ILLINOIS MAN CHARGED IN ASSAULT CASE

By Mark McDonald

Staff Writer

A man was arrested by Iowa City police Sunday in connection with a series of violent incidents related to the death of one of his former roommates. The investigation into the case is ongoing, and police have determined that the charges stem from a domestic dispute that occurred several months ago.

The man, identified as Tom Smith, was arrested early Sunday morning after a search warrant was executed at his home in the 1000 block of Eallet Avenue. Smith was charged with first-degree murder, which is punishable by life in prison without the possibility of parole.

The Iowa City Police Department received a call late Saturday night reporting a disturbance involving Smith and his former roommate, who had been living together. Officers arrived at the scene and found two people injured, including Smith, who was later found to have stab wounds.

A report from the Iowa City Police Department indicated that Smith had stabbed his former roommate in the chest with a large knife during a heated argument. The victim was transported to a local hospital and later died from his injuries.

Police said that Smith fled the scene after the assault and was eventually located by officers on a nearby street. He was arrested without incident and transported to the Johnson County Jail, where he is being held without bond.

The Iowa City Police Department is continuing its investigation into the case and has urged anyone with information to contact them immediately. Police said that the suspect had been observed in the area around the time of the incident and that anyone who may have seen him should contact the department.

The Iowa City Police Department has also released a statement expressing its condolences to the family of the deceased victim and thanking the community for its support during this difficult time.

The investigation into this case is ongoing, and police will continue to gather evidence and interview witnesses to determine what led up to the incident.

POLICE

Department, the first assault happened at 2 a.m. The second occurred at 3:30 a.m., when the victim was sleeping in his bed. The suspect, who was known to the victim, entered the bedroom and attacked him with a knife.

The suspect fled the scene after the second attack and was later arrested by the Iowa City Police Department. He is being held at the Johnson County Jail on charges of first-degree murder.

The Iowa City Police Department has also charged the suspect with a series of violent incidents that occurred in the days leading up to the assault. The suspect is accused of making threats against the victim and of engaging in other violent behavior.

The investigation into this case is ongoing, and police will continue to gather evidence and interview witnesses to determine what led up to the incident.

The Iowa City Police Department has also released a statement expressing its condolences to the family of the deceased victim and thanking the community for its support during this difficult time.

Job figures rate best in nation
By Robert A. Wright

The unemployment rate in Johnson County has hit an all-time low, leading the county with the lowest number of unemployed in the state for the third consecutive month.

The county’s unemployment rate for May was set at 3.5 percent, according to a report released by the Iowa Workforce Development.

However, the job outlook for the latter half of the year looks promising as well, according to Management Resources, a company based in Cleveland. Mill has a local office at 300 N. Iowa.

The firm polled nearly 2,600 executives responsible for hiring in the state to get an idea of employment trends.

Management Resources’ report shows that more than 90 percent of respondents expect the Midwest to expand in the next year, while 83 percent expect their companies to expand.

The report also found that 78 percent of respondents expect their companies to expand in the Midwest.

The report concluded that the outlook is positive for the remainder of the year, with 78 percent of respondents expecting their companies to expand.

The United States image of itself as “Champion of Democracy” suffered a severe blow Friday when the International Court of Justice handed down a ruling against the Reagan administration’s policy toward Nicaragua as a violation of international law.

After 20 months of litigation, the World Court ruled against the United States on 10 separate grievances. American aid, such as “training, arming, equipping, financing and supplying the Contra forces” in Nicaragua “failing to make any progress toward achieving the goal of converting the Civil War into a purely domestic war,” and aiding in the international or territorial violations of the Republic of Nicaragua” and attacking Nicaraguan oil facilities, were found to be violations of international obligations under the United Nations charter as well as the charter of the Organization of American States.

Furthermore, the Court ordered the United States to cease its support of the Contra fighting to overturn the Sandinista government and make reparations to those who claim to love justice.

The U.S. response so far contains the familiar refrain of “violation of international law.” Dan Rather recently said in a CBS news broadcast that the Reagan administration believes “this is not a world in which we have to take permission from anyone to defend democracy.”

Preventive measures

Gone away to college is an adventure most high school students look forward to for years. It’s their first chance to make independent decisions, choose their own friends and have fun doing it. Older and wiser than the kids who made their way into Iowa City high schools to leave their home town and attend a school other than the one they had to go to because their parents thought it was no different than any other high school senior in Iowa City.

Freeman, who last week said the UI is not among the five top schools he is considering attending. His story is like the adventure of going somewhere new as one can imagine. But the definite position he would be in at the UI must also have influenced his decision. The son of a university president attending his father’s institution would invariably run into uncontrollable, situations name recognition when rol call is called, perhaps students who produce tensions, sometimes pressure to be an outstanding student. College life is much different enough to be an added pressure.

Freeman’s decision would be viewed not as a reflection upon the UI or its programs, but rather as a wise decision to avoid a region of potential problems.

New federalism

Gov. Terry Branstad recently signed a bill that will raise the drinking age in Iowa to 21. The law goes into effect September 1, 1986. For anyone upset at the signing of the bill, don’t be sorry with the governor because he had no choice, he was blackmailed. He was blackmailed by an administration that claims the virtues and benefits of “New Federalism,” more power to the states, the states have certain responsibilities in state affairs.

The Federal administration issued an ultimatum to Iowa and other states which refuse to raise their drinking age to 21. The president threatened to raise the drinking age to 21, or else. "The law’s for Iowa, the law’s for all of you," the president said.

But there is more to drinking age than the fact that people who are old enough to vote, old enough to pay taxes and old enough to drink whiskey or in this case wine and beer, with a powerful beer and a lively bar in Washington, D.C., could lose their use of the bar of the White House because of the drinking age to 21.

ResidentS react to new laws
Iowans argue over state's new belt law
By Dana Collins

Iowans will risk a $10 fine if they don't buckle up after July 1, when a new law makes wearing seatbelts on all Vermont Department of Public Safety officers say a drop in car crashes leaves the law virtually unenforceable.

In 1981, no one proposals to require seatbelts will carry a $10 fine, though a person in the back seat will be able to get in or out of the car without having to buckle up.

The Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller said the state is proceeding with the new law, but that it's not really an enforcement issue.

"We're going to make a law, but enforcement is going to be easier," Miller said.

Despite a recent court order, the law is not enforceable.

"It's not enforceable because I'm too busy to look at the law," Miller said.

The new law is not an exception, police said.

"There are some laws that people are going to have to keep in mind," Miller said.

The cars and trucks will be able to get in and out of the law, and police officers will keep the protesters apart.

"It's a way to help people," Miller said.

The new law is said to be a "fast-track" law that will be implemented in the state of Iowa.

"I'm not sure if it's a good idea," Miller said.

Music School faculty reveals varied recital

By Eric Wageman

Music

Unlike many of his contemporaries, Barber was a member at heart. Composed by Barber at the early age of 22, his String Quintet in B-flat minor, op. 18, is an early work that is still played today. The music was dedicated to his mentor, and the piece was performed by the Iowa Community Chamber Players. The recital will be presented by the chamber ensemble in the Music Building on Friday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m.

The first movement, an Allegro, is a break but powerful statement apparently written in response to the civil war at the time. The middle movement, a slow but swinging piece, is a contrast to the first movement. The varied fin and final section concludes the work.

VIOLINIST EDWIN DUNPHY and harpist will join the Music faculty in a chamber music program following Barber’s “Bliss.” An evening of Chamber music will be presented by the chamber ensemble in the Music Building on Friday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m.

Estes benefit concert set

CECIL HARTFORD — Native Iowan and world-renowned conductor served as the artistic director of the Iowa Music Festival for 35 years. He passed away last month. The concert will be presented by the chamber ensemble in the Music Building on Friday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m.

The final piece of the evening, Pizzicato’s Sonata No. 1 in D major, was commissioned by Charles Wenzel for a celebration. The piece features a wide range of moods and tempos, from a playful Allegro to a passionate Andante, and is a fine example of the composer’s ability to express himself through music.

The concert will also feature performances by the Iowa Community Chamber Players and the Iowa Community Orchestra. The Iowa Community Chamber Players will perform Barber’s “Bliss” and the Iowa Community Orchestra will perform Barber’s “Adagio.” Both performances will be led by Jonathan Biss, the artistic director of the Iowa Music Festival.

Seaver changes "Sox" for family

BOSTON (UPI) — Tom Seaver, a member of the Chicago Cubs baseball's all-time great pitchers, got his wish, as he traded closer to his Connecticut home Sunday when the Chicago White Sox dealt him to the Boston Red Sox in the biggest deal of the winter.

The baseball trade floor was far from the mind of Seaver as he watched the Chicago Cubs play the New York Yankees in the Winter Classic.

"I'm like everybody else, I've got a family," Seaver said. "I work during the season and have to do the best I can. But this is an opportunity for me to be closer to the kids and have a chance to be more involved in their lives."

DUNBIT (UPI) — Tom Seaver, the veteran right-hander, announced he was traded to the Chicago White Sox in a record-breaking trade for Winter Classic.

"I'm looking forward to working with the kids and being able to be more involved in their lives," Seaver said. "I want to be a better father and give them the opportunities I had growing up."

Seaver, who is 46, has been the Cubs' closer since 1980, when he was acquired from the New York Mets in a five-player trade.

The trade, which involved the Cubs' second baseman, lou Piniella, and catcher Bob Forsch, makes the White Sox the leading contender for Winter Classic.

"I'm excited about the opportunity to be closer to the kids," Seaver said. "I want to be able to mentor them and show them the right way to live."
