Regents risk approving more bonds

By Kevin Brown

WASHINGTOEDU—The Senate ratified a U.S. treaty with the Philippines, voting 90-0 to make it final after a 31-year campaign to gain recognition of the nation.

The Senate gave final approval Wednesday to the treaty, which was signed in 1966, by President Lyndon B. Johnson. The treaty was first submitted to the Senate in 1965.

The treaty, which was signed in 1966, by President Lyndon B. Johnson, provides for the United States to recognize the Philippines as an independent and sovereign state.

At the end of the debate, Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, said: "This is a historic day for the Philippines and for the United States. It is a day of pride for all Americans."
House passes Lotto amendment

Legislative update

Other Republicans said the state should spend those funds to help gambling companies avoid the lotto, which they described as "one of the most addictive items of vice." "I think we have our values all wrong," said Rep. Neil McEnan, R-Minn. "You cannot make gambling, which is a form of vice, more attractive by giving money to gambling companies." "They would be better off if we had a lottery." "I don't know what the state is doing," said Rep. John Doolittle, R-Minn. "It's a waste of money.

The House passed another bill Wednesday aimed at strengthening the penalties for gambling on the books.

The bill, which excludes only investors for employment as police officers, makes it a serious misdemeanor to sell or possess a lottery ticket. Currently, this offense is only considered a minor act.

Newspapers of the world refer to the proposed lottery as a "lottery on steroids," but Rep. John Doolittle, R-Minn., said, "I don't want my family members to have to pay extra for this type of insurance." "I don't want our family members to have to pay extra for this type of insurance.

The problem is that the bundled winner who already sold the winning lottery ticket to an employee of the Immigration and Naturalization Service has been caught.

Carrynova, who was convicted of a minor act of fraud and attempted murder in 1980, said, "I only wanted to do this to fill my pockets."

Carrynova said she was charged with possession of the winning lottery ticket and the Immigration and Naturalization Service has been ordered to pay her the prize money.

Carrynova is eligible for parole in 2002.

City Council informally approves indoor pool

The Iowa City Parks and Recreation Commission has recommended that $300,000 be spent on an indoor swimming pool and that $600,000 be spent on repairs to the existing pool. The commission also recommends that the pool be located near the existing pool.

ACCORDING to City Manager Commercial, the first step of the committee is to begin looking for locations for the existing pool. The committee hopes to have the new pool ready to use by 2009. The city will then begin looking for possible sites for the new pool. The city also hopes to begin looking for possible sites for the new pool. UI students protest Contra aid

By Steve Golobite
Staff writer

On the heels of President Ronald Reagan's request for $30 million in military aid for Contra rebels, some UI students demonstrated Monday night to protest American intervention in Central America. At a quiet, vigil Wednesday night, some added their voices to a growing chorus of others who said that Reagan's plan was only an attempt to "keep the dice rolling" for American intervention.

But after the demonstration died down, UI senior Joe Riley, 20, of Iowa City, confided that he and some friends were against America's involvement in Central America because "it's a Spanish human rights violation and it's all done under the guise of fighting communism."

Riley was one of about 100 people who took part in a vigil at the corner of Clinton and Washington streets in Iowa City Wednesday night. Setting up posters and signing a petition calling for the U.S. government to stop funding the Nicaraguan rebels with arms and expertise, the group pledged their support for the Nicaraguan people "for the American government to stop funding."

"We've had more than a few people who are against us, Riley said. "At a time when they're carrying guns, it could happen that people want to know why we are doing this in Central America."

As he collected signatures for a petition addressed to the Nicaraguan government, Riley also explained that the vigil was "a way of showing the people's grasp, trying to get the Reagan administration to realize there's a problem that needs to be solved."

Others participating in the vigil were against American intervention because "it's getting out of control with no end in sight, and we're all against the idea of supporting groups that are against the American people," said UI junior John Stone, 19, of West Des Moines, who added that "we're fighting for the American people."

While many pedestrians chose to ignore the small protest, others stopped to ask for information or pledge their support.

Glass-laced Gerber food discovered in three states

ATLANTA (AP) — More glass was found Tuesday in baby food products than normally happens, and officials said it could lead to a recall of Gerber products nationwide.

The problems arose in the form of small pieces of glass that appeared to be in jars of Gerber strained peaches, and there were reports of two similar complaints on Monday.

In addition, a shipment of Gerber strained peaches on Tuesday that had been delayed due to the problems appeared to have been tampered with as well.

“We have received reports of small pieces of glass in Gerber baby food products,” said William J. Harrell, a chemical engineer with the Food and Drug Administration.

“ar the Food and Drug Administration, we have not yet determined the cause of these problems,” he said.

Investigations are now being conducted to determine the source of the glass pieces, and the FDA is working with the Michigan Department of Community Health to investigate the matter.

Michigan investigators are also looking into possible linkages between the problems in Michigan and those in other states where similar issues have been reported.

The FDA has urged consumers to check their Gerber products carefully and to return any that contain glass pieces to the store where they were purchased.

In other news, the FDA has also received reports of small glass pieces in other baby food products, including those from other manufacturers.

The agency is investigating these reports to determine the cause of the problems and to ensure the safety of all baby food products.

The FDA stresses that the tampering of products is a serious crime, and law enforcement agencies are being notified.

The agency also提醒 consumers to check the expiration dates on their Gerber products, as the products are required to be kept cool and out of direct sunlight to prevent the growth of bacteria and other contaminants.

The FDA has also noted that it is important to check the product labels for any warnings or recalls that may be relevant.

The agency is working closely with the Michigan Department of Community Health and other states to ensure that all consumers are aware of the situation and to take appropriate action to prevent further incidents.

The FDA is also encouraging consumers to report any incidents of glass pieces in Gerber products to the agency immediately.

The agency is committed to ensuring the safety of all baby food products and is taking all necessary steps to ensure the safety of consumers.

Gramm-Rudman Budget Act raises questions

One in four won't receive Pell Grant

By Terri Evans, Special to The Daily Iowan

If you aren't a Pell Grant recipient, you aren't going to college. Right? Wrong. Budget cuts won't spare Iowa's agricultural extension programs.

In the wake of the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Act, the federal budget is being pared down, and the agricultural extension programs will bear the brunt of those cuts. Extension services, which provide assistance to farmers and their families, are not spared.

But what exactly are extension services? And how do they work? Let's explore these questions.

The Extension Service

The Extension Service is a federal program that provides research-based education to farmers, ranchers, and other rural residents. It is operated by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and is based at land-grant universities across the country.

One of the main goals of the Extension Service is to help farmers make informed decisions about crop production, livestock management, and other aspects of agriculture. They also provide education on topics such as nutrition, family management, and community development.

HowExtension Services Work

The Extension Service is funded by a combination of federal, state, and local sources. Each land-grant university is responsible for providing extension services in its home state. The federal government provides some of the funding for extension programs, but states and universities also contribute money to support these programs.

Budget Cuts

The Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Act, which was signed into law in 1985, sets limits on federal spending. The act requires that the federal budget be balanced by 1991, and any deficit above that amount must be reduced by at least 2.25 percent per year until the budget is balanced.

Due to these requirements, funding for Extension programs is at risk. As of this writing, the act is not in effect, but the potential for budget cuts is still very real. The cuts could have significant implications for Extension programs across the country.

Extension Director at Iowa State University

In Iowa, the Extension Service is led by Charles Duffy. Duffy is the Extension Director at Iowa State University, and he is responsible for the overall operation of the Extension Service in the state.

Duffy said that the Extension Service in Iowa is not in danger of being cut, but he cannot rule out the possibility of cuts in the future. He noted that the act is in effect in some other states, and this could affect the funding for Extension programs in those states.

Duffy emphasized the importance of Extension programs to Iowa farmers and ranchers. He said that the programs provide valuable education and assistance, and they are essential to the success of Iowa agriculture.

Conclusion

Extension services are critical to the success of Iowa agriculture. The Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Act poses a significant threat to the funding for these programs. It is important for Iowa residents to stay informed about the potential for budget cuts and to support Extension programs in any way they can.

Comming subtractions

When the first round of cuts under the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Act go into effect March 1 they will be made by Congress from nearly everyone: the man down the street, the mailman, the worker at Walgreens, the N.H.I., Hall, Texas, and Ernst Bank. They will all be hit with a 30% reduction in next year's budget, whether they like it or not.

White personnel struggles through the icy waters the- re as the average citizens are forced to wade with the stream.

A poll published in last week's Wall Street Journal indicates 50 percent of those surveyed think Gramm- Rudman will be a good idea. Thirty percent of the respondents "don't care" about the good or poor opinion it could have on things.

However, 10 percent of those polled disagree with the opinion of the others.

The Daily Iowa has worked to relate the implica- tions of Gramm-Rudman to our readers. Guest opinions, as well as regulars Old Editor Mary Paullin, Wire Editor Dan McKeen, highlight the Iowa's effect on Iowa City, the U.S. and the government. Charts prepared by Graphics Editor Jeffrey Bedwin and Photo Editor Hyrum D. M. Van Houten will be cut from this edition on March 1.

Gramm-Rudman will affect all of us. We hope this information on those pages will help you judge for yourselves the constitutionality and magnitude of the cuts.

New radio towers are springing up in Iowa corn fields and across the rest of the country, but don't expect them to be broadcasting your favorite tunes by Staton or Mannheim. No.

The Department of Defense-owned structures are designed for a much more serious and chilling purpose - the retransmission of information and instructions for weapons.

According to Pentagon officials, the Ground Forces-Wide Emergency Network consists of 30 radio relay towers to vary command centers, warning sites and bomber bases.

A communications gap, the 30-foot towers is nearing completion on land just east of Westmeadows, Iowa, and a second set will be set up along the road from Hiroshima, we have put one and the other between the shoulders.

Word, however, that the entire nuclear destruction of our nation.

And yet senior Pentagon official Donald C. Latham insists on just such a war as though it were something that would last, weeks, or longer, and President Ronald Reagan has hinted that such a war could be "awful.

We ask ourselves whether it is possible to exist in a post-nuclear world and a worthwhile goal.

Take the time to read in all the people and the things that would be gone forever once the mushroom clouds would have risen. The loved ones, family and friends, would be destroyed.

One man's 'little part of history'
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan, in the midst of a six-day European tour, will stage a symbolic visit to the island of Grenada today for a hero's welcome as a gesture to support the anti-communist rebels.

In a drive to obfuscate the Marxist regime in Nicaragua by proclaiming the United States as a victim of communist subversion, Reagan, formulating his "commando" strategy, will lay a wreath at a marble monument to U.S. soldiers who died in the country, and hail the adoption of Marxism in the tiny West Indian nation as a "moral victory for freedom." The United States will stage a hero's welcome as a gesture to support the anti-communist rebels.

Iowa gets boost from ‘smurf’

By Laura Palm

Smurf is usually the same green in the little blue people election as Sunday morning cartoons. In this case, it’s the nickname given to Laura Neuman, a walk-on on the Lady Vols’ women’s team. During a workout, a teammate noticed Neuman, who was dressed in blue, and realized that the little blue person was the team mascot. Two years later, he is still known as Smurf.

Iowa State, Cyclones renew rivalry

The rivalry is always fierce," said Coach Bob Rydze, swim/diving coach at Iowa State, "and the Cyclones and Nebraska are very evenly matched. The Cyclones have a team right now, we are confident and ready for the challenge.

ATLANTA (AP) - Alabama head coach Nick Saban said Wednesday he will look at the University of Georgia in the Top 20 list for next season. The Georgian Bulldogs are ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press poll and No. 1 in the coaches poll.

Saban said he has discussed the possibility of playing against the Bulldogs with Alabama athletic director Mike McKinley.

"I have spoken to Coach Saban on a couple of occasions," said McKinley. "He is a great coach and a great guy, and we look forward to the possibility of playing against them in the future."

Steve McCanhy, 27, known as the '接管行于 Ohio State, has the best of the best in all of college football. While Florida's Don McNeil and Oklahoma's Barry Switzer are in the heat of the Big Eight battle, Nebraska's Bob Devaney and Oklahoma State's Eddie Robinson are vying for the Big Eight crown. Although there are many others doing equally well, these four college football teams are by far the best in the country. Nebraska, Florida, Oklahoma, and Oklahoma State are considered to be the cream of the crop in college football. The rivalry between them is fierce and intense, with each team vying for the top spot in the Big Eight conference. The four teams have a deep history of competition, with each one trying to one-up the others in terms of success and achievements. The games between them are always highly anticipated and draw a large audience, making them some of the most watched college football games in the country.

Nazi camps documented in film

By Alex Wilding-White

Nazi camps were documented in "Shoah," a film that won a 1988 Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film, which was directed by Claude Lanzmann and released in the United States.

Film

One of the features of the film that makes it unique is the total absence of historical footage. Director Claude Lanzmann, who spent 10 years making the film, felt that it was important to include footage of the camps that were shown in the film. He wanted to ensure that the film would show the history of the Holocaust in a way that could be understood by people who were not familiar with the topic.

Women
view of being a guy in a band, but being a woman." The idea of masculinity and being a woman in the mainstream is to be in a band to be in the mainstream, and to be one of the boys is to be in a band.

Bars. Men can get to bars, they can't get to Clubs. Women are not as open as men, but they're not excluded from that. Internal barter is being in a band.
"She said that despite the large number of women in Chicago who wouldn't consider themselves at all, women haven't hands that compile women. There's no opening for women outside the music to get in," she said.

For women to manage to get into a band, it's still not easy. Many women find that heartache and rejection in some capacity.
She explained, "It's really tough for girls to ask a man to be in a band, I have to work
five times harder than any guy... I don't think that there's any girls who are as much as they respect rock charts.

Raphael, who goes by the alternative, a New York City rock band, finds similar problems.
"People come to see me because of the way I look instead of the way I sound. There are only a few very classically trained musicians who play music." But there are women who are expressing interest. Raphael explained, "It's tough for women to be in a band. Many women can do it; an opportunity to be a musician in a female band is a big problem. A boy/girl band is because she says it's just seems like a natural extension of being rock 'n' roll... I wanna go out and do it." Raphael explained, "It's really tough for girls to ask a man to be in a band, I have to work
five times harder than any guy... I don't think that there's any girls who are as much as they respect rock charts.
