Senate adopts daycare plan

By Dana Cohen
Staff Writer

The UI Student Senate has adopted a new daycare program designed to avoid "crippling" debts that have occurred in the past, but daycare directors and some parents say they are worried parents' concerns won't be sufficiently represented under the plan.

Under the new program, a board of directors — including some users of the services and the UI Student Senate president — will be instituted. Current daycare directors will be allowed to participate in discussion of policy issues, but will not be policymakers.

"For many years some daycares have come to the student senate with debts that have often come close to crippling the financial base of student government," senate President Joe Hansen said.

LAST YEAR student senate was forced to pay a Brookland Woods Daycare debt of $13,000.

Hansen said James Bohr, a Cedar Rapids daycare consultant, was hired to recommend a plan to improve the daycare system.

Bohr suggested a consolidation of some services, including insurance, cleaning, food, supply, taxes and accounting. While all financial issues would be decided by the board, "We will not touch programmatic or philosophical differences within the centers," Hansen said.

If any daycare chooses not to be a part of the new program, Hansen said "regrettably, their leases end Aug. 16."

The directors of all five daycare centers met Monday afternoon to discuss the new proposal and said they are concerned about parent representation and the needs of low-income families.

"OUR PRIMARY concern is the welfare of the children," Brookland Woods Director Deb Kauffman-Watson said.

"For many years some daycares have come to the student senate with debts that have often come close to crippling the financial base of student government," senate President Joe Hansen says.

"The financial proposal will be a positive step in the future of the daycares on campus," she said. "The main concern we have, especially the students who have children, is that their voices are heard."

The program would benefit by having parent representatives and child-care professionals on the executive board, she said.

"We have a sound program with a good reputation," she said. "I think if there is adequate parent representation from all programs, that would be preserved."

"It's not a baby-sitting experience, it's a life experience for the child," she added.

"The daycares were instituted by students and I think there's a big commitment of parents to preserve that," Kauffman-Watson said.

MANY LOW-INCOME families use the daycare facilities, and there is concern the needs of people who can't afford daycare but want to go to school won't be met, she added.

Lisa Wilcox, whose daughter has attended Brookland Woods Daycare for more than two years, said she is "unenthusiastic" about some aspects of the new program.

"It sounds good to have a centralized financial system," Wilcox said. "But we are reluctant to give up our individuality in the different programs."

"My biggest concern would be that parents are closely involved in selecting the director, rather than only student senate doing it," she said.

She added it may harm the daycare quality to have people without children deciding policies.

University Parent's Care Collective Director Diane Kean said she is also concerned there will not be enough parent representation about the new executive board.

Many parents work at the daycare center in exchange for tuition, Kean said, adding that she hopes that policy will not be discontinued.

Tutu meets with Botha in Pretoria

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — President Pieter Botha met Monday with anti-apartheid leader Bishop Desmond Tutu and refused Tutu's requests to lift a month-old state of emergency and release jailed black activists.

Tutu, emerging from the 45-minute meeting in Pretoria, said Botha refused to lift the emergency because the president believes it is helping stem a two-year wave of racial violence in the nation's black townships.

At least 181 people have been killed since the government imposed emergency rule June 12, granting authorities sweeping powers of arrest and detention and placing severe restrictions on the press. The average number of people killed daily in racial violence has not changed since the emergency was imposed.

ACCORDING TO opposition groups, about 4,500 government opponents have been arrested during the emergency, the second in South Africa in less than a year. The first, imposed last July, lasted seven months.

This was the second meeting between Botha and Tutu, the Nobel Peace Prize laureate and first black Anglican bishop of Johannesburg. The two first met June 13, a day after emergency rule was imposed.

Tutu — who said he believed Botha might lift the emergency because "as a Christian, I am a prisoner of hope" — said his talks with the South African Botha "could have been better."

Botha said "an atmosphere of greater calm prevailed throughout the country" since the emergency was imposed.

IN WASHINGTON, President Ronald Reagan worked Monday to ease mounting congressional pressure for a tougher anti-apartheid policy.

With a Senate committee ready to begin considering calls for severing economic ties with South Africa in protest of that nation's restrictive racial policies, Reagan met with key Senate Republicans to preview an address scheduled for this afternoon.

In the speech, to be delivered at the White House, Reagan will reiterate his view that apartheid is repugnant, aides said, but will not announce any major switch in policies — nor is he expected to name a new ambassador to the strife-torn nation.

IN NEW HAVEN, Conn., former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Monday South Africa is "on the threshold of a civil war," releasing a Yale University report calling for strong U.S. economic sanctions.

Vance, who headed a Yale fact-finding delegation on a recent visit to South Africa, said tensions are building rapidly between blacks and the white-ruled apartheid government.

"I left South Africa with grim foreboding that, in the words of one of our black interlocutors, 'We are entering the long, dark night,'" Vance said.

IN LONDON, it was reported Monday that three more nations pulled out of the Commonwealth Games, swelling the list of boycotters to 27 and threatening to make a shambles of the event over Britain's refusal to impose sanctions against South Africa.

The near landslide boycott, which has seen nearly half the originally scheduled countries and territories withdraw from this week's games, posed an embarrassment to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on the eve of her foreign minister's peace mission to South Africa.

Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe conferred Monday in Brussels with his 11 counterparts in the European Community en route to Pretoria to try to persuade Botha to dismantle his country's apartheid policies of racial discrimination.

Black S. Africans at UI fear spying, retribution

By Michael O'Connor
Staff Writer

South African officials Monday denied charges that some white South African students are spying on their countrymen at the UI.

UI African Association Secretary Moyisi Majeke said Monday some UI South African students report the actions of their countrymen at the UI to their nation's white-run government.

Because of this monitoring, white and black South Africans who someday plan to return to South Africa are very hesitant to speak out against the Pretoria regime, Majeke said.

But Pauline Celliers, a spokeswoman for the South African Consulate in Chicago, called Majeke's statements "pure speculation."

"WE HAVE NO WAY of keeping track of students in America," she said.

Majeke said harassment and jail terms await those who denounce the white-run government and then return to South Africa.

"Lots of my friends have gone straight to jail after returning from the U.S.," he said. "They could lose their jobs or have their friends quizzed by South African police."

A close friend, a woman who studied at the UI was jailed and tortured when she returned to her homeland, he said.

But Celliers said this is an "unfounded fear."

"This person must be making wild statements," said Celliers, whose white-minority government last week announced an emergency decree outlawing all black political meetings.

Majeke's statement is only an effort to obtain publicity, she said.

BUT UI ASSOCIATE History Professor Stephen Vlastos said Majeke's statements are not unfounded.

Other governments, including South Korea, have used student liaisons to report the actions of their citizens studying in the United States.

The idea of South African UI students reporting the actions of their countrymen "would not surprise me," said Vlastos, who is a supporter of the anti-apartheid movement.

UI foreign student adviser Theresa Gangl-Gassemlouei said one way or another information does get back to the South African government.

South African students who participated in UI divestment rallies must be cautious once they return home, she said.

Mexico to sign agreement to get $1.5 billion in credit

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mexico and the International Monetary Fund will sign an agreement on an economic program this afternoon that will qualify the country for $1.5 billion in new credits, Mexican officials said Monday.

The agreement will allow Mexico, whose economy has been hard hit by falling oil prices, to begin important negotiations with commercial banks on an estimated $2.5 billion in new money it is estimated will be needed from the banks for 1986.

The pact, to be signed at 5 p.m. today, came after weeks of negotiations that reportedly focused on Mexico's domestic budget deficit.

Finance Minister Gustavo Petrocioni sent a telex to about 50 creditor banks, including the 13 international banks that represent creditors and major regional banks, inviting them to a meeting Wednesday in New York, where he will detail Mexico's economic program for 1986-87.

A SPOKESMAN at the Mexican Embassy in Washington said the IMF had approved a plan that will qualify the country for $1.5 billion in new credits from the fund.

The agreement still must be approved by the IMF executive board, which usually is automatic if it comes, with Managing Director Jacques de Larosiere's approval, but which could take a month or so to complete.

Mexico, which is current through the end of June on its $600 million in monthly interest payments, also reportedly will ask the banks to refinance a $950 million principal payment that has been rolled over two times and is now due Oct. 1.

Banking sources said the meeting with Petrocioni will be attended by senior officials from the IMF, the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank.

The United States, which is the largest contributor to all three organizations and which has taken an increasingly active role in their lending decisions, has been pressing Mexico to make structural reforms in its economy that would inhibit flight capital as a condition for new loans.

MEXICO estimates that to make up for lost revenue from the drop in oil prices it will need a total of $6 billion in new money in 1986 — $1.5 billion from the IMF, $2.5 billion from the commercial banks, and the rest from the World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank and the Commodity Credit Corp., and loans from other governments.

On Friday Treasury Secretary James Baker and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker told a group of bankers that Mexico will need up to $6 billion from commercial banks over the next two years.

This amounts to just less than one-third of the $20 billion banks were asked to lend to 15 countries over a three-year period under what is called the "Baker Plan," which was presented at the IMF-World Bank annual meeting last fall in Seoul.

Even with IMF and U.S. government blessings, raising new money for Mexico is not expected to be easy.

Under the best circumstances, the negotiations can be expected to be protracted.

Earthquakes continue to rock California

BISHOP, Calif. — Two strong earthquakes shook California Monday, snapping power lines and sewers, destroying about two dozen homes and a bank building in the Sierra foothills and swaying highrise buildings in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

No injuries were reported. Seismologists measured the quakes at 6.2 and 5.2 on the Richter scale and placed the epicenter 15 miles north of Bishop in the Lake Crowley area of Mono County near the Nevada border, where a 5.5 tremor hit only 24 hours earlier.

Reagan prepares for arms control reply

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration briefed U.S. allies Monday on what was described as a conciliatory American response to recent Soviet arms proposals, designed to enhance the prospects for a superpower summit.

Arms negotiators Paul Nitze and Edward Rowny embarked on separate trips to allied capitals, bearing guidelines approved late last week by President Ronald Reagan for his formal reply to the latest overtures from Moscow.

White House spokesman Edward Djerejian said the reply, in the form of a letter from Reagan, will go to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev by the end of the month.

Detroit judge refuses to issue order

A Detroit judge refused Monday to order 7,000 striking municipal workers back to work as thousands of tons of garbage filled the city's streets, while Pittsburgh officials held last-minute negotiations to avert a midnight strike by their trash collectors.

In Philadelphia, returning strikers cleaned up from a 20-day walkout.

About 264 members of Teamsters Local 609 in Pittsburgh have been working under several contract extensions since the original contract expired Dec. 31. Union spokesman Curtis Casey said a strike was a "good possibility" because union officials would not again extend the contract after the extension expires.

Basque separatists suspected in attack

MADRID — Basque separatists are suspected of firing 12 grenades Monday at the Defense Ministry, then setting off a bomb in a car used to launch the grenades as police arrived to investigate, authorities said. Eight people, including a rear admiral, were wounded.

The attacks came a week after a bomb planted in a van by Basque separatists exploded eight blocks away from the ministry, killing 10 civil guards.

Lawyer calls religious needs 'sweeping'

GREENVILLE, Tenn. — A lawyer for Tennessee school officials said Monday some people's religious beliefs are so "sweeping" the only place for their children to be taught is at home or in private religious schools.

Timothy Dyk told U.S. District Judge Thomas Hull a suit by fundamentalist parents challenging the 1983 Holt Basic Readers as "anti-Christian" had far greater ramifications.

"This is a case about a whole curriculum," Dyk said. "These objections (by the parents) are so sweeping and so difficult to understand as to put a teacher in an impossible position," Dyk said.

Peres reportedly meeting King Hassan

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Shimon Peres flew Monday to Morocco to meet with King Hassan II for the first official talks between an Israeli leader and an Arab head of state in eight years, Israeli armed forces radio said.

The radio quoted "diplomatic sources in Jerusalem" as saying Peres would spend 48 hours in Morocco and probably meet with the king at his residence in Efrana in central Morocco.

Pinochet 'forgot' promise for elections

SANTIAGO, Chile — President Augusto Pinochet denied Monday that he plans to run without opposition in 1989 for another eight-year term, saying he "forgot" to announce that future elections will be open to other candidates.

Chile's constitution now says members of the ruling four-man junta must choose the single candidate in the 1989 elections. Voters will be allowed only to say yes or no to whether the candidate should serve as president for eight years.

Police hear fewer complaints of noise

By Daniel Zinkand
Special to The Daily Iowan

It's 4 a.m. and you're sound asleep. Suddenly your neighbor's stereo blasts Twisted Sister lyrics through your apartment. What do you do?

If you are like many Iowa City residents, you call the police. In fact, residents made 228 complaints about noise to the Iowa City Police Department during June.

That number was down by 61 calls from the 289 made in April — when most of the UI students were in town.

The 21.4 percent decrease in complaints suggests a correlation between the number of students in Iowa City and complaints made, a correlation one Iowa City police officer said is clear.

OFFICER STEVE DUFFY said noise problems reach their peak when students return in the fall and also on weekends during the academic year. Although the noise generated by students may bother people, Duffy said responding to noise complaints is not a nuisance.

"There are a lot of parties, with 30,000 students in this town," Duffy said. "If you're not prepared to go on noise calls, you probably shouldn't be a cop."

According to Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller, "electronic instruments and loud parties" are involved in most noise disturbance cases. June police records show loud music and loud parties prompted 76 and 117 calls, respectively. In comparison, loud music and loud parties in April generated 114 and 129 complaints.

"IF THERE is obvious noise, the officers first talk to the people involved and make darn sure the message is received," Miller said. "If particularly loud, the officers give a noise ticket."

If another complaint is made within 24 hours, the party receiving the ticket is charged with keeping a disorderly house.

"In Iowa City, keeping a disorderly house means a house complaint," Miller said. But he noted that it "has different connotations in other places; it's a house of prostitution."

The disorderly house charge is a simple misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum fine of $100 or up to 30 days in jail.

Calling the police may be the first reaction of people disturbed by noise, but it may not be the best, said Karen Kral, staff member at the UI Protective Association of Tenants. She recalled a tenant who called police about a neighbor's loud footsteps, but the noise was not intentional and the complaint just angered the neighbor.

JIM PRESCOTT, director of UI Student Legal Services, speculated that the number of noise complaints may rise with the higher drinking age because there will probably be "more frat parties and keggers at people's homes."

But living near a fraternity or sorority does not mean sleepless nights, according to one UI student.

Dave Diekema, 127 E. Fairchild St., who lives across from a sorority and near several fraternities, said noise is not much of a problem. It occurs primarily "in early fall, when fraternities and sororities have rush week, and then in the spring when they have their parties," he said.

Diekema said the sorority had several large parties in the spring, "but I'm generally a late night person so it doesn't bother me."

UI employee may seek judicial review

By Lewis Wayne Greene
University Editor

A UI employee is considering legal action to stop the UI from withholding part of his wages after a bookkeeping foul-up left him temporarily without a December paycheck.

Research Assistant Edwin Dunbar and his attorney said Monday that because the state Board of Regents denied their claim against the UI last week, they may seek a judicial review to remedy the problem.

UI Associate Vice President for Personnel Mary Jo Small said when Dunbar transferred from one department to another last year he was inadvertently misclassified on a personnel form.

UI payroll department employees initially thought Dunbar was leaving the UI and issued him a check for vacation time he had built up, but when they learned he was staying that money was withheld from his December paycheck — leaving him with no pay for the month, she said.

"We are not permitted to pay vacation while you are working," Small said. "We are obliged to recapture the money."

Eventually a gradual repayment process was worked out and Dunbar received a paycheck for December. But he is now challenging the right of the UI to seize his pay without going through garnishment procedures.

Before legal procedures could begin, Dunbar had to exhaust his institutional appeals with the regents.

Although the regents refused the appeal, Dunbar will continue pursuing his case.

"The regents didn't kill everything by saying, 'No,'" he said.

He added that he hopes to make a point about the need to take care with employee payroll.

"I wish they wouldn't screw up people's paychecks," he said.

Courts/Police

A local woman filed suit Monday against the city of Iowa City and two local companies, claiming the three are responsible for a hip fracture she received when she slipped on loose gravel on an Iowa City street.

Betty Stuedeman, 1717 E. College St., filed suit in Johnson County District Court against the city, Wolf Construction Inc. and L.L. Pelling Co., an asphalt company, in connection with an August 1984 accident.

Court documents state Stuedeman slipped on loose gravel as she stepped onto Seventh Avenue from a College Street sidewalk. The gravel "cata-pulted her into the roadway" and caused the hip injury, which has required two surgeries, the suit states.

Stuedeman claims the city is negligent for failing to place barricades or signs to warn pedestrians of dangers at the intersection and for permitting "an unreasonably dangerous condition" to exist.

The suit claims negligence against L.L. Pelling Co. for leaving debris and other materials in the pedestrian walkway, failing to place signs or barricades near the construction site and for maintaining a dangerous condition at the intersection.

Wolf Construction Inc. is also named in the suit as a negligent party for leaving debris in the walkway, failing to mark the construction site, failing to direct traffic through the area and allowing a dangerous condition to exist.

Stuedeman claims she suffered permanent disfigurement and pain as a result of the accident. She has requested that a jury award her an unspecified amount to pay for damages.

A local man escaped serious injury in a one-vehicle motorcycle accident Monday morning.

Daniel Monigold, 25, of 620 S. Johnson St., spilled off his motorcycle while driving in the 700 block of Church Street, according to Iowa City police reports.

Monigold sustained injuries to his right leg and was listed in stable condition at UI Hospital Monday.

Burglary report: Jodi Burrell, 1064 Newton Road, reported to UI Campus Security officers that jewelry she owned was stolen from a room in Slater Residence Hall Saturday. The jewelry is valued at $425.

Report: Luke Brennan, 505 S. Johnson St., told Iowa City police his residence was broken into overnight Saturday but nothing was stolen.

Report: UI Campus Security officials received a report of car vandalism incident Saturday from Shih-Chin Wu, 231 Hawkeye Court. Wu's car was scratched, causing $400 damage.

Theft report: Celia Long, 555 E. Jefferson St., told UI Campus Security officials her 10-speed bicycle, worth $215, was taken while parked near the UI Field House Saturday.

Report: Carl Colony, 908 Juniper Drive, told Iowa City police the driver's side window of his car was broken out while it was parked in the 900 block of Keokuk Street Sunday. Damage is estimated at $150, according to reports.

Midwestern farmers 'bale out' drought area

By Dana Cohen
Staff Writer

Greenville, S.C., farmer Tom Trantham thought more than 80 cows, his two-story century-old white farmhouse and 94 acres of farmland would be lost owing to the severe drought that has shriveled his crops.

But farmers across Iowa and the Midwest have banded together this week and volunteered their hay to Trantham and other drought-stricken farmers in the South.

"This is the most unifying and heart-warming experience that's happened in the United States in a long time," Trantham said.

"If you could only see the devastating damage," he said. "The corn comes up to your belt buckle and now it's falling over dead. And the cows by 9 a.m., their tongues are hanging out and they're panting."

Mark Pierson, head of the administrative department of the Iowa Department of Agriculture, said the secretary of agriculture for Iowa, Robert Lounsberry, has contacted all of the South Carolina departments of agriculture to find out what their needs are.

THEY HAVE also sent names of Iowa hay farmers for them to contact, Pierson said, adding that 22 semi-loads of hay are scheduled to be shipped to South Carolina this week.

Trucks from Illinois delivered 900 bales of hay this weekend. Trantham said he would have been forced to sell his farm without the help of Midwestern farmers.

"I would not be here as a farmer in Greenville City this time next year if it weren't for you people," Trantham said.

"The rain we didn't get, we're getting in those square bales of hay you people are sending down here," he said.

"The people here are almost in shock at the wonderful responses," Trantham said. "People in the cafes and grocery stores are saying, 'Boy, it's wonderful those people are giving us their hay.'"

Lyle Bass, who owns the Power Train Service in Indianapolis, a company that sells truck parts to trucking companies, said the company is coordinating hay shipments between Iowa and South Carolina.

BASS SAID he has contacted several trucking companies and people with trailers who have offered the use of their trucks to ship the hay.

About 50 farmers from cities in Iowa, including Fort Dodge, Ames, Booneville, Decorah, Maynard and Redford, have offered to donate hay, Bass said, adding that shipments began Monday and will continue for the next two weeks.

"The farmers in Iowa have been very generous," Bass said.

Virgil Raymond, a farmer from Ames, said he plans to give 300 bales of hay to South Carolina farms.

"I thought it was a worthy cause," Raymond said. "I used to raise cattle myself and I can appreciate the cattle going hungry."

Geode Specialty Grower's Association, based in Burlington, has been locating other farmers who are willing to donate their hay.

LINDA REX-DOBSON, marketing director for Geode, said the Iowa Department of Agriculture and Fort Dodge farmer Peter Owenson have contacted many hay growers associations in Iowa to help recruit farmers.

"We're trying to get the word out to farmers about the efforts being made," she said. "People are interested in what is going on."

Geode has received several calls from farmers willing to donate large and small quantities of hay, Dobson said.

Phyllis Newholm, who was helping Owenson coordinate hay shipments to Greenville said five flat beds of round hay were shipped out of Lehigh, Iowa, by 1:00 p.m. Monday.

Townsend seeks board seat

By Robyn R. Wright
Staff Writer

An Iowa City man who lost his bid for the Iowa City School Board by a narrow margin last year is the first candidate to file for this year's Sept. 9 election.

Orville Townsend, 713 Whiting Ave., filed nomination papers for one of seven seats on the board. Townsend lost to board member Kathy Hiratzka in last year's election by a 3 percent margin, or 190 votes.

"My platform will be basically the same, with some minor adjustments in it," Townsend said. "I'm for open communication, of course, though I think that's improved this past year," he said.

Townsend said he also opposes cuts in teacher and teacher's aide salaries, and favors budget and planning analysis and "pro-acting as Orville Townsend opposed to reacting."

TOWNSEND explained he thinks board members should keep their "fingers on the pulse of things" so plans for overcrowding and budget cutting could be implemented sooner, if necessary.

"I think we need to encourage communication with new industry that's considering coming into the area, and also (school) administration working more closely with city planning," he said.

More industry means more families using the school system and increased expenditures for the system, he explained.

Townsend became involved with school board issues in February 1985 when the Black Education Committee — of which Townsend is a member — and the school board were drawn into a heated confrontation. The committee protested the designation of February as Ground Hog Month instead of Black History Month.

But Townsend said his new candidacy is not related to that issue.

"THAT INCIDENT has nothing to do with this year. My interests have broadened out, and we have new things to consider," he said.

Townsend said he is more knowledgeable about "what's going on," adding that he has started his campaign earlier and spent time during the past year working and communicating with both teachers and students. He has also attended school board meetings regularly, he said.

Townsend works as a rehabilitation counselor for the Iowa Department of Public Instruction. Townsend attended the UI and earned a bachelor's degree in education and a master's degree in rehabilitation counseling.

So far, at least one board member has decided not to seek re-election. Board member David Woldrik announced in June that he would not seek re-election.

Student action fuels fire escape issue

By Dan McClain
Staff Writer

Recent fires at the UI Art Building have spurred three UI student groups to organize an event that will keep UI plans to build a fire escape at that building moving forward.

The UI Collegiate Associations Council, UI Student Senate and the Student Art Federation are planning to spend next Saturday cleaning and painting the four-story building to keep UI administrators thinking about the hazards posed by the building's lack of a fire escape.

The building, on the corner of Iowa Avenue and Gilbert Street, has not met fire codes for the past 10 years. It houses the studios and works of about 25 UI graduate art students.

CHRIS WASTA, the teaching assistant in charge of the building for two years, said there have been fires in the building. "The fires we caught, we caught just before they burst into flames. We were very lucky."

CAC President Mike Reck charged the UI with violating a student's right to a safe work environment. The UI must follow through with plans to construct the fire escape in order to fulfill that basic obligation to its students, he said.

"They've started the process before and ended up turning bids down. We really need to keep pushing them at this point," he said.

"I think they should be commended for taking these initial steps, but I won't believe anything until they actually build the thing," Reck said.

WASTA SAID the danger of not having a fire escape in the building is compounded by students using highly flammable art materials, such as turpentine, linseed oil and canvas.

The fires were the result of spontaneous combustion after oily rags were improperly disposed of by students, he said. The rags were discovered smoldering and put out by students, he said. No major damage occurred.

Stephen Buckman, a senior architect at the UI Architectural and Engineering Service, said the UI has looked at several possible places at the building where a fire escape might be placed and the project is still in the planning stages.

UI officials, who have been studying the project since late spring, will soon consult again with a private firm to determine the costs for each of the options proposed, he said.

"The university and facilities planning have to look at all of the buildings on campus and we find that some buildings have a higher priority to have their problems solved than others," Buckman said.

UI Rhodes scholars recall experience

The UI has produced 16 Rhodes scholars over the years and Jeff McKinney says he is eager to become the next UI student to travel to Oxford University under the prestigious program.

"I'll feel like the new kid in school," McKinney said. "But I'm looking forward to it."

McKinney, who will leave for England in October, said he feels compelled to achieve academically at Oxford.

"I feel that there has been an investment made in my abilities," he said. "I feel compelled to pay this back."

Michael Shea, a 1968 UI Rhodes scholar, said recipients often feel a need to maintain superior standards.

"SOME RHODES scholars are disappointed because they have not lived up to a certain potential," he said. "They feel that if they do not become a U.S. senator or university president, they have not fulfilled their ambitions."

Shea, who practices law in Hawaii, said his two-year stay in Oxford was cut short at first by the U.S. draft board. Evidently Shea's draft number was up, forcing him to return to the United States in 1969 for boot camp and a year's stint with the UI ROTC program.

But in 1970 Shea returned to Oxford to complete his studies. Oxford's academic system is not as rigid as one would think, he said.

"Oxford was not intimidating," he said. "It is a very relaxed system."

MELVIN POPOFSKY, a 1958 UI Rhodes scholar, said his time at Oxford was marked by the changing attitudes of the English toward the United States.

"It was an unusual period," he said. "It was a time of redefinition of what the English were and how they related to America."

John Kennedy was in the White House and Americans felt very good politically, which made the English a bit jealous, said Popofsky, who now practices law in San Francisco.

MARK SCHANTZ, a 1963 UI Rhodes scholar, was in a London restaurant when a waitress told him that Kennedy had been shot.

"That incident brought it home very vividly that I was not at home," Schantz said.

His time at Oxford was an opportunity to "learn for learning's sake," Schantz, who attended Yale University Law School after returning to the United States, said.

The Rhodes scholarship had a profound impact on his life, Schantz said. He is now involved in the selection process for new Rhodes scholars and Schantz said it brings back memories of England, Oxford and the entire Rhodes experience.

Capitol flag blown down

Life in Iowa City may seem dull and meaningless for local flag watchers this week because the city's most famous landmark is lacking its normal banner.

The flag that normally flutters gracefully atop the Old Capitol was blown right down Saturday when high winds broke the flagpole's clips. UI employees found the flag lying on the Old Capitol dome.

Old Capitol Director Margaret Keyes said while she is eager to have the flagpole repaired, it may be a few days before that can be accomplished.

This sort of flag catastrophe has happened before, she said, and in the past flag changes have brought flag watcher comment.

'Alien' sequel crawls with suspense

By Kathy Hinson Breed
Managing Editor

THEY'RE BACK" must be the theme for this summer's movies.

In June we found that things still go bump in the night at the Freeling family's house in Poltergeist II: The Other Side. Then, just when we thought it was safe to get back into the shower, Norman Bates returned in Psycho III.

And now Twentieth Century Fox has sent poor Sigourney Weaver out to face yet more Aliens.

In Alien, Weaver portrayed Warrant Officer Ripley, the only survivor of an all-too-close encounter with an extraterrestrial on the dreary planet LB426. Aliens takes place 57 years after that encounter — years Ripley has spent in "hypersleep" adrift in the escape pod of her spaceship.

LUCKILY, Ripley is discovered by deep-space salvagers who bring her back to be "de-frosted." That's about the last good thing to happen to the poor woman.

Upon awakening, she must face "The Company" — the ominous conglomerate under whose auspices she was working when she first came face to snout with that nasty alien. Rather than showing gratitude, Company representatives bust Ripley from officer down to loading dock worker because she destroyed a $42 million ship in her efforts to keep the alien from reaching and colonizing Earth.

This demotion marks the start of a series of dirty deeds perpetrated by The Company and its minions. Ripley's account of the alien — a noxious beast with concentrated acid for blood — meets with disbelief. She is informed that The Company has already colonized LB426 with "60 or 70" families and things are just fine and dandy, with not an alien in sight.

BUT WHAT goes around comes around, and soon Company representative Carter Burke (Paul Reiser) comes knocking on Ripley's door. Contact with the colonists has mysteriously been cut off, and The Company has called in the Colonial Marines to investigate. If Ripley goes with the Marines as an "adviser," she will be reinstated as a flight officer. Of course, The Company "guarantees her safety." Famous last words.

Before long, and against her better judgment, Ripley is blazing through space with an obnoxious assortment of Colonial Marines on their way to save the day. This is when the movie begins to live up to its plural name.

Those who remember the agony of suspense Alien put viewers through will not be disappointed by this sequel.

The perpetually dim and rain-soaked colony provides an eerie setting for the search-and-destroy mission. The constant drip of the rain and the ominous beeping of the Marine's motion sensors keep viewers on edge, waiting for the next encounter with the aliens — which are suitably numerous and hideous. And once Ripley takes charge of the situation, some soul-satisfying save-the-day scenes come along.

THE MOVIE indulges in some simplistic moralizing along the way: Company officials, especially the weasel-like Burke, repeatedly put the safety of others at risk to protect profits, reaffirming what everyone suspects about the evil inherent in big business; the Colonial Marines start out making "bug hunt" jokes and scoffing at Ripley's warnings and, of course, get things screwed up in a big way once they reach the colony.

But it's easy to forgive these overdrawn stereotypes because they make for some great scenes of poetic justice and set up much of the movie's comic relief.

Less forgivable are the obnoxious stereotypes in the cast of characters. The women Marines look and act as though they've taken massive doses of steroids and male hormones, while the men make crude jokes about needing shore leave. And watching over the group is the traditional cigar-chomping, tough-as-nails, black drill sergeant.

BUT FACE it, the point of sci-fi adventure movies is not finely drawn characters and relevant moral lessons. If you can overlook minor irritants such as all the smart-ass Marine banter (the movie threatens to exceed the human tolerance level for shouts of "Let's go!" and "Let's move!"), the second half rewards you with a great balance of suspense and comic relief.

By the final confrontation, the protagonists' struggle against the evil aliens has the audience engrossed enough to forgive the maternal-instinct/female-protecting-her-youth overtones of the showdown. Overall, Aliens is a fun way to spend an evening cheering on the good guys, booing the bad guys and chewing your fingernails.

NCAA investigates Iowa State athletics

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — The NCAA is investigating the basketball and football programs at Iowa State University, but details of the alleged wrongdoings are being withheld, ISU President Gordon Eaton announced Monday.

In a statement released by the Big Eight school, Eaton said he has hired a New Hampshire attorney to launch an independent investigation of the allegations.

He emphasized the official inquiry is a series of "allegations only — not conclusions."

"The university has received an official inquiry from the NCAA alleging certain rule violations in its men's basketball and football programs," Eaton said.

"The university will cooperate fully with the investigator, university officials, in the interest of facilitating the inquiry, will not comment further at this time."

ISU Athletic Director Max Urlick, basketball Coach Johnny Orr, and football Coach Jim Criner could not be reached for comment. Criner's wife said he was out of town, but that he was expected to return to Ames late Monday night.

Rookie helps Chicago pound Padres

CHICAGO (UPI) — Rookie Jamie Moyer allowed five hits over eight innings and Ron Cey drove in two runs Monday to pace the Chicago Cubs to a 6-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.

The loss was the fourth straight for San Diego.

Thad Bosley was credited with the game-winning RBI as he drove in Shawn Dunston with a groundout in the first inning off loser LaMarr Hoyt, 5-5.

The Padres did not get a runner past second base off Moyer, who was knocked out in the first inning in his last start July 10 at Los Angeles. Moyer struck out three and walked three before turning things over to Lee Smith in the ninth.

San Diego's best scoring threat against Moyer came in the first. Jerry Royster reached on an infield single and wound up on second on Dunston's error at short. One out later, Kevin McReynolds walked, but Steve Garvey hit into a double play, one of three turned by the Cubs.

In the bottom of the inning, Shawn Dunston led off with a double over third base, went to third on Ryne Sandberg's infield out and scored on Bosley's grounder to second.

Czech Mandlikova struggles to victory

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Hana Mandlikova, playing in a big tournament for the first time in her hometown, struggled for almost two hours Monday to clinch an opening-round victory for Czechoslovakia in the Federation Cup.

The U.S. Open champion, admitting to an attack of nerves, wasted three match points in the second set before subduing Angeliki Kanellopoulou 6-1, 5-7, 6-3.

"I was very nervous," Mandlikova said. "It was very difficult for me to play a match in my hometown. It was very tough, but I knew if I put everything together I would win."

"Every time in the first round I have problems. I need time to get into the tournament."

Czechoslovakia, seeking a fourth successive title in this women's version of the Davis Cup, went on to defeat Greece 3-0 as Helena Sukova routed Olga Tsaropoulou 6-2, 6-0, and Regina Marsikova and Andrea Holikova beat the two Greek women 6-3, 6-0.

Corrales, Stewart suspended for brawl

NEW YORK (UPI) — Manager Pat Corrales of the Cleveland Indians and pitcher Dave Stewart of the Oakland A's were suspended for four games by American League President Dr. Bobby Brown Monday for their part in a bench-clearing brawl at Oakland on July 1.

Brown ordered the suspensions after carefully reviewing umpire Derryl Cousins' report and watching a videotape of the incident.

Corrales' suspension began Monday night, but Stewart is appealing his suspension and will have no penalty imposed until the results of his hearing. No hearing date for Stewart has been set.

The brawl began when Stewart threw a high and inside pitch to Indians shortstop Julio Franco in the seventh inning after Tony Bernazard had hit his second home run of the game to give the Indians a 9-0 lead. It was the fourth home run hit in the game by the Indians.

McGee's two home runs lifts Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Willie McGee hit two home runs off Steve Carlton to spark the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-3 victory Monday night over the San Francisco Giants.

Rookie southpaw Greg Mathews, 5-2, got the victory but left after getting hit below the right elbow by reliever Jeff Robinson in the seventh. Mathews pitched seven innings, allowing just four hits.

Carlton, 4-10, pitched six innings before leaving for a pinch hitter. He allowed five hits, three earned runs, struck out one and walked one in his third start since signing with the Giants.

St. Louis took a 4-3 lead on an unearned run off Carlton in the sixth. Alan Knicely doubled off the left field wall with one out and Jeffrey Leonard let the ball get by him, enabling Knicely to take third. Tom Herr squeezed him home for the go-ahead run.

No holdout for Marino in '86

United Press International

One All-Pro began a holdout Monday and another said it is unlikely he will walk out of training camp for the second straight year.

Joe Morris, who wants a raise after rushing for a New York Giants' record 1,336 yards last season, was missing Monday when the team's veterans were required to report to training camp.

Morris is in the option year of a contract that will pay him $157,300 this season. He wants to renegotiate and reportedly is asking for a signing bonus of close to $1 million.

"Historically, running backs stay out and when they come back in something happens bad," Giants' Coach Bill Parcells said. "An example of a running back who came back and got hurt is Eric Dickerson last year."

"JOE CALLED me this morning and assured me he'll be ready when he gets here. I know he's in tremendous shape; he's been working out." Morris scored a club-record 21 touchdowns last year and was named to the Pro Bowl. He earned $70,000 in performance bonuses last season.

Besides Morris, tight end Don Hasselback was the only other veteran not to report to the Giants' camp. He has an injured hamstring and is expected to retire. The Giants also signed one of their four second-round picks, safety Greg Lasker.

In Miami, Dan Marino said a repeat of his training camp walkout of a year ago is unlikely, although little has changed in his contract situation with the Dolphins.

MARINO REPORTED to the Dolphins' training camp at St. Thomas University along with other veterans involved in the passing game. For reporting, he received an $850,000 bonus, which will be paid in three yearly installments of $250,000 and one payment of $100,000 beginning in 1987.

Marino staged a 37-day walkout last summer. Marino's contract expires after this season and he would become a free agent if the Dolphins do not sign him before Feb. 1.

"I doubt it very seriously that I would leave camp," Marino said. "I don't see any reason why I should. Everything has already been said. Everything has already happened. There's no reason for it to happen again."

"If I leave now, it wouldn't change much, would it? There's no reason for me to leave camp again, but you never know."

MARINO and Morris could learn from Al Harris, who sat out last season and missed the Chicago Bears' run to the Super Bowl.

At Platteville, Wis., a sore but happy Harris says his feeling for the game is returning after 18 months away from football and the Bears.

Harris, a starting linebacker for the 1984 Bears, sat out last season in a contract dispute. He signed last week.

"I feel rejuvenated out here," Harris said Monday after four days of practice. "I'm getting used to reacting football-wise, knowing the plays and coming up on a guy. "Sometimes I get impatient. I want everything to happen so fast."

At Thousand Oaks, Calif., running back Darryl Clack, the Cowboys' second-round draft pick, reached a contract agreement. Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey said he and Clack's agent, Bruce Allen, worked out a contract during a series of telephone conversations Sunday.

"IT WAS A MATTER of getting the entire deal to a point where Darryl could live with it," Allen said. "It's also time to come in and play football. A running back needs at least two weeks to prepare for a game."

Running back Herman Hunter Monday became the third player to leave the Philadelphia Eagles' training camp in as many days. Coach Buddy Ryan said Hunter, who was the club's kickoff returner as a rookie last season, left camp after meetings Sunday night.

"He wasn't blocking in any of the drills," Ryan said. "I assumed that when the linebackers started blitzing, he'd leave."

Eagles guards Steve Kenney and Greg Naron have also left camp without permission. Kenney left Saturday after he was demoted to third string and Naron, who had been a starter, joined him on Sunday because he apparently wanted to return home to be with his fiancée.

Holdouts

"It's conceivable (that Haight will report on time), but not probable. We're not moving real quickly in that direction."

Mills said the money gap was between $300,000 and $400,000 on a four-year contract.

According to Haight, he and Mills "have an offer before (the Jets), but I don't care to comment on how much it is."

Haight said he is hoping to sign a contract comparable to what first round offensive linemen received last year, "but we don't expect to get that much." "I just want to get it over with," Haight said of the negotiations, "so I can get back out and play football."

Long, who said after being drafted that he would not be a holdout, would also prefer to be in camp, but believes the Lions have forced him not to report.

"I'd like to be in camp, working out with the rookies, but I don't have a choice," Long said. "They're pretty much forcing me to stay here."

NHL

The major demand is for total free agency after six seasons, an issue over which the two sides are far apart.

The union says the compensation and equalization structure for free agents is unfair. It says draft picks and players a team must give up to sign a free agent have proved so costly that not one free agent has switched teams since 1981.

The union also wants the pension fund converted to U.S.

dollars, rather than being calculated in Canadian currency. The Canadian dollar has hovered between 72 cents and 73 cents for the last year and has far less buying power in the United States, where the majority of players retire.

THE UNION ALSO seeks additional pension payments and the combination of both demands would cost each club an average $100,000 a year compared with the $43,000 they pay now.

The union wants the clubs to fund a security package giving NHL veterans lump-sum payments at a set age after retirement. The union sought minimum initial funding of $15 million and the owners offered $7.5 million.

The issue of a mandatory drug-testing program, proposed by Eagleson and Ziegler in response to a magazine article, is one the owners want to discuss. But the players want other issues resolved before they discuss the proposed program, which would provide for the right to test only under certain circumstances.

The magazine article that sparked the proposal alleged there were cocaine problems with at least five members of the Edmonton Oilers.

Doctor says Wisconsin woman had 'a slight cut' after incident

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — An emergency room physician testified Monday he found only a slight cut on the woman accusing three former University of Minnesota basketball players of sexual assault.

Gary Anderson of Madison General Hospital said his examination revealed a superficial laceration that did not require stitches. He said the woman complained of tenderness in her right shoulder and breast.

The woman was "very calm, very controlled, very cooperative and showed very little emotion," Anderson testified.

Mitchell Lee, 21, Kevin Smith, 21, and George Williams Jr., 20, are charged with sexually assaulting the 18-year-old woman during the early morning hours of Jan. 24 at the Concourse Hotel after a Wisconsin-Minnesota basketball game.

THE WOMAN said she met Lee and Smith at an apartment party and agreed to go with them to the Concourse for another party. Patricia Robinson, who lived in the apartment, testified she thought the people leaving her house were going to the Concourse.

An analyst with the Wisconsin State Crime Laboratory testified semen was found in several specimens taken at the hospital, but that no semen was found on items taken from the hotel room, including bedding, towels, the woman's dress or tights.

She noted semen can be removed by water from a shower.

Madison Police Detective Lindsay Draeger testified about several discussions she had with the woman, many of which included bouts of sobbing.

The woman told detectives in a hotel room interview she was shocked her housemate called the police and feared people would not believe her story.

Lemond holds Tour lead with 18th stage tie

L'ALPE d'HUEZ, France (UPI) — Bernard Hinault clasped hands with American teammate and rival Greg Lemond moments before the Frenchman won the 18th stage of the Tour de France cycle race Monday.

"It was the most beautiful image we could give to the sport," Hinault said of his gesture with Lemond just before surging ahead to win the mountainous, 101-mile stage in 5 hours, 3 minutes, 3 seconds. "It's really the team that wins, not two men."

Lemond, the first American to wear the race leader's yellow jersey in the Tour's 83-year history, retained his overall lead of 2 minutes, 47 seconds over Hinault, the five-time champion.

SWITZERLAND'S Urs Zimmermann of the Carrera team came in third at 5:14 behind and fell to third place overall. American Andy Hampsten, also of Hinault and Lemond's La Vie Claire team, was sixth on the stage and moved up to fourth place overall.

Lemond and Hinault escaped together about 60 miles into the stage.

"I told Greg to let me set the pace, and if ever Zimmermann caught up to us, he should take off after him," Hinault said. "Don't panic, just ride calmly."

Lemond took the overall lead from Hinault on the 17th stage Sunday. He stayed with Hinault through the steep run up l'Alpe d'Huez. Hinault protected the 25-year-old Californian from the abuse of spectators who want a French champion.

"WHEN I HEARD that the public was reproaching Lemond because he was keeping on my wheel, I really felt bad for him," Hinault said. "I won't allow them to treat him like a wheel-sucker. Greg is very afraid of hostile reactions, and that's why I told him to put himself right behind me, and to stick to my tail."

"When we got to the finish line, the public got a different image of the sport, one that provoked a very different reaction."

Lemond was thankful for the help.

"Hinault's very strong," he said. "You've got to admire his strength of character, and his great qualities. Today, he took all the climbs in the front. I think our chances now are very good. I could still have a fall and in that case Bernard would win, but I'm in good position now."

TUESDAY is the riders' only rest day of the 23-stage Tour. They face their third consecutive high mountain stage Wednesday with the 112-mile 19th stage from Villard de Lans to St. Etienne. The race ends July 27 in Paris.

Nine riders dropped out on the stage, leaving 135 from a record field of 210 that started the race July 4 in Paris. One of the riders was American Eric Heiden, winner of five gold medals for speed skating at the 1980 Winter Olympics.

Mark Bortz (top) will start his fourth year with the Bears, Jay Hilgenberg, his sixth.

Former Hawkeyes 'bear' heat, camp

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

PLATTEVILLE, Wis. — Former Iowa players Jay Hilgenberg and Mark Bortz traded in their black and gold uniforms for blue and orange and have been quite successful as starters for the Chicago Bears during the past few years.

Although this is Hilgenberg's sixth year as a center for the Bears, he finds training camp a bit challenging.

"It's a pretty frustrating part of the year because you feel you should pick up right where you left off at the end of the year and begin playing at the same level. But you're not even close to it and there's a lot of hard work left to do," Hilgenberg, an Iowa City native, said.

"I work on everything. My run blocking — my pass blocking, just a total consistency of play. Always at the beginning of camp I have a lot of bad techniques that I have to work out. I block too high at times so it's a lot of hard work to get to the level you have to be to be successful," Hilgenberg added. "What's good about it is that you have this defensive team that I can practice against and they make you ready for the games."

BORTZ, WHO begins his fourth year as a Bears' guard, said the worst thing right now is the heat, but each year camp is getting easier.

"Knowing what to expect makes it a lot easier. It's starting to cool off now — that's half the battle," Bortz said.

Besides getting back in shape, training camp serves as a time for improvement.

"You can always get better and I still have a long ways to go to get totally happy with my game. I just come out here and try to work hard against the defense I practice against. You go a couple of scrimmages with them and it shows you how much you have to improve to get ready for the season," Hilgenberg said.

Bortz and Hilgenberg, along with the rest of the Bears, will need to be ready to repeat last year's Super Bowl winning season.

"I THINK we can if we stay healthy and if everybody works hard and has a good attitude," Hilgenberg said.

Bortz, however, is a little skeptical. "We're not going to spread anyone this year. I think team's will be gunning for us in all of our games. So we're going to have to go out there and play with more intensity than we did last year," Bortz said.

Unlike some teammates, Bortz and Hilgenberg don't see their pre-season game against the Oilers in London a detriment.

"It will probably make us more ready for the pre-season opener (against the Pittsburgh Steelers)," Hilgenberg said.

Bortz, an introvert, never got into the hype after the Bears' Super Bowl win.

"We have so many personalities on the team we don't really have to worry about that (the hype). We've got McMahon's, Perry's and stuff so most of the hype is transferred to all those guys so it's kind of nice."

The reason why Hilgenberg and Bortz weren't in the Super Bowl Shuffle video? "We don't have soul," Bortz said.

NHL teams could see first strike

TORONTO (UPI) — The NHL players' union Monday warned there is a "better chance than ever" for the first strike in league history.

The NHL Players Association and the league's owners committee were resumed contract negotiations Monday under the threat of what would be the first strike against the 21 clubs in Canada and the United States.

Association director Alan Eagleson said this week's talks were key and a strike was possible when the pact expires Sept. 15.

"I think there's a better chance than ever before," the Toronto attorney said.

NHL PRESIDENT John Ziegler would not comment on negotiations but said he hoped to avert a walkout before training camps open in mid-September.

"That's the reason we're here in the summer," Ziegler said.

The players have three key demands: free agency, conversion of the pension fund and a post-career security package.

Legislator questions sports' role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Colleges should prepare athletes "for the game of life, not just for the pros" and the government should play a larger role in ensuring that universities stress education over sports, a Congressman said Monday.

Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, said he was filing legislation creating a Congressional Advisory Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics.

The panel — to consist of 15 education and athletics experts — would study the problem for a year and issue a report on the proper role of sports at universities. An aide estimated the commission would cost taxpayers $400,000 to $800,000.

"It's time to decriminalize college sports and put education back in charge of the entire university," Luken said. "The necessity to win is a corrupting and destructive force."

HE SAID the NCAA, the governing body of college sports, has ignored the recommendations of its own advisory panel that proposed fewer special privileges and tougher educational requirements for athletes.

"The student athlete is being exploited by the system," Luken said. "We teach them that they are employees of a commercial entity."

"If it comes to a choice between developing such athletic stardom and the values of our educational system, we have to choose the educational system."

Luken said his bill was inspired by reports of drug abuse and poor schooling among some athletes.

"The problem is that athletic departments must be financially self-sustaining, which means the profit motive is supreme," Luken said. "In the quest for the sports dollar, college sports programs often produce celebrated athletes who cannot be considered students in any sense."

LUKEN SAID he would like to see an end to freshman eligibility, no more special dormitories for athletes and a requirement that athletes maintain a C average.

A Luken aide said the commission would examine such abuses as recruiting, eligibility violations and drugs.

An overdose of cocaine recently killed University of Maryland star basketball player Len Bias, who died two days after being selected by the Boston Celtics in the first round of the NBA draft.

The grand jury investigating the case will also examine the alleged use of illegal drugs on the Maryland campus, especially by athletes.

Ex-Hawks Long, Haight will hold out

By Dan Millea
Assistant Sports Editor and United Press International

Former Iowa players Mike Haight and Chuck Long, whose agent Jack Mills of Denver has been unable to reach agreement with the NFL clubs that grabbed the pair in the first round of last spring's NFL draft, will apparently not report to training camp this week.

Long, an all-American quarterback and runner-up for the 1985 Heisman Trophy, was drafted by the Detroit Lions but is unsigned and will be absent from the team's training camp, which opens today in Rochester, Mich.

Speaking from his parent's home in Wheaton, Ill., Monday night, Long said he and the Lions are "not close" in their respective contract proposals.

"THERE'S A BIG difference between us and there's a lot of things to settle on," such as length of the contract and bonus clauses, Long said. "I really can't tell you at this point (how much money is involved) because we're way off and we've got so many things to work out."

Haight, drafted by the New York Jets, said Monday night that he has not come to terms with the club and does not expect to before the formal opening of training camp Wednesday. Players are supposed to report to the campus at Hofstra in Hempstead, N.Y., today.

"I just talked to my agent," Haight said from his home in Iowa City, "and he said a financial man from (the Jets) will be flying out to Colorado to try and get me in (to training camp)."

"HOPEFULLY I'LL SIGN within the next couple of days, but I kind of doubt it. Maybe tomorrow night about midnight I'll be flying out to New York, it's hard to say."

Steve Guttman, the Jets' treasurer who is handling negotiations with Mills, would not discuss contract talks with United Press International.

A spokeswoman for the Jets told The Daily Iowan Monday night that she could not confirm whether Guttman or anyone else from the Jets organization was in Denver or en route, but did say Haight was not expected to be signed before the start of camp.

Mills was in his office Monday night, but his secretary would not confirm whether he was working to sign the Iowa players and said he could not return phone calls.

ON FRIDAY, HOWEVER, Mills told UPI it was doubtful Haight would report on time.

"(Negotiations) are going slowly," Mills said. "We still have substantial differences. The Jets haven't changed their offer since June. The problem is money."
