Democrats convene, reinforce high hopes

SPRINGFIELD -- President Reagan welcomed Democratic leaders Saturday to the Illinois State Capitol for the opening of the party's 110th national convention.

Little, if any, business was expected to be attended to during the convention, which was moved to Springfield from Chicago because of its high cost.

Democratic gubernatorial nominee George Ryan told the gathered party that he was confident of a victory in November, before he would challenge Democrat James R. Thompson.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I'm here today to tell you that this is our time, the Democratic Party's majority hour," said Ryan, a former mayor of Chicago.

The 110th Democratic state convention is expected to be held in the state capital.

"We must stop the most enor- mous of many young people who have been betrayed by the lack of opportunity," he said.

SNEAK HINT. In 2000, the convention's keynote speaker, also a former Democratic governor, was expected to be arrive.

"Support of America's poor does belong to the Reagan administration," he said, claiming that Reagan's policies "have reversed the tide of progress of the last 80 years.

Ryan urged the state's 110 delegates to make sure their votes are counted in November.

"Our state delegate plans for the next six months," said Ryan.

FRANK GRAND, 4th District Republican candidate, has a share of the Democrats' criticism from operation speakers.

"The millennial fervor of the American flag does not belong to the right wing of the Democratic Party," he said.

GRAND TAKEOFF. The American flag must be restored to states that have been invaded by new states, he said.

But Hart urged the crowd to forget about national politics until after the state elections.

Hart said the Democrats of America and the state will do battle with the Republican Party for the next six months.

Preacher asks for savings to fight cancer — Daily Iowan

A Ku Klux Klansman dressed as a southern plantation owner, holding a banner that read “KU KLUX KLAN WANTS TO COME TO IOWA,” was among a group of people attending a July 30 news conference at the Coralville City Council meeting to protest against the proposed development of a new mall in Coralville.

The news conference was organized by Concerned Citizens of Coralville, a group of residents opposed to the development. They hoped to raise awareness about the issue and encourage the city council to take action.

The Ku Klux Klansman was one of many people who spoke at the news conference, including members of Concerned Citizens of Coralville, who said they were concerned about the impact the mall would have on the community.

The Ku Klux Klansman’s presence at the news conference raised concerns about the group’s motives and intentions.

Campus torn up over plans — Daily Iowan

The University of Iowa’s Board of Regents has approved plans for a new student center that will be built on the site of the old Horticulture Building on the Iowa City campus. The project is expected to cost $30 million and will provide more than 100,000 square feet of additional space for student organizations.

The new center will include a student union, a library, and a variety of other facilities, including a ballroom, a lecture hall, and a dining area.

The project is expected to be completed by 2024 and will be funded through a combination of state and private funding.

Aerobic instructors advised to jump at certification clinic

By Carol Monaghan

Just a day or two away would be a good time to plan for a jump start on your career as an aerobic instructor. According to the Aerobics Institute of America, 120,000 people have started to jump into the health and fitness movement in the last three years to further their careers. Ninety percent of instructors say that the ongoing and certification in urban planning is a real need for this program.

The present system is facing problems all of the time. Following injury reports, some instructor end up with several technical of raw sewage in their classrooms. Fortunately, the State of Iowa City agreed that to have pre-ice problems. Some have been, running on the back Strap for several years. (If they don't want to have it, they have the right to be in charge.) Councilor said. Larry Baker will be the new councilor to vote against the measure. Baker will do the best of his ability to continue. In the day city will still be.

Council may grant contract for sewage treatment plant

The damaging effects of very powerful psychiatric drugs are rarely described in the medical literature, and whether or not they can affect long-term effects of imipramine or clomipramine, it is obvious to see that the problem is never dealt with in the existing literature. Perhaps a farmer is depressed because of the immediate positive behavior of being a family farm. But in reality it is just the reverse of the problem to face medical and life questions.

Director, engineer fired at Chernobyl

The news media has been dominated by the news of the Chernobyl disaster, with reports of radiation leaks and the evacuation of workers and residents from the area. The accident has caused concern about the safety of nuclear power plants and the protection of workers.

Syrian troops enter Lebanese battle

Syria continues to send troops to Lebanon, with reports of clashes and battles between Syrian forces and other groups. The situation remains tense and volatile.

The Observer said the letter to the president waswarm and conciliatory in tone, indicating a desire to resolve differences and move forward in the relationship with the United States.

The newspaper also reported that the accident at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant has put an end to the hope of a second summit between Gorbachev and Reagan. The news media has been focusing on the incident and its implications for international relations.

Sonic Youth's style mellows

By Bob Landt

On the cover of Sonic Youth's latest LP, a woman named Lydia Lunch is seen walking down the street, barefoot and at ease, as the sun sets behind her. The image captures the essence of Sonic Youth's music, which has matured over the years, blending experimental and accessible elements in ways that are both innovative and timeless.

Sonic Youth's work has been influential since its inception, and the band's musical style has evolved significantly. From their early days as part of the no wave scene in New York City to their current status as a respected and respected band, Sonic Youth has consistently pushed the boundaries of rock music.

The band's most recent album, "Goo," released in 1990, marked a significant shift in their sound, moving away from the abrasive, experimental style that characterized their earlier work and toward a more melodic and accessible approach. This change was not without controversy, as some fans and critics were concerned that Sonic Youth had "sold out," but the band's dedication to creating music that was both innovative and appealing to a wider audience has remained consistent throughout their career.

In recent years, Sonic Youth has continued to experiment with different sounds and styles, incorporating elements of punk, rock, and experimental music into their work. Their latest album, "The Eternal," released in 2016, is a testament to their ongoing commitment to pushing the boundaries of rock music and creating music that is both challenging and rewarding.

Sonic Youth's music has inspired countless artists and has remained influential in the world of rock music. Their ability to evolve and adapt while maintaining their core identity is a testament to their importance in the world of music.
New York City — "King of Swing" Benny Goodman spent the last 30 years of his life practicing his clarinet in his New York City apartment and playing occasional jazz concerts, but the man who revolutionized the swing style with his big band in the 1930s is best known for his clarinet solo on the 1936 hit when it went on the air.

He was the first jazz artist to play with the New York Philharmonic and he took orchestra music to the swing audience for the first time.

President Ronald Reagan paid tribute Saturday to Goodman for creating a "uniquely American sound that was as fresh and exciting as the lead that inspired it."

Benny Goodman, big band innovator, remembered his contributions to American life and jazz as "an American legend." He died of cancer at 81.

His how was to his friend, the late Jerry Lewis, "I've done it 28 years, and I went on for another dozen more."

"Working with Benny Goodman was a joy, it was an experience," said singer Harry Belafonte, a long-time friend of Goodman's.

Goodman was born May 30, 1909, the eighth of 12 children. He started playing the clarinet at the age of nine.

He was a victim of the classical clarinet, performing with William Anderson, Moritz von Stade, and Leon Fleisher, among others.

Goodman was presented a Lifetime Achievement Award at the 1986 Grammy awards ceremony and his Carnegie Hall jazz concert recording was selected into the National Registry of Recorded Sound by the Library of Congress and Science Hall of Fame in 1992.

Last June, Goodman emerged from retirement to make a surprise appearance and played two hours at New York's Lincoln Center.

At the time, Goodman's manager, John Hammond, his brother-in-law, said, "In a February interview, Goodman said he returned to work "because I love the music."

Wild Kingdom host Perkins dies at 81

Perkins had been ill with cancer for more than a month.

His death was announced Saturday by "Springfield" staff, according to a local newspaper.

He started his career in television in 1945, and it put the credit for his start in the "Springfield" television series, which was syndicated by the National Wildlife Federation in 1946.

Belgium wins Soviets in Cup action

The Belgian team, which won the World Cup last summer, defeated the Soviet team, 3-0. The Belgians, who barely survived the first round, capitalized on Soviet mistakes all afternoon in the game at Louis, and delivered two starting innings in everything: a header in the 10th minute by Stefan Dekeyser and a game-ending penalty after Vasilyev's goal in the 11th minute.

The outcome of the day's results eliminated two East Europeans teams and set up Belgium's quarterfinal duel in Flanders Sunday against the winner of Wednesday's German-French match.

Iowa State tennis player was charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of Floyd Doerr, 35, who was struck by a car while riding his bicycle near the Old Main campus. The player was identified as Timothy Turner, a senior from Fort Smith, Ark.

Turner was arraigned in the Polk County Jail late Wednesday on a single charge, Polk County Attorney Gary Penders said Friday.

"It is the first time in Polk County, people convicted in that offense serve one day in jail," Penders said. "Sometimes what the judge will do is give them a sick sentence. They get sent to prison under a felony penalty, but the sentence is recommended after 60 days.

When the collision occurred at about 1:15 p.m. on Sept. 10, near Ames, Iowa, Floyd Doerr and his wife, Judy, had driven their car to the hospital to pick up their son, who had been injured in a car accident earlier in the day.

The accident occurred at about 1:15 p.m. near a homemade driveway in the city's west end. The couple had driven to the hospital to pick up their son, who had been injured in a car accident earlier in the day.

"I haven't seen a driver report that they have seen someone get into a car with a sick sentence," Penders said. "The judge may have some kind of recommendations to do a public offense.

The Cyclone basketball player was simply the influence of alcohol, the charge is considered a public offense. Richards said: "The only people that are immune are diplomats." Outside, the blood alcohol levels.

"There has been a lot of discussion recently, personal family, structural damage — we are doing the best we can," he said. "I'm going to try to make it better."
