he said.

"I feel bad making appointments to this organization when they have nothing to do," Grubbs said.

Court Justice Bruce Miller said he would like to see the court become more active and feels that time is being wasted. "We show up at meetings and we have nothing to do," he said.

Sen. David Kang agreed that the court hasn't been able to work effectively. Kang presented proposals to the senate and the Collegiate Associations Council last week to reform the court. The proposals will be debated by the senate tonight.

"EITHER YOU can fix it or you can get rid of it," Kang said Monday. He said his proposals can only help the dormant court. The court is supposed to hear cases of complaint by UI student organizations that feel their rights have been infringed upon, Kang said.

Miller said the reason the court hasn't dealt with cases is that both parties in a quarrel must agree to go before the court before any actions can be taken.

"Obviously, if someone has done something wrong, they aren't going to want to go before the court," Kang said. "The judicial court's hands are tied."

In his proposal, Kang said he would like to give the court a power similar to a subpoena. Under his proposal, the nine-member court would hear complaints and then decide if the case should be heard, he said.

BECAUSE THE senate is unable to help an angry party, they often take their complaints to the UI Human Rights Committee, Kang said.

"Maybe people aren't aware of the judicial court's existence," Maggie Hogan, chairwoman of the human rights committee, said Monday. Her committee hears any complaint offered by students, faculty or staff, she said. But she said people have a lot of options as to where they can get help, adding that she would like to see the student court utilized more often.

Kang said he would like to see matters taken care of before they are "escalated" to Hogan's committee.

Kang said the appeal process at the UI can be very complicated. "The UI is by no means a democracy," he said.

Under his proposal, court decisions will be binding in many instances, Kang said.

Kang said his proposal will make court decisions involving the senate and CAC advisory, Kang said.

"I don't think it makes sense for the senate and the CAC to come up with a more powerful body than themselves," he said, adding that the court should be an extension of the senate and the CAC.

Kang said he anticipates a positive reaction at tonight's senate meeting, but expects some debate.

"Who knows what issues await us?" he said.

FAA orders 747 inspections

WASHINGTON — Federal aviation officials said Monday U.S. airlines have been ordered to inspect their Boeing 747 jumbo jets for cracks that could lead to "rapid decompression ... and possible loss of the airplane."

The Federal Aviation Administration said it issued an "emergency airworthiness directive" after receiving reports of four instances in which the frames of two 747s were found to have sustained cracks.

Boeing spokesman Jack Gamble said such "cracks are not unusual" and added, "These are nothing that would have any effect on the operation of the aircraft or would compromise the integrity of the airframe. These are minor little items."

Justice impropriety alleged

WASHINGTON — There is an "extremely alarming possibility" the Justice Department has destroyed files related to a congressional inquiry into a possible coverup of wrongdoing at the Environmental Protection Agency, letters by Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., showed Monday.

In two letters to Attorney General Edwin Meese, Rodino, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee conducting the inquiry, demanded details of the EPA's handling of committee requests for files.

Rodino challenged a Justice Department official's assurance that the department "has no interest in concealing any documents from the committee and will not permit any relevant files to be discarded."

Report faults Star Wars plan

BOSTON — A classified Pentagon report says the Soviet Union could build a rocket by 1993 allowing them "to evade the most critical elements" of the proposed "Star Wars" missile defense system, The Boston Globe reported Monday.

The classified report said the Soviet Union could deploy a "fast-burn rocket," one that burns all its fuel within the first couple of minutes, the Globe said. Strategic Defense Initiative critics say fast-burn rockets could defeat a space-based missile-defense system.

The proposed SDI system "relies on the fact that the rocket engines of today's missiles continue to burn for the first five minutes of flight," so heat-seeking sensors can detect exhaust left by the rockets.

Pope visits Calcutta slums

CALCUTTA, India — Pope John Paul II went into the heart of Calcutta's slums Monday for a tour of Mother Teresa's hospice, where he fed the dying, touched lepers and blessed the dead during a visit that left him speechless with emotion.

The pontiff, on the third day of his 10-day pilgrimage across India, held hands with the Nobel Peace Prize-winning nun and gave the traditional Indian greeting of "Namaste" to 10,000 cheering slum dwellers who jammed the surrounding trash-strewn streets.

The pope was obviously moved as he toured the shelters for the destitute and touched each of the prostrate patients found dying on the streets of the city, a witness to the private tour said.

Judge bars Condor capture

WASHINGTON — A federal judge barred the government Monday from capturing the last five California condors still living in their natural habitat and placing them in zoos with the remaining 21 others of the endangered species.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker issued a preliminary injunction preventing the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service from taking the birds out of the Los Padres National Forest near Ventura, Calif.

Parker, ruling on a suit brought by the National Audubon Society, also issued an order that will make the injunction permanent when he releases a more detailed opinion and said there will be no trial.

Legislative update

By Kirk Brown
Legislative Writer

DES MOINES — During legislative hearings today and Wednesday the state Board of Regents and university administrators, including UI President James O. Freedman, will try to convince lawmakers they need additional state funding.

These officials will ask members of the Iowa Legislature's Joint Subcommittee on Higher Education Appropriations to provide approximately $45 million in funding increases for Iowa's three state universities in fiscal year 1987, despite recommendations by Gov. Terry Branstad to trim state support of these institutions by about $400,000 next year.

Topping the board's list of funding proposals is a $17 million request that would boost the salaries of regents faculty and professional and scientific staff members by more than 10 percent next year.

Branstad has recommended these staff members receive only a 5.5 percent pay hike that has already been mandated for fiscal year 1987, but legislative leaders say they will work to find additional funds for a more substantial increase.

In addition, the regents are seeking about $26 million from the legislature to improve educational quality at their universities, repay bonding obligations and fund several construction projects.

Branstad has also recommended that these requests not be funded next year and most legislators say there is little hope they will be.

The Iowa House of Representatives Monday overwhelmingly approved two bills encouraging tourists to learn more about rural Iowa by staying overnight with farm families.

One of the bills passed by the House requires that the Iowa Development Commission collect and publish the names of farmers in the state who are willing to host overnight guests.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Andy McKean, R-Morley, said he hopes the legislation will help visitors to the state "experience Iowa as it really is."

The second measure exempts families who volunteer to host guests from state laws that require restaurants and hotels to obtain sanitation licenses.

Both bills will now move to the Iowa Senate for consideration.

Challenge sparks Berlin move

By Earl Johnston III
City Editor

Iowa City Manager Neal Berlin said Monday that a salary increase was not the only reason he resigned the city's top administrative post to take a similar position in Arvada, Colo.

Berlin, who signed a contract with Arvada officials this weekend, will boost his yearly income by more than $15,000 dollars, indicated a career move had been in the works for some time.

"The economic climate there is quite a bit stronger," Berlin said during a press conference at the Iowa City Civic Center. He noted Arvada's expanding residential and commercial communities. "But that's not why I left, nor did I leave for the money.

"I've been here longer than any city manager Iowa City has ever had," Berlin said. "I think I could have stayed here, but there are a lot of challenges there."

OFFICIALS FROM Arvada, a Denver suburb of about 87,000, interviewed seven candidates to replace their retiring city manager. But Berlin was the clear choice, said Arvada Mayor Robert Frie this weekend. The Arvada City Council was expected to approve Berlin as new city manager at its formal meeting Monday night.

Berlin, who will begin his new job March 1, said his reasons for leaving Iowa City stem from Arvada's need to establish its own identity.

"They're looking in a broader sense at how they can strengthen their economic base," said Berlin, pointing out that the city has about 300 acres it intends to use for urban development.

Berlin also noted the "difficult and complex" challenges of managing a city that has a number of services overlapping with the Denver metropolitan area.

BERLIN SAID he also had plans to interview for city manager positions with other cities including Reno, Nev., and Fort Collins, Colo.

"I don't know if city managers ever settle down," Berlin said. During his 11 years at the helm of Iowa City's administrative staff, Berlin said he watched a sharply divided Iowa City unify and develop both an organizational and political direction—a direction that he feels will continue after he has gone.

He also noted that the city has undertaken a good deal of urban renewal and an increase in city services, including a concentration on handicapped and elderly services. "And obviously, I'm really proud of our city library," he added.

Shortly before Berlin made his announcement, the Iowa City Council held a brief formal meeting to decide what course of action the city will take to locate a replacement for him.

FOLLOWING A brief discussion, the council appointed assistant city manager Dale Helling as acting city manager. The council also moved the city's finance director Rosemary Vitosh to the post of acting assistant city manager.

Although Helling said he would accept the appointment, he said he had not decided if he would seek Berlin's position permanently.

"I imagine we'll be working together furiously for the next few weeks in order to make the transition to a new manager as smooth as possible," Helling said.

In addition, the council will establish a city manager search committee of five to seven people that will attempt to find a new city manager within the month.

Farm crisis forum slated for tonight

By Carol Monaghan
Freelance Writer

"What is the UI's appropriate response to the rural crisis?" is the question that prompted a committee of faculty, staff and students to organize the UI's first official response to the agricultural crisis, according to Sheldon Pollock.

The "Rural Crisis and the University" forum scheduled for this evening is the result of nearly six months of planning, said Pollock, UI associate professor of Asian language and literature and religious studies, and faculty planner for the event.

The forum, beginning tonight at 7:30 in Van Allen Hall Lecture Room II, is designed to lay the groundwork for an organized response to the farm crisis.

"OUR GOAL in general is to alert the university to the fact that the rural crisis is out there," said Margery Wolf, chairwoman of UI Women's Studies Department and an organizer of the event.

"For one, we're a state university and our paychecks come from the state," Wolf said. "We're affected financially. That's just one of the issues involved."

Three people who are "living the farm crisis" are scheduled to speak at the forum, Pollock said. Merle Hansen, president of the North American Farm Alliance; Dan Levitas, a field organizer for the National Farm Organization and Prairiefire.

a Des Moines-based farm support group; and Lori Graber, a farmer from Crawfordsville, Iowa, will provide three different perspectives on the rural crisis.

"We felt the speakers would provide a national perspective, a state perspective and a local perspective on the farm crisis," Pollock said.

Pollock said he hopes the evening lecture "stimulates a lively exchange of ideas" at an organizational meeting scheduled Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the Union Miller Room.

THE ORGANIZATIONAL meeting, which is open to the public, has "a totally open agenda," Pollock noted. The meeting's purpose is to exchange ideas on what can be done on a campus level in response to the farm crisis.

Organizers said they hope a large number of students will attend the forum and meeting.

"I would like to see students organize on their own," Wolf said. "There's a large number of students from small towns and farms. I think more than people realize."

Pollock said the committee is "looking for people who will be prepared to work, to think, and who are willing to take leadership roles in response to the nation's farm crisis."

"I hope people will do some independent thinking about what a state university should do when a community which it is a part of disintegrates," Pollock said.

Nestor placed on disciplinary probation

Bruce Nestor

By Kent Schueler
Staff Writer

UI junior Bruce Nestor was placed on disciplinary probation Monday for participating in an unauthorized protest in the Union this fall.

UI disciplinary officer Susan Mask found Nestor guilty of violating two regulations of the UI Code of Student Life by taking part in an anti-CIA protest in the Union Oct. 31.

But Nestor was vindicated of UI administrators' charges that he physically assaulted Campus Security Officer John Horning, UI Campus Programs Director Kevin Taylor and UI Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones during the protest.

According to UI policy, students on disciplinary probation are not considered in good standing with the UI and further violations may result in suspension or expulsion.

But Nestor said the sanctions will not curb his activism.

"The CIA will be here March 12 and 13 — and so will I," Nestor said.

NESTOR AND other members of the CIA Off Campus Coalition were protesting the presence of two CIA representatives who were conducting job interviews on the second floor of the Union.

Two other members of the coalition were also charged in the incident, but they settled the matter informally with the UI. Nestor brought his case before a public hearing Jan. 29.

"I think by and large they treated me well," Nestor said. "The point was to create enough of a hassle for them that they'll think twice about charging someone else."

Jones said Monday that he now feels that Nestor is innocent of the assault charges.

"If he was found innocent on the assault part of the charge, then he was innocent," Jones said.

Julia Mears, assistant to UI President James O. Freedman, said regardless of the circumstances, students who violate UI policy must be punished.

"The motives don't exonerate a person — I feel that way with matters of protest as well," Mears said.

Bedell election bid hinges on his health

United Press International

Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-6th District, said Monday that he is physically exhausted from a nagging health problem that is causing him to delay a decision on his re-election plans in 1986.

Bedell, 65, who has held the congressional seat since 1974, said he is concerned that he does not have the same energy level that he is accustomed to having. However, he said doctors in Washington and Rochester, Minn., have not been able to find anything wrong with him.

The six-term congressman says he is concerned that complications from an insect bite that he suffered during a camping trip last summer may be affecting his energy.

Bedell discussed the health problem with his family doctor in Spirit Lake, Iowa, last weekend and was being examined by Yale University doctors who specialize in insect-related ailments in New Haven, Conn., on Monday.

BEDELL SAID he will await the findings of those examinations before making a decision on the 1986 race.

"I have always been a very active person," Bedell said. "But I have experienced a definite drop in my energy level in recent months," Bedell said in a statement issued by his office Monday.

Fred Grandy, a Sioux City Republican who portrayed the character Gopher on the "Love Boat" television series, is the only candidate to formally announce that he will seek the seat currently held by Bedell in this fall's election.

In other Iowa political developments Monday, Dan Gray of Shenandoah became the fourth candidate to toss his hat in the ring for Iowa's secretary of state post being vacated by the retirement of incumbent Republican Mary Jane Odell.

Gray, a 32-year-old Democrat, told a group of supporters Monday night that he is seeking public office "because the crisis of rural America is adversely affecting almost all Iowans and to correct this situation, we need a real change in leadership at the state level."

The Great Peace March

Peace activists to march against nuclear weapons

By Suzanne McBride
Staff Writer

Joining scores of activists from around the world, five local residents plan to begin marching across America next month in a symbolic protest of the arms race.

The march, sponsored by the Pro-Peace organization, will bring nearly 5,000 peace marchers through Iowa City in late July as the group makes its way from Los Angeles to Washington D.C. in an eight-month time period.

"It seems that this issue has been on the back burner for a while," said Roger Solberg, one resident preparing for the hike that will begin March 1.

"People have been lulling themselves into a false sense of security," Solberg added. "I'm not saying this march will change everything in the world, but it just might be the thing to get it going."

According to National Pro-Peace official Jim Blevins, the march will involve a broad spectrum of concerned citizens joining efforts similar "in spirit and idea" to the marches of the 1960s.

"We have marchers from 4-year-olds to 79-year-olds and from all walks of life: doctors, lawyers, students. People from eight other countries will also be going," Blevins said.

SOLBERG ADDED that "this is not just a college kid type of thing. All types of people are going. The march is almost an American microcosm walking across the country."

As the protesters make their way across the nation — averaging 15 miles a day — they will sleep in small tents and receive their meals from a portable kitchen.

Other services such as laundry, showers, communication systems and toilets will also be transported to each campsite by truck.

In addition, the march officials estimate that more than 3,000,000 meals will be consumed, 20,000 pairs of shoes will be worn out and 1,275,000 showers will be taken along the way.

But while the ages and professions of the marchers vary widely, their personal motiva-

"People have been lulling themselves into a false sense of security. I'm not saying this march will change everything in the world, but it just might be the thing to get it going," Roger Solberg says.

tions for making the trek are similar. "There are a lot of reasons I'm doing this," said Laura Rawson, a UI sophomore from Ames. "I've always wanted to travel across the U.S. Just the fact of walking across the country is a real adventure. Being involved in the issue of disarmament day after day is good."

Most of the marchers are expected to arrive in Los Angeles by Feb. 15 to begin training for the hike.

THE MARCH is expected to cost about $15 million, with each walker collecting $3,200 in donations. But Blevins said once an applicant has been accepted "no marchers will be turned away because of lack of funds."

Other Iowa City marchers include Bill Carter, Kay Lynn Murrens and her five-year-old son Mark.

According to Martie Olson, chairwoman of the Iowa City Pro-Peace chapter, the group will be making its way through Iowa City July 26 and 27.

"Since I couldn't walk, the best way to help was at the grass roots level," Olson said, explaining that the demands of her job make it difficult for her to participate in a cross country hike.

Besides Iowa City, the marchers will also travel through Des Moines, Council Bluffs and Davenport as well as several other smaller cities.

"I think Iowa City should play a major role because we are a nuclear-free zone," Olson said.

Dubuque pro-life billboard goes up despite objections

By Lewis Wayne Greene
University Editor

A controversial billboard linking several leaders of the National Organization for Women to "killing pre-born babies" and "homosexual parenting" was erected Monday.

Stephen Hardie, president of Frank Hardie Advertising Inc. of Dubuque, said the billboard advertising purchased by Voice for Life Inc. went up before noon Monday.

The advertisement was scheduled to appear Friday, but objections to the use of the NOW organizers' names without their permission forced Hardie to delay it.

He said the decision to run the advertisement as it was originally designed was made by Voices for Life. He said he didn't overrule their decision, because he didn't want to interfere with the groups' First Amendment right to freedom of expression.

The billboard reads, in part, "NOW supports killing pre-born babies, homosexual parenting."

THE ADVERTISEMENT also lists the names of several Iowa NOW activists, including three Dubuque mothers.

Sandra Kirkbride, founder and director of Voices for Life, said she was very pleased that the billboard was up and said that she hopes it will soon be moved from its current position in the 3100 block of University Avenue in Dubuque to a more visible location later this month.

Kirkbride said she plans to keep her billboard message before the Dubuque public for about two months.

She said she had only received one call

Monday afternoon objecting to the use of the NOW members' names. Hardie said he had received no complaints Monday.

State NOW President Sarah Wohlrahe, one of the women named in the advertisement, said the decision to run the ad was "a clear case of intimidation."

"I think what you see here is a person that is consumed with hatred in a very dangerous way," she said.

Wohlrahe, an Iowa City resident, said no decision has been made on possible legal actions against Kirkbride, but that a lawyer was being consulted.

KIRKBRIDE SAID the threat of possible legal action would not deter her.

"If they do (file suit), they do. I'm really not that concerned about it," she said.

"I have to keep in view the number of babies that are daily taken," Kirkbride said, adding, "I believe Godly men and women are coming forward boldly to stand up to the beliefs this country was founded on."

She repeated her belief that NOW's goals are to encourage lesbianism and abortion.

Wohlrahe said the billboard was part of a continuing series of attempts not only to stop abortion, but to stop all forms of dissent against the beliefs of a small group of self-appointed moral judges.

Wohlrahe said she was proud of her connection with NOW. "I'm proud to be a member and proud to be the state president."

"We are out there and trying to provide solutions," she said, accusing Kirkbride's pro-life group of only attacking a symptom of a greater problem and not dealing with the root causes of abortions.

Lifesaver

The Iowa House of Representatives passed legislation last week requiring all drivers in the state to wear seat belts while operating their vehicles.

Evidence was presented showing that such a law would save approximately 150 lives annually by turning potentially fatal car accidents into relatively minor mishaps.

Typically, the argument that such a law is an unnecessary infringement on the individual's personal freedom surfaced immediately. Rep. Kyle Hummel, R-Vinton, assumed the extremist position that is the hallmark of libertarianism: Where is the invasion going to stop? What will prevent the legislature from mandating that overweight people must go on a diet?

Why can't a person like Hummel, who is elected to look out for the interests of his constituents, recognize the value of a law which has been proven to save thousands of lives wherever it has been enacted? His knee-jerk response to a law which he perceives to be a violation of personal freedom is characteristic of the short-sighted libertarian tradition.

It's a sad fact of human existence that people tend to become so concerned about their own personal rights and freedoms that they frequently overlook the greater needs of the community. Therefore, it is the function of government to intervene under such circumstances and compel people, by the force of law, to act responsibly.

Voice your dismay

The latest volley in Iowa's abortion debate, fired off by "pro-lifers," has a decidedly life-threatening ring to it.

"Voice your outrage, NOW supports killing pre-born babies, homosexual parenting," is the message emblazoned by Voices for Life, Inc. on a Dubuque billboard. Underneath, the organization thoughtfully provided the names of the national and state presidents of the National Organization for Women, as well as those of three Iowa NOW organizers.

Why publicize the names of NOW leaders? Apparently, so people will know against whom to direct their "outrage."

Too bad the outrage of pro-lifers isn't always limited to billboard displays and letters to the editor. Last year the always-heated abortion debate erupted into violence when several women's clinics were bombed by pro-life activists.

Sandra Kirkbride, founder and president of Voices for Life, Inc. denies the Dubuque billboard or any of her group's actions are intended to incite or condone such violent activity. But her sincerity is questionable in light of her insistence that the names be displayed — she vowed to stand in front of the billboard with a placard listing the names if they did not appear on the board.

Sarah Wohlrahe, state president of NOW, was justifiably angered by the unauthorized use of her name and the names of others. "It's like saying, 'If you see this person walking around the highway, you have our OK to run them down!'"

Now that "pro-life" organizations have declared open season on pro-choice activists and their families, it's time to fight back. Call the billboard's owner, Frank Hardie Advertising, Inc., and "voice your outrage" that pro-life groups are endangering the lives of those who don't agree with them.

Off-track talk

Martin Luther King Jr. would have been appalled.

The week of UI symposiums commemorating King was completely nullified when it culminated last Friday with a two-hour pep rally, resembling the Democratic Convention, in celebration that "being black is where it's at."

The disappointment started with the invocation. In a ceremony giving tribute to a civil rights leader, why would an invocation be included? King advocated equality. The Black Law Students Association, primary sponsor of the event, should have realized not all people believe in God and not everyone prays to the Almighty Jesus Christ.

The irony goes deeper. Marlin Kirby, a UI law student, presented a poem he co-wrote, titled "Being Black." His poem indeed rhymed well, it even had good rhythm, but it certainly did not exemplify equality.

Kirby recited such lines as, "even a blind man would know I am black." Imagine the effect those same lines would have if a Jew stood at a podium and said, "even a blind man would know I am Jewish," or, if a white man recited, "being white is where it's at." King would roll over in his grave.

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young was the celebration's featured speaker, but even he was a disappointment.

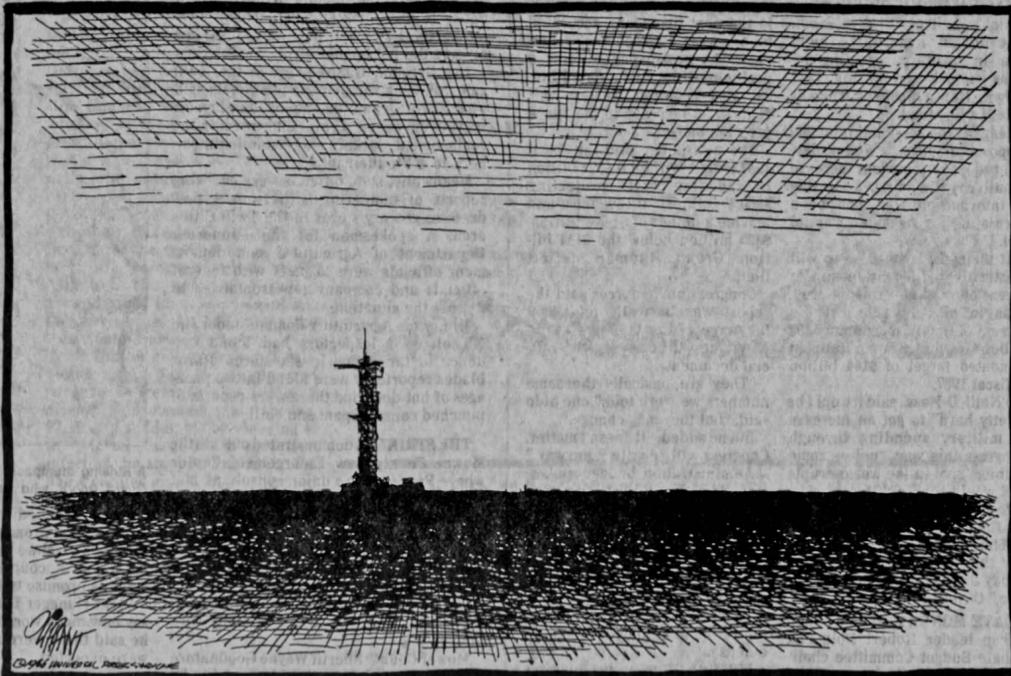

The first 20 minutes of his presentation was enlightening — presenting facts and anecdotes not usually associated with King, but very much a part of him. He praised blacks and whites alike for the progress his people have made. He reminded us of King's intentions and, of course, King's dream.

But somehow his speech got off track.

A little digression never hurt anyone, but when it begins to resemble an election speech, it's gone too far. We were there to honor King, not to shun Republicans and cheer for the Democrats. And we were not there to hear Young degrade women.

It is rather hard to understand all of this talk coming from a man who 23 years before worked with King to strive for civil rights and equality for all people.

'Sweet adaptability' won't do

By Georgia NeSmith

IT TOOK A Rosa Parks to teach a Martin Luther King Jr. who then in turn helped John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson. It's going to take some of us... It's going to take a long-range vision of the hungry being fed and the naked being clothed and the sick being healed in order to make it possible for those dreams to come true.

"But I'm convinced that we will see those dreams come true, and that the truth of the success of this vision is present amongst us. Right here and now we see the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slaveowners sitting down together at a table of brotherhood, celebrating the victory and the vision of Martin Luther King."

These were the closing words to Andrew Young's keynote speech Friday night ending the UI's week-long commemoration of King and his Dream.

I very much enjoyed the program. Like Young, I found myself looking back with sweet nostalgia at that age of innocence when what was right or wrong seemed so clear-cut, and the solutions seemed so simple.

OUR WORLD HAS changed much since King's assassination in April 1968. We pushed for civil rights laws. We pressured two presidents to end the war in Vietnam. And we succeeded. We taught people to say "Black" instead of "Negro" or "Colored." We taught people to at least begin to think about the enormous cost of war, and how much that expense takes away from our ability to solve the real and pressing problems of hunger, unemployment, illiteracy, poverty, crime — at home and around the world.

But until the very end of the question and answer period — when Young discussed his effort to get a woman police officer appointed to a high-level police administration post in Atlanta — it seemed we had not taught Young to be conscious of the very real and pressing problem of the oppression of women.

In the middle of the question and answer period, Young brought up the problem of education, particularly the education of young boys.

"I think it's kind of cruel and unusual punishment to expect 10- and 12-year-old boys to sit still for eight hours," he said. From the audience came the call, "What about girls?"

"In my own personal experience, my girls always sat still," Young responded. "Scary, isn't it?" someone shouted. Young, clearly uncomfortable, pointed out that girls, in his experience, were far more adaptable to the educational environment than boys. And then he went on to the next question.

I wanted to speak to this issue. I was hoping a black woman would say something, because it seemed to me it would be more appropriate for a black woman to raise the question. I waited a while before I got in line to take my turn at the microphone. But the question and answer period was cut off before I had my chance.

I still feel a very strong need to speak.

I AM, NO DOUBT, the daughter of a slaveowner. The town of Leighton, Ala., was named after an ancestor of my paternal grandmother's side of the family. But my father tried to forget his Southern past — he even lost his accent, and none of his five children knows much about his family's history. He and my mother raised all of us to believe in the equality of all people, to question all prejudice, and to fight injustice.

I have a niece who is, undoubtedly, the daughter of a slave. She has a brother. Her brother will grow up facing the barrier of prejudice and discrimination because he is black. But my niece will grow up confronting a double barrier — prejudice because she is black, and prejudice because she is a female.

It is, indeed, scary that girls are able to sit still for longer, that they seem to be so much more adaptable than boys. It is scary because training for sweet adapability is training to accept oppression. Training for adaptability is training to be silent when someone seems blind to the fact that there are daughters in the audience as well as sons, when a major political figure appears to be unconscious of the fact that the majority of poor people in this country are single women with children, that those women and children are not only black but also white, Hispanic, Native American and Asian. These women live in poverty not only because of racial injustice but also because of sexism.

THE WORLD IS indeed far more complex than we who fought for civil rights and against the Vietnam war believed it to be in that wonderful age of innocence. We know now the roots of poverty and oppression extend far deeper and far broader than any of us could have imagined. It is time that Young and other men acknowledge that authoritarianism and war have ideological roots in machismo, that the poverty, oppression and abuse of women and children of whatever race requires an economic and political structure that enforces male dominance.

It took a Rosa Parks to teach King. It took a proud and brave black woman to begin the fight against legalized racism. We need proud and brave women of all races to join in teaching Andrew Young and other men to remember their mothers, their sisters and their daughters. It is time for women of all races to join in turning, like Rosa Parks, from sweet adaptability and to make their own marks in history.

Everyday heroes

To the Editor:

Last week, on the world news with Dan Rather, something happened that caught my attention. Sometime during the broadcast, most of which covered the tragedy of the space shuttle Challenger, Rather very briefly mentioned that 21 people had died in a plane crash in Mexico — 21 lives lost.

The seven men and women of the Challenger have become national symbols of heroism. Astronauts have always had a special place in the hearts of the people of this country. They represent the human presence in the continual search for knowledge. They have qualities that so many of us wish we might possess. They have been places we can only imagine. They are heroes.

It is perhaps understandable then, that the tragic loss of these seven men and women has sorrowed the entire nation and people the world over. My question, however, is at what point can a person be described as a hero? Maybe, just maybe, we are all heroes in a sense. To make it through each day, with a few laughs, a few tears, maybe that could be called heroism. Can heroism be judged by minutes per broadcast, or newsworthiness? Could it be that one of the lives lost in the airplane crash in Mexico might be the life of a hero?

Lisa Parker

Onward and upward

To the Editor:

After last week's space shuttle tragedy, I feel it's imperative we Americans, both the general public and our elected officials, keep Jan. 28, 1986 in perspective. While I in no way want to minimize the sorrow we all feel, I wonder — is it a greater tragedy than 248 U.S. soldiers dying in an airplane crash in Newfoundland on Dec. 12, 1985?

1985 will long be remembered as the year with the highest number of deaths from airline tragedies. Yet we haven't shut down our airports or grounded our planes. Neither should we consider, even for a moment, curtailing our space program or cutting back funds.

Instead we should rally together to improve safety, not only in the space program, but also in traditional flight. The risks from traditional flight cannot be accepted any more than those from space flight. If we can rally, neither our seven heroes from Challenger nor our 248 heroes from the Newfoundland tragedy will have given their lives in vain.

Back to the past

To the Editor:

I'm writing this in response to the question raised by the media after the tragic space shuttle Challenger explosion: Should civilians be allowed in space?

In my opinion, civilians should be allowed in space. Christa McAuliffe, the first teacher in space, knew she was taking a risk. The same risk that the astronauts and other members of the flight were taking. Congressmen are saying we should go back to the basics. If the National Aeronautics and Space Administration does this we will not be progressing but regressing in the space program. I don't think we should put just any civilian in space but possibly one like McAuliffe, who was capable and qualified to attempt a flight.

In time, I think the next civilian in space should be a reporter to let the rest of the world know in their own unique way what a flight and the outer world called space is all about.

Reagan to request big Pentagon budget

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Congress is highly unlikely to give President Ronald Reagan the hefty hike in military spending he plans to ask for in his 1987 budget, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Monday.

Reagan, who presents his budget proposal to Congress Wednesday, will request a 3 percent increase in military spending, according to information that has been circulating for weeks on Capitol Hill.

At the same time, Reagan will drastically reduce or terminate dozens of other government programs in his effort to cut the current deficit of more than $200 billion to the Gramm-Rudman mandated target of $144 billion in fiscal 1987.

O'Neill, D-Mass., said it would be "pretty hard" to get an increase in military spending through Congress this year "unless some problem spot in the world erupts that would send a different message to the Congress, but I don't see that now."

"The mood of the Congress is that they (the military) are going to pay their share like everybody else," O'Neill said.

LATE MONDAY, Senate Republican leader Robert Dole and Senate Budget Committee chairman Pete Domenici met White House chief-of-staff Donald Regan to discuss a letter to Reagan, being circulated by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Mich., urging him to support action on the deficit before tax reform.

The senators were clearly worried that potential revenue raisers could be "used up" in the tax bill, in an attempt to raise the same amount of money while cutting taxes for the middle class, before the deficit is addressed.

Domenici, R-N.M., said he told Regan that if an early agreement is not reached on the budget deficit, "we ought not move ahead with tax reform," one of Reagan's highest priorities.

But Regan, according to the senators attending, said the letter was unnecessary.

"They weren't too thrilled with the letter," said Boschwitz. "I think we are going to go through with the letter."

REAGAN'S BUDGET request will amount to a defense spending increase of nearly 40 percent in the next five years, according to a report in the Washington Post. The newspaper, quoting a preliminary document dated Jan. 29, also reported Reagan will request an increase in the space program budget.

The newspaper said the fiscal 1987 budget will total $994 billion in spending while projecting $850.4 billion in revenues and leaving a deficit of $143.6 billion, $400 million below the $144 billion Gramm-Rudman deficit limit.

Congressional sources said the report was basically on target but some of the numbers would be slightly different in the official document.

"They are basically the same numbers we were told," one aide said, "but they may change."

But he added: "It doesn't matter. Congress will rewrite it anyway."

Administration budget spokesman Ed Dale said "at least one" figure in the report was wrong, but declined to comment further.

Separately, Reps. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., both chairmen of defense-related panels, said Democrats must work to blunt the effect of Gramm-Rudman on defense.

WHILE NOT accepting Reagan's proposal for a 3 percent hike in military spending for fiscal 1987, the two said defense must not suffer under Gramm-Rudman.

"With Gramm-Rudman on the books, defense is going to require all the help we can give it merely to survive the coming year," they said at a news conference.

O'Neill said he would support a tax hike to pay for defense spending but only if Reagan proposes it.

Gramm-Rudman requires annual government spending cuts to reduce the deficit to zero by fiscal 1991. If Congress cannot agree on the cuts, all federal agencies except Social Security and several other domestic poverty programs would be automatically slashed Oct. 15.

The Post quoted a document as saying the Pentagon will get $274.3 billion in 1987 and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration budget would rise from $7.3 billion in fiscal 1986 to $7.5 billion in 1987.

Austin plant reopens gates

AUSTIN, Minn. (UPI) — The Geo. A. Hormel & Co. operated its processing plant Monday but union leaders asked police to give striking meatpackers more leeway on the picket line — a request law officers did not honor.

The National Guard patrolled the main gate, allowing what company officials said was a full complement of employees, including more than 400 permanent replacement workers and 350 union members, to get to their jobs.

Meanwhile, state officials were checking reports of tampering with Hormel products in grocery stores in the Twin Cities area. A spokesman for the Minnesota Department of Agriculture said department officials were to meet with federal officials and company representatives to discuss the situation.

Minnesota Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols said inspectors had found evidence of tampering in six stores. Razor blades reportedly were found in two packages of hot dogs and there were reports of punched cans of Spam and chili.

THE STRIKERS demonstrated outside the Mower County Law Enforcement Center where Ray Rogers, a union consultant, met with law officers.

Police chief Dan Hoffman said Rogers asked that strikers, frustrated after the five-month stand-off with the company, be allowed to engage in "civil disobedience" and that their arrests be delayed.

"I don't see how this would work," Hoffman said, "but we are checking with attorneys."

Mower County Sheriff Wayne Goodnature was not receptive to the idea, saying he has been "burned" before.

"The union promised all would be peaceful Friday and we had the worst day ever," he said. "Of course, the company didn't keep its promise to keep the plant closed."

Plant Manager Deryl Arnold declined to say how many workers were on the job but he said there were more than the 750 who were expected.

"Our people came to work without any harassment in a completely safe manner," he said.

Police in West St. Paul said they asked grocers to check their stock after the razor blade pieces were found in Hormel's Frank 'N' Stuff hot dogs. Consumers reported the tainted products Friday and Saturday. One man was cut when a razor blade piece stuck to the roof of his mouth after he finished eating a hot dog.

Firemen carry away an injured person from the Elysees in Paris Monday after a blast injured eight people.

Eight hurt in Paris bombing

PARIS (UPI) — A bomb exploded on the fashionable Champs-Elysee Avenue late Monday, injuring eight people and shattering the windows of luxury boutiques.

Three of the victims — two men and a teenage girl — were hospitalized in serious condition, authorities said. The other four suffered minor burns.

A police spokesman said, "There was no doubt it was of criminal origin."

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blast.

The explosives went off at about 8:30 p.m. local time in front of Galerie Claridge as crowds of early evening window shoppers strolled along the chic area.

"I was in one of the shops when I heard the explosion," a young man said. "I ran out and people were lying all over the ground. There was a lot of blood."

Police said the bomb was placed in a garbage can outside the Galerie Claridge, a luxury clothing store known for its high fashions. Galerie Claridge is located along the Champs-Elysee, a boutique-lined boulevard popular with tourists and the wealthy. The boulevard has been the scene of other attacks in the past.

The explosion came less than two months after the Dec. 7 bombing of Printemps and Galeries Lafayette department stores that injured 39 people.

In recent years, Paris has been swept by anti-semitic violence carried out by Palestinian terrorists, but Monday's incident was not immediately linked to any of the previous attacks.

Socialist Sanchez elected in Costa Rica for peace stance

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Calling his presidential election a victory for Costa Rica's democracy, President-elect Oscar Arias Sanchez Monday said he would lead the nation on a mission to promote peace in Central America.

With 94 percent of the nation's precincts reporting, Arias, of the ruling National Liberation Party, had 52.4 percent of the vote over his chief rival, Rafael Calderon Fournier, 36, of the conservative Social Christian Unity Party.

There was a margin of about 74,000 votes separating the two candidates in Sunday's election, the Supreme Electoral Tribunal said.

All votes were to be tallied by late Monday and the tribunal would formally announce the winner next week.

WE WILL FIGHT untiringly so that our Central American brothers will stop killing each other," Arias told several thousand followers who packed San Jose's downtown central park.

An estimated 1.2 million Costa Ricans — some 80 percent of the electorate — cast ballots in the elections for president, vice president and a 57-seat legislative assembly, officials said.

Preliminary results for the assembly showed Arias' party winning 28 seats with the opposition Social Christian Unity Party taking 25. Twenty-nine seats are necessary for a majority.

Arias, who holds a doctorate in political science from the London School of Economics, was seen as winning largely on the strength of his party's skilled campaigning and organization and his self-portrayal as the "peace" candidate over a "hish" Calderon.

"WHAT COSTA RICANS want most is peace, to end the peac Arias said in an emotional tory speech late Sunday at a Jose Hotel.

The National Liberation Party or PLN, was founded after 1948 revolution and is credited with the development of Costa Rica's social security system. party, a member of the Social International, has controlled Congress every year since early 1950s with the exception 1978-82 when a conservative opposition party had control.

Arias said he approved of Reagan administration's funding of Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua government "only it is used as an instrument pressure to make the Sandinist sit down and negotiate."

France ousts Soviet diplomats for purchasing military secrets

PARIS (UPI) — France expelled four Soviet diplomats believed to have purchased secrets concerning nuclear submarine bases in northwest France from a retired French air force officer, the Foreign Ministry said Monday.

From Moscow, French TV said four French diplomats were expelled from the Soviet Union on espionage charges. A French Foreign Ministry spokesman said Soviet retaliation had been anticipated.

The Foreign Ministry refused to divulge the names or official positions of the four diplomats. The Soviet Embassy in Paris said the French action was "based on accusations for which there is no proof" and called it "unfriendly and provocative."

"We confirm that four Soviet colleagues left for Moscow at the demand of the French government," a Soviet Embassy spokesman said. "This French action does not correspond to the stated wish of France to enter and develop good relations with the Soviet Union."

FRENCH NEWS reports quoting government sources said the four expelled Soviets were agents of the Soviet military intelligence agency working as military commercial attaches in the Soviet Embassy.

French officials said the four the country on a regular flight Moscow during the weekend.

It was the largest expulsion of Soviets from France since Socialist President Francois Mitterrand ordered 47 sent home for spying in 1983.

The news reports said further expulsions, including that of high-ranking embassy officials might follow as the French counterintelligence agency continues its investigation into spying at the bases in Brittany.

Duvalier rejects U.S. call for free elections in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — President Jean-Claude Duvalier, who has declared a state of siege to combat anti-government rioting, scoffed at the idea of elections Monday, saying "I am president for life."

Duvalier and his wife, Michele, spent the day in a 30-car motorcade surveying the aftermath of a week of rioting.

The two-hour drive coincided with a statement by Secretary of State George Schultz calling for democratic elections in the Caribbean country.

But the president, who inherited power from his father, Francois, in 1971, scoffed at the suggestion and said he would continue "working for the good of the Haitian people," according to state-owned Radio National, which paraphrased Duvalier.

"I AM PRESIDENT for life. What elections are you talking about?" Radio National quoted Duvalier as telling a foreign journalist during a stop on the tour.

The station also said the president dismissed with a smile the question of whether there was a coup d'etat Thursday, the day before the White House erroneously announced that he had fled the country.

"No, there never was a coup d'etat," it quoted him as telling a CBS reporter.

Some Haitians cheered "for life, for life," as Duvalier's motorcade of jeeps and cars careened past the militia headquarters in the hillside suburb of Petionville, where many of the rich live.

"Yesterday they were saying 'down with Duvalier.' Today they love him," said a priest. "Sometimes it can be discouraging."

A crackdown on looting and rioting that erupted in the capital Friday had claimed at least 55 lives as of Sunday, a doctor in the government-run General Hospital said.

BUT THE DEATH toll could not be confirmed and doctors said they thought victims were being taken to a military hospital. The known death toll from unrest that began Nov. 28 is 28.

Port-au-Prince appeared calm, but dozens of stores in the business district were closed, with soldiers and militiamen guarding those that were open.

"We opened because there is a law against remaining closed," said the owner of a fabric store. "But we are afraid. All the merchants here are afraid."

Members of one Roman Catholic order said a popular priest had gone into hiding following reports militiamen were trying to kill him.

The director of the religious order said he had brought guards and dogs into the church compound because of threats and surveillance by vehicles carrying armed men.

"There is a climate of terror," he said.

CHURCH OFFICIALS have led the movement for greater rights in the Western Hemisphere's poorest country. They have had little comment on events since Friday's looting.

Diplomats and residents took a wait-and-see attitude on the ability of the Duvalier government to quell the greatest crisis of its 15 years in power.

"Between the 1st of January and the 30th the government didn't say anything," a diplomat said. "Now they are saying something. Next they will have to start doing something."

In Washington, the State Department said it was seeking permission for chartered airplanes to land in Haiti's second largest city, Cap Haitien, to pick up American citizens.

But spokesman Charles Redman said there was no evacuation of American citizens and there has been "no harm to American citizens in Haiti to our knowledge."

Duvalier imposed the state of siege to give the military a free hand to quell the unrest. Duvalier suspended human rights that are guaranteed by the Haitian constitution but frequently denied by the administration.

'King' Gretzky will face challenge to crown

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—The prospect of direct confrontation between hockey king Wayne Gretzky and heir apparent Mario Lemieux upstages all other acts of Tuesday night's NHL All-Star Game.

They have been voted starting center by the fans, Gretzky for the Campbell Conference and Lemieux for the Wales. Whether their lines actually go head to head is up to their coaches.

Both players acknowledged Monday that the possibility has elevated the excitement of the game.

"I've felt that, definitely," Lemieux said. "I've been feeling excited about the challenge, to be facing off against him, playing with (wingers) Michel Goulet and Tim Kerr."

Lemieux, a fast and smooth skater at 6-foot-4 and 200-pounds, has the physical tools to succeed Gretzky, 6-0, 170. The fact that his point totals (27 goals, 57 assists) are even in the ballpark with Gretzky's (38-94) when he plays for the Penguins suggests that the 20-year-old's potential to inherit Gretzky's scoring titles and dominance may be realized. And Lemieux's complete domination of Gretzky in their teams' Jan. 22 game has fueled speculation that it may happen sooner than anyone guessed even in 1984 when Lemieux was the most highly touted No. 1 draft pick since Guy Lafleur.

With that memory not two weeks old, Lemieux expects Gretzky to be at his most competitive, no matter that the All-Star Game is an exhibition.

"I don't think it was fair that they booed him," Lemieux said. "I know all the passes he made to guys who weren't scoring. But he's going to want to show everybody I'd think."

"He's going to bounce back now. Look for him; he's going to be playing his best hockey tomorrow night."

Gretzky shrugged off the notion that he feels challenged.

"I'm long past the days of having to prove myself as a hockey player," he said. "Tomorrow night's another game to have fun."

In Lemieux, will Gretzky be playing against the best challenger to his six-year reign as the league's MVP, or are the prophecies premature?

"Oh, it's not premature at all," Gretzky said. "Mario's a great hockey player."

Wallyball champs cruise to easy win

Using the slogan "let's recreate," the Floor Boreds knocked off the Raspberries, 15-7, 15-8, to clinch the 1986 coed wallyball championship.

The single-elimination tournament, which was held at the Field House with the finals played Monday night, had 12 teams competing in best of three matches. The Floor Boreds wiped out all of its opponents in the first two games on its road to the all-University title.

Intramurals

Wallyball, a combination of volleyball and racquetball has a few rule changes. The game is played in a racquetball court with a volleyball net stretched across it.

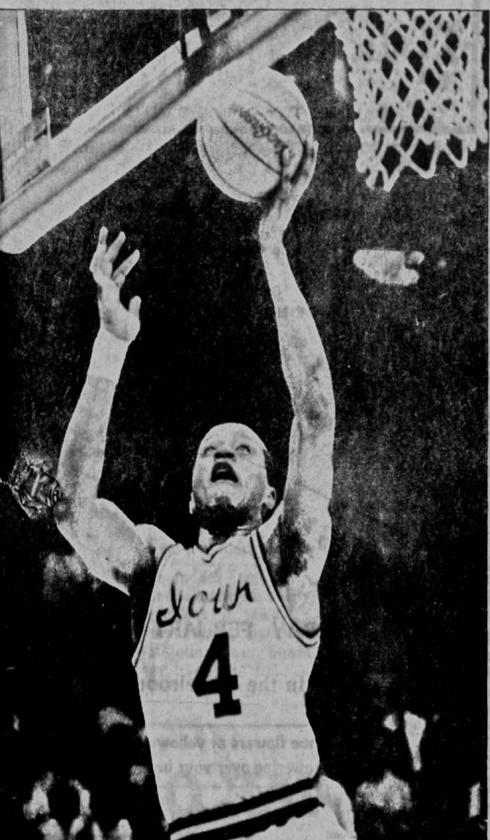

THE BALL, similar to a playground kickball, is out of bounds whenever it touches the ceiling, hits the back wall or hits two or more walls on a volley or serve. Four people play on a side, and substitutes are allowed.

Serving must be underhand, and the only other major difference from volleyball is that an unlimited amount of hits are allowed on a side. Points are scored when the team receiving the serve or volley fails to return it. All games are played to 15.

The Floor Boreds, made up of Don Schutt, Mike Telfer, Laris Galejs, Mary Freking, Ingrid Schwarz, and Julie Kuhlman, have been playing volleyball together since the fall. Schutt played wallyball last year and found out about the tournament while looking for volleyball

Senior guard Andre Banks goes to the basket for two of his 14 points in Iowa's 86-75 win over Ohio State Saturday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Banks hitting stride as season heats up

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

In the past three years at Iowa, senior guard Andre Banks did not fully reach his potential.

"Then came 1986. He's really on top of the game right now. He's really playing well for us," Iowa Coach George Raveling said. "I think he's playing as well or better than any point guard in the Big Ten."

During his 29 minutes of playing time, Banks contributed 14 points in Iowa's 86-75 victory over Ohio State Saturday. The senior was five-of-eight from the field and four-of-six from the line.

"I went out there and played as hard as I could. Coach has a lot of confidence in me and he gave me an assignment to do, and I'd like to go out there and achieve my goals," Banks said.

"One thing that's overlooked about Andre is how infrequent he turns over the ball considering how much he handles the ball," Raveling said.

WHEN BANKS ARRIVED at Iowa from Mendel Catholic in Chicago, he was playing the forward position. It took time, but Banks has made the full adjustment to the point guard position.

"Andre went from a high school forward to playing the most difficult position at point guard.

Basketball

Point guard is the extension of the coach," Raveling said. "A lot of people in the state were very critical of Andre at that position. There was a lot of pressure, but he let his actions do the talking, won everyone over and shut up the critics."

"Coach has wanted me to play the point guard position, which is leadership on the team. That's something I enjoy doing and so far I've been playing pretty good basketball, but I feel that I could give 15 or 20 percent more effort," Banks said.

Iowa defeated Ohio State the same way they defeated Indiana last Thursday, by making the shots and applying pressure.

"WE JUST WENT OUT there (against Indiana), got a couple breaks and were up by 10-12 points. I didn't even know the score was like that and I didn't expect it. Fortunately for us it happened that way," the point guard said.

"The same thing happened against Ohio State. We were down one stretch where we got a couple steals and hit a couple jump shots, and before you know it we were up double-figure

Miller quits as coach of Ohio State

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—Ohio State athletic director Rick Bay announced Monday that by "mutual agreement" Eldon Miller will step down as Buckeyes basketball coach after this season.

"With a heavy heart, I am here to make this announcement," Bay told a news conference. "At this time yesterday, there was no question in my mind we were not going to resolve this problem until after the end of the season."

Bay said, however, Miller came to his office Monday morning and expressed a desire to resolve the situation immediately.

"It was then we agreed to announce this would be his last season as the Ohio State men's basketball coach. I think Eldon felt, given a lack of support in the community and certain restrictions, he was not able to take the program any further."

BAY SAID HE AND Miller had discussed the situation before last Thursday night's game against Minnesota, in which the Buckeyes lost, 70-65, to a Gopher team minus five suspended players. The Buckeyes also lost

Saturday at Iowa.

"We discussed the future in general," Bay said. "I felt it would arise again but not until after the season was over. The Minnesota game had no bearing on it one way or another."

Bay said Miller did not resign, nor was he fired, but his termination came by "mutual agreement."

"Eldon said he would not resign because he did not like the word resign," Bay said. "He said it sounded like he was quitting. I told him I wasn't going to fire him because I don't like the word fire."

Asked if there had been pressure placed on him by a "major contributor" to the university to get rid of Miller, Bay said: "If a major contributor did that, we would be looking for a new major contributor, not a new coach. Ohio State University is not for sale."

Hawks giving fans 'something to see'

By Steve Williams

The Iowa men's swimming team has been doing everything possible to get noticed, and this weekend's win over No. 16 Indiana might have been just what the doctor ordered.

"In swimming, we tend to put a lot on the shoulders of the fans," Iowa assistant Coach Eric MacDonald said. "The only way for non-revenue sports to survive is to give the fans something to see."

This weekend against Indiana, the fans definitely had something to see.

Escorted by a quartet of bagpipers, Iowa Coach Glenn Patton and his troops made their way into the limelight. Then, while the Iowa pep band played the Iowa fight song, and Herky the Hawkeye waddled around the pool wearing flippers, several members of the team removed their robes, revealing large black numbers which had been painted on their backs.

"IT'S A LOT different than what I'm used to," Hawkeye freshman John Linxwiler said. "In high school, my friends would come to a meet, and wouldn't be able to tell who I was in the pool. Now people can see who you are, kind of like football."

"I think it really adds to the excitement of the meet," sophomore Mark Stori said. "It gets me pumped up to swim, and gets the fans involved as well."

The Hawkeyes donned numbers earlier in the season, during a meet with highly-touted Southern Illinois, and have been wearing them ever since.

In addition, they also wear numbered swim trunks, and T-shirts with name and number across the back. To further aid the fans, the numbers have been printed in the programs all season, so that swimmers can be recognized while in the pool.

"THE IDEA came about when a friend of mine, Steve Richardson, came to one of the swimming meets and complained he couldn't tell one swimmer from another," MacDonald said. "After he suggested the idea, we kicked it around a little bit and decided to give it a try."

But for visiting teams who have had to watch the backs of the Iowa swimmers all season, the idea isn't all that new, according to two opposing coaches.

"Numbers have been used to identify swimmers in long distance events for a number of years," Indiana Coach James (Doc) Counsilman said. "There have been teams to try it before, but it hasn't gone over, and I don't think it will catch on now."

"I've seen high school teams in Minnesota try it before," Minnesota Coach Dennis Dale said. "It does help fans identify swimmers, but I don't think it will catch on."

"I really think it helps me get involved," Richardson said. "It's just like the football team playing without numbers on their backs. No one would know who was who."

For some of the swimmers, however, the effects of the numbering system has gone beyond the pool.

"I've had people come up to me after a meet and tell me how well I did," junior Ed Lower said. "Tom (Williams) and Martin (Svensson) were even stopped at a football game and congratulated after the Southern Illinois meet. I've never had people recognize me before, and it feels kind of good."

Holy Cross offers counseling to players

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — Holy Cross officials Monday offered counseling to members of the football team to help them cope with the suicide of their coach, whose life was marked by personal tragedy.

"The team obviously is comprised of very young men," school spokesman Gregg Burke said. "Death is a very hard thing to understand. A violent death of someone they respected so much is even harder to deal with."

Coach Rick Carter, 42, was found dead in his home by his son Sunday morning. He apparently hanged himself.

"Coach Carter always told us we are a family and we consider this a family problem. We just want to educate the youngsters as to the opportunities available for students for counseling or anything they might need," Burke said.

Neither the school nor officials would speculate on reasons for the suicide. But Carter had apparently been shaken by the death of his father, Cloyd, in August. In addition, Carter's mother, Henrietta, is seriously ill.

Cancer victim most courageous athlete

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (UPI) — A Northeast Philadelphia man who twice overcame cancer to play basketball for Philadelphia Textile College was named Most Courageous Athlete of 1985 Monday by the Philadelphia Sports Writers Association.

Ed Mostak, 22, received the award at the association's annual dinner in Cherry Hill.

During the 1984-85 season, Mostak was the sixth man for Textile and averaged 4.3 points per game, despite having lost a lung to cancer, a PSWA spokesman said.

Mostak, now an accountant for Conrail, played for the Rams as a freshman in the 1980-81 season before undergoing surgery for cancer of the testicle.

Mostak was back in the starting lineup the following season, averaging 9 points and 8.4 rebounds a game. But just before the NCAA playoffs, he collapsed during practice and was taken to the hospital, where he was diagnosed as having lung cancer.

Bear Bryant selected for hall of fame

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bear Bryant, winner of 326 games in almost 40 years as a coach, was a unanimous choice Monday for the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame.

Bryant died in 1983, 37 days after retiring as coach at Alabama, where he had been an institution since 1958.

Starting his coaching career at Maryland in 1945, Bryant also coached at Kentucky and Texas A&M before moving on to Alabama. He compiled a total record of 326-106-7.

Bryant surpassed Amos Alonzo Stagg's record of 315 victories for a college football coach, but his mark since has been broken by Eddie Robinson of Grambling.

Bryant will be inducted to the Hall during an Alabama home game next fall in Tuscaloosa and will be saluted at the Foundation's annual awards dinner in New York Dec. 9.

Two Hawks capture all-star tourney titles

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

A pair of No. 1-ranked Iowa wrestlers contributed to a 26-9 win for the West team in the Amateur Wrestling News East-West All-Star tournament in Stillwater, Okla. Monday night.

A third Iowa wrestler, however, suffered a loss to a top-rated wrestler.

Hawkeye Jim Heffernan, rated No. 1 by the AWN, broke a 6-6 tie with a win by injury default over third-ranked Scott Turner of North Carolina State at 150 pounds.

Turner injured his back when Heffernan took him to the mat in the second period. Turner used an injury timeout, but was unable to continue and the match ended at the 3:48 mark.

ROYCE ALGER, Iowa's No. 3-ranked 158-pounder, followed Heffernan for the West, losing 5-1 to top-rated Greg Elinsky of Penn State. Alger had beaten Elinsky once and drew with him once earlier this season.

The third Hawkeye wrestler, top-ranked Marty Kistler, took to the mat at 167 and pounded No. 4 John Monaco of Montclair (N.J.) State, 19-6, to give the West a 17-9 lead.

Iowa assistant Coach Mark Johnson, who accompanied the Hawkeye wrestlers to Stillwater, said following the meet that Kistler was the most impressive wrestler on either squad.

"Marty Kistler was totally dominating in his match," Johnson said. "They didn't have an outstanding wrestler award, but if they did, it would have gone to Marty."

AT WEIGHTS NOT involving Iowa wrestlers: Utah State's Alfred Castro (rated 4th) upset Tim Wright (No. 1) of Southern Illinois, 6-5 at 118; Alan Grammer (No. 2) of Southern Illinois dropped Bill Kelly (No. 5) of Iowa State at 126, 9-7; at 134 Nick Neville (No. 3) of Oklahoma decisioned Southern Illinois' Steve Stearns (unranked), 6-0.

Also, Peter Yozzo (No. 3) of Lehigh knocked off Joe Gibbons (No. 1) at 142, 15-10; Oklahoma's Melvin Douglas (No. 1) decisioned Wayne Catan (No. 2) of Syracuse, 7-3; Dan Chaid (No. 4) of Oklahoma nipped Jim Beichner (No. 5) of Clarion (Pa.), 6-2; and at heavyweight Oklahoma State's Tom Erikson (No. 1) decisioned Andy Schwab (No. 3) of Syracuse, 6-2.

coach would begin immediately. "The problem is somewhat complicated right now by the fact most coaches we would be interested in talking to are involved in their seasons."

The Buckeyes are 10-9 this season, including 4-5 in the Big Ten. Miller has a 167-113 record since taking over as Ohio State coach in 1976 after the retirement of Fred Taylor.

information. The group plays seriously every Sunday and decided to have some fun when they entered the tournament. "We didn't practice, we just relaxed and weren't so serious," Schutt said. "As you can see, strategy doesn't really pay off."

ONE OF THE hardest things about playing wallyball seems to be adjusting to the court after playing volleyball. "You have to keep on your toes to play the ball off the wall," Freking said. "It's also tough to restrain yourself." "The shortness of the court makes it difficult," Telfer elaborated. "You have to be careful not to hit it out of bounds, plus you have to be patient and wait for a good set."

The unlimited hit rule adds another dimension to the game. "It's much more fun than volleyball because of the unlimited hits," Schwarz said. "You can hit it back and forth between each other and wait for a better set." Peter Berryman, a member of the second-place Raspberries, feels the rule makes the game much more difficult. "It's hard to defend it, they can get in a shot every time," he said.

As to which sport the players prefer, the reactions were mixed. "It's a blast to play," said Schutt. "I think it's a toss up between the two. Wallyball is good to fine tune your volleyball skills." Most of the Raspberries didn't seem to take the loss too hard. "We don't mind being the New England Patriots of wallyball," Berryman quipped. "It just doesn't pay as much."

points and just tried to keep the pressure on."

The two victories might be the best back-to-back performances the Hawkeyes have had this year, but being midway through the season, Banks believes his team could do better.

"We played well both nights but I still don't think we've reached our potential, I still think we could do better," Banks said. "We had a pretty good first half (of the season). We finished six and three but this race is a long way from being over, and we must come out and do better than what we're doing now."

Piersall, Williams named to coaching staff by Cubs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Controversial baseball figure Jimmy Piersall and former Chicago Cubs' great Billy Williams have been named to the coaching staff for the 1986 season, the team announced Monday.

Piersall, 56, a former major league outfielder who has worked as a sports broadcaster the past several years, will be the team's spring-training outfielder instructor for the Cubs' major league and minor league squads.

Williams, 47, who ranks among the Cubs' all-time offensive leaders and fell only four votes short of entry to baseball's Hall of Fame this year, will serve as the Cubs' major league batting instructor, a team spokesman said.

Piersall, who was kicked out of the Chicago White Sox' broadcast booth in 1983 because of his "vitriolic" attacks on management, will spend his time evenly between the Cubs' major and minor league teams.

Williams, who also served as a Cubs' hitting instructor from 1980 to 1982 before joining the Oakland A's, will be the major league clubs' full-time hitting instructor, the spokesman said.

"We feel a number of our top minor league prospects are outfielders. We know Jimmy can help them develop," Cubs' President and General Manager Dallas Green said in a prepared statement.

"We're also glad to have Billy back with us. He was a great hitter and knows how to teach hitting. We've got a good offensive club and Billy should make it even better."

Chicago Cubs' Manager Jim Frey also indicated he was "excited" about working with both Piersall and Williams, the spokesman said.

PIERSALL, who launched his own radio talk show after leaving the White Sox following his three-year stint in the broadcast booth with colleague Harry Caray, played in the major leagues 17 years, compiling a remarkable .997 fielding percentage.

But Piersall, who suffered a nervous breakdown during his baseball career and later wrote about it in "Fear Strikes Out," often found himself in the doghouse for criticizing the White Sox players' ability in the field and Tony LaRussa's management style.

"(There had been) a vitriolic attack on the manager and organization that was totally unwarranted and unprofessional," the White Sox said in a telegram notifying Piersall he was being dismissed as color commentator of Sportsvision, the pay-TV channel originated by Sox President Eddie Einhorn.

PIERSALL, who spent the bulk of his career as a center-fielder for the Boston Red Sox, Cleveland Indians and California Angels, launched his own radio show after leaving the Sox, and also authored "The Truth Hurts."

Caray also left the White Sox broadcast booth after landing a job with WGN, the Chicago-based superstation that broadcasts Cubs' games nationwide. Caray frequently asked Piersall to sit in as a guest during broadcasts from Wrigley Field.

Williams, who is among the all-time Cub legends, played with the National League club for 16 years before joining the Oakland A's in 1975. He spent two more seasons in the major leagues before retiring in 1976.

An outfielder, Williams compiled a .290 lifetime batting average with 426 home runs, 434 doubles and 1,475 RBI. He had 205 hits during the 1970 campaign — a career high.

Ryan's replacement Tobin denies working for Saints

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — Vince Tobin, the Chicago Bears' new defensive coordinator, said Monday he did not accept a similar job with the New Orleans Saints last week.

Tobin, 42, was hired during the weekend by the Bears to replace Buddy Ryan, the architect of Chicago's Super Bowl-winning defense.

Jim Finks, the former general manager of the Bears and current GM of the Saints, announced Saturday that Tobin was resigning as the Saints' defensive coordinator.

"Let me make something perfectly clear right now," Tobin said at a news conference at the Bears' training facility. "I never signed a contract with the Saints so there was no way I could be construed as resigning."

Tobin, brother of Bears player personnel director Bill Tobin, said he did not even make an oral commitment to take a position with New Orleans.

after Ryan had resigned to take the coaching job of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Chicago built the league's strongest defense under Ryan and several Bears players have suggested the team will not be able to match its 1985 success under a new coach.

"I CAN'T really have much control over that," Tobin said. "We are going to review what we have here and we're going to do things differently. But that's been set up already by Buddy's leaving."

Ditka, who was publicly at odds with Ryan in the past, said he would allow Tobin the opportunity to review what assistants he would like to retain. He also said the responsibility for the Bears' success on defense should not be placed on one coach.

"I want Vince to be 100 percent comfortable," Ditka said. "We had five defensive players in the Pro Bowl. We might have seven next year. But that's because we have top players, not because of anything a coach will do."

Tobin said he would consider using the "46" defense as a part of his defensive scheme next year.

"It won't be called the '46,'" Tobin said. "I think all coaches are thieves. We all want to use a little bit of what other people have used and the '46' would be a part of that."

Tobin said he was given complete control over the defense and welcomed the challenge to keep the defensive standards high.

"It's a high profile position," he said. "Our job is to get back to the Super Bowl."

Gold-medalist Lewis now focusing on acting career

NEW YORK (UPI) — Since winning his four Olympic gold medals in Los Angeles two summers ago, Carl Lewis has maintained a light schedule — athletically speaking.

The man acclaimed by many as the world's greatest athlete has forsaken track and field somewhat to concentrate on his acting and singing careers. Lewis just completed work on a film, "Dirty Laundry," in which he has a small role as a plain clothes policeman. The movie is scheduled to be released this summer, and Lewis said he is in the process of negotiating for a part in another film.

THIS WEEK, Lewis will take time from his busy schedule to compete in Saturday's Vitalis-U.S. Olympic Invitational at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J. Lewis will compete in the long jump as well as sing the national anthem, for the second straight year, and do television commentary for WFLA.

The Olympic Invitational will be the second and final indoor meet Lewis will appear at this year. Last Saturday he ran sprints in Dallas and finished second to Emmitt King.

Lewis, who holds the indoor long jump record at 28 feet, 10 1/4 inches, said he easily should be able to make 28 feet this week.

While his desire to pursue acting and singing have cut into his athletic career, Lewis said his enthusiasm for track and field is still high.

"I FEEL I CAN still improve," Lewis said Monday through a telephone hookup from Houston at the weekly track and field writers' luncheon. "In the past, I've had a lot of dinner banquets to attend and this year I'm doing other things. But when the outdoor season comes, I'm going to clear everything out for that."

Lewis, coming off his worst outdoor season since high school days, said he is anxious to make up for his injury-plagued season. Despite his sub-par year, Lewis is still recognized as the world's top sprinter and long jumper.

"Last year I was injured half the season," Lewis said, "and nobody took the initiative to become No. 1, especially in the sprints."

He has not set his outdoor schedule yet, but Lewis said he plans on competing in the sprints at the Texas Southern Relays in March. In the interim, Lewis will be looking to cut a record and he will be competing in the annual Superstars competition televised by ABC later this month in Key Biscayne, Fla.

Lewis, 24, expects to go out for the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, but those plans could change.

"I'm going to take it one year at a time," Lewis, who captured gold medals in the 100 and 200 meters, 4 by 400 relays and long jump, said. "If things keep going the way they are, I expect to try out for the '88 Olympic team. But there's no guarantee."

Zoeller wins PGA tournament

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Fuzzy Zoeller was declared the winner of the PGA's $600,000 National Pro-Am Monday after angry players urged tournament officials to call off the rain-shortened event.

The Pro-Am's final round was scrubbed Monday morning after a combination of heavy rain, high winds and hail turned Pebble Beach's greens into rivers and bunkers into swimming pools.

However, the sun burst through the clouds just as PGA and tournament officials decided to cancel the round. They then decided to try to play Tuesday.

The decision touched off an angry protest from the Tour players, led by veterans Raymond Floyd and Peter Jacobsen.

"This is a pro-am and really doesn't follow the normal rules," Jacobsen said. "There are some prominent businessmen who have their jets warming up at the airport. What happens to their pros if they leave. They don't even pick up a check."

"ENOUGH IS ENOUGH. If they wanted to go 72 holes, we could have continued to play this afternoon. We're all big boys. The course isn't going to get any drier."

Poor weather had already resulted in the postponement of Friday's second round.

Jacobsen said the decision to play may have united players to the idea they should have more say in how the tournaments are run. Currently, the players have little or no say in decisions by event sponsors.

"This has never happened before," he said of the players' protest. "Maybe this is the start of something."

TONY SILLS, who ended up tied for third, said a continuation would have been unfair to the Tour rookies. The Tour is scheduled to open play at the Andy Williams-San Diego Open on Thursday.

"It's not fair to the younger players," he said. "They are playing in a tournament later this week (Thursday) on two courses they are not familiar with."

After hearing the players' complaints and checking on course and weather conditions for Tuesday, tournament director Lou Russo decided to call the event.

"We thought it best to call the tournament," he said. "We will pay the full purse."

The victory, worth $108,000, was Zoeller's first of the year. He also picked up $6,000 for first place in the Pro-Am portion he won with partner Mike Evans.

The cancellation made the initial AT&T National Pro-Am the first tournament to be shortened to 54 holes since last year's USF&G Classic in New Orleans.

"I'm very happy with the decision," said Zoeller, who posted his eighth Tour victory. "I think it was the best for everyone involved."

Zoeller's score for the 54-hole tournament was 11-under, 205. Payne Stewart came in second at 6-under 210. Sills, Tom Watson and Mark Weibe were third at 5-under 211.

Keyboard Society brings gifted artist

By Lisa D. Norton Arts/entertainment Editor

HERE IS A splendid new group in town — the Iowa City Early Keyboard Society.

Actually, they're not so new; they've been around since June 1985, when a dedicated group of early music lovers joined together to form this society.

They staged their first concert in October of last year. Sunday night they presented their second concert, featuring Barbara Weiss of Minneapolis, Minn.

I especially like the Domenico

Scarlatti Sonatas — K. 141, 516 and 24 — which were played just before intermission. These pieces exhibit some of the best of the baroque keyboard characteristics — lightning fast chromatic passages and intricate contrapuntal writing.

A highlight of the second half was Jacques Duphy's Chaconne in F, a passionate piece of progressing harmonic variations. Duphy lived during the mid- and late-eighteenth century, a time which saw the dawning of the Classical era and style of composition.

THE REAL SHOW STOPPER, though, was Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue. As I listened to the harmonics of this fantastic piece, I couldn't imagine it played on anything but a harpsichord. The range of tonal colors emitted by this instrument are far beyond that of the modern piano.

The next concert of the Iowa City Early Keyboard Society will be April 20 at the Preucil School of Music.

'Best of Times' never develops consistency of style, character

By Merwyn Grote
Assistant Arts/entertainment Editor

ONE DARK NOVEMBER night at 9:22 p.m., in the small hamlet of Taft, Calif., on the muddled high school football field, there occurred an incident that would live in infamy — or at least in the souls of a generation of Taftians.

In the big game against their arch-rivals, the Bakersfield Tigers, the Taft Rockets were within seconds of scoring the goal that would finally allow them to win a game against their mighty opponents. Reno Hightower, the Rockets' star quarterback, snaps the ball into a long high arc upfield — just seconds before a bone-crushing tackle that ends forever his hopes of playing in the big leagues. The ball sails effortlessly through the air, marking a majestic path right into the hands of third-stringer Jack Dundee, who promptly stumbles and drops the ball.

THE GAME IS lost, and those few stupid moments on the field seemingly will haunt those involved forever.

Life goes on, and 13 years later, Jack remains an extremely unhappy man as he is constantly reminded that he is the guy "who dropped the ball." Hightower is semi-resigned to his life as a semi-successful van customizer. Taft itself has sunk into a state of "lethargy," as Jack is fond of pointing out, and he blames his fumble for all the town's misery and squalor.

He decides to do something about it. No doubt inspired by Rambo, Jack decides to rewrite history by regrouping his teammates and replaying the game — only presumably this time the Rockets get to win.

The Best of Times wants to be a poignant little comedy about the way petty disappointments get in the way of happiness. Jack (Robin Williams), despite a reasonably comfortable life and a loving wife, can't live down his ill-timed fumble, and Reno (Kurt Russell), though he has a flair for painting exotic vans, cannot live up to his reputation as a star jock. To be haunted by something as insignificant as a high school football game is a nice dramatic device, but the film almost dictates the outcome of the replayed game from the very beginning. Like Rocky Balboa's innumerable bouts, the finale is preordained.

THUS, The Best of Times relies heavily on the capabilities of its actors to create a convincing sketch of small-town pride (or lack of same) and small-time losers. Russell is nicely exasperated as the scraggly team star gone slightly to seed. Pamela Reed, as his spirited wife who has outgrown his teenaged obsessions, and Holly Palance, as Jack's sensual but pragmatic wife, are believably warm and sympathetic in parts that could have been shrewd.

But, art imitates artifice as it is Williams who drops the ball. Playing a distant cousin of Mork from Ork, when it is obvious that the nerdy Dundee has more in common with T. S. Garp, Williams sets the wrong tone for the character and the film.

Williams' efforts are symptomatic of the film's major problem: it can't decide whether it wants to be satirical or subtle, thus it never establishes a consistency of style or character. The Best of Times doesn't just drop the ball, it can't decide what game it is playing.

Success hasn't spoiled jugglers

THE BIG TIME. I've often thought about how success affects those lucky few chosen for stardom.

Sunday afternoon a crowd piled into Hancher Auditorium to watch the silly antics and fantastic juggling of The Flying Karamazov Brothers, a West Coast act I remember from when they were doing street shows, just hoping someone would laugh, listen and watch. Now after their role in the Michael Douglas movie The Jewel of the Nile, they're touring the country playing the big houses — still wearing the black pants and hats, still donning long locks, still telling some very bad jokes.

FOR TWO HOURS they juggled and kept up an endless repartee. Three of the Karamazovs appeared first on stage, juggling their (trademark) colored pins — red, yellow and blue, one color for each Karamazov. A fourth Karamazov joined the action by sliding adeptly down a rope that dropped from above the stage. He juggled right in with the rest — the crowd loved it. Then another rope appeared and suddenly a body crashed into sight and onto the stage. Gasp! but then — a roar from the crowd as the fifth Karamazov stepped from behind the curtain. This set the tone for an afternoon of "juggling and cheap theatrics," as the program billed their show.

There was a pie in the face for the Champ when he failed to successfully juggle the objects brought in by the audience. Sam (green) Karamazov registered the claps and yells with his arm like the needle of a meter to determine the three items that would be juggled. There was the head and shoulders of a mannequin, a motorcycle helmet, a plastic swan (Woolworth's style), a shoe, a bag of margarine and more. The winners were a mace, a water balloon and a glass of red wine — ahl, such a good attempt. Ahl, three such good attempts, but alas, a pie in the face.

THE AFTERNOON rolled on in this fashion. The only serious defect was an inability to hear many of the Karamazovs' lines. Volume that once worked for street theater and small houses was below the level necessary for an auditorium the size of Hancher, so many of the witty remarks were lost in space — not such a good thing for a group that depends at least in part on audience reaction to the vocal show.

The juggling, though, was outstanding. None of this simple three balls, two hands, air between. There was one sequence of improvisation in which three Karamazovs stood opposite one Karamazov and the three threw their pins to the one in any order they desired. He (the Champ) fired them back. There was a lot of dropping of pins, but the Karamazovs integrated it right into the routine.

These guys really are great — a highly unique show that evoked plenty of healthy laughs. And how has success affected them? Well, after the show they simply walked out on stage, sat down on the edge and welcomed people, signing programs, telling stories, shaking hands. Randy (the Blonde one, as he often calls himself) is the most charismatic of the bunch, and the crowd clumped most heavily at his feet, but the others, too, doled out their autographs and personal attention. It's pretty amazing that after two hours of hard work, these guys would offer yet more of themselves, selflessly and with pleasure — that is one mark of a true entertainer.

The Colorado String Quartet
Chamber ensemble
Boulder, Colorado

With their fresh faces and frilly white blouses, they certainly look innocent enough—and in fact the Colorado String Quartet can execute a sunny work such as Beethoven's Quartet in A, op. 19, no. 5, with the sweetness and light touch traditionally associated with female chamber ensembles. But to hear their past, sharply etched interpretation of Haydn's Quartet in G, op. 33, or the sense of mounting urgency they convey in a composition by Debussy, is to understand that myths about women musicians can't survive an evening with Julie Rosenfeld, born October 3, 1958; Deborah Redding, born July 2, 1954; Francesca Martin, born June 14, 1956; and Sharon Prator, born March 20, 1955. Bold, gutsy, and brazenly beautiful are reviews that crop up regularly in their reviews: the same which ranges from classical to sometimes self-confident contemporary works. Their controversial approach is entirely appropriate: all four have performed as soloists with major symphonies, and Rosenfeld is the quartet's most intense player, has served as concertmaster of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Institute Orchestra under Leonard Bernstein. But what distinguishes the CSQ and puts it in a league with the older, all-male Emerson String Quartet (based in New York's Lincoln Center) is the sense of camaraderie that they've been having since they got together at the University of Colorado in 1976. As one reviewer put it, "They are individuals, but they seem to be playing to a common cause." They have also been playing to widespread acclaim since winning the prestigious Naumburg Chamber Music Award in 1981.
