Local pickets halt UI's boiler project

By Kent Schuelke
Staff Writer

Local labor union members picketed outside the UI Physical Plant Monday, temporarily stopping a Des Moines construction firm's work renovating the UI's boiler system.

Officials for Cramer and Associates construction firm decided to postpone work on the project today after seeing five protesters representing the Iowa Laborers' District Council picketing outside the power plant.

The Des Moines firm has been contracted by the UI to do $252,000 worth of work on the boiler project.

Union officials claimed a temporary victory in the matter. "Their job is shut down because of our picketing," said Bill Gerhard, a local spokesman for the union.

Delmer Cramer, president of Cramer and Associates, said the dispute concerns the union's relationship with its parent firm, Cramer Brothers construction.

TIES BETWEEN the construction firm and the union were severed after 20 years because of failed contract negotiations, Cramer said.

Gerhard said members of Local 1238 are protesting at the construction site in an effort to pressure the Cramer Brothers to reopen the contract talks.

Cramer said he called workers off the project Monday because the amount of work they had to do was not worth a confrontation with angry protesters.

There is "no use in putting a fly in the ointment," Cramer said. He added that the workers will return in a few weeks.

"In another two or three weeks we will be back in there with our forces," Cramer said.

Cramer said he thought it was unlikely that the protest will stop his company from completing its job.

"IT WON'T make a bit of difference," Cramer said. "We could do that job under any

Aquino hit with first criticisms

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Moves to replace local officials with supporters of President Corazon "Cory" Aquino sparked Monday the first public protests against her government and warnings of a "social upheaval" from leaders of the deposed Ferdinand E. Marcos regime.

Amid charges the new government is "manifesting dictatorial tendencies," Vice President Salvador Laurel announced a new constitution would be written within 90 days "reflective of the true aspirations of the Filipino people."

He said the document would be submitted to the people for approval in a plebiscite, followed by local elections.

Laurel told a news conference that a commission "of the best minds and most credible citizens in the country" would be appointed to write the constitution. He said the current document "was invalid from its outset in 1973 because it was not approved by the people."

THE ANNOUNCEMENT apparently reflected a desire on the part of Aquino's administration to shift to a constitutional government as soon as possible. Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales said the new government, which took power last week after a military-led revolt forced Marcos from office, is "in reality a revolutionary government."

In another development, communist rebels Monday killed at least 16 people — 12 policemen, a constable and three civilians — in a roadside ambush in the

UI students plan cable spots to plug Iowa City bus system

By Gretchen Norman
Staff Writer

In a cooperative effort with city officials, a group of UI journalism students plans to launch an advertising campaign this spring aimed at increasing ridership on the city's 29 buses.

The advertisements, to be produced by a group of students in the UI's Mass Communication Laboratory, are tentatively slated to appear on Heritage Cablevision beginning in April and will attempt to boost awareness of the Iowa City Transit System.

"We want to make a positive public image and let people know about the system. It (the transit system) has problems because people don't have the knowledge on how to use it," said UI journalism major Beth Bottoni.

Bottoni, who heads the group, said the students will work in cooperation with Councilor George Strait, the Johnson County Council of Governments and an ad hoc transit committee studying three local transit systems.

THE GROUP DECIDED to run commercials on cable television stations because studies have shown that the medium reaches 61 percent of Iowa City residents. "It's the best way to reach the public," Bottoni said.

The Iowa City Council decided earlier this winter to redirect city funds and instigate a number of cost-cutting measures in order to remedy the transit system's $500,000 deficit.

The Daily lowan/Jeffrey Sedam

Those measures included the elimination of rider appreciation day and reductions in Saturday service from half-hour to hourly pickups.

At that time, however, officials also warned that the current decline in the number of riders who use city buses must be stopped.

"It (the campaign) serves a dual purpose — to sell products and to get public exposure," said Iowa City Transit Director Larry McGonagle. "I think that's why most companies advertise."

THE COMMERCIALS will be 30 seconds long and will appear on local cable stations, possibly including MTV and ESPN. Most stations have public interest spots which provide free air time to public service groups.

McGonagle added that CNN and USA channels might also be used for transit advertisements because the cable company sells a package that includes those channels along with MTV and ESPN.

He said that the commercials should help increase ridership

Local district has 15 National Merit Scholars

By Suzanne McBride
Staff Writer

Fifteen local high school seniors have been named National Merit Scholars, giving the Iowa City Community School District more such students than any district in the state, said scholarship officials Monday.

But while the number of merit scholars in the district is higher than any other school district, officials say this does not demonstrate that the Iowa City school system is necessarily superior to other districts in the state.

According to National Merit

Assistant Director of Educational Services Mary Walker, comparing schools and regions by their number of merit scholars is "very harmful" and is not the purpose of the program.

"It's very important for our program not to make comparisons between areas," Walker said. "We don't want to be involved in judging the educational standards of schools."

NATIONAL MERIT Scholarships are awarded to about 13,500 high school seniors across the nation each year. The scholarship — which takes into consideration a student's academic aptitude and past school record — was awarded to about 230 Iowa students this spring.

But although the quality of a school is not necessarily indicated by the number of its Merit Scholars, an Iowa City guidance counselor maintains that the large number of scholars is a reflection on area schools.

"We don't do anything special, as far as coaching students," said West High School guidance counselor Bill Mitchell.

"But we have a lot of homes where education is valued very highly."

Mitchell added that the district's continuing ability to produce a large number of scholars is due to a combination of high-ability students and a quality school system.

ACCORDING TO the Director of Admissions Services for the Midwest College Board Steven Graff, "There's no question" that students in urban, university-oriented areas, such as Iowa City, do better on the merit scholarship test than students from sparsely populated regions.

"The PSAT is a test of developed abilities. It's dependent on what students do at home, not just in school," Graff said. "The students have probably traveled more than other students and have been exposed to a wider variety of intellectual things. It's not unusual for those children to score higher."

Walker also noted that in such areas as New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Maryland, the qualifying scores for semi-finalists are "very high because there is a concentration of professional people" as opposed to Mississippi or Alabama, which are more rural.

"Generally, a more rural area emphasizes education less than an urban area," Walker said. "In more urban areas there is a higher number of educated people with highly geared educational standards."

Swedes name new leader

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Acting Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson was sworn in Monday as the leader of Sweden's Social Democratic Party, clearing the way for him to succeed slain Prime Minister Olof Palme as the nation's chief of government.

As the new head of Palme's party, Carlsson is the likely choice to succeed him when Parliament votes on a new prime minister next week.

Police continued to search for clues in the Palme slaying, amid reports the Red Army Faction, a West German terrorist group, had claimed responsibility for the assassination shortly after it occurred.

Palestinians bury mayor

NABLUS, Israeli-occupied West Bank — Tens of thousands of Palestinians Monday turned the funeral of Zafer al-Masri, the slain Israeli-appointed mayor of Nablus, into a demonstration of Palestinian nationalism.

Shops, schools and the university were closed as throngs of residents carried Masri's body, wrapped in a Palestinian flag, on a stretcher through the city.

Palestinian nationalist songs and flags are banned on the Israeli-occupied West Bank. But Israeli soldiers were absent as Israeli police closed off streets to allow protesters to express their emotions.

Child may be tried for murder

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Prosecutors said Monday they will review psychiatric tests before deciding whether to press a murder charge against a 5-year-old boy who pushed a 3-year-old off a fifth-floor stairwell.

Police said preschooler Lazaro Gonzalez Jr. admitted he pushed Eduardo Lafavria off the stairwell Sunday. Gonzalez said the younger boy grabbed onto a railing, so he pushed him a second time and Eduardo fell to the ground.

Police and representatives of the state attorney's office met Monday but decided to wait for the test results before pressing charges. They will decide whether to treat the boy as an adult and prosecute him in criminal court or refer the case to the juvenile courts.

Ambassador dies in fire

CARACAS, Venezuela — Fire swept through a 14-story Caracas office building housing the Chilean Embassy Monday, killing at least 15 people, including the Chilean Ambassador to Venezuela officials said.

The fire erupted in the afternoon in the Cemica Tower office building in eastern Caracas, authorities said. Five people who climbed to the top of the building were plucked from the roof by a helicopter.

Chilean Ambassador Carlos de Costanora was missing and presumed dead, according to Police Director Pedro Torres Agudo. Two other unidentified Chilean diplomats jumped to their deaths, authorities said.

Strike paralyzes N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Hard-line Protestants fought with police, while stoning workers and blocking highways Monday during a 24-hour strike that brought Northern Ireland to a virtual standstill. Scores of injuries and arrests were reported.

The strike was called by Protestants who want the British government to scrap a recent treaty with predominantly Roman Catholic Ireland that gives Dublin a say in the affairs of the British-ruled province.

Police sources said at least 30 officers were injured and 20 arrests were made in Belfast alone during the strike called to protest the Anglo-Irish pact signed Nov. 15.

Thirteen Iowa City residents reported to local law enforcement agencies that their parked cars were vandalized during the weekend.

Iowa City police records show seven vandalism complaints were received Sunday, and UI Campus Security officers received five reports Saturday. Six of the break-ins reported to police occurred outside the victims' homes.

DES MOINES — The Iowa House of Representatives State Government Committee passed a bill Monday that would prohibit insurance companies from offering new policies with rates based on sex or marital status.

But the bill's sponsor, Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said she doubts the legislation will move any closer to becoming law this year.

Doderer explained there is a March 7 deadline for legislation with individual sponsors to pass the full House and that a backlog of pending bills has made this unlikely.

"I'm going to talk to the leadership about bringing this bill up," Doderer said, "but what is really needed is for people to call and write their legislators on this issue."

According to the information Doderer has collected, a woman, on the average, will be overcharged for life, health, auto and disability insurance by more than $17,000 during her lifetime when compared to the rates charged men.

House studies reorganization

By Kirk Brown
 Legislative Writer

DES MOINES — A House of Representatives subcommittee began considering proposed changes in the version of the state reorganization bill approved by the Iowa Senate last week.

Two of the most important revisions approved by the subcommittee Monday would affect affirmative action programs at Iowa's three state universities, as well as the hiring of the state personnel director.

Floor debate in the House on the reorganization bill is scheduled to take place in two weeks, and legislative leaders say the measure will probably end up in a conference committee later this month.

THE SUBCOMMITTEE adopted an amendment proposed by Rep. Philip Brammer, D-Cedar Rapids, providing the newly created state Department of Management with an important role in overseeing affirmative action programs at the state Board of Regents universities.

Jean Lloyd-Jones

The Senate has voted to make the regents the only state agency exempt from reporting to this department, but Brammer said there is no reason to exclude the regents from this requirement.

"There is a necessity to have a coordinated effort for contract compliance and affirmative action," Brammer said. "I'm not comfortable with the elimination of the Board of Regents from this department."

Subcommittee Chairwoman Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said she believes it will be difficult to attach this amendment to the final reorganization bill.

"It is going to be controversial because I don't think the regents want to be under that department," she said.

UI AFFIRMATIVE ACTION Director June Cargile said Monday she is uncertain about the specific ramifications Brammer's amendment would have on her office.

But she stressed that regardless of any changes, "It is very critical that we continue to have affirmative action offices remain on-site at the regents universities."

Brammer has set out to revise a number of affirmative action policies at the regents universities and Monday's decision by the subcommittee marked his second victory in this campaign.

Last Thursday the House Small Business and Economic Development Committee voted 20-0 to approve a bill Brammer authored requiring the regents to purchase more goods and services from businesses owned by women or minorities.

That business set-aside bill is waiting to be debated on the floor of the House, but Brammer has said he may move to add its language to the reorganization bill instead.

THE OTHER SIGNIFICANT measure approved by the subcommittee Monday deals with the hiring of the state personnel director, which has been one of the the most frequently discussed aspects of the reorganization.

In the Senate's version of this legislation, this task would be the responsibility of the five-member merit employment commission.

The House subcommittee, however, unanimously approved an amendment proposed by Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, giving the governor authority to appoint the personnel director. The panel is also expected to abolish the merit employment commission altogether.

Feminists achieve global bond

By Marianne Cherni
 Staff Writer

Local feminists are joining hands with women around the world, trying to strengthen their fight for equality.

They call her Papusa. Maria Luisa Molina, a staff member at the UI Women's Resource and Action Center, has been active in the Iowa City area since she moved from Mexico five years ago.

"I really see a tendency to acknowledge our differences more and more and to see that we have many commonalities. The commonalities are not on the specific issues, but in the general situation of women," Molina said.

"What we've gained in the last 10 years is a global awareness, an awareness of our differences," Molina added. "The only priority is empowerment for women."

UI GRADUATE student Mary Janell Metzger said she believes feminists must emphasize gains

This is the third in a four-part series examining feminism today.

made by individuals.

"For feminists, some of the smallest successes have been the largest gains. And so by celebrating large successes, like for instance — Geraldine Ferraro being nominated as the vice presidential candidate — it somehow overshadows the lesser but greater successes," Metzger said.

"It is those little things that happen in a woman's life, when a woman develops a sense of herself and the importance of defining that self," that are most important, she added.

Melissa Farley is a clinical psychologist at Hera Psychotherapy and a women's activist. She has an art display at Johnson County Arts Center on rural Iowa women.

"What feminism is about for me, is the redistribution of power," Farley said. "I think that is what has been happening in the last 15 or 20 years — there's been a redistribution of power so that in a lot of ways women have gotten some more real power in the world."

THERE HAS been a definite response to this increase in women's power, Farley added. Two examples of this response are the increase in violence and use of very young female models in magazines, she said.

"I don't think it's any random coincidence that there is a huge increase in the amount of violence against women in popular men's 'rape' magazines like Penthouse. It coincides with an increase in the amount of real power women have," she said.

Noting a study that shows changes in the appearance of popular models, Farley said, "In the '50s and '60s you see a woman like Marilyn Monroe being the sexually desirable female — by the time you hit today, one of the highest-paid models in the world is a 15-year-old girl."

FARLEY HAS reason to worry about the effects of these images on young women in society. She has some of feminism's future under her direct influence — her 13-year-old daughter Darca Morgan.

"Feminism is real broad for me. It's equal rights for women," Morgan said.

She added while her peers understand feminism, "I hear people talking about how they don't want to wear black because their boyfriends don't like it. They should do what they want, just as the guys do."

Farley said that the future of feminism will be in the form of increased activism to protect women's rights.

She added that feminism must begin connecting women's issues to problems other than sexism. Farley cited women on the farm as one example of this.

Reagan lobbies for Contra aid to halt the 'communist' influence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan, raising the stakes in a foreign policy showdown, challenged Congress Monday to prove it is "as committed to democracy in Nicaragua as it was in the Philippines" and approve $100 million in aid for the Contras.

Reagan insisted U.S. support is vital for the insurgent movement to be sustained and argued defeat by Congress "could well deliver Nicaragua permanently to the Communist Bloc."

"Those who would invite this strategic disaster by abandoning yet another fighting ally of this country in the field will be held fully accountable by history," he declared.

Flanked by rebel leaders Arturo Cruz, Alfonso Robelo and Adolfo Colero, Reagan escalated his drive to renew a flow of military assistance halted by Congress in late 1984.

With Democratic foes threatening an early vote in the House, the rebel leaders took their lobbying efforts to Capitol Hill while the administration hammered away with demands that Congress show resolve to resist communist expansionism.

WEIGHING WHETHER to deliver a televised address to carry his case to the nation, Reagan restated his position that the Nicaraguan situation is analogous to that of the Philippines before the Feb. 25 fall of Ferdinand E. Marcos. "I think the world is watching to see if Congress is as committed to democracy in Nicaragua in our own hemisphere as it was in the Philippines," he said.

"The second question that must be answered with this vote," Reagan said, "is whether Congress is as determined to keep Central America free as (Nicaraguan leader Daniel) Ortega and (Cuban leader Fidel) Castro are to make it communist."

"It's going to be a difficult fight," White House spokesman Larry Speakes acknowledged to reporters, "but it's not going to be one we stand back from."

As part of what Speakes called the "full-court press" over the next several weeks, Reagan will focus on the Contra aid issue in his weekly radio addresses, but intends for the moment to leave the actual lobbying to his subordinates.

Secretary of State George Shultz kept up the pressure by asserting in a speech to the Veterans of Foreign Wars that arming the rebels "is the only way to force the Nicaraguan communists to halt subversion" and "their stifling tyranny at home."

IN THE SENATE, assistant GOP leader Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said Reagan faced a "good prospect" of winning approval for the $70 million in military assistance and $30 million in other supplies if he carefully explains the issue to the public. The $100 million would be provided over 18 months and replace $27 million in so-called "humanitarian aid" that expires March 31.

Defeat of the new aid request, Reagan said, would threaten the "small and fragile democracies" of Central America and mean "consolidation of a privileged sanctuary for terrorists and subversives just two days' driving time from Harlingen, Texas."

SEN. JAMES SASSER, D-Tenn., hinted at compromise by proposing the military assistance be contingent upon the adoption of a framework for peace in negotiations involving the United States, the Sandinistas and the Contras.

At the White House, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams said previous talks between the United States and Nicaragua proved to be a stalling tactic by the Sandinistas. The United States would resume such talks only if the Sandinistas begin a church-mediated dialogue with the Contras, he said.

Abrams said the rebel force now has only about 6,000 armed men, a drop of about 2,000 over the last few months, with another 19,000 ready and willing to fight if provided with military supplies.

U.S. officials estimate the Sandinistas have a 60,000-member army and equal militia and are aided by the presence of 3,500 Cubans in combat or military-related roles.

central Philippines, military headquarters and the state-run news agency said.

It was the first major incident involving rebels of the 16,000-strong New People's Army and security forces since Aquino assumed power. Aquino has said she would propose a cease-fire with the rebels.

Laurel announced plans to start work on a new constitution hours after thousands of people gathered in Manila and seven other cities to protest orders that pro-Marcos governors and mayors be replaced with presidential appointees, avoiding the electoral process.

LOCAL GOVERNMENTS Minister Aquilino Pimental earlier declared that mayoral and gubernatorial positions, most of which are occupied by Marcos' supporters, should be considered vacant by Monday. But he later clarified that incumbents should stay in office until Aquino, in consultation with the people, had replaced them. Laurel, who also serves as prime minister and foreign minister in the new government, described Pimental's actions as highly controversial.

"The law has not been followed in some cases," he said.

The six-year term of 77 governors and 1,537 town and city mayors was due to expire March 23. Under the Marcos constitution, local elections were to be held May 6.

In their first meeting since Marcos fled the country to Hawaii, leaders of his former party, the New Society Movement (KBL), warned against moves by Pimental to replace the local officials.

FORMER LABOR Minister Blas Ople said many party members were now defending and barricading offices of incumbent officials in the provinces of Nueva Ecija, Batangas and Surigao.

Surigao Governor Rolando Geotina told the meeting at the National Assembly — which is controlled by KBL members — that he had given instructions to his staff "to refuse to yield even one inch."

"We are prepared to stand our ground and there will be trouble," Geotina told the caucus of 103 of the 112 KBL members in the National Assembly, which also has 57 lawmakers supporting Aquino and 10 independents. A number of governors and mayors also attended the meeting.

KBL Secretary-General Jose Rono said the party was willing to cooperate with Aquino, but "there is a bottom line."

In the capital, some 3,000 Filipinos massed at city hall, supporting the continuation in office of pro-Marcos Mayor Ramon Bagatsing, who promised to remain until he is replaced in an election.

Placards held aloft by the protesters said, "Is this freedom or a new dictatorship?" and "Election not selection."

circumstances." But Gerhard said the protest will continue.

"I like to think of our own local people working down there," Gerhard said, adding that the union is gearing up for the fight.

"We'll be back there tomorrow," Gerhard said.

Jack Stockton, 30, one of those walking the picket line, said he joined the protest because he has been unemployed for three months and would like a job on the project. He said it is unfair for the Des Moines firm to refuse Iowa City labor.

"These are working people manning the pickets," Stockton said. "If you see someone carrying a picket sign you know they're hurting." Stockton said the entire community benefits when the UI hires local laborers to work on its projects.

"WE SPEND our money in town; we're not just going to mail off the check to our family," Stockton said.

Another protester, who refused to be identified, said the out-of-town workers are unwanted visitors who have stolen jobs that rightfully belong to Iowa City workers.

"I'm mad — the local people aren't getting any work," he said. "I'm not going to go to Des Moines and take their job away. I don't think they should do that to me."

UI Physical Plant Director Duane

Nollsch said the UI does not interfere in the hiring practices of the firms it contracts.

"It's not our place to tell them who to hire," Nollsch said.

UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis said the UI does not consider if a firm uses local workers in awarding contracts.

The UI only considers the legality of a company's hiring practices, he said, adding that the picketing "is not a dispute with the university."

Ellis would not speculate about the UI's course of action if the strike continues to disrupt work on the project. "But incidents like this are not completely novel," Ellis said.

because "they are channels people around here talk about and watch."

Pointing out that marketing experts recommend as much as 5 percent of an agency's overall budget to be used for advertising, McGonagle said that only $5,000 of the system's $2.3 million will go toward marketing efforts next year.

"The public service announcements are free but the ads will be purchased and put on cost to the city,"

McGonagle said. "The thing I like about it is that the rates are comparable to radio."

COUNCILOR GEORGE STRAIT said that although the group has chosen cable commercials as the best means of marketing, the group's activities will be under close scrutiny of the Iowa City Council.

"They are coming up with ideas on marketing," Strait said. "We have not made any decisions at this point.

Whatever the ad hoc committee approves will be presented as a form of recommendation to the city council for approval."

Bottoni said the group is currently working on the scripts for the advertisements and hopes to use local celebrities to push the transit system. Some possible spokespersons include George Raveling, Hayden Fry, Dan Gable, Vivian Stringer and Mayor William Ambrisco.

Legislative lesson

One can only hope those who advocate to public schools hear about the recent prayer in the Iowa House. If those add attention, they could learn a valuable lesson concerning human behavior.

For years, the state legislature has modest stipend to open each day's session. Last Thursday Larry Dodds, a singing member of the Nazarene, offered a "My Tribute."

Some legislators went up to Dodds after their appreciation; however, others were angry during the prayer. Subsequently, C. O'Hern, who reads bills into the record, furthering the mood of levity with prayer had touched some listeners.

When Dodds learned later of the response he announced that he was "appalled, making fun of me," he concluded. "They of God."

Members of the legislature have also been time to time at the conduct of their prayers. They have chosen to offer lengthy sermons, prayers, consuming valuable time. Several prayer as an opportunity to lecture on particular issues, offending those in the contrary view.

It is easily understandable that what is spiritual to one individual may be laudatory and offensive to a third. The response to Dodds' well-intentioned prayer illustrates perfectly. Religion is best left to their church of choice. When foisted on an audience — such as public school students — as likely to offend or amuse as uplift.

The House has learned its lesson: By its silence no more guest ministers will be of public school prayer should observe.

Legislative lesson

One can only hope those who advocate returning prayer to public schools hear about the recent brouhaha over prayer in the Iowa House. If those advocates are paying attention, they could learn a valuable object lesson concerning human behavior.

For years, the state legislature has paid ministers a modest stipend to open each day's session with a prayer. Last Thursday Larry Dodds, a singing evangelist for the Church of the Nazarene, offered a singing prayer titled "My Tribute."

Some legislators went up to Dodds afterwards to express their appreciation; however, others were heard snickering during the prayer. Subsequently, Chief Clerk Joseph O'Hern, who reads bills into the record, began singing them, furthering the mood of levity with which Dodds' prayer had touched some listeners.

When Dodds learned later of the response to his prayer, he announced that he was "appalled." "They were not making fun of me," he concluded. "They were making fun of God."

Members of the legislature have also been appalled from time to time at the conduct of their praying guests. Some have chosen to offer lengthy sermons instead of brief prayers, consuming valuable time. Several have used the prayer as an opportunity to lecture legislators on particular issues, offending those lawmakers with a contrary view.

It is easily understandable that what is moving and spiritual to one individual may be laughable to another, and offensive to a third. The response of House members to Dodds' well-intentioned prayer illustrates that principle perfectly. Religion is best left to individuals, who may seek the company of those with similar beliefs at their church of choice. When foisted on a general audience — such as public school students — prayer will be as likely to offend or amuse as uplift.

The House has learned its lesson: By bipartisan agreement, no more guest ministers will be invited; a moment of silence may be used as a replacement. The advocates of public school prayer should observe this lesson well.

Choking chickens

Sen. Tom Harkin was in Iowa City a week ago, speaking at a Johnson County Democrat fund raiser, and he spent most of his time bashing Republican politicians.

Harkin called President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative "a colossal failure of the Republican party," adding "that party has got to be held accountable."

Harkin said he'd be in Iowa for this fall's elections "all the time beating up on Republicans... My friend (Texas Secretary of Agriculture) Jim Hightower said that going after right-wing Republicans is better than choking chickens."

Harkin also told party members "it is not enough, as Democrats, to offer programs that fine-tune Reaganomics... (Democrats must find) a vision for what we're about as a people."

The president's defense initiative may indeed be a colossal failure. Choking chickens may indeed be much fun. And it's pretty clear the United States is in need of "a new vision."

It is also clear, though, that none of these issues need be regressed into the partisan politics which gut the effectiveness of the U.S. government.

Harkin is by no means the only politician who practices partisan politics; it is widespread tradition to label both Democrats and Republicans as "this" or "that."

In Iowa City, however, where most registered voters have chosen to resist party politics (40.0 percent are "no party," 39.9 percent are Democrats, and 20.1 percent are Republicans), the practice is not necessarily effective.

Regardless of effectiveness, moreover, it is wrong to "beat up" politicians simply because of affiliation. The two-party system should not necessarily entail two-leveled evaluation of politicians; there are great differences in the political views of Reps. Jim Leach, Iowa, and Jack Kemp, New York, although both are Republicans.

All politicians — and Sen. Harkin, this includes you — should step above such partisan politics, and spend their time working together to solve America's problems.

For smokers, quitting isn't easy

Addiction to nicotine can hamper efforts to kick the habit

HEROIN, ALCOHOL and nicotine consumption share certain consequences not previously recognized. Difficulties in quitting smoking may have more to do with the increasingly obvious addictive nature of nicotine than with a person's will power or lack thereof.

A 1980 study reported this past December by the U.S. Surgeon General's office demonstrates remarkably similar relapse patterns for those who attempt to kick heroin, alcohol or cigarettes. Though 80 percent of U.S. smokers have made serious efforts to stop, more than 80 percent of those who try to quit return to their habit within a year. This indicates a real physical dependency on the nicotine in tobacco.

According to Jack Henningfield of the Addiction Research Center of the National Institute of Drug Abuse, nicotine can be considered an addictive drug based on the way it affects brain waves, changes one's moods and acts as a biological reward for both animals and humans.

Nicotine does have some positive incidental effects for smokers. Concentration, short-term memory and other cognitive skills can be improved by the intake of nicotine.

COTININE, A BY-PRODUCT of nicotine, is removed from a smoker's body at a faster rate than in a non-smoker's. Passive smoke inhalation of nicotine and other tobacco substances may thus affect nonsmokers over a longer period than smokers. Babies, in particular, eliminate cotinine at less than one-third the rate of smokers.

Other bodily changes, however, occur in smokers even when asleep. Higher heartbeat rates at night indicate the 24-hour per day influence of nicotine.

Even smokers whose bodies more efficiently metabolize nicotine face a tough course. Evidence suggests this rate correlates directly with the amount an individual smokes: the faster the rate of nicotine elimination, the greater the number of cigarettes consumed. It appears to be true that low-tar cigarettes offer only an illusion of less risk. This pattern of smoking self-regulation again indicates that nicotine is linked to physical dependence.

This scientific evidence has had little impact as of yet on lawsuits against tobacco companies. Personal choice in taking up smoking is still seen by the courts as the main issue. To date, no plaintiff has succeeded in winning a judgment.

The American Medical Association is currently pushing for the elimination of tobacco advertising, a 21-year minimum age for purchasing tobacco products, a ban on cigarette vending machines, and health warnings on smokeless tobacco. The AMA's goal is a tobacco-free country by the 21st century. Many of its suggestions face tough opposition from the tobacco lobby.

EVEN THOUGH QUITTING smoking is among the top things a person can do to improve his health, most smokers give it up only after serious problems arise. By then, it is often too late. The withdrawal symptoms of irritability, anxiety, lack of concentration and a persistent craving stymies many smokers who would like to abandon their habit.

Switching to a pipe or cigars is not a good alternative to smoking cigarettes, either. "Smokeless cigarettes" being tested in Texas eliminate smoke and tar while supplying nicotine vapor. Even this product offers only a partial health benefit.

More than 350,000 smoke-related deaths occur each year in the United States; more than 1,000 per day or one-fifth of all U.S. deaths. Associated medical and work cost estimates range from $27 billion to $96 billion a year. Another $30 billion is spent on the tobacco itself.

WORLDWIDE, there are more than a billion smokers who inhale 5 trillion cigarettes annually. Two to 2.5 million of these people die from the effects of their habit every year. Ten studies have linked passive smoking to lung cancer in non-smoking spouses of smokers. Maternal smoking is linked to an increased chance of miscarriage and low-birth weight in babies. Children whose parents smoke face a greater risk of respiratory illness, cancer and slow mental development. In the United States, 86 percent of people endure involuntary exposure to smoke at home and work at a level equivalent to smoking a cigarette per day.

Many businesses now ban smoking or segregate smokers. Economically, smoking and its effects waste about 7 percent of a smoker's time and cost an employer $650 in higher insurance and cleanup costs.

Despite all of this, tobacco consumption increased 2.1 percent annually worldwide and, in the United States dropped only 1.1 percent in 1985. The battles between the 50 million American smokers and their non-smoking counterparts will continue to heat up. The legal nature of tobacco and its social acceptability ensure that this controversial problem and its human and financial costs will not soon disappear.

'Cory' bolsters women's image

THE OUSTER AND exile of Ferdinand E. Marcos from the Philippines, and the formation of a new Philippine government with Corazon "Cory" Aquino at its head, was a positive statement for the democratic ideal. But at the same time, the developments in the island country provided a negative statement on the health of democracy in what is supposed to be that movement's flagship nation, the United States.

It is a disturbing bit of irony that the people of a relatively unadvanced nation such as the Philippines are willing to respect a woman's ability to govern, while the United States, a country fast advancing into the 21st century, clings to the baseless belief that women are deserving of second-class status in the citizenry and in politics.

ALTHOUGH THE tremendous support for Aquino in no way indicates that Filipino women have achieved equality with their male counterparts, it is still a relevant social statement.

This "backward" country, which understandably lags behind the United States in technology, science and education, has sped ahead of its hulking ally in terms of honest, ideological equality.

the mood of the people on the question of equality between the sexes is cemented in a backward age by such movements as the misguided Liberty Federation and the so-called "new right," as well as by the apparent ignorance and stubbornness of the people as a whole.

Walter Mondale was already faced with dismal odds in 1984 at the prospect of unseating incumbent President Ronald Reagan, but by adding Geraldine Ferraro to the Democratic ticket he assured the Republicans of four more years of power.

The sadness in this for concerned liberals is not just that Mondale was indeed defeated in the election, but that a deadly blow was struck against the prospect of seeing a woman in the White House during this century.

ALTHOUGH THE AMOUNT of damage to Mondale's campaign that was caused by the addition of Ferraro to the ticket cannot be calculated, rest assured it will be some time before another politician risks his immediate presidential prospects or future reputation by naming a female running mate.

And by the same token, the Democratic Party — and of course the Republican Party as well — will be hesitant, if not completely unwilling, to allow the nomination of a female candidate for the presidency.

Fortunately for the parties, and unfortunately for society, this problem will never present itself at a national convention. At least not until our "advanced" nation is able to overcome its sad inability to recognize women as the political, social and intellectual equals to men.

Volunteers assist in income tax preparation

By Peter Versteegen
Special to The Daily Iowan

Surrounded by calculators and tax manuals, six volunteers with eraser-worn pencils sat in an Iowa City Public Library meeting room Saturday patiently answering questions about 1040 forms and W-2s.

As part of a cooperative effort called Volunteer Income Tax Assistance, these and other volunteers help students, low-income people, the elderly and the handicapped with their tax returns at no charge.

The UI accounting fraternity, Beta Alpha Psi, the Iowa City Public Library and the American Association of Retired Persons are co-sponsoring walk-in locations at the library and the Senior Center.

"Last year we helped 400 students and residents, mostly people in town that don't really make enough or don't have enough to require a certified public accountant's help," Program Coordinator Lynn Morzorati said.

DURING ITS first two weeks this year, 73 people contacted the 30 volunteers in the program. "People most frequently ask us about deductions, such as moving expenses, and women ask about income or if it counts as a scholarship. It's income," Morzorati said.

The program is broadening its scope this year to be of more help to international students and residents.

"International students come in with different questions than the ordinary volunteers had to do some research on," said Diane Mehrlaus, a two-year tax help veteran and head of the international section. Interested volunteers took additional training to help nonresidents unravel the special tax requirements they face.

International students may find filing a return is complicated by the maze of tax treaties the United States has with other nations. "With each country that has a tax treaty agreement, the agreement is basically different. Some of those agreements mean that the income earned in the United States is non-taxable," Mehrlaus said.

Mehrlaus also noted that recent changes in tax law may trip up nonresident filers. The 1984 tax law mandates that people with F or J-visas file a special nonresident tax form, which may result in a higher tax.

Other assistance during tax time can be found on the library cable Channel 20. Programs showing viewers how to prepare the 1040A and 1040EZ tax forms will be broadcast through March and April.

Proposed bill imposes guidelines on bed-and-breakfast programs

By Michelle Tibodeau
Staff Writer

Iowans who offer rooms to travel-weary tourists may be subject to legislative guidelines if a bill now in a Senate subcommittee makes its way through the Iowa Legislature this session.

The bill, which would sanction bed-and-breakfast programs similar to those in other states, would allow Iowans to house up to two families and serve them breakfast in their residence for a few nights.

But while a number of Iowans already make rooms available to tourists, the bill that is now in the Senate Small Business and Economic Development subcommittee would place tangible guidelines on the operations that have previously gone unchecked by the state.

According to the author of the bill, state representative Paul Johnson, D-Decora, the measure would exempt such homes from having to obtain food service and hotel sanitation licenses.

"THEY MAY advertise and take reservations, but may not serve meals to people other than those staying overnight," Johnson said.

"It's just an opportunity for people to get involved and make some extra money," he said, adding that it also gives tourists opportunities to learn about people in Iowa.

According to Wilma Bloom, a spokeswoman for Bed and Breakfasts in Iowa—a private firm acting as an advertising and reservation agency for current operators of bed-and-breakfast facilities—there are more than 30 bed-and-breakfast homes already operating in the state.

"We have grown from six to 30 homes in eight months," Bloom said. She added that although it's not a great money maker, the program's popularity is growing in the Midwest.

Bloom said the cost for one couple to stay in a home that offers the program ranges from $35 to $45 for a single night. Children under 12 are generally charged $10 extra. Most families spend the weekend, arriving after 5 p.m. on Friday and leaving around 11 a.m. on Sunday, said Bloom.

THE HOSTS will take guests on tours and suggest restaurants and points of interest. If the hosts live on a farm, they usually let the children play with the animals. "It's just like having your relatives come," Bloom said.

Bloom said she also expects business to increase in April and during the summer months, when the vacationing season is in full swing. The bed-and-breakfast bill, which passed in the House by a vote of 96-0 on February 5, would not fund programs for bed-and-breakfast homes, said Johnson. It is "permissive legislation," added Johnson, aimed simply at allowing people to set up bed-and-breakfast programs.

According to Senator Jim Riordan, D-Waukee, who is chairman of the subcommittee, the bill should be debated and passed in the Senate within the next two to three weeks. "It passed easily in the House and won't have many stumbling blocks in the Senate," Riordan said.

"IT COULD show tourists the rural flavor of our state and share the quality of life that Iowa has to offer," he added.

According to State Community Group Manager Phil Thomas, "The number of people offering that sort of thing has been sparse, but there's a need for it."

Thomas pointed out that most people interested in having bed-and-breakfast homes live in Northeast Iowa, where tourists have fewer hotels available to them.

While Iowa City has no guidelines for bed-and-breakfast homes, Iowa City Senior Planner Karin Franklin said such homes would be subject to hotel or home occupation laws of the city unless otherwise specified by the state.

Family physician course to update medical skills

By Dana Cohen
Staff Writer

Family physicians from throughout the Midwest will gather in Iowa City today for a four-day conference to update their medical skills.

The Refresher Course for the Family Physician will include a series of lectures, workshops, discussions and demonstrations by professionals from nearly every department in the UI College of Medicine.

About 200 physicians will attend the conference, which has been an annual UI event for the past 15 years.

UI College of Medicine Associate Dean Richard Caplan will direct the conference. He said the program will have a positive effect on the doctors involved and the medical college too.

Caplan said it is important to strengthen physicians' ability to deal with the most current medical practices comfortably, as well as acquaint doctors with new developments and technology in the medical field.

ACTING HEAD of UI Family Practice Charles Driscoll said the conference will include a variety of topics because family physicians are required to utilize many different skills.

Driscoll said the variety of subjects will also make the four-day conference less tiring for physicians.

The variety of discussion topics will include stroke therapy, vision assessment of children, anxiety disorders and dermatology.

"It's a great way for doctors to take some time off from practices and get their enthusiasm for medicine and practice recharged," says Glenys Williams.

The refresher course will also provide an environment in which physicians can discuss current issues with other physicians in their field.

Driscoll, who has attended all but two of the previous 15 conferences, said the gatherings are stimulating because they "give me new ideas to use in my practice and keep me in contact with other physicians."

UI Associate Family Practice Professor Glenys Williams said the conference will deal with some scientific material, but practical problems such as physical and psychological conditions of patients will be the emphasis.

"It's a great way for doctors to take some time off from practices and get their enthusiasm for medicine and practice recharged," she said.

OWI law lacks ability to deter, says Branstad

DES MOINES(UPI) — A House-passed drunken-driving bill is too soft on Iowa's problem drinkers and may not deter people from driving while drunk, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

The sweeping legislation, approved 93-0 by the House Friday, is faulty because it does not include a mandatory, 30-day driver's license suspension for first-time offenders, Branstad said during his weekly news conference.

He said the "hard" suspension would be tougher on drunken drivers because it would deny them work permits for at least 30 days. The House plan would deny work permits for 60 days or until successful completion of a substance abuse exam.

BRANSTAD SAID the House bill would not be taken seriously by Iowans who feel they could pass the substance abuse evaluation.

"To have a strong, effective law it must have certainty," Branstad said.

He said he continues to support the hard suspension, but refused to say whether he would sign the House proposal if it is passed by the Senate. The House bill also lowers the legal blood alcohol level from .13 percent to .10 percent and mandates a minimum 30-day jail sentence for third-offense OWI.

ON ANOTHER TOPIC, Branstad said today any changes in Iowa's tort liability laws should be reasonable and protect the rights of individuals to collect damages for negligence.

However, he said he has his major concern is for businesses suffering from spiraling liability insurance rates.

"In recent years the courts have gone to issuing fairly substantial settlements without proving fault," he said.

Earlier this year, Branstad called for a limit on the level of negligence and malpractice awards. However he refused to say what that limit should be.

House Speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein, has said Democrats will enact some changes to ease the liability of some businesses. But Avenson said lawmakers should not restrict the rights of individuals to collect damages until it can be proven that insurance rates will drop.

BRANSTAD ALSO SAID he still supports efforts to "privatize" the state's liquor industry.

Democrats have introduced a plan to sell off Iowa's 51-year-old liquor monopoly at a state savings of about $8 million the first year and $15 million the second year.

"My only concern is the impact on revenue and consumption," Branstad said.

Buckeyes' Sellers player of the week

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ohio State senior center Brad Sellers, who led the Buckeyes to wins over Iowa and Minnesota last week, Monday was named as UPI's Big Ten player of the week. Sellers scored 20 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and blocked seven shots in the Buckeyes' 77-61 win over Iowa. Against Minnesota, Sellers again scored 20 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and had five blocked shots. In the two games, he hit 57 percent from the field and 88 percent from the free throw line and had six assists and three steals in the two games. Other players considered were center of Michigan, Steve Alford of Indiana and Ken Lough of Illinois.

Versace named MVC coach of the year

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — The Missouri Valley Conference Monday announced Dick Versace, basketball coach at Bradley University, has been chosen coach of the year. The Bradley Braves this year won their third conference championship in seven years under Versace, who received 31 of 44 votes for the title from coaches and the media. Other coaches receiving votes were Gary Garner, of Drake with nine votes, Tony Barone, Creighton, with two, and with one each J.D. Barnett of Tulsa and Rich Herrin of Southern Illinois. Bradley this year had a record of 16-0 in the conference and an overall record of 29-1, the best in the nation. He is also working on 20 game winning streak.

ATLANTA (UPI) — A trio of senior power forwards — Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Buck Johnson of Alabama and Chuck Person of Auburn — were all repeaters Monday when the 1986 All-Southeastern Conference basketball team was announced by United Press International. Tennessee junior Tony White, the only guard selected, and sophomore forward John Williams of Louisiana State also were named to the UPI first five by sportswriters and sportscasters from throughout the seven-state SEC region. Walker, a 6-foot-8, 190-pounder from Roberta, Ga., was the lone unanimous selection. Johnson, a 6-7, 190-pounder from Birmingham, Ala., missed that honor by just three ballots, all of which had him a second-team choice. Florida guards Vernon Maxwell and Andrew Moten, junior forward Winston Bennett of Kentucky, sophomore center Derrick McKey of Alabama and junior guard Terry Coner of Alabama were named to the second five.

Missouri names new athletic director

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — The University of Missouri Monday named Jack Lengyel its new athletic director. Lengyel, who has held a similar position at Fresno State University in California since 1983, replaces Dave Hart, who resigned to become commissioner of the Southern Conference. Lengyel, who said he earned $75,000 at Fresno State, will be paid $80,000 in his new job. "Missouri has always had a great tradition in athletics and academics and I'm looking forward to the challenges here," Lengyel said. "I'm looking forward to the opportunity of working with Chancellor (Barbara) Uehling. The Missouri program has been facing recently with declining revenues in football. North Stars down Redwings, 8-5

DETROIT (UPI) — Dino Ciccarelli scored three second-period goals and Brian Lawton added two Monday night to lead the Minnesota North Stars to an 8-5 victory over the Detroit Red Wings. The victory was the third straight for Minnesota, 29-27-9, and moved the North Stars into second place in the Norris Division, one point ahead of the idle St. Louis Blues. The victory also clinched a playoff berth for Minnesota for the seventh straight season. Detroit fell to 13-46-5 with its 10th defeat in 11 games. The loss was the 22nd at home for Detroit, equalling the club record set in 1975-76. "We'll be hiking through four waterfalls, the Navajo Falls, the Havasu Falls, the Mooney Falls, and the Beaver Falls," said Jim Ebert, president of the Iowa Mountaineers. "It's one of the most spectacular areas in the Grand Canyon. It's really a beautiful area."

Ebert has made the trip about 34 times. Hikers do not have to have experience, and only need to supply sleeping bags, comfortable hiking shoes and warm clothes. Tents are provided, and transportation will be arranged.

The trip is half full, so interested people should contact Jim or Margie Ebert of the Iowa Mountaineers at 337-7163.

Raveling

no hard feelings or anything."

Fort said it was the style of play Raveling introduced to the team that caused him to transfer, and admitted that had Olson stayed, he most likely would have as well.

"I just felt like I should go somewhere else," Fort said. "Coach Raveling had an offense that was directed more to the big men and the forwards, instead of the guards. I felt I would be limited in that type of situation."

Fort is optimistic about his future at Virginia Tech, particularly offensively where he has averaged just over four points a game this season.

"Next year I'll probably average about 15 points a game or so," Fort predicted. "Dell Curry is our big scorer this year and he'll be gone next season. I'm the only starter that isn't a senior."

Boyle has been less successful on the court than Fort, and was less successful off the court with Raveling when he was at Iowa. In fact, Boyle traces the reasons for his transfer to the problems he had with the Iowa coach.

"I FELT HE TRIED to intimidate me," Boyle said of Raveling's actions during a meeting prior to his junior year. "He left me with two options. I could stay and continue school, or I could transfer. He wouldn't take my scholarship away if I stayed, but I couldn't play basketball."

"He didn't have any reason for me to leave the team. It seemed like he was just kind of pushing me out the door. In the paper he kept referring to my (poor) academic standing. That (wasn't the case) and that had no bearing on why I shouldn't play at all. I think he just used that as a crutch."

Boyle said he and his father later met with Raveling in the coach's office to discuss the matter. At that time, Boyle maintains that Raveling told him and his father, "I can do whatever I want. And he can," Boyle said. "If he doesn't want you to practice, you can't."

RAVELING defended his actions surrounding Boyle's transfer, and said what the Loyola guard is saying now is no different than what he has said in the past.

"What Brian Boyle has voiced is nothing new," Raveling said. "It's the same scenario he's given since he left, but I happen to know that it's just his opinion."

"I can say this, I'll go to my grave with no remorse over the Brian Boyle situation." Snedeker made accusations similar to those voiced by Boyle, but declined to elaborate on specific examples involving Raveling.

"It would have to be Coach Raveling," Snedeker said of his reasons for leaving Iowa City, "because he controls pretty much the whole show. Under Coach Olson I really had a future at Iowa. I had a lot of goals for myself even before I got on campus. It's just unfortunate that it didn't work out with Coach Raveling."

RAVELING said he believes playing time was the biggest reason Snedeker left Iowa, as well as problems with adjusting to being both a student and an athlete in college.

"Snedeker told me the reason he left was that he felt he wasn't going to get sufficient playing time," Raveling said. "I think the bottom line that takes place in transferring today is a definite result of the freshmen eligible rule."

"Just being a normal student and not an athlete brings about a tough adjustment. When a freshman comes in and is playing as well, it makes the transition more difficult."

Snedeker, who was a member of the class that Olson recruited but never coached because of his sudden departure, said he lost a lot of respect and emotion for the ex-Iowa coach when he went to Arizona.

"He never called me when he left, so that left kind of a sour taste," Snedeker said. "You don't sign with the coach, you sign with the school, so when he left, I was stuck here. The NCAA won't let you play at a different school unless you sit out two years."

According to Raveling, had Snedeker and Fort remained at Iowa they would be contributing now or would be a factor in the near future.

"I believe if Snedeker and Fort had stayed they would have contributed to Iowa's success," Raveling said. "I have the utmost respect for Fort and Snedeker. I've never had a player at Iowa that worked harder and was a better student-athlete than Dave Snedeker."

"I don't harbor any bad feelings toward Fort or Snedeker, and I really don't have any bad feelings toward Boyle. I just did what I felt was best for everybody involved in the situation."

Weiskopf

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf is back on the PGA tour by invitation this year, and he says it feels good. The 43-year-old winner of 15 tour events, plus the 1973 British Open, plans to play in this week's Doral Eastern Open at Miami after a brief fling in the limelight during the $500,000 Honda Classic this past weekend. Weiskopf finished 11 strokes behind first-time winner Kenny Knox, but was right in the middle of the chase after shooting a 66 in the second round. FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Every spring a young phenom catches the manager's eye with bazooka-like throws and long drives that look as if they've been launched from nearby Cape Canaveral. In the New York Yankees' camp, the youngster turning manager Lou Piniella's head is a 20-year-old shortstop from Venezuela named Carlos Martinez, who looks as if he'd be more at home on a basketball court. At 6-foot-6 and 175 pounds, Martinez already has earned the nickname "Manute Bol Jr." because his skinny frame reminds people of the Washington Bullets' shot-blocking sensation. It is as a "black Marty Marion," however, that Martinez has impressed the Yankee coaching staff. "THE BEST thing about him is his arm," says Bobby Hoffman, the Yankees' Director of Player Development. "We rate arms on a scale of 1 to 10 and 5 is considered average. He has an 8 arm, which is a tremendous arm. There just aren't many players

Sutton says

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Eddie Sutton's fifth-ranked Kentucky Wildcats may be playing the Southeastern Conference tournament at home in Rupp Arena, but that does not necessarily translate into an advantage. Sutton said Monday he expects the out-of-town fans coming to Lexington will be rooting against the Wildcats — no matter whom they are playing. "I'd be very surprised if fans from the other nine schools won't be rooting for the other team," said Sutton, who understands his is the team everybody wants to beat. After posting a 17-1 record in the conference and 26-3 overall in his first season, Sutton reluctantly accepts the role of the favorite in the SEC tournament. "ANY BALL CLUB we face could

Weiskopf back by 'invitation'

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf is back on the PGA tour by invitation this year, and he says it feels good.
 The 43-year-old winner of 15 tour events, plus the 1973 British Open, plans to play in this week's Doral Eastern Open at Miami after a brief fling in the limelight during the $500,000 Honda Classic this past weekend.
 Weiskopf finished 11 strokes behind first-time winner Kenny Knox, but was right in the middle of the chase after shooting a 66 in the second round.
 The problem was, Weiskopf shot his age on both sides for an 86 in Saturday's third round as near-gale force winds blew scores into the 80s for 35 golfers — nearly half the field. He came back with a 73 Sunday, good enough to give him hope going into Doral.

MOST of the good feeling comes from Weiskopf's 66 on Friday, which followed an opening-round 71 over the testy par 72 Tournament Players Club course at Eagle Trace.
 "I played as well as I can play golf, or as well as I used to play," Weiskopf said. "I don't think my game is much different than it was in my strong years."
 The Honda was Weiskopf's third tournament of the year and third since the 1984 PGA. His last win was the 1982 Western Open.

 "I'm kind of gradually working into a playing frame of mind," he said. "I was very frustrated the last few years. I just didn't enjoy what I was doing and the way I was doing it."
 Weiskopf essentially left the tour in 1984. He won only $8,657 that year and none last year.
 "By the time 1984 rolled around, I just couldn't get myself motivated anymore," he said.
 The inactivity cost him his exemption and now he can only play when he is invited.
 "I plan to play when I want to play and when I'm invited," he said.

 So far that means the Colonial, the Byron Nelson and the Western Open after this week's Doral.
 Weiskopf has more time to play now because of budget cuts at CBS, where he kept busy the last two years as a golf analyst. This year, Weiskopf will do only three telecasts.
 But Weiskopf believes "maybe it was a good thing" since he's happy to be back on the course with a club in his hands.
 "I think I missed the competition," he said. "It's been part of my life for 20 years and it was really good to get back and see some of my old friends."

Yankees eye young phenom

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Every spring a young phenom catches the manager's eye with bazooka-like throws and long drives that look as if they've been launched from nearby Cape Canaveral.
 In the New York Yankees' camp, the youngster turning manager Lou Piniella's head is a 20-year-old shortstop from Venezuela named Carlos Martinez, who looks as if he'd be more at home on a basketball court.

 It is as a "black Marty Marion," however, that Martinez has impressed the Yankee coaching staff.

Spring Training around with arms like his."
 Tutored under former Yankee shortstop Bucky Dent last year at Fort Lauderdale in the Class A Florida State League, Martinez made such rapid strides that the organization now feels he may be less than two years away from the major leagues.
 He has impressed people in the Yankee camp not only with his smooth fielding and strong throwing but with the power in his bat, too. In a batting practice session recently, Martinez hit two long home runs, one of which carried more than 450 feet over the left center field scoreboard.

He's got real good hands. He catches the short hop real well and he plays aggressively.
 "A lot of people are concerned about him being so tall, but I'm not. He does a lot of good things. He's made some adjustments. He was a one-handed shortstop when he first came here but I turned him into a two-handed shortstop. I told him, 'enough of that ole stuff.' He didn't know a lot about the game when he first came here, but he learned real quick."
 Only a few years ago the Yankees were not so sure Martinez would develop as a shortstop. He was still growing and was a bit awkward and they considered making him into a pitcher.

BUT FRED FERREIRA, a Latin American scout who signed Martinez, was convinced the young Venezuelan would make it as a shortstop and insisted the Yankees keep him at the position.
 "When I first saw him I said there was no way I was leaving the country without signing him," said Ferreira. "He was probably the greatest kid I ever saw. He was 6-4 at the time and now he's "THE BEST thing about him is his arm," says Bobby Hofman, the Yankees Director of Player Development. "We rate arms on a scale of 1 to 10 and 5 is considered average. He has an 8 arm, which is a tremendous arm. There just aren't many players

"IF HE KEEPS developing the way he has he could be ready in a year," says Dent, beginning his second season as manager of the Fort Lauderdale club. "He has only played a couple of years, one, but fear no one."

 Sutton credited his assistant coaches for the Wildcats' excellent season and also attributed some of the Kentucky success to luck.
 "We've not had any injuries or illnesses like chicken pox," said Sutton.
 Kentucky has historically dominated the competition, winning 14 of the 25 post-season tournaments played in the conference. However, in the seven years since the renewal of the tournament in 1979, seven different teams have captured the title, with only Florida, Mississippi State and Vanderbilt not winning the event.
 Kentucky appears poised to be a repeat winner, but Sutton said his team is not playing at the top of their game.
 "It's not a matter of they're not playing hard," said Sutton. "Sometimes you just don't play well. We hope to get it turned around."

 If Kentucky wins the tournament this week, they would repeat the feat Kentucky accomplished in 1984 when it won both the regular season and tournament crown.
 That team reached the Final Four in Seattle. And while Sutton will tell you he would have never even mentioned the city of Dallas at the beginning of this season, the team has now set reaching the Final Four there as a goal.
 "That's their dream, to get to Dallas," he said. "This is another goal. They've achieved a lot of their goals. But if they did not win another game I would be as proud of this team as any I've coached in 28 years."

Sutton says host role no help

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Eddie Sutton's fifth-ranked Kentucky Wildcats may be playing the Southeastern Conference tournament at home in Rupp Arena, but that does not necessarily translate into an advantage.
 Sutton said Monday he expects the out-of-town fans coming to Lexington will be rooting against the Wildcats — no matter whom they are playing.

Big Ten's title showdown could highlight final week

United Press International

Michigan whipped Northwestern and Indiana outlasted Iowa over the weekend to set up a couple of interesting games in the final week of the Big Ten season.

Michigan defeated the Wildcats, 86-64, on Saturday and Indiana topped Iowa, 80-73, Sunday to stay even at 12-4 at the top of the Big Ten standings. The two teams meet next Saturday in the season finale.

But before that game takes place, Indiana must play third-place Michigan State on Thursday. The Spartans are one game behind Indiana and Michigan after beating Wisconsin, 84-71, Sunday.

IN OTHER GAMES, Illinois beat Georgia Tech, 59-57, in a non-conference contest and Ohio State scored a 68-55 Big Ten victory over Minnesota Sunday afternoon.

Michigan had little trouble whipping Northwestern Saturday. The reason Michigan led by only seven points at halftime was that Wolverine Coach Bill Frieder was playing around with his lineup.

"If I wouldn't have fooled around with the lineup, we would have been in good shape at the half," Frieder said. "I wanted to get Mark Hughes some playing time and I wanted to put (forward) Glen Rice in."

Roy Tarpley led Michigan with 21 points. Guards Gary Grant and Antoine Joubert, considered one of the best backcourt combinations in the nation, combined for 17 assists and 12 rebounds, along with 16 points.

NORTHWESTERN, which fell to 8-19 overall and 2-15 in the Big Ten, got 15 points from center Shon Morris.

Indiana was in control for the first half against Iowa Sunday and had a 19-point lead early in the second half before the Hawkeyes fought back. It became a one-point game in the last couple of minutes before the Hoosiers led the game.

"For the first 26 or 27 minutes, we played about as well as we could play," said Indiana Coach Bob Knight. "We had patience and we were able to spread things out."

Indiana raised its overall record to 20-6. Iowa is the sixth place team in the Big Ten with an 8-8 record and it is 18-11 overall, which Hawkeye Coach George Raveling says is borderline for the NCAA tournament.

Heathcote: Spartans can finish first in conference

EAST LANSING (UPI) — If Michigan State stops to pat itself on the back, Coach Jud Heathcote believes, Indiana or Ohio State will rip off its arm.

The Spartans, their preseason goal of a tournament bid in hand with a 20-6 record, need only win their final two Big Ten games of the season to confound preseason experts with a finish of no worse than second.

"If we win our last two," Heathcote said, "we'll either tie for first or be in undisputed second place, which would be quite a feat for this team."

"You look back on that and you tend to be self-satisfied," he said. "We're not going to approach these games in this manner."

"WE'RE AT home and you're supposed to win at home," said Heathcote, whose team has won nine of its last 10 to surge to 11-5 in the Big Ten.

Michigan State hosts Indiana, which shares first place with Michigan a game ahead of the Spartans, on Wednesday night and Ohio State on Saturday.

"We're going after them one at a time," Heathcote said. "With our 20-6 record we've assured ourselves of an NCAA bid, at least in our minds."

"Consequently, then, these games take on

WBC heavyweight champ searching for unified title

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don King describes boxing's upcoming Heavyweight World Series to unify the title as an odyssey which is finally coming to a close.

WBC champion Pinklon Thomas wonders if he, like the legendary Ulysses, will have to wander for years before receiving a fair shake.

Thomas, who opens the World Series with a title defense March 22 in Las Vegas, Nev., against Trevor Berbick, is skeptical of this unification brainstrom developed by King, Butch Lewis and Home Box Office. He fears when and if this seven-bout extravaganza comes to a head, he will be slighted.

"They're playing patty-patty," Thomas, referring to IBF champ Michael Spinks and Larry Holmes, said Monday at a press conference to promote the series. "They don't want to fight anybody real. I don't know how long this will go on."

"THE IBF OR the FBI, whatever it is, doesn't represent anybody. They said you can fight your grandmother, your granddaughter, but you will not fight Pinklon Thomas. They maneuvered around me and I had to sit back and take it."

King, however, said everyone will have a fair shot.

"This title will not be won by maneuverability and manipulations, but by the talent and abilities of what they have in the center of the ring," King said.

Thomas claims Holmes, who held the WBC and IBF titles for a combined 7 1/2 years, duked him as a champion and now as a

Big Ten Roundup

"We still have two bullets left in the gun," said Raveling, whose teams hosts Illinois and Purdue this week. "I think we can get in the tournament with one (win), but I don't want to test their (the selection committee's) patience."

STEVE ALFORD LED Indiana with 25 points, including two key baseline baskets in the last couple of minutes.

Michigan State stayed one game behind the leaders with an 84-71 victory over Wisconsin. The Spartans pulled away from a 32-30 halftime lead to beat the Badgers.

"We worked harder on defense today from our last game against Wisconsin," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote. "It's good to win a game by defense rather than just trying to outscore them."

Scott Skiles poured in 28 points and backcourt mate Darryl Johnson added 18 to power the Spartans offensively as they improved their record to 11-5 in the Big Ten and 20-6 overall.

Rick Olson, Wisconsin's fine guard, scored 27 points in his final home game and pulled to within 37 points of Claude Gregory's all-time scoring total in Badger history. He has one game left against Northwestern.

ILLINOIS GOT ITS 20th win of the season by beating Georgia Tech, 59-57. The Illini, who finished in the top division of the Big Ten, considered the victory an important one in the eyes of the NCAA.

"We're really on a roll now," said guard Tony Wysinger, who had 14 points. "We've played some close games on the road and lost, and I think it's about time we started winning some, and we are."

Ken Norman led Illinois with 17 points. "A week ago, we were one of those teams on the fence," said Illinois Coach Lou Henson, whose team beat Purdue at West Lafayette earlier in the week. "We've helped ourselves. We should go into the tournament now."

more meaning for maybe the Big Ten than the NCAA at this point," he said. "I'd like to finish strong so we have some momentum," he said. "I'd like to be in contention for the title on the last day of the season."

MICHIGAN STATE has already surprised Indiana on its home floor this season so the Hoosiers aren't likely to be wondering of the Spartans are real or an optical illusion.

The Spartans match well with the Hoosiers, who aren't an overpowering team but rely on defense and offensive execution to win.

"We match up with them," Heathcote said, "more so than most teams. Their front line is 6-7, 6-6 and 6-6. That's about what our front line is."

Vernon Carr, who at 6-foot-6 is the third guard in Michigan State's lineup, will have a quickness edge on whichever forward Indiana Coach Bob Knight puts on him. He could have a big game.

"I think we do match up better inside with them than we do against most teams," Heathcote said.

The Spartans will play their typical match-up zone against the Hoosiers and "pack it in. We'll skew it to cover (Steve) Alford also."

contender. He classifies Spinks as nothing but a lightweight, and given the chance will dispose of them both. WBA champ Tim Witherspoon will also take part in the series, and Thomas has already defeated him, for his WBC crown.

However, Thomas realizes Berbick is first on the list and he will deal with him before the others.

"I'LL START proving myself by knocking out Berbick by the sixth round," Thomas said. "Then I'll Wither the Spoon, take the jinx out of Spinks and run Larry Holmes home."

Thomas, who has held the WBC title since Aug. 31, 1984, sports a 26-0 record with 21 knockouts. Berbick, a native Jamaican fighting out of Canada, is 30-4-1 with 23 knockouts.

The second fight in the series will be the return bout between Spinks and Holmes. April 19 in Las Vegas. Spinks, the only light heavyweight ever to win the heavyweight championship, handed Holmes his only loss in 49 pro bouts last September. Spinks contests Holmes still has nightmares of him.

"I haunt him," said the 29-year-old Spinks, undefeated in 28 fights. "He can't sleep at night. He's afraid of me. The way I picture Larry Holmes after that fight is with two big shoes hanging out of his mouth."

"I want to prove I didn't take nothing from him and run over it, so I'm giving him another shot. One favor deserves another."

Spinks said he won't do anything different in this fight than the last one.

Auel's tale recounts prehistoric romance

By Teresa Heger
Copy Editor

JEAN M. AUDEL, author of the Earth Children series, can be praised for her strange sense of originality. Not only is she able to coherently blend her knowledge of Ice Age Europe with her suppositions about the lives of prehistoric men, but she also manages to toss in some of the racier qualities of a steamy Harlequin romance. The result is a historically accurate epic tale about a cavewoman's love affair at the dawn of humanity.

Pretty heavy-duty stuff — yet it works. The Mammoth Hunters, Auel's latest novel, is thoroughly enjoyable and can hold its own as a fun, escapist piece of fiction. The Mammoth Hunters, Auel's latest work, is the third novel in a continuing series, and so is best appreciated if read in its appropriate order, following Clan of the Cave Bear and Valley of the Horses.

CLAN OF THE CAVE BEAR is developed around the idea that at one time in history there were two different "races" of humans. The first, and older, species — called the Clan — relies on collective memories to survive; what it learns is passed on genetically from one generation to another. Thus, its physical appearance — short stature, large flat head, etc. — is radically different from the second, newer race of humans (counterparts of modern man).

The two different strains of humanity are enemies, through fear more than natural animosity. The more ancient Clan views the emerging race as "the Others," and in return Clan members are called "flatheads" and "animals" by the evolving breed. Since a shared language does not exist, communication and understanding between the two species are nearly impossible.

The conflict in Clan of the Cave Bear arises when Ayla, a child of "the Others," is taken in and raised by the Clan after her natural parents are killed in an earthquake. The problems and prejudices that become apparent during Ayla's childhood among the Clan force her to develop a strong and determined personality.

In Valley of the Horses, Ayla must leave the Clan and live on her own. She tames wild animals for companionship and learns to overcome the despair of solitude. Toward the end of the novel, Ayla encounters — for the first time since her parents' deaths — a member of her own species.

In THE MAMMOTH HUNTERS, Ayla reaches maturity, adjusting to life among her own people, yet retaining the insights and values the Clan has taught her.

Perhaps Auel's greatest strength as a storyteller is in her ability to concentrate on accurate details without boring her readers. From the discovery of flint to mammoth hunting to making white leather skins, Auel's careful research is presented in an interesting fashion, almost always through dialogue or in an easy-to-read expository style. Without this careful realism, the novels would fall apart; the historic backdrop and environment is at the heart of the series.

Another strength of the Earth Children novels rests with powerful characterization. Since the reader is able to follow the development of Ayla from her earliest years, she remains the strong, focal figure in the works.

The culture and moralities of these prehistoric peoples are sometimes so radically different from (or sometimes so frighteningly similar to) contemporary society that it could have been no small task for Auel to create characters her readers not only like, but also understand.

IN EFFECT, Auel creates the religions, the customs and the lifestyles of not one culture, but two — the Clan and the Others — and her characters live up to the mores and traditions of these two cultures. Characterization gives a backbone to these semi-imaginary worlds.

Of course, The Mammoth Hunters, as well as the other two novels, cannot be lauded as a perfect work. Perhaps the novel's biggest flaw comes with Auel's overworked and rather simple-minded attempts at psychoanalyzing her characters and their actions.

It is very difficult to relate to a prehistoric man who indulges in Freudian guilt trips and repressions. The psychology of some of Auel's characters is just too stereotyped — or, in some cases, just too juvenile — to be believed. Auel creates mental dilemmas that are just too hard to swallow.

Auel's romantic tendencies in The Mammoth Hunters also become a bit much. She gets carried away with the "does he love me?" dramatics of potboiler romance; the continual misunderstandings and confused messages, as well as heartfelt sighs and eye-rolling, eventually become tedious and annoying.

Yet, luckily, the appeal of the strong characters is able to hold the readers' interest through the worst of the mush.

On the other hand, a little simplistic romantic reading won't kill anyone, and since the Earth Children series is never going to be acclaimed as one of the intellectual and literary masterpieces of the 20th century anyway, it might as well be enjoyed at face value. Auel apparently had a lot of fun writing these works; they should be read with the same light spirit of adventure.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan has accepted the resignation of Central Intelligence Agency Deputy Director John N. McMahon and will name another veteran intelligence officer, Robert M. Gates, to succeed him. White House officials announced late Tuesday.

The shakeup was disclosed late in the day as the White House released copies of a Feb. 24 resignation letter in which McMahon, 56, a 34-year veteran of espionage and intelligence, told Reagan, "I have reached the stage where I should move on."

Gates, 42, named to fill the No. 2 post after McMahon leaves March 29, has been a CIA employee since 1966 and has risen through the ranks as an analyst and administrator on the open of the intelligence business. Since 1982, he has been
