Wine revenue disappointing

Nearly a year has passed since the Iowa State Legislature approved the sale of wine by private outlets in hopes of generating revenue, but those hopes have gone unfulfilled.

The measure has proved to be a costly one for Iowa, according to state officials who estimate a loss of more than $5 million because of the deregu-

Patrick Cavanaugh, director of the Iowa Beer and Liquor Control Department, said the actual number of wine outlets is running "frighteningly far below" projections made by the legislature last spring.

CAVANAUGH SAID legislators estimated the state would gain more than 4,000 retail wine outlets by this year. As of June 1, there were only 1,000 grocery stores, gas stations, bars or wine stores that qualify as wine outlets - selling wine on a carryout basis. "The state is losing money because of a misestimation by the legislature," Cavanaugh charged. The legislature may have been influenced by lobbyists and other special interest groups who were "overly optimistic" about the future of wine sales in the state, he

Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, said the legislature set licensing fees and taxes on wine sales that may have been lower than the margin needed to insure a VARN SAID THE lost income is affecting the state's general fund as well as a state-run substance abuse program instituted in 1985. The loss may ultimately add to an already-poor economic situation in the state, which could keep residents from making luxury purchases such as wine or champagne, he Despite the reported loss, Cavanaugh and Varn said wine consumption in Iowa has increased by 19 percent over last year's sales. Varn said the problem is that the state is receiving less money from priyate outlets than it did when controlling wine sales.

The increase in sales can be attributed to the opening and novelty of the wine outlets, Cavanaugh said.

"More people wanted to stock up or try the new wines once they were available," he said.

VARN PREDICTED that wine sales will increase within the next year when the state sells its liquor stores, withdrawing from the wine and liquor market entirely. The state will draw additional revenue from sales taxes and the purchase of licenses when the private liquor stores open.

"We expect a windfall within the next few years as the stores are being sold off,"

But he added that the licensing fee may prevent some smaller stores from seeking sales permits.

"This fee may be keeping the 'mom and pop' stores from selling wine because (the fee) is too high," Varn said.

Rick Hamann, manager of Rick's Wine Warehouse, 409 S. Gilbert St., also foresees an increase in wine sales in Iowa.

Agreement reached in CWA strike

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its major union said Thursday they have settled the 26-day national telephone strike and members of the Communications Workers of America will return to work Friday.

The announced by Rozanne Weissman, a spokeswoman for the 155,000 striking CWA workers, who said rank-and-file members would vote on the agreement with results to be announced by Aug. 4.

The two sides had moved close to settlement Wednesday, when AT&T announced it had reached agreement at one of two corporate divisions, leaving only one unit - the 35,000-member Information Systems workers - without a

"The Communications Workers of America ended its 26-day strike against AT&T effective 11:59 local time today after successfully concluding negotiations at all AT&T divi-sional unit tables," Weissman

"We are glad the strike is over and we will be glad to get everyone back on the job," AT& T spokesman Herb Linnen said. "Both sides win."

FULL DETAILS of the settlement were not immediately available but Weissman said the agreement "represents a major breakthrough in the telecommunications industry because of a far-reaching and innovative total employment security package and other gains which met the union's chief bargaining goal.'

Linnen said that in addition to the job security provisions, which he estimated were worth $40 million, employees will get higher wages, as well as improved medical, dental and pension benefits.

"For AT&T, the agreements give us flexibility in structuring and paying certain categories so that we will be better able to keep our costs and prices in line with our competition," Linnen said.

The strike against AT&T did not affect local telephone companies, which were split from the Bell System in its Jan. 1, 1984, breakup. AT&T management employees took over many of the union jobs in long distance and other affected services during the strike, the first since the breakup of Ma

AT&T Communications was one of six company units that has been in negotiations with the CWA on local issues since a tentative national contract agreement was unveiled last

IN IOWA, nearly 700 striking AT&T employees were scheduled to return to work at midnight Thursday.

"Although the settlement is tentative and must be ratified, we're very, very relieved and glad it's all over," said Jim Rogers, spokesman for CWA Local 7105 in Des Moines. "We hope we never again get pushed to the point at which we have to strike. It's no fun."

Workers scheduled for Thursday's overnight shift were 'overjoyed to return to work,' Rogers said. "There's a lot of single parents and one-income families among us who deserve and need the money we work for."

Rogers said the agreement "is a big breakthrough in the telecommunications industry because of an improved total employment security package and other gains.

Tom Bechtel, a spokesman for AT&T in Iowa, said while it was unfortunate the strike took place, "the main thing now is that things will return to normal.

"The strike wasn't easy on anyone," Bechtel said. "We'll be glad to have our crews

High school classes leave college-bound unprepared

By Michael O'Connor

The high school curricula that many collegebound students have chosen are not adequately preparing them for the rigors of UI courses, the director of the Undergraduate Academic Advising Center said Wednesday. An effort must be made at the high school level to prepare college-bound students fully, Juliet Kaufmann said. In the 185-86 academic year, 900 UI students, primar freshmen and sophomores, were enrol' (in Basic Algebra 1, UI Associate Math tics Professor Richard Randell said. The class is designed for students who did not take the recommended three years of high school math, he said. The problem is not necessarily because college-preparatory courses are not offered in Iowa high schools, Kaufmann said, but that often students choose not to take the demand-

"SURE IT HAPPENS," said Kennedy, who teaches English and journalism. "There are some pretty capable students who take electives that are not challenging." Kaufmann agreed with the findings of another study, which recommends the following key college-prep courses: four years of English; three years of science, social studies and mathematics; and two years of a foreign

Without this, some business students pursue business degrees without adequate math preparation," she said. "And there are some whowant to pursue a nursing degree without the proper science background.'

BUT THE BURDEN of instigating effective college-preparatory curriculums does not fall on the high schools alone, she said, colleges and universities must also take the initiative. And some universities, including the University of Northern Iowa, are doing so. UNI has issued a book titled "Expectations." UNI Director of Admisssions Jack Wielenga said his office has been sending the book to Iowa high schools for about six years.

"The book describes a high school curriculum that we would like our incoming students to have taken," he said. "Judging by the requests we get for the book, we think it is successful." Anne Cleary, who will be acting as UI director of admissions for 1986-1987, said one solution for the curriculum problem is com-

Jailed judge faces impeachment vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House Judiciary Committee unanimously voted Thursday to impeach convicted Judge Harry Claiborne, saying he ignored his obligation to pay his taxes and deserves to be kicked off the federal bench.

In the first impeachment proceeding since the Watergate scandal in 1974, the panel approved four articles of impeachment against Claiborne and sent them to the House for action.

Claiborne, 68, a federal judge in Nevada, was convicted in 1984 of tax evasion and still draws his $78,700 yearly salary while serving a two-year prison term. He has refused to resign, saving the government was conducting a vendetta against him and his impeachment and subsequent trial in the Senate would give him a chance to clear his name.

"JUDGE CLAIBORNE raises arrogance and contempt to an art form," said Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky.

The first three articles, approved 35-0, dealt with Clai-borne's tax evasion for 1979 and 1980 taxes and his conviction on those charges. The fourth article, approved 28-7, dealt with Claiborne's failure to uphold his oath of office.

Under the Constitution, a federal judge can be removed from the bench only by impeachment and conviction. The House sends the articles of impeachment, which are similar to an indictment, to the Senate, where the trial is conducted.

The House may take up the impeachment resolution against Claiborne by the end of July, the first time in 50 years that a federal has been impeached.

Anticipating a trial in the Senate, Democratic leader Robert Byrd introduced a resolution requring the Rules Committee to determine if changes are needed in the proceedings. A similar move was undertaken in the expectation of an impeachment trial for former President Richard Nixon but never acted on after the president resigned.

Budget committees push spending plan

WASHINGTON - House and Senate budget leaders, trying to rush a budget through Congress, agreed on a 1987 spending plan Thursday that slashes President Ronald Reagan's military spending request and but keeps tax rates at the amount he will accept.

The nearly $1 trillion budget meets the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Act requirement of no more than a $144 billion deficit next fiscal year, coming in at $142.5 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, budget leaders said.

Manion nomination tentatively approved

WASHINGTON - The Senate Thursday tentatively approved the nomination of conservative Daniel Manion to be a federal appeals court judge.

After a week of intense lobbying by President Ronald Reagan, the Senate voted 48-46 in favor of Manion, with Vice President George Bush on hand to vote in case of a tie. Democratic leader Robert Byrd immediately demanded a second count - a vote Senate leaders said late Thursday afternoon would not be called until after Congress reconvenes in mid-July.

Authorities ponder fish death mystery

By Julie Eisele City Editor

Local officials are working to solve the mystery behind the deaths of more than 20 fish, discovered dead in a pond at City Park Wednesday.

Hillary Maurer, an environmental technician with the Johnson County Health Department, said the carp probably died from oxygen deprivation.

Increased water temperatures, stagnant water and the shallowness of the pond may have caused the problem, Maurer said.

The pond, the larger of two in the park, is river-fed and a large influx of river water that contains oxygen-eating chemicals may have also contributed to the incident.

"If you add the chemicals into the pond that is basically stagnant and has an increased temperature, there's less available oxygen for the fish," Maurer said.

RIVER WATER CONTAINS several chemicals that conoxygen, including nitrates and phosphates, Maurer said. Some chemicals are natural and others are introduced by farms upstream from the river. "There wasn't a chemical spill or anything," Maurer said. "It's not a health hazard."

"In all likelihood, we will have the water tested by a hygenic lab," said Terry Trueblood, director of the Iowa City Department of Parks and Recreation.

Local farmland owners also say fish in their ponds have died recently, probably for the same reasons, Trueblood and Maurer said.

"There has been an inordinate number of people calling and saying 'My fish died,'" Maurer said. "Mother Nature is just playing tricks on every-

Jennifer Stewart poses in her Statue of Liberty costume. Stewart will don her green latex paint and toga again Tuesday for a nationwide search for a Lady Liberty lookBy Lewis Wayne Greene University Editor

"Liberty lives in Iowa City," according to Jennifer Stewart.

Stewart, an Iowa City resident, is one of three finalists in a nationwide contest to find a Statue of Liberty look-alike.

The three finalists will appear on the CBS Morning News Tuesday.

The final selection of Lady Liberty's double will take place Tuesday morning in front of the real statue on Governor's Island in New York Harbor.

"The Statue of Liberty, I guess, will be the final judge," she said.

STEWART WON the contest's Chicago regional competition in May and if she takes the national competition will be signed to a one-year contract with Ron Smith Celebrity Look-Alike Productions.

The winner also will be flown to Washington, D.C to appear in Independence Day festivities.

Stewart became interested in the contest after reading about it in a newspaper advertisement.

An acquaintance once remarked on Stewart's resemblance to the statue and that memory came back to her when she heard about the contest, she said. "Because of what this person said, I thought 'Well, what the heck,' " she said. Stewart said she was surprised when she won the regional competition.

"People . . . if they have a dream, then it's obtainable," says Jennifer Stewart of her hopes to win the Lady Liberty look-alike contest.

IT TAKES STEWART about 45 minutes to transform herself into the statue. She paints her skin with latex paint mixed to match the green color of the oxidized copper statue. Stewart researched the history of the statue extensively and she said she has

A member of the UI Committee on Infectious Diseases said a broadening of the scope of the committee has not reduced its effectiveness in dealing with AIDS.

Acting UI Director of Student Health Services Mary Khowassah said she believes the committee is handling the possibility of AIDS cases appearing at the UI very well even though the committee is no longer concentrating solely on the disease

"I felt we discussed the ramifications AIDS would have for this university very thoroughly," Khowassah said, adding that the committee members were well qualified and the committee is prepared to reconvene at any time.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a viral disease that leaves the body's immune system unable to resist infection. AIDS, which has no known cure, is always fatal.

THE COMMITTEE approved an informational pamphlet on the topic for distribution and Khowassah said the UI has also made effective efforts at educating people in the UI community about the disease.

SHE SAID AIDS education steps at the UI include the approval of the pamphlet, educational presentations about the disease to various groups by student health staff members and articles in two local publications.

Khowassah said the UI will continue its efforts, which may include AIDS informational programs in UI Residence Halls next year, to make people better informed about the

Killer coke

It has been only a week since the University of Maryland's All-American basketball player Len Bias died of cocaine intoxication. In that time, however, the American public has been deluged with commentary about the tragedy.

The sequence of events proved too unbegrably bitter: Bias became the No. 1 draft pick of the Boston Celtics, signed a multi-million dollar deal to wear Reebok athletic shoes and declared himself to be living "a dream within a dream." The next day he died at age 22.

The unfairness of death putting an end to dreams just beginning to come true seems to demand a lesson be drawn from it all, and everyone from Jesse Jackson to sports writers and columnists have obliged. Now the inevitable call goes out for mandatory random drug testing of professional and college athletes.

But drug testing could not have prevented this tragedy - Bias had routinely passed drug tests while in college and had a reputation for steering clear of drugs. And calling for stricter scrutiny of athletes too easily lets us keep the focus comfortably away from our own lives.

In truth, everyone has access to drugs - not just professional basketball players - and everyone can be tempted to take just one, experimental try.

But "just one" try can be one too many. The evidence mounts that it was not an addiction that killed Bias, but his very first taste of cocaine. No high comes free of charge - sooner or later drug use takes its toll on mental and physical health. For Len Bias, it was sooner rather than later.

When it comes to cocaine, especially, one can never tell exactly when the luck will run out. According to John E. Smialek, Maryland's chief medical examiner, "overdose is not an appropriate term for this drug. A particular concentration may not kill one individual, but a lesser amount could kill another."

Smialek said Bias had neither an unusually high blood cocaine concentration nor an unusual sensitivity to the Cocaine, and many other drugs, are just as available on this campus as at the University of Maryland where Len Bias took his fatal snort. If nothing else, maybe Bias's death will make people stop and think before they give cocaine "just one try."

Dishonored veterans

In the real Vietnam War, there was a real soldier (not Sylvester Stallone who spent the war in a girls school in Europe), named Rambo. He was, according to his family and friends who were interviewed in a poignant CBS television news show, a quiet, gentle family man.

For them and for Arthur John Rambo's commanding officer, the movie stories have turned a life devoted to gentler pursuits, such as home and children, into a painful mockery. They know what war is. It is ugly brutality. It is boredom punctuated by blood, terror, disfigurement and death. It is not cartoon musclemen in pursuit of glory or revenge.

America has rightly been accused of forgetting and betraying her Vietnam veterans, but even that is better than the insult done them by such movies. The best honor done to a soldier is to tell those back home the truth of what he suffered for them and for his conception of right. To turn the pain of real war into a cartoon for the profit of all who stayed safely at home, or were too young or too old to go and experience the truth, is a grave dishonor.

Busted budget

Revised government estimates indicate that present economic growth is so bad the federal budget deficit will likely hit $220 billion in 1986. This is a new record even for the Reagan administration which has become well known for huge deficits. The red ink will contribute to the growing national debt which has more than doubled since President Ronald Reagan took

Although some of the blame must be shared by Congress, it is the president who has final veto power over budget expenditures. The Reagan administration has never proposed a balanced budget, and has frequently used the power of the White House to pressure representatives into voting for higher administration budgets.

For example, the Democrat-controlled House has proposed a new budget which would trim this year's deficit by $83 billion, leaving a deficit of no more than $137 billion in 1987 — seven billion less than the $144 billion deficit proposed by the Republican-controlled Senate and six billion less than the White House

Perhaps voters in 1988 will remember to support these Representatives who fought for lower spending rather than going along with administration policies which have transformed this country into the most debtridden nation in the world.

as you live. But if you can't choose between the three, there is only one path open to a greedy, power hungry, sordid little beetle larva like you - government service. The Notorious Mingo Bachelor Party Nude Dancer (Ahem) "Sex Act" Unpleasantness is a case in point where an individual of such low habits is concerned. In this unsavory incident, a lobbyist threw a bachelor party for a Democratic state representative at a bar in the Jasper County metropolis of Mingo. Said lobbyist paid for transportation, food and drink for 25 legislators, several fellow lobby dwellers and a few journalists. BUT THE GUEST LIST didn't end there. Also in attendence were two exotic dancers, one of whom is reported to have become very exotic indeed over the course of the evening. The more circumspect of the two maintained the rather broad standards of modesty her profession demands and remained chastely attired in her g-string and pasties. The other, being either a freer spirit than her companion, a neophyte at her craft or just a little too toasty, loosed herself from the surly bonds of the traditional garb of her profession and proceeded to deport herself in the altogether. The muse of exotic dancing must have truly been upon her that evening, because in a burst of inspiration she concluded her performance by caucusing with a duly elected legislator in an unusually intimate manner, performing a (ahem) "sex act" upon him, much to his surprise, I'm sure.

Much perturbation has ensued. The exotic dancer who maintained her rather costume condemned her fellow artist as "unprofessional." And considering the lofty standards exotic dancers maintain, I'm sure their Professional Standards and Ethics Committee is just spitting bullets about this one.

SOME OF THOSE legislators present as this sorry tableau unfolded aren't off the hook, either. In accepting the lobbyist's proferred transportation, food, drink and (ahem) entertainment, they may have violated that mainstay of moral governance in Iowa, the gifts law, which forbids legislators from accepting any gifts worth more that $15 from any lobbyist or allied parasitic species.

Usually, lobbyists have trouble finding anything worth less than $15 anyone would particularly want as a gift, but the Mingo Party Animal seems to have come up with something creative.

With all the ink feverishly spilled in the name of this stain on Iowa's escutcheon, it is little wonder that the late hub-bub over the doings of former White House aide Michael Deaver have receded into the higher-

"democratic" pro-cess in the United States has fallen flat on its face. Despite the overwhelming rejection by the people in this country of President Ronald Reagan's policy of war against Nicaragua, our Congress, ostensibly representing us, has just voted to send $100 million to continue the bloodshed in Central America.

Despite the fact that more than 15,000 people have died in the war Reagan is waging against the entire people of Nicaragua, our Congres has demonstrated its complete lack of conscience by agreeing to fund and support this kind of genocide.

Despite receiving phone calls on the day of the vote that were seven to one against further U.S. funding of the Contras, 3rd District Republican Rep. Cooper Evans voted to continue this

WE HAVE SEEN every dirty trick in the book used by Reagan to win this issue. Before the vote last March, he concocted a story of a Nicaraguan invasion of Honduras that was splashed all over the front page of the newspapers.

Now again in June, White House spokesman Larry Speakes has told us Nicaragua received secret arms from the Soviet Union, but some boxes marked "wheat."

Hardly a damning indictment, but these are the tactics Reagan has had to use to gain any kind of support for a policy of murder. And yet, this country still opposes Contra aid by two-thirds!

"democracy" and "freedom," but historically our government has stood on the side of the oppressor until it absolutely had to abandon ship. Let's not forget former President Jimmy Carter supported former Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza until the bitter end.

We're told today that to support the Contras is to support "democracy." But if support of "democracy" means support of a former dictator's army, widely recognized to utilize terrorist tactics and grossly violate all standards of human rights, then it's time to re-examine our definition of that word. It really doesn't matter how many dead peasants pave the road as long as the U.S. system can keep marching towards greater economic and political priviledge. Millions can voice their opposition to such policies and yet they are drowned out in Reagan's red-baiting battle cries.

So, the "democratic" process has failed us, and failed the innocent people of Nicaragua. What next? Whatever Reagan Inc. decides to pull out of its bag of tricks next, we must be ready to counter it. We cannot give up, even when dealt such a hard blow. We must stand up for justice lution of "democracy." We must unite and take on the responsibility to stop Reagan's policy of war and aggression - it's obvious now that Congress won't do this for us.

> BUT IN CALIFORNIA, where justices usually are reconfirmed at the ballot box every eight years, there is now a politics of second-guessing.

The litmus test here is not abortion, as it is in Washington, but another life and death issue; capital punishment. Since a ballot initiative in 1978 restored capital punishment, the California Supreme Court has ruled in 55 death-penalty cases and approved only three of those penalties. It was Rose Bird who voted against capital punishment in every case.

She never voted alone.

Indeed, Justice Bird insists that her reversals were based on flaws in the law. But she has been successfully targeted as a justice thwarting the public will.

It has been hard to respond to the slick campaign of slogans and bumper stickers. "It's awfully difficult...to try and talk about an institution that protects unpopular people as well as the popular," she says

Indeed, out of stubbornness or integrity, Justice Bird has made a conscious decision not to hire the battery of consultants, speechwriters and ad men that constitute a political campaign these days. "We (the judiciary) are implementing the law. We're not sitting here pleasing pressure groups. And if we go about a dialogue with the people doing that, we...destroy what is special in this institution," she insists.

JUSTICE BIRD is determined to campaign her own way, as herself. She has modified neither her opinions nor her free-flowing talk about "the journey of life." She most assuredly has not followed the advice of some supporters who urged her to "vote for just one execution, just vote for one."

"If I do it in order to get back into office, I won't be the same judge again," she says. "I'll be a judge who thinks more about re-election than about the law. And when do you stop putting your finger up to the wind?"

That's what is at stake here. The judiciary has never been totally isolated from politics. But when judges become one-issue candidates, when they make decisions with one eye on a pressure group and a pollster, this will be a diffe-

We will, as Bird says, "have a society without an anchor.' We will have exchanged the court's long view for the moment. In California, we may find out how easy it is to replace the scales of justice with a finger in the wind.

Vietnam vets finally welcomed home

By Rick Eckstein

ITH THE vacation season upon us, many people are trying to decide where to spend their time off. How about sunny Vietnam? Wouldn't it be fun to roam around the jungles, or to swim in slimy streams? At no extra cost, you can sleep among rats and snakes, have little or no food, and watch your friends bleed to death. Does this sound like a great vacation? Of course it doesn't.

Guest Opinion

Actors express views on Mamet play

By Hoyt Olsen Staff Writer

EXUAL Perversity in Chicago concerns the relationship of four people: sex "expert" Bernie, his protege Dan, Dan's new girlfriend, Deborah, and her roommate Joan. Recently I met with the cast and director; some of their observations fol-

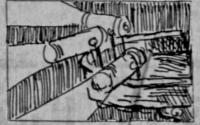

LISA SEACRIST, a Philadelphia native, is a second year master of fine arts/acting student. She appeared this past season as Babe in University Theatres' Crimes of the Heart.

Why acting? "I like the idea that you can change a lot. You can be an architect one day, and the next week be a 19th century whatever. I like to perform; I've always loved to do that. That's where my talents lie.'

On the romance between Deborah (her character) and Dan: "All the outside stuff keeps changing the relationship and it can't work out. I've got a roommate who doesn't like Danny, and you've got Bernie saying all this stuff all the time to him. But then again, the two of us aren't perfect people either. Nobody's wonderful in this play, and so you have that chance, but it's not a definite

On a possible reading of the play that Deborah and Joan have had a sexual relationship: "I think we're going to pretty much let it up to the audience to decide. I think there's definitely hints there of it ... I don't think we've made any overt (decision), like we're going to do anything particularly that's going to say 'Yes, absolutely.'

RICHARD BARROWS is in his third year of the graduate acting program at the University of Illinois. Barrows was asked to audition for University Theatres' summer program after Director James Finney heard him give a reading at a directors' colloquium.

Why act? "I was in the Air Force in Korea, I had done some acting. I met this guy who wanted to be an actor, he wanted to go to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. And he sucked; he was terrible. I thought, 'If he can consider this as a career, then why the hell can't I, because I'm better than he

On his character Bernie: "He hasn't really got a clue. A lot of stories, about 90 percent vicarious living, and about 10 percent paid for ... He goes to a lot of movies, he hears a lot of stories and just changes them a little bit to make them his own stories, his own encounters . . . He's just pretty much full of hot air ... He's not a person who deals with much depth in his own psyche.

"There are some sympathetic sides to Bernie that come out when he sees that Dan is feeling down about his relationship. He doesn't know how to come out and say, 'Look, I know you're having a hard time and I understand what you're going through. If you'd like to talk about it we can,' but he does know how to kind of joke with somebody to get them out of their doldrums."

TODD BALLENTYNE, a reformed English major, is entering his second year in the master of fines arts acting program. From Nebraska, he wanted to stay in the Midwest, and liked both the UI's academic reputation and its reasonable cost. Ballentyne played Trigorin in The Sea-

Why acting? "It's the idea of wanting to pull something out and project. All those things that you learn, you want to bring out and share with others, instead of keeping them inside. I guess the only way for me to do that is to act."

On why his character Dan listens to Bernie: "Dan's a lot like me. I'm from the Midwest; I'm not a worldly person ... You put this guy who's not worldly in Chicago and he's going to be vulnerable and susceptible to a guy like Bernie who 'knows the ropes.'

Is this a period piece about the mid 1970s? "The way Mamet's language works, of course, is very period ... he writes an everyday kind of language, and he didn't embellish anything at all. So maybe that's period, but the situation, no. It's pretty much universal; that's what makes it a good WENDEE PRATT is from Washington State. Once an environmental studies major, she is now in the master of fine arts acting program. This past year she played the very diverse roles of Chick Boyle in Crimes of the Heart and Nina in The Seagull.

Why acting? "I love it. It might be hard to believe, because sometimes I get so nervous and I'm probably hell in rehearsals

"I did some technical work as an undergraduate, and that's what led me to be interested in what was happening onstage. I auditioned for something (a university production of Cabaret) and got luck. ... I got cast as an extra walk-on, and the director asked me if I wanted to help. It ended up to be like a stage manager position, and I really enjoyed that. On her character Joan's hostility toward Dan: "It could really be any male. I think I'm really frustrated; it's not just that I'm hostile, but I have justification for being hostile ... I think Mamet is more relating through Joan; she's the one who's really figuring things out ... She says it's a finite puzzle that we can solve if we change the rules . .

"She's not being allowed to be the woman that she always learned that she should be ... in the real world, in the job market, they won't accept her as an equal.

JAMES FINNEY directed Major Barbara this past year, his first at the UI.

On the theme: "Mamet in this play is saying that the way we treat sex in this society is such that no real relationship is possible. That's why it's 'sexual perversity,' because it's used in a perverse way, rather than about sex being perverse. Bernie perverts it so much that Dan is no longer capable of the ... respect for women that he might have been raised with in his home.

On accusations that Mamet is anti-feminist: "It might be true in other plays, and I'll withhold comment. In this play, definitely not; he is definitely pro-humanist. ... Because the (behavior) is anti-feminist, the relationships don't work, and so the play is humanist.

On the possible reading of a ay relationship between Deborah and Joan: "There is no, no, absolutely no decision to go with any gay relation-ship; the people who want to see two roommates who are just enjoying being roommates as lesbians, they will see it ... It is definitely not there as something that messes up the (Dan-Deborah) relationship because she's really a lesbian; that would ruin the play.

Because we see two women walking down the street together and they're good friends and they put an arm around the shoulder, and all of a sudden you say 'Oh, yeah, which one's the bull dyke? That's the same sexual perversity that we have elsewhere. ### Bond brings act to

By Beth Lucht

Pat Bond, the "first lady of gay theater" will bring her controversial one-woman show to Iowa City tonight as part of Gay Pride Week

"Lorena Hicock and Eleanor Roosevelt: A Love Story" tells the story of the love affair between the sainted first lady and Hicock, the first female Associated Press reporter. About 2,330 letters between the two women exist, and Bond read all of them while researching the play.

Bond, 62, moved from Chicago to Davenport when she was 12. She attended the UI and later graduated from San Francisco State. She was aware of her lesbianism at an early age, and the sexual conformity of Davenport drove her to join the Women's Army Corps in FIVE HUNDRED WOMEN were dishonorably discharged for being lesbians; Bond, however, escaped, having married a homosexual for convenience before she joined.

She has appeared in other one-woman plays, including "Gertie, Gertie Stein is Back, Back, Back" and "Conversations with Pat Bond."

She made her "big break" with a 10-minute appearance in The Word is Out, a 1977 film featuring 26 gay men and women. Though her appearance was short, she was described as "the film's dominant personality" by the Los Angeles Times.

"Lorena Hicock and Eleanor Roosevelt" debuted in San Francisco in 1984. Since then it has traveled the country, receiving both critical and popular acclaim.

The play will be performed at Macbride Auditorium tonight at 7:30. Admission will be $3.00. There will be a reception for Bond from 5 to 7 p.m. at the 620 Inc., 620 S. Madison

Murphy performs Saturday

By Allen Hogg

Staff Writer LTHOUGH HE'S just 25 years old, Eddie Murphy has already conque television, the movies and the music industry. Now he is back where he began - on the stage. Murphy's current "Pieces of My Mind" tour, which will bring him to Cedar Rapids' Five Seasons Center on Saturday night, puts the comedian back in front of a live audience.

Performing on an arena tour is, however, still a far cry from the origins of the Brooklyn native's professional career. It was for just $30 a week that the 15-year-old first began making 'em laugh — often with copied Richard Pryor routines - at Long Island nightclubs in 1976.

Four years of comedy club appearances paid off, though, when the 19-year-old Murphy was picked to be a "featured player" for the 1980-81 sea-son of "Saturday Night Live." By the middle of the year, his comedy talents earned him a position as a full-fledged cast member. At the end of the season, when the program had a major overhaul, he and Joe Piscopo were the only performers to be re-signed.

WITH ORIGINAL characters like Velvet Jones, Little Richard Simmons, Mr. Robinson and a grown-up Buckwheat and his impersonations of such performers as Bill Cosby and Stevie Wonder, Murphy emerged as a star. Director Walter Hill cast him opposite Nick Nolte in the hit film 48 HRS., and he later teamed with Dan Aykroyd in the smash Trading Places.

Murphy was also brought into the film Best Defense, in a last-minute attempt to save an obvious bomb. The effort failed. Beverly Hills Cop, however, redeemed him, as the leading moneymaker of the 1984 winter film season turned Murphy into one of the nation's leading film performers.

Sun.

MURPHY'S MOTION picture success allowed him to leave "Saturday Night Live" early in 1984, and he began to embark on other ventures besides films. Two albums, Eddie Murphy and Eddie Murphy: Comedian, sold extremely well for comedy records. In 1985, he managed to score with How Could It Be, an LP of straight popular music that was produced by Rick James and featured the Top Ten hit "Party All the

Murphy has come under fire from some black groups, who have accused him of portraying stereotyped characters. Gay rights activists have also protested his comedy, especially an HBO special that featured numerous jokes about homosexuals. Critics have chided him for displaying unnecessary nastiness in his routines. Murphy's popularity has with-stood these challenges, however, and his star continues to rise. Tickets for Saturday's 8 p.m. performance are $16.50 and are available at the Five Seasons Center. Opening the show will be the musical group the Weather

'Thrash grass' band to visit Gabe's

By Beth Lucht Staff Writer

LOOD ON THE SADDLE, a band that plays an unusual mixture of bluegrass and punk known as "thrash grass," will be coming to Gabe's Oasis

The band was formed by guitarist Greg Davis (who had been in the Los Angeles punk band Dead Hippie). Joining him were vocalist Annette Zilinskas (formerly of the Bangles), drummer Music

Hermann Senac and stand-up bassist Ron Botello.

Davis travelled around the nation preparing for the band. His first trip was to the French Quarter of New Orleans to learn to play bluegrass on the dobro, an instrument similar to the guitar or banjo which is commonly used in bluegrass. After New Orleans, Davis went to Nashville to soak up returned to Los Angeles to get down to BLOOD ON THE SADDLE'S selftitled first album, released on New Alliance Records, received positive attention and was in the forefront of the movement that blended punk/new wave with country music. This wave of bands also included Rank and File (which, in its previous incarnation had been a political San Francisco punk band called the Dils). The trend has continued, mellowing into fairly mainstream rockabilly-country acts like the Bodeans and Walk the West.

Poison Love, on Chameleon Records, is the group's latest release. It contains 14 original cuts and is similar to the first record in many ways.

Blood on the Saddle is somewhat true to its roots; they are much closer to the grass part of thrash grass than they are to the thrash. Zilinskas' vocals are a little too pretty to deliver any real anger or passion, but overall the band delivers an interesting, if somewhat wimpy, sound.

Waters named academic all-American

Iowa distance runner Danny Waters was selected to the second academic all-American team by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Waters, a finance major, captained the Hawkeyes 1985 cross country team. He placed first in dual meets against Augustana, Western Illinois and Minnesota last fall. Waters finished 13th at the 1985 Big Ten cross country

Waters, a June graduate, maintained a 3.9 cumulative grade point average. He posted team indoor bests of 3:46.35 in the 1,500-meters and 14:23.43 in the 5,000-meters, in addition to his outdoor bests in the 880 (1:54.13) and the mile (4:09.20).

Hawkeyes ink TV pact with SportsVision All 1986 Iowa football games and 10 other Hawkeve

events will be aired on a delayed basis by SportsVision

Iowa wrestling, gymnastics, swimming and track will be among the other SportsVision events. Also SportsVision will carry coaches shows featuring football Coach Hayden Fry and basketball Coach Tom Davis.

A's Moore fired because of 29-44 start

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) - The Oakland A's, disappointed with their 29-44 start, fired manager Jackie Moore Thursday and replaced him on an interim basis with bullpen coach Jeff Newman.

Team President Roy Eisenhardt announced the move from Oakland Thursday morning, while the A's were in Kansas City for a night game against the Royals.

Moore, 47, and Oakland General Manager Sandy Alderson held a news conference in Moore's Kansas City hotel room after the firing was announced.

"I found out about 10:30 this morning," Moore said Thursday. "Before breakfast. I lost my appetite. "But I've been in this game long enough to know that when things aren't going well, the manager is on thin

Entering Thursday night's game, the A's had lost six of their last seven games. They also had dropped 15 in a row on the road before winning at Kansas City Tuesday

Wednesday night, the A's blundered their way to an 5-4 loss to the Royals. With the bases loaded and two out in the ninth, Ricky Peters wandered off third base and was thrown out. Kansas City scored a run in the bottom of the inning and won 5-4.

Irwin charges to Canadian Open lead

OAKVILLE, Ontario (UPI) - Veteran Hale Irwin, who has missed the cut in six of his last nine tournaments and is hampered by a sore right leg, fired a 4-under-par 68 to take a 1-shot lead after Thursday's first round of the $850,000 Canadian Open.

Irwin, a two-time U.S. Open champion playing in Canada's premier event for the first time in five years, had six birdies and two bogeys on the 7,102-yard Glen Abbey Golf Course designed by Jack Nicklaus.

Dan Halldorson, of Brandon, Manitoba, had a 3-under 69 along with Andy Bean, Mike Donald, Brad Fabel, Denny Hepler and Clarence Rose. Rose had seven birdies on the back nine, including six straight.

Bob Tway, second on the current PGA Tour money list to Greg Norman with $446,119, Dave Barr, Sam Randolph and Paul Azinger are two shots off the pace at 2-under 70. Irwin, 41, of Frontenac, Mo., started from the 10th tee and got off to a quick start by rolling in birdie putts on three and 25 feet on the first two holes.

"That helped me stay under par the whole round," he said. "You start thinking 'How low can I go?"

Deft iron shots set up birdies on the 16th and 17th holes as Irwin made the turn at 4-under, but he bogeyed the first and second holes as approach shots found both rough and sand.

Witnesses won't cooperate in Bias case

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) - Three people who were with Maryland basketball star Len Bias when he died, including two of his teammates, are refusing to talk to investigators and will be subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury next week, police said Thursday

Prince George's County police spokesman Bruce Gentile said lawyers for Terrapins players Terry Long and David Gregg and former Maryland student Brian Tribble have told authorities they will not answer police questions on the death of Bias.

As a result, Gentile said, police called off efforts to question the three.

Long, Gregg and Tribble all were with Bias when he collapsed shortly after 6 a.m. on June 19 in his Washington Hall dormitory room on the school's campus.

"They are unwilling to speak to us on the advice of their attorneys," Gentile said. "They won't be available for interviews by the police department. Apparently, they are willing to be interviewed in a grand jury setting, but that's going to be if they are subpoenaed."

VIP, Finkbine praised by pros

By Dan Millea Assistant Sports Editor

The professional golfers and other celebrities on hand for the 20th Amana VIP Golf Tournament Monday were unanimous in praising both the condition of Finkbine Golf Course and the structure of the tournament itself.

Weekend rains prior to the tournament, won by Jim Dent, helped improve the course which was in possibly its best condition since the tournament began in 1967.

"People have said this course is in the best shape it's ever been in," Iowa men's basketball Coach Tom Davis said after his round. "The rains helped. It's just a fine course."

PARTICULARLY impressive to the professionals were the Finkbine greens, which drew praise from Dent, Doug Tewell, three-time VIP winner Lou Graham and Don Pooley among others.

"It's a lot better than it was three years ago," Pooley said of the course. "The greens are really in good shape. They held the ball well."

Ironically, Iowa men's golf coach Chuck Zwiener said prior to the tournament that no special care is given to the course in the days leading up to the yearly VIP.

Aiding the golfers Monday, aside from the condition of the course itself, was the prime weather. Temperatures stayed below 80 degrees most of the day and the wind was very slight, particularly in the morning when the best scores were recorded. "This is beautiful weather out here, isn't it," Fuzzy Zoeller said during his round, Monday. "Usually it's so hot when we play here it's about unbearable."

GRAHAM, WHO finished in the middle of the pack this year but had won three of the four VIPs prior to Monday's tournament, said part of the attraction of the Iowa City event lies in the fact that it doesn't involve the pressure of a major tour stop. "I like to play here," Graham said. "I have a good time when I come here and it seems like when you just go out and have a little fun you do better."

Doug Tewell also praised the course itself, as well the handling of the tournament by Amana officials.

Tewell, who finished , one shot behind Dent and also won a 1986 Buick Skyhawk by landing his tee shot closest to the pin on the par-3 13th hole, said the treatment given the pros at the Amana VIP is always, "first class all the way."

Perhaps the golfer most affected by the Finkbine course Monday was baseball great Ernie Banks, who gained fame in his days with the Chicago Cubs with his infamous saying, "Let's play two today."

Monday, as he left the 18th green, Banks said, "I feel good, feel good. Let's play 18

Ex-lowa assistant seeks Marquette job

MILWAUKEE (UPI) - Samford University Coach Mel Hankinson, a former Iowa assistant who led Samford to a 16-13 record last season, is being interviewed for the head coaching job at Marquette University, the school said Thursday.

Hankinson, 43, whose overall record in 15 seasons as a head coach is 239-172, was to be interviewed Thursday night by Athletic Director Hank Raymonds. Warrior Coach Rick Majerus recently quit to become an assistant with the Milwaukee Bucks.

Raymonds has already interviewed Moe Iba, who quit Nebraska last season after leading it to a berth in the NCAA tournament, and he will interview Warrior assistant Ric Cobb on Friday.

OTHER REPORTED prospects are Dick Versace of Bradley

Arkansas-Little Rock.

Samford is in Birmingham, Ala., and Hankinson, 43, last season in his second year at the school led his team to second place Arkansas-Little Rock in the Trans America Athletic Conference. In his first season Samford was 18-12.

Samford has also been a head coach at Delta State University, Roanoke College and Before taking the Samford job Hankinson was first assistant to former Iowa Coach George Raveling and was in charge of defense.

Raymonds, who coached the Warriors before Majerus took over from him three years ago, said he is interviewing people but cannot accept applications until July 1. He said no coach

Mudra: Fry afraid to lose to Division I-AA Panthers

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) - Iowa Coach Hayden Fry refused to schedule a football game as st the University of Northern Iowa the year because he is afraid of losing to the Division I-AA team, UNI Coach Darrell Mudra said Thursday.

Mudra said he can think of no other reason the Hawkeye coach picked Northern Illinois instead of the Panthers as an opponent for an opening on Iowa's 1986 schedule.

He also said he is upset with Fry because other big-time coaches have scheduled Fry's lesser teams as a personal favor in the past. He said he remembered a specific favor during Fry's tenure at North Texas State, 1973-78.

"OVER THE YEARS he's probably had a lot of people help him out," Mudra said in an interview.

"When I was at Florida State we scheduled a game with him. We had a 50,000 stadium and his was about 8,000. There was no way in a situation like that you could enter into home and home contract so we played the game just to help him,"

Mudra said the game was scheduled by Florida State Coach John Bridges, a

"At UNI, I think we've always tried to cooperate and help our state universities in any way we can. There's not a time when we had the opportunity that we would not help out," he said.

Mudra said an Iowa-Northern Iowa match-up might not be competitive every season, but he said Iowa lost a number of starters from last year's Rose Bowl team while the Panthers have most of their players back from a squad that made the semifinals of the NCAA Division I-AA

"I CAN'T THINK of any other reason he wouldn't want to play us. The team they got to play is just about like we are. Can you think of any other reason?" he asked.

"I think we'll be just as good this year as we were last year. I think we will be even better the next year by the time we play Minnesota," he said.

Fry has posted a 52-29-1 record at Iowa since joining the Big Ten school in 1979. He was 49-66-1 at Southern Methodist from 1962-63 and 40-23-2 at North Texas

Mudra's 24-year career record is 172-72-3. Nicknamed "Dr. Victory" for turning losing teams into winners, he has coached at North Dakota State, Arizona, Western Illinois, Florida State and Eastern Illi-

No. 2 seed Chris Evert makes contact with the ball on her backhand side in defeating Pam Thursday. Evert won, 6-0, 5-7, 6-1.

Wilander, Evert hang on to victories at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) - Mats Wilander narrowly averted falling victim to one of the great upsets in Wimbledon history Thursday, and even Chris Evert Lloyd almost got caught napping.

Wilander, the second seed, was expected to enjoy a pleasant workout in 80 degree sunshine against Andrew Castle, a 22-year-old Briton playing in only his third Grand Prix event. Castle carries a world ranking of 285, and that represents a vast improvement from last week's No.

Instead, Wilander had to struggle for a 4-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-7 (0-7), 6-4, 6-0 second round victory. Castle, who never had to play five sets before, tired visibly toward the end and suffered leg cramps in the final set, allowing Wilander to take 11 of the final

EVERT LLOYD, after sweeping the first eight gan s and 10 of the first 11, admitted losi interest in her match, but woke up in ti to claim a 6-0, 5-7, 6-1 second-round victory over Pam Casale.

"After I lost a couple of games I was struggling and trying to get excited again," said Evert Lloyd, the second seed. "I wanted to get excited about being out there, and for a couple of games I wasn't."

In a championship which has been rocked by upsets, No. 9 Zina Garrison was the only seed to be eliminated Thursday, although fifth seed Stefan Edberg also had to sweat out a five-setter.

Garrison, a semifinalist at Wimbledon last year, fell to Briton Anne Hobbs, 6-4, 0-6, 6-4. Hobbs called it her best victory since beating Carling Bassett at Wimbledon two years ago.

EDBERG FOUGHT off New Yorker Paul Annacone, 6-4, 6-7 (3-7), 4-6, 7-5, 6-0, with ration for about five minutes, and that was it. I wasn't putting any pressure on him at the end and he was hitting win-

Fourth seed Boris Becker was leading Tom Gullikson, 6-4, 6-3, 2-2, when their second round match was suspended due

With the second round yet to be completed, seven of the men's seeds and six of the women are gone.

Castle, who lists as his idols John McEnroe. Bjorn Borg and Roberto Saad (a teammate at Wichita State), saved triple break point in the third game of the fourth set, but by this time he was losing some of his steam and Wilander took advantage of his next opportunity with a break in the fifth game.

Wilander never allowed Castle another chance, taking the final seven games.

"HE SURPRISED me with a lot of shots I didn't expect, and I was struggling," said Wilander, who played below his usual level and was particularly troubled by his errant passing shots.

Also reaching the third round, but with a little less difficulty, were seventh seed Henri Leconte, No. 12 Brad Gilbert and No. 13 Pernfors. Leconte beat Colin Dowdeswell, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4, Gilbert defeated Mike Leach, 7-6 (7-2), 7-6 (7-2), 6-2, and Pernfors topped Andreas Maurer, 7-5, 6-2, Third seed Hana Mandlikova defeated Catherine Tanvier, 7-5, 6-2, and other women advancing to the third round on the strength of straight sets victories were No. 7 Helena Sukova, No. 11 Carling Bassett and No. 16 Kathy Jordan.

Benefit game for farmers finalized

By Brad Zimanek Assistant Sports Editor

A "Hawkeye Hoops for Farm Aid" benefit game will be played August 2 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena to provide scholarships for the children of Iowa farmers.

Bobby Hansen, former Hawkeye and now member of the Utah Jazz in the NBA. believes the 14 former Iowa players, who have committed to play in the game, are trying to give something back to the state.

"They feel that maybe they owe it as a debt to the people of Iowa," Hansen said. "We wish to give this money back to the farmers of the state who may have lost some money along the way and now their children are ready to go to college and are unable to attend because of funds.

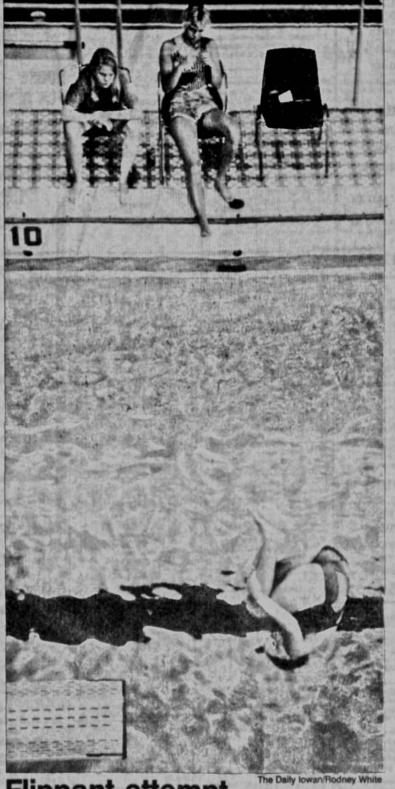

"We don't feel this should be that way. I know had it not been for a scholarship I would never have been able to attend the University of FORMER IOWA PLAYERS who will play in the contest include Hansen, Los Angeles Laker guard Ronnie Lester, Steve Waite, Kenny Arnold, Steve Krafcisin, Craig Anderson and Mark Gannon.

Milwaukee Bucks Coach and former Iowa great Don Nelson may also be available for the contest. Nelson a few months ago donated his earnings from the NBA Playoffs to farm families in Wis-

Also the first offcial showing of new Iowa basketball Coach Tom Davis' squad could take place if approval is received from the NCAA. The Hawkeyes will be training for their August trip to China and they may have an official scrimmage before the benefit contest.

Hansen believes the game will raise between $50,000 and $75,000 for a scholarship fund which will be set up permanently at Iowa. Tickets for the contest can be purchased at Carver-Hakweye Arena for $5 and and at the Five Seasons Center in Cedar Rapids for

World Cup hero ready for final

MEXICO CITY (UPI) - Argen tine fans, enthralled by their beloved Diego Maradona, apparently have forgotten West Germany must first be disposed of before they begin celebrating victory in the World Cup.

The headline in Thursday's issue of La Razon in Buenos Aires said, "Maradona has won the World Cup already."

THE FANS, starved of national sporting success, apparently agreed because police made 40 arrests Wednesday night following an evening of wild celebration in the Argentine capital after their team defeated Belgium

2-0 in the semifinals.

Argentina meets West Germany in Sunday's final at the 115,000-seat Azteca Stadium. West Germany will appear in its fifth championship game following its 2-0 upset of favored France

Argentine fans, who were calling for the resignation of Coach Carlos Bilardo before the World Cup, have been so taken by Maradona fever that they have apparently forgotten that the Germans are at their most dangerous when they are written off.

UNTIL THEIR semifinal upset of France, you could not have gotten a peso for Germany's chances. The team was considered dull, unimaginative and lacking in stars, while the German media was warring with Coach Franz Becken-

So what happened? Germany scored a lucky ninth-minute goal through Andreas Brehme and then shut down the vaunted French midfield. Substitute Rudi Voeller's last-minute goal was icing on the

World Cup

When soccer aficionados meet, they talk fondly of Brazil and Italy and more recently, France. The Germans are bracketed with England as the dullards of the game, the method teams who win with organization, defense and superb fitness.

But West Germany is the first country to advance to the championship five times. Not even Brazil or Italy, which have three championships each, can make that claim.

The Germans are 2-2 in championship appearances. They won in Switzerland in 1954 and at home in 1974, and were beaten in England in 1966 and four years ago in Spain.

BOTH OF their victories were achieved as underdogs. The Hungarians were considered so superior that some unkind writers suggested the Germans not show up for the game. Holland was ranked the class of the 1974 tournament and it was hard to get a bet on Germany. So what happened Germany defeated Hungary 3-2 in Bern and overcame a penalty goal after only 20 seconds in Munich to defeat Holland 2-1.

In England, the Germans forced the match into extra time with a last-minute goal, then lost 4-2 to the English after they scored a disputed third goal.

Only in Spain were the Germans outplayed, losing 3-1 to Wolfgang Rolff and Felix Magath played superbly in shutting down the French midfield, which was led by the great Michel Platini, who before the tournament opened was considered the world's best midfielder.

Platini has been overshadowed by Maradona, who scored all four Argentine goals in victories over England and Belgium.

Maradona is clearly the star of the tournament, but can he again lift Argentina against a team that probably will include six superb defenders? Beckenbauer says Argentina is the favorite. "They are first rate and Maradona is in superb form," he

But Beckenbauer, who captained the 1974 West German team, is a superb tactician as the French found out. He is almost certain to devise a 'stop Maradona" plan.

The Germans may be without skipper Karl-heinz Rummenigge, Voeller and Pierre Littbarski, all of whom are nursing injuries, on Sunday but there is a quiet confidence in the camp.

Maradona obviously knows the task he faces.

West Germany is not the team I would have wished to face in the finals," he said Thursday. "It is always said that they are deteriorating, but then they always wind up in the championship."

Defender Jose Cuciuffo said, "we have to be very careful with the Germans. They have shown they are a quality team. It will be a difficult, physical game for both squads.

Canadian Cup to prepare wrestlers

By Laura Palmer Staff Writer

Training and competing does not end for Iowa wrestlers when the regular season is

Many wrestlers have the opportunity to compete nationally and internationally over the summer.

Saturday, current and former Iowa wrestlers will travel to Canada to compete in the Canadian Cup, Sunday -Tuesday. American teams, as well as foreign teams, will participate in the 10-team tournament.

"This tournament will be the first time some of these guys have wrestled internationWrestling ally," former Hawkeye Barry Davis said. "It'll be good experience for everyone who goes up there."

THE IOWA LINE-UP will include Steve Martin (114.5 pounds), Davis (125.5), Greg Randall (136.5), Randy Lewis (149.5), Jimmy Zalesky (163), Rico Chiapparelli (180), Duane Goldman and Dave Martin (198), Brooks Simpson (220) and Mark Sindlinger (hwt). "This is just another tournament to help (for the World Trials). There will be tough competition. I hope to win it,"

"Winning really counts in the world championships, plus it (this tournament) will get me back into it after nationals. This will be my first tournament since then," he added. Davis agreed that the tournament will help prepare him for the World trials. His last competition was in April when he competed in the national tournament in Las Vegas.

"I'M READY for this tourament. I've had time to peak then I'll have enough time to peak for the world trials," Davis said. "You don't reach as high of a peaking level for this competition since it's not as important."

Five Hawkeyes will compete in the Sports Festival later on this summer; Martin, John Heffernan, Erik Duus, Simpson and Andy Haman.

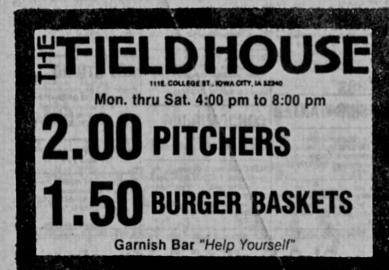

Heffernan and Haman will also wrestle in the World Cup Championships in the 19-20-year-old division in British Columbia in mid-July.

The end of August the World Championship Trials will be held in Bloomington, Ind., to determine the members of the World team Four former Hawkeyes will be vying for spots in the line-up: Davis, Lewis, Zaleksy and Goldman.

'My God, Jim!It's only a TV show!'

By Teresa Heger Arts/entertainment Editor

The doors to the IMU Ballroom closed. They were locked.

Outside, in the lobby and halfway down the stairs people were still shouting. Those locked out began pounding at the double doors with their fists, screaming with more than a little hysteria, "Let us in! Let us in!" The people from in the rear began crush to the front.

It wasn't a Who concert or a presidental address. Bruce Springsteen wasn't making a surprise appearance in Iowa City. It was a lecture given several years ago by Gene Roddenberry, creator of "Star Trek," and people — some who had come as far away as from Des Moines, Kansas City or Chicago — were willing to mob their way into the already packed hall to hear him

Since the Trekkies showed no signs of leaving or even easing up on the doors, IMU officials — probably breaking several dozen fire ordinances - let the rioters in. -Perhaps they felt paying a fine would be better than mopping up blood.

IT ALL GOES to show that "Star Trek" fans don't like "Star Trek." They love "Star

They'll die for "Star Trek." Not only do they memorize the scripts of their favorite episodes, learn all trivia related to the shooting, acting, and writing of special scenes, join numerous "Trek" fan clubs and compose sonnets to their favorite characters, they are also willing to sit up until 3 a.m. to catch an episode they've already seen seven times.

This weekend local Trekkies will have a chance to prove their loyalty* to the Federation at the second annual Trek Fest in Riverside, Iowa.

Chris Kirkwood, one of the organizers of the event, said Trekkies from all over the midwest will flock to Riverside, selfproclaimed "future birthplace of Captian Kirk," for the festivities "It takes people back," said Kirkwood, "when you come up to a traffic barricade and there is a person with pointed ears and purple hair directing traffic."

ONE OF THE highlights of the Trek Fest will be the dedication of the U.S.S. Riverside Float, which will be in a parade

Saturday at 10 a.m. "(It) is a replica of the U.S.S. Enterprise." said Kirkwood. "A lot of enthusiasm, a lot of money went into it - we hope it is a big success." With this float Riverside will become an official member of the Star Fleet - a band of hardcore "Star Trek" clubs.

Riverside, in addition to "Trek" events - also be holding a pork barbeque, a beer tent, bingo, a square dance and street dance throughout the day Saturday.

Specific "Trek" events include continuous showings of "Star Trek" videos, a swap meet, and an opportunity to meet other "Trek" fanatics, as well as various "enemy" Romulans and Klingons.

"It is a nice little time when a lot of these people (fans) can dress up and play "Star Trek," Kirkwood claimed, though she emphasized that Trek devotees need not wear costumes to be welcomed.

"STAR TREK" only ran from 1966 to 1969. Seventy-nine episodes were pro-

From the Editor's Desk

We've lost our minds. I think it's the heat. Maybe not. Maybe we just got too serious last week. And we're doing an issue about television. Hey, don't start giggling, we're completely, well, sort of, serious about this. Television is a time-honored tradition in our nation's social history. It brings the family together. It's a babysitter. It's our

It also turns our brains to mush, but let's not get into that. Our point is that there is enough interesting material here to occupy our weird minds over here for a week.

Let's be honest: there's enough material here to fill t.v. guides from now to doomsday, but we've been selective in our choices.

We've tried to take a lighter perspective on television. Some of us have taken to sharp analysis of subjects on television today, while others of us have decided that to analyze t.v. is to ignore a deeper issue: television is a real hoot.

Lighten up, eh. And enjoy.

'Cosby Show' reveals universal crises, victories

By Korrine Skinner

On Thursday nights, 40 million Americans crowd in front of their televisions to see a the Huxtables are facing this

NBC, once the struggling No. 3 network, struck gold with "The Cosby Show." Not only did the show help drive the peacock people to their current position at the top of the network ratings, but it also single-handedly revived the dying sit-com genre.

Still, there are critics.

Critics who say "Cosby" is too far away from the everyday lifestyles of black from the everyday lifestyles of black Americans, too upper-middle-class. Critics who say the show retreats before the hard issues of racism in the 1980s.

Certainly, not every black family in American lives like the Huxtables. In fact, statistics show that well over half of the black children born today are born to single mothers. And, according to an April 1985 joint report from the Congressional Research Service and the Congressional Budget Office, the average black child can expect to spend more than five years of his life in poverty, compared to 10 months for the average white child.

SO "THE COSBY SHOW" may portray an experience opposite that of most black Americans, but surely that experience is not unknown to blacks. How many white families live like the Carrington's?

Television is an escapist medium. Programs do not have to be demographically correct to have entertainment or educational value.

"Cosby" presents a family, which happens to be black, dealing with the universal problems and triumphs of life.

"My point is," Bill Cosby said in a rare interview for The Saturday Evening Post, "that they are black and you can see it. We don't have to tell anybody. What we are telling everyone is that we are human beings, and we have all the same wants and needs that everyone else has. Look, we are all dealing with the same problems."

"Cosby" is not like other sit-coms that stereotypically portray blacks as jivetalking dudes fighting to make it in a white world. The Huxtables have made it, and they offer the American Dream to everyone, not just blacks. The show transcends race and deals with people and human

SOME CRITICS are frustrated because the show does not take a hard stand on racism. On the other hand, it doesn't ignore black issues either. One of the season's most stirring episodes ended with the family all gathered around the television silently watching the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech being broadcast to commemorate the fallen civil rights leader's birthday.

Cosby also threatened that there would be no show if NBC did not allow or tried to edit out the "Abolish Apartheid" sticker on the back of Theo's bedroom door.

But racism is a part of America, and the subtle forms it has recently taken are probably more damaging than the obvious discrimination of the past.

The Huxtables never deal with discrimination, but the race situation is not funny. Maybe the best weapon against racism is the subtle shift in perception that comes through everyday contact with a culture more similar than different.

"Cosby" leads by example in giving us black culture inherent in every episode—so softly, in fact, it is barely noticeable. The works of black artists hang on the Huxtable house walls, the material of black entertainers is highlighted, and the excellence of black educational institutions is noted, but all without a deep breath.

"THE COSBY SHOW" is free to ignore racism because the family's blackness is incidental to the show's message. The Huxtables teach their children the traditional, conservative value of hard work, responsibility, education, culture and family.

And the Huxtables teach us, quietly, that black families are a normal part of the human universe. And once audiences pick up and internalize this valuable message, the war is won.

"The Cosby Show" is atypical in an industry where originality fades fast. Bill Cosby has won our hearts, and it can expected that he will our heads with increasingly important ethical considerations in the property of the state of the tions in future episodes.

Cosby doesn't sledgehammer antiracism messages into closed ears, he gently whispers to unsuspecting smiles.

And maybe someday he won't even have to mention it.

Public access gets it on the air

By Susan Stoga Staff Writer

These days local lowa City cable programming has a lot more to offer than just the typical school board or city council meetings.

In fact, lowa Citians can turn on public access channel 26 and tune into everything from rock videos to gardening shows to nude dancing.

Mind you, this isn't HBO, Cinemax or MTV. It isn't even ABC, NBC or the Superstation. It's just shows written, produced and edited by area residents who have something to say to the rest of society.

Anyone who wants to appear on the station can do so and the best part about it is that it's free. And the station will train, provide assistance and help you say or film anything that pops into your creative mind.

Yes, in Iowa City, anyone can get on camera and say anything to anyone who is listening. Only in Iowa City could this be

"PUBLIC ACCESS TV provides a forum for people who are mad as hell and aren't going to take it anymore (to have) access to the media," said Paul LeValley, director of community programming for Heritage

Cablevision, sponsors of the channel.

The station does not employ censors of-any sort. Rather, the company places the brunt of the responsibility for nudity, violence or obscenity with the producers of the show

"We do not edit the material for anything," LeValley said. "We trust and hold the producer liable for anything that may appear."

The only form of censorship the station partakes in is attaching a disclaimer to shows that may not be suitable for all ages.

shows that may not be suitable for all ages.

According to LeValley, the lack of censorship makes for some very interesting

IN THE SIX YEARS since the station began offering residents access to the station, shows such as "It's Our War Too," a documentary on women's involvement in World War II; "Dancers," a weekly show which features the work of local choreographers performed by local dancers and "Crank Productions," a program for bicyclists. As equally popular as the above program is the open forum "Speaker's Corner" which allows individuany topic for five minutes.

LeValley said another current trend is the production of music videos similiar to those shown on MTV.

als to drop in to the studio and speak on

"We get all types of programs — whatever a person's personal agenda is," LeValley said.

In order to produce a show, interested individuals must attend a series of how-to workshops designed to teach the correct usage of the equipment.

The workshops are anywhere from one to three hours long and encompass everything from Heritage rules to filming to editing and studio taping.

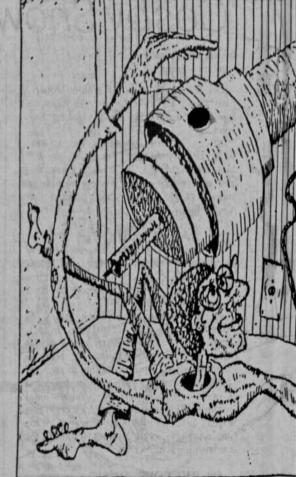

ALL WORKSHOPS start at the beginning of each month and are held at the Heritage studio which is shared and housed at the lowa City Public Library. Although there is no charge for the use of any equipment or facilities owned by the station, there is a $10 refundable fee to ensure that registered individuals show up on their assigned day.

LeValley stressed that even though the Heritage staff is "more than willing" to teach residents to use the equipment, they do not "do all the work for them."

Also available for local resident's viewing are four other public access stations 20, 27, 28 and 29. Channel 20 is programmed by the lowa City Public Library and provides a variety of shows including children's story hour, cartooning and old films from the 30's and 40's.

Channel 27, the government station, provides viewers with coverage of city council meetings, reports on various city departments and other local legislative Educational station 27 shows programs from Kirkwood Community College and presents educational issues including weekly school board meetings.

Cable surfing — the late night cruise through the

By John Bliss Special to The Daily Iowan

It's summertime in lowa City. You're broke (as usual), bored (as usual), and looking for some excitement. The movies are filled with sex and pecs, the bars with the same and you just can't face that mall crowd one more night.

Don't despair.

Summer brings with it that most American of all sports: surfing. And even if the waves aren't breaking at the Coralville Reservoir, you can always hang ten off your very own couch, compliments of your local cable company. Yessiree bob, I'm talking about cable cruising, video surfing, the sport of America's youth.

Video surfing can, of course, be done at any time. In fact, that's one of its primary attractions. But the best waves break after midnight, making hard core cruising a late-night sport. This gives you time to blow off your homework, go to your favorite night spot, get rejected, and come home with a six of Bud. Pop the top, warm up the tube and let's party!

YOU START YOUR cruise through the lower numbers. Nothing much down here. MTV (Channel 1) is always a sure bet for some easy swells, but it's the same stuff you've seen a dozen times over and there's nothing really to laugh at but the VJs. (Isn't that a sexually transmitted disease?)

CNN Headline News (3) repeats every half hour, so if there's a good news story breaking they're worth a peek. I watched for several hours the night they were showing the Vic Morrow footage from the Twilight Zone. But there's nothing like that tonight. A few late night movies, the last half of Letterman, but the only really interesting thing down here is Channel 6 — the Weather Channel.

I admit it, I've watched this staion far too much over the last few years, but it never fails to amaze and entertain me. During the daytime it's just hokey, but in the wee hours, it takes on a level of absurdity which is nearly mystic. Men with Ken-doll hair and red polyester pants chat and joke about the weather for hours on end, as if this were a normal occupation. My my my. You haven't seen it for a while? Go to it.

TIME TO CRUISE upwards, into the double digits.
Channels 10 to 20 offer a few more diversions. There's Summer brings with it that most American of all sports: surfing. always a chance of something stupid or naked on "Skinemax" (13); WGN (10) and WTBS (15) tend toward the old movie range, but the commercials are great fun and the programming is occasionally truly inspired — like the special I caught recently on logrolling; Bravo (18) is a bit more highbrow and often incomprehensible, and offers the worst reception in town; and CNN (19) gives you one more crack at the news and big talk by men in dark suits. But for my entertainment dollar the real news in mid-range video is the SIN station, also known as the Spanish International Network. I hear you scoff, but I will defend SIN to the death.

Video surfing is an art devoted to style, not content. And that's where my love affair with SIN begins. Try this experiment. Turn on the TV, turn off the sound, cruise randomly throughout the channels until you find somehting you want to watch. Now turn up the sound. It's in Spanish! Look down and you're at channel 17 — SIN. I have a friend who's studying Spanish specifically to be able to understand SIN. This, I believe, is a mistake. The romance of SIN is in its utter inpenetrability. None of the programming looks very good, but it's all fascinating to watch. It's wonderful. And where else can you see a kung fu movie dubbed into Spanish? I rest my case.

NOW WE'RE READY to hit the big waves — the channels beyond 20. This is television at its finest. None of these stations ask you to spend your time watching. This is programming geared to help you waste time. (The major exception to this is Arts and Entertainment (35). A lot of A and E shows are great but they require some amount of concentration and commitment, which is what makes them unsuitable for surfing.)

Let's take a random sampling of what's up here.

First, there are the "word stations" (20,26,29). They offer messages. Some with music, some in pretty colors. During the day they offer local programming — Channel 29, for example, is the green channel. (Watch it and you'll see why.) But by this time of night their major function is to amuse those who want to read T.V.

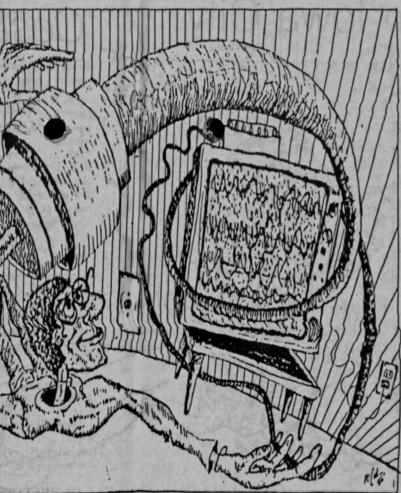

ALSO UP HERE are such delights as ESPN (32), Lifetime (30), and the Nashville Network (25), all of which have surprises in store. ESPN's been lost in the World Cup Soccer lately, which is fine for those who like that sort of thing. I prefer my sports a bit more exotic, such as Roller Derby or Australian Football, both of which ESPN offers regularly.

Nashville's programming is, need I say, bizarre. There are a lot of country music shows, which are just fine, but I'm more interested in those programs which are similar to shows on other channels. "Nashville Now", for instance, is a talk show hosted by a folksy gray haired guy in a salmon suit, on which I recently saw George Lindsay (Goober of the "Andy Griffith Show") seriously discuss acting. Hmmmm.

Lifetime, know as the home of Dr. Ruth, turns into the money channel after twelve. One of their offerings is "Everybody's Money Matters, on which your hosts Tony Hoffman, who looks like a syndicate chief, and Bob Braun, a big guy with a big smile and bad suit, tell you how to make money in dubious ways, such as investing in wishing wells. In a recent show about property, their guest was a man with the nickname of "Mr. Foreclosure." Need I say more?

BUT THE TRUE joys of the high waves are CBN (21), USA (23), and my personal fave, Nickelodeon (34). USA comes up with such oddities as "Room 222", "That Girl" and of course Pro Wrestling. In addition, they have some of the finest commercials around, for which we have dubbed them "The Magazine Channel". (You can subscribe to anything by calling 1-800-USA-1000. Really.)

CBN, though they've taken to showing bad movies (which can be a joy in themselves) offers "Dobie Gillis" and the true trash of "Father Knows Best." This show was a breeding ground for American terrorism. I'm sure of it. Ask Patty Hearst. Robert Young's smile begs to be bashed in. CBN, of course, stands for the Christian Broadcasting Network, so

> AND THEN THERE'S Nickelodeon. It warms my heart just to think about it. Nickelodeon is good all day long but in the evening it turns into Nick At Night, a whole style of programming with a sense of humor about itself. In addition to the ever present movies (there is no original programming on Nickelodoen), they have dug into the vaults and come up with some great old series:

> "Route 66" — what is this show about? Two guys buzz down the highway, drop in on total strangers and ruin their lives. Thanks. For this we are supposed to find them

> • "The Donna Reed Show" - who did her hair? This is the early sixties, folks, pre-revolution, when the biggest problem facing the American family was Mom's pickles.

> • "I Spy." A great show in its time and today even greater. Robert Culp and Bill Cosby jet around the world, ting bad guys and playing tennis, accompanied by one of the best theme songs and opening credit sequences in the

 And lest we forget — "Mr. Ed." Everyone knows this show, but how many of you have actually seen it? Now's your chance. Ed's my kind of animal. And Alan Young is merely brilliant as Wilbur, Ed's "owner". (Nobody really owns Ed, he's his own horse.) Say what you will, but I challenge any of today's major stars to play scenes week after week with a talking horse and make it believable. Alan Young can pull it off because somewhere in his heart of hearts, he truly believes in Mr Ed.

My goodness, is it that late already? We haven't even touched on the Russian aerobics or the Ul's own station (28) or the political dance of C-SPAN. But it's time to coast in home - past the word channels, past another costume drama on SIN, past Kurt Thomas fighting Gymkata-style on Cinemax, through the local network outlets, into the safe waters of CNN or MTV. It's been a long night, but the true joy of video surfing is knowing that those same waves will be waiting for you again tomorrow night, just as high and just as

No matter how you look at it influence of children's TV grows

By Hoyt Olsen

Fourteen ways of looking at children's TV shows:

1. There are dozens of male Smurfs and one female. No wonder they've shriveled up and turned blue. Use it or smurf it, I always

Women and minorities are consistently under-represented on

2. Last fall, one of my rhetoric students gave a speech concerning the effect of television violence on children. It was stiff and mechanical, laden with quotations and statistical data which dryly but overwhelmingly demonstrated that there is considerable

When she was done, another student asked her if she really believed her own speech. "No, I really don't," said the speaker. "I watched TV all the time and it's never affected me."

3. It is easier to repair a TV set than a rhetoric student who grew

4. The average children's cartoon contains three times the number of violent acts as prime-time drama. A 1982 study by the National Institute of Mental Health demonstrated that watching TV violence leads to aggressive behavior by children and teens.

THE EFFECT is cumulative, and a typical child of the TV age sees 18,000 acts of violence between ages three and 17. 5. Given the opportunity, my four children will watch anything from "The Smurfs" to "Solid Gold," "60 Minutes," beer commercials and professional bowling broadcasts on Spanish language channels. When the TV is off, they read books, socialize with friends, and leave their dirty socks lying in the living room where they took them off while the TV was on.

6. In 1986, the three major networks offer almost no prime time programming that is designed for children. Sunday night's Disney Movie is an exception; The Cosby Show is one of those now rare shows suitable for all ages.

In 1962, cartoons like "The Flintstones" and "The Jetsons" were weekly prime time fare; other prime time television suitable for elementary age youngsters included "Lassie," "Wonderful World of Disney," "Dennis the Menace," "Mister Ed" the talking horse,

"Leave It to Beaver," "My Three Sons," "The Beverly Hillbillies," "Lucille Ball". . . There were also a number of family-oriented variety shows like Ed Sullivan's.

7. "By the power of Grayskull, I have the power." Some guy, He-Man. Huge biceps. Huge sword. Huge portfolio.

MATTEL, THE company that originated "He-Man and the Masters of the Universe," has sold — or sold the rights to sell — more than $1 billion worth of He-Man action figures, Castle Grayskulls, He-Man toothbrushes, Battle Cats, He-Man sheets, He-Man underwear.

More and more children's programming is designed not just for ratings, but to sell specific products. Would you be thrilled if tonight's featured programming was "The Chevette Zone" or

"Miami Condo"? That's roughly what children are watching. 8. If my two-year-old will only become potty trained, he can have the He-Man underwear. Man should not guibble with the

9. In 1980, the California Department of Education administered an achievement test to 500,000 sixth graders and high school seniors. Test results showed that regardless of other factors (intelligence, economic status, ethnic background) the more each student had watched television, the lower the achievement scores

10. A 1984 survey by the A.C. Nielsen Company (the people behind the Nielsen ratings) concluded that children between the ages of two and 11 watch an average of 27 hours and 21 minutes

11. The Reagan administration has made every effort to deregulate the television industry; many of the federal guidelines being erased concern the quality and content of children's

12. When I was young, cartoons featured cats that chased birds and mice, and dogs that chased cats. Today's cartoons feature robots that smash other robots, Hulk Hogan, Mr. T., and those painfully repressed Smurfs.

Someone should bring the cats back and let them chase Smurfs.

13. Children's television is getting older. When is it going to grow up and act its age? 14. Until it does, why don't adults turn it off?

Trekkies

duced. The series was popular at the time, and - when during its second year of running, NBC almost cancelled the show - the network received over a million letters from angry fans asking them to

But if "Star Trek" was popular at the time, it is phenomenal now. Hundreds of clubs and "fanzines" exist; hundreds of conventions are held year-round. The first space shuttle was called the Enterprise, the T.V. model hangs in state at the Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. Three successful full-length movies have followed the series, as well as 80 to 90 professional novels and publications. Phrases like "Beam me up, Scotty," and "Live long and prosper," are embedded in the American consciousness. And who couldn't help but love those tacky props the flashing lights in the deck's computer, the swishing doors, the styrofoam purple rocks used on various alien planets.

Of course, everyone has a favorite episode. Is it the "Journey to Babel" in which Spock's parents (a Vulcan married to an Earth woman) come on board? "All of Yesterday's" in which Spock falls in love in (not with) an artic deep freeze? How about "Spock's Brain," when our pointy-eared hero loses that integral part of his anatomy? Or how about the one where Spock's glands act up — "Amok Time"?

Which brings us up to another interesting - or shall we say, fascinating aspect of "Star Trek."

MR. SPOCK. The poker-faced Vulcan made the series work. When first envisioned, "Star Trek" was to center around Captain Kirk. He was the hero leading the great starship Enterprise; he would make those tough decisions all heros make; he was the Man who would boldly go where no man had gone before . . .

Talk about great casting - William Shatner, of all actors, was the Man for the

Mr. Spock and Dr. (Bones) McCoy were merely planned as subordinates to Kirk. They were officers who would lend dramatic conflict to the episodes. McCoy constantly reacts with emotion ("My God. lim!") while Spock reacts with reason ("Highly illogical, Captain"). Since Kirk turns to both of his top officers in a time of need, he receives a balance of opinions. He can merge both logic and emotion to come up with a plausible solution to whatever problem faces the Enterprise be it tribbles, Klingons or inidentifiable alien ships.

Kirk, unfortunately, has the personality of cardboard. He's pompous. Slightly

BUT IF THERE are Trekkies, there are also subgroups - Spockies. Mr. Spock intriques through his lack of emotion. He's half human; he's got to break sometime. Half the fun comes from waiting for that crack in the armor.

Indeed, Mr. Spock is such a logically appealing creature that Leonard Nimoy, still associated with the role, wrote a book entitled I Am Not Spock.

Sounds like Mr. Nimov is frustrated with his typecasting. Isn't frustration a human

If Spock is a favorite, than anyone who interferes with him — or with fantasies related to him - become a prime target for other, unpleasant human emotions. Hate mail would arrive for Nurse Chapel by the bagful, since she was seen as a threat to . . . well, Spock's availability.

But whether you love Spock or Captain Kirk, Uhura or Yoeman Rand, once you're a Trekkie, you're a Trekkie forever. Since the next movie won't be out for quite a while and the episodes can only be seen on weeknights, spend your otherwise bleak and "Star Trek-less" Saturday in Riverside along all the other fans.

Lippman (and Schrub) to perform in Iowa City

By Beth Lucht

Folk singer Dave Lippman, who has been compared to everyone from Woody Allen to the Clash, will perform in a benefit for the Central American Solidarity Committee on Sunday night. The benefit will be held at 10 S. Gilbert and will start at 7:30 p.m.

All of Lippman's performances are benefits. "We like to keep it nice and non-profit," he explained in a recent interview. He says that he has been "on tour since 1981" and averages 60 to 80 concerts per year.

He has traveled extensively, including two month-long stints in Mexico and Nicaragua.

In Nicaragua he traveled with a theater troupe and went from coffee camp to coffee camp, performing for Nicaraguan peasants. For the most part, he received a positive response. "They usually got the point of the music," Lippman said. "I raised some questions that they didn't understand, since I am writing from a different perspective. But they are closer to politics than most Americans. For them, it is considered something for everybody to be concerned with."

THEMES IN LIPPMAN'S songwriting are primarily political. He lists his major topics as "short-term greed, destruction of the planet, destruction of other people's governments, destruction of values" and, on the positive side, unity. He sites identifying the myths of American culture as a major goal.

"We have definite myths about what capitalism is, what democracy is, what communism is," Lippman explained, adding that he would like listeners to realize that those myths are not necessarily the truth.

Though his intentions are dead serious, Lippman's approach has changed since he started performing in 1981. At first, he devoted his performance to "making people get mad and walk out." Gradually, he began to incorporate more comedy into his act, switching to full-time comedy approximately two years ago.

NOW HIS PERFORMANCES are in two parts. First is

Dave Lippman, with George Schrub of the Committee to Intervene Anywhere

Lippman's alter ego, George Schrub, from the Committee to Intervene Anywhere. George's slogan is "The Free World includes every country we can buy," and he carries both a guitar and a pistol.

After Schrub, Lippman himself emerges and performs his humorous but biting songs. His live performance has garnered praise like, "... On the caustic cutting edge of political comment ... daring and exciting ..., a rare combination of musical talent and political insight," from the Rapid City (S.D.) Journal.

Lippman has released three cassettes and a single, all on Urgent Records. Schrub has released a tape of his own material on C.I.A. tapes, which Lippman explains is a "subsidiary of Urgent Records." His first album, entitled Shooting from the Lipp is tentatively scheduled for an August release date.
