Liberals disturbed by court choices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Liberal judges are expected to increase the number of unanimous votes in recent Supreme Court decisions, a spur to the Senate's liberal minority, a source indicated Monday.

In the most forceful pre-Senate reform campaign, Sen. Warren E. Mansfield, D-Vt., has vowed to change the current Supreme Court system by replacing it with a Senate-appointed president who would replace the present members, a move would assume the new court's nucleus.

Mansfield is understood to have enjoyed the widespread support of constitutional reformers, including Rep. Caspar Weinberger, R-N.Y., who spoke at New York's Constitution Club last week.

Mansfield vowed that his new court would produce a policy change that would reduce the number of unanimous votes by at least 50 percent.

He said that he would expect the Senate to approve the plan, which he described as a "viable and practical" solution to the current court's problems.

The Senate responded by issuing a statement saying, "We shall be glad to consider Mansfield's proposal, which we believe will help to bring about a more efficient and effective Supreme Court system."
Mingo state subpoena OK'd

DUKE MEMOIRS (UPI) - A legislative panel in Iowa has refused to release to the Iowa Ethics Commission the tapes of a committee meeting concerning an incident involving Republican Sen. Chuck Grassley, despite a subpoena issued to the U.S. senator.

The Iowa Senate's Rules and Administration Committee last week took no action on a request by the ethics panel to compel the release of the tapes to the state Ethics Commission.

The commission had refused to issue a subpoena, but the ethics panel said the tapes contained information on a number of ethical issues.

The meeting, which was held on April 17, was called to discuss the investigation of Grassley, who was questioned by the ethics commission in connection with an ethics complaint.

The ethics panel has been investigating Grassley's conduct in connection with a series of ethics complaints.

The commission has subpoenaed Grassley to testify in the investigation, but the senator has refused to comply.

The ethics panel has also subpoenaed the Iowa Senate's Rules and Administration Committee to testify in the investigation, but the committee has refused to comply.

The ethics panel said the tapes contained information on a number of ethical issues, including whether the senator violated state ethics laws.

Impact of Supreme Court change debated

Michael O'Connor Staff Writer

If the Senate confirms President Ronald Reagan's nomination of Robert Rehnquist to the Supreme Court, it may well be a shifting in the court's decisions on a variety of issues ranging from abortion to affirmative action, according to three University of Iowa regents and several faculty members. Regents OK early retirement

By Lewis Wayne Greene

CEDAR FALLS — The state Board of Regents approved early retirement incentives designed to entice the number of employees at the UI and other state-supported institutions.

The plan offers incentives to about 3,400 and all the option of retiring early and moving, health, dental and group life benefits as well as partial payment of the early retirement credit. It is open to all employees.

"I think a number of our best faculty and staff will step up to the window and go to another job," says regent Charles Duncan of the board of Regents' early retirement incentive plan.

As early retirement incentive programs are debated, Regents' institutions were faced with the problem of reducing the number of employees and to save money.

But Regents Charles Duncan expressed concern about the idea that the program should be sold in the sense of saving money. He said that the Regents have been approached by several financial institutions in the UI and other state institutions.

"Are we trying to make a profit?" Duncan asked the Regents.

But Regents' President Johnson replied, "We are trying to make a profit."

Johnson added that the most talented faculty members would be hired to the university, and that the Regents have been approached by the financial institutions in the UI and other state institutions.

"If it's not so the university has ended up some place to get out of people," Duncan said.

"Yes, Vice-President for Personnel Nancy Key is in fact pointed out that the program was designed to be paid off by the faculty and staff members on the financial institution's behalf.

The Regents are looking at the plans from the角度 of a large number of employees, not just the faculty and staff members.

So the plans were never designed to be paid for by the employees, but by the university and the Regents.

The controls of Iowa's airwaves have begun to change as the group begins to repeat a familiar story: the band actually leads to completely missed bookings, the group started playing hard in the early punk, but has eventually led to a more diverse repertoire.

NATIONAL

In the city of Iowa, a community is forming where the group is located. The band has been repeating itself season after season are repeating their early punk bands, but has eventually led to a more diverse repertoire.

The group's latest release, "1986," has been critically acclaimed, and has landed "The Awful Birthday" (NBC) at number two in the time period. The recordings on their new album, "Forgiven," have been accompanied by a remarkable transformation from punk to comedy. At 7 p.m., John, a fan of the group, makes a joke about the band's new release, "Gingerbread Man." He says, "I've been waiting for this album for a long time."

Dealers

Not only has the band's music evolved, but so has their fan base. "I was a kid when I discovered Black Flag," says John. "Now I'm just as old as they are." He adds, "I'm proud to be a part of this important band's legacy."

Filmmaker reports change in British

By George Yatchen

A 30,000-acre farm, a JAMES Bond parking lot and a copper statue of Ben Hur are the realities of filmmaker John Dyer who directed the British-made BBC

The film is set in the 1950s, a time of political, social and economic change in Britain. It follows the story of a young boy who grows up in a village and is exposed to the realities of life through his experiences with the farm, the parking lot and the statue. Dyer's film explores themes of childhood innocence, the impact of war, and the struggle for identity in a rapidly changing world. The film covers a variety of topics, including friendship, family, and the challenges faced by a young boy growing up in the United Kingdom during a time of significant political and social change. Overall, the film provides a thought-provoking and engaging portrayal of life in Britain during the 1950s.
Cubs' manager survives win

Chicago Tribune — Joe Coughlin, who fired end of the day, is Chicago manager, said Philadelphia Phillies manager Phil Schott. "If we had a tough time finding it," Coughlin said before the game, "we'll be in a lot of trouble." Schott added: "I think we're going to have some fun with these guys."

Phil Coughlin left the dugout for the first time in the third inning and got a home run, one of two home runs he scored. The Cubs were leading 4-2 in the fourth inning when they scored three runs.

UPS man

Took up a Lie to Get a Job

I had just moved into a new house in the suburbs of New York. My wife, who was working as an ups man for the postal service, told me that she had been assigned to deliver some packages to my house.

When I went to meet her, I was stunned to see that she was a gorgeous young woman in her mid-twenties. She said she had just started working for the ups and was happy to be on a new route.

I asked her if she had any tips for me on how to handle the package. She said she could help me with that, but she needed a few minutes to get the right supplies from her truck.

While she was gone, I started wondering about her. Why was she delivering packages in her suburban neighborhood? Could she be a delivery girl for a dating service? I decided to follow her lead and see what I could find.

As she returned to her truck, I noticed that she had a faint smile on her face. She handed me the package and said she was glad I liked it. I thanked her and she drove away.

I watched her drive away and thought about how much she had to offer. I wondered if she was the right one for me. I decided to meet her again and find out for sure.

The next day, I called her and asked if she would like to meet up for a drink. She said she would love to and we planned to meet at a coffee shop.

When we met, I was impressed by her beauty and intelligence. We spent the afternoon talking and getting to know each other. I realized that I had fallen in love with her.

As we walked to the coffee shop, I felt a surge of happiness. I knew I had found the right woman for me.

The next day, I called her and asked if she would like to have dinner with me. She said she would love to and we planned to meet at a nice restaurant.

When we met, I was even more impressed by her. I realized that she was the perfect woman for me. I knew I wanted to spend the rest of my life with her.

As we walked back from the restaurant, I felt a surge of happiness. I knew I had found the right woman for me.

Anemia keeps Spangler out of national meet

Several Iowa athletes have qualified for and will compete in national meets this weekend, but one Hawkeye qualifier, will be absent from the women's Outdoor Track and Field Championship. Jenny Spangler is scheduled to compete for the women's 3000-meter run, but because she was recently diagnosed with anemia, she is unable to compete.

The stay-away from the 3000-meter run is not due to a lack of conditioning, according to Spangler's coach, Assistant Coach Terry Simpson.

"It's a very touchy situation," Simpson said. "Jenny has been running well recently, but she has a blood problem.

"She has been running, but her body has not been able to perform as well as she would like." Simpson said.

Spangler, who is a junior, said that she has been running well for the past week, but her blood problem has been causing her to feel fatigued.

"I've been running well for the past week, but my body hasn't been able to perform as well as it should," she said.
