Hospitals in turmoil over unit merger

By Dan McClain
Staff Writer
and Lewis Wayne Greene
University Editor

UI Hospitals and the largest private hospital in Iowa last week announced a joint program that left administrators at a third Iowa hospital steaming.

UI Hospitals, site of the only kidney transplant program in Iowa, and Iowa Methodist Medical Center last week made public their agreement to establish a biweekly Chronic Renal Disease and Transplantation Clinic at Iowa Methodist in Des Moines.

Under the program, Iowa Methodist patients will be screened at the new clinic for kidney transplants at UI Hospitals. Follow-up care would be provided for Des Moines-area patients at the clinic.

"WE WERE SURPRISED and shocked that they made the announcement without continuing talks with us," William Maurer, a spokesman for Mercy Hospital Medical Center in Des Moines, said.

Mercy officials first approached UI Hospitals last December in an effort to set up a similar clinic at Mercy, but negotiations were broken off by UI Hospitals, he said. The talks resumed and progress was being made up to the day the UI Hospitals-Iowa Methodist agreement was announced, Maurer said.

UI Hospitals Director of Public Affairs Dean Borg said UI Hospitals continuously offered Mercy the opportunity to be involved in the new program, but Mercy officials did not indicate whether they did or did not wish to become involved in the clinic.

UI HOSPITALS and Iowa Methodist made the Chronic Renal Disease and Transplantation Clinic agreement last March but had to postpone its announcement while they waited for Mercy officials to make a decision, he said.

"If Mercy wants to join, they are still welcome to do so," Borg said.

Mercy is still interested in continuing its negotiations with UI Hospitals, but would insist that the actual transplant surgery be done by Mercy surgeons in Des Moines, Maurer said.

Both Mercy and Iowa Methodist applied to become federally approved kidney transplant centers in March, but are still waiting for a decision from the U.S. Health Care Financing Administration.

Maurer said the seven heart transplants performed at Mercy are proof that his hospital is ready to do kidney transplants as well. It only makes sense for the state to have more than one kidney transplant center, he said, adding that other Midwestern states have more than one kidney transplant facility.

"WE BELIEVE there's a definite need for two and maybe even three," said Robert Corry, director of UI Hospitals Transplantation Program, published in last month's edition of Iowa Medicine. Corry argues that Iowa must keep its kidney transplantation program centralized at UI Hospitals if high quality is to be maintained.

"The issue in Iowa is whether to maintain one organ transplant program carefully developed over 16 years with substantial investments in human and capital resources, and which has achieved national and international recognition for its quality, or to risk having two or more mediocre programs or none at all," he wrote.

Branstad's hiring policy questioned

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

A statewide hiring freeze that forbids the Johnson County Department of Human Services from replacing two social workers has prompted county officials to charge Gov. Terry Branstad with ignoring his obligation to human services.

In addition, members of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors say the state's decision to replace two social workers in the county shortly before the June 3 primary was politically motivated.

Although the state allowed Johnson County to fill two positions for child protective workers last month, two workers have since resigned, effective July 24. The positions remain unfilled, leaving the county in the same position as before.

"My question is if the funds existed for those people hired

Betty Ockenfels

On June 1, what happened on July 1? board chairman Dick Myers said.

BOARD MEMBER Betty Ockenfels also said she believes the positions filled in June were allowed for political reasons.

"It certainly could have been a very good issue," Ockenfels said of the worker shortage during the primary campaign.

Two of the county's six social workers are funded by the Board of Supervisors, while the state is to provide funds for the remainder.

"We're keeping our end of the bargain," board chairman Dick Myers said. "I think the governor has abandoned his responsibility to human services."

Carol Thompson, director of the Department of Human Services, said the department is grossly understaffed and overworked. Of 37 positions authorized by the state, 65 remain vacant.

"IT'S IMPOSSIBLE. Every day we look at the work not getting done," Thompson said. Seven workers have resigned since February, and Thompson son attributed the turnover to stressful conditions created by the staff shortage.

"Other years I haven't had this turnover," she said.

The shortage is not unique to Johnson County. The statewide hiring freeze, coupled with funding shortages, will allow for a very limited number of the nearly 200 positions requested to be filled across the state, said Bill Krohl, former state comptroller.

Krohl said the constraints require local offices to submit requests to the state which are reviewed on basis of need.

"The position has to be essential to the health and well-being and maintenance of the state," Krohl said. Doctors, nurses, and prison guards, for example, are given higher priority over social workers, he said.

UNFILLED VACANCIES mean more work for remaining social workers, who are

Mandela release demanded

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Eight South African business leaders called Sunday for the government to free imprisoned African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela and legalize the outlawed black revolutionary group.

Gordon Waddell, head of Johannesburg Consolidated Investments, a mining firm, told the Johannesburg Sunday Star: "We cannot start to find a solution unless Mandela is part of the process."

Gavin Reilly, chairman of the giant Anglo-American Corporation, told the newspaper, "I have always taken the view that whether one likes the ANC or not ... it constitutes an important factor in the South African political setup."

Southern Life Insurance chief

Neil Chapman said, "There can be no meaningful decision on South Africa without Mandela's release and the unbanning of the ANC."

THE EXECUTIVES were asked by the Johannesburg Sunday Star to comment on Mandela's status and other aspects of South Africa's racial crisis.

Mandela is now serving the 23rd year of a life sentence for sabotage and the government says he must renounce violence to gain his freedom.

The executives' statements were not the first calls by South African business leaders for freeing Mandela, but were significant because a state of emergency imposed

June 12, among other things, bans subversive statements.

The government definition of subversive statements includes any that "contains anything which is calculated to have the effect or is likely to have the effect ... of promoting any object of any organization which has, under any law, been declared to be an unlawful organization."

PENALTIES FOR making such statements can be meted out both to the speakers and to those who transmit them. It was not immediately clear if the statements would be considered illegal by the authorities.

The newspaper solicited the comments of the eight business and industry leaders and published them in advance of a visit by British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe, who was expected to attempt to head off economic sanctions against South Africa by the European Community, which has also called for Mandela's freedom.

The statements also came as the Bureau of Information said in Pretoria that one of 20 people wounded in a bombing Friday — the 13th in the nation in three weeks — remained in serious condition.

THE BOMB EXPLODED outside a Pretoria department store during the evening rush hour.

No one has claimed responsibility for the most recent blasts.

Inmate takes guard hostage in Michigan

YPSILANTI, Mich. — An unarmed prisoner, apparently unhappy with his pending transfer to another state prison, held a female guard hostage Sunday at the Huron Valley Men's Correctional Facility and released her unharmed five hours later, a prison spokeswoman said.

Tim Meeker, 41, serving a life sentence for first-degree murder, captured guard Sharon Hall hostage about 1:15 p.m. when she opened the door to his cell during a routine search and handcuffed her to his bed, prison spokeswoman Marilyn Marshall said.

Pete Seeger to join peace march

COUNCIL BLUFFS — The 600 protesters who have completed half of their coast-to-coast march for peace will be joined by folk singer Pete Seeger when they reach Anita, Iowa, this week, organizers said.

Seeger said Saturday he will bring to western Iowa a peace banner, to be signed by all participants in the Great Peace March For Global Nuclear Disarmament.

He said he plans to take the banner to Japan in August for the 41st anniversary of the Hiroshima nuclear bomb.

Pope under heavy security in Colombia

BUCARAMANGA, Colombia — Pope John Paul II, defying the dangers of a nearby smoking volcano, delivered a prayer Sunday for hope and recovery from the destruction of a 1985 mudslide that killed 23,000 people.

The pope then traveled to Bucaramanga where security was especially tight in the city of 350,000 and the industrial and cattle-raising center of eastern Colombia.

Military authorities deployed tanks to help protect the pope — who traveled to Bucaramanga after a brief stopover south of Armero — for the first time in his seven-day visit to Colombia.

On June 10, left-wing guerrillas occupied a seminary the pope was visiting Sunday.

Spanish 'running of bulls' commences

PAMPLONA, Spain — Thousands of cheering revelers Sunday marked the start of the feast of San Fermín and heralded the ritual running of the bulls — a centuries-old test of courage.

Before the festival ends July 14, about 300,000 revelers are expected to flock to the ancient Basque city to drink, dance and celebrate the feast that American Ernest Hemingway described in his novel, The Sun Also Rises.

Festival-goers will be up at dawn Monday to witness the "encierro" or running of the bulls by those willing to defy death in a ritual begun centuries ago.

Escaped prisoners caught in cornfield

FORT MADISON, Iowa — A southeast Iowa cornfield turned out to be a poor hiding place for two convicts who were recaptured Sunday after escaping from the Augusta prison farm during the weekend.

Danny Shaffer, 26, Monroe County, and James Ziegler, 23, Marshall County were found Sunday afternoon hiding in a field near Weyer in northern Lee County, a little more than 24 hours after they walked away from the farm.

Vigilantes capture group of illegal aliens

PHOENIX — A paramilitary group captured 15 illegal aliens in Arizona near the Mexican border and held them at gunpoint for 90 minutes until Border Patrol agents arrived, an immigration official said Sunday.

Twenty heavily armed members of the anti-communist group known as Civilian Materiel Assistance apprehended the aliens Saturday about three miles north of the border, said Harold Ezell, regional commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Ezell criticized the action in the Lochiel Valley — 30 miles east of Nogales — as dangerous and "bizarre."

Wiesel criticizes U.S. immigration policy

NEW YORK — Smudges on the nation's record were cited Sunday by Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel during closing sessions of Liberty Weekend's symposium "Liberty: The Next 100 Years."

Wiesel said he found America's liberty record less than perfect due to its opposition to the sanctuary movement, jailing of some refugees and sticking to immigration quotas.

"Liberty in our country is not in such good condition, as a result," said Wiesel, Boston University humanities professor and chairman of the United States Holocaust Memorial Council.

Speaker protests Guard in Honduras

Robyn R. Wright
Staff Writer

Tentative plans to send the Iowa National Guard to Honduras in mid-August are part of a program that will eventually lead to another Vietnam War, an opponent of U.S. military presence in Central America claimed Sunday.

Peggy Moore, coordinator of the National Clearinghouse on National Guard involvement in Central America, said in her speech that she is concerned that Iowans — and Americans in general — are not aware of the "true purpose" behind sending troops to Honduras.

"The National Guard is being used to set the stage for another Vietnam," Moore told a group of about 15 people.

The 209th medical company from the Iowa National Guard is scheduled to train in Honduras in mid-August, although those plans have not been finalized. Gov. Terry Branstad has not granted formal approval to the trip, but state National Guard troops will automatically be sent by the Department of Defense if no response is given.

MOORE SAID Iowans are

Hondurans, it's going to harm them."

As governor, Branstad has sole authority over whether or not to send troops.

"My concern is the safety of the unit and we sent down an advance unit that concluded that conditions were safe," he said during a press conference in May.

Governors from Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, New Mexico, Vermont and Washington have refused to allow their National Guard troops to participate in training in Central America.

The National Clearinghouse was created by the St. Louis Pledge of Resistance, an organization that resists U.S. military presence in Central America.

Moore said the National Clearinghouse is working at a grassroots level because "each city or state has its own concerns and the issues are different in each location."

An Iowa City man who was indicted in connection with the April robbery of a local bank is being held in a Las Vegas, Nev. jail in lieu of $12,000 bond.

Danny J. Gerbasi, formerly of 1830 I St., was charged by Las Vegas police with three counts of possession of forged financial instruments. Gerbasi was arrested at a hotel June 26 after he reportedly attempted to cash a stolen traveler's check. He will make an initial appearance in Clark County District Court July 16.

Gerbasi allegedly erased a signature on a stolen check and signed his own, according to security personnel from the Tropicana Hotel in Las Vegas.

Because Gerbasi reportedly erased a signature and replaced it with his name, he could not be charged with forgery. Nevada law provides that forgery charges can be filed if a person steals and endorses an unsigned check.

Locally, Gerbasi is sought on an armed robbery charge stemming from the April 22 holdup of the Sycamore Mall Branch of the Hawkeye State Bank. He was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury April 24.

A local man filed suit in Johnson County District Court last week against a tavern, an employee of the tavern and another patron in connection with an alleged assault that took place at the Johnson County Post No. 2581 Veterans of Foreign Wars, 1002 Gilbert Court.

Joseph Mendez, 1012 N. Governor St., alleges that the VFW and Peggy Hipp, manager of the establishment, failed to "exercise ordinary care" for the safety of patrons at the tavern when Mendez was assaulted by Fred Yeggy, 22 Caroline Court.

According to court documents, Mendez was knocked over a table, struck and kicked by Yeggy while the two were at the VFW on October 19, 1984.

The suit claims that Mendez suffers permanent back injury, past and future medical expenses, past and future loss of wages and mental and physical pain.

The suit demands judgment against the VFW, Hipp and Yeggy in an unspecified amount sufficient to compensate Mendez for damages and injuries.

John Patrick Seagrave, Iowa City, made an initial appearance Thursday in Johnson County District Court on two charges of prohibited acts.

Seagrave was arrested early Thursday on east Burlington Street by Iowa City police after officers reportedly observed him urinating in the street. Upon arrest, officers discovered LSD and marijuana in Seagrave's possessions, court documents state.

Seagrave was initially arrested on charges of public intoxication and public urination. He is scheduled for a July 17 preliminary hearing.

Three local residents reported weekend burglaries to Iowa City police but nothing was stolen, according to reports.

Doug Halverson, 409 E. Jefferson St., told police that his residence was broken into Saturday.

Shelton Stranquist, 316 Myrtle Ave., told officers his home was broken into last week.

Mark Ramsey, 223 Melrose Court, also told police that a residence at 229 Melrose Court was broken into Friday night.

Women bare chests in porn protest

By Lewis Wayne Greene
University Editor

CEDAR BLUFF, Iowa — Five members of the Women's Freedom Front paraded as topless Statues of Liberty through rural Cedar Bluff Friday to protest pornography depicting violence against women.

Group leader Melissa Farley, an Iowa City psychotherapist who has been arrested several times for acts of civil disobedience directed against pornography, said the display was a way to show her group does not oppose sexuality.

"When you oppose violent pornography you get linked with people who are pretty right-wing and Puritan," she said. "But we are in favor of nudity and sexuality."

INDEPENDENCE DAY was an ideal time for the protest,

Farley said.

A statement distributed by the group said: "We demand the right to control our own bodies — to choose when we want to take our shirts off."

"Going shirtless is a political act," the statement said. "Sexuality, nudity and openly displayed breasts are not obscene."

Along with Farley were Theresa Helmke, Grace Hunter, Hanson Droid and Sandy Bricker, all of Iowa City.

The protesters ripped up copies of Penthouse magazine from atop their float. They were accompanied by three men from their Men's Support Auxillary, who re-created the famous scene of Marines raising the flag over Iwo Jima while dressed as recognizable male success stereotypes.

JOHN RILEY, dressed as a doctor, said men must also become involved in the fight against violent pornography.

"We want to raise men's awareness about pornography," he said. "I think that there is a connection between violent porn and violence against women."

The annual Cedar Bluff parade, which has a reputation for attracting odd and politically-oriented displays, brought thousands of onlookers this year.

The reaction of the crowd to the semi-nude women ranged from cheers to jeers.

Angry watchers pelted the women with ice, stones and water balloons. One man charged out of the crowd and grabbed Farley's chest, but was pushed back by a member of the men's auxillary.

"We're expecting all kinds," Farley said. "People are phobic about women's bodies."

ONE PARADE participant, Jacque Lenihan of Solon, Iowa was irate over Farley's actions.

"We're trying to teach children the right things and respect for other people and it doesn't seem these people have this right," she said.

But other onlookers, both men and women, expressed support for the protest.

"I think it was neat. They let everything out," Ruth Reckling of Mount Vernon, Iowa, said. But Reckling quickly added that she didn't think she would be able to take part in a similar action.

Despite the presence of several officers from the Cedar County Sheriff's Department, there was no interference with the protest.

"I DON'T BELIEVE there's a law that really prohibits it," Deputy Sheriff George Miller Sr. said.

While the department had received several complaints about the women, he said the lack of applicable local laws kept him from stopping the display. He added that he wished the women would take their protest out of Cedar County.

Farley took his statement in stride. "I'm sorry; where I go, my breasts go," she said from atop the float.

After the parade Farley said she thought the protest had accomplished a great deal. "It feels like a very hard public service," she said.

But she declined answering questions about whether she would repeat her protest in other Iowa cities where it would be illegal.

Extension of paternity leave proposed for UI employees

By Michael O'Connor
Staff Writer

The UI grants up to five days of emergency sick leave to new fathers to care for family members after their wives give birth, but several groups are rallying for extension of the policy.

A recent report by the UI Council on the Status of Women focuses on a variety of issues related to parenting, including the idea of extending paternity leave.

UI Assistant Psychology Professor Carolyn Cutrona, who helped prepare the report, said extended paternity leave is important for a variety of reasons.

"The infant-father relationship in the early months are important for establishing a strong parental bond," she said. "And if early attachment is formed, the father may be motivated to be more involved in the childrearing."

WOMEN'S RESOURCE and Action Center Director Susan Buckley said the UI must have a policy that reflects the value of male participation in the child-rearing process.

"The freedom of women is increased when men share in the responsibility of raising children," she said.

"Freedom of women is increased when men share in the responsibility of raising children," says Susan Buckley, a proponent of extending paternity leave.

Women UI employees are allowed to use up to six weeks of accrued sick leave, without a physician's certificate of disability, following childbirth, according to the report. After that, unpaid sick leave is granted in three-month increments.

Besides the positive effects paternity leave has on families, offering it as an employee benefit could have positive effects on the UI as well, Cutrona said.

OFFERING PATERNITY leave would help the UI attract faculty and staff, she said. Paternity leave would be a very attractive employee benefit, she added.

Plans are underway to include a provision for paternity leave in November contract negotiations between the state and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, a local union official said Sunday.

"The chances are very good it will be in the initial offer," said Tom Jacobs of the union's Local 12. "It could be comparable to the maternity leave offered women, but we will not know for sure until negotiations begin this fall."

Another AFSCME official, Jan Corderman, said, "If the state is the kind of employer that takes note of a person's life outside work, they will listen."

Radical action

Five Iowa City women rode in Saturday's Cedar Bluff, Iowa, parade — bare-chested. The women, who were pelted with rocks, dog food and water balloons along the route, had stripped to the waist to protest social stigmas against women showing their breasts in public.

Melissa Farley and the newly organized Women's Freedom Front were in this tiny southeast Iowa town to fight an admirable battle. The women wanted to prove that the female body is not obscene and that it should not be marketed by pornographers.

Farley and her pornography-fighter friends are not new to this cause.

Sects of the anti-violent pornography group have stormed into stores and ripped up Penthouse magazines. They've sent teenagers marching through Iowa City carrying placards and inflatable sex dolls.

They've picketed. They've burned effigies of Penthouse Publisher Bob Guccione. And they've attended Meredith Corporation board meetings to protest the publication of the skin magazine.

The pornography fighters don't oppose nudity or sensuality. They advocate sex education, access to birth control and diverse, consenting sexual experience.

What they do oppose is dehumanization and glorification of violence. They object to the display of women's bodies to sell products and they object to the inequity of accepted dress codes designated for men and women.

Few can argue that violent pornography is wrong, that it promotes violent sex. What is arguable is the manner in which the Women's Freedom Front and similar groups have chosen to fight their battles.

Breaking laws and parading through towns half-clothed will attract attention — no doubt about it. But it will also close the minds of many who might agree with the cause if it were presented in a more "mainstream" manner.

Radical actions often elicit radical disapproval. To fight violent pornography and social oppression through educational programs, letter-writing campaigns and petitions would most likely produce more satisfactory results for all concerned.

Sink or swim

The United States has now ended a weekend orgy of self-congratulation, celebrating the birth of the nation and the 100th year of the Statue of Liberty — Lady Liberty as she has been so cutely dubbed — during which the issue of immigration received a shiny gloss.

Immigration in reality, unfortunately, is not suitable for such festivity.

America has never been a happy, open door. We had reasons for disliking and excluding virtually every ethnic group but the English. The Irish, to pick an example close to our president's heart, were considered irresponsible drunks. They even had to ride separate trolleys in Boston. The hostility shown toward Haitians and Mexicans is far closer to the truth than the television scenes of happily welcomed immigrants produced for ABC by David Wolper.

The problem now, besides the favoritism shown to some groups and the discrimination shown to others, is that America can no longer accept all who wish to come — and often do come illegally — and should not accept many of those it does.

Our borders, land and sea, are flooded with illegals; and, in accepting the well-educated and well-trained, we are frequently robbing other countries of the very resources they need to solve the problems that drive their fellow nationals to enter illegally.

Until the world is no longer so sharply divided into rich and poor nations and rich and poor within nations, and until torture and murder disappear as instruments of public policy, the United States will continue to be a lifeboat that rides ever lower in the water until it sinks.

A partial solution would be for the United States, Japan, Western Europe and the rich oil-producing states to create a fund to reduce the debt under which poor nations, like Mexico and the Philippines, are sinking.

The banks should be required to reduce interest rates, to swallow some losses (losses passed on to stockholders, not written off on taxes). The fund should be used to pay off a percentage of each country's debt and as development grants, not loans.

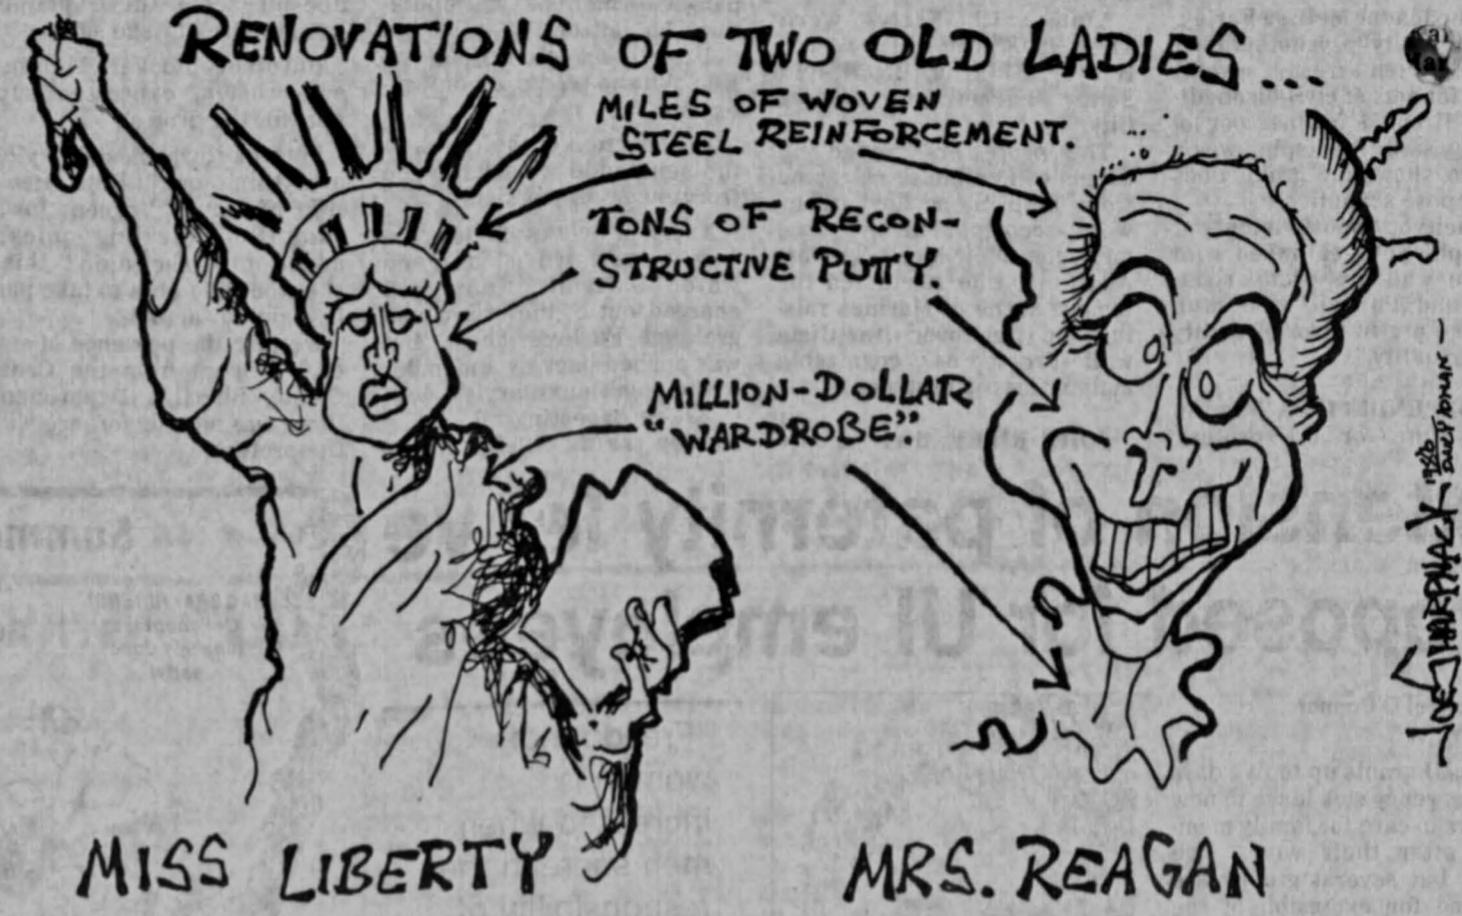

Another part of the solution would be for the Western nations to agree on tough sanctions against all regimes that use torture and murder to control their populations. That may be far less than the true democracy that is the ideal, but it would be sufficient for a start.

Such "utopian" solutions are pragmatic, not idealistic. The ties that bind us to each other are in fact chains and in the end all will survive or all will perish.

Balance promotes realism

By Dan McMillan

It's finally over. After an unbelievable, days-long celebration, we have rededicated the Statue of Liberty.

The events that took place in New York over the Fourth of July weekend dominated the national attention unlike any other public display since the 1976 bicentennial celebration. Few would dispute that it was a memorable occasion.

To be sure, there was much to be happy about. The statue, after a multi-million dollar face-lift, looked spectacular under the glow of 40,000 fireworks. A seemingly endless list of cultural events reminded us that we are a nation richly blessed with human potential. The impressive armada of the so-called "tall ships" in New York Harbor was a reminder, too — of the stunning wealth our society has produced.

The festivities also focused attention on America's diverse heritage, helping us to appreciate the special dimension that generations of immigrants have added to our nation.

SO, NOW WE CAN go back to what we were doing before — working in factories, studying textbooks, teaching our children, etc. — feeling good about ourselves. And that's fine.

But, for the sake of reality, we must recognize that all is not bliss. While all the hoopla this Fourth of July was a great boost for our collective ego, we are far from perfect. We are surrounded by more than a few painful truths that threaten to pop our nation's joyous bubble.

Admittedly, the celebrations of the past weekend were not intended to be a format for self-criticism. They were a time of jubilation and relaxation.

Accordingly, we should strive to preserve a constructive tension between the various elements in our world. Whenever we put ourselves on the back for a job well done, we must learn to hide ourselves for our failures.

This is not to say that we should become mindless masochists constantly condemning ourselves for every conceivable error. Rather, it's simply a call for an attitude of realism, whereby we acknowledge both our strengths and weaknesses.

We must remember that for every Neil Armstrong we have put on the moon, we have let countless others starve from neglect; for every Albert Einstein we have welcomed into our country, we have jailed a sanctuary worker.

It sounds schizophrenic, but it's the only way to responsibly exist in this world.

Lessons learned at gay vigil

By Mary Beth Freking

A STRING OF exploding fire crackers broke the peaceful silence. I heard something splatter against the concrete steps.

"What is it?" someone asked. "Eggs," said another in a quiet, very bitter tone.

Seconds later, a rough, male voice yelled from a passing car window, "Faggots!"

The scene was over and all that could be heard were low mumbles from a few of the approximately 70 people who had gathered on the front steps of the Old Capitol to take part in the AIDS Candlelight Vigil which was the last event of Iowa City Gay and Lesbian Pride Week 1986.

I attended the vigil for a class. When I arrived I took a candle and lit it like everyone else. I decided to actually be involved in the vigil rather than take an outsider's view, like some did.

I REALIZED THAT one did not have to be gay to attend the vigil, but I knew that there were many sitting around me who were gay. This thought made me uncomfortable.

"Why do I label these people?" I asked myself. "Why do I feel uncomfortable?" Questions were firing through my mind.

A photographer began to take pictures of us. I held my head low, trying to hide from the flashes.

"What if my picture is published?" I wondered to myself. "What if people see my picture and think I'm gay?"

Then I thought, "What if they do see me and think I'm gay? So what? Maybe they would think I'm different from them. Why couldn't they accept that?"

Guest Opinion

Then the eggs incident occurred. Those few seconds of hatred opened a door in my mind that had long been closed and locked. I lifted my head and looked directly into the photographer's lens.

I had come to realize that gay people are human beings just trying to live their own lives, like everyone else. However, I also realized that though they are human beings, they are not treated as such.

WITH ALL THESE thoughts in the open, I was able to concentrate on the real reason people were sitting together on the Pentacrest — AIDS.

Joel Gray, one of the organizers of the week's events, began the vigil speaking of his concerns about the disease. He believes there is little effort put forward in finding a cure for AIDS.

"To be honest, this is going to be the illness of our lifetime," he stated.

He also emphasized that AIDS is not just a gay illness.

The vigil continued and they sang songs, recited poems and lit sparklers in respect for AIDS victims. When the planned program of the vigil was finished, everyone remained seated and began to talk among themselves.

Tess Catalano, who had sung one of the songs during the vigil, told everyone she thought they should talk about the eggs incident.

"We have to respond to these questions and not be quiet about it," she told the group.

Someone else responded, "Eggs crack, but we don't."

I spoke to Tess later and she said that the Pride Week's events were very reaffirming.

"It makes me proud to be gay," she said. "Things like the eggs incident only reinforce that feeling."

Eventually, the vigil came to a close. Some people left with their candles lit. I knew that I would not soon forget the 45 minutes I had spent with a candle in hand, nor would I forget what I had learned about myself during this time.

Heat, patriotism flare at Liberty bash

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sweltering tourists poured into the rejuvenated Statue of Liberty again Sunday and Park Service rangers, who drove angry visitors out and closed early on opening day, had to shut down ticket sales after only four hours.

Temperatures in the city soared to 98, the hottest July 6 since 1911, and in the observatory deck in the statue's crown officials said it was probably near 110. Chief Ranger Bill DeHart said more than 9,000 people visited the statue, and despite the intense heat and frayed tempers on the long stairway to the crown, there were no incidents.

Across the harbor in New Jersey a cast of more than 15,000 assembled on a 20-tier stage at Giants Stadium to officially close Liberty Weekend with a three-hour spectacular engineered by television producer David Wolper.

IT INVOLVED a wide range of stars, 150 banjo players, a choir of 800, an 850-member drill team, 200 Elvis Presley impersonators and a French equestrian team.

The millions of Liberty Weekend tourists brought with them boatloads of patriotism and left behind hundreds of thousands of pounds of trash.

"Everything you name it, we had it," said Tom Flanigan, a city parks worker who was on the job Sunday picking up cans and bottles, broken American flags and tattered subway maps as tourists sauntered through Battery Park opposite the Statue of Liberty in 98-degree heat.

After the Fourth of July fireworks, Flanigan and 49 other workers labored through the night removing more than 100 tons of debris. It was the fifth time he had ever seen the park, including the Bicentennial clean-up and the garbage left by the Hands Across America chain in May.

"That was filthy, too," he said. "But nothing compared to this."

Nakasone victory expected

Yasuhiro Nakasone

TOKYO (UPI) — Millions of Japanese voted Sunday in parliamentary elections in a heavy turnout that boosted chances of a big victory for the ruling Liberal Democratic Party and a third term for Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

The results of the election of both houses of the Diet, or parliament, to be officially announced Monday, will determine Nakasone's political future.

The Liberal Democrats were virtually assured of a victory, but the margin would decide whether they would regain the majority they lost in the 1983 election.

With 60 million votes cast — a

66 percent turnout — a half hour before the polls closed at 6 p.m., political observers were predicting vast gains by the Liberal Democrats, which has ruled Japan since 1955.

If the Liberal Democrats score a large victory, Nakasone could expect a grateful party to change party rules that prohibit him from serving beyond the end of his second two-year term as party president, and hence prime minister, which expires in October.

A poor showing could force Nakasone to step down before his term runs out.

Japanese voters tend to register their protest against the Liberal Democrats by staying home from the polls.

Syrian troops assert control

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian forces controlled a vital highway intersection outside Beirut Sunday and patrolled Moslem areas in the capital. An official source said Syria did not notify Lebanon's government of the operation.

A Syrian security source said Syrian troops joined militiamen of the Shiite Moslem Amal group and the Druze Progressive Socialist Party manning the intersection at the coastal city of Khaldeh, 7 miles south of Beirut.

The strategic intersection links mainly Moslem west Beirut with the Druze-held Shouf mountains southeast of the capital and mainly Shiite south Lebanon.

Travelers said less than a dozen helmeted, uniformed Syrian troops mingled with Amal and PSP militiamen at the Khaldeh roadblock, checking identity cards and searching vehicles.

Analysts said Syrian troops at Khaldeh would aid Syrian troops deployed in west Beirut since Friday to help Lebanese units enforce a Damascus-brokered security arrangement.

ment to end inter-Moslem fighting in west Beirut.

Police said the elite 200-member Syrian force continued patrols Sunday and established scattered checkpoints, alongside Lebanese army and police forces in Moslem areas of the capital.

Security sources said some Syrian troops were to deploy Monday along a section of the Green Line dividing the capital where Moslem militiamen still carried guns banned under terms of the new security arrangements.

Noriega unscathed by political accusations

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — The head of Panama's powerful military, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, appears to have weathered the political storm sparked by U.S. reports linking him to arms, drug trafficking and other illicit activities.

Recent stories in The New York Times and NBC News quoted unnamed officials in Washington who also alleged Noriega was involved in money laundering, the death of an opposition figure, election fraud and supplying intelligence to both Cuba and the United States for the past 15 years.

Political opposition groups have been unable to attract grassroots support.

Noriega dismissed the charges as part of an elaborate plot to discredit the military and destabilize the government to prevent Panama from assuming control of the Panama Canal and seven U.S. military bases in the year 2000.

Sacrifice fly drops Chicago, 2-1

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Marv Wynne hit a home run in the first inning and Garry Templeton delivered a sacrifice fly in the fourth Sunday to spark Andy Hawkins and the San Diego Padres to a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Hawkins, 6-5, needed relief help from Goose Gossage in the eighth inning after Ron Cey lined a double into center field with two out. Gossage retired Shawon Dunston to end the inning and finished for his 15th save. Steve Sanderson, who pitched the first five innings, fell to 3-5.

Wynne's homer came on a 3-1 pitch and cleared the right field wall for his fourth of the year. In the San Diego fourth, Kevin McReynolds and Steve Garvey singled and Templeton hit his first sacrifice fly of the year, scoring McReynolds. Templeton has 21 RBI in his last 24 games.

The Cubs scored in the sixth on singles by Terry Francona, Jody Davis and Dunston.

Bannister leads White Sox to 5-2 victory

CHICAGO (UPI) — Floyd Bannister, Dave Schmidt and Bob James combined on a four-hitter Sunday, leading the Chicago White Sox to a 5-2 triumph over the New York Yankees.

Bannister, 5-4, gave up three hits through 5 2-3 innings, including Dave Winfield's two-run homer in the first. Schmidt pitched 1 1-3 innings of no-hit relief and James went the last two innings to earn his 13th save.

The loser was Doug Drabek, 0-2, who lasted only 1 2-3 innings and was tagged for four hits three runs.

The White Sox took a 3-2 lead with three runs in the bottom of the second inning. Designated hitter Jerry Hairston started the rally with a double, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Julio Cruz.

Steve Lyons, who had walked prior to Cruz' hit, went to third on the single and scored on another wild pitch by Drabek. Cruz scored the go-ahead run on a single to shallow center by John Cangelosi.

The White Sox picked up another run in the third against reliever Bob Shirley. Hairston walked, went to third on a single by Carlton Fisk and scored on Wayne Tolleson's sacrifice fly to left.

Singles by Hairston, Wayne Tolleson and Lyons accounted for the White Sox final run in the eighth.

Winfield's 13th homer, into the upper deck in left field, gave New York a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

Ethiopian policeman wins marathon title

MOSCOW (UPI) — Ethiopian policeman Belaine Dinsamo, running only his third marathon, held off a late challenge from Soviet Igor Braslavsky Sunday to capture the first gold medal in the track and field events of the Goodwill Games.

Dinsamo clocked a modest 2 hours, 14 minutes, 42 seconds but was met with wild cheers from the usually sedate Soviet crowd as he entered the Lenin Stadium less than a minute ahead of his Soviet rival.

Dinsamo's win was a departure from the rest of the games, which have been dominated by the host Soviet Union and the United States.

In the women's 100-meter dash, American Evelyn Ashford and Heike Drechsler of East Germany ended in a dead heat for the gold in 10.91 seconds. Soviet Elvira Arashina was third.

After two false starts, Ashford broke ahead and appeared to be cruising to victory when the East German came from behind only a few meters from the tape to earn the tie.

In the 110-meter hurdles, American Greg Foster nipped Soviet Andrei Prokofev in a season-best time of 13.25. Prokofev finished in 13.28.

In the long jump, a new European record was established by Soviet Robert Emmiyan with a leap of 27 feet, 9 inches.

Navratilova 'reigns' over tennis world

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Martina Navratilova, moving ever closer to an inevitable date with destiny, maintained her unfriendly grip on the Wimbledon throne Saturday by winning the women's singles for the fifth year in a row.

Waiving only at the very start, when she saw her service broken in the second game, Navratilova recovered to defeat Hana Mandlikova, 7-6 (7-1), 6-3, in a misty drizzle to claim her 14th Grand Slam singles crown.

Wimbledon

She also gained a measure of revenge for her loss to Mandlikova in the U.S. Open final last September.

In winning Wimbledon for the seventh time overall, the 29-year-old Texan moved ever closer to some cherished records. She tied the mark of five consecutive titles set by Suzanne Lenglen (1919-23), and needs one more championship to equal the all-time singles record set by Helen Wills Moody between 1927 and 1938.

NAVRAUTOVA, LOOKING even further ahead, is aiming to overhaul Billie Jean King's record of 20 total titles. She presently has 15 after winning the women's doubles title on Sunday.

"When I won the last point I wasn't conscious of the history that I had made by winning five in a row, not at all," Navratilova said in jest. "I've only been asked that question 30,000 times this year, so yeah, I think it was on my mind. It's hard not to think about it."

"AT THE PACE I'm going I'd break it earlier than 1990, but I know it's hard to keep up that pace. But the record that was on my mind the most was the singles record. I'm still too far away from Billie Jean's to really worry about it."

Navratilova said if she was close enough to King's mark even after she stopped playing singles, she would return here for doubles in an attempt to earn the record.

The dominance of Navratilova at the All England Club is staggering. This was the third time in five years she captured the title without dropping a set, and until the final, Navratilova had conceded as much as four games in only one set.

FOLLOWING A TENTATIVE start when she was broken in the second game and allowed Mandlikova to reach deuce in each of her next two service games, Navratilova was virtually impregnable on her serve.

She put together a string of 17 consecutive first serves that were good and for the match she was successful on 76 percent of her first serves, winning 70 percent of those points.

"I turned my serve around pretty good, huh?" she said later. "It got to the point, a couple of times in practice, even today, I had to hit some second serves just to practice them, because I wasn't missing any first serves."

"I didn't feel there was anything that could go wrong with my serve, and when you feel that confident with it the rest of the game just falls into place."

Mandlikova, also a Wimbledon finalist in 1981, when she lost to Chris Evert Lloyd, built a 5-2 lead and was serving for the opening set at 5-3 when Navratilova broke her at 15 with a backhand pass and backhand volley.

NAVRAUTOVA THEN took the first four points of the tie-break, allowing her Czechoslovakian rival a single point.

Navratilova, whose parents and sister were watching her win Wimbledon for the first time together, gained the only break of the second set in the fourth game when her backhand service return hit the baseline.

Mandlikova, the fourth seed, had two break points in the next game, but once again Navratilova pulled out an ace, her final one of five, to reach deuce. An easy forehand volley provided Navratilova with match point and a backhand volley brought victory in 72 minutes.

"THE OTHER DAY was the only time I thought of losing," Navratilova said. "I thought well, gee, if Hana beats me I'll be happy for her because to win it for the first time I know is special."

"But the closer it got to the match, the more I saw myself hoisting that trophy, the more I saw myself winning that match point."

Despite her disappointment, Mandlikova still was pleased with her performance during the two weeks.

"The difference was she just served so well," said Mandlikova, who slipped several times on the wet grass. "Normally you can just block it, but the ball was so heavy I couldn't even do that."

"I played a great tournament, I'm happy I got to the finals. I had a chance. I lost it. I will be back next year and the year after that. I'll keep trying, I'll keep trying to win it."

NAVRAUTOVA EARNED $176,400 for her victory, boosting her career total to $10,843,724.
