Bill may diminish regent power

By Erik Brown

Legislative update

Board reports indicate that the regents need to make decisions about property that has been sold, raising the reports $8 million, and purchase some new in the next year.

TODAY, HOWEVER, the proposals from the regents and university officials have gone largely unchecked in the legislature.

This is especially true in the low-lege-

Collecting trash is a dirty job

But sanitation workers proud of vital service they perform

By Donald Norman

Reading his cigarette in a rarely contaminated manual, 6th Ward resident John Thomas Bachelder discussed his job. His neighbors might be in the middle of the city and dealing with the stickiness of a garbage can, but for Bachelder, life is simply a matter of cleaning up after people.

"You've got to do it," he said. "If you don't, people will just throw their trash on the ground.

"I've never thought about it," he continued. "I just do it because I have to."

Bachelder, 43, and his 21-year-old son, Jason, are two of the many sanitation workers employed by the City of Iowa City. They are the ones who walk the streets, picking up trash and fighting the war against litter.

"I've worked here for 21 years," Bachelder said. "I've been doing it since I was 16."

The job is not easy, he said. It is dirty and backbreaking, but it is also rewarding. "I like the fact that I get to be a part of keeping the city clean," he said. "I know that it makes a difference."

The work is not glamorous, he said. It is not something that people usuallythink about. "But it's important," he said. "People need to understand that this is a job that needs to be done."

Bachelder's son, Jason, 21, said he enjoys the job because of the satisfaction it brings. "I like the fact that I can help keep the city clean," he said. "It's not as glamorous as some jobs, but it's important."

HONOLULU (UPI) - Deputy Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos, breaking a month-long silence, said Friday he still considers himself president of his nation and dismissed the new government of Oman, "Cory" Aquino's "plain and simple dictatorship.

Marcos also attacked Aquino, calling her "a public enemy" and said negotiations between the two countries "seems to me it exposed the military weakness of both nations."

"If we're going to start down this script, we're going to have to wonder," he said, adding he would rather keep fighting than give in to Aquino's demands.

"(If Aquino) in the Philippines is the case, I cannot have learned nothing from the U.S. war in Vietnam," he said.

Polar winds clear Anchorage of volcanic ash

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Clouds of ash that for three days had blocked all flights out of Anchorage and had stranded travelers seeking flights to the city were cleared yesterday by winds from the north.

"It was a continuous band of ashes with a pilot's view of zero," said Bruce Johnson, senior offticer of the Anchorage-based Alaska National Guard. "We've never seen anything like it in our lives." The Guard was called in after the volcano erupting over the weekend, which sent a wave of ash across the lower 48 states.

"It's been a disaster," said Johnson. "We've had to evacuate people, close highways, and deal with the aftermath of the eruption. But now that we've got the winds coming in, we can start to bring things back to normal." The volcano is still active, however, and the city remains on high alert.

Regents

Regents, who had already planned to begin "spring" meetings next week, began this week to discuss the state of Iowa's economy.

"The regents are leading the way and are committed to making sure Iowa's economy thrives," said Governor Tom Nagle. "We need the authority of a law with a lot of rhetoric and a lot of sense to get us out of this mess." The regents are considering various options to stimulate the economy, including tax breaks for businesses and increased funding for education.

"I know of no one else who can help Iowa's farmers," said Senator John Moore. "I've worked with the USDA and we need to make sure Iowa's farmers are protected." The regents are also considering ways to support the university, which has been struggling in recent years.

Redfern

"I think there's a lot of potential in Iowa for businesses to grow and thrive," said Redfern. "We need to make sure we have the right infrastructure in place to support these businesses."

Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos said today that he opposes the United States' decision to allow his former wife, Imelda, to enter the Philippines.

"I'm sad that Imelda will be allowed to enter the Philippines," said Marcos. "She's been living in exile for years and I don't think she should be allowed to come back."

Marcos has been living in exile in Alaska since his presidency was overturned in 1986. He was later arrested in the Philippines and spent 10 years in jail before being released. He now lives in Anchorage.

"I think Imelda is a symbol of the corruption that went on under her husband's reign," said Marcos. "She's been living high on her past and I don't think she should be allowed to come back to the Philippines."

Marcos' comments come as the Philippines prepares to hold a presidential election. The election is expected to be a close race, with many candidates running on anti-corruption platforms.

"I'm hopeful that the Philippines will finally see some change," said Marcos. "I think the country needs a new direction and I'm hopeful that the people will be able to give the country a new start."
A fool and his money...

The issue has plagued sports enthusiasts against illegal activities. In the last few years, the government has counted thousands of dollars in fines and penalties. This week, the Department of Justice announced a new plan to thoroughly investigate these issues.

Real basketball analyst George Rawling announced he would be stepping down as coach to take a job in the film industry at the University of Southern California. Rawling repeated many times he would not comment on his departure.

Rawling's decision to go west came the same week that the status of faculty salaries at the UI became official.

According to a recent article, UI salaries are now at least the lowest in the Big Ten, with the average UI salary coming in at just $45,000 with benefits.

White lawmakers have discussed at length the plight of faculty salaries, but they have also indicated that little will be done to correct it in the near future.

Some faculty fear that the current admistration simply does not care about their concerns.

For the record, I'm opposed to the notion that we can afford to raise tuition fees. We need to start making some hard choices about where we're going to allocate our resources.

Don't lease school books. A lot of students have been directed toward the credit card market in recent years. Credit cards offer a range of benefits, but they also come with some drawbacks.

For one thing, credit cards can be a trap. If you're not careful, you can easily get into debt.

Here are some tips on how to use credit cards

effectively:

1. Understand the terms:

- Know your APR (annual percentage rate).
- Be aware of any fees or penalties.
- Read the fine print.

2. Set a budget:

- Only spend what you can afford to pay off each month.
- Keep track of your spending.

3. Avoid unnecessary purchases:

- Don't buy things you don't need.
- Think before you spend.

4. Pay off your balance:

- Try to pay off your balance in full each month.
- If you can't, pay as much as you can.

5. Get a second opinion:

- Consider getting a second opinion before signing up for a credit card.

Remember: credit cards can be a useful tool, but they require responsibility and discipline.

Digressions

March 21 is the day to allow the United States to conduct its own testing.
Congress, as usual, has been unable to agree on a plan. The White House has expressed its support for further testing, while the United Nations has called for a moratorium.

President Bush is expected to announce a new plan to resume testing. The administration has promised to consult with allies and the international community as it moves forward.

According to the United States Defense Department, the United States has conducted 20 nuclear tests since the United Nations moratorium went into effect in 1996.

However, the United States continues to conduct nuclear explosions. The United States has announced it will conduct 762 new nuclear tests by 2010.

The United States is the only country that has conducted nuclear tests

in recent years.

Some final thoughts on the Oscar picks

By Economic Observer

Well, the season is over and the winners have celebrated and reaped the rewards of a year of hard work and dedication. It is a time of joy and celebration, as the hard work of the past year is rewarded with accolades and recognition. The Oscars are a testament to the dedication and hard work of the film industry, and it is a time to celebrate the achievements of those who have worked so hard to bring us the best in film.

Film star Cagney dies at 86

STANDFORDVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — James Cagney, the one-man musical comedy machine who thrilled movie audiences with his singing, dancing and acting, died today at his home in a New York suburb. He was 86 years old.

Cagney was one of the most popular and effective actors of his generation, known for his energetic performances and his ability to bring audiences to their feet with his singing and dancing. He was a master of the musical comedy form, and his performances in films such as "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "White Heat" were regarded as some of the best in the genre.

A native of New York City, Cagney began his career in vaudeville and later moved to Hollywood, where he quickly became a star. He appeared in dozens of films over the course of his career, including "Gangster," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," and "White Heat." He was also known for his work on Broadway, where he starred in such classics as "The Great Garrick" and "The Roaring Twenties.

Cagney was married three times and fathered three children. He is survived by his wife, the former Virginia Van ERP, and by his children, James, Jr., and Annabella.

Justices to consider sodomy

test case

The U.S. Supreme Court is to consider a test case on whether the federal government has the power to prohibit sodomy, or engaging in homosexual sex.

The case, known as "Romer v. Evans," was brought by a gay rights group in Colorado that challenged a state constitutional amendment that banned sodomy.

The court has not ruled on the issue before and is expected to make a decision this term. Although the case is about sodomy, it could have implications for other areas of American law, including affirmative action policies and workplace discrimination.

The court's decision is likely to be closely watched by gay rights activists around the country, who hope it will signal a shift in the court's stance on the issue.

Parenting

By Phil Thomas

The latest parenting tips from experts around the country are being discussed in the latest issue of "Parenting Today," a popular publication focused on the latest trends in parenting.

The issue features articles on a wide range of topics, including the benefits of breast-feeding, the importance of early childhood education, and the role of technology in modern parenting.
