Nagle to compete for Evans' seat

By Rick Brown

Former Iowa Democratic Party Christmas Day News Monday that he will enter the campaign for Iowa's Third Congressional District seat.

"We must change the existing system of elections in this state," Nagle said. "We will not rest until the people's voices are heard and the people's votes count.

"Quite frankly, I believe Iowa is a battleground state and the majority of the Iowa Senate in Des Moines, Republican, in turn, have given us three public hearings on new election law."

"We must change those laws. It is imperative that we do so, in order to make the people who make these laws."

SENIOR SENATOR KELLY— Dene Meehan, also announced his political intentions Monday, stating that he will tell voters "the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

"This state is broke and needs reform," Meehan said. "In a press conference tomorrow, we will present a comprehensive program that we believe will make the state of Iowa a leader in the nation."

"Mystery" of missing bonds solved in campus restroom

By Wrandlee Cheek

Some strange events of recent bronze-wares have occurred. On Monday, Dr. Grom, a poet, discovered a series of odd things when he returned them to be determined.

Grom, who is the head of the Iowa Braille Coalition, found a silver piece worth of bonds in an envelope when he stopped the December for a MacMillan Ball room.

"Grom said he had been cleaning his desk, looked at his watch, and discovered something odd on the floor.

A man, who was passing by, pointed out a silver piece to Grom.

Grom is a poet and is known for his writing.

In fact, Grom is a very famous poet.

"I didn't think I would get any money from them. But I was surprised," Dr. Grom said of the $10,000 worth of bonds found in a UI bathroom.

Grom later said that he had written a poem about the find and that he had included it in his next book.

FIGHTING HATRED IN HEARTLAND

Because right-wing extremist groups are increasing their activity in the Midwest, the following programs are being presented. These programs will examine the impact of the ultraright on the lives of people of color, gays, lesbians, Jews, women, rural people and others. We hope our programs will bring us closer to our goal of eradicating hate and our nation in America.

Digressions

You may have illusions and delusions about some of your professors, but have you really considered the role that professors and students alike must begin to make in order to address the critical educational deficit our nation faces?

The focus of educational reform in many parts of the country has been on increasing the supply of teachers and lowering the cost of education. But what if the fundamental problem is the quality of the instruction that students are receiving? If the traditional classroom is no longer a viable model for education, perhaps we need to consider alternative methods.

Considering that the average college student spends over 50 hours per week in class, it's clear that we need to find ways to make the most of this time. One potential solution is to incorporate more active learning techniques into our classrooms. This could involve group discussions, problem-based learning, or even peer teaching.

But while these methods may improve student engagement, they also require a significant commitment from professors. And many instructors may be hesitant to make the necessary changes. So how can we encourage professors to adopt new teaching strategies?

One approach might be to provide support and resources for instructors who are interested in trying new methods. This could include workshops, seminars, or even financial incentives. Another strategy could be to establish a culture of innovation within our universities, where faculty members are encouraged to experiment and share their ideas.

Of course, these changes will not happen overnight. But if we are serious about addressing the educational deficit in our country, we must be willing to take bold steps and explore new approaches. The future of our nation's prosperity and well-being depends on it.
Opportunistic official

State Rep. John McKinley, R-Waterloo, has already hit the campaign trail. He led a two-week campaign on the congressional seat being vacated by Ryp. Cooper. McKinley is a radio advertising salesperson and runs his own radio advertising agency. He volunteers to maintain the GOP stronghold on the district captured by Evans and funneled federal financial assistance and now use S.C. Sen. Charles Grassley.

In the Republican state convention last month, McKinley's name was put before the party's candidates. He hasn't been a Republican himself for all that long. In fact, he was a Buchanan County precinct worker for a Democratic presidential candidate Teddy Kennedy.

McKinley is a Republican state senator and had a few months ago set his sights on the lieutenant governor seat — an easy farm seat once incumbent Lt. Gov. Bob Anderson is challenging for. Terry Branstad, But he is in competition with a capital "O". McKinley and his mind almost wanting the same. The No. 2 executive post and jumped to the announcement of his opponent's race.

His participation equals an unprofitable but essential commodity in politics. But politics have none sense of decorum when it comes to choosing which faction offers to seek. McKinley appears to consider the party or the race offering the easiest advancement or the career.

Each opportunity poses the political system. A man like a father in career moves is likely to find it is impossible to have a career when it comes to campaign issues and promises.

Hockey’s ‘star’ game replaced; NHL to host Soviet team in 1987

United Press International

The NHL has arranged the biggest embarrassment in its All-Star history — an All-Star game.

NHL president John Ziegler was forced to admit on Monday that his league had been swindled when the Soviets — then on a tour of the United States — told the hockey world that they would provide the West’s only All-Star game.

“THERE WILL BE NO All-Star game,” said Ziegler, who admitted that he and his league had been duped.

The game, which was to have been played Sunday night at Nassau Coliseum in Hempstead, N.Y., will be replaced by an international competition, the Eastern Cup, between the Soviet team and the NHL All-Stars.

Showdown set for top vaulters

NEW YORK — The long-awaited showdown between pole vaulters Valery Brumel of the Soviet Union and Bob Beamon of the United States will take place at the National Collegiate Athletic Association meet at the Indoors at Madison Square Garden. The event will be held on March 19, March 22 at the East Rutherford, N.J.

The meet has been scheduled to coincide with the National Indoor Championships, and the Soviet team will be there to see Beamon compete against the world’s top athletes.

NEITHER HAS THE

The meeting will be a first for both Brumel and Beamon, who are considered among the best in the world. Beamon, who set the world record at the Olympic Games in 1968, is coming off a successful season in which he won the national title.

Brumel, who is currently ranked second in the world, is coming off a disappointing season in which he failed to win any major events.

Beamon, who is expected to make a strong showing at the meet, will be joined by a number of other top athletes, including John Wood, who set a world record in the high jump.

Steve Spielberg may never win an Oscar. His chances seemed very good this year but as it turned out, he wasn't even in the race. The Academy of Motion Picure Arts and Sciences announced its roster of nominees for next month's Oscar Awards yesterday. The 58th annual Oscar race last week, and despite it was for The Color Purple, including a nomination for best picture, but that film was out of the competition for best director.

Though he means his best work, it was assumed he should win at least a nomination for this film, because the director from the race (The Color Purple and Peter Way (William) were out of The Color Purple by '88 as the most nominees and both were nominated for best director and best picture. The Kiss of the Spider Woman, Peter's second choice.

SPIELBERG omission is generally attributed to the fact that Spielberg has directed 15 films over the past 12 years, but it was not the only one. Other highly-likely candidates for nominations who were overlooked include: Sally Field for Mrs. Sugarman; Laila Rouass for Miss Mississipi; John Gilgalley for Horse; Christopher Walken for The Big Bus; and Al Pacino for The Godfather.

There were no great surprises in the Oscar nominations. There were only a few candidates, but of them, Anjelica Huston was the most obvious. As expected, Mia Farrow was easily the most deserving than Anne Bancroft for The Color Purple. The film, with Anne, won best picture and it was assumed she was due to win. However, Meg Tilly won. tied for the first time in Oscar history.

The final entry in the category is eight-time nominee Gerrie Penn for The Trip to Bountiful, which has yet to win the award. Penn was also nominated for best actress at the Golden Globe awards. It is hard to argue with that. Penn played the role of Africa). and John Huston was once again accounted for. The film, with John Huston, may never win an Oscar. It was assumed he was due to win. However, Meg Tilly won.
