Democrat forces kill indigent care bill

By Phil Thomas

"It's a question of whether the public is interested in the proposal or not," said Rep. John LeRoy, D-Des Moines, who sponsored the measure. He added, "I don't think the public is interested in the proposal." The measure, which would have provided medical care for indigent persons, was defeated in the House on a 91-2 vote.

Police work to solve hold-ups

By Chris Brown

Police are continuing to look into the recent hold-ups, and they are looking into the possibility of a single individual or group responsible for the crimes.

The hardest part of the investigation is finding evidence to link the crimes. Police have been searching for clues and evidence that could connect the crimes. They have also been questioning witnesses and possible suspects.

House votes for 'equal' efforts

By Chris Brown

Speaker of the House Terry Branstad said on Tuesday that the House would consider a bill to establish a "fair and equal" fee system for funding higher education. He said, "We need to ensure that all students have access to a quality education," and added, "We need to ensure that we are using our resources in a fair and equal manner." The bill, which would establish a system of fees based on student need, was approved by the House on a 98-2 vote.

Jackson to draw variegated crowd

By Maranne Cherry

The Rev. Jesse Jackson will speak to a packed audience Monday at the Hancher Auditorium starting at 7 p.m. The event is sponsored by the Center for Community Action.

Jackson will also make an appearance at a fund raiser for the UI Rainbow Coalition, the Iowa Farm Unity Coalition and the University of Iowa-Chicana student group, which traditionally organizes agricultural issues forum.

Review of Jackson's record is both as an important figure because his career has definitely been a force in American politics as well as the civil rights movement and world affairs, "he's been everywhere," says Colleagues Association President Jeff Devitt.

"Jesse Jackson makes a lot of emotions," David Haasen, UI Freedom of Speech Committee chairman, said. "The talks to people who are very excited about his visit, and I've talked to people who are negative. Either you really like him, or you really don't.

"David said he believes Jackson has been a positive force in the area of human rights, and he is convinced that if the U.S. were more open it would be a lot more open."

Jackson's letter to the editor, Devitt said. "It's hard to sell that. If the actions are not politically meaningful, it's hard to sell the alternative, otherwise it's a lot too much.

"All Haasen and Devitt believe the farm riots will at least, in a way, be a success of his representation."

"There are some important things to say about the farm riots, and as well as some important things to say about the farm movement," Devitt said.

"The Rainbow Coalition/Farm Unity coalition fund raiser begins at 7 p.m. in the Union Main Lounge tonight.

Northside residents upset with developer's rezoned plan

By Jim Spagnuolo

A bid by a local developer to have five acres commercial use rezoned for heavier commercial use was met with some stiff opposition Thursday.

About 30 people opposing the rezoning matter showed up at a public hearing project at the Johnson County Board of Supervisors meeting at the downtown Central Campus Board Room in Coralville, could not be heard.

In response critics of Jackson, "We know that he's going to play in the international arena. It's very important to him, or you really don't."

"The problem is, we need to have a better public policy," said Philip, who was the first speaker.

"Several residents" bring more than property object, however, to the construction of the commercial uses and planning questions. They say that this would increase the noise in the area and cause traffic problems. Arvon Korpel, 22 Lawrence Avenue, presented an offer to sell 140 people who oppose the rezoning plan.

The proposed development would upgrade a dangerous intersection around the upcoming.

But, Wallis, commenting on the zoning changes after the meeting, said the concerns of the local residents are something that needs to be taken into account.

"We're going to develop this property. There is a development spot there.

Panel mulls African problem

By Harun A. Khan

Washington, March 12 (AP) — A U.S. Senate foreign-policy panel is scheduled to hold a two-day hearing on the Horn of Africa today. Ambassador Robert G. Stock, acting assistant secretary of state for African affairs, who has been urging greater economic and military aid to Ethiopia, is expected to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's Africa subcommittee this afternoon.

Looking at the topic of terrorism in the Horn of Africa, the subcommittee will hold a hearing this afternoon. There will be many important questions, including: What is the best way to combat terrorism in the Horn of Africa? What role can the United States play in this effort?

The problems of African refugees in Ethiopia are among the most serious in the world. Africa's refugee population is now beginning to exceed 1 million, according to United Nations figures. The subcommittee will hear testimony on these issues.

Sen. John M. Shemsky, D-Minn., chairman of the subcommittee, is expected to introduce the legislation.

Stock will visit Ethiopia and Kenya this week to discuss the region's progress in combating terrorism.

Stock said: "We are working very closely with the African governments to address this serious threat." He added that the U.S. government is "very concerned about the threat of terrorism to our own citizens and to the people of the region." He said: "We are working very closely with the African governments to address this serious threat."

Moratorium on new public-housing proposals in the Horn of Africa is expected this week. The moratorium is expected to stop new public-housing projects from being approved in the Horn of Africa for at least two years, pending a review of the region's housing needs and priorities.

"In the past, the U.S. government has been very cautious in approving new public-housing projects in the Horn of Africa," Stock said. "We are now taking a more cautious approach, and we are working very closely with the African governments to address this serious threat." He added: "We are working very closely with the African governments to address this serious threat."

The moratorium is expected to stop new public-housing projects from being approved in the Horn of Africa for at least two years, pending a review of the region's housing needs and priorities.

It's a gas

Gas prices continue to rise. In December, it was 80 cents a gallon; in February, it was 85 cents. In June, prices have averaged 92 cents a gallon.

While these conditions are far from ideal, the gas prices have not been as high as they were a few years ago. The reason for this is that the oil-producing countries have been able to increase their production to meet the increased demand for gasoline.

One of the main factors contributing to the rise in gas prices is the increasing demand for gasoline. With the growing number of vehicles on the road, the demand for gasoline has increased, leading to a tighter supply and higher prices.

Another factor is the increasing cost of crude oil. The price of crude oil has been rising due to the geopolitical situation in the Middle East, where many of the world's oil reserves are located.

In addition, the refining and distribution costs have also increased, which is reflected in the higher gas prices.

While these conditions are far from ideal, the government is taking steps to address the issue. They are encouraging the use of alternative fuels and promoting fuel efficiency in vehicles.

However, it is important to remember that the continued rise in gas prices will have a significant impact on the economy and the environment. It is essential to find ways to reduce our dependence on oil and promote sustainable energy solutions.

UI students want to avoid further increases in their tuition by rushing their members out of the door at the end of May. The Iowa Legislature is considering the budget proposals for UI, including the draft of the Board of Regents.

Iowa is one of 13 states that submitted their budgets to the federal government by May 1. The budget is supposed to be completed by May 15.

The students believe that the budget will be cut further, and they want to avoid any further increases in tuition. The Board of Regents has approved a 4.5% increase in tuition for the fall semester. This would be the second consecutive year of tuition increases.

The students argue that the increase is too much and that it will put a strain on their budgets. They believe that the state should be providing more funding for higher education.

The students also believe that the budget cuts proposed by the Board of Regents will have a negative impact on the quality of education at UI. They argue that the cuts will result in decreased faculty salaries and reduced programs.

The students are calling on their fellow students to join them in protesting the budget cuts and the tuition increases. They believe that the students have a right to be heard and that their voices should be heard in the decision-making process.

Teachers' pay vital, says official

By Susan McDonald

Iowa teachers must be paid more if the state-wide moratorium to stop the strike was to be stopped, said State Education Commissioner Howard Porter yesterday.

"It's going to take a 1-cent sales tax if they're going to do anything more than raise salaries for teachers at $16,500 and raise the minimum salary for teachers at $13,800. Teachers' pay vital," Porter said.

Porter said the state has a media campaign that will be aimed at other Iowans that salaries must be raised.

"We're going to have to raise our comments and send them to newspapers so people can write our letters," Porter said.

Porter said the campaign will be aimed at the media and must be aimed at the people and not just at the teachers.

"If we're going to have teachers get a raise," Porter said, "it must be raised."

Porter said that he had heard that the teachers had made a proposal to the state to raise their salaries by 6 percent.

"I don't know if they're going to do anything about that," Porter said.

Iowa takes last shot at NCAA qualifying

By John Walker

• Assistant Sports Editor

Iowa women's swimmers will make the last, best attempt today to qualify for the NCAA team meet. Only a win over the Indiana State Friday and Saturday at the Hawkeye Aquatic Center will do it.

The Hawkeyes Invitational is the last meet of the season, so, as Bill Glass always says, a chance to qualify for the NCAA team meet is at stake.

In order to make the national qualifying standards, swimmers must compete in a 12 event, public competition, according to Iowa Coach Ken Karcher.

"We have it open to those who want to come," Karcher said. "We want to try to qualify in 240 and 400 freestyle relay teams, along with 40 meter medley relay teams.

We are going to try to make the 12," Karcher continued. "We have about 16 kids who want to make it."

Iowa will attempt to qualify in 400 and 800 freestyle relay teams, along with 40 meter medley relay teams. The Hawkeyes need to do well in the relays to qualify for the team meet.

"We are going to try to make the 16," Karcher continued. "We have about 16 kids who want to make the meet."

The last four, 50 and second relay will not be qualified for the team meet.

With 11 seconds remaining, Illinois went up 15 for the Hawkeyes, but the final three free throw attempts left them with an 84-75 win over Minnesota Sunday afternoon.

POLK: THE Big Ten's leading scorer, finished with 27 points in the win over Minnesota. Polk is fourth in the country in points per game.

KARNSTEDT: Wisconsin's second leading scorer, finished with 15 points in the win over Illinois. Karnstedt does not look nearing the NCAA team meet.

Raveling:

The Iowa senior, who is currently fourth in the nation in free throw attempts, was the only Hawkeye to score for the Hawkeyes in the second half.

"We are about to go out by the Hawkeyes because of the pressure of the Pac-10 team," Raveling said. "They are about to go out by the Hawkeyes because of the pressure of the Pac-10 team."

Iowa moves into the NCAA tournament after a 15-5 record this season.

Iowa has already qualified at NCAA qualifying

BYBill MWER

Iowa took its last shot at the NCAA meet Saturday, winning the 500 freestyle relay, as the Hawkeyes scored 1,350 points in the meet.

"We are going to try to make the 12," Karcher continued. "We have about 16 kids who want to make the meet."

The Hawkeyes Invitational is the last meet of the season, so, as Bill Glass always says, a chance to qualify for the NCAA team meet is at stake.

In order to make the national qualifying standards, swimmers must compete in a 12 event, public competition, according to Iowa Coach Ken Karcher.

"We have it open to those who want to come," Karcher said. "We want to try to qualify in 240 and 400 freestyle relay teams, along with 40 meter medley relay teams. The Hawkeyes need to do well in the relays to qualify for the team meet.

"We are going to try to make the 16," Karcher continued. "We have about 16 kids who want to make the meet."

The last four, 50 and second relay will not be qualified for the team meet.

Gymnastics

Karnstedt has been interested in gymnastics since grade school (Bengston), where he was a No. 1 singles player, and he is better than the Hawkeye doubles team. But the Iowa coach said, "We have the No. 1 singles player, and I think we improved 15 matches each in the past two years."

The "game" will be against three in-state tournaments. The meet is scheduled to start at 7 p.m. in the North Gym of the Field House.

Tennis

Iowa State has already played seven matches, including one in which the Hawkeyes' overall record was 9-3. Karnstedt has been interested in building up his strength and his exercise science major.

Karnstedt continued, "I came into the university and I didn't know what I wanted to do. I talked to my parents and because I was interested in gymnastics since grade school, I decided I would look into gymnastics information and I found Karnstedt in all his fields of study, winning the Iowa gymnastics team award for academic excellence the past two years."

Sex Pistols film captures mood of punk revolt

By Beth Luth

The punk explosion of the late 1970s is now history. It is now possible to look back at the period with the benefit of hindsight and see it in a new light. This is the story of the Sex Pistols, the band that started the revolution.

In America, punk is a much more middle-class phenomenon. Like English punks, these people are mostly young and (mostly) male. They are dressed in black, wear black makeup, and listen to music. A band named Black Flag has become the latest punk band to make its name. Their music is heavy and fast, with lyrics that are often violent and explicit. Their concerts are attended by a gang of young people who seem to be looking for a form of rebellion. Some participants say they go in just to "make the noise." DNA certainly does not put that punk in a revolutionary mood. This is its first venture into the world of violence and confusion, and the film does nothing.

French Lambert wants success from Hollywood

Hollywood (770) — Vive la France! —

Few Frenchmen have attained stardom in Hollywood. Lambert, 21, is a language student in France. He has been with the English rock groups, including the Sex Pistols and the Clash. Lambert has been called "the French Elvis" by some music critics.

Lambert was born in Paris and grew up in Germany. His parents are both actors. Lambert has been aspiring to Hollywood success for several years.

Now a handsomely dressed Frenchman, Lambert, 21, says he can't wait to see his movie. "I'm really looking forward to seeing it. I've been waiting for this moment for a long time," he says. "I've been working hard and I think it will pay off."

Lambert has been living in New York City for the past year and a half, trying to break into American film and television. He has appeared in several small roles in American films, including "The Jerk," "The Sting," and "The Blue Lagoon." Lambert's performances have received mixed reviews, but he has received praise for his ability to bring energy and vitality to his roles.

Lambert is currently in Los Angeles, where he hopes to land a major role in a Hollywood film. He has recently met with several agents and producers who are interested in representing him.

In the meantime, Lambert is focusing on his music. He has released two albums in France, "Le Monde" and "La Vie," which have received critical acclaim. Lambert's music is a blend of rock and roll, pop, and classical music. He has been compared to Elton John and David Bowie.

Lambert is excited about his upcoming film and is looking forward to his future in Hollywood. "I've always wanted to be a star," he says. "I want to be able to make a living doing what I love."

Lambert is currently working on a new album and plans to release it later this year. He is also hoping to tour the United States and Europe to promote his music.

Lambert is a talented musician and a promising actor. With hard work and dedication, he will surely achieve his dreams of Hollywood success.
Aquacize: Aerobics take to the pool

By Bryan Kehren
TWA Recreation Department

THE IRON MAN instructor at TWA Recreation Department is Christi Derocher. She received her certification in aquacizing from the National Dance Academy in Chicago. She now teaches aquacizing twice weekly at the Parker Aquatic Center in Iowa City.

Aquacizing is a type of aerobic exercise that combines swimming with calisthenics. It is particularly beneficial for older participants or those with injured or restricted joints.

Derocher starts by walking, then skips, lifts, twists, and kicks, working each of the body's major muscle groups. Aquacizing is my form of 'New Wave', she says. 'It's very beneficial for older participants or those with injured or restricted joints.'

She says that aquacizing is not only fun, but also provides a workout for the mind and body. 'It's like doing a puzzle every day,' she says. 'You have to work on your body and your mind at the same time.'

Aquacizing is offered by the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department and is taught by Christi Derocher. It is a great way to stay in shape and enjoy the benefits of exercise in a low-impact environment.
