American missionary abduction in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (UPI)—Missionaries and a Filipino priest were abducted in the southern Philippines on Sunday, the ninth day of a protest by 300 soldiers who remain in the area after their failed bid to topple President Corazon Aquino.

NINE AK-47-toting soldiers detained basic missionaries and a priest and took them in a jeep from a rural churchrisers, jail officials said.

In a neat trick of the law, the 90-year-old political prisoner was in jail more than a year and a half after his wife, former President Ferdinand Marcos, was declared abducled but could provide no details of his whereabouts.

Five figures chased away hundreds of supporters of Marcos' party who tried to make a speech outside the jail but were pelted by riot police.

Plaintiffs in a federal wrongful death suit by the family of a teen-ager who was killed in a 1979 car accident, made one of the last of 120 suits under a law that bans contesting with these suits, and was joined in their protest by the voice of a mother who is blind, and a 40-year-old man who is blind.

In a related development, Toronto announced it was considering a tax break for the Garth Drabinsky's son, who operates a 90-year-old political prisoner's jail.

The racial violence continued in South Africa, with the government's move to control the country's black population.

By Dolly Cohen

The seating arrangement in South Africa is considered by some to be more disorganized than in previous years, the government said.

This is the first time since the ANC assumed power in 1994 that there has been a change in the seating arrangement.

The new envoy, appointed by President Nelson Mandela, will be a key figure in the country's future negotiations.

Further reading on the seating arrangement can be found in the Sunday edition of the Cape Times.
Local student wins essay contest

By Mark McDonald

Earl Wray, a New City West High School graduate, is one of four students nationwide to win a trip to Israel in a contest.

The competition, sponsored by the National Endowment for Democracy and the Jewish National Fund, was open to U.S. high school students. Wray, along with three other winners, will depart in early August for the Holy Land. Earl wrote the entry for the contest.

The contest was open to all high school seniors throughout the country. The winners were selected based on criteria such as leadership, civic involvement, personal essay, and interview.

Wray said he was very excited about the prospect of traveling to Israel. "I've always been interested in Jewish history," he said. "I've heard a lot about the country, and I'm looking forward to seeing it for myself."
Faculty shortages at the UI causing serious problems

By Michael Conner

Andrei Setacenko, a new professor in the engineering department, said the UI is having trouble filling all its faculty positions.

"The UI is having trouble filling all its faculty positions," Setacenko said. "We have had a lot of faculty members retire, and we are now faced with trying to replace them." He added that the UI has been working hard to recruit new faculty members to fill the positions, but the process has been difficult.

The UI has hired over 60 new faculty members in the past year, but it still has a long way to go to fill all of its open positions. Setacenko said that the UI is "working hard to fill all of its positions, but it's a slow process." He added that the UI is "trying to hire the best people possible, but it's not easy." He said that the UI is "in a very tight competition with other universities to hire the best people possible."

Op of special interest
We hear much today about the power of so-called "special interest groups." They're everywhere; theyollen massive amounts of money and call themselves "political action committees," then they roll up the red carpet to entertain people in powerful places and call themselves "developers," they build in together in elections and become known as "voting blocs." The point is, special interest groups are not only overbearing, they're out of control. If "Big Business" is a special interest group, so are educators and students, environmentalists and developers. Gay is an interest group as are the elderly, farmers, peace activists, blacks, civil servants and blue collar workers. It's everyone, everybody, to get the leading lady to the most prominent politician, work within a particular frame of opinion or to try and ignore what they sometimes perceive as subversive. Too frequently, it seems, people perceive gays as something they don't want, they identify directly with or they make some non-public group they don't want to meet their own blood to keep out contrary information.

All this is not to argue that the various groups should renounce their strength boldly, but rather it is a reminder that a very important word in life is "perspective."

American obsession
Riding to the head of a perceived public conman for drug testing is a cause of more than just public fear. It is a cause that gets the job done, no justification being necessary because mandatory drug-testing requires action against a large segment of the population. There are those who see unpopular public consent as a condition of employment. Mandatory drug testing is popular with the employer and then possible suspension or termination the employee endures. Such a policy is needed to give public testimony that those who had broken the law.

A S EXPECTED, the Daily Iowan’s Capital City Edition from Saturday, was followed by a good reason.

In the high court’s ruling was more of a statement of defiance than anything else.

Discrimination disappearing
But commission finds Iowa City still has a long way to go

By John Robinson
Special to The Daily Iowan

When Iowa City police officer Phyllis Alexander moved from Chicago to Iowa City 17 years ago, she found less housing discrimination here than in the Windy City.

"It's not acceptable to be blatantly discriminatory," Alexander said.

Unlike Chicago, where discrimination is more obvious to the naked eye, Alexander said, it is not always so apparent in Iowa City. Alexander added that at times even after behavior has changed, the behavior pictured where behavior has changed, but whether it has remained the same, she said, "It's a step in the right direction but it's not enough."

On June 27, 1986, the Iowa City Human Rights Commission closed its 1985-86 complaint year. During that period, 270 complaints were received, down from the 300 complaints received during 1983-84.

Although the number of complaints dropped, there were still a variety of situations in which Negroes were selected for housing, said the commission.

Barbecue dinners greet new students

Once again the billboard by the Union was covered with a sign advertising a barbecue dinner for incoming students.

The Iowa City Chamber of Commerce held a barbecue dinner for incoming freshmen and transfers at the University of Iowa as part of its move-in day programme. The dinner was held at the Mutual Grove Park in Iowa City and several hundred students and families attended.

The dinner is a tradition of the chamber and usually well attended.

Barbecue dinners have also been held in the past at the Railyard Park and the Circus Park.

No ice cream was given to the students this year. The ice cream booth normally given to the students was not present at the dinner.

Barbecues have been held by the chamber in the past as part of its move-in day programme. The barbecues have been held in the past at the Railyard Park and the Circus Park.

The chamber has also held barbecues for incoming students in the past.

Belfast Protestant violence injures 142 in demonstration

Belfast, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A police spokesman said Sunday that 142 people were injured in two days of Protestant-led demonstrations and a night of violence by paramilitary groups.

The events began Friday night when a group of about 100 Protestant youths descended on the mainly Catholic area of Ardoyne, a working-class neighborhood in west Belfast.

Northern Ireland's Unionist leaders said the violence had been instigated by the outlawed Provisional IRA and that the loyalist paramilitaries had been responding to attacks by the IRA.

The government has called a meeting of the Northern Ireland cabinet to discuss the situation.

Northern Ireland is one of the six provinces of the United Kingdom and is divided from the Republic of Ireland by the border.

PRI wins elections amid fraud claims

CHIUDURCA, Mexico (UPI) — Mexico's estranged ruling party emerged Sunday as the leading political force on the eve of presidential elections.

The National Action Party, which controls local governments in 12 of the country's 31 states, had a clear majority in the lower house of Congress and the Senate, according to preliminary results.

The party's presidential candidate, Danilo Hurtado, said he was confident of victory and vowed to continue his fight against corruption and poverty.

Klan threatens illegal aliens

BAYLEY, Idaho (UPI) — The Klan has given notice that it will not be intimidated by the FBI's latest move to stop the group from committing crimes.

The FBI announced Sunday that it had arrested 142 people in connection with a series of bombings and other acts of violence.

The Klan has long been associated with hate crimes and has been blamed for some of the nation's worst atrocities.

The FBI said it would continue to investigate the case and that more arrests were possible.

The group has declared war on illegal immigration and has promised to use violence to stop it.

Southern California awakes to 2nd moderate earthquake

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — A second moderate earthquake hit Southern California Sunday, causing minor injuries and damage.

The 2.5 magnitude earthquake was centered near Santa Monica and was felt throughout the region.

The first earthquake, which measured 5.0 on the Richter scale, occurred early Saturday morning.

No damage was reported, but some people were woken by the shaking.
Things have kind of changed," Karinthe Goeldner says of her life. The Sigourney, Iowa, native has landed a role in an Austrian opera house's production of Figaro.

"THINGS HAVE KIND OF CHANGED," Goeldner says with a smile. A few months ago, the 22-year-old singer was studying on the side at Iowa State University, where she plans to return after journeying to Europe and performing professionally in the United States. Now, her life is one of travel and training.

Goeldner was one of 26 students from the United States to take part in the Metropolitan Opera Young Artists Program last year, which selected her from among 1,100 applicants. She will spend this summer in Europe, where she will continue training and will perform at the Verona Opera Festival.

"A VERY BIG OPPORTUNITY," Goeldner says of the program. "I've always wanted to study with the Metropolitan, and it's a really wonderful experience." She will spend the summer training in Italy and will perform four times before the Verona Opera Festival.

Goeldner says she feels she has been an exceptionally lucky candidate in this year's competition. "I'm just grateful I got in," she says, "because it's a very prestigious program." She is also grateful for the opportunity to travel and study in Europe.

Goeldner says she hopes to return to Iowa State University after she completes the program. "I love being part of the Iowa State community," she says. "It's such a wonderful place to study and live." She plans to return to the university in the fall to continue her studies and to train for future performances.

Goeldner is one of several Iowa State University students who have been selected to participate in the Metropolitan Opera Young Artists Program. Other students selected include Bethany Cline, who will be studying in Italy, and Jamie Mikkola, who will be studying in France.

Goeldner says she is excited about the opportunity to perform in Europe. "It's a really exciting experience," she says. "I've always wanted to perform in Europe, and now I get to do it." She is also excited about the opportunity to work with some of the world's best opera singers and to learn from them.

DuPage County courts Chicago teams

CHICAGO (AP) — Three duels in six years — the latest between the Hot Sox and Bears for control of the Chicago Sun-Times — and a seventh titled "Sportsbrief," proposed by the Chicago Tribune, would be the centerpiece of a series of "sports for politics" exhibitions.

The Daily News of DuPage plans a whole series of duels involving other Chicago teams.

In the six years, the Chicago Sun-Times reported that the Sox and Bears had talked about the series, but had not been able to agree on the terms.

"There's a whole series of duels involving other Chicago teams," the Sun-Times reported.

Williamson, a member of the Sox, said the team was not interested in the series and had no plans to participate.

The Bears, on the other hand, were interested in the series and had expressed interest in participating.

The Sun-Times reported that the Sox and Bears had talked about the series, but had not been able to agree on the terms.

"There's no reason why the Bears and Sox couldn't work something out," the Sun-Times reported.
