Branstad opposes Honduras junket

By Kris Brown

畏惧用"— Gov. Terry Branstad told Monday that a group of state legislators was planning a junket to Honduras to view the progress of the 209th Infantry unit in training there, and he opposed the trip.

"I believe the unit should be left to train in Honduras and not be disturbed by the legislature," Branstad said. "That's a reason to support the unit instead of sending it to another country, I think we should be celebrating the Fourth of July in our state."

Branstad said the unit was scheduled to begin training in July and that it was "not the time to distract them because they need to be on the job."

"I believe it's important for them to train in Honduras and be part of the American military," he said.

The governor also said the military's interest in the unit was "precious" because the unit was training to support the country "on our behalf."

Branstad said the military wanted the experience of training in Honduras instead of another country because it was "better suited" to the job.

"I think we should be worried about making sure they train in Honduras and not be disturbed by some trip to another country," he said.

In Honduras, the governor also said that the military had "an important role" in the country's defense and "not to be disturbed by a trip to another country."
China to launch two U.S. satellites

PEKING — China, moving into the pay grade by creating a fleet of two communications satellites, has opened new space for itself in the West.

The Ministry of Astronautics and a Texas company agreed on a memorandum of understanding to get Chinese-made Long March 3 rocket to launch two satellites that originally were scheduled for Ariane boosters in October, according to a Chinese source.

A company spokesman in New York said the agreement is conditional on the two satellites being equipped with the insurance companies that paid for the retrieval.

UI graduates may find improved job market

By Dave Coblentz

Iranian, interviews, sitting and talking in the room that will remain in the UI student center, is a graduate student in the College of Business Administration.

In his office, the graduate student, who has been working on a project related to the job market for UI graduates, said that he believes that the job market for UI graduates is improving.

"I think that the job market for UI graduates is improving," he said. "I have been working on a project related to the job market for UI graduates, and I have found that there is a growing demand for UI graduates in the job market."

The project that the graduate student is working on is focused on analyzing the job market for UI graduates. He is using data from the University of Iowa's Career Services to track the number of UI graduates who are employed in various fields.

The graduate student said that he has found that the number of UI graduates who are employed in the job market is increasing.

Junk It

Members of Associated Residence Halls kindly donated their time and an armful of brightly wrapped packages to the base- ment of Student Publications Hall. The缠-wrapped bundles—containing fresh fruit, nuts and a little cheese—were then distributed to almost 1,300 deserving dorm residents as finals week survival kits.

"We wanted an alternative to all the different kinds of junk food out there," wrote Tracy Bell, who supervised production of the care packages. The idea was to give dormies a &起到 fresh food to make the long hours study they face during finals.

"They should be if there’s a problem here? Final? Healthy? These two words do not belong together—no in the same breath, no. It’s the same train of thought.

For there is nothing remotely healthy about a week full of all the food you want to eat. Just stuffing your face with too much junk food is not going to make one feel better. Vitamins C, physical and mental health have gone to hell in a handbasket.

It’s not that the idea isn’t nice, sure. It’s just misguided. It isn’t even a good deal from the US Aid Center, which also produces finals week survival kits that include a variety of food, snacks and drinks.

The Athletics Center’s kits are stuffed full of what, a week before finals, is the last thing you would want to eat. Popcorn, soda, pretzels, donuts, chips, you name it. Sure, it makes you feel better after you arrive home after all day whine about it, but the idea of bringing the same foods to the dorm and maybe take you out for dinner, since you haven’t had a decent meal all week.

You be the judge

The Reagan administration has become infamous for its reluctance to use a fine tooth for ideological purity, with little concern for judicial qualifications which would make the court system the mirror of right-wing, hopefully Christian, fundamentalists and equivalents are evident in the current administration. To achieve this has been willing to tolerate an extraordinarily high degree of racism, sexism and incompetence.

But in nominating Daniel Manson to the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago the administration exceeded all tolerable bounds. In fact, it is not reasonable for a president to take a list of highly qualified lawyers and judges and, depending on his political preferences, select from that list the one or the most liberal to appoint. But Manson is totally unsuited to a place on the bench.

Manson, the American Bar Association gave the lower honors to the lawyer of the century. This was pointed out by the American Bar Association, which has never cared a great deal for the federal appellate courts, and his nomination was not necessarily the best choice. In an almost unprecedented move the Senate Judiciary Committee refused to recommend him to the Senate at large. Iowa’s two senators—particularly Republican Sen. Chuck Grassley—will get the opportunity to show lowathen they have the courage to go against the president and stand up for the idea that only qualified judges and women should be appointed to the court.

Food for thought

The Food and Drug Administration announced Sunday that it plans to loosen guidelines regulating just exactly what happens to the food industry when it sells food that may not be what it seems.

The decision came after Kellogg’s Co. began packing its All-Bran cereal in loaves with labels citing National Public Health Milk, Duds, SweeTarts, Oreos, etc. in a train of thought.

The FDACancel by recognizing the demand for more nutrition information. Its policy only allowing a label to say that a food is "hearty" or "healthful" on the label.

The FDA is planning to continue to require nutrition content labeling and all health claims will be arranged by the Public Health Service to ensure accuracy.

The FDA has gone out as a luminary by loosening long-standing regulations. The food industry would do well to heed the warning. But Manson, who was intended: To better inform consumers.

IT HAS BEEN said that if you don’t exist, you must have lived in a world where things didn’t happen because you didn’t notice them.

There may or may not be a God, but it is certain that the reasonable people who are smarter than our planet’s self-appointed heroes believe in the existence of human intelligence.

An ancient civilization, the world as we know it and the value of life. People have always been interested in understanding God, his or her image, the universe that he or she created.

S. Africa feels with governments like the United States and Great Britain, that leaders of the free world, but who don't seem to be as concerned about our freedom as they are about other people's freedom." They are about other people's freedom.

The South African government is feeling that they are not being taken as seriously as other countries. They feel that they don't have the same level of support as their counterparts in other countries.

LATELY, President F.W. de Klerk was quoted as saying, "I find it difficult to take the South African situation seriously."

De Klerk was referring to the fact that the South African government feels that they are not given the same level of importance as other countries.

For instance, they have been protesting for years about the apartheid system, but there has been little action taken by the international community.

In fact, many countries have even increased their support for apartheid, saying that it is a necessary system to maintain order in the country.

It is clear that the South African government feels that they are not being taken seriously. This has caused them to become more vocal in their protests and to try to get more support from other countries.

The South African government has also been trying to negotiate with other countries, hoping to find a way to end apartheid and to bring about a more democratic society.

They have been meeting with various leaders, including the United Nations, in an effort to find a solution.

However, so far, their efforts have been met with little success. Many countries continue to support apartheid, and there is little hope for a peaceful resolution.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN government has been feeling isolated and ignored on the international stage. They feel that they are not given the same level of importance as other countries.

It is clear that they are feeling frustrated and are trying to find ways to bring about change.

Changing weather helps firefighters

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (UPI) -

Hampstead Fire Department's day was made a little easier Wednesday when gusty winds helped battle a wildfire that has burned 75,000 acres of coastal North Carolina swamps.

"The fire was out a bit of ground in the fight, but we didn't lose any homes," said firefighter spokesman Frank Guth. "We're in for a kind of a Mexican stand-off."

More than 600 weary firefighters with bulldozers and aerial tankers massed along North Carolina's coast Wednesday to repel the blaze, which had already consumed 10,364-adam-high wall of flame that threatened repeatedly to close through the treacherous fire line.

The winds remained favorable Monday, giving firefighters time to shore up their defenses and launch a new assault on the persistent blaze.

"WE'RE HOPING to keep it under control," said firefighter spokesman Andy Jones. "We've had a very good day, but we're keeping our fingers crossed."

The fire has a black swath through North Carolina's Holly Shelter Swamp and east across 30 miles of South Florida, where firefighters had to dig a 9,986-acre wildfire in the Big Cypress National Preserve.

Mandatory evacuations in 60,000 acres also ordered in five towns in eastern North Carolina as winds drove the flames back toward the coast.

"They had an opportunity to push the fire back last night and dampen that effort," said Jones.

Marcos plans trip, denies ambitions

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) -

Marcos said Tuesday he would not make any plans to travel to his country even if the United States earmarked aid for his return.

"That's my intention," he said. "I hope to keep it so."

Marcos, who was ousted in a coup last year, said the United States should quietly extend aid to him, whether or not he stays in exile.

"Either that or a military option," he said. "But I hope not."
UI dance concert shows new works

By peg Laury

OAKLAND, Calif. -- "In the category ballroom," Doug..." the curtain fell on the final run of "A Dance," the University of Iowa's annual spring dance concert. The program, which ran from May 4 through 6, included works from the university's dance department and guest choreographers. The concert was presented by the UI Dance Program and the UI Dance Company. The event was held in the Iowa Memorial Union. The show was choreographed by three different directors: Doug Janes, Brian Rouse, and Lisa Pendarvis. The concert featured a variety of dance styles, including jazz, modern, and contemporary. The program was well-received by the audience, and the dancers put on a spectacular performance. The concert was a success and a great way to end the spring season for the UI Dance Company. The audience was impressed by the talent and dedication of the dancers and the innovative choreography. The show was a great way to introduce new performers and new works to the audience. The UI Dance Company is excited to return next year with an even better show.

Masseuse rubs out tension

"There's a lot of things I'd do for a good backrub," says Harris who works for a massage chain in Washington, D.C. "But for five years giving women massages to relieve physical and emotional tension has been the most satisfying work I've done."

"In the past, women have been very nervous about coming to a professional masseuse," says Harris. "But now that many women have learned that massage helps blood circulation, muscle relaxation is something they can do themselves."

"I've found that women get a lot of pleasure out of massage," says Harris. "They appreciate the fact that they can do it for themselves and that it's something they can do in the privacy of their own homes."
