UI to build center for Asian study

By Scott A. Huen

The UI has received a $5 million endowment to establish a center for Asian and Pacific studies, UI President James O. Freedman announced Friday.

The gift, one of the largest in UI history, is from the family of retired U.S. Army Lt. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, of Maryland, Iowa and B. W. Christ.

Freedman said the endowment will enable UI to take a major step forward in expanding its outreach to international dimension, one of his highest priorities as president.

In a note, Taylor said, "I have known for four years, and am pleased about the importance of understanding the Pacific nations." Freedman said, adding that Asian studies will have a profound impact on international affairs in the next few decades.

The center will provide an information and outreach service to businesses and other interests in learning about the nations, he said.

In addition, the center will provide information and outreach services to businesses and other interests in learning about the nations, he said.

Freedman said the first program under the auspices of the center will be a two-week teaching institute and community outreach seminar late in August or early September.

Elizabeth Stanley, who will head the center, will have regular contact with other family members, said the endowment was made "in the name of my husband and our deep interest in international understanding and international contact." C. Maxwell Taylor founded the Stanley Foundation, an organization devoted to community action and publication about global issues. The founder of a large world

LASA quits studying, starts working to end farm crisis

State agent in Hall lawsuit requests change of venue

One of Iowa's officials accused of violating Indiana's conflict-of-interest laws has requested that the lawsuit be moved from a county where he served as a state representative.

The state's auditor, who is being sued by the Indiana Ethics Commission, a former Justice Department official, said Mr. Indiana doesn't work for Indiana and is not liable for the lawsuit.

Hall has been sued for his refusal to serve as a state representative in any county where he had been elected to the Legislature.

The commissioner's lawsuit was filed in Madison County, where Hall had been elected to the Legislature. The lawsuit seeks damages and injunctive relief.

Two local women told Iowa City police they were approached at their homes by two men who claimed to be door-to-door salesmen.

In one incident, a woman living in the 300 block of Fourth Street told officers the man knocked on her door at 1:30 p.m., told her he had received a letter from the U.S. Postal Service and offered to show her an apartment.

The two were described as an adult male and a younger male driving a red car.

The use of stolen student identification cards for items stolen from emergency rooms is a growing problem. A new theft report issued in February by the Iowa City Police Department shows that more than 50% of all stolen items reported were identified as being stolen using the stolen IDs.

UTI officials were sympathetic toward the problem.

When they realized that the thefts were occurring and that they were losing money, they took action. UTI officials established a system where they could check the IDs of all students before they entered the building. This system has been very successful in reducing the number of thefts.

UTI CAMPUS Security officially confirmed that there could be help in preventing the theft of student IDs.

Iowa City Police Chief Mark Dunker said, "It's obvious that something must be done to prevent these thefts. UTI officials have been very cooperative and are doing what they can to help."

With finals beginning and summer vacation nearly here, many Iowa City businesses are feeling the pressure of what will be an unusually low attendance, but there are some who view this as an opportunity to make a change. "A lot of people who go to college are leaving from here," said Ron Thompson, CEO of TGI Friday's. "They may not be coming back."

A UI science educator says there is a crisis in science teaching. The studies also reveal there are problems in terms of studies in science with adults - the lecture - the traditional teaching method is not working. "We have an older crowd of adults who think it's their business," Frazer said.

News issues prompt letters

To the Editor:
In the recent article "Proposal changes dating of U.S. voting age," May 8, a statement was made that this proposal is inequitable because it "does not favor one that is very much in favor of the 18-year-olds." The writer’s implication is that a larger segment of the audience is interested in the issues of social involvement. This may partly be the intent of the proposed U.S. Policy on "Consensual Relationships" which was the subject of the article, but the statement of the U.S. Age is the article, but rather one factor of the political nature is involved in the inactivity of power that exists in a student-teacher relationship, not to result in abuse of that power when the relationship becomes more intimate.

Shirlie Magneese

To the Editor:
I just read your article "Students, teachers, can result in abuse of power when the relationship becomes more intimate." While I agree that power can be used improperly, I feel that some people are too quick to jump to the conclusion that someone is abusing power.

I was just wondering why you wrote this article. If you don’t want people to use power improperly, why not write an article about how to properly use power?

To the Editor:
I was reading the article "Students, teachers, can result in abuse of power when the relationship becomes more intimate." I think the article is very informative and well-written. I believe that students should be aware of the potential for abuse in these situations. I also think that teachers should be trained on how to handle these situations appropriately.

This response to the notice entitled "Fiction" in the May 11 issue of a certain paper could find a different audience than the one intended. If you do not want to present your work for publication, then do not submit it. In the current climate, works that are considered "innovative" or "avant-garde" are often rejected by the mainstream because they do not fit into the established norms of that society. It is important to consider the impact of these rejections on the cultural landscape and to continue to support and promote the work of artists who challenge those norms.

Cuts can't stop with Pentagon

I'VE always said that the Pentagon is the most far-reaching organization in the world. As its director, I have been involved in all aspects of the department's operations, from budgeting to personnel. However, the recent actions by the federal government to cut funding for the military are a mistake because they threaten the security of our country.

Barry Goldwater, R-Arizona, with the help of the committee's ranking Democrat, Ford Hamil­ton, was the one responsible for passing the bill. This is a bad idea because it would lead to a decrease in the military budget. We must avoid this at all costs.

One of the bills would reduce funding for toilet seats and related equipment. This is a mindless funding cut that would not help to improve the quality of life for our military personnel. The Pentagon has to do more to support our troops and ensure their safety.

Death toll rises in Thailand flooding

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - Flooding killed nine people in northern Thailand, bringing the death toll to 17 in three days of torrential rain that included the worst Bangkok downpour in decades.

The governor of northern Chiang Rai province, Tium Ying Yarubbi, said nine people died and hundreds were injured in Chiang Rai Saturday. Austria said people were stranded and roads were closed in the province as flash floods were driven by heavy rains began again in the area.

Police, renting casualty figures, said eight people were sent to hospitals and two were killed while searching flooded homes.

The provincial governor said floodwaters were as deep as 4 feet in some parts of the province.

In Bangkok, the worst 24-hour rainfall in recent memory, hit the capital and surrounding areas.

The government has declared a state of emergency to cope with the disaster as the death toll rose to 17 and some of the worst flooding in decades was observed.

Local experts said the flooding was caused by rising water levels in the Chao Phraya River, which flows through the city.

Residents were urged to stay indoors until the water recedes, and the government said it was working to provide relief assistance to those affected.

The flooding has caused significant damage, with widespread reports of property destruction and infrastructure damage.

Public transport has been disrupted, and many schools and businesses have been closed.

The army has been deployed to help with rescue and relief efforts.

The government has announced a state of emergency in the hardest-hit areas.

The flooding is being treated as a national disaster, and the government has promised to provide relief assistance to all those affected.

The death toll of 17 includes nine in northern Thailand, two in the north, and one each in Bangkok, Surat Thani, and Uthai Thani.

The floods have also disrupted transportation, with many roads and rail links cut off. The government has urged residents to stay indoors until the water recedes.

The floods have also affected air traffic, with flights canceled or delayed due to the conditions.

The government has also promised to provide temporary accommodations for those displaced by the floods.

Syria orders retaliatory expulsions

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Syria demanded a complete withdrawal of all Israeli forces from southern Lebanon, a foreign minister said.

The Syrian foreign minister's statement follows a series of incidents along the Israeli-Lebanese border.

The Lebanese government said it would not agree to the demand.

The Israeli government has said it will not comply with Syria's demands.

The incident comes amid tensions between Israel and Lebanon, with both countries accusing each other of violating their borders.

Syria has accused Israel of launching attacks from Lebanon, while Israel has said it targets Syrian military installations.

Israel has denied the allegations, saying its military operations are conducted from Israeli airspace.

The incident comes amid escalating tensions between Israel and its neighbors, with both countries accusing each other of violating their borders.

The situation is expected to remain tense in the coming days, with both countries likely to react to any further incidents.

Syria has a history of retaliatory measures, including expulsions of diplomats and closures of consulates, in response to perceived provocations.

Israel has also a history of retaliatory measures, including strikes on Syrian military targets, in response to perceived threats.

The situation is expected to remain tense in the coming days, with both countries likely to react to any further incidents.

An 11-year-old boy, known only as Tony, was killed in a house fire yesterday. The fire, which started in the basement, spread quickly and consumed the entire house. The boy, who lived with his parents, died when he tried to escape through a window.

The Neuzils say the American farmer will persevere.

"It's kind of sad to think about the work that goes into making a living on a farm," said Tony. "But I know that my parents will continue to work hard to make sure that we have a place to live."}

The bears are a frequent visitor to the area and are often seen walking along the roadsides.

"That's why we have to be careful when we're out walking," said Tony. "We have to make sure that we stay away from the bears and don't get too close."

Pro-life supporters picket local clinic

By Donalda Woman

Two 30-year-old pro-lifers arrived at the Emma Goldman Clinic at 6 a.m. to "bring back the truth about abortion," said drift-40-year-old Martin Haughland of Sigourney. "Abortion in the worst prob- lem facing us today," said Lora Linn, Right-to-Life organizer in Linn County. Linn said, "We're in deep, deep trouble."

Linn was joined by Johanns County Right-to-Life President Ted Coleman at 6 a.m. "We want people to realize their progress, women and their families," said Page, organizer of the pro-life group.

"Women have been lied to for years, and that's a lie because you can feel it kicking,' said John Bandy, 42, a farmer near Coggan. "I'm a priest of St. Joseph, and I'm a Death. It's a death. I'm not the case.

Instead, he said, farmers turn to pro-choice groups for help solving their problems in rural communities. "Farmers are learning and crying out for help," he said. According to John Bandy, the role of a pastor is stress-full, but he knows the tragedy of abortion.

"If they really know the tragedy or violence that takes place, a lot of them will get interested in helping others," said Cliff Haugland, pointing out the possibility of adoption.

Rural clergy face farm crisis by supporting parishioners

The intensity of the farm crisi has many farmers worried that rural clergy spend their time supporting troubled farmers. But rural clergy say they feel the stress.

The Rev. Joseph Haughland, also of the Sigourney Catholic Church in Sigourney, Iowa, said farmers have been bombarded by par- ents through picket lines. "People are open and honest and they're working and learning together — and having fun," he said.

Coleman said that pro-life, volunteers in rural communities face many problems in the future. "Coleman said that pro-life, volunteers in rural communities face many problems in the future.

"The Haughlands" saw a small group of other farmers and organized this need to work together to do so. Coleman, the Haughlands, and another farm family started a support group for farmers in their community.

For Coleman, the problems didn't stop there. "They have been added up to a challenge. There's more opportunity for farmers to participate," Coleman said. "People have a lot of stress in their lives."

Hawkeyes charge to third place in Big Ten

By Jeff Storlton

Iowa women's golf teams claimed fourth overall after a solid third-place finish at the Big Ten Championship April 24 in the Golf Course of America in Shreveport, Louisiana. Women's golf was played Feb. 28 at the Golf Club of Indiana in Indianapolis, Indiana, when the team placed fourth overall with a score of 630 and a 333 under par.

The Hawkeye's total score of 1,996 was 17 strokes better than the team's score of 2,013 at the 1985 NCAA Championship in Shreveport, Louisiana.

Women's golf, which is a nine-hole stroke play, was held in the Golf Course of America in Shreveport, Louisiana.

The Hawkeye's finish in the NCAA Championship was 54 strokes better than the team's score of 2,150 at the 1984 NCAA Championship in Shreveport, Louisiana.

Jones' career ends with loss to Bucks

BROOKLYN (AP) — The career of Philadelphia 76ers forward Julius Jones ended Monday in a 104-112 loss to the Milwaukee Bucks.

Jones was waived on Monday for the 14th time in his NBA career.

He signed a one-year contract with the 76ers this summer after being released by the Los Angeles Lakers.

Jones, 40, has played for 11 teams in his 15-year NBA career, including seven seasons with the Lakers.

He averaged 8.4 points and 4.9 rebounds per game in 70 games this season, his first since 2003-04.

Jones, who was born in Chicago, played college ball for Rider and was a second-round pick by the Los Angeles Clippers in 1988.

He played for the Lakers from 1995-97 and 1998-2002, and also spent time with the Los Angeles Clippers, Houston Rockets, Dallas Mavericks, Indiana Pacers, Cleveland Cavaliers, Atlanta Hawks, Phoenix Suns, Portland Trail Blazers and Miami Heat.

Jones played in the NBA Finals in 2000 and 2001 with the Lakers, winning the championship both years.

He also played for the Washington Wizards, New York Knicks and Denver Nuggets during his career.

He was a two-time NBA All-Star in 1996 and 1997.

Jones was named to the NBA All-Rookie Team in 1988 and played for Team USA at the 1992 Olympics.

He was a four-time NBA champion with the Lakers, winning titles in 1988, 1989, 1990 and 1992.

Jones was also a four-time NBA All-Star and was named to the All-Star Game Most Valuable Player Award in 1996.

Jones had a career-high 42 points in a game against the Atlanta Hawks on Dec. 15, 1995.

He finished his career with 18,186 points and 9,143 rebounds in 1,213 games.

Jones, who was drafted out of Rider, played seven seasons with the 76ers before being traded to the Lakers in 1997.

He averaged 9.5 points and 5.3 rebounds per game in 538 games with the 76ers.

Jones was released by the Lakers in the summer of 2002 and played for five years in Europe before returning to the NBA in 2007.

He played for the Miami Heat, Los Angeles Clippers, Phoenix Suns and Dallas Mavericks before being waived by the Bucks.

Jones had four children with his wife, Chandra, and he was an active member of the community in Philadelphia.

He was known for his philanthropic work, including helping to build a school in his native Philadelphia.

Jones also was a cancer survivor. He was diagnosed with prostate cancer in 2006 and underwent surgery.

He died of a heart attack in 2011.

Baseball Roundup

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's Kirk Gibson hit a two-run home run in the fifth inning of the Tigers' 5-3 win over the Chicago White Sox on Monday.

With an assist from shortstop Alexei Ramirez, White Sox catcher Dioner Navarro was able to get the ball down in time to complete the double play, ending the inning.

The Tigers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Nick Castellanos hit a double off White Sox starter Edgewood to score James McCann and Mikie Mahtook.

The White Sox scored their only run off Tigers starting pitcher Jordan Zimmermann in the fourth inning.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - First-time champion A.J. Foyt, making his first start of the season for 60 years, rallied over the final 24 hours to win the Brickyard 400 Sunday, his second victory at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Foyt, 60, was unable to qualify for the race, but he raced to a second-place finish in the 400-mile race for the second straight year.

"Coming up to the French, it was a race I was looking forward to," Foyt said. "I wanted to do my best. That's what I did." Foyt ended his career with a second-place finish in the French Open. He was unable to qualify for the race, but he raced to a second-place finish in the 400-mile race for the second straight year.

The lead changed several times before Foyt won the race. He led 14 laps and was able to hold onto the lead for the final 24 hours. Foyt ended his career with a second-place finish in the French Open. He was unable to qualify for the race, but he raced to a second-place finish in the 400-mile race for the second straight year.

"I'm very happy," Foyt said. "I'm happy we were able to win. But it's a very difficult thing to do."

The French Open is the first major event of the season for both Foyt and Foyt. Foyt won the French Open in 1964, 1967 and 1977. His championship record is now 3-3-3.

"It was a great day for all of us," Foyt said. "We want to thank all of you for your support."

Fine acting highlights plays

By Karina Line Edwards

The NEIL Simon Theatre opened its season last week with "The Good Doctor." This play, directed by Daniel Sullivan, starred Michael Douglas as a brilliant surgeon who is also a drunkard. The production was well received by both critics and audiences.

Later in the month, the theatre will present "The Chairs," a play by Eugene Ionesco, which explores the absurdity and futility of human existence.

Theatre

The good doctor was good, but not great.

The arts/entertainment section of the newspaper this week focuses on the opening of the new season at the NEIL Simon Theatre, which features performances of "The Good Doctor" and "The Chairs." The article highlights the performances of Michael Douglas and the cast as they bring these plays to life on stage.

Tough role attracts Redgrave

NEW YORK - Academy Award-winning actress Vanessa Redgrave, 50, has signed on to play a daunting role in the new Broadway production of "The Teahouse of the August Moon."

The play, written by David Mamet, is set in a small Japanese village during World War II and follows the lives of several American officers and their Japanese counterparts. Redgrave will play a role that is traditionally played by a male actor.

Vanessa Redgrave

Redgrave was born in Britain and has won numerous awards for her work on stage and screen. She is known for her dramatic performances and her ability to bring depth and nuance to her characters.

Before the filming, studio executives were worried that Redgrave might not be ready for the role. But after watching her performance, they were convinced that she was the right choice.

The story is about a group of American soldiers who arrive at a small village in Japan during World War II. The soldiers are assigned to build a bridge for the Japanese military, but they soon find themselves in a dangerous and unpredictable situation.

The film, directed by George C. Scott, also stars Jack Nicholson and was released in 1971. It was one of the most successful films of its time and is still widely regarded as a classic of American cinema.
Poor plot puts out 'Fire with Fire'

By Megan Grose

The love story that is the plot for the movie Fire with Fire is OK, so far as it goes. But I don’t see the point in making a movie that seems everywhere otherwise so determined to appeal to every taste and almost every demographic. The story of a hotshot FBI agent who takes on a mission to catch a ruthless gang of rapists, murderers and thieves and falls in love with a beautiful model who is the girlfriend of the leader of the gang... well, it’s all pretty contrived. But Shetner and Hudgens, who play these roles, do a very good job with the story they have. Hudgens is particularly appealing as the girlfriend of the leader of the gang.

On the other hand, the story of the mission to catch the gang is less interesting. It’s just a little bit too far-fetched to be believable. The action scenes are well done, but the story itself is not particularly engaging. Overall, I would recommend this movie to fans of action films and romantic comedies, but not to everyone else.

Doris Duke (The Hunter) (1950). Doris Duke, using the influence of her late husband's fortune, has brought a series of picture-perfect settings to this New York house that, according to Variety, "is reminiscent of a movie set in a European castle." Although the sound track is inaudible, the visual setting Leave it to Beaver (1953). Leave it to Beaver (1953) is a television show that aired from 1953 to 1962. It was created by Hugh Downs and starred Barbara Billingsley as Wanda, Ken Osmond as Wally, and Tony Dow as Beaver. The show dealt with the everyday life of a typical suburban family.
