Oral-B announces layoff of 100 employees

By Mary Boone
Editor

Citing dismal production forecasts and backlogged inventory, officials at Oral-B Laboratories Inc. announced the layoff of 100 workers at its toothbrush manufacturing plant on Lower Muscatine Road.

The layoffs, effective July 14, will displace Oral-B from the city's list of Top 10 employees.

The toothbrush manufacturer, which ranks No. 7 among local employers, currently employs 450 people. After the layoffs, the work force at Oral-B will total 350.

Bill Robinson, Oral-B director of human resources, said the layoffs were announced to workers last Thursday. Toothbrush sales remain steady, according to Robinson, but the company is not selling enough toothbrushes to eliminate its backlogged inventory.

Robinson said the layoffs are temporary, but would not predict when workers might be recalled.

"This is a 'wait and see' situation," Robinson said. "A recall would be completely dependent on the forecasts and inventory."

Oral-B is a member of the diversified company group of The Gillette Company in Boston. Doug Kenney, manager of corporate communications for Gillette, said the layoffs are strictly localized.

"THIS WAS AN ACTION primarily taken to reduce production at the Iowa City plant, to adjust for an increased product inventory," Kenney said.

He also emphasized the layoff is short-term, and that Gillette officials have no intentions of moving the Oral-B plant or lessening its production.

"Let's just calm any fears that might be out there," Kenney said. "We are currently looking into making some major capital improvements at the Iowa City plant. We're exploring additional uses for the facility, such as developing a distribution center. We have no plans, whatsoever, to leave Iowa City."

Don Menke, assistant manager of the Iowa City office of Job

Services of Iowa, said the Oral-B layoffs will certainly have an effect on the area's unemployment rate, but added the extent is unknown.

"It's just real hard to say what 100 people being laid off at one plant will do to unemployment statistics," Menke said. "A lot of these people may not live in Johnson County, some may not file for unemployment right away, some may leave the area."

Envoy to Honduras replaced by U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Tuesday career diplomat John Ferch is being replaced as American ambassador to Honduras, but denied the abrupt departure reflects policy differences.

The shift became known 48 hours after the Honduran government said the U.S.-backed Contras will have to leave Honduran territory now that they are assured of $100 million in U.S. aid for the next year.

"Our ambassador is being changed," department spokesman Charles Redman told reporters. "The changes are based on the needs of the U.S. government."

"The change does not reflect policy differences, for there are none, nor any disruption of our close bilateral relationship with Honduras which continues to be excellent," Redman said.

A CONGRESSIONAL SOURCE, who disagrees with the administration policy in Central America, said, "Any ambassador who's doing his job will say our policy is ruining the country where he's stationed. It's happened before, and the administration is bound to punish him."

The post is important to the administration's Central American policy, particularly toward Nicaragua. Congress last week approved $100 million in new aid for the Contra rebels battling the leftist Nicaraguan government and the aid will be administered through neighboring Honduras.

One Capitol Hill source said, "They needed a military commander and Ferch didn't fit the bill."

The United States also has a major military presence in Honduras with 1,200 soldiers stationed there.

IN HONDURAS, President Jose Azcona Hoyo said upon hearing Ferch was fired, "I am a little sad because he is a good friend."

"I was told yesterday by the ambassador himself that he was going to leave Honduras," Azcona said, adding, "We were not expecting this situation."

"We were very surprised, and we feel very sorry because Mr. Ferch was working well with us," he said.

State Department officials said staff morale had been low since Ferch took over. A top official denied Ferch was being replaced to take the blame for allegations that American aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, filtered through Honduras, has been mishandled.

Redman said Ferch "has contributed significantly to the Honduran democratic process and to the continued strengthening of our close and friendly relations."

The Los Angeles Times, quoting unidentified State Department officials, said Ferch was sacked because Secretary of State George Shultz and other Reagan aides decided he was not the right "field commander" for the Contra forces.

Local radio listeners fooled into 'bagging' their phones

By Lewis Wayne Greene
University Editor

An Iowa City radio station told listeners to take their telephones out of trash bags Tuesday.

KKRQ-FM radio began broadcasting disclaimers to that effect Tuesday morning after listeners apparently took a joke seriously.

Station Sales Manager Steve Sinicropi went on the air early Tuesday morning claiming to be "Bill" from "the phone company."

Sinicropi told listeners the telephone company was "blowing out" its lines to clean them and that dust could be blown across people's homes and businesses if customers didn't bag their telephones.

THE STATION ran several bogus commercials advising listeners that "today is the day to bag your phone."

But the joke announcement was taken seriously by many listeners, Sinicropi said. "We ended up getting hundreds of phone calls," Sinicropi said. "It was one of the craziest things I've ever seen."

The Daily Iowan/Jeffrey Sedam

A convenience store employee reported dozens of people bought plastic bags for their telephones and called home to warn their spouses to protect the carpet, he said.

"I'm surprised. We thought most people would realize it was a joke," Sinicropi said.

North Liberty, Iowa, resident Charlotte Berry said she was fooled when she heard the announcement.

She called her sister-in-law and warned her of the imminent telephone line blow out.

BERRY SAID her sister-in-law bagged her telephone and she was about to do the same when she thought to check the story out with the radio station.

When she found out the truth, Berry said she felt silly for having believed the hoax. "I felt like a jerk," she said.

The real telephone company was not amused.

"It's an unfortunate occurrence, but it happens," Vickie Sanders, media relations manager for Northwestern Bell in Des Moines, said.

A complaint was lodged with the station and a KKRQ official apologized, she said.

"It's an old joke," she said, adding there is no way the company could really blow dust through telephone lines, even if it wanted to.

Herbicides blamed for tree blight

By Julie Eisele

The aerial spraying of herbicide on a Johnson County farm may be responsible for damaging more than 1,400 trees in F. W. Kent Park, officials from the Johnson County Conservation Board said Tuesday.

Conservation board members and Iowa Department of Agriculture officials said an investigation reveals that a walnut tree grove and other plants in the park came into contact with a herbicide sprayed on a neighboring pasture May 21 or 22.

A release issued by the conservation board states the situation warrants a "potential for litigation" by the county. Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said the attorney's office will make a recommendation of action within two to three weeks.

"We are in the process of trying to review what happened" based on information provided by the agriculture department and the conservation board, White said. The attorney's office will also determine whether the incident has received thorough investigation.

ALTHOUGH MANY of the trees have suffered defoliation, officials say it is too early to speculate on the total amount of damage.

"At this time it is difficult to determine how many trees will die and the extent of damage to the trees that survive," said Rod Dunlap, conservation board director.

The farmland is owned by Harry Eister of rural Tiffin, Iowa, according to Charles Eckermann, supervisor of the pesticide section of the state's agriculture department. Eister's son, Larry, contracted Iowa Valley Helicopter Aviation to spray the pasture. Neither of the Eisters could be reached for comment Tuesday.

"The Eisters, either Harry or Larry, hired an applicator to spray their pasture and the bill was made out to Larry Eister," Eckermann said.

THE INCIDENT does not pose a health hazard to park users and no wildlife was affected. The damaged trees are confined to Kent Park's northeast corner, described by Dunlap as "one of the most remote areas of the park."

"It's not an immense area, but it's a significant area," said Jim Murphy, conservation board member. Members said they have experienced no similar problems since the park was established in 1969. Eckermann said he could recall no similar incidents in the state.

Conservation board members set a "conservative estimate" for replacing the trees at $50 per tree. But the trees were being "harvested" to be sold for lumber, and some fully grown walnut trees are worth up to $10,000, members said.

The use of helicopters to apply herbicides is not uncommon in Iowa, and Eckermann said there may be no difference between helicopter and plane applications.

"I'M NOT AWARE that one is safer than the other. I would guess that a helicopter would have greater control in tighter areas," he said.

The herbicide used was 2,4-D — a fairly common chemical that has been used by farmers since the 1940s, according to Dale Shires, Johnson County Extension Service director.

The herbicide is sometimes used on corn and is "not considered to be very toxic," Shires said. "But there are precautions to be taken," he added.

Tom Bayliss, an agronomist employed by Eldon C. Stutsman, Inc., a Hills fertilizer sales outlet, said 2,4-D could be dangerous to younger, less-established trees.

Taxpayers should be made aware of the incident because "it's the public's trees and it's their tax dollars that provide them," said conservation board president Mike Rocca.

Navy dirigible crashes, kills 1, injures 3

LAKEHURST, N.J. — A large experimental airship crashed Tuesday at the naval air station where the famed dirigible Hindenburg exploded nearly a half-century ago. One crewman died and three others were injured in the crash, officials said Tuesday.

The 343-foot craft, which held 1 million cubic feet of helium in a superstructure surrounded by four H-34 helicopters, malfunctioned and crashed about 7 p.m. during a test flight at an altitude of about 40 feet at the Lakehurst Naval Air Engineering Center, Navy spokesman Nick Grand said.

FAA suspects structural cracks in 747s

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration, reacting to the discovery of structural cracks in some Boeing 747 aircraft that could cause sudden decompression, Tuesday proposed expanded inspections of the planes.

Boeing said the planes are safe. The agency estimated that its proposed rule would affect 160 747s of U.S. registry and that it would take about 800 hours per airplane at a cost of $40 per hour for a total cost of about $5,120,000 per inspection cycle.

Branstad names heads of new agencies

DES MOINES — Calling them top leaders in state government, Gov. Terry Branstad Tuesday named 20 people, including four women, to head new, streamlined government agencies.

Branstad Tuesday also appointed 17 people to head divisions of the new agencies and 152 people to serve on state boards and commissions.

Death-row prisoners get short reprieves

STARKE, Fla. — A federal judge refused Tuesday to grant a new trial to suspected serial killer Ted Bundy, but delayed today's scheduled execution for 24 hours so defense attorneys could appeal to a higher court.

Mass murderer Gerald Eugene Stano, who was also to die at 7 a.m. today in the nation's first double execution since capital punishment was reinstated a decade ago, won a three-hour reprieve from a state judge Tuesday so his lawyers could appeal to Florida's Supreme Court.

Libyan businessman shot dead in Paris

VERSAILLES, France — Masked gunmen stormed the fashionable suburban home of a Libyan businessman and shot him to death, police said Tuesday.

Mohamed Bouzou, 54, was killed shortly before midnight Monday by a 7.65 mm caliber bullet to the chest. Other shots were fired but no one else was hurt, a police spokeswoman in Versailles said.

No one claimed responsibility for the shooting and police said they had no motive.

Poland forbids Walesa to leave country

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity union founder Lech Walesa said Tuesday he was denied permission to leave Poland to attend a peace conference in Rome and interrogated by police for the fourth time in a week.

Walesa had planned to fly Tuesday to Rome at the invitation of Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti to attend the International Conference on Peace, which begins Wednesday.

Reagan signs bill to cut military pension

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan signed legislation Tuesday overhauling the military retirement system by rewarding those who make life in uniform a career and reducing the pension checks for those who leave early.

The Military Retirement Reform Act of 1986 does not affect those now in uniform or those who have already retired, but will change pensions for anyone entering the armed forces after Aug. 1.

The headline "Job figures rate best in nation" (DI, June 30), should have reported that Iowa City unemployment rates are the lowest in the state.

The headline "I.C. man arrested for bank robbery" (DI, June 30), should have reported that the man was arrested on forgery charges. He had previously been indicted for an Iowa City robbery.

In a Metrobrief called "Iowa City Police set July 4 traffic policy" (DI, July 1), exit procedures following the city's fireworks display were incorrectly reported.

City hearing to remain open

By Julie Eisele
 City Editor

Input at a public hearing held Tuesday for the proposed Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company franchise renewal was nil, but the Iowa City Council moved nonetheless to continue the hearing at its July 15 meeting.

That will give members of the city's Resources Conservation Commission a chance to review the proposal before the council grants first approval to the renewal. Three approvals are required before residents vote on the measure.

The proposal guarantees the use of right-of-ways to Iowa-Illinois for gas and electric lines in exchange for 15 years of service to the city.

During Monday's informal session, Councilor Larry Baker questioned why members of the commission did not receive a copy of the proposal, which has been an issue of dispute between the council and Iowa-Illinois for several years.

"THEY SHOULD HAVE gotten that tentative copy with those tentative provisions the same time we did," Baker said. "I agree with that totally," said Councilor Kate Dickson. "Otherwise we might as well dissolve the commission," Dickson said.

The commission is made up of city residents who make recommendations to the council on matters of energy and resource conservation.

Terrence Timmins, city attorney, told the council Monday that commission members did not have a chance to review the proposal because it was finished late last week. Timmins said the proposal differs in several ways from the former proposal.

"The new franchise contains more regulatory authority for the city," such as the use of right-of-ways, he said. "It reserves the city's ability to regulate in those areas and imposes requirements on the company," he said.

COUNCIL MEMBERS originally requested a 1 percent franchise fee from Iowa-Illinois, which would have required the company to pay a monthly fee for use of public streets and right-of-ways. That cost would have been passed on to consumers and was a point of contention between the council and the company. The company's 25-year franchise expired in October 1985. Baker said he thinks the new proposal is "tame."

 "It's a painless ordinance to Iowa-Illinois. It doesn't exact anything from them," he said.
 "I think that the council ought to start over again and get some real concessions from IG&E," he said. Those include information on rate increases and energy conservation, as well as more city control over the placement of high-power conductor lines.

Baker said he would like a guarantee from the company promising it will not consider nuclear power in Iowa City. He said he doubts it will be a problem in Iowa City, unless the city's "political climate ever changes and it becomes easier to license those things."

Thomas Hoogerwerf, Iowa-Illinois district manager in Iowa City, said he is pleased with the proposal.

The family of an Iowa City man who reportedly became intoxicated at two local bars and died following a car accident filed suit in Johnson County District Court Tuesday against the owners of the bars.

Karol Sharkey, her three children and the estate of Michael Sharkey are named as plaintiffs in the suit, which alleges dram shop liability against Gary Jennings, owner of R.T. Grunt's, formerly located at 826 S. Clinton St., and Gabe's, Inc. Gabe's Oasis is located at 330 E. Washington St.

Sharkey and her children claim Michael Sharkey was sold or given liquor at the establishments "to the point where he became intoxicated" and that, as a result, Michael Sharkey was killed when his vehicle struck a tree on a county road south of Iowa City.

The suit asks for an amount to be determined by a jury. Michael Sharkey, who was 29, died on May 25, 1985.

An Iowa City woman was sentenced to one year of probation and participation in a chemical abuse treatment in connection with drug theft charges.

Carol Mitchell Harmon also received a one-year suspended jail sentence in Johnson County District Court this week on charges of possession of a schedule two, possession schedule four and prohibited acts.

In February, Harmon allegedly removed the drugs Dalmane and Demerol from the Veterans Administration Medical Center, where she was employed as a registered nurse. She is also accused of stealing Hydroxyzine after five bottles of the medicine were removed from her purse when she was detained by hospital security.

UI Campus Security officials received reports from three men who had items stolen from lockers at the UI Field House Monday.

Michael Smith, 409 S. Dodge St., reported a backpack and its contents, valued at $812, were stolen.

Greg Grove, Huxley, Iowa, told security officers his wallet and $110 cash were taken.

George Stauffer, 2418 Princeton Road, reported that $40 cash was taken from his locker.

Iowa City resident wins Liberty crown

Wearing her homemade crown and green latex paint, Jennifer Stewart of Iowa City was proclaimed the winner of a nationwide Statue of Liberty look-alike contest Tuesday.

Stewart was one of three finalists in the competition. She was selected the most Liberty-like on live television Tuesday morning in the shadow of the real statue on Governor Island in New York Harbor.

With the honor of being selected, Stewart won a one-year contract with a California celebrity look-alike company and invitations to several Independence Day ceremonies.

Scientists seek moms from 1980s UI study

Two UI researchers are trying to locate women who participated in a five-year study of pregnancy and parenting.

UI graduate student Laurie Clement and Associate Psychology Professor Michael W. O'Hara want to provide the participants with results of the research study and to conduct a follow-up study.

The participants were all patients in obstetrics at UI Hospitals between mid-1981 and early 1982, so the youngsters would now be four or five years old, Clement said.

Participants who have not been contacted are asked to call Clement or O'Hara at 353-6434 or 353-6946.

UI Foundation reports pledge acceleration

The UI Foundation received nearly $39.2 million in gifts and pledges in 1985, which is an 18 percent increase from 1984, Foundation President Darrell Wyrick said.

These results put the foundation's cumulative holdings at more than $235 million, Wyrick said. The $100 million level reached in 1980, required 25 years, while the second $100 million was raised in one-fifth of that time, Wyrick added.

"I think the acceleration in amounts raised is a great tribute to the generosity of Iowa's alumni and friends and also shows their awareness of the growing importance of private gifts to this university," he said.

The portion of support received outright was earmarked by contributors as follows: $4.8 million for student financial aid, $2.9 million for faculty development, $8.1 million for buildings and equipment, $6.8 million for research, departmental and special projects funds and $453,262 for the unrestricted "Iowa Opportunity Fund."

The average annual gift, not including unusually large gifts, was $260, up 7 percent from 1984.

Grant funding may increase

By Michael O'Connor
Staff Writer

There will be additional Pell Grant funding for UI students if President Ronald Reagan signs a supplemental appropriations bill next week, UI Associate Director of Student Financial Aid Mark Warner said Tuesday.

The bill, approved last week by both houses of Congress, appropriates $146 million for the federal Pell Grant program, Warner said.

Pell Grants provide need-based financial aid to undergraduates, Warner added.

Some students who have been informed that they are ineligible for Pell Grants next year may receive awards of $500 to $600 if the bill is signed, he said.

But he added that to receive the Pell Grant some students may have to reduce other financial aid awards, such as student work study.

"THE ADDITIONAL funding could also add between $100 and $150 to the awards of students who have already received Pell Grants for next year," Warner said.

Warner said January projections showed that UI students might lose $800,000 in Pell Grant funding for 1986-87. The loss was predicted because of the shortfall in funding for the program and cuts brought on by the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Act, he said.

Whether the appropriations bill will compensate for the full $800,000 will be certain only when the U.S. Department of Education releases a revised Pell Grant schedule, Warner said.

White House officials have indicated Reagan probably will sign the measure, according to a National Association for Financial Aid Administrators' telephone hotline.

UI VICE PRESIDENT for Student Services Philip Hubbard said Pell Grants are a very important part of the UI's financial aid program.

When Pell Grants are cut, students are forced to take out larger loans, Hubbard said.

"In most cases the only way to replace loss of a Pell Grant is to give students bigger loans," he said. "Many of us are concerned that students are ending up in greater debt."

UI senior Jody Swarts said she didn't receive a Pell Grant last year, which meant taking out a larger loan. But Swarts hopes that passage of the bill will provide her with a Pell Grant for next year.

"Not getting a Pell Grant definitely makes my money situation tighter," she said. "There were times when I had to work all day when I could have been studying."

UI Hospitals restrict smoking

By Dan McClain
Staff Writer

A new policy to create a "smoke-free environment" at UI Hospitals took effect Tuesday at the expense of smokers.

The policy designates all but a limited number of areas in UI Hospitals as being non-smoking areas to prevent people from being exposed to tobacco smoke if they do not wish to be.

The policy also extends to Westlawn, Psychiatric Hospital, University Hospital School and the Chemical Dependency Center at the UI Oakdale Campus.

"Basically, we're asking everyone not to smoke while at University Hospitals," UI Hospitals Deputy Director Clifford Eldredge said.

THE NEW POLICY prohibits smoking in all UI Hospitals patient care areas, corridors, lobbies, restrooms, patios, entryways and vehicles. It also provides for the establishment of specially designed smoking rooms.

"We've tried to respect the sensitivities of our staff, visitors and patients and to preserve as much individual freedom as possible," John Tinker, head of anesthesia at UI Hospitals and chairman of the committee that designed the rules, said.

Smokers at the hospitals greeted the new policy with mixed reactions.

Peggy Whalen, a patient who comes to UI Hospitals every two weeks, said the new policy is part of a trend of forcing smokers to go to greater lengths to indulge in their habit.

"I don't think they should cut it down to just two or three places where we can go to smoke," she said as she puffed on a cigarette. "After all, we help pay these hospital bills, too."

KARI FOMON, a secretary at UI Hospitals and a smoker, said: "I don't think it's real fair, but there are two sides to the issue."

Fomon said she approves of the policy even though she thinks it will present an inconvenience to smokers. The inconvenience could help her give up cigarettes, she said.

The policy calls for a total of nine rooms where smoking is allowed on the hospitals' third, fifth and seventh floors.

These rooms will feature self-closing doors and air purifiers. The rooms will not be open to any public or patient areas.

Patients and hospitals employees who do not receive regularly scheduled breaks because of their work may smoke in their rooms or individual work spaces, only by special permission.

Fourth of July celebrations are safer without fireworks

By Mark McDermott
Staff Writer

Despite their popularity this time of year, both legal and illegal fireworks can be hazardous and should be used with care, state and local officials warn.

Nationally, fireworks caused more than 10,000 injuries during 1985, according to Assistant State Fire Marshal Roy Marshall of the Division of Fire Protection.

Marshall noted that the Society to Prevent Blindness estimated that more than 5,000 people suffered eye injuries from the use of fireworks, 40 percent of whom sustained permanent eye damage. Last July 4 alone, the society received reports of 659 eye injuries.

MARSHALL ALSO SAID that these figures were probably much higher in reality, but that injuries caused by illegal fireworks are often attributed to other causes by the victims.

Even legal fireworks such as sparklers can be dangerous, according to Iowa City Fire Marshal Larry Kinney.

"Even sparklers can be dangerous... they are very hot and can burn people. Sparklers are very dangerous if used around combustibles," Kinney said, adding that sparklers can cause explosions.

"Always use them outdoors with adult supervision," Kinney said.

State Fire Marshal Wilbur Johnson echoed this concern. "If people are going to use sparklers, they should get a can of water and douse the sparkler immediately after use instead of throwing it on the ground, where it can be stepped on and cause burns."

KINNEY SAID illegal fire-

works are even more dangerous because they can easily start fires. Fireworks that are illegal in the state, such as bottle rockets and M-80s, are often purchased in states where they are legal and "bootlegged" into this state.

Kinney likened M-80s to dynamite and said that several years ago, two garage fires were ignited by illegal fireworks.

Johnson said little can be done to counter the problem of "bootlegging" illegal fireworks into the state. People who are charged with possession of illegal fireworks can be charged with a serious misdemeanor that could carry a fine of up to $1,000.

Local police and fire officials both say they have received fewer complaints about fireworks this year, but Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller thinks the number of complaints will increase later this week.

"There will be somebody arrested this year. Some people just don't understand that they have no more right to shoot off fireworks than to shoot off their mouths."

Miller said police will work overtime to handle the increased holiday traffic.

Dashed hopes

When President Ronald Reagan nominated Justice William Rehnquist and Antonin Scalia to fill the gaps created by Chief Justice Warren Burger's resignation from the U.S. Supreme Court, liberals were terrified by the prospect of a new era of conservatism about to dawn in the nation's judiciary.

Well, up and at 'em! The sun's up sooner than expected. Even before the changes on the bench could take place, the new era broke onto the national scene with a jolt Monday morning when the high court decided that the Constitution does not protect homosexual relations between consenting adults.

The decision is alarming. Not only have homosexuals' legal defenses against discrimination been significantly weakened, but a long-time tradition of respect for individual privacy has been overturned.

Monday's decision, which reflects the New Right's rejection of such civilized concepts as toleration and accommodation, is disconcerting to more than just the homosexual community. Although the court declined to rule on whether the Constitution protects heterosexual adults who commit acts of sodomy, the precedent for such an invasion has been set.

The ruling to outlaw certain sexual acts provides a foreshadowing of the kind of decisions which are likely to be handed down with increasing regularity once Reagan's appointees take their seats on the Supreme Court. Unfortunately, the hope of having a so-called "moderate" court in the meantime appears to have been dashed.

Parking pains

It has long been said that Iowa has two seasons: winter and construction.

That this old saw is hauled out every year and repeated ad nauseum is a testament to its truth. And, unfortunately, the construction season always seems to last a bit longer in our fair city than elsewhere.

For some reason, our city planners see fit to turn the town into a miniature hades every summer by scheduling enough construction projects to ensure the yammer of jack hammers and the stench of fresh asphalt fills the air from May to September. And the UI acts as an accessory to the crime by undertaking several "projects" of its own.

This year, the city and UI have gone too far. Not only is driving through town nearly impossible due to major construction projects, but almost every parking lot on campus has been torn up or closed.

If you haven't witnessed it yourself, check out the list: the Chemistry-Botany Building lot is restricted due to work on the telecommunications center; Lot 35 behind Campus Security cannot be reached because the access road leading to it has a giant pit dug in it; the metered parking area south of the Union and the lot behind the Communications Center are now huge holes in the ground; and the bulldozers are getting suspiciously close to the lots in front of the Main Library.

For a town that only planned on having one parking space per thousand cars in the first place, this loss of lots is too much. Some action needs to be taken — maybe a protest on the Pentacrest, if construction projects haven't made it inaccessible.

Lovely liberty

*Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore,
send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me:
I lift my lamp beside the golden door.*

The words of Emma Lazarus' "The New Colossus", inscribed at the base of the Statue of Liberty, are a bold statement of a nation's welcome for the world's disenfranchised. They will, no doubt, be heard often during this weekend's celebration of the statue's centennial.

These words are not easy to live up to. Just how far do we take them? Can we really accept the "huddled masses" within our borders?

One hundred years ago, the North American continent seemed limitless. The influx of immigrants provided the labor force necessary to extract and utilize the resources of the new land.

Today, our continent cannot hold any more people without spreading its resources more thinly. That, at least, is the perception most of us have.

Is the statue's magnanimous invitation extended to the millions of "illegals" we hunt like dogs each year at our southern border? Does Mexico's own liberty mean anything more to us than having a non-communist neighbor?

On Tuesday, three members of the sanctuary movement were sentenced to five years probation for what the Reagan administration calls "alien smuggling." The smugglers included three clergymen and a nun, while the aliens were Guatemalan and Salvadorans whose lives are threatened by the political violence in their own countries.

This weekend's festivities would be a good time to re-examine our commitment to Liberty and her lovely words, but don't expect the speeches to address that.

Sodomy law hurts everyone

The U.S. Supreme Court's decision Monday to uphold the state of Georgia's sodomy law is a serious affront to the rights of gay people and a major threat to the basic civil rights of all Americans.

In its 5-4 ruling, the Court said consenting adults have no right to private homosexual conduct.

The case involved a gay man who was arrested in his own home while engaging in oral sex with another man. The police had entered the home to issue a court summons for a traffic ticket.

Though the language of the Court ruling was limited to homosexuals, Georgia's sodomy law applies to all people, straight and gay. The fact that prosecution under this law has been limited to gay people is another sign that it isn't sodomy that worries the Court and the federal government — it is the existence of gays.

The Supreme Court has made misguided decisions before. In the Dred Scott case, the Court ruled that blacks were chattel and could be bought and sold.

Other cases have denied human rights to women, the handicapped and other minorities.

The SITUATION OF GAYS in America parallels that of blacks in the 1950s, when segregation and persecution were government policies, instead of reprehensible wrongs.

As the repressive Burger Court is about to be replaced with the even more repressive Rehnquist Court, Americans should take note of the frightening new directions in constitutional law.

The Supreme Court is attempting to enforce a right-wing morality on this country that leaves no room for diversity or disagreement. The decision is nothing short of an attempt to rule away homosexuality.

Of course, a court ruling won't make gay people go away. Homosexuals have lived through centuries of persecution — 150,000 died in the death camps of Nazi Germany, for instance.

Monday's court ruling will only result in more pressure on the government to end the persecution of America's gay minority now.

This Guest Opinion is a statement from the UI Gay People's Union. See related editorial opinion on this page.

U.S. schools need changes

DURING THE last semester of my senior year in high school, my brother Michael took it upon himself to give me a pre-college lecture. He pointed an accusing finger in my face and said, "You're completely unprepared for college. You don't know how to study and you're going to flunk all of your classes."

I believed him. Absolute fear took control of my study habits. I even read that list of the 40 books every student should read before they go to college. My first year of college was far easier than I had expected and I was on the Dean's list my first semester.

Even though I had proved my brother's pessimistic prediction wrong, I knew my high school education had been, for the most part, a farce.

IT SEEMS THAT A lot of people feel the same way. According to a recent article in The Daily Iowan, teachers, parents and administrators are trying to change the reality of poorly prepared high school students who plan on continuing their education.

But there is madness in their methods. In order to combat the underpreparedness of students, the curriculum advisers suggest that all high school students should take, among other things, three years of math, science and social studies.

These suggestions for curriculum improvement have a few basic flaws. First of all, to expect all students to take the same curriculum is a bit blind, if not unrealistic.

Yes, math and science are important, but only for those students who intend to continue studies in medicine, business, science, etc.

I mean, let's be realistic. As a student who planned on study-

By Tira Palmquist

Digressions

ing the arts and literature, math and science credits took away the time I could have been using to take extra literature and language classes. I have never used the geometry I was required to take to "prepare" me for college.

THESE SPECIFIC changes for the college prep curriculum should perhaps be applied to the junior high curriculum instead. Junior high is where a student should have the strongest dose of math and science so that the college prep courses needn't center around whether or not Suzie knows how to add.

Instead of set curriculum for the college bound, there needs to be a wider variety of courses for a variety of specializations. Let the students take more than American literature before they go to college. Let them take more than one semester of composition.

Another claim in the argument to change high school curriculum is that students take unchallenging electives instead of the recommended curriculum. To be honest, I wish I knew which electives they consider undemanding (and, apparently, worthless).

It was my experience as a high school student that none of my classes were demanding enough. The basic flaw was not that I did not have enough math and science but that I was not prepared for the rigors of college in any class, in any field.

IT WAS INTERESTING to read just such findings in the September 1985 issue of the Harvard Education Letter, published by the Harvard Graduate School of Education in association with Harvard University Press. In this issue, the book The Shopping Mall High School: Winners and Losers in the Educational Marketplace is discussed.

The newsletter describes the book's major thesis as such: "Students, teachers and administrators manage to live together by negotiating implicit 'treaties' in which they agree to demand little of one another."

The book is also quoted as saying, "Both discussions and lectures are frequently unproductive and boring to students and teachers alike ... they repeated material easily available elsewhere or were discursive and ill-informed."

The basis for the college prep problem, according to this book, is rooted in the conventions of high school curriculum (time and size of classes, structure of material and routine of activities): They destroy the process of education rather than augment it.

AS I RECALL MY own junior high and high school education, very little of it stands out in my mind as lasting and important. One science class, one composition class, one literature class — three classes in total helped me when I got to college.

Again, the major problem I encountered as a college student was not that I was unprepared to figure numbers and formulas, but that I was unpracticed in formulating my own opinions, eliciting productive discussion, transferring my thoughts into concise and logical written form.

I have run across more than just a handful of fellow college students who could barely write a clear sentence, let alone formulate an original opinion. Generally, students are unprepared because they are poorly versed in any genre of literature, inept at studying and lacking in the basic communication skills.

Few of my high school classes demanded writing, that is, other than the composition classes. Few of my high school classes demanded outside reading — if any reading at all.

In short, few of my classes required me to think.

Major organizational changes are needed to combat the rising tide of unprepared students, changes that may have to begin at the junior high level or earlier. Our two additional math classes will not correct the mistakes of a child's education. Reassessing the structure of the entire educational system may.

Weinberger says 'Star Wars' is advancing

Caspar Weinberger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, seeking to demonstrate to a balky Congress that the "Star Wars" program is progressing, announced Tuesday the successful test of a potential weapon for protecting missile sites.

For the first time Friday, an experimental missile with 216 thumb-sized rocket motors in its nose struck and destroyed a moving target — a 134-inch drone released from an F-4 aircraft at 44,000 feet — said Weinberger and spokesmen for the Strategic Defense Initiative, the formal name for the "Star Wars" project.

Clearly on the defensive against congressional attacks on financing "Star Wars" research, Weinberger called a news conference to illustrate progress is being made in the vastly complex multibillion dollar research program to develop technologies for a ground and space-based missile defense.

"IT'S A VERY important and a very noteworthy achievement and obviously one that we're very pleased about," he said of the test. "It is more evidence of continued progress toward achieving the president's goal" to protect the United States and its allies from missile attack.

The House Armed Services Committee has cut the proposed SDI budget to $3.4 billion. And last week, the Senate Armed Services Committee cut the proposed $5.4 billion SDI budget to $3.9 billion and adopted a policy statement on a 10-9 vote that said the "major emphasis" of the program should be changed from defending the population to protecting missile and bomber sites — known as terminal defense.

THE ADMINISTRATION prodded Moscow to begin high-level planning for another superpower summit Tuesday, while appearing hesitant about a Soviet proposal for talks on the SALT II Treaty renounced by President Ronald Reagan.

At the State Department, however, spokesman Charles Redman complained that the Soviets, despite a public commitment earlier in the day to such a session, have spurned repeated U.S. overtures on scheduling the meeting.

"They ought to set a date," Redman declared, echoing irritation expressed on other occasions by Shultz. "Let's get on with it."

The challenge came after Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovsky said in Moscow that the Soviets had proposed "to start in motion a preparatory mechanism" for a Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting that would lay the groundwork for a second summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. His statement did not include suggestions for a date.

What emerged in Washington, however, was a different version of what White House spokesman Larry Speakes called "the state of play" leading to a possible summit late this year and signs of U.S. impatience over what were characterized as Soviet delays.

Officials at the White House and State Department insisted the Soviets had made no formal proposal for a Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting and that no such discussions were under way, despite suggestions to the contrary from Moscow.

New York prepares for Fourth of July

NEW YORK (UPI) — Majestic tall ships sailed the Atlantic Ocean toward New York Tuesday, Lee Iacocca pronounced the Statue of Liberty "good for another 100 years" and fireworks crackled over the harbor in a preview of the nation's Liberty Weekend celebration.

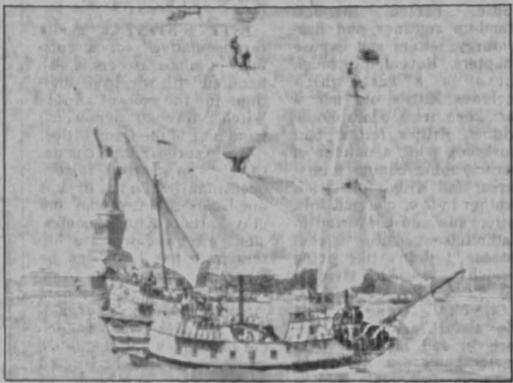

The extravaganza honoring the 100th birthday of Lady Liberty doesn't officially begin until Thursday, but it has already sent a surge of patriotism through throngs of tourists and a green-painted Miss Liberty look-alike.

Lower Manhattan was already teeming Tuesday as tourists thronged into Battery Park at the foot of Manhattan, overlooking the celebration's centerpiece — the refurbished Statue of Liberty.

Already at sea, sailing north from Norfolk, Va., was a fleet of tall ships, many of them emissaries from abroad. All are heading for the Operation Sail parade up the Hudson River Friday, the Fourth of July.

Millions of tourists — police predict there will be as many as 15 million — were pouring into the Big Apple for the celebration, built by movie producer David Wolper around Thursday night's relighting of the Statue of Liberty.

Independence Day festivities will include a parade of tall ships.

Roehrick charges tax break unfair

DES MOINES (UPI) — Democratic challenger John Roehrick said Tuesday Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, should disclose all contributions from trucking magnate John Ruan to clear up questions about a $20 million tax break.

The tax break Grassley won for the Des Moines businessman is unfair to other Iowans, who eventually will foot the bill and witness loss of jobs at competing truck firms, Roehrick said in a news conference at state party headquarters.

"When middle-class Iowans don't have truckloads of money, lose their IRA deductions, yet wake up to find John Ruan getting a special tax break to the tune of $20 million, where is the fairness?" he said.

"The $20 million is really incomprehensible for one individual... If the rule had been made for all trucking firms in this country, or even trucking firms in Iowa, and not just a friend and contributor of Charles Grassley, we wouldn't have this question," Roehrick said.

John Roehrick

A DES MOINES LAWYER who entered the Senate race as a relative unknown and trails the incumbent in public opinion polls, Roehrick said Grassley should disclose a list of all contributors directly or indirectly affiliated with Ruan's trucking firm.

"How much of your $1.5 million campaign chest has been donated by the Ruan interests?" he asked.

He said the list should include Ruan, his family, Ruan trucking firm executives and their relatives and all others affiliated with Ruan businesses.

Grassley said earlier the tax break was available to Ruan as the only Iowa trucking firm investing in a new "Mega-truck" line. He also said Ruan was the only Iowa trucking firm that requested the tax break.

Explosion injures eight in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The 11th bomb blast since South Africa imposed emergency measures June 12 exploded at a central Johannesburg bus stop Tuesday, injuring eight women and children, authorities said.

The blast came as labor leaders met secretly to discuss plans to protest the detention of union leaders, and South Africa formally repealed 34 race laws that restricted movements of blacks and required them to carry identity documents called "passes" at all times.

In a report on other violence, the Bureau of Information in Pretoria said a black doctor died Monday in a firebomb attack on a clinic near Port Elizabeth, and police in Bophuthatswana said 10 blacks died when a minibus blew up last Friday.

A reported 109 people have died violently since a nationwide emergency giving police sweeping powers and restricting the news media was declared June 12 by President Pieter Botha to stem the racial unrest that has killed an estimated 1,900 people in the past two years.

TUESDAY'S EXPLOSION in Johannesburg came exactly one week after two lunch-hour explosions injured 22 people at a Johannesburg fast-food shop and a hotel.

Authorities blamed no group for planting the explosives Tuesday. The outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group has been blamed for past bombings.

Tuesday's explosion, at a bus stop within 100 yards of the exclusive Carleton Hotel, occurred just before 2 p.m.

A witness to the explosion said two women were sitting at the bus stop, one of them with a child in a pram, when the bomb went off.

"I SAW BLOOD streaming from her face and onto her blouse," said Mabel Smith, a cashier at a liquor store across the street. "She left her baby on the sidewalk. She appeared to be in shock."

Malherbe said five white women, a black woman, a 2-week-old infant and a 3-year-old toddler were injured and taken to hospitals by paramedics who arrived within minutes of the blast.

Most were treated and released, but the 2-week-old baby boy was admitted to Johannesburg hospital in "serious" condition with lacerations and possible shrapnel wounds to the head, a spokeswoman said.

It was the 11th bombing in a series that began June 14.

Sanctuary Movement advocates sentenced

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A Catholic nun and two Methodist layworkers, who defended as a matter of conscience their participation in alien smuggling for the Sanctuary Movement for Central Americans, were sentenced Tuesday to five years probation.

Sister Darlene Nicgorski, 42; Peggy Hutchison, 31; and Philip Willis-Conger, 28, were the first of eight people, convicted May 1 at the end of a six-month alien-smuggling trial, to face U.S. District Court Judge Earl Carroll to learn whether they would go to prison.

Sentencing of the other five defendants continued Tuesday afternoon and was expected to extend into Wednesday.

NICGORSKI, Hutchison and Willis-Conger all defended their actions in helping Central Americans enter the United States. They expressed doubts they could comply with Carroll's order that, as a condition of probation, they not associate with any organization involved with illegal aliens.

Hutchison was convicted of one count of conspiracy to violate immigration laws. Nicgorski, described by prosecutor Donald Reno as the "traffic agent" for the Sanctuary Movement, was convicted of four counts including conspiracy, aiding transportation, and concealing, harboring or shielding aliens. Willis-Conger was convicted of three counts.

Carroll ordered the probationary terms for the several counts for which Nicgorski and Willis-Conger were sentenced to run concurrently.

"What most discourages me," Nicgorski told Carroll, "is that we were never able to tell the jury why."

Dow Jones tops 1900 to finish at record high

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average finished above 1900 for the first time in history Tuesday as the stock market set off its traditional pre-Fourth of July rally. Trading was active.

The closely watched Dow jumped 10.82 to close at 1903.54. It finished above the 1800 level for the first time on March 20. At the end of 1985, the Dow stood at 1546.

Broad market indicators also topped day-old records. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.20 to 252.04 and The New York Stock Exchange composite index added 0.72 to 144.68. The price of an average share jumped 20 cents.

On the Big Board, 147,670,000 shares changed hands, compared with 135,130,000 traded Monday.

Gabe's to present local band tonight

By Kent Schuelke
Staff Writer

IN AN AGE when rock musicians aspire to be great artists and poets, the Bent Scepters — one of Iowa City's newest musical incarnations — are hoping audiences will catch on to their hard-driving, head-banging version of psychopathic rock 'n' roll.

"We're implementing the traditional type of rock 'n' roll," guitar-vocalist Doug Roberson said. "We want people to dance and party. We don't want people to say 'oh, they're trying to do something important.'"

THE BENT SCEPTERS is the brain child of five Iowa City musicians, most of whom have already made a name for themselves in other local bands. They decided to form a little more than a month ago to pay tribute to the loud, lewd garage-rock popularized by such bands as the Rolling Stones, Cream and the Yardbirds.

Clothed in Nehru jackets, beads, medallions and other garb from the psychedelic '60s, the band hopes to recreate the avant-garde spirit of those flower power years.

Besides dressing in clothes from the period, the band has reworked their biography to match the "psychedelic" spirit of the times.

In their press release, the Iowa City band claims to be from Dirty Water, Mass., and they confess to be hopeless drug abusers. They also have adopted pseudonyms to further express this free-wheeling spirit — Winslow Granite III (Doug Roberson), Crank Shaft (Mike McLaughlin), Smokestack Connors (Scott Stecklein) and Martin Dill (Dan Roberson).

THEY OBVIOUSLY believe in having a good time.

"We're not taking ourselves too seriously," said McLaughlin, who plays rhythm guitar and handles a portion of the vocals. "But seriously enough that we want to play well."

Dan Roberson, who sings and plays harmonica, said garage rock is often overlooked for being sophomoric and unsophisticated. Those critics, he added, forget that rock 'n' roll is for everyone.

"It's real raw and amateurish," he said. "16-year-old kids with no talent can do it."

Their music is a driving fusion of guitars, drums, bass, harmonica and tamborine, combined to create the fuzzy, head-banging hallucinogenic sound of the 1960s that inspired countless teen-agers.

"I ALWAYS LIKED all the grungy '60s rock," Doug Roberson said. "It has a lot to do with the guys who made the music. They were just tired of parents and teachers putting them down so they created this kind of music."

The Bent Scepters will not play any original numbers, but will rely solely on cover tunes. The band has also tried to avoid the music of the Stones or other well-known names, opting to showcase songs from lesser known groups like Chocolate Watchband, the Fabs, the Electric Prunes and the Sonics.

"We're going to knock them up aside the head with some great sounds," Doug Roberson said.

McLaughlin said the band wants to play trashy, ear-piercing rock; rock that is out of style in the techno-pop era of 1980s.

"When rock loses its rebellious effect then it's not rock 'n' roll," McLaughlin said. "You don't want your parents to like rock 'n' roll."

MCLAUGHLIN emphasized that the band's music has no grand artistic or political pretensions, but is based on the need to party.

"We're not going to talk about politics and we're not going to be playing top 40 songs," McLaughlin said. "We're going to be doing the ordinary grungy things that people do in their daily lives."

The band will be playing in Iowa City tonight as part of Cave Stomp, an on-going concert series at Gabe's Oasis that features local rock talent. Tonight is the fourth Cave Stomp and local musicians feel they have been a great way to gain exposure.

"It's a format for them to play where audiences will actually see them," said Doug Roberson, who has organized the events.

Playing with the Bent Scepters tonight are Genuine Swank Vinyl (formerly the Swinging Teens) and The Ruggies. This is the Bent Scepter's first public appearance.

"We can just get up on the stage and rock out," McLaughlin said. "We have no expectations and nothing to deliver. People can just come and have a good time."

Bright new novel spins web of light

By Kathee Schmidt
Special to The Daily Iowan

KITTY O'Carolan's man has cut out, taking her car and leaving a memento that bites — his "flea-chewed grudge-holding, little sour dog." But these lovers are curiously bound by the separation. This is the grist of Ellen Currie's first novel, Available Light, a web where ties of home, family and motel-room romance become intractably knotted.

Currie's narrative is episodic, varied through stand-up routines and dramatic letters and expose chapters. Revealed through these is a cast which includes Kitty's old ma, a tart, keen, Irish, agoraphobic widow; Kitty's fellow bad workshop poet, a painter of pornographic canine miniatures; and Kitty's physician brother-in-law, married to a fallen nun and converted to Catholicism because, he confesses, "I didn't like being Jewish . . . It was too vivid."

CENTRAL to the action is the "awful Dorinda", a creature in red metallic high-heeled boots, oracular not in her pronouncements — "You dork," "Pond scum," "Retardo," "Gimme a break," "No way," — but in her delivery. For "Drindy", bedded by every male in the book, is pregnant. Her baby is up for grabs, and all those with paternal claims, or instincts, are placing bids.

The subplots of Available Light are both satiric and fanciful. The experiences of Kitty's sister, Eileen, are particularly well drawn. As a corporate image consultant she is employed in gauging consumer reaction to disposable diapers. "We're getting such rich verbatims," she reports. Later, during "mall intercept" — interviewing in a parking lot mothers-to-be — she experiences immaculate conception.

KITTY'S STINT as "media representative" for a company of apple growers is also handled with wit, from auditions for the role of "Apple Witch", through her whirlwind tour of the Quad Cities.

While sure-fire in the main, Currie's narration falters occasionally. Some of her one-liners are tiresome and glib. Parts of Kitty's "confession" are precious; the letters from her lover can be irritatingly portentous. And, having weathered nymphomania, incestuous amor matris, child desertion, hysterical pregnancy and dog bites, it's a bit much to be treated with cancer: "The hormones that fed the baby were feeding the cancer too . . ."

When, on top of this, we get The Fatal Car Wreck, it becomes certain that this tale's quota of melodrama has been exceeded.

Currie is at her best in dialogue which is often wry and pithy. The level of irony, as well as the surprises she unfurls, is well managed. A novel quite funny and touching at times, overall, Available Light is just that — quick witted and light.

USA-USSR to meet at Sports Festival

HOUSTON (UPI) — Athletes from the Soviet Union will compete in the U.S. Olympic Festival for the first time in what officials hope will begin a new era of amateur competition, a U.S. Olympic Committee spokesman said Tuesday.

Soviet athletes competing in boxing, cycling and figure skating will take on American medal winners at the Festival, which opens July 25 in Houston.

The festival, formerly the National Sports Festival, has been held every non-Olympic year since 1979 and has featured solely top American amateur athletes. More than 3,000 American athletes are expected to compete in 34 sports this year in the Festival.

Plans call for the highest-ranking Americans in Festival competition in the three sports to oppose a Soviet team following all Festival sessions in that sport.

Figure skating between Soviets and Americans will take place July 28, with medal winners in the men's, women's, pairs and ice dancing divisions participating. Moran said the event will be an exhibition and will not be judged.

Cycling competition is scheduled for July 29 and will include men's and women's sprints, men's and women's individual pursuit, men's team pursuit and the men's kilo race while boxing matches in six weight categories will take place Aug. 2.

Whiskers are costing Twins' Blyleven

Bert Blyleven is growing a beard, and the whiskers are costing him $50 a day.

Blyleven, who shaved his beard when he was dealt to Minnesota from Cleveland last Aug. 1, has agreed to pay the daily fine in a deal worked out with Twins president Howard Fox. The ballclub has a rule stating all players must be clean shaven when in uniform.

The veteran right-hander decided to grow the beard after giving up eight runs in 1-2-3 innings against Chicago a week ago. He allowed three home runs in that game and has surrendered 27 this season, well ahead of the American League record pace of 43 set by Pedro Ramos in 1957 with the former Washington Senators.

"I just want it back. I don't like that rule," Blyleven said. None of the other Twins plan to sprout whiskers like Blyleven.

"I'm jealous," Twins outfielder Mickey Hatcher said. "I can't grow one. I'm still trying to get hair on my chest."

Braves snap five-game losing streak

ATLANTA (UPI) — Candy Maldonado, who tied the score with a ninth-inning pinch hit homer, delivered a two-run single with two outs and the bases loaded in the 10th inning Tuesday night to lift the San Francisco Giants to a 9-6 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

The loss snapped Atlanta's five-game winning streak and made a winner of reliever Jeff Robinson, who pitched the final two innings to improve to 5-2.

Seaver wins his first start for Boston

BOSTON (UPI) — Dwight Evans drove in three runs with a first-inning bases-clearing double Tuesday night to make Tom Seaver victorious in his first start for Boston and lead the Red Sox to a 9-7 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Seaver, 3-6, scattered nine hits while walking two and striking out two over the first seven innings to earn his first victory since April 23. Joe Sambito pitched the final 1-2-3 innings to post his seventh save of the season.

Hagler ready to face Leonard

BROCKTON, Mass. (UPI) — Undisputed middleweight boxing champion Marvyn Hagler is expected to announce Wednesday that he will fight Sugar Ray Leonard instead of meeting Thomas Hearns in a rematch.

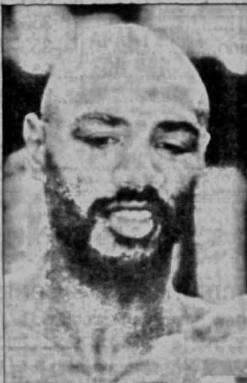

Hagler has scheduled an 11:30 a.m. EDT news conference at a restaurant in his hometown of Brockton to reveal his long-awaited decision.

Money is the major reason it is believed Hagler will take on Leonard instead of Hearns. It has been reported that a Hagler-Leonard bout in November could be worth $15 million, $10 million of which would go to Hagler.

GOODY AND PAT Petronelli, Hagler's co-managers, told The Brockton Enterprise Tuesday that Hagler had not informed them of his decision.

"Marvin's making the decision. We don't know what he's going to do," Pat Petronelli said. "Ever since he was 15 we made the decisions for him. I think he deserved to do this. It was something he wanted to do."

"Whatever he decides we'll

abide by it. He can't make a wrong choice."

Hagler, 32, scored a third-round technical knockout over Hearns in a stirring Las Vegas, Nev., brawl in March 1985. Hearns, 27, the World Boxing Council super welterweight champion, has since sought a rematch.

However, Hearns was mediocre in scoring an eighth-round

TKO against Mark Medal in Las Vegas last week. In addition, Hearns reinjured his right hand against Medal further fueling speculation that Hagler would choose Leonard as his next opponent.

LEONARD, 30, whose career record is 33-1, retired as undisputed welterweight and junior middleweight champ in November 1982, after undergoing surgery for a detached retina in his left eye.

He returned to the ring in May 1984 against relative unknown Kevin Howard. After scoring an unimpressive ninth-round TKO, Leonard, who was knocked down by Howard, again retired. But he announced May 1 he would fight once more — but only if he could get a shot at Hagler.

A spokesman said Leonard would have no immediate comment on Hagler's decision, but planned a news conference for early next week in Bethesda, Md., at his restaurant or the office of his lawyer.

Spokesmen for the Hearns camp could not be reached for comment.

HAGLER, 62-2-2, was expected to make his announcement at last week's triple-header card in Las Vegas, which featured the Hearns-Medal bout, but instead said he had the flu and stayed in Massachusetts.

The champion's last fight was a tough 11th-round KO of John "The Beast" Mugabi on March 10 in Las Vegas.

Dr. Ronald Michels of the Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore, who performed the surgery on Leonard, said the boxer's eyes should not be a factor in his plans.

"My feeling is that Ray's surgery was successful," Michels said. "His eyes are stable. I think he's in the position to make the decision he wants for his career."

"I don't think he's at any higher risk than anybody else. There's an inherent risk in fighting, but he's not at any higher risk."

Leonard's only loss, in June 1980 to Roberto Duran, was avenged six months later in the famous "No Mas" bout in New Orleans, when Duran quit in the eighth round against Leonard.

Lendl, Lloyd 'sweat out' wins

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Chris Evert Lloyd and Ivan Lendl, following the theme that has marked this Wimbledon, flirted with disaster Tuesday before sweating out victories in 110 degree heat.

Evert Lloyd, the second seed, overcame two set points in the opening set tie-breaker before disposing of No. 7 Helena Sukova, 7-6 (10-8), 4-6, 6-4, to reach the semifinals at Wimbledon for the 14th time.

Even after she jumped to a 5-2 lead in the final set, Evert Lloyd squandered three match points in the ninth game and had her service broken. The 31-year-old Floridian broke back in the 10th game at love to complete the 2 hour and 2 minute match.

"It was tough," said Evert Lloyd, who is 13-0 against the tall Czechoslovakian whose mother, Vera, lost the Wimbledon final on the same Court in 1962. "But at 5-4 I hit some good returns and a good passing shot. I knew she wasn't going to make four errors. I had to win that game, and I did."

LENDL WAS DRAGGED through three tie-breakers, surviving four set points against him in the final one, before subduing American Matt Anger, ranked 29th in the world, to claim a berth in the quarterfinals.

The top seed from Czechoslovakia, who never has been in a Wimbledon final, finished a 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 7-6 (12-10) victory over Anger in a match that had been suspended by darkness Monday at 2-2 in the third set.

Top seed Martina Navratilova continued to move along with little resistance in her bid for a fifth successive Wimbledon crown. The left-handed American ripped Bettina Bunge, 6-1, 6-3, to reach the semifinals for the ninth year in a row.

Navratilova, together with her parents and sister for the first time since 1980, has yielded 21 games in five matches, dropping her service only three times.

IN THE SEMIFINALS it will be Navratilova against 10th seed Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina and Evert Lloyd against No. 3 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia.

Sabatini, at 16 years and 1 month, became the youngest Wimbledon semifinalist this century when she defeated No. 15 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden, 6-2, 6-3, and Mandlikova overcame unseeded American Lori McNeil, 6-7 (4-7), 6-0, 6-2.

Lottie Dod was 15 years and 10 months when she won Wimbledon in 1887. The previous youngest semifinalist this century was Tracy Austin, who achieved that distinction in 1979 at 16 years and 6 months.

"I'm very happy to find out it's a record," Sabatini said. "I hope now there'll be a rule that no one under 17 can play in a Grand Slam so I'll keep the record."

LENDL WILL BE facing his first seeded player of the tournament, No. 10 Tim Mayotte, Wednesday. Lendl is 10-0 against Mayotte.

"He's going to serve and volley and I'm going to serve and volley and I think it will be a question of who is more solid," Lendl said. "I don't think either of us is going to come out and win the match on winners off the other guy's serve."

In the other quarterfinals it will be defending champion Boris Becker, the No. 4 seed, against Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia, No. 7 Henri Leconte of France against Australian Pat Cash and Ramesh Krishnan of India against Slobodan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia.

There were no service breaks in the opening set of the match between Evert Lloyd and Sukova, leading to the tie-break in which Sukova had set points at 7-6 and 8-7.

Theismann to 'tell all' in his book

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Joe Theismann, the outspoken quarterback of the Washington Redskins, will inspect the behind-the-scenes world of pro football in an autobiography due in the fall of 1987, his publisher said Tuesday.

Contemporary Books, a Chicago-based publishing house that specializes in athlete's stories, advanced Theismann a "six figure sum" for rights to his autobiography, said Donna Adkins, Contemporary's publicity director.

Theismann, 36, is recovering from a career-threatening compound fracture of the lower right leg suffered in a game last Nov. 18 against the New York Giants. Theismann could earn about $1.2 million if he makes the Redskins' active roster this season, but must be declared physically ready to perform by team doctors in training camp starting July 20 in Carlisle, Pa.

"I THINK IT could definitely be a best-seller," Adkins said of the autobiography. "He's ready to tell it all."

Adkins would not reveal how much Theismann will be paid for the book.

David Kindred, a sports columnist with the Atlanta Constitution and a former writer for The Washington Post, will co-write the book, Adkins said.

Adkins said the book will probe Theismann's relationships with coaches, teammates and foes in the NFL, including running back John Riggins and Washington coach Joe Gibbs, and will reveal the "cheap-shot" artists in the league.

It also will include chapters on his divorce from his wife, Shari, and his relationship with television actress Cathy Lee Crosby, Adkins added.

"I NEEDED TIME to reflect on the changes in my life," Theismann said in a release. "Believe me, I'm not leaving anything out."

The hardcover book is scheduled to be released nationwide in September 1987, coinciding with the start of the NFL season.

In his 12 NFL seasons and three in the Canadian Football League, Theismann has established himself as one of the top quarterbacks of his era. He led the Redskins to a Super Bowl victory in 1982 and was the NFL's Most Valuable Player in 1983, when the Redskins were defeated in Super Bowl XVIII by the Los Angeles Raiders.

Adkins said negotiations with Theismann began in March and the quarterback already has started work on the book.

Cub pitcher falls from 'dream' year

CHICAGO (UPI) - A little more than one year ago, a national sports publication (Sports Illustrated) selected a "dream" team and had Chicago Cubs' right-hander Rick Sutcliffe on their pitching staff.

The assessment was based on Sutcliffe's 16-1 campaign that led the Cubs to the National League Eastern Division title in 1984 and also earned him the Cy Young Award.

But since that time Sutcliffe's career has been anything but a dream. It has become more of a nightmare.

Monday, Sutcliffe was placed on the disabled list for the fourth time in the past year. The latest diagnosis was an inflamed shoulder.

"LET'S JUST say it hasn't been there," Sutcliffe said. "My freedom (of motion) and arm strength haven't been real good."

Sutcliffe's 4-10 record (he has the most losses in the National League) were disconcerting enough to the struggling Cubs. In each appearance Sutcliffe has made this season, the talk was how the bearded right-hander had lost so much since 1984.

"In 1984, he would get that curve ball over for a strike and then zip you with a fastball on the outside corner," said Mets' second baseman Wally Backman. "I don't know what it is but it isn't there anymore."

Theories abound as to the downfall of Sutcliffe. The one most prominent is that Sutcliffe, who suffered a partially torn hamstring last May running to first in Atlanta, came back too soon from the injury. Instead of taking the three to six weeks to rehabilitate himself, he lobbied for a quicker return.

HE SPENT THREE tours of time on the disabled list last year, two after the hamstring injury. Some scouts suggest he altered his delivery to compensate for the leg injury, thus causing problems to his shoulder and entire pitching motion.

"They tell me now that last year I did it my way, this year they want to do it their way," Sutcliffe said.

Asked if he wanted to go on the disabled list this latest time, Sutcliffe shrugged, "that's not for me to decide."

New manager Gene Michael insists Sutcliffe isn't seriously injured.

"He isn't injured. After he pitches, he has some problems," Michael said. "Usually by the time he's ready to pitch again, it's close to being right."

Big Ten reveals largest TV package ever

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (UPI) — The Big Ten Conference Tuesday unveiled a list of 16 nationally televised basketball games for the 1986-87 season, including Illinois at North Carolina, Syracuse at Michigan and Louisville at Purdue.

The line-up also includes Arizona at Illinois and Iowa at Arizona, where former Hawk-eye Coach Lute Olson led the Wildcats to the NCAA Tournament last year.

In addition to the network appearances, league officials announced a list of 10 conference games to be telecast live by national cable syndicator ESPN as part of a weekly double-header package with the Big East Conference.

A TOTAL OF 43 of 90 Big Ten Conference games will end up on being televised by either CBS-TV, NBC-TV, ABC-TV, ESPN or the Big Ten television network, Big Ten spokesman Mark Rudner said.

"Big Ten men's basketball teams will have more television exposure than at any other time in conference history next season," he said.

CBS will carry 11 games beginning with Illinois vs. North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Saturday, Dec. 20, 1 p.m. (EST).

Those games are part of the second year of a three-year contract the league signed with CBS.

Big Ten teams will battle for exposure on different networks Jan. 18 when CBS features Syracuse at Michigan, 2:30 p.m., and ABC televises defending national champion Louisville at Purdue, 4 p.m.

ABC PLANS ONLY two other games, Michigan at Michigan

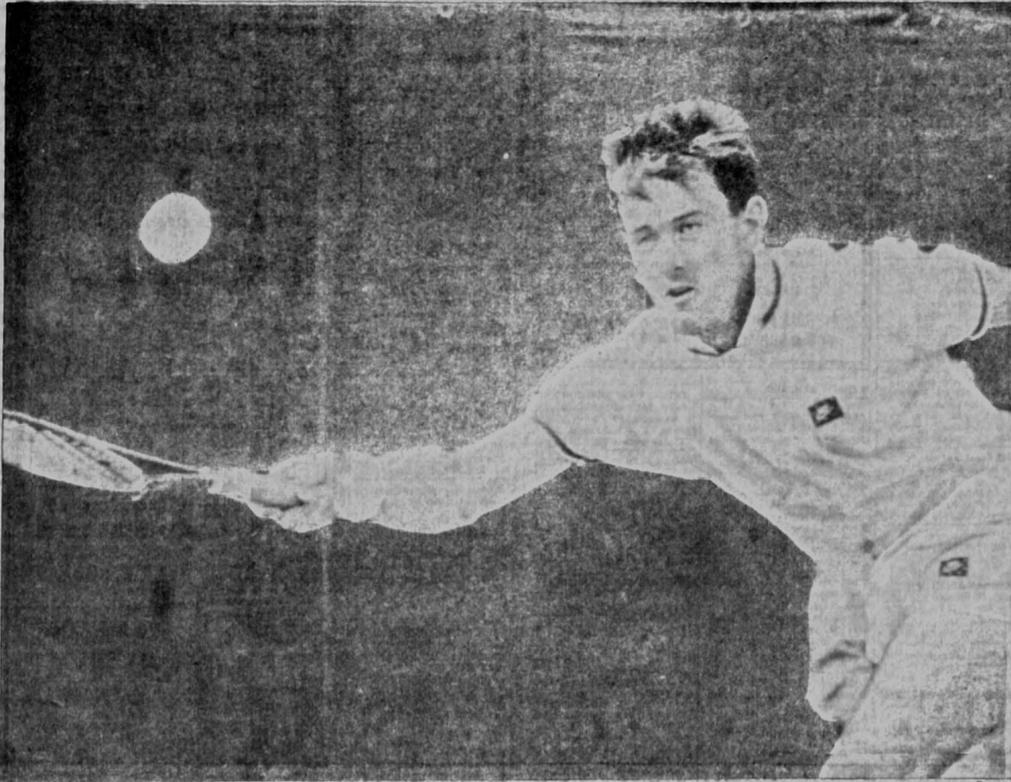

State Feb. 15 and Indiana at Illinois March 1.

Iowa is included in three of the four games to be televised by NBC. In addition to the Arizona at Illinois Jan. 24, NBC plans to air Illinois at Iowa Feb. 14, Iowa at Indiana Feb. 21 and Michigan at Iowa Feb. 28.

Former Iowa Coach George Raveling was one of the coaches who pushed hardest for a contract between the Big Ten and major television networks. However, he resigned in March to take the top job at the University of Southern California and has been replaced by former Stanford Coach Tom Davis.

The other CBS games are Michigan at Illinois Jan. 3, Indiana at Ohio State Jan. 4, Iowa at Michigan Jan. 31, Michigan at Indiana Feb. 7, Purdue at Michigan Mar. 7 and Ohio State at Indiana March 7.

Thirteenth seed Mikael Pernfors returns a shot to No. 4 seed Boris Becker during Wimbledon action Tuesday. Becker, who defeated Pernfors in straight sets, 6-3, 7-6, 6-2, will play Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia in the men's singles quarterfinals. See story, page 7.

Banks: Cubs can come back

By Brad Zimaneck
Assistant Sports Editor

The Chicago Cubs are off to 29-43 start. But according to Hall of Famer Ernie Banks the Cubs can come back from a record, which is now last in the National League, and make a run at the Eastern Division flag.

"I know they're off to a poor start," Banks, who played for the Cubs from 1953-71 and never appeared in post season competition, said. "But if their pitching improves I think they can challenge the Mets before it's all done."

Banks has more optimism than most Cub fans. One thing that he definitely likes about

"I know they're off to a poor start," says former Cubs shortstop Ernie Banks. "But if their pitching improves I think they can challenge the Mets before it's all done."

this year's Cubs is shortstop Shawon Dunston's play.

"He's much better than I was," Banks, who played shortstop for the Cubs for more than half of his career, said. "He's much faster. It's different play today. They are playing on AstroTurf. You have to be quick, have a strong arm and have great instincts on the field and he has all those qualities."

"During my day we had smaller ballparks and slower fields and we didn't have to be as fast."

DUNSTON THIS season has also proven he can hit for power. Banks, the National League MVP for 1958 and 1959, believes this and a "feel for the game" may help Dunston win a few MVP awards for himself before his career is over.

"He has great abilities. He understands the game. He has a good feel for the players on the team. He has a great future in baseball," Banks said. "In the near future he could win a few Most Valuable Player awards as a part of the Cubs."

After Tuesday's rain-postponed contest against the Expos, Dunston is hitting .281 with 8 home runs and 31 RBIs.

If Dunston continues at this pace he could reach 20 home runs and 80 RBIs in his first full season in the major leagues. For the time being at least, though, it looks like Banks' team record of 47 home runs from the shortstop position will not be broken.

Wisconsin placed on probation

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — The NCAA notified the University of Wisconsin Tuesday it has placed the athletic department on two-years probation because of a 1982 improper loan involving former UW-Madison basketball star Cory Blackwell.

The university has 15 days to appeal, but university officials indicated the punishment was light considering the NCAA could have prohibited television appearances, post-season championship games or other sanctions.

This is the university's fourth major NCAA violation in four years. A recruiting violation resulted in a prohibition on television appearances for the 1985 regular football season.

representative of the university's interests is not allowed to make loans or loan guarantees to or for athletes.

The NCAA also said it was satisfied with disciplinary actions the university has taken.

"We are pleased that the (NCAA) Infractions Committee has adopted the actions taken by the university in response to the findings of the special investigator."

However, the NCAA report requires further study and consultation within the university. For that reason, we cannot comment further until we have had time to consider the university's response," Shain said.

BLACKWELL, NOW 22, was a Badger starter for three seasons before leaving a year early in 1984 to pursue a professional basketball career. He played 60 games for the Seattle SuperSonics in the 1984-1985 season before being cut.

"Probation means if we are discovered to be in violation in the future, there might be more serious sanctions," said Art Hove, assistant to Madison Chancellor Irving Shain.

The NCAA agreed with special investigator Thomas Schneider, hired by the university to investigate the matter, that Badger financial contributor Donald Eisenberg violated NCAA rules by personally guaranteeing a loan to Blackwell in 1982.

Schneider also found Blackwell accepted a second loan from Alice Onsrud, another Badger supporter.

THE NCAA also concluded Blackwell should have been declared ineligible because of the loan and not allowed to play.

Under NCAA rules, a representative of the university's interests is not allowed to make loans or loan guarantees to or for athletes.

The NCAA also said it was satisfied with disciplinary actions the university has taken.

"We are pleased that the (NCAA) Infractions Committee has adopted the actions taken by the university in response to the findings of the special investigator."

However, the NCAA report requires further study and consultation within the university. For that reason, we cannot comment further until we have had time to consider the university's response," Shain said.

In addition, the university will forfeit all victories between 1982 and 1984 in which Blackwell participated. Also, Blackwell's records will be removed from the school's record book.

The NCAA report also said the NCAA's enforcement staff will review the athletic policies at the end of each probationary year, which will include an in-person visit to the campus.

Because of the forfeits Iowa will be credited with another victory during the 1982-83 season. On January 22, 1983, Wisconsin defeated Iowa, 65-62, at the Wisconsin Fieldhouse in a contest which Blackwell scored 18 points.
