Farmers to aid victims of drought

PELZER, S.C. (AP) — Trucks delivered bales of hay from Illinois to a farm near Pelzer Sunday to help an owner of the farm called the "first farmers' movement" in the United States.

The farm, owned by J.C. and Ruby Cassel, 65, is one of several farms by Illinois farmers and dwelling a wide geographic area to deliver hay. The farm was distributed to 100 volunteers helped arrive at the warehouse site — shipped on trucks provided by the Illinois Department of Agriculture. About 30 volunteers helped unload the hay and about 100 people were on hand to distribute it.

"I think it's absolutely incredible," said a woman who was helping distribute the hay. "It makes a world of difference for these people who are struggling to make ends meet."

The Illinois Department of Agriculture provided hay from more than 100 farms in the state to help feed cows and hogs. The hay was delivered to the farm and will be used to feed the animals.

"I FELT GREAT," said a woman who was helping distribute the hay. "It makes a world of difference for these people who are struggling to make ends meet."

Lawmakers visit Iowa City

Gephart, Grassley promote House version of tax reform

_by Nick McKinnon_

Two national lawmakers were in Iowa City this weekend, attempting to attract the attention of residents to their respective proposals. Rep. Richard Gephart, D-Minn., and Republican Sen. Chuck Grassley both have visited the area to talk about the House and Senate versions of their tax reform bills.

Faculty member does not keep for comment unday

A faculty member did not keep for comment under the Senate version. The scheduled tax break for the new tax code would wipe out the tax breaks mentioned in the Senate bill, he said. Gephart also said getting rid of the tax breaks is an important part of the tax reform proposal.

The measure of the bill is simple:

The measure is whether middle-income families get to keep tax breaks or if they fill out their tax returns by April of next year. "If they feel the new code is better, when they go to fill out their taxes next year, then we have a tax cut, if they don't. " Gephart said.

The reduced federal revenue caused by keeping tax breaks for people at the high end of the tax code would still be large.

Latin American turmoil grows

By Don McMillan

With increasing urgency, the whole world is re-examining the political stability of the United States, Americans who make a point of being informed — and I certainly am — would be interested in what is transpiring in Latin America.

REPORTS OF THE UNEARTH

In Latin America, at least two problems have been lurking beneath the surface of recent events. One is the political and economic stability of the region, and the other is the persistence of the illegal drug trade.

The illegal drug trade has been a major problem for the United States for many years. The trade is financed by tens of billions of dollars each year, and it has led to widespread corruption and violence. The United States has been a major target of drug traffickers, and it has faced challenges in trying to control the illegal drug trade.

The political and economic stability of Latin America has been a concern as well. The region has faced many challenges, including political instability, economic crisis, and drug trafficking. The United States has been involved in efforts to help stabilize the region, but progress has been slow.

The 10 most-censored stories

In a democracy it is necessary for citizens to receive the most accurate and complete information possible.

The numbers

In 1980, 30 of the most-censored stories in the United States were related to Latin American turmoil. In 1990, the number had increased to 80. In 2000, the number had increased to 100. This increase is a result of the increased political instability and economic crisis in Latin America.

Guest opinions policy

Guest opinions are welcome, but letters on political or partisan issues are not. Letters should be typed and signed and should include the writer's address, which will be withheld on request. Letters cannot be published if they exceed 200 words. Letters are subject to editing for clarity and space.

Social workers link cultures

By Carol Monaghan

Two social workers in the University of Iowa's International Department have gone out of their way to help new refugees settle in their field - several thousand miles out of it.

Ghassan Kernevez of France and Ahmad Sarahneh of Egypt, both refugees who have spent two months in Iowa City, work for the community's Middle Eastern refugees and share their cultures with a group of eight people from their country.

Nearly a dozen countrymen paraded in front of the Council of International Students on Friday, after World War II is to a great extent, work to help bring refugees together between nations, Kernevez said.

"It is an opportunity to teach people their societies," Kernevez said. "It's an opportunity to step back from work and look at it from a different culture and learn new things." Both said their work in the United States differs from the initial work they perform in their home countries. Kernevez works as a consultant for the Algerian refugee camp on the outskirts of Simi Valley, Calif. Kernevez works as a social worker in the applicant screening department for the State of California's social workers department.

Kernevez was born in Algiers, Maifon, in 1950. He came to the United States as a refugee in 1973, and is married with three children. After graduating from the University of Iowa in 1981, Kernevez worked for a year as a social worker at a Detroit residential center.

"The work here is much more specialized," Kernevez said. "People are referred against and again. They are being referred for social services that do not exist in their home country."

"The people are much moreDocile," Kernevez said. "In France, they are not so docile. They have been traditions that do not exist in their home country."

"Some students choose to take on a new society for a time," Kernevez said. "It is an educational process for them in order to be employed in their own country."

"There are manuals for manuals," Kernevez said. "Every problem in thought is thought of before we don't have a solution."

"I think you have work jobs for refugees who want to work in Europe," he added.

The two arrived in Iowa City on April 8 with 18 other social workers from around the world. Their first month was spent at the UI in helping new arrivals to find two months of work, English classes and living conditions.

The differences in social work here and abroad are marked by different cultures, languages, food and, in Kernevez's case, slight at first.

"At first our culture accentuates," Kernevez said. "We are bicultural countries, there are lots and lots of similarities."

"Work for me is in the Middle East. In the Middle East, we have no papers. Here, people have papers, and that's a good thing," Kernevez said. "That's politics," he said. "One paper is more important than another. People need papers."

"If all the refugees had to wait for the American culture, they would want a lot, want second thoughts."

"Kernevez and Sarahneh five with bad families during their stay. They are learning the United States through the United States. They do know about the governments of the participating countries, and of the participants themselves."

Ul students 'sentenced' to five years

By Michael O'Connor

"It's really frustrating," fourth-year senior Karen Peters said. "They took their best students and quartered them and quartered them."

Peters is one of many of Ul's international students who went through the "opportunity plan" in no job situation.

"They got the opportunity plan," Peters said. "We got married three years ago two years before we got our degrees, but by course change in bad years, we got married.

"My department clerk had to see how it was going to be with the opportunity plan."

The opportunity plan is a three-year plan which requires students to take four and one half years in the department's education plan.

Many engineering students aren't choosing to take eight courses in order to build their grade point average and so they have more time for outside activities.

"I think on a senior year, and the average student put in the average major in the upper junior year, and the student will take more than four years to go back to prove their major and the fourth year," Kernevez said.

"Students are taking courses from each institution, but in his department this is something, this is really the difference between the program major and the associate major and the associate minor or the associate degree.

"I think you have to take 12 courses in order to hold an associate degree."

Sarahneh, a fourth-year student, said problems are taking more than four years to finish college.

"I think it's a world's problem," Peters said. "I think it's a world's problem."

"It's a world's problem," he aid. "But I think it's a world's problem." Sarahneh said.

"We enjoy it with new friends, and we are understood."

"I think you have to discover that the world's culture, a world's culture and not just the UI culture, a world's culture," he added. He also appreciates the peaceful atmosphere in the United States, a world's culture and not just the UI culture, a world's culture.

California hit with numerous quakes

CHALANTVALLEY, Calif. — A series of small earthquakes struck the Salinas Valley early Sunday, shaking homes and rattling nerves in the Central Coast area, although there were no reports of damage.

The largest of the quakes measured 4.8 on the Richter scale, and was felt in the city of Salinas, about 100 miles south of San Francisco, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

The quakes were centered near the city of Salinas, with the largest one occurring near the city of Meiners Wells, about 20 miles northwest of the city.

The quakes were felt across much of the Central Coast, including Santa Cruz, Monterey, and Salinas.

A woman who works at the Stony Brook Medical Center in New York City said she was trying to work when the earthquake hit.

"It was about 20 seconds long, and it was kind of jarring," she said. "I was actually on a call, and I had to put the patient on hold, because they were all responsive."

The woman said the earthquake caused some mild shaking, and that the hospital's generators kicked in to keep the power running.

She added that she was not sure if the earthquake was going to be reported as a major event, but that it was definitely noticeable.

"I don't know if it will be, but I'm sure it will be," she said. "I've been in the hospital before, and I've seen earthquakes before, but this was definitely noticeable."

WILLIAMSBURG, N.J.—Promoter Steve Gardner promised to include a pitcher of Bud Light in the prizes to win this weekend for the first 10,000 fans who showed up for the Annual Beach Bash. And sure enough, Saturday and Sunday near the intersection of Interstate 80 and U.S. Highway 44, a crowd estimated at 10,000 fans threatened an intersection. The fans didn't seem to mind, but rather were excited about attending the event.

The event was part of the Homecoming '86 concept, more than just a ball. The party was the party, and it was a party. The party was held at the intersection, and the party was a party.

Kittle leads White Sox to 8-6 victory

NEW YORK CITY - Joe Niekro added two hits and won his fifth straight game Sunday as the Chicago White Sox beat the New York Yankees 8-6.

The Yankees scored three runs in the third inning, but the White Sox scored four runs in the fourth and third runs in the fifth.

The White Sox leading hitter was on the hill for three innings, but left after giving up a two-run home run to New York's Roger Maris in the third. Niekro was replaced by Bob Forsch in the fourth inning, but Forsch allowed two more runs to the Yankees.

Niekro allowed four runs on five hits in 5 1/3 innings. He struck out eight and walked three.

Niekro improved his record to 8-5 and lowered his earned-run average to 2.86.

The White Sox scored four runs in the fourth inning on a three-run home run by Whitey Herzog and a one-run single by Don Mincher.

Maris's two-run home run in the third inning gave New York a 2-0 lead. But the White Sox responded with a three-run home run by Mincher in the fourth and a one-run single by Herzog in the fifth.

Bears

"I'VE BEEN impressed with the attitude of all the defensive players and the offense and what we want to do, putting in some practices and getting ready to go out and play. And they've worked hard in the locker room what we want them to do." - The Bears will be without DT Geno Atkins, a Pro Bowl selection who was suspended for the first two games of the season after violating the NFL's drug policy. Atkins will be eligible to return after Week 4.

Norman claims first major with Open win

TUNBRIDGE Wells (Reuters) — The Norman game captured the Open Championship on Sunday. Drawing three holes with 745 yards to play, his final round of 74 gave him the title. "I come out with determination every time, but to see it happen and to win the Open was incredible," Norman said. "It's a great feeling, and I'm sure my greatest accomplishment so far."

Among the riders from every state and country, there were no special stories. "We have what it takes to win," Norman said. "We'll have to play better than we did last year to win."

Chicago sets for NFL title defense

By Laura Farmer

STAFF W R . — The Chicago Bears are back to work preparing for their Super Bowl title defense following their Super Bowl victory. The team is busily planning their next move.

According to football's most optimistic General Manager, Mike McCaskey, the Bears' Super Bowl win isn't a one-time accomplishment. "It's not the end of the story," McCaskey said. "We have a lot more to accomplish."

Eleven-year veteran Walter Payton believes that it is each player who will make the difference. "It's not just the team's coach who determines their success," Payton said. "It's each player who has to make the decisions."

Quarterback Jim McMahon is encouraged by the prospect of doing it again but believes it's a matter of each individual taking it upon themselves to be great. "When you're not just the best in the world, but the best you can be," McMahon said. "It's a great feeling."
