Contra aid linked with spending bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) -House Democrats killed Republican efforts Tuesday to keep President Ronald Reagan's request for aid to the Nicaraguan rebels from being hitched to a spending bill which the president is expected to veto.

Reagan, pressing his case for aid to the Contras, appealed to the House to promptly approve $100 million for the Nicaraguan insurgents to help stop the spread of communist subversion that he charged is being bankrolled by Libya's Moammar Kha-

But his request for the rebels was locked to a $1.7 billion spending bill containing such popular programs as emergency flood relief, nutrition assistance, relief for the farmers and aid to Northern Ireland. The administration opposes much of the spending called for in the bill and there have been repeated warnings Reagan would veto it.

"THE REPUBLICANS want to fund the Contras, but not the combines," Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., told the House.

The House defeated two efforts by the GOP to separate the issues by votes of 221-202 and 212-208.

Lawmakers recessed after the votes and were to meet Wednesday morning to finish debate and vote on Reagan's proposal to give the Contras arms and other assistance, as well as alternatives that deny or restrict the assistance.

House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois said the Democratic majority was "rolling out this great bursting barrel of rancid pork on the floor of the House. There has not been so much pork seen in one place since the last Porky Pig film festival."

BUT REP. DAVID Bonior, D-Mich., said the Democratic leadership, when it agreed last month to allow another vote on the Contra aid, did not obligate itself to provide the Republicans with an independent legislative vehicle for the $100 million request.

Reagan, speaking to a business group about Monday night's U.S. bombing of Libya, said the House should not underestimate "the reach of Khadafy's terror.

"I would remind the House that this arch terrorist has sent $400 million and weapons and advisers into Nicaragua," Reagan said.

SPEAKER O'Neill, D-Mass., said it was wrong for Reagan to use the strikes against Libya as political leverage to win support of aid for the Contras.

These are two completely different matters," O'Neill said.

O'Neill and others have charged that Reagan's package is a prelude to sending U.S. forces into the Central America fighting.

FAA compliance concern of council

By Brian Lott

The Iowa City Council ejected a long-term plan for the city's airport Tuesday light a turned its sights to the implicate concern of bringing ne airport within ederal compliance.

"I sense that the reception is rather soft on this council to go into elaborate expansion of the airport," said Iowa City Mayor William Ambrisco.

The councilors, who debated both short- and long-term proposals for airport improvements, also informally voted to table a decision on an $800,000 "compliance project." That project would bring the airport within Federal Aviation Administration regulations, enabling it to receive future federal funding.

BIDS WERE opened last Thursday on $800,000 worth of onds to be used for the com-Pliance project. That money will be used to buy land that would extend the airport's main runway 355 feet.

The compliance project will resolve a complaint filed by the FAA in 1982, which cited the airport for runway length infractions. While funds for the project have already been allocated by the city, Acting City Manager Dale Helling pointed out that the council can withhold those funds.

"The council can always make a policy change," Helling said. "You have made a policy commitment, but you need to decide whether or not to negate that commitment. The remainder of that (bond) money can still go toward other projects."

IOWA CITY Airport Manager Fred Zehr, however, said that the "compliance project" needs to be completed if the airport is to remain "safe and viable." He asked the council to act as quickly as possible on the measure.

Zehr stressed the airport improvements could boost economic development in Iowa City. He also warned the council that the airport has an increased liability as some planes continue to operate on what he called "marginal"

"I believe if we had a longer runway and a more sophisticated instrument system, businesses with larger aircraft would feel more comfortable with our airport," he said. "But it's not the safest situa-

AIRPORT officials urged the council to move forward with the project, pointing out that bids for the project will fall short of that estimate.

"Actually, construction for that project was estimated at $286,000," Zehr said. "With the land acquisition, the total cost may run as low as $600,000."

Richard Blum, president of the Iowa Public Airport Association, said that if the councilors decide to cut off funding for the compliance project it could endanger future state funding for airport projects.

"DECISIONS have to be made on the state level on which airports to fund," he said. "From what I've heard in meetings in Des Moines, those airports which do not meet FAA compliance probably won't be slated for funds." Ambrisco asked Zehr if these compliance requests were a result of the FAA trying to "make an example" of Iowa City for its infractions.

"Do you feel that the FAA has it in for Iowa City?" said Ambrisco. "Are general aviation airports something they don't want?"

Zehr replied that the FAA is not trying to "blackball" general aviation airports. He added, however, that "they do have a bad taste about Iowa

Suspected Nazi war criminal on trial

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia - Suspected Nazi war criminal Andrija Artukovic, contradicting himself and pleading memory loss, denied Tuesday he was involved in the World War II murders of hundreds of women and children.

Artukovic, 86, accused in the deaths of thousands of civilians during the war in the Nazi puppet state of Croatia, was questioned for more than two hours by Chief Judge Milko Gajski on the second day of his trial in Zagreb District Court.

Artukovic had been sought by Yugoslavia for 35 years and was extradited from the United States Feb. 12. He was allegedly involved in mass murders from 1941-45, when he was police minister in Nazi-allied Croatia.

Reluctant victim goes to electric chair

STARKE, Fla. — Gangleader Daniel Morris Thomas was dragged kicking and screaming obscenities to the electric chair and executed Tuesday for murdering a man and raping his wife as his victim lay dying.

Seven men had to strap Thomas into Florida's "Ole Sparky" only 24 minutes after the Supreme Court refused to grant him a stay of execution.

"Get off me or I'll kill you," the 37-year-old man screamed at the unarmed officers who held him down. He finally calmed and was allowed to read a final

New data links smoking, heart disease

ST. LOUIS - Two researchers released a study Tuesday that they said provides a clue in the link between cigarette smoking and heart disease.

Working with cows, the two said they found an element of cigarette smoke - known as tobacco glycoprotein binds to smooth muscle cells. The researchers called the binding a key event in the arterial clogging that often leads to heart disease.

Lyng announces new beef programs

WASHINGTON — Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng Tuesday announced the beginning of the weekly government purchase of canned beef to offset a bulge of cows going to slaughter under a federal program to trim dairy

Lyng also announced a new program to bolster the market for grain-fattened beef by purchasing boneless roasts after May 14.

Elaborating on intentions announced earlier, he said the government will begin weekly purchases of cooked hams after May 5. Earlier, he announced that weekly purchases of frozen ground beef will begin next week.

Lyng said purchase of 5.76 million pounds of canned beef, the first transaction to offset the dairy program, was one of the largest single purchases of the product.

Striking union won't admit wrongdoing

MINNEAPOLIS - Maverick union meatpackers said Tuesday they are refusing to admit they disobeyed an order by their parent union to end their bitter, eightmonth strike against Geo. A. Hormel & Co. in Austin,

"We haven't admitted anything," said Lynn Huston, vice president of Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union. "We haven't even admitted we are on strike.

About two dozen local and international union officers attended the second day of a closed hearing called by the parent union to determine whether Local P-9 obeyed a March 14 order to end the strike. Houston Local 455 President Ray Wooster is conducting the hearing.

Reorganization bill approval expected from committee

Legislative Writer

DES MOINES — A legislative conference committee is expected to formally approve a bill reorganizing state government today, paving the way for final passage of the package that lawmakers have been laboring over since January.

The committee added the finishing touches to the massive bill Tuesday evening ending a three-week deadlock that was threatening to prolong the current session of the Iowa Legislature past its scheduled adjournment date later this month.

This action followed a closed meeting involving legislative leaders earlier in the day that produced several key compromises. Aides said the lively 90-minute discussion between top Democrats and Republicans could be overheard in adjacent rooms at times.

"That was definitely the meeting of the session," said Iowa House of Representatives Speaker Donald Avenson, D-Oelwein. "A group of friends got together and decided on the future of Iowa.

In order to meet a deadline of noon today set by Avenson and other legislative leaders, staff members worked late into Tuesday night putting together a final draft of the bill.

A decision by Wisconsin lawmakers will probably guarantee that the Iowa Legislature will approve a bill raising the state's legal drinking age to 21 before the end of the month.

It was announced eariler this week that the Wisconsin Legislature will convene later this spring to pass a similar drinking age bill, as well as toughen that state's drunk driving laws.

House Majority Leader Lowell Norland, D-Kensett, said Tuesday that Iowa legislators will now be compelled to follow suit in order to prevent the creation of a so-called "bloody border" between the two

The "bloody border" argument is based on the theory that traffic fatalities will increase in the state if underaged teenagers from Wisconsin can come to Iowa to buy beer and liquor.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Sen. George Kinley, D-Des Moines, announced Tuesday that he will call for a one cent sales tax increase and freeze state hiring for four years if elected.

Under a plan released by Kinley, the extra revenues these actions would generate would be used to pay debts facing the state, increase funding for a variety of exisiting programs and create a $28 million surplus contingency account.

Kinley, who has been trailing other candidates for governor in recent polls, said most leading Iowa politicians realize a tax hike will be needed to increase revenues next year.

"I think it's time to be candid with people," Kinley said. "It's time to cut the politics out of it and really get down to it."

Kinley's plan estimates a one cent sales tax increase will generate an additional $700 million during the next four

About $235 million of this money would be set aside to retire previous obligations such as high interest rate bonds issued by the state Board of Regents.

About $320 million will be spent on increasing funding for local schools and another $80 million would be earmarked for research and development programs.

Courts

By Bruce Japsen Staff Writer

Attorneys of three men charged with raping a former UI coed at a dormitory party last fall may be anticipating a trial, according to documents filed Tuesday in Johnson County District Court.

Although the attorneys say they are still uncertain if the case will be set to trial, one of the attorneys filed a motion requesting the court to hear several motions they say are "crucial" to the defense of their clients.

Lance F. Alvarez, 20, of 840 Maggard St., Augustin Alexander Clarke, 22, of 1000 W. Benton St., and James E. Lee Jr., of 516 E. Fairchild St., were initially charged with second-degree sexual abuse for the incident on Nov. 9.

UI CAMPUS SECURITY charged the three men with sexually abusing a 20-year-old woman in Mayflower Residence Hall, Nov. 9, court records state. Second-degree sexual abuse carries a maximum sentence of 25 years in "We don't know," Clarke's attorney Joe Johnston said. "There's not been anything new other than what's been said in court. I can't really comment on a case that's still in court." Johnston and Iowa City attorneys Clemens Erdahl and Dennis Clark are also requesting a transcript of last Friday's hearing at which the three were expected to be sentenced on a lesser charge of assault. All three submitted written guilty pleas to a lesser charge two months ago to avoid being tried for rape. They were expected to be sentenced on assault charges carring a maximum sentence of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

BUT THE HEARING was marked by confusion between the presiding judge and the attorneys. Johnson County District Court Judge L. Vern Robinson stormed from the courtroom, saying he would set the case to trial. Although Robinson has yet to submit a trial order, the defendants' attorneys are requesting a hearing on several motions that include evidence that the defendants took and passed polygraph examinations. The alleged victim refused to take such an examination, the motion states.

In addition, the motion states that the defendants have previously moved to allow the admissibility of the polygraph examinations.

Attorneys also state that there is substantial evidence that all of the defendants had consumed large quantities of alcohol during a dormitory "golf" party at the alleged victim's invitation.

If the case goes to trial, it is expected to last for more than five days, according to a motion filed by Erdahl

Use of animals in UI research argued

By Mary Beth Kaminski

The wing strength of anifare groups nationwide has affected UI research but not in any major way, according to UI officials.

"My impression is that most of the changes have been minor,' said Brian Harvey, associate director of UI sponsored programs, about alterations of when and how UI researchers use research animals

Actions prompted by animal activists in the past year that affect UI research include the creation of a committee to approve the use of research animals: discontinuation of laboratory animal sales by the Rock Island, Ill., animal shelter; and introduction of a bill in the Iowa Senate to restrict research facilities in acquiring state-impounded dogs and

THESE ACTIONS are "a direct result of increased awareness in this country as a result of lobbying from animal welfare groups," Harvey said. Harvey explained that the UI Animal Care and Use Committee - composed of scientists, researchers and one person maffiliated with the UI - has reviewed the use of animals in

"We determined it's not much of a problem in our state," says lowa Sen. James D.

Wells about animal abuse in research facilities.

UI experiments since Dec. 1,

Harvey said a directive by Health Service prompted the UI to set up the committee. The UI gets 90 percent of its research grants through the National Institute of Health, a branch of Public Health Service.

Despite the additional work involved in getting research projects approved by the committee, Harvey said the measure's effect has been beneficial to UI researchers.

"Investigators have improved grant applications because of this," he said. "This helps get proposals awarded by the grant-awarding institution. I think it's been good."

WHILE THE Rock Island, Ill., ordinance prohibiting its animal shelter from selling animals to research facilities isn't described as "good" by UI Veterinarian Paul Cooper, he said it has had "no drastic effect" on the UI.

"It's up to the city" whether to restrict the sale of impounded animals, Cooper said. "The UI deals only with pounds willing to turn over animals.'

As animal rights activists pressure more cities to enact ordinances restricting animal sales, however, Cooper sees "more and more of an increasing effect.

Because the UI does business only with pounds willing to sell animals for research, the UI should not be adversely affected if the "pound-seizure repeal bill" in the Iowa Senate passes, Cooper said.

ACCORDING TO the Senate file, "this bill repeals chapter 351A which permits authorized institutions to obtain abandoned dogs from a pound for use in scientific research."

Iowa Sen. James D. Wells, D.-Cedar Rapids, said although the bill is "very much of a live issue" as far as animal welfare supporters are concerned, there wasn't "that strong a case for passage of the bill.'

Wells, who is on the subcommittee considering the bill, explained that while the bill's supporters were very well organized in showing proof of abuses against laboratory animals, those abuses were not evident in Iowa facilities.

BUT ANIMAL activists point to the Rock Island ordinance prohibiting the sale of its animals to the UI and other research institutes as proof that there is a problem.

"There was a city council meeting," said Gretchen Hersman, member of the National Anti-Vivisection Society, an organization opposed to the use of laboratory animals. "It was the consensus of the people in the area that it was a horrible problem.'

Wells said that because the Iowa Senate will close soon, "the bill is probably dead" for

But Wells contended the issue of animal welfare is not dead. He suggested an area that welfare groups might address is the population explosion of animals that causes many to be put to sleep each year.

"Two-hundred and eighty dogs were put to sleep in Des Moines last year," Wells said. 'We should be zeroing in on neutering and spaying dogs to cut down on the number of dogs put to death.'

Denying charges that the Johnson County Sheriff's Department discouraged one employee from joining the Army Reserves, an official said Tuesday the department did not stand in the way of that Captain Doug Edmonds, of the countys sheriff's department, told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors the charges were more than a misunderstanding among the sheriff's department, the board and an army recruiter.

Edmonds told the board that the problem resulted after a jail house employee talked with him about joining the Army Reserves. He said the employee asked whether this experience would help her get promoted to deputy sheriff.

Edmunds explained, however, that after discussing the possibility with her, "she called her recruiter and backed out."

"To paint it as a simple misunderstanding is to oversimplify. That we threatened to fire (her) is absolutely ridiculous,'

On shore, NASA engineers were eagerly examining a giant piece of charred wreckage from the rocket joint that ruptured Jan. 28, dooming the shuttle and its seven-member crew. Photographs clearly showed a jagged, apparently melted hole in the joint area where a tongue of flame spewed out with deadly results.

"I feel frankly very good that we have found that particular piece as does the (presidential) commission, and we're going to put our very best efforts to analyzing it," said Rear Adm. Richard Truly, chief of the shuttle program.

A spokesman in the department's terrorism working communications technician was shot in the head by a gunman about 10 p.m. (Sudan time) while driving his car on a Khartoum street.

One must listen carefully to Reagan administration aides to find out what message they are really sending. Get out your dictionary, George and Casper, you're confusing the American public. But confusion may very well be the administration's intent.

During the press briefing conducted by Secretary of State George Shultz and Secretary of Defense Casper Veinberger, we received conflicting messages on the ature of the bombing of Libya. Shultz — and President Ronald Reagan — asserted the military action was in self-defense; Weinberger insisted upon calling the action

Maybe it's being picky, but the definition of attack is ontrary to the term self-defense. To attack is to take the offensive. It applies to any offensive action, especially the beginning of planned aggression (as in a "terrorist attack").

On the other hand, self-defense means protecting neself when attacked. Moammar Khadafy's army's shooting down a plane in the act of bombing Libya would be self-defense.

Many Americans applaud the attack — and "attack" is used as previously defined — believing this will eventually lead to a world free of terrorism. It is naively believed the Khadafy regime is largely responsible for the terrorism in the world, as we overlook other sources of terrorism and unrest.

One should approve of such attacks when and only when our government also bombs cities such as Pretoria or Johannesburg, South Africa, so as to do away with the terrorists who invade Namibia and other countries of southern Africa. Yes, indeed, there are white terrorists in the world.

Rambo Reagan and other such folk must believe there s an invisible force field that surrounds the United States of America that will repel retaliations.

U.S. citizens are used to the "war" (whether declared or not) happening elsewhere. We're aghast that we're not treated as gods elsewhere and know damn well that they won't try anything in the good old U.S. of A.

We all need to realize there is a grain of truth in what the president said on Monday and Tuesday. There was concern before the attack about innocent Libyan civilians being killed; when it was learned there were civilian casualties the administration said the Libyan people must realize that with a leader like Khadafy they are the ones who will pay as long as he is in power. The implied message was that the Libyan people should work to change (i.e. overthrow) that country's

We need to bring that message home; unless there are changes made in our government and with a leader like Reagan we will be the ones who pay.

None for the road

Much opposition has been voiced regarding the Iowa Legislature's pending decision on raising the drinking age from 19 to 21.

The primary objective of the legislation is to reduce the number of young drunks on Iowa highways. This purpose is commendable and bears a rational relationship to the objective sought.

More than half of the accidents occurring on the nation's highways are alcohol related. The 19- to 21-year-old age group is responsible for a sizable portion of this percentage. The legislation will not prevent all young adults in this category from drinking and driving. It will prevent some. The cost of saving lives represents a far more compelling interest than the 19- to 21-year-olds' right to get drunk.

However, the federal government needs to show some consistency in its criteria for what constitutes adult-

It is inconsistent to require a young man to submit to the draft, require him to perform the duties and responsibilities of a man, yet say he cannot drink like one. The outrage such an individual must feel is understandable. The outrage some students are expressing, however, is somewhat misplaced.

Privilege carries responsibility. The slogan "two for one, not 21" represents the type of mentality among young adults that the legislature is attempting to eliminate.

There is a rational relationship between raising the drinking age and eliminating the number of young drung on Iowa's highways. The federal government, hower, must establish some criteria denting and hood which is consistent in bestowing benefits and burdens among young adults. Otherwise, the burden of serving one's country may necessitate granting the benefit of drinking — if only for the sake of consistency.

Parenting retrieves the past

VERY TIME I drive over to Southeast Junior High School to pick up Joel I am amazed that he is a junior high student. Wasn't it just last year that he was a 2-year-old? And wasn't I a junior high student myself the year before that?

That's the way it seems. In fact, it feels as though there is still a junior high student trapped inside me, yearning to get out. Kind of an itchy feeling, like somebody running his fingers along the inside of my epidermis.

A few months back, feeling bad about having gotten a C on a math test, Joel asked me what my grades were like when I was in junior high.

"Not too great," I admitted. That was all Joel wanted to know. But for my own sake, just for the excitement of a trip down masochism lane. I plunged into my file cabinet and came out with three old report cards from Alice Deal Junior High. A sprinkling of D minuses and F's in geography, history and Latin. No A's except in music, art and typewere in English.

But I had trouble with my attitude. It was bad. On every report card for three years I received F's in Cooperation ("willingness to work well with others") and Courtesy ("respect for the rights and feelings of others"). They came from a variety of classes metalshop, science, English, math, geography, Latin, business and homeroom. Every semester there would be a couple more.

"There is no excuse for these F's in conduct," my eighthde nomeroom teacher, Mrs. Windmuller, wrote on one report card. (On another, toward the end of the year, she pleaded, "Will you please ask Tom to keep his shirt buttoned while at school? He resents my telling him.")

IN SEVENTH GRADE I was so intractable that for a month or so I had to carry with me to every class a sheet on which my homeroom teacher had written, "Please mark Tommy on class atittude."

My teachers wrote, "Did not do his homework. D on test. Poor attention." Occasionally, if I had been angelic, they wrote grudgingly, "OK today." Every day I had to bring this sheet home and try to get my parents to sign it without read-

Was that time as traumatic and woeful as it seems to me

In the dreadful sentimentalism of middle age, I think of my 12- or 13-year-old self as "that poor kid." I want to go back, to find the ghost of that poor kid and give him a hug. To say, "Calm down, kid. I know you're anguished and uncertain, I know you ache with longings that are inchoate and undefined, I know you want to sing great songs of joy and to soar to great heights. Take my word for it, kid. You'll do all right eventually."

AT THAT TIME, of course, being more sensible than I am now, I didn't feel sorry for myself, but for my teachers.

I remember philosophizing about this with my friend Martin as we rode home on the bus one afternoon. Our hearts were pounding. Ten minutes earlier we had carried out a daring after-school raid on the teachers' lounge (which, fortunately, was not occupied), which netted us not only the water pistols Miss Herschel had taken from us that morning in English class, but seven other confiscated water pistols and two or three peashooters. as well.

I could not understand, I told Martin (in between squirting pedestrians from the bus window), why anybody would elect to become a junior-high teacher; that seemed like the most thankless job in the world. Martin, aiming his peashooter at the bus driver's head, said he was inclined to believe that being a garbage collector might be worse.

WHEN I LOOK BACK, that era seems like a time of prelapsarian innocence. A school full of students who thought coke was something you drank from a bottle and who would not have known marijuana from parsley, sage, rosemary or thyme; who did not drop out, of school at 13 to have babies; and who had no reason to fear, with placid old Ike in the White House, that life on earth might be extinguished in mushroom cloud before schoollet out for the summer.

A very different time from now. And Joel, thank God, is very different from what I

By Circe Stumbo GRAMM-Rudman Balanced Budget Act has had devastating effects ucation. Through education. Gramm-Rudman, millions of dollars in grants and financial aid have been cut. At the UI, Pell Grants alone will be cut by a total of $869,306.

Nearly half of the students currently receiving Pell Grants will lose part or all of their grants this fall. Those who receive grants from $250 to $850 will not receive a grant next year. Further, Guaranteed Student Loans will be harder to get and students may have to pay up to $500 a year in interest payments while they are in school.

We as students have not been sitting idly by accepting these cuts, however. Through organizations such as the UI Collegiate Associations Council and the UI Student Senate, we have been fighting for higher funding for education and we have been successful.

The letters students have sent and calls students have made to our legislators have had a positive effect. We can now look forward to two pieces of legislation in favor of educa-

I'm proud of the students and community members who have spoken up in support of education. Without the voices of the public, these proposals never would have been made. This shows that we can make a difference.

WE MUST NOT, however, think that our work is done. At this point, these are still proposals. We must contact our senators and representatives in Washington in support of the education amendment and the Pell Grant supplemental allocation.

Now is our chance to really make a difference. The UI CAC and student senate are sponsoring a Phone-In Day today. If we can flood our representatives' offices with phone calls, they will have to take notice.

We must encourage our senators to co-sponsor and vote yes on the education amendment and our representatives in the House to support the Pell Grant supplemental allocation. Phone lines in the CAC/ Student Senate office will be open today for anyone to place a free call to their legislators. If you cannot make it in, call from your home.

The numbers to call and further information are available in the CAC/Student Senate office in the Union. The phone number there is 353-5467 or 353-5461.

Make your voice heard in Washington. Together we can insure that education remains a top priority in our nation.

Enrile, a leader of the revolt that brought President Corazon "Cory" Aquino to power Feb. 25, issued the warning as Aquino denounced political violence that left one dead and 32 wounded Monday.

In remarks carried by the state-run news agency, Enrile expressed concern over the Aquino government's ouster of town and city mayors and provincial governors who belong to Marcos' party, the New Society Movement, or KBL.

LOCAL KBL officials across the nation have defied the orders removing them and in some cases have barricaded themselves inside municipal buildings with the help of

MARCOS IS currently in exile in Hawaii after fleeing his palace in Manila the day Aquino took power. In the Metropolitan Manila

At least 18 police and 15 demonstrators were wounded, including one protester who died Tuesday with a bullet wound in the head, the news agency said.

"The president deplores this violence and sympathizes with the victims," Aquino's press secretary, Rene Saguisag, said.

Mexico, U.S. agree to extend border security

CANCUN, Mexico (UPI) Attorney General Edwin Meese said Tuesday the United States and Mexico have agreed to increase sec-urity along their 2,000-mile border to keep terrorists out of the United States.

The announcement came at the conclusion of two days of private talks between Meese and the Mexican Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez in the Caribbean resort of Cancun, 775 miles east of Mexico City.

It was the fourth meeting between the two justice officials in less than a year, an indication of how important each government views border problems that range from drug trafficking to illegal immigra-

"We talked about a joint cooperative effort against terrorism and how, through the exchange of intelligence and information, we can control people crossing the border and work together to protect each country against terrorist attacks," Meese told reporters.

FACTOR ONE influenced the board's decision was the recent case of Indiana junior high school student Ryan White, said board member Kathy Hiratzka.

White, a seventh grader at Kokomo, Indiana, returned to classes last week after a judge threw out an injunction barring him from school. The boy contracted AIDS during treatment for hemophilia in December 1984. "I'd be willing to make a bet that we're (the district) not alone in making a policy," Hiratzka said. "That sort of thing can get so blown out of control and be detrimental for all involved.'

Local physician Donald Macfarlane sent a letter to the board about two weeks ago stressing the importance of keeping such cases confidential. But Rosenberger said Tuesday there is little difference between Macfarlane's suggestions and the policy that was approved.

"We feel the policy that we have now encompasses his ideas," Rosenberg said.

Sen. Mike Colby, a strong supporter of the resolution, argued that the senate is as appropriate a forum for the cussion as any.

"We are student senators. We're human beings. We're members of the world community," Colby said.

Sen. Mike Gainer agreed, but said debate on the issue should not take place at a senate meeting.

After the meeting senate President Joe Hansen defended consideration of such issues at senate meetings.

Hansen cited Tuesday's rally on the Pentacrest, where opponents and supporters of the U.S. bombing of Libya clashed, as a reason why the issue should be dealt with at senate meetings.

"I think it is very relevant for the Student Senate to facilitate debate when there is such an outburst," Hansen said.

"Both sides got in some goods licks," LASA President Gordon Fischer said.

When the LASA debate ended, the legislation condemning the U.S. actions in Libya passed by a slight margin.

"We felt the U.S. bombing of Libya was not a good policy choice and morally left a lot to desire," Fischer said. Part of the senate legislation was an announcement of a speakers forum that will be held April 23 at 8:00 p.m. in Phillips Hall.

Colby, who has planned the event, said supporters and opponents of Monday's bombings will be invited to take part in the forum.

The Pentacrest rally tarnished the UI's reputation, Colby said, adding that the forum will be a more mature way to handle the situation.

"After the uncivilized way they came out today, we need it." Colby said.

Ticket policy hurts loyal fans

The recently announced requirement that students attending football games next fall must produce both student and picture identification cards is ustified from a technical andpoint, but is noneth as a "coffee and danish rule" which attempts to eradicate a problem that does

The ticket office and Board in Control of Athletics apparently identified a "problem" - students have been selling their tickets to non-students. So, faced with the alternative of inaction, the Board pproved a modification that penalizes students, nonstudent Iowa fans and even the Hawkeye football team itself, and benefits absolutley

With this new policy the University obviously hopes to prevent students from selling their tickets to non-students. "It's not fair for tickets to end up in the hands of nonstudents," UI ticket manager last season.

Mike Naughton said recently. Why isn't it fair? Who benefits from preventing such transac-

IF NOT A single student sells a football ticket to a non-student next fall, the Univerisity of Iowa gains nothing. No added revenue whatsoever will result. So why is this policy necessary? What is its

Apparently the University does not want non-students who are unable to buy tickets through the ticket office to watch the Hawkeyes play. They don't want these people - who are loyal Iowa boosters to obtain tickets intended for students. But why? Who is hurt when that happens? As stated above, the University loses nothing when students sell tickets to nonstudents. Obviously the student selling his ticket loses nothing, and in fact makes money. And of course the nonstudent gets a rare opportunity to see his or her beloved Hawkeyes. This "scalping" is perhaps unethical, but certainly not harmful.

IN THE PAST a student who had a test to study for, had other plans or simply didn't want to go to a game had a huge market in which to peddle his ticket. Now that market has been restricted to non-ticket holding students. This means, quite probably, that there will be empty seats in the end zone and elsewhere - seats that would have been warmed by the black and gold blood of Hayden Fry worship-

It's those people who are really hurt by the new policy. Literally thousands of students have, in the past, invited family and friends to Iowa City to see the Hawkeyes play, patronize the local restaurants and bars, and enjoy the city as a whole. That will end.

NO LONGER can students phone a friend or put up a sign in order to obtain a ticket for a non-student. The entire student section will be exclusively that; a student section. The only non-student fans in attendence will be the usual high-browed, fat-walleted football wimps that have always sat in the stadium's finest

These are the people who rarely stand, ruin "the wave" and seem to feel too important to cheer in the manner most students exhibit. But that is generally not the case with a student's friends and family. Speaking from experience, these fans are the most supportive in the stadium each weekend.

The reason is obvious. Give a See Tickets, Page 2B

Iowa wrestling Coach Dan Gable obtained two more high school state champions Tuesday, running his 1986 recruiting total to four and further padding a talentladen Iowa mat roster.

The Hawkeyes secured Scott Glenn of Albany, Oregon and Mike Carpenter of St. Edward High School in North Olmstead, Ohio, the same school that produced three current Iowa wrestlers, 150-pound national champion Jim Heffernan, his brother John, and Jeff Strauss.

Carpenter will wrestle in the middle weights, possibly 150, and Glenn will likely compete at 134 or 142. The pair joins Rick Novak of Cedar Rapids Prairie High

Cubs, Sox have early problems

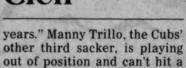

Baseball season started only a week ago and already Windy City fans are howling with anger. Following yesterday's Cubs' loss to Montreal, the combined record of the Cubs and White Sox stands at 2-11.

Many friends of mine who are die-hard fans of these two teams have suggested ideas, ranging from firing the manager to replacing the Statue of Liberty with Cubs' third baseman Ron Cey. What is the problem with these two clubs? Let's take a closer look.

First, and most important, it is early in the season. Remember, the Cubs and Sox still have over 150 games each to play. Defending National League champion St. Louis started off slowly last year. Nevertheless, both teams have certain weaknesses which might do them in before the season is over.

FOR THE Cubs, their Achilles' heel is easier to spot. The club lacks a legitimate third baseman. Sure, Cey still has some pop in his bat, but cannot be counted on to hit higher than .250 and strikes out too much. His fielding ability is legendary. As broadcaster Vin Scully said, "Pigeons have been roosting on him for two

Mike

Other Cub flaws, less obvious but still flaws, include the lack of defensive range among the Cub outfielders (with the exception of center fielder Bob Dernier) and catcher Jody Davis' defensive liabilities.

Followers of the White Sox should be more concerned. Excluding last night's game, the South Siders' ledger stood at 1-6. The reason to worry is this — the Sox have not played on the road yet.

THE CLUB'S VICE president of operations, Ken "Hawk" Harrelson, made many changes during the off-season, which include obtaining Wayne Tolleson, who starts at third, and pitcher Joe Cowley. Pitcher Britt Burns was sent to the Yankees in the trade for Cowley and John Cangelosi has taken over in center field for Rudy Law.

These moves, which many baseball observers questioned, were not actually bad. Tolleson is a heady player who does nothing but help a team. Cowley, despite being demoted to the minor leagues because of a poor start, is a decent pitcher (keep in mind he won 21 games the last two seasons while with the Yankees), and Cangelosi is an ideal leadoff man.

The move which is puzzling is the shift of Carlton Fisk from catcher to left field with voungster Joel Skinner taking over for Fisk. Watching Fisk in Sunday's game versus Boston, he does not belong in left field. He lacks range and does not have the throwing accuracy a left fielder badly needs. Sure, as a catcher, his throwing arm has few peers. However, throwing from behind home plate and throwing from left field are completely different matters.

AS FOR SKINNER, he has much potential but is being pushed into big league service a year too early. He is a less than adequate hitter in a line-up which does not have great overall hitting ability. Fisk belongs back behind the plate. He might be 37-years old, but he keeps himself in great shape and knows how to pace himself over the course of a season. He's one of the best catchers in baseball, but is one of the worst outfielders in the big leagues, too. The Cubs and Sox both have the potential to win their respective divisions. However, they must make some adjustments before this realization becomes fact. The Cubs must find a third baseman, the Sox a left fielder (after Fisk is returned to catcher).

By the way, Sox fans, Ron Kittle is not the answer to left field, if you didn't know it already.

If both organizations stand pat, the inevitable will occur: Cub field general Jim Frey and Sox manager Tony LaRussa will be out of jobs by midseason, which is unfortunate because both are fine managers. They have both led their current teams to division

Advice to Cubs and Sox management: Act now or pay later. The price of failure to act will be a bundle of lost revenue.

GIVE A TICKET to a common Iowa farmer, businessman or blue collar worker who has never even set foot inside Kinnick Stadium, or if so only rarely, and that person will cheer and scream his head off, knowing the experience is a rare privilege.

For these true Iowa fans the only way to get a ticket has been to go through the students, unless they are willing and able to dump a sizeable donation into the Athletic Department's coffers. And most aren't.

So now these fans have had their only market for obtaining football tickets stomped on by the Board in Control of Athletics. Ironically, for once the reasons are not financial, in fact they're nonexistent.

THERE IS perhaps one recourse for those loyal fans, and for students who would like to help them, and themselves. Naughton said one reason the policy was considered successful during basketball season was because he only had two complaints. The football policy will go into effect, and will stay in effect, unless Naughton gets numerous complaints.

The Board and the ticket office won't change the policy without outside pressure, and if you would like to see a Dan Millea is a DI staff writer.

and then I'll go by what Hayden Fry thinks," he said. "I've done fine up to this point.

"I have to be the guy to make the decision, not some guy sitting over in a chemistry class. Coaches have to be able to run their own ballclubs."

Fry said if it came to his knowledge one of his players did use drugs, how he would handle the case would depend on "how serious it was.

"Maybe it was a one-time shot and the kid may not need treatment. That's different from a three-year user who has got a problem. Experimenting with pot is different than a cocaine abuser."

The Iowa coach said he will not allow members of his team to use "hard drugs."

"IF YOU WANT to participate in drugs, fine," Fry said. "But not as a member of the football team. There is no second chance with hard drugs. I will help him with rehabilitation but he will not wear the black and gold."

Fry said Iowa has had no drug problems since he has been the coach and attributed this to a policy of prevention through education. Fry said each year he brings in guests, including the FBI and narcotics agents, to educate his players on topics like drug abuse and rape prevention.

"We bring people in every year to talk to the players about different things and as a result very few problems have happened," Fry said. "As few things have happened bad as any team in America. We've taken the prevention route."

Hayden Fry addresses drug testing issue Tuesday.

Lloyd returns alone, but with consistency

By Allen Hogg

ICHARD LLOYD is best known still as the lead guitarist for Television. group, which reached its peak of popularity in the late 1970s, was one of the leaders of the New York City new wave scene, along with such bands as Talking Heads, Blondie and the Ramones.

To hear Lloyd tell it, however, the band he has now is even better. "We've worked real hard to get consistent, and that's the one thing Television never was. Until I learned to live alcohol-free and drugfree, and I didn't know consistency," he said in a recent telephone interview.

'Now I have that, so it's a real delight for me to be on tour."

LLOYD'S TOUR will bring him to Iowa City on Wednesday, where he will perform at Amelia's following a set by a Georgia group called the Windbreakers. He is performing in support of Field of Fire, a solo album released on Sweden's Mistlur label last year.

That record, Lloyd's first since his 1980 LP, Alchemy, has received considerable praise, being named one of the ten best of 1985 by New York Times critic Robert Palmer. and prompting comparisons to everyone from Warren Zevon and Bruce Springsteen to Lynyrd Skynyrd and R.E.M.

agi ea for the

"They're comparing me to a lot of people just to specifically counteract the fact that I don't sound exactly like Television did," Lloyd said. "I wasn't the singer in Television; that's where you really get the emotional character of what's going down.'

HE SAID, however, that the comparisons are "all well and good because they give you an idea of the ballpark we're operating in. You ask me what kind of music I play, and that's a good place to begin."

Lloyd's band for the current 18-day tour, which is taking him through the southeast and midwest United States, includes former Individual Jon Klages on guitar, bassist Steve Cohen and Swedish drummer Sanken. Lloyd said the group is well-rehearsed.

"You add it up and we've probably played as much in this last year as Television ever did in its whole career," he said. "That tends to make you good."

Television fans, however, may be disappointed with the group's repertoire. "I hate to speak in negatives, but we're not doing any Television, and we're not doing anything from Alchemy at the moment," Lloyd said. "We're playing mostly stuff from Fields of Fire and a couple of newer tunes."

LLOYD, IN fact, seems to want to put his past behind him. His thoughts seemed especially unkind towards Alchemy, which he felt was hampered by Michael Young's poor production. "He'd do things like lock himself up in the studio and put synthesizers on everything. He would call up the record company and tell them that I was on drugs and couldn't negotiate my own career," Lloyd said. "It certainly interfered with my ability to trust; it's one of the reasons I didn't record for Another problem was alcoholism and drug addiction, which hampered Lloyd for four years until he totally cleaned up in 1984. Mistlur then approached him about making a record and his comeback was on its

Although Lloyd is, as he said, focusing very much on the future," he is proud of his work with Television. He feels the group's music has been very influential.

"I SAW THAT as the case even as Television began to record. I could hear our influence in a lot of places," he said. "It's gratifying to me that a lot of the younger bands that are successful — R.E.M., e.g. are owning up to that influ-

He was, however, reluctant to comment on why Television broke up at a time when Talking Heads and Blondie were making big breakthroughs. "I think you'd have to ask the singer (Tom Verlaine). My inkling is that he felt he'd be more successful on his own," Lloyd said. "History hasn't quite borne that out, but that's

After finishing the tour, Lloyd said he will go back to the studio to record a new album, which he is going to try to get on a major American label. In the meantime, he is just enjoying himself on the road.

"It's been real good," he said. "I don't want it to stop.

UI art students' display væied work on campus

By Karma Lisa Edwards

HERE ARE four new student shows on campus, three at the Art Building and one at Shambaugh House Honors Center.

In Dennis Sargent's paintings, now occupyng the Eve Drewlowe Gallery, nighttime magic and murkiness come through on canvas windows. One passing viewer commented, "You have to stand here and look at these for a while; let them soak into your eyes until you see something."

Angie Harder, a sculpture student, is on the Bridge this week highlighting limericks in a Burma Shave motif. She said, "The style tends to be a raunchy, lowbrow type of poem. I change them everyday, keeping daily themes." The show was developed as a passing pleasure and the viewer's forward or backward motion is part of the piece. Harder explained, "It's such a difficult place to exhibit, people are always running through. But, in the flash of an instant, you can understand a NICE BRUSHWORK by Jane Hagedorn is in the Checkered Space — tiny views from sensitive eyes. Eyes, sensitive to color and form, look out windows, in rooms, on nudes; green blips next to crimson red slashes.

Alfred Titone is presenting his sculptures in Shambaugh House Honors Center, at 219 North Clinton, through April. Titone has been involved in both the UI Art iron foundry and metalsmithing shop. The metalwork he displays at Shambaugh House reflects his endeavors in both these areas.

Chronologically, the show displays older pieces which began as carved styrofoam and were then cast in iron. Later, Titone moved into a more lyrical and expressive stage using moldable foundry wax and a lost-wax process of casting. Presently, the artist is working on a third theme which incorporates wire and suspends the visually heavy pieces in the air.

OVER THE past few years, Titone has progressed as an artist and several heights have been reached where he captured the quality of an individual art process in a single piece. One object, with a torso, palm tree and architecture epitomizes his styrofoam series. However, his newest explorations are like most beginnings, slightly awkward and unregeneral's pornography commission is considering wide-ranging recommendations for law enforcement to seriously curtail the production of most sexually related material, according to documents made public Tuesday.

The internal commission documents, made public by the American Civil Liberties Union, called for federal legislative changes making it illegal for "employers to hire individuals to participate in certain sexual performances" and to amend current obscenity laws to eliminate having to prove the sexual material was transported in interstate commerce. Other recommendations being considered by the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography include establishing a federal data base of corporate records, real estate records and information on known offenders. Another proposal would establish a "citizens watch" program to monitor newsstands, convenience stores and video cassette retailers - as well as the courts with the aim of using information gathered on prosecutors, attorneys and judges "when officials come for re-appointment or re-election.'

THE DOCUMENTS, all working papers of the commission, were made public after the Justice Department and the ACLU agreed last week to make them public in return for the ACLU dropping a suit against the commission and depart-

The commission, appointed by Attorney General Edwin Meese in May 1985, is expected to make its final report in

Barry Lynn, legislative counsel of the ACLU, said the papers show "a dramatic failure" on the part of the commission "to understand constitutional principles, sex, or American culture for the past quarter

"It is little wonder that the commission tried to withhold these documents," Lynn said. "They are riddled with factual errors, preposterous legal theories, undocumented allegations and unwarranted hysterics about the effects of sexually explicit material on views and readers.

FAC gets serious about art

By Kathlene M. Stoltz Special to the Daily Iowan

HERE IS a UI tradition that occurs four times yearly, a tradition that draws nearly a hundred artists and thousands of curious buyers. This tradition, established 25 years ago, is the Thieves'

The reputation of the Thieves' Market extends beyond Iowa, reaching Missouri, Minnesota, the Dakotas and even Colorado; yet most people are unaware of the group behind the scenes, the UI Fine Arts Council. The FAC is responsible for organizing and sponsoring the Thieves' Market as well as the annual UI Student Art Exhibition (which begins today at Old Brick Auditorium), student grants and other artistoriented programs.

THE COUNCIL was formed 20 years ago to set up programs that would use the money earned from the Thieves' Markets to benefit student programs in the visual, literary, and performing arts. The FAC is a non-profit organization whose goal, as stated by Jim Simmer, adviser to the council and former FAC president, is to "promote student awareness and involvement in the arts. Most importantly, the FAC strives to make art accessible to the commun-cil takes art seriously, even though only two members are art majors. Other council members come from such disciplines as music, film, English and psychology. What these members share is a dedicated interest in the arts. And what they gain is valuable experience in understanding the laborious process and planning involved in arts management.

AS LORI LANE, current FAC president, states, "We are essentially an educational resource, especially for art students. We give members an opportunity to learn what's involved in preparing for an exhibition or in writing

Along with the Thieves' Markets and the Student Art Exhibition, the FAC has other equally qualitative programs, such as an active involvement in art sponsorships, such as a recent sponsorship that was given to the New York-based dance group "Wildflower Brigade," and the Artists Referral

In the referral service, a relatively new program, the council acts as an intermediary between artists and the public. An artist can submit slides of his or her works which the FAC puts on file along with descriptions, ty." dimensions and prices of the Although a rather small works, and biographical information on the artist. The slides and information are then made available to interested customers.

THIS YEAR the council is enthusiastic about its annual Student Art Exhibition. Though last year's exhibition was cancelled due to a lack of entries, this year up to 200 works were submitted by graduate and undergraduate UI students, of which 70 were accepted for the showing. David Ryan, director of the Des Moines Arts Center, acting as the sole juror for the art entries, commented that he was greatly impressed with the quality of the work he had seen for this exhibition.

The exhibition will include paintings, prints, sculpture and photography by graduate and undergraduate students. Cash awards of up to $100 will be awarded to entries on Friday between 7 and 9 p.m. The Student Art Exhibit will also present various live performances that will include a dance program by UI graduate and undergraduate students Thursday at 7 p.m.; a performance by the City High Chamber Orchestra Sunday at 2 p.m.; an Ed Sarath jazz performance Tuesday from 8 to 9 p.m.; and a Student Film Night Friday, April 25, from 8 to 10

Novelist focuses on history

By Tom Fate Special to the Daily Iowan

FTER NEARLY 25 years of living in 21 villages in Asia, Africa and Latin America and writing about the technological changes and cultural adaptations that affect the peasants of the Third World, Richard Critchfield has turned to the First World -America. However, he is still dealing with the same subject matter, the same transformations that have taken place in our country

Critchfield, who will be speak-ing at 3 today in the English-Philosophy Building Room 304, has written Those Days, a novel that takes place between the end of the frontier era in the 1880s and the beginning of World War II. In this work, we see American farming move from draft horses to tractors, the shift from rural life to urban life, the influences of the car, plane, radio and motion pictures; all through the carefully woven and compelling stories of several members of Critchfield's own fam-

As the different stories unravel and come back together, as the years go by, we see three generations of the author's family within the changing technology and the society that surrounds them.

THE BOOK, which was recently reviewed on the cover of the New York Times Book Review, has received rave

The Times said, "Those Days encompasses an amazing piece of American history. We experience the life of a schoolmarm in rural North Dakota, rafting on the Mississippi in 1904, the San Francisco earthquake and fire, the flu epidemic of 1918 and the Great Depression.

Joan Bunke in the Des Moines Register writes:

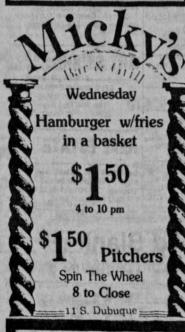

"Those Days is a Midwestern Roots, a non-fiction documentary about rural social change written in the form of a novel, early 20th century rural life in northeast Iowa towns like Whitier, New Hampton and Le Claire, to Hunter, Fesseden and Fargo on the windy plains of North Dakota.

"Those Days, Critchfield reminds us, will never come again. Fortunately, Critchfield's superb, warm human history preserves "those days' for all of us, and our families.'

Tonight's lecture/reading is sponsored by the Iowa Writers' Workshop and the International Writing Program.
