Iowa-Illinois nears agreement with council

WASPINGTON (AP) - A NASA official testified at a Senate Commerce subcommittee hearing Tuesday that the agency was in a "group" situation with Jpl in negotiating a contract for the space shuttle.

A hearing was held in the Jpl building to hear testimony from Jpl officials on the adequacy of the shuttle's design.

NASA Chief Scientist John M. Weir testified that the agency has been working closely with the Jpl team to develop a new, more efficient shuttle design.

Weir said that the new design will be based on the Jpl experience and will incorporate the latest technology and materials in the shuttle's structure.

The design will also include improvements in the shuttle's thermal protection system, which has been the subject of recent controversy.

The hearing was held to assess the progress being made in the shuttle's development and to address concerns raised by some members of Congress.

Weir said that the agency is committed to ensuring the safety and reliability of the shuttle program and is working diligently to address any issues that may arise.

The hearing was also an opportunity for Congress to provide input on the shuttle's design and to ask questions of Jpl officials.

"We are committed to ensuring the safety and success of the shuttle program," Weir said. "We welcome the opportunity to discuss these important issues and to answer any questions that Members of Congress may have."

A 73-year-old man was arrested in Iowa on Wednesday after a heated argument with police in a rural development area.

Residents of Riverside Heights and the developing Riverview Estates have reported seeing a man driving a white vehicle in the area, according to police. The man has been described as a bearded man who was carrying a white bag and was wearing a white shirt and black pants.

Police believe he may be linked to a series of break-ins in the area, including one at a nearby home that was believed to be under construction.

The suspect was arrested after a brief chase, and he was taken to the Crawford County Jail.

Correction

The Daily Iowan regrets the error in the article "Unique segew plan studied" on page 28 of the March 20 issue. The article contained an error in the calculation of the savings potential for the proposed segew plan. The correct savings potential is $30,000, not $300,000 as stated in the article.

Des Moines, Iowa - The state Department of Natural Resources, in a joint development agreement with the Iowa Department of Public Instruction, has selected a site for a new segew plant.

The site, located in the Ruralsew Heights area, has been selected after a year-long search for a suitable location.

The new segew plant will be built on a 10-acre site and will be designed to handle up to 500,000 gallons of segew per day.

The project is expected to cost $2 million and will be funded through a combination of state and federal grants.

Ul may reorganize School of Letters

A U.S. College of Liberal Arts program has been under observation by its deans and provosts and that of its departments and programs in the School of Letters. He said the School of Letters is under scrutiny because its programs are not as strong as they used to be, and its faculty is not as productive. However, he added, the programs are not in danger of being cut, and the School of Letters will continue to exist.

Among other things, the School of Letters is known for its strong programs in English, History, and Philosophy. However, the programs in these areas are not as strong as they used to be, and the School of Letters is working to improve them.

"Top Gun" blasted

Just because The Daily Iowan's aggressive posture does not necessarily mean that it must oppose journalistic objectivity, it is still important to maintain a point of political discernment. The current stance of The Daily Iowan is a result of a failed effort on the part of President Ronald Reagan to stabilize the hostage situation. In my opinion, The Daily Iowan is in an improvement with fascist sympathies promoting fascism, a formative student in Scripture's curricula. Every political party has its own bias, and editorial 写真の立場は政治的な立場に対する識者であると、政治的立場に対する識者であると。

The Wednesday column by Bliss Revelle is not my favorite of the week, although I think it's an improvement. The columns have been written with a sense of humor and enthusiasm, the sort of thing that will attract readers more than a few weeks of lackluster, one-note articles.

Hostages remembered

It has been more than five years since the Iranian hostage crisis, and yet it seems that Americans are still living in a state of mourning. The death toll is still that of a nation, and the pain of the families is still that of a nation. It is important to remember the sacrifices of the hostages, so that we can do our part to ensure that they are never forgotten. There really aren't any solutions to this problem. I hope that every citizen of the United States can come together and find some way to make the world a better place.

Teacher thanks

I have received several emails from people who have been inspired by my recent column. I am grateful for the feedback, and I hope that my words have had a positive impact on others.

Cyanide death prompts call to pull Excedrin from stores

AURORA, Wash. (AP) — The manufacturer of Excedrin called Tuesday for a voluntary recall of its pain reliever tablets after an investigation indicated the pills as a result of the proper amount of cyanide poisoning death of a Seattle area woman.

Larabush Family Laboratory said the tablets in question were not the typical cyanide poisoning product.

Excedrin tablets were mailed to a Seattle-area woman June 12 after she called the company to report a headache remedy.

Police and health officials said about 190 people, mostly the store's 20-milligram tablets, were recalled from the shelves.

S. African riots bring 11 deaths

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The South African government said Tuesday 11 deaths were caused when police used bullets to break up a riot by black youths in the country's most populous province.

The deaths occurred in a small area of Soweto, the black township immediately outside the capital.\n
The rioting began late Monday and was blamed on tensions in the township following the death of a 20-year-old man killed in a shooting which police said was brought on by the alleged theft of a car.

The government said the man had died of a bullet wound when police opened fire.

The authorities said they were still investigating the cause of the rioting, which began when police tried to stop looters from the scene of the shooting.

The rioting also claimed the lives of a 57-year-old man and a 17-year-old girl, according to the government.

In all, 11 people were killed and 15 injured, with many others taken to hospitals and others still being treated.

The rioting was the latest in a series of violent incidents in South Africa in recent weeks, including the shooting of black youths in the township of Soweto, the site of a recent无violent in 1990.

Dangerefield gains respect in new film

By Hept Chet (ST.

B A C K TO SC H O O L. Hey, want a laugh? No, but a stef in Bob Byhoy's foot now may be a laugh.

No, this is not an advertisement for a film, because no ad exists for the film. However, if you were to see "God Bless America" and sang with the character Bob Byhoy, you might find yourself laughing.

Rudolph Dangerefield is a stand-up comic in the film, and in real life, he is a comedian as well. In the film, he plays the title role, Bob Byhoy, a character who gets notoriety for his sarcastic and often insulting remarks.

Dangerefield plays Thorton Melon, a self-made man who earns a sizable fortune from vintage clothing stores. Despite his success, Melon is a bit of a recluse, and his character is developed in the film to show his softer side.

Dangerefield's performance is typically amusing, and his character's interactions with other characters, such as the impulsive Melon's nasty second wife, provide a lot of humor. At times, the film's brand of humor is not as effective as the director's previous works, but overall, it is amusing enough to generate praise.

In the end, the film's strong performances, particularly Dangerefield's, make it worth watching. It is a film that is both laughing and touching, with a message about the importance of family and friendship.

"God Bless America" is a film that is worth watching for its entertaining cast and witty script. Dangerefield's performance is particularly noteworthy, and his character's growth throughout the film is satisfying. Overall, it is a film that is sure to leave you with a smile on your face.

Sutton set for attempt at 300

Action in the Iowa Capitol extended through Wednesday night, leaving the question of whether Orson Welles would attempt to break the world record for the most 300s in a single game still open. Butler, who has vowed to pitch until he breaks the record, believes he is close to the mark.

"I think I have the talent," Butler said. "I've been working on my form and my technique, and I think I'm ready to give it a try."

Butler, who has spent his spring and summer training for the attempt, believes he can break the record with a strong performance.

"I've trained hard, and I think I can do it," Butler said. "I know I have the talent, and I'm ready to take the challenge."

The French midfielder was stopped from scoring in the first half by the Italian defenders.

In a game that was marked by the French dominance, Platini was denied on several occasions.

Despite the French victory, the match was characterized by a rough and physical play, with both teams showing determination to get the better of the opposition.

France coach Henri Delaunay praised his team's performance, saying: "It's a great day for us, we played well and showed that we are capable of winning important matches."
